Upon this point we could answer nothing that would not be feeble and pale paraphrase of the opinions and patriotic and eloquent judgment given yesterday in the columns of El Mercurio. For this reason we limit ourselves to repeat with him to-day and with the entire country to-morrow: "The Chilian flag that waves in the Bolivian territory cannot be hauled down until the Peru-Bolivian army succeed in defeating ours. In this way only could it retire; in any other way, never! never!!"

One thing only we may add to that patriotic oath, and it is, that even the army defeated, Chili, resuscitating the heroic traditions of Paraguay, would perish as a people before suffering the humiliation and ignominy of an obligatory treaty to which a struggle and a combat had not preceded.

Let us not ramble.

The news that occupy us, though its origin is official, is not only official, but is also absurd. How could Señor Pinto, son of the warrior of Ayacucho and Junin, a near relative of Generals Buin and Yungay, deceive himself so much as to the disposition of the country he governs, and to whom he owes glory, fortune having refused him wealth and prosperity, that he should, even for a moment, admit a hearing of such a mediation. How could Señores Varas and Santa Maria, that fought in one time for Chili and in the name of Chili the colossal English power in the celebrated Whitehead question, hear without rebelling sentiments, and without in that moment abdicating their portfolios, the humiliating proposition of the Washington emissary?

We repeat for the thousandth and last time, there is not, there cannot be, there will not exist the mediation of which we speak. If we should be mistaken, if such news became a fact, we say it ingenuously, we believe that the country, rising like a single man, would make a solemn "auto de fé" of the treaty of mediation, and God grant they stop there and do not incur the temptation of feeding the flames with the authors of the idea. For if it is true that people forgive many mistakes after glory has been obtained—for example, in France Henry IV, Louis XIV, and Napoleon—it is equally true that they are implacable with those that lead them foolishly or carelessly to degradation and shame.

No. 190.

Mr. Tracy to Mr. Evarts.

LEGATION OF PERU,
New York, September 4, 1879. (Received September 7.)

SIR: On the 2d of April last, Señor Alejandro Fierro, minister of foreign affairs of Chili, addressed a note to Señor José Antonio de Lavalle, envoy extraordinary and minister plenipotentiary of Peru, declaring that friendly relations between the two countries were terminated, and handing him his passports.

Five months have barely elapsed since the declaration of war, and I would now respectfully call your excellency's attention to the present state of affairs on the Pacific coast of South America, after first, with your permission, furnishing additional evidence that Chili had no foundation upon which to rest her alleged right to take possession of Autofagasta and the nitrate regions of Bolivia.

In the manifest addressed by Señor Manuel Ingoyen, minister of foreign affairs of Peru, on the 1st of May last, to the Governments of the United States and other friendly nations, he showed so clearly, as I believe, that the Chilian Government in taking possession of the Bolivian coast situate between the 23d and 24th parallels of South latitude, under pretended right of revindication, had seized what never had belonged to Chili, nor formed any part of her territory, that it seems to me your excellency needs no further proof that Señor Fierro, to say the least, misstated the case when he alleged in the exposition addressed by him in behalf of the Chilian Government to friendly nations, that Chili had exercised dominion and possession of the territory situated between the 23d and 24th degrees of latitude. Nevertheless, feeling assured that the United States Government desires to hear everything that may fortify the position of Peru, or her ally, the Republic of Bolivia, or make clearer the real merits of the questions that gave rise to the unfortunate war, which, despite all the efforts of Peru to avert it, is now being waged between Chili and Peru and Bolivia, I have the honor of handing to your excellency herewith a pamphlet containing an article translated into English from "La Revista Peruana," in which the question of the boundaries of Chili in Atacama is considered historically, and proving by official documents and the authority of historians and geographers that since the year 1540, until the present day the southern end of the desert of Atacama, or at least the 25th degree of latitude, has always been recognized as the Chilian boundary.

I will not consume your excellency's valuable time by repeating here any portion of the accompanying pamphlet, which I trust will receive your careful attention, but will simply observe that on page 16 it appears that the distinguished and honorable gentleman, who at present represents Chili at Washington, Señor Francisco Tolano Asta-Buruaga, in his "Geographical Dictionary of Chili," published in 1866, fixes the latitude of the "Bay of our Lady," near the Paposo, or Salt River, the northern boundary of Chili, as 25° 2′; and the entire pamphlet shows the said northern boundary as fixed by Chilian writers, and shown on the maps of both ancient and modern geographies, is the Salt or Paposo River, that is latitude 25°; and consequently the course of Chili in taking possession of the Bolivian coast, situate between the 23d and 24th degrees, under the plea of "revindication," has no justification whatever.

And now I ask your excellency to consider the present condition of the two republics.

The principal events of the war have undoubtedly been made known to your excellency by your diplomatic agents in Peru, Bolivia, and Chili, but with your leave I will recapitulate some of them as briefly as may be, and at the same time beg to hand you herewith three copies of the "Peruvian Mail," a paper published in Lima, which will enable you to form an accurate opinion of the existing state of affairs.

In the number of 23d July last it is reported that—

> Señor Lastarria recently created consternation in the Chilian House of Deputies by making the following remarkable statement: "I wish Antofagasta to be ours, and I believe it will be so by the right of conquest, but not on account of our possessing any legal right to it."

On pages 3 and 4 of the same paper, on page 6 of that of 30th, and on page 3 of that of 13th of August, will be found articles showing the dissatisfaction felt in Chili by public men and the press at the conduct of the war.

On pages 4 and 5 of the last-named paper will be found reports of the serious disturbances in Santiago, Chili, on the 30th of July, occasioned by the indignation of the people when the news of the capture of the "Rimac" was made public. The people shouted, "Down with the government!" "Down with the ministry!" An open-air indignation meeting was determined upon, but before it was organized the people were driven away by a squad of grenadiers, sword in hand. Numbers were wounded by the troops employed in preventing the people from exercising the right of meeting, granted them by the constitution. The scene is described as horrible, neither women nor children being spared.

On the fourth page of the Peruvian Mail of 30th July your excellency will see an account of the bombardment of Iquique by the Chilians on the 16th of July, and copies of the warm protest against the same addressed by the consular corps to Admiral William Rebolledo, and of his reply thereto. The same paper, on the first page, reports the opening of the Peruvian Congress on the 28th of July, by General La Puerta, acting President of the Republic, and gives the address read by his Excellency on that occasion; also a short account of the successful cruise of the Peruvian vessels Huascar and Union to the Chilian coast, during which they captured the Chilian transport Rimac. The Mail of 13th August, on the fourth page, states that a telegram from Arica on the 12th announces the return of the Huascar from another successful trip; and the paper of July 23 on page 7, says: "The government has found itself compelled to issue a decree prohibiting the prefects of departments and other authorities leaving their offices and coming to Lima with volunteers," whilst in Chili there is evidently a disinclination to join the army, and much difficulty experienced in getting the men that are needed. (See extract from La Patria, of Valparaiso, on page 6 of Peruvian Mail of 30th July.)

One more reference to the accompanying papers, and I will not allude to them again. On pages 2 and 3 (July 23) are given copies of a letter addressed on the 16th of June, by Mr. Jewell, esq., Her Britannic Majesty's vice-consul at Iquique, to Her Britannic Majesty's chargé d'affaires at Santiago, with reference to the treatment of Chilian prisoners by the Peruvians, and of another written by the Chilian minister of foreign affairs, Hon. Jorge Huneens on the 27th June, in which he says: "My government notes with pleasure the courtesy and delicacy with which the Peruvian authorities treat the Esmeralda prisoners."

The Huascar, Union, and Pilcomayo in their several expeditions to the Chilian coast, bearing in mind the various attacks of the Chilian fleet on defenseless ports, such as Huanillos, Pabillon de Pica, and others, might have retaliated by firing upon undefended ports in Chili, but they did nothing of the kind, preferring to observe all the forms of civilized warfare and attack none but armed enemies.

The results of the first five months of the war may be summed up briefly. Chili has taken not one step forward. Her ships have withdrawn from Pisaqua and Majillones, with their boats filled with dead and wounded. She has lost the Esmeralda, and allowed herself to be surprised, on the 10th of July, at Iquique by the Huascar. One of her iron-clads pursued a gunboat (the Pilcomayo) for twenty hours in vain. She allowed the capture of a fine transport, (the Rimac), having on board a regiment of cavalry, 250 horses, 800 rifles, forage, &c. She has bombarded defenseless towns, and finally been obliged to raise the blockade of Iquique.

Peru, on the other hand, has sailed her transports at will, despite her enemy's superior navy, from port to port, carrying troops, arms, and provisions. Her ships have made frequent excursions to the Chilian coast, and while respecting non-combatants and undefended places, they have destroyed many launches and other means of loading and discharging vessels at sundry ports; captured numbers of Chilian merchant vessels, with valuable cargoes, destroyed the Esmeralda, taken the Rimac, forced the raising of the blockade of Iquique, and compelled the withdrawal of the enemy's fleet at Antofagasta.

From the foregoing your excellency will understand, I think, the present position of affairs in Peru and Chili. In the former, the government and the people are in full accord. In the latter, serious discontent on the part of the people and press against the government, and bitter charges by influential papers as to the conduct of the war and the true reasons for taking possession of the Bolivian coast.

Finally, appreciating the uncertain issues of all wars, and knowing that reverses may yet befall them, the Peruvian people have no desire to boast over their successes; and thankful to Divine Providence for His gracious aid thus far, and devoutly praying for the continuance of the same, whilst sincerely deploring that the ambitious and selfish course of the Chilian Government should have forced them into this war, they are nevertheless firmly resolved to sustain their government to the utmost of their ability, but always in such a way that their cause and mode of defending it shall win the approval and sympathy of all civilized nations, and especially is it their hope that they may deserve and secure the good-will of the people and Government of these United States, to which end I shall, with your excellency's permission, endeavor to keep you advised of what is going on in Peru and the adjacent republics in all that relates to the war.

I avail myself, &c.,

JOSÉ CARLOS TRACY.

No. 191.

Mr. Hunter to Mr. Tracy.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, September 10, 1879.

SIR: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your note of the 22d ultimo, advising the Department that you had received information that the Government of the Colombian Union had disapproved the decision of the president of Panama prohibiting the shipments of arms.

Accept, sir, &c.,

W. HUNTER,
Acting Secretary.

No. 192.

Mr. Hunter to Mr. Tracy.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, September 10, 1879.

SIR: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your note of the 4th instant, with inclosures calling the attention of this Department to the state of affairs on the Pacific coast of South America, and to assure you in reply that the subject shall be taken into due consideration.

Accept, sir, &c.,

W. HUNTER,
Acting Secretary.

No. 193.

Mr. Christiancy to Mr. Evarts.

No. 53.] LEGATION OF THE UNITED STATES,
Lima, Peru, September 10, 1879. (Received October 6.)

SIR: Referring to your dispatch No. 30, of August 8, I have the honor to state that by reference to my dispatch No. 47, of August 26, you will discover that I had anticipated your wishes, to a considerable extent, in reference to the mission of Dr. Arosemena; and I will now further say that, judging from your general expressions of regret at the existence of the present war between these republics, I felt myself authorized to say, and did say to Mr. Arosemena, that I wished him entire success in his mission, and could assure him that he might count upon the co-operation of the United States (through their representatives in the three republics) in any reasonable measures to restore peace. He is an intelligent gentleman, speaking English like a native, and in my opinion well qualified for his special mission. He was very reserved as to the considerations or means which he expected to employ to reach the desired results, but did not conceal his anxiety to reach that result.

As yet I know of nothing to change the views expressed by me in my dispatch No. 47, but I am morally certain that both Bolivia and Peru desire to restore peace as soon as possible. Both (I think) fear complications which may arise from the action of other governments in South America, and not less the intervention of foreign governments, the results of which cannot be foreseen, and which are contemplated with serious apprehension. The attempt to secure the co-operation of Ecuador with Chili against Peru and Bolivia is understood in official circles here to have proved not only a failure, but a complete fiasco.

But I am satisfied this government is not without apprehension that the efforts now making by Chili with the the government at Rio Janeiro for an alliance against Peru and Bolivia may succeed, in which event it is not difficult to foresee that a general conflagration throughout the South American continent is a probable if not an inevitable result, as Brazil is much the strongest of all the South American powers, has unsettled questions of boundary with most of them, and is not supposed to be specially interested in the preservation of the neighboring republics with which she comes in contact, though it must be confessed that, as yet, she has not shown herself specially aggressive as to most of them.

Such an alliance, therefore, as it seems to me, would keep up a chronic state of warfare in South America for years to come, a result which every friend of humanity and progress must regret. It therefore appears to me that the prosperity and happiness of all these governments is likely to be best secured by preserving present boundaries and not allowing any changes except by the mutual consent of the governments of the adjoining countries.

As to intervention, I am satisfied that from whatever quarter it might come it would be equally offensive to any of the three republics, except that one (if any) in whose special interest it might be undertaken. And yet, judging from the public press, there is supposed to be some ground for a probable belief of a joint intervention of England, France, and Germany. I do not myself share that belief. But should such a step be in contemplation, or should any government seek to intervene, I have satisfied myself that Bolivia and Peru would welcome any efforts of our government to thwart its consummation; and if we can judge from the tone of the Chilian press (copies of which I sent you last week), Chili would be likely to take a similar view. As to a tender of the friendly offices of our government, or a friendly mediation, it could not of course be considered offensive to any of the belligerents; and I am entirely satisfied it would be received in the kindest spirit (at present subject to the conditions mentioned in my dispatches 36 and 47) by Peru and Bolivia, and know of no reason why it should not also by Chili, unless the unfortunate attempt recently made at Santiago in favor of peace may have created some prejudice.

It would be very agreeable to me to receive some general or specific instructions upon these subjects from the Department for the government of my action.

I have, &c.,

I. P. CHRISTIANCY.

No. 194.

Mr. Christiancy to Mr. Evarts.

No. 59.] LEGATION OF THE UNITED STATES,
Lima, Peru, September 17, 1879. (Received October 7.)

SIR: I have the honor to inclose to you a copy of an editorial in the Comercio of this city, of the 13th instant, with a translation of the same, in reference to the supposed mission of Col. H. N. Fisher.

I have no comments to make except to say that, from all I have been able to observe, the effect of Colonel Fisher's action, his ostentatious pretensions, and the public professions which he made of the importance of his pretended mission, have had anything but a good effect along the coast of Peru and Bolivia, the tendency of his conduct along the coast (whatever it may have been in Chili) having been to place the United States in a ridiculous rather than a dignified attitude, and thus to lessen the influence which our government deserved to have and would have had but for his pretensions. I hope these are the only occurrences along this coast which have had such a tendency.

I have further the honor to say that I am glad to see from your dispatch No. 32, in reference to Colonel Fisher, "the desire of the United States government to lend its good offices" to "bring about a peace." And I am rejoiced to see by your dispatch No. 33 that our government is ready to approve any reasonable and judicious action of her ministers in these republics for the restoration of peace.

No action of mine shall be wanting to contribute to so desirable a result. But I still remain of the opinion I have already several times expressed to you, that no efforts of the ministers of the United States to these republics will be of any avail until the belligerents have tried their strength and one of them suffered serious reverses, or until one or all of them have so far exhausted their resources as to be unable to prolong the contest.

In the mean time I have taken the liberty, in a confidential and informal manner (which I deem much the best in the present stage of the case), to inform the minister of foreign affairs that our government is ready to tender its good offices to bring about peace whenever it shall be satisfied that such a course will be agreeable to all the belligerents.

I will further say that, judging from your dispatch No. 33, and mine, No. 36, to which it is an answer, should all the belligerents signify a willingness to accept the arbitration of the United States, or any department or officers thereof, upon any or all the questions in dispute between them, I shall consider myself authorized to pledge our government to accept that position; unless, in the mean time, I shall receive instructions to the contrary. But I would much prefer more direct instructions, and the probability now is there will be ample time to receive them before such action shall become necessary.

I have, &c.,

I. P. CHRISTIANCY.

[Inclosure in No. 59.—Translation of editorial from El Comercio, of September 13, 1879.]

Doubts existed in New York as to the truth of the offer made by the Government at Washington to interpose its good offices amongst the republics of the Pacific engaged in the war that Chili has diligently sought and declared without vacillating. One of the reasons upon which these doubts were based was the silence on this subject kept by the Herald, a newspaper which has a service well known to all the world, and whose means of investigation are so efficient that it can know any serious event occurring in the most remote regions, perhaps before and with more precision than those directly interested.

Another cause of these doubts as to the uncertainty of an event that came to the notice of the North American public through Peruvian newspapers was that Mr. Fisher's name, being so little known in the Union, he should have been commissioned to carry the dispatches with which the Washington Government charged its ministers residing in Lima and Santiago to offer its mediation to Peru and Chili. But the doubts were soon dissolved, and the Herald announced that Mr. Horace W. Fisher, a Boston merchant, had been to Washington in June last soliciting an interview with the President and the Secretary of State respecting the commercial relations between the United States and the South American republics; and in consideration of the proposed trip of Mr. Fisher to Chili, he was designated to carry the dispatches that the government of his country had resolved to address to its consuls and ministers in Chili and Peru.

According to the North American press, Mr. Fisher had no other motives to take an interest in the re-establishment of the good relations between Peru and Chili than the desire of favoring the commercial interests between the United States and the republics on the Pacific—interests that affected the personal convenience of the said Mr. Fisher and the possession of several very close relations with the high society of Chili whose statesmen are his personal friends. As it will be seen by the preceding narration there is nothing to be surprised at in the lack of information of the Herald in regard to the mission of Mr. Fisher. It was not officially prepared, and the Washington Government created it and confided it at the instances of the party that undertook it.

The kind of relation existing between Mr. Fisher and the men who, in Chili, are masters of the situation leads us to believe that these are not altogether strangers to the solicitude of the good offices of the United States; and if these offers have not until now had a satisfactory result, it is probably owing to the proposals having been made in a moment in which Chilian pride could not have accepted them without being obliged to suffer a severe blow.

No. 195.

Mr. Christiancy to Mr. Evarts.

No. 61.] LEGATION OF THE UNITED STATES,
Lima, Peru, September 24, 1879. (Received October 15.)

SIR: I have the honor to inclose to you an editorial from the Comercio, of this city, of the 22d instant, in reference to the offer of the good offices of the United States to Peru; also a translation of the same.

This paper is perhaps, properly speaking, the government paper. This editoral is not, however, written by the editor, but I recognize it as from the pen of——, a citizen of the United States, who is the official interpreter for the government and who frequently writes a little for the papers.

You will readily discover that the editoral has two objects; first, to ridicule the course taken by Mr. Pettis and Colonel Fisher; and the second object is to profess an utter indifference whether the good offices of our government shall be tendered or not. This is for effect, especially in Chili, where it seems just now that any interference of our government would be unpopular on the suspicion that it would be in the interest of Bolivia. But I am satisfied beyond any reasonable doubt that both Peru and Bolivia are very desirous that the United States should interpose their good offices at the first moment when such action would be likely to do good. Both are evidently desirous of peace, and Peru would agree to any reasonable terms satisfactory to Bolivia, in whose behalf she was drawn into the war.

In a long and frank conversation yesterday with the minister of foreign affairs, I again gave him the assurance (mentioned in my dispatch No. 59) that our government was ready to tender its good offices to all the belligerents in behalf of peace whenever there should be good reason to believe that it would be acceptable to all the belligerents. I offered to make this tender formally, and officially, if he preferred; but, like me, he thought best to leave it in this informal shape for the present.

I have, &c.,

I. P. CHRISTIANCY.

[Inclosure in No. 61.—Translation of editorial from El Comercio.]

Every now and then there springs up anew in our periodical press the idea that the United States are about to offer their good offices in regard to the war which Chili declared against us and which she is carrying on in such an inglorious manner.

This idea, besides being highly acceptable in itself to all those who see in peace the fount of every blessing, professes also the prestige which is imparted by the name of a nation which enjoys our high estimation, not only for its sentiments towards us, but also for the good judgment, or rather the care it exercises in the choice of the agents it sends as its representatives.

Without giving offense to any one, it may be said that among foreign nations one of those which inspires us with most consideration is the American Union, whose commerce we endeavor to attract by all possible means, and which, in all questions of honor and aspirations for the future, is the one which is naturally looked to by the republics of this continent. Hence the mania of bringing up the subject at every step; hence the everlasting newspaper correspondence from the banks of the Hudson, written by well-intending scribes, about "Anglo-American mediation," but which, when wrung out, do not contain one grain of substance.

It chances, moreover, that one of the Washington diplomatists, who is accredited to Bolivia, undertook to gain for himself the credit of making peace between the belligerents by his own efforts, undertaking, on his own responsibility, journeys to this capital and to Santiago, where he succeeded, in recompense of his laudable Quakerism, in unchaining the wrath of a portion of the press, which alleged, and with it the ignorant people, that he was trying to impose mediation by force, while in Lima, perchance, because all were in his secret, his good will was accepted, as was deserved by the nature of his project, by his intentions and the gentlemanly character of the self-acting messenger of peace.

But neither in Lima nor in Santiago was he asked to show the credentials of his mission, which he did not possess, and he was politely treated for his efforts, without taking advantage of them.

Another peaceful dust was kicked up about the arrival of Colonel Fisher, who was said to be the bearer of dispatches from the White House, concerning mediation in the conflict, by the aid of the three American legations in La Paz, Lima, and Santiago. We did not trouble ourselves here to deny this rumor, since it was a matter of indifference to us, knowing, as we did, that the colonel had no mission from the American Cabinet, and that his journey, even though he was the bearer of dispatches on subjects very different from peace, or intervention had for its object the attainment of private interests, or the satisfaction of renewing in Chili friendship with persons who were then in the high offices, whence they were shortly hurled by the ridicule attending the naval operations of Rebolledo and the loss of vessels attributed to the stupidity of the commander-in-chief of the navy, at Valparaiso.

The fact is, in brief, that neither have the envoys of the Union received, up to date, any powers from their government to offer their good offices, nor have any of the Americans who have tried their fortunes in a mission of peace ever been able to present any credentials from the Cabinet, by which they were nevertheless employed for very different purposes. We do not say that they acted wrongly, but only that they proceeded on their own account, without the consent, and, perchance, without even the knowledge of their government.

Only the representative of Great Britain in Lima, the honorable Mr. St. Johns, has, as far as we know, made with sufficient authority a formal proposal in the name of his government to interpose the good offices of the Queen "before the outbreak of hostilities." Unfortunately, hostilities had not only commenced, but the Bolivian who acted as Chilian admiral had already promenaded along our coast with the incendiary torch in one hand to burn all our unarmed towns, and in the other the fuse of his cannon, with which he assaulted women and children, and fired upon the wagons in which families were fleeing before the modern buccaneers of the Pacific, while the Chilian iron-clads, which have shown themselves so averse to combat, were preventing the shipment of our immense wealth of saltpetre, after destroying the platforms and canals for the lading of guano, and after perfidiously robbing Bolivia of her deposits and factories at Antofagasta.

It is now necessary to state once for all, spite of the kind intentions of unauthorized agents and the cackling of an uninformed press, that the mediation of the United States has never been legitimately offered to Peru, and that well-wishing officiousness must not be confounded with the employment of express faculties, such as are necessary for success in cases like the present.

No. 196.

Mr. Christiancy to Mr. Evarts.

No. 62.] LEGATION OF THE UNITED STATES,
Lima, Peru, September 24, 1879. (Received October 15.)

SIR: Referring to my dispatch No. 53, upon the question of intervention of foreign powers, I have the honor to state, as having a possible bearing upon that question, the fact, which I have ascertained from the most authentic source, that England, which has already upon this coast the Turquoise, a wooden corvette, and the Triumph, a first-class iron-clad, has ordered another iron-clad to this station, which may soon be expected to arrive.

It is true that England has a larger commerce upon this coast than any other nation, but I have not been able to discover that it has been or is likely to be interfered with by either of the belligerents in violation of any principle of the law of nations. But there may be an apprehension that, under the decree of President Daza in reference to privateers, there may result injury to British commerce; and though England has no treaty with Bolivia, I have the best evidence that England intends to claim for her commerce the same advantages in this respect secured to the United States by our treaty with Bolivia.

Bolivia, at present, has no port on the Pacific to which prizes made by her privateers (if any) could be brought for adjudication; and Peru, her ally, having become a party to the treaty of Paris against privateering, it becomes a serious question whether she could lend her ports to Bolivia for such purpose.

My own opinion is that the increased naval force of England on this coast has reference mainly to this question of privateering.

If the Department has any instructions to give me in reference to the probable questions to arise upon this aspect of affairs, I should be very glad to receive them soon.

I am, &c.,

I. P. CHRISTIANCY.

No. 197.

Mr. Christiancy to Mr. Evarts.

LEGATION OF THE UNITED STATES,
Lima, Peru, September 24, 1879. (Received October 15.)

SIR: I inclose you a copy of a private letter, of this date, written by me to Mr. Osborn, our minister in Chili, which will sufficiently explain itself. In my opinion, Mr. Osborn holds the only key to the present position of affairs in reference to peace. Whether he will be able to accomplish (or whether any one could) anything practical before the parties have tried their strength, is very problematical. But it has seemed to me that the course I have suggested is the only one that offers any prospect of success at present, and that the experiment suggested is worthy of trial in the quiet way which I have suggested.

My letter to Mr. Osborn is marked private, but you are at liberty to treat that letter as well as this either private or official, as you shall think best. I would like to know your determination in this respect, so that I may give it a fractional number, if treated as official, for which I reserve a place in the record, and if treated as official, this letter will be numbered as dispatch No. 62½.

I have, &c.,

I. P. CHRISTIANCY.

[Inclosure.]

Mr. Christiancy to Mr. Osborn.

Private, No. 27.] LEGATION OF THE UNITED STATES,
Lima, Peru, September 24, 1879.

SIR: Deeply impressed, as I am, with the importance to all these republics of a restoration of peace between all the belligerents at the earliest possible moment, and feeling alike anxious for the prosperity and progress of all; and believing that you, as an American citizen, must necessarily share the like sentiment, I write this for the purpose of making some practical suggestions which, it seems to me, may have a tendency to bring about the desired result.

Premising first, that from dispatches received from the Secretary of State, I feel myself authorized to offer the mediation or friendly offices of our government to bring about a peace, whenever it shall appear probable that such an offer will be acceptable to all the belligerents--of which I have in an informal and confidential manner assured the Peruvian Government—and believing that you must also have received dispatches which would authorize you to act in similar manner towards, and to give like assurances to, the Government of Chili. Secondly, knowing that both Peru and Bolivia are desirous of peace upon any terms that would not be considered humiliating, but that owing to the fact that Chili initiated the war by the seizure of Bolivian territory, and that Peru was drawn into the war against her wishes in compliance with her treaty with Bolivia, and that Chili declared the war; for which reasons, both Bolivia and Peru naturally feel that it would be lowering their dignity to make the first advance or proposition for peace, unless, possibly, upon the condition that the territory seized should be surrendered to Bolivia; and that Chili may also feel that she would be humiliating herself to make a proposition for peace upon such terms; yet believing that she also must be desirous of peace upon any terms not humiliating to her, as the war is exhausting her resources as well as those of the other belligerents; that she might, therefore, without humiliation or loss of dignity make a proposition for a division of the territory seized from Bolivia, which might, after modifications by counter propositions, be accepted by Bolivia and Peru.

In view of all these considerations, I would suggest, that to avoid bloodshed, and, as likely to result in the restoration of peace, the Chilian Government might be induced to make a proposition for peace on the basis of dividing the territory seized—that is the simple degree of latitude between 23 and 24. The proposition as first made might not be accepted; but the ice once broken by a proposition, which might be modified by a counter proposition, and this by others, I am strongly inclined to believe, would, in the end, result in peace, either by reference to the United States alone, or (which it seems to me might be preferable) to our government and the United States of Colombia, and the Republic of Ecuador, or some other government or governments in conjunction with the United States.

The great difficulty, in my opinion, to be overcome is to get either party to make the first proposition. Because, if the first step in negotiations can be initiated, I think all the other necessary steps will be likely to follow, and that peace (so essential to all) will be likely to result. It may be, and I fear such is the fact, that no efforts for peace can be made available until the parties have tried their strength and one or the other suffered a terrible reverse; but the plan I have suggested is the only one which occurs to me as likely to lead to such a result, without the calamities incident to such a trial of strength.

And now, in conclusion, allow me to suggest that, in my opinion (which may be erroneous), the best course to pursue, until some definite result can be reached, will be the most quiet, unobtrusive, and informal one, avoiding all such ostentation and parade as that which our friend seemed to think essential, but which defeated, in advance, all the efforts which he could have made. It is time enough for publicity when a practical result is reached; and this can never be reached if all the proceedings, from the first, are to go into the newspapers, where they must depend upon the uncertain and fluctuating current of popular passions and prejudices.

I hope you will keep me advised of any information you may obtain upon any of the points above suggested.

I have, &c.,

I. P. CHRISTIANCY.

No. 198.

Mr. Hunter to Mr. Christiancy.

No. 39.] DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, October 1, 1879.

SIR: Your No. 49 of the 2d ultimo, in relation to the visit of Mr. S. Newton Pettis to Santiago, has been received.

I have, in the first place, to give approval to the views which, as you state, you have expressed with regard to the existing war with Chili, and the possibility of the intervention of this government, at the instance of the combatants, and in the direction of a peaceful and honorable arbitration. Some months ago, on being approached by the Governments of Great Britian and Germany on the subject, this government explicitly replied that it would regard such a movement as premature then, and would not take part in any intervention which might imply disparagement of belligerent rights, or which might not be solicited by the parties to the struggle.

The visit of Judge Pettis to Lima and Santiago appears to have been prompted by kindly motives of peace, and his object appears, from his own reports, to have been limited to endeavoring to make each of the three governments concerned privately acquainted with the desires of the others for the termination of the contest, and the extent to which each might be disposed to make concessions should the three agree to submit their deplorable differences to neutral arbitration. His expedition was undertaken entirely without instructions from this government, and the completely unofficial character of his effort is understood to be fully known to the cabinets of the three countries. His reports of his interviews with the foreign ministers of Peru and Chili make it impossible to believe that his language could have been construed as implying a threat of intervention on the part of the United States toward either, and least of all toward Chili. In this respect the malevolent comments of a hostile press may be disregarded, except so far as they may indicate a tendency of the popular feeling and so shape the course of the local government in the emergency.

Mr. Pettis's experiment, unauthorized and even rash as it might appear, has, at least, led the contestants to a healthy consideration of the terms on which an honorable termination might be put to the war. Should the knowledge of the views of each other thus gained conduce to an ultimate settlement, this government could not but rejoice at the result. It is not, however, disposed to dictate a peace or even to urge the conditions on which it may be reached. Its good offices have not been, and are not now, officially tendered; but if sought, on a practicable basis of settlement submitted by the combatants, the President will not hesitate to use them in the interest of peace.

I am, &c.,

WM. HUNTER,
Acting Secretary.

No. 199.

Mr. Evarts to Mr. Christiancy.

No. 40.] DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, October 13, 1879.

SIR: I have read with much interest your No. 59 of the 17th ultimo, concerning the question of tendering the good offices of the United States to the South American belligerents in the interest of peace.

The recent instructions of the Department to you in relation to the self-constituted mission of Judge Pettis will have gone far towards supplying you with the specific instructions you have now requested.

It remains only to add my appreciation of the wise conclusions you appear to have drawn from the data accessible to you, and to express my approval of your confidential and informal statement to the Peruvian minister of foreign affairs that this government is ready to tender its good offices to bring about peace whenever it shall be satisfied that such a course will be agreeable to all the belligerents. Should you find in official circles any adverse impression derived from the acts or statements of Judge Pettis or Mr. Fisher, you may, in your discretion, still further fortify your statement by the assurance that this government neither contemplates proposing or joining in any movement looking to friendly interposition, unless it shall be the evident desire of all the parties to the struggle that such a course should be adopted in behalf of peace.

Should a desire for the settlement of the dispute be limited to a coincident request for the good offices of this government alone on a practicable basis of reference of the causes of the dispute, in whole or in part, you are authorized to pledge the immediate and earnest consideration of this government with a view to using its best endeavors toward peace. But I am reluctantly constrained to adopt your judgment that no such conclusion is likely until the belligerents have further tried their strength.

I am, sir, &c.,

WM. M. EVARTS.

No. 200.

Mr. Christiancy to Mr. Evarts.

No. 64.] LEGATION OF THE UNITED STATES,
Lima, Peru, October 14, 1879. (Received November 10.)

SIR: I avail myself of the opportunity of sending this dispatch by Mr. Porter C. Bliss, who goes by a special steamer (chartered by the government) to Panama and thence to New York in advance of the mail steamer.

The most important event of which I wish to advise you is the loss, on the 8th instant, of the Peruvian turreted iron-clad Huascar, commanded by Admiral Grau, who lost his life in the conflict.

This small vessel, under the skillful management of this able officer, had for nearly five months not only baffled but completely paralyzed the whole Chilian fleet, including two enormous iron-clads, and kept open free communication by sea for Peruvian transports from the north to Arica and Iquique, and all the southern coast.

I have not the time to describe the particular manner in which the Huascar was lost, and it is not necessary, as I send you, inclosed, as full an account of the transaction as has yet reached here, taken from the South Pacific Times.

The loss of this single vessel changes the whole aspect of the war (if war it can be called, which has consisted almost entirely of the achievements of this single vessel and the efforts of the Chilians to take her), and gives, for the time being, the Chilians full control of the sea, though (unless the port of Callao should be blockaded) I think the Peruvians may still keep open their communications by water with their army in the south; but it will be at the risk of having occasionally a transport taken; and the government is, I have no doubt, making the utmost efforts to compensate, at the earliest possible moment, the loss of the Huascar by procuring still more efficient vessels. But it will be difficult, on this coast, to find the man to fill the place of Grau; such men are not often found anywhere.

But the most lamentable effect, in my opinion, of this catastrophe is that it destroys all present prospects of peace. The Chilians, from the best information I can obtain, but for this, would have been likely soon to favor negotiations for peace on some terms. For awhile, at least, they will probably be so much elated that they would not be likely to listen to any reasonable terms. But the operations by land, which seem now about to commence, may or may not change the aspect of affairs.

Bolivia and Peru have all along been intensely anxious for peace, and, as a means to that end, for the friendly mediation of the United States. And it seems to me manifestly for the interest of all the belligerents alike that peace should be restored at the earliest possible moment, and that, in the final adjustment, long-recognized boundaries should be disturbed as little as possible, and that whatever compensation should be made by or to any of the belligerents should be pecuniary rather than territorial, as the latter will be a continual cause of further conflicts in the future.

I have, &c.,

I. P. CHRISTIANCY.

[The inclosure referred to in Mr. Christiancy's No. 64, is a long printed extract from the South Pacific Times, giving the report of Capt. Y. Garcia of the capture of the Huascar, which is not deemed of sufficient importance to transmit to Congress.]

No. 201.

Mr. Tracy to Mr. Evarts.

LEGATION OF PERU,
New York, October 17, 1879. (Received October 18.)

SIR: The Republic of Chili, as your excellency knows, took forcible possession of a portion of the Bolivian coast under the pretext of re-vindicating her own territory, and notwithstanding all the efforts of the Peruvian Government to effect a friendly settlement between the two republics, tendering at first its good offices, and afterwards its services as mediator, in order to avert a scandalous conflict, Chili declared war against Peru, and immediately commenced hostilities.

The Government of Peru has already shown, in various official documents, that the war had long been premeditated by Chili, and recent publications of prominent Chilians furnish additional proofs thereof. I do not propose, however, in this communication to call your excellency's attention to these publications. At some other time, with your permission, I may do so. The object of this note is to make known to the Government of the United States the course which that of Chili has thought proper to pursue in its efforts to accomplish its schemes against the Republic of Peru.

I need not remind your excellency that long prior to the commencement of hostilities, Chili had in various ways sought to conclude treaties of alliance with a number of the South American republics, for the purpose of acting against Peru, and despoiling her of some of the most valuable portions of her territory. Especially had she labored with Bolivia to separate her from Peru, and to persuade her to enter into an alliance against the latter. The base propositions made, soon after the war was declared, to General Daza, President of Bolivia, in behalf of Chili, by Don Justiniano Sotomayor, consul of Chili, at Corocoro (Bolivia), which were made public as soon as received by the President of Bolivia, are, of course, known to your excellency, and it was naturally supposed that Chili would at once desist from further efforts to induce Bolivia to adopt a traitorous course against her friend and ally, Peru. The press of Chili, to shield the government from the scorn and indignation that such a step must maturally produce in all Christian nations, affirmed that Señor Sotomayor had acted without any authority, and that the government was in no way responsible for his action. How much truth there was in these assertions may be gathered from two documents recently published in the war bulletin (boletin de guerra) of the Bolivian army, of 10th September last, of which I have the honor to inclose translations cut from a Lima newspaper, which, although substantially correct, differ somewhat from the original, and might be considerably improved. I therefore also hand you herewith copies of certified copies of the originals sent to me by the minister of foreign affairs of Peru.

The President of Bolivia, it is almost needless to add, indignantly rejected these infamous propositions, which it is hard to understand how any government, styling itself civilized, could dare to offer, and at once communicated them to the government of the country which he had been invited to betray.

These documents reveal the false and disloyal policy that has ever guided the Chilian government when seeking to enlarge its territory, and prove that it will stop at no means, however base, to attain its ends. What reliance is to be placed on the promises or assertions of statesmen capable of making such a proposition, it is not for the undersigned to say. He simply submits these documents to your excellency for your information, knowing full well that the Government of the United States will properly judge the conduct of Chili in this matter.

The undersigned avails himself, &c.

JOSÉ CARLOS TRACY.

[Inclosure No. 1.]

Dishonorable propositions of the Chilian Government.

Without commenting upon them, we publish here some official documents which will prove how far the Government of Chili can stoop in matters of low political intrigue.

REPÚBLICA DE CHILE, MINISTERIO DE RELACIONES EXTERIORES,
Santiago, May 29, 1879.

The Government of Chili being interested in a speedy termination of the war maintained against Bolivia, it beholds with pleasure your inclination to aid it to attain that desire.

Consequently the Government of Chili would view with satisfaction your approximation to His Excellency the President of Bolivia and your declaration of our sentiments respecting that end.

My government hopes that the Government of Bolivia will lend a willing ear to all your exponents in this acceptation, and in conformity with what you have offered in the conferences we have had together. Your personal antecedents and the present letter will testify your authorization.

Assuring you now of my gratitude of the noble spirit that animates you,

I remain your obedient servant,

DOMING SANTA-MARIA.

To Señor DON ———.

(Copy:) El jefe de seccion.

J. F. GUERRA.

[Inclosure No. 2.]

República de Chile—Ministerio de Relaciones Exteriores.

BASES.

1st. The friendly relations that have ever existed between Chili and Bolivia, and which have only been interrupted since February of the present year, shall be reunited. Consequently the war between the two republics shall cease, and the armies of each shall be considered in future as allied in war against Peru.

2d. In attestation that all motives of discord shall disappear between Chili and Bolivia, the last-mentioned republic shall recognize as the exclusive property of Chili all the territory that has been mutually disputed, and which is comprehended within the parallels 23 and 24, S. L.

3d. As the Republic of Bolivia has need of a portion of Peruvian territory in order to readjust its own, and give it an easy means of communication with the Pacific, which it has not at present, without being subject to the trammels which the Peruvian Government has ever laid upon it, Chili will not embarrass the acquisition of such territory, neither will it oppose its definite occupation by Bolivia, but, on the contrary, will give it the most efficient aid.

4th. The help given to Bolivia by Chili during the actual war with Peru will consist of grants of arms, money, and other articles necessary for the better organization and service of its army.

5th. Peru being conquered, and the time for peace stipulations having arrived, peace cannot be effectuated by Chili unless Peru celebrate it also with Bolivia; in which case Chili will respect the concessions of territory that Peru may make to Bolivia, or that she may impose on Peru; neither may Bolivia effect a peace without the concurrence and interposal of Chili.

6th. Peace being proclaimed, Chili will leave Bolivia all the armament that may be considered necessary for the use of its army and for maintaining in security the territory that may have been ceded by Peru or have been obtained from it by occupation, without any claim being made for the sums of money that may have been disbursed during the war, which at no time will exceed six hundred thousand dollars.

7th. It remains in consequence established that the indemnification of war that Peru may have to pay Chili must of necessity be guaranteed, considering the financial condition of Peru and its informality in the fulfillment of its promises, by the saltpetre works of the department of Tacapaca and the guano and other substances that may be found there.

A special convention will arrange this matter.

Similar conventions will be instituted regarding other points which it may be necessary to demand, investigate, and arrange.

(Copy.)

J. E. DE GUERRA,
Jefe de Seccion.

No. 202.

Mr. Seward to Mr. Tracy.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, October 21, 1879.

SIR: I have had the honor to receive your note of the 17th instant, accompanied by documents, supposed to show early in the war between Chili and Bolivia an attempt on the part of the government of the former republic to detach Bolivia from its alliance with Peru.

In reply, I have the honor to acquaint you, that the papers adverted to will be taken into consideration whenever this Department may have occasion officially to entertain the question to which they relate.

Accept, sir, &c.,

F. W. SEWARD,
Acting Secretary.

No. 203.

Mr. Seward to Mr. Christiancy.

No. 42.] DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, October 22, 1879.

SIR: I have to acknowledge the receipt of your dispatch of the 24th ultimo, in which you inclose a copy of a private communication sent by you to Mr. Osborne, minister of the United States at Santiago, offering some suggestions on the subject of possible negotiations for peace between the governments of Chili, Peru, and Bolivia.

The Department appreciates the force of your suggestions, and can perceive that much good might result to all parties, should a proposition of the character referred to by you be made, and the natural negotiations follow thereupon, since this course would tend in the strongest manner to the desirable consummation of peace. It is trusted therefore that events may shape themselves to this end, either through the scheme which you regard so promising, if adopted, or some other way. Meantime it is of course desirable, as far as this government is concerned, to adhere to the methods recommended in the previous instructions of the Department.

Your dispatch will be regarded as "official," but, at the same time, confidential, and will be numbered as you suggest, "62½."

When dispatches are of a confidential character you can prefix the word "confidential," or some other of like import; numbering the same, however, in the regular order.

I am, &c.,

T. W. SEWARD,
Acting Secretary.

No. 204.

Mr. Christiancy to Mr. Evarts.

No. 70.] LEGATION OF THE UNITED STATES,
Lima, Peru, October 28, 1879. (Received November 24.)

SIR: In compliance with my duty to keep you informed of the progress of the war, I have the honor to state that since my dispatch, No.

64 (October 14), and I may say since the capture of the Huascar on the 8th instant, no visible progress in actual warfare has been made by any of the belligerents. Everything seems to have remained at a dead stand-still. The period has been one of suspense, of vague apprehensions and expectations. The only sign of activity on the part of the Chilians, so far as information has reached here, is that some of the Chilian vessels, one iron-clad and several transports, have been passing up and down the coast from Antofagasta to Arica, but actually attempting nothing. The Peruvians, however, apprehend a descent upon their southern or central coast. They have ceased to fear an attack upon Lima, which, had it been made immediately after the capture of the Huascar, might very probably have resulted in the capture of Lima, had they landed at Aucan or some other port near Lima. Callao is too well defended to be taken by a fleet. But the opportunity for such an attack upon Lima has been lost, if my information from an official source is correct as to the number of men here. Additional forces have been raised and equipped here, as I am informed, and the force which could now be readily made available here is about 12,000 men, and could quickly be raised to 15,000.

As to operations between the armies exclusively by land, there have been none, and, so far as I can see, there are not likely to be any immediately. The desert of Allacouna still remains between the opposing armies, and either army which should attempt to cross to meet its opponents might emerge from that desert so weakened as to become an easy prey.

The Chilians at present have command of the sea; but a strange paralysis seems to check their action. In the mean time Peru has sent a commission to Europe for the purchase of iron-clads, which will enable them to meet their opponents on equal terms, and such, I have no doubt, will be the result of the Chilian fleet remaining as inactive as at present.

There is one enterprise, at least, which I have been anticipating, but of which there is no present indication, except the ominous apprehensions of the people here. This would cut off all communication between the government with its base of supplies, and their principal army, which is in the south. I suspect, however, that the true reason why this is not undertaken is the fear of torpedoes, of which there is here a large supply, with men from abroad skilled in working them. It was this fear, I suspect, which raised the blockade of Iquique, and has prevented an attack upon that place and Arica. Should Callao be blockaded, and the mail steamer prevented from entering or taking the mail, I shall be cut off from all safe means of communicating with your Department, and shall have to act upon my own judgment in the emergencies which may arise.

I am, &c.

I. P. CHRISTIANCY.

No. 205.

Mr. Christiancy to Mr. Evarts.

No. 75.] LEGATION OF THE UNITED STATES,
Lima, Peru, November 3, 1879. (Received November 25.)

SIR: Referring to my dispatch No. 70, I have the honor to give you the following additional facts which have since taken place, showing the progress of the war:

Within a day or two after the above dispatch we began to receive intelligence, by way of the British line of mail steamers from Valparaiso, that preparations upon a large scale were going on for the embarkation of a strong force, and soon the conviction seemed to take possession of the public mind, in which the government seemed to concur, that the large land force was being embarked for an attack in the neighborhood of Lima. This conviction grew stronger, day by day, until yesterday, though for myself I did not credit it, because I did not think it the best course for the interest of Chili; for though she might possibly land forces enough near here to take Lima, and even to capture Callao from the land side, she could not hope permanently to hold these places, nor to conquer Peru; and in the mean time the forces of Peru and Bolivia, now in the south, would have an easy task to retake Antofagasta and all the Bolivian and Peruvian territory now held by the Chilians, and for which, on account of its wealth, they commenced the war. I had, therefore, concluded it was more probable the Chilians would seek to retain this territory, and as the allies—Peruvians and Bolivians—had their forces scattered for more than 100 miles north and south in this territory, that they might land at some point near the center of this 100 miles and strike first against one-half of the allied forces, crush it, and then turn upon the other half and crush that. This seemed to me probable. But the government here was so impressed with the idea that an attack in the neighborhood of Lima was intended that they put forth every effort, and even issued a decree for the enrollment of all Peruvians between the ages of 18 and 70, and in effect proclaimed martial law in Lima and Callao, and, in consequence of the terror of this invasion, the whole ministry (with the exception of La Colevrez, minister of war and marine) was completely changed twice within three days. But about 3 o'clock p. m. yesterday came a telegram from General Prado, at Arica, that sixteen vessels were in front of Pisagua (about 35 miles north of Iquique) attempting to land troops; that fighting had been going on for five hours, and they had not yet succeeded. At about 5 p. m. he telegraphed that the enemy had taken Pisagua, and that General Buendid (the Peruvian general) had retreated upon San Bernardo (a fortified place on the road to Iquique). That the enemy seemed to have divided their forces, and were landing, or attempting to land, a force at Chucumata (about 15 miles south of Iquique). Thus stands the news up to this hour, November 3, at 9 p. m.

To estimate probabilities, I will say that Iquique is only fortified on the water-front, and may be easily taken from the land side, if an enemy succeeds in reaching that side; that the main body of the allied forces are at Arica and Tacna, there being but 5,000 or 6,000 in Iquique, and a small force of the allies thence south to Quillagua. It is easy, therefore, to see that if the Chilians can march rapidly upon Iquique with a sufficient force they may take it before material aid can be received from the north or the south to molest them.

Such at least would be the case if the country were an open one. But as the deserts and mountains do not admit of the rapid movements practicable in an open country, it is impossible for one not intimately acquainted with the locality to form a fair judgment of the probable result.

I leave this letter unfinished to record any further news which may be received prior to the 6th, when the northern mail steamer leaves, only remarking here that it is evident, from the tone of the Chilian press, that the Chilian Government still hope that the Bolivians will abandon Peru, and unite with Chili in siezing from Peru the province of Tarapacá (rich in nitrates), to be given to Bolivia in exchange for the Bolivian territory seized by Chili, notwithstanding Peru was drawn into this war in compliance with her treaty with Bolivia to protect the latter in her boundaries. That there is a party in Bolivia who favor such a course I have no doubt; but that President Daza and his government do so I do not believe. But no reasoning which could be sound as to civilized countries generally, can be a safe guide to a correct conclusion, when Bolivia is one of the factors of the problem.

One thing which I have all along thought probable, I still think likely to take place, the blockade of Callao, which the Chilians have navy enough to accomplish without interfering with the land operations in the south.

NOVEMBER 5—6 p. m.—Nothing further has been heard from the south.

With the highest esteem, I am, &c.,

I. P. CHRISTIANCY.

No. 206.

Mr. Christiancy to Mr. Evarts.

No. 80.] LEGATION OF THE UNITED STATES,
Lima, Peru, November 11, 1879. (Received December 8.)

SIR: I have the honor to inclose to you the translation of an executive decree of the Peruvian Government of the 8th of this month (founded upon a law of the 1st instant), prohibiting commerce with Chili, &c., and to say that as it has occurred to me that the second article of the decree may seriously conflict with the eighteenth article of our treaty with Peru (proclaimed July 27, 1874), to say nothing of last clause of article 5 of the same treaty, and being informed that the British minister also insists upon the provisions of our treaty alluded to, under the clause of the British treaty, called "the most favored nation clause," and that France, though her treaty with Peru is claimed by the latter government to have expired by its own limitation, intends to claim the benefit of our treaty under the "most favored nation clause." I this day called upon the minister of foreign affairs of Peru, in an informal, confidential, and friendly manner, and suggested to him the conflicts which I thought might arise between the eighteenth article of our treaty and the second article of this decree, as to the rights of American vessels to enter Peruvian ports, though they might have come from or touched at Chilian ports, saying at the same time that, for the present, and before any actual conflict had arisen, I did not propose to enter a formal protest, but that if a case should actually arise in which, for instance, an American vessel should be prohibited entrance into a Peruvian port, for the cause mentioned in the second article of the decree, and complaint should be made to me by such vessel or her officers, I should feel it my duty to enter an earnest and formal protest against such violation of the treaty. I did not assume to define the various points of conflict which might arise, nor by putting the case of an American vessel coming from a Chilian port did I mean to limit the cases of conflict to that, nor did the minister understand me as thus limiting the cases; on the contrary my conversation also intimated generally that conflicts might arise in reference to the right of bringing in American vessels, goods, or property, the products of Chili, taken in connection with the clause providing that free ships shall make free goods; but upon those latter points I intimated no opinion of my own, only saying that I hoped the government would carefully consider the questions of conflict which might arise between the treaty and the decree. The minister, so far as I could judge from his conversation, did not appear to have examined the treaty at all, nor to have formed any definite notion of its meaning or object; but, with an evidently strong desire not to give just cause for offense to the United States in this respect, said that a meeting of the cabinet would be held this evening, and the whole subject laid before it.

There is but comparatively a small amount of our shipping on this coast at present, while England has a large amount, and France has more than we. There is also a British line of steamers (the Pacific Steam Navigation Company) running along the coast of all the belligerents, and thence to Panama.

A very large portion of the sailors and employés on these steamers were Chilians, while very few (and so far as I can learn, no case) of this kind exist as to the vessels of the United States. This being a case, therefore, in which England was almost exclusively interested, and if the eighteenth article of our treaty would permit these Chilians to come into all Peruvian ports, while Chili has the complete command of the sea, the enforcement of such a stipulation would be directly aiding one of the belligerents against the other, by enabling Chili to keep up a most effectual espionage against Peru in Peruvian ports. I therefore concluded not to urge this provision at present, and, unless so instructed by the Department, to await the development of events until a case should arise in which American interests should be involved.

But this morning, November 12, I called upon the British minister to learn what view he took of our treaty in this respect, and what course he had determined to take in reference to this point. He had seen and felt the injustice of enforcing the right to have these Chilians upon English vessels enter the ports of Peru, and frankly stated that he had waived all claims of the kind, and informed the British steamers that they must be discharged from such vessels.

This difficulty, therefore, is practically at an end.

But questions may still arise, under the eighteenth article of our treaty, whether American vessels would have the right to introduce Chilian goods or products, and trade in them in Peruvian ports. At present I am inclined to the opinion that the treaty secures no such right when Peru has declared non-intercourse with Chili and excluded the importation of all such Chilian goods and property.

It is clear, I think, that it was entirely competent for Peru to impose such a high rate of duties upon such goods and property as to effectually exclude them; and the right thus indirectly to exclude rests, as it seems to me, upon the right of direct and absolute exclusion.

The fifth article of the treaty seems to me to support this view. Upon this point I await your instructions. I think no case raising this as a practical question is likely to arise in the mean time.

In fact, all the questions arising under the decree mentioned have become of less importance, as an order appears in the papers this morning, which, with its translation, I inclose, which will put off the execution of the order for some time, to give fair notice to neutrals.

I have, &c.,

I. P. CHRISTIANCY.

[Inclosure 1 in No. 80.—From the South Pacific Times, Tuesday, November 11, 1879.]

Important decree.

COMMERCIAL INTERDICT WITH CHILI.

LUIS LA PUERTA, first vice-president of the republic encharged with the executive power.

In use of the authorization granted by the law of the 1st instant—

I decree:

ARTICLE 1. All commerce between the republics of Peru and Chili is hereby strictly interdicted as long as the present war lasts.

ART. 2. All steamers or sailing vessels coming from any Chilian port, or which have touched in any Chilian port, are prohibited from entering any port in Peru.

ART. 3. Steamers and ships of any kind trading on the Peruvian coast are forbidden to have any Chilian on board. Any vessel on board of which a Chilian is found will not be allowed to enter in future any Peruvian port.

ART. 4. The foregoing rules apply to vessels coming from Bolivian or Peruvian ports occupied by the enemy.

The minister of finance and commerce will provide for the due fulfillment of this decree.

Given in the government house in Lima, this eighth day of the month of November, eighteen hundred and seventy-nine.

LUIS LA PUERTA.

J. M. QUIMPER.

[Inclosure 2 in No. 80.—Translation from El Comercio, Lima, November 11, 1879.]

COMMERCIAL INTERDICTION.

The director of administration has issued the following circular to the custom-houses of the republic:

SIR: The law of the 1st instant is being put in force by the supreme decree of the 8th, in relation to the commercial interdiction with the Republic of Chili. The government believed it unnecessary to indicate that for the fulfillment of the law and of the decree, the necessary time, in consideration of distances, would be accorded, since, from the principal of universal legislation, to give the aforesaid time is obligatory.

For the better comprehension of the aforesaid dispositions, I fulfill the duty in bringing to your knowledge that circumstance, by order of the minister of that branch, in order that you may take it in consideration when you receive in that port the ships or steam vessels or sailing vessels comprised in the said decree.

God be with you.

JUAN DE D. RIVERO.

No. 207.

Mr. Christiancy to Mr. Evarts.

No. 83.] LEGATION OF THE UNITED STATES,
Lima, Peru, November 19, 1879. (Received December 12.)

SIR: Since my dispatch No. 75, in reference to the progress of the war, little has taken place of which reliable information can be obtained.

It seems, however, tolerably certain that at the time of the landing of the Chilians at Pisagua, another landing of part of their forces took place at Junin, a few miles south; that the two bodies formed a junction near Pisagua and moved inland to Agua Santa, having got possession of a short railroad from Pisagua to that point, with one or two locomotives; that on the 11th instant General Daza, with 4,000 of his Bolivians, moved south to form a junction with such of the allied forces as were scattered along the south of Peru and in the Bolivian territory, especially with the main body of them, under General Buendia at Paz Almonte, back 40 miles from Iquique, and 30 miles south of Agua Santa, and if possible, after said junction, to attack the Chilian army, which, from the best calculations to be made here, must have in its main body from 8,000 to 10,000 men.

Since the 11th all seems to be uncertain as to the movements of the armies, except that the Chilians had cut the cable between Iquique and Arica; that on the 15th instant the commander of the Chilian fleet gave notice of the establishment of the blockade of Iquique, which they probably have force enough to render effectual, and that yesterday dispatches were received from Arica that General Daza had returned to that point, thus showing that the attempted concentration was found impracticable; and, unless with the aid of more allied force at Arica, they shall be strong enough to meet the main Chilian army. Without the aid of Buendia it would seem quite probable that the allies may be beaten in detail, as intimated in my No. 75. But if all the allied forces can be concentrated, the Chilians may be driven back to their ships, unless in the mean time they receive large re-enforcements. In the mean time the dread of an attack upon Lima keeps a large force of the Peruvian army here.

I am, &c.,

I. P. CHRISTIANCY.

No. 208.

Mr. Hay to Mr. Christiancy.

No. 47.] DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, November 26, 1879.

SIR: Your dispatch No. 70, of the 28th ultimo, in which you give the current news and forecasting with respect to the progress and prospects of the war, has been read with the usual interest attaching to your dispatches on that subject.

In view of the actively aggressive operations of the Chilians, as shown in your dispatches and by subsequent telegrams in the public press, it may not be inopportune to notice the concluding part of your dispatch, wherein you observe that should Callao be blockaded and the mail steamers interrupted, you would be cut off from all safe means of communicating with this Department, and would have to act upon your own judgment in the emergencies which might arise.

While it would be, on every account, desirable to maintain constant communication with you, if possible, in the emergency to which you refer, yet the adoption of any extraordinary and expensive means to accomplish that object, such as the dispatch of a special courier, would not be regarded as necessary unless, indeed, some pressing necessity should arise for the transmission of intelligence urgently affecting the relations of the United States with the parties to the struggle. The adoption of any special means of communication would, of course, be subject to the approval of the Department.

I am, &c.,

JOHN HAY,
Acting Secretary.

No. 209.

Mr. Christiancy to Mr. Evarts.

No. 87.] LEGATION OF THE UNITED STATES,
Lima, Peru, November 26, 1879. (Received December 18.)

SIR: I have the honor to inform you that I have just received a letter from our consul at Iquique, dated the 15th inst., informing me that the commander of the Chilian iron-clad, Amivante Cochrane, had just given notice to the consular corps at that post that he had established the blockade of Iquique "and the adjacent minor ports" (a little uncertain), and that ten days were given to the neutral merchant vessels now in port, counting from the 15th, in which to complete their cargoes and leave the bay. This, it must be admitted, is sufficiently liberal, especially as to completing "cargoes." Doubtless you have also been advised by the consul of all this.

I have, &c.,

I. P. CHRISTIANCY.

P. S.—I have no doubt that before this reaches you, and probably before now, Iquique is in possession of the Chilian forces, and the blockade in that manner ended; but I have no positive information of the fact.

I. P. C.

No. 210.

Mr. Christiancy to Mr. Evarts.

No. 88.] LEGATION OF THE UNITED STATES,
Lima, Peru, November 26, 1879. (Received December 18.)

SIR: Referring to my dispatch No. 83 upon the progress of the war, I have to say, in continuation, that important events have since taken place, the details of which it is impossible to ascertain with certainty, but the result of which, it is now evident, has been a crushing defeat of the allied armies, or at least of the Peruvian forces by the Chilians, at San Francisco.

It seems, or at least this is the information and general belief here, that a part of the Bolivian army refused to march against the Chilians, and that General Daza found himself unable to compel them. But that part of them did march, with a larger force of Peruvians, for Agua Santa; that they there formed a junction with General Buendia, the Peruvian General at Agua Santa. The Chilians having there, and thence toward San Francisco, only outposts and skirmishers, which were attacked and driven in back to the main body, strongly intrenched at San Francisco. That the allies (consisting of two or three divisions of Peruvians and one of Bolivians) some time between the 20th and 23d inst. made a combined attack of several hours upon the Chilian army, but were badly defeated, and with heavy loss; that at last accounts General Buendia, with a part of the army, had retreated to Tara, and General Prado, who is still at Arica, with, as is supposed, some 5,000 or 6,000 men, telegraphed on Saturday, the 22d, that he did not know where the rest of the army was.

This is the substance of all that is reliable; the cable at Mallendo being cut, or the place taken last Saturday, we get no more telegrams.

But it is reported and generally believed here, that a great, if not the greatest, part of the Bolivian army proved faithless to the Peruvian alliance, and that they with General Campero (Bolivian who has returned to La Paz) were about to form an alliance with the Chilians against Peru, and depose Daza; such is the belief here, and the excitement or rather the depression is extreme.

In confirmation, or perhaps only as a consequence of this belief, the Bolivian minister here, Mr. Flores, it is said, has not been seen since last Friday, the 22d inst., and the excitement is strong against him.

The consequence of all this has been a general conviction that a revolution must take place in the government here, and that Piérola must be put at the head of affairs, and though he probably has more following than any man in Peru, and I am inclined to think quite as clear a head, and is withal very ambitious, he feels the terrible responsibility of assuming the reins of government just now when everything seems rushing to chaos and ruin.

A demonstration was got up by the rabble in the streets the night of the 22d inst., and the tocsin sounded throughout the city, supposed to have been instigated by General de la Cotera, minister of war, first, in his own interest in hopes of being made dictator, and second, to get the prestige of Piérola in a new ministry under his control. But Piérola did not take the bait, and the whole thing ended in smoke. But notwithstanding the fearful responsibility, I am inclined to think that he will be compelled very soon, it may be any day, by the strong popular wish, to consent to take the position of dictator. And though I think I understand the principles of our government, in recognizing revolutionary governments, I will be glad to receive any instructions you may see fit to give. But do not make the element of probable permanency (of such government) too prominent as, in that event, there would be few Spanish-American governments recognized generally.

I hear it rumored in various quarters, and think there may be some ground for the rumor, that a kind of moral pressure is at present being brought to bear upon the Peruvian Government by the representatives of England, France, and perhaps Germany, to induce Peru to offer terms of peace at once; but I have purposely kept aloof from any effort of this kind, because I think I see clearly enough, that in the present extreme depression and discouragement of the Peruvian mind, and the equally extravagant elation of the popular mind of Chili, that Peru might be led or driven to offer or to accept terms of peace, which a sound and cool judgment of the present or the more matured judgment of the future might condemn as extravagant and unreasonable. And in such an event, the nation whose representative had, by his action, contributed to drive this government hastily into such terms would be sure to incur the hatred of Peru and of Peruvians for a long time to come.

I shall not therefore volunteer or officiously offer advice to this government unasked. It will be time enough to give advice when it is asked; and should it be asked, I shall only say, "Certainly I advise peace, if you can procure it upon what you deem reasonable terms, but you must yourselves be the judges of what terms are reasonable, unless all the belligerents agree to refer it to some power, or to the representatives of some power or powers, to determine what is reasonable."

In such an event, should it be referred to me in whole or part, I should, with the consent of my government, seek to determine the question in view of all the circumstances, undisturbed by the excitement of the popular mind here or elsewhere.

I have, &c.,

I. P. CHRISTIANCY.

No. 211.

Mr. Christiancy to Mr. Evarts.

No. 90.] LEGATION OF THE UNITED STATES,
Lima, Peru, December 3, 1879. (Received December 26.)

SIR: Referring to my dispatch No. 88, I will say, in continuation, that the Chilians had, at the date of that dispatch (as we have since learned), taken possession of Iquique; and that about the 28th or 29th ultimo (the exact day I cannot yet ascertain) they placed two wooden naval vessels (corvettes) in front of Arica, and sent on shore and to the neutral vessels in port notice of the blockade of that port. It is said that, as in the case of Iquique, they have given 10 days' notice for vessels to leave, but I have not been able to find any reliable evidence of the latter fact. Whether the two Chilian ships are sufficient to make the blockade effectual remains to be tested.

As to the operations upon land since my No. 88, the information is not wholly reliable as to details, but the reports through Peruvian channels are that, since the defeat at San Francisco, General Buendia has succeeded in collecting about 5,000 men at Tarapaca, besides the cavalry, which had suffered very little, and which, at the last intelligence, had made its way to Arica; that there were before their arrival from 5,000 to 7,000 Peruvian soldiers at Arica in good condition and well supplied, and that General Daza is, at the last intelligence, at Tacna, with some 2,800 to 3,000 Bolivians. On the 18th of November the Chilian ironclad Blanco Encalada captured the small Peruvian gunboat Pilcomayo.

On the morning of the 9th ultimo General Prado (who was supreme director of the war in the south) arrived here by one of the English mail steamers. He was well received, but without much public demonstration. Piérola, his great rival, however, met him at the depot in Lima in the most friendly manner. General Prado has resumed the presidency here, leaving General Montero at Arica, in chief command of the forces in the south.

In attempting to form a new ministry General Prado, as stated by the press, tendered to Piérola the place of minister of finance and president of the council, with the right to select all the other ministers.

But it is said by some well-informed persons that General Prado reserved the right of selecting one or two of them, and by others equally well informed that the offer to Piérola was as first stated, and that he offered to accept on the condition that General Prado should declare himself dictator, ignoring the constitution entirely as to the means to be taken for the public defense. But whichever version may be true, Piérola declined to go into the cabinet; and this morning the formation of a ministry is announced.

Don Manuel Irigoyen, minister of foreign relations and president of the council.

Ramon Ribeyro, minister of justice.

Mariano Alvarez, minister of government.

Aurelio Dinegro, minister of finance, and

Colonel Eavieguo Sava, minister of war and marine.

Mr. Enriqne Irigoyen is the same who has held the same office for a long time, under all changes of the cabinets, until De la Lotera became president of the council. He is a man of clear head and souud judgment, with a more intimate knowledge of foreign affairs than any man in Peru—par negotiis on all occasions—and I think an honest and patriotic man, which last qualifications, according to the general popular belief here, make him a "rara avis" in terra Peruano. In that he commands the respect and esteem of all parties.

The other members of the new cabinet are not men of distinguished prominence (except perhaps, Sava, who is said to be a man of great vigor and decision.)

I think this cabinet likely to have some permanency, unless unforeseen calamities should impel the populace to drive Piérola into the assumption of the dictatorship, which I do not think he desires at present.

I am, &c.

I. P. CHRISTIANCY.

P. S.—6 p. m.—The evening papers just out have the following telegrams from Arica.

Montero to the President:

ARICA, 3 10.45 a. m.

Battle at Tarapaca; our army victorious; 2,500 Chilians, 1.000 killed and wounded. They were completely routed. We took 7 Krupp "cañones," 3 Gatlings, and 60 pris- Ours 600 killed and wounded. 11 pieces of artillery taken; 4 Gattling. The Samar has disembarked our wounded here.

2.

Prefect of Arigupa to the President.

MOLLENDO 3, 1.28 p. m.

Twenty-five hundred Chilians attacked our army on the 27th ultimo, in Tarapaca. oners, 1,000 Chilians killed and wounded.

Our victory was obtained in the night.

How reliable this may be, I do not yet know, but I give it as it comes.

I. P. C.

No. 212.

Mr. Christiancy to Mr. Evarts.

No. 91.] LEGATION OF THE UNITED STATES,
Lima, Peru, December 7, 1879. (Received January 7, 1880.)

SIR: Referring to my despatches Nos. 88 and 90, I will say, in continuation (none at least made public) to change the effect of the telegrams given in my No. 90, as to the operations of the armies on land—except that the victory at Tarapaca—seems to have been of less dimensions than their report, and the allied forces are retreating upon Arica, nor has any naval operation taken place of which reliable news has been received here. But the new ministry mentioned in my No. 90 as just appointed all declined to accept, and the former ministry, under General De la Cotera, as president of the council, remains in office, not, as I am inclined to think, because President Prado prefers them, but because he has been unable to induce others to accept.

But the true reason why Piérola did not accept the offer of President Prado to form and to preside over a new ministry is no longer a secret. I inclose you his own declaration or pronunciamento over his own hand inserted in his paper, La Patra, three days since, together with a translation, which, whatever else may be said of it, must be admitted to be a bold, frank, and candid statement of his position and that of the party he represents. I must ask you to judge of it, not from our North American standpoint, but from that of Peru; because, judged by our North American standard, it might be thought to be an evidence of the personal vanity, egotism, and selfish ambition of the writer; whereas we have the highest possible direct evidence—the declaration of the writer himself—that it is nothing of the kind, and that there is nothing in it to authorize such an opinion; and the latter is probably the view of the majority of his political followers, though, if I am to judge from the Peruvian press, I should be compelled to admit that, ostensibly at least, his followers are not as numerous nor as cordial since as before the publication of this manifesto.

The people see that the constitution, which he thinks the source of all the calamities of Peru, and which he says he has labored for years, inside and outside of Peru, to get rid of, but which President Prado has the folly still to cling to, is not, after all, so great an obstacle as he seems to suppose; since, whenever a provision of the constitution happens to be thought embarrassing, an executive decree, or that of a single minister, is issued enacting the very thing which the constitution seems to prohibit, and if this is subsequently approved by Congress, it becomes at once constitutional, because the constitution itself (Art. 59, sub. 1) provides that Congress shall have power to make laws, to interpret, modify, and repeal existing laws ("Dar loyes, interpretar modificar y derogar las existentes"); and the constitution is a law to be construed, as well as a statute or resolution of Congress.

True, perhaps, President Prado has seemed to be reluctant to go much in advance of the approval of Congress in such cases, but this is by many thought to make the constitution unnecessarily embarrassing. It is true, however, that during President Prado's absence in the field, the Vice-President (La Puerta) and his various cabinets were very prolific in decrees, which, to us, would seem to be clearly in violation of their constitution. And the last cabinet (continued by President Prado) has issued decrees upon the tariff, the exports, and imports, the duties, and how payable, and levying taxes of various kinds, and upon various other subjects without the warrant of any act of Congress, and these are still continued, though I suppose they would be repealed on the reaccession of President Prado. I inclose two of them not heretofore sent you, and which might furnish some valuable hints to our Secretary of the Treasury.

From the above considerations it is easily seen that an inflexible constitution, like ours, would be wholly unsuited to the habits of society, as at present constitued here; and like all the other Latin races, they require a constitution that will bend without breaking, or at all events bend.

I am, &c.,

I. P. CHRISTIANCY.

[Inclosure in No. 91.—Translation.]

To the Editor of La Patria:

ESTEEMED SIR AND FRIEND: General Prado having returned to Lima, after a new, unjustifiable, and inexplicable disaster, my refusal to organize a cabinet under the Presidency of that gentleman has aroused the malevolence of a few and the thoughtlessness of many to make the most erroneous and capricious comments.

I would overlook them in silence, as I have done until now, if they were injurious to myself alone, since I believe I have shown that I do not know how to remember self when the country is in question; but as all these commentaries unite in the affirmation that, in my opinion, the situation is desperate, and that this is the cause of my refusal to face it, which would undoubtedly injure Peru immensely at home and abroad, I owe to the country a distinct declaration, and I am about to make it, cost what it may, with all the resolute effrontery which the solemnity of the crisis demands of me.

If suppression of the truth is ever justifiable, there are times in which the whole truth should be uttered, and when silence is a crime.

I was called upon by General Prado to organize, with full liberty, a cabinet. I refused at once and distinctly, but founding my explanation upon an exposition as frank as it was possible to make it, in which nothing was reserved, and accompanied by what, in my opinion, should be the course for him to pursue. I proceed to condense, in a few points, my mode of reviewing the situation:

1st. The disasters suffered are the necessary result, not only of the men who are at the head of affairs, but of the system under which we live, and against which I have struggled for ten years, using every means as well within the government as outside of it.

2d. If this system be maintained, it is impossible now to save the situation; and consequently to aid in sustaining it, far from laboring for Peru, would be to contribute to the consummation of her ruin.

3d. As to the persons who represent this system, both General Prado and General La Puerta have become impossible as heads of the nation, under present circumstances; and as for the second vice-president, it will be sufficient for me to say that his keeping out of the country is clear evidence of sound judgment and patriotism.

4th. Those who become indignant, and accuse me because I do not consent to become chief of a cabinet after the lapse of eight months, during which I have not been deemed useful for anything--incredible obstacles being presented even to the very exercise of the right of being killed at the head of a regiment of volunteers—are irritated, and denounce me, not because I do not come forward to save the country, but because I do not come forward to save the authority they wield, and which they have not known how to employ for the triumph of Peru.

5th. Legality does not really exist. It is in fact reduced, not to the upholding of institutions which have been denaturalized, and which are, at this moment incompatible with the public weal, but to the maintaining of this or that man in office.

6th. I signified my assent two months ago to preside over a cabinet wherein the legal freedom was denied me, which the critical position of affairs now compels to be offered me. I resigned myself to this only because foreseeing the imminence of an invasion, and the proximity of a decisive battle, it was, above all, indispensable to avoid, during such contest, exactly what has occurred without any justifiable cause. To-day no such motive exists; more, much more is needed, and my proffered acceptance of that date would now be inexplicable and culpable.

7th. For a nation which has faith and the determination to save itself, there is never a situation which can be called desperate. I believe our own far from being so; but were such the case, men of heart only go down fighting.

8th. I have not refused, therefore, to serve the country, and to serve it equally in the lowest as in the highest position. I have, yes, I have refused, and do refuse, two things: 1st, to seek that position for myself without being called to it; 2d, to accept without the means of doing what I believe indispensable for the good of the country. For me there are, at this moment, two things equally absurd, and which fools alone could entertain: 1st, personal ambition; 2d, that egotism which refrains.

The situation may be thus summed up: If the country is to be saved, a radical political transformation is inevitable. This will either take place from above downwards, General Prado taking the initiative of an appeal to the people, the only legal entity which can decide, or that transformation will be made from below upwards, with terrible violence, which patriotism should avoid at all risks.

In order to avoid this second extreme, I have omitted no effort whatever from the outbreak of the war, even going lately, through motives of pure patriotic duty, so far as to go in person to receive Mr. Prado, hoping, as I still hope, that he will at length do as I have earnestly urged him, which either I am much mistaken or he himself recognizes as indispensable and what the salvation of the country demands of him.

This is the true state of affairs. I put it upon record in this letter without other motive than the salvation of Peru, new and costly as the sacrifice may be which it may impose upon me.

I would thank you, Mr. Editor, to be pleased to give this a place in the columns of your paper before the closing of the mail for abroad.

Saluting you affectionately.

N. DE PIÉROLA.

No. 213.

Mr. Christiancy to Mr. Evarts.

No. 93.] LEGATION OF THE UNITED STATES,
Lima, Peru, December 16, 1879. (Received January 7, 1880.)

SIR: Referring to my dispatch No. 88, in reference to the reported revolution at La Paz, the apprehension here that the revolutionists there were acting in hostility to the Peruvian alliance and in favor of an alliance with Chili, and that the Bolivian minister here had not been seen for some time, I have to say that from the best information (none attainable here), the supposed revolution was a movement in favor of the Peruvian alliance, and a more vigorous prosecution of the war. I inclose an article from the South Pacific Times of this day, which gives the result of the information, so far as the public are informed, up to this date; and I will say that for the last two weeks or more the Bolivian minister appears in public and has consultations at the palace as formerly.

Absolutely no news have been received from the seat of war since my No. 91, except that the remains of the Peruvian army, which fought at San Francisco, were arriving at Arica and are now, probably, safe at that place with the main body who had not left that place.

Great activity has been shown in raising men in this central portion of Peru, and there are supposed to be now in the vicinity of Lima and Callao near 15,000 men, a large part of whom, however, are raw recruits.

Whether any of them are intended to be sent south is doubtful, but there are at present indications of an intention to send off, to-night or to-morrow, one transport, if not two, to the south with ammunitions and supplies for the army at Arica. Those will run great hazard of being taken, and probably will not think it safe to go further than Mollendo.

The government show no indications of asking for peace on any terms that Chili would be likely at present to grant.

In the mean time all business is nearly at a stand still. The credit of the paper currency is rapidly falling. An American double-eagle will purchase to-day from 80 to 84 paper soles.

I have, &c.,

I. P. CHRISTIANCY.

P. S.—DEC. 17. The papers this morning contain telegrams showing that the port of Ilo (or Ylo) is blockaded by three Chilian vessels.

[Inclosure in No. 93.—From the South Pacific Times, December 16, 1875]

THE REPORTED REVOLUTION IN BOLIVIA.

From official documents now published it would appear that the rumors lately in circulation regarding a revolutionary movement in La Paz, towards the end of last month, were not totally devoid of foundation, but the affair, however, has not been so serions as was at first supposed.

When the council of ministers intrusted with the reins of government during the absence of the President, General Daza, at the seat of war, received tidings of the disaster to the allied arms on the 19th ultimo, at San Francisco, afraid of a popular outbreak, they withheld the news from the public for some days. In the mean time, the people, alarmed at the prolonged silence on the part of the government, and at the rumors, which did not fail to be spread, of serious reverses sustained by the allies, began to show their discontent, and fears were entertained that unless energetic measures were to be adopted by the ministers, an outbreak on the part of the populace would shortly ensue. Señor Nuñez del Prado, who is one of the most prominent citizens of La Paz, and is at the head of the municipality of that city, then put himself into communication with the ministers, and explained to them the position of matters in the city. The president of the council of ministers, Doctor Reyes Ortiz, threupon intrusted Señor Nuñez del Prado with the command of a small body of national guards in the place, in order to insure the peace of the city and put down any disturbance which might arise. That same night Señor Jofre, the minister of war, left the city, commissioned, according to Doctor Reyes Ortiz's statement, to proceed to Oruro and reorganize the fugitives from the Bolivian army, who would pass through that town. The populace of La Paz, however, looked upon the minister's departure as a flight, and, owing to this circumstance, and the subsequent vacillating conduct of the remaining ministers, affairs began to assume a more serious aspect. At last news, however, thanks to the energetic attitude of Señor del Prado, who, in accordance with the wishes of the ministry, had placed himself at the head of the available troops in the city, matters had taken a more favorable turn, and all danger of a disturbance had passed away. Señor del Prado issued the following proclamation to the people on the 27th:

Citizen DANIEL NUÑEZ DEL PRADO, President of the Municipality:

Hereby inform the people that after taking command of the public force yesterday, at 7 p. m., according to instructions received, with the laudable desire to preserve the peace of the city and maintain order, I am happy to be able to state that that object has been attained, thanks to the good sense and peace-loving disposition of the inhabitants of this town, who have voluntarily assisted to support the authority of the government, at present represented by its ministers intrusted with the executive power. Public order continues to be preserved with the disinterested co-operation of the young men of the city, who have now taken arms and been organized into a body which will aid to insure the success of the sacred war the republic is engaged in.

There has happily been no symptoms of disorder; the citizens continue their peaceful labors guaranteed by the constitution, with only one thought common to all—to save the dignity and nationality of the republic.

Every citizen is consequently called upon to contribute towards the great work of the country's defense.

La Paz, November 28, 1879.

DANIEL N. DEL PRADO.

No. 214.

Mr. Christiancy to Mr. Evarts.

No. 94.] LEGATION OF THE UNITED STATES,
Lima, Peru, December 23, 1879. (Received January 22, 1880.)

SIR: Since my dispatch No. 93, of last week, several important facts have occurred with reference to the Peruvian Government.

On the afternoon of the 18th instant President Prado, without any previous notice or suspicion, but with the full knowledge of the minister of war and the minister of foreign affairs, and probably of the whole cabinet, left Lima; went to Callao, and about 4 p. m. embarked on the English mail steamer Payta for Panama, as it was given out by his friends, with the intention of visiting the United States, and perhaps Europe, in the interest of Peru. But the general belief here among all classes seems to be that it was a desertion, a flight from the government, which, under an accumulation of calamities, he felt he could no longer hold with advantage to himself or to the country. I have no decided opinion as to which is the true version of the affair. I am inclined to judge him leniently, because he has been more favorable to constitutional government than most Peruvian politicians, and yet the difficulties of his position were so overwhelming that it is possible the most unfavorable explanation of the cause of his leaving may be the true one.

I inclose herewith a correct translation of his decree on leaving, taken from the South Pacific Times, merely remarking here that the resolution of congress of the 2d May, to which he alludes, was that which was intended to authorize him to command the armies of the republic in the south.

I inclose also a translation from the same paper of his address to the nation and the army on leaving.

General La Puerta, the first vice-president, was thus left as President, and though all the old ministry tendered their resignations, he refused to accept them, and they all continued in office; General de La Cotera, minister of war and marine, continuing as president of the council, and virtually the head of the government, and though for years known to be a Piérolist, yet, like a true and gallant man, as he seems to have been, he felt bound to sustain the constitutional government. But immediately upon the departure of Prado a spirit of inquietude and want of confidence in the government seemed to pervade the public mind, and it was not difficult to discover that there was a general wish that Piérola should assume the dictatorship, all seeming to have more confidence in his intelligence and capacity than in any other man, and I must also say that the large majority of American citizens here (of whom there are perhaps one hundred in Lima, most of whom were connected with Henry Meiggs in his railroad projects), seemed to sympathize with this Piérola movement, though, like true Americans, they carefully abstained from taking any active steps in that direction.

Martial law having been already declared in Lima and Callao, on the 19th appeared a decree prohibiting the assembling in the streets of more than four men at any one place. But the inquietude still continued to increase. I could not avoid feeling the effects of a terrible ground swell about to sweep over the land like an earthquake wave.

Yesterday (Sunday) afternoon, while writing a private letter, about half past 4 p. m., I began to hear the tramp of infantry, and soon after of cavalry, in front of the legation. I supposed it to be a review, and kept on writing. But the tumult increased. I went to the balcony (which no one can understand who has not been in a Spanish town, and which is a projection in the second story over the street, some five feet wide, with sash and glass front and ends, from which you can see all along the street), and then I saw about one thousand infantry forming in line and some cavalry at each flank. The number was soon increased to about two thousand, and presently I saw mules and donkeys hurrying up with ammunition, and I began to be interested. I soon learned that two battalions of infantry, who had refused to obey the orders of the minister of war and whose colonels the government had attempted to remove, had mutinied and declared for Piérola, and their quarters were in the palace of the inquisition, on the opposite side of the Plaza de Bolivar (or Plaza de la Inquisition), and adjoining buildings exactly the opposite side of the same block on which the legation is situated.

In a few minutes after I had noticed this position of forces, and learned the object of La Cotera, to reduce the mutineers, the battle opened, at first only with small-arms—a constant roar and sheets of flame. General La Cotera (at the southwest corner of the plaza), fully exposed to the fire, on horseback, giving his orders with as much coolness as upon a dress parade. Soon there arrived upon the ground two mountain howitzers (they had no heavy artillery) and a Gatling gun, which kept up a constant roar. The mutineers being on the housetops, all of which have flat roofs, and many of them a kind of parapet near the eaves, rising from 2 to 4 feet, were effectually protected from the shots of the assailants, while the government troops, in the open streets, were fully exposed to their shots. The mutineers were but about 600, who had declared for Piérola, but the advantage of their position made them more than equal to the (about) 2,000 government troops. The soldiers fought well on both sides, except that some of the government troops, in the midst of the action, went over to the mutineers (as I learned afterwards; but it was around the corner and out of my view), and some of them whose officers were Piérolists disbanded and dispersed. But I saw not the slightest evidence of cowardice. The private soldiers on both sides are substantially all Cholos Indians, and a few negroes and mixed bloods. These Indians are a mild, gentle, amiable, and very industrious people, who do about all the labor that is done in Peru except by Chinese and negroes; and, though kept in slavery for more than three hundred years (and many still living who have been slaves), they are as good material for the rank and file of an army as can, I think, be found anywhere. They are small, wiry men, capable of much greater endurance than any white race I have ever seen, and only need to be well commanded to make most formidable armies. There was no shrinking as they fought in the streets exposed to the terrible fire from their almost invisible foes. I saw many wounded and carried away; saw several fall and one man killed instantly about five rods from my balcony on the street of Abancay, along which the main force of the government troops were placed—the lower or north end of the Plaza de Bolivar, where the hottest of the fight was, being in full view and about twenty rods from my balcony.

But these details are of no interest to you. I will only further remark that the battle continued from about twenty minutes before five until dusk. The mutineers were not dislodged. Continual defections had been going on among the various other regiments of the government troops elsewhere in the city, one after another going over to Piérola, and by the time that La Cotera returned to the Grand Plaza (on the north side of which the government palace is situated) he found Piérola in full possession of two sides—the east and south. He ordered his cavalry to charge, which they did, but they melted away before the terrible Remingtons of Piérola's infantry. But the government troops kept the north side plaza and the palace. This was early in the evening. The government forces seemed everywhere to be rapidly going over to Piérola, and about this time he received information that the city of Callao had declared for him, as well as the officers of the principal forts and batteries; and though he might, in a very short time, have triumphed in Lima and taken the palace by continuing the fight, he wisely determined (and I hope and believe from motives of humanity) to march with his forces for Callao, which he did, where he was hailed as a deliverer, all the forces, forts, and batteries declaring for him. He took possession of both railroads to Lima. No trains were run during the day. He was simply waiting for the remaining government forces at Lima to disintegrate or to declare for him; and he judged rightly, knowing the powerful influences at work.

The Catholic bishops, with whom Piérola has always been a favorite, went yesterday afternoon to the acting president, La Puerta, and satisfied him that, as the great mass of the people as well as the army were in favor of Piérola, to continue the contest longer would be a wanton waste of life. But La Cotera was the last to yield, and he was only made to yield by the officers of the regiments in the palace itself going to him late yesterday afternoon and assuring him that they could no longer be accountable for the fidelity of their men, and had themselves determined to yield to Piérola; when, mounting his horse in the patio of the palace, with a few faithful friends as a guard, he rode out of the palace hissed and jeered by the rabble, but undismayed, and, with the rigid features of a bronze statue, scorning the servility of the crowd, rode off to his own house in Lima, preserving his honor and fidelity to the last, and commanding the respect of the thinking class, even of his enemies, who could not fail to see in him one of the last survivors of the proud and chivalric hidalgos of the Spanish race in its better, or, at least, its more heroic age. And yet, among the more intelligent men of all classes, the general verdict is that he was a man of more courage and chivalry than mental capacity.

But, however this may be, there is no avoiding the conviction that all hopes of constitutional government in Peru, for some time to come, went down with him.

Piérola, as is now supposed, will proclaim himself dictator. He is admitted on all hands to be a man of great mental capacity, of boldness, and decision, and it is generally believed that his inclinations are kind and humane. But he most thoroughly believes that in time of war, or any great national crisis, the law of self-preservation is superior to any written constitution. He is now to be tested, and so much is expected of him that it will be hard to meet all those expectations; and it is quite possible he may fail, and, in the course of a year, become as unpopular as Prado is to-day. In the mean time, however, since he has found that the whole responsibility rests upon him, he grows circumspect. He might have come in here last evening (Monday), and taken quiet possession of the palace and the government, and there was none to oppose him. But he waited, was expected to-day, and his friends telegraphed him to come, to which he replied, just before noon, in substance (I saw the dispatch in the telegraph office when it came): "Let all the military officers sign a document stating to whom they acknowledge obedience, so that I may know what orders to issue"; and up to this time, 6.30 p. m., he has not yet arrived in Lima. No one, however, seems to doubt that he will proclaim himself dictator.

I inclose you his letter of last evening, published in his paper this morning in Spanish, and if I can get the time before the mail will translate it.

DECEMBER 24—11 a. m.

Piérola at 7 p. m. came up with a large body of officers and took quiet possession of the palace and the government, and to-day for the first time in three days the doors of the various places of business and of the private dwellings are open, the police are again on duty at every street corner, and all seems quiet and peaceful.

The revolution in this part of Peru is an accomplished fact.

But, am I at once to recognize this revolutionary government or wait for instructions? I think the latter is my true course for the present, and I shall therefore refrain from presenting the commission of Mr. Griffith, as vice-consul at Callao (received by the last mail in your No. 48), for an exequatur.

You will see by my dispatch No. 88 that I had anticipated the present state of things, and asked instructions, which, for the present, I shall await.

I have expected to see before this hour some proclamation or pronunciamento issued by Piérola showing his general plan of government, but up to this hour, 12 m., none has appeared.

I am, &c.,

I. P. CHRISTIANCY.

[Inclosure 1 in No. 94.—From the South Pacific Times.]

Departure of President Prado.

His Excellency President Prado came from Lima, accompanied by several of his ministers, by the train which left Desamparados Station at 3.5 p. m. on Thursday last. Arriving at Callao, he at once proceeded on board the Pacific Steam Navigation Company's steamer Payta, which left that afternoon on her regular itinerary for Panama. The following morning two documents, of which the following are translations, were published:

Mariano Ignacio Prado, Constitutional President of the Republic.

Inasmuch as I am authorized to leave the country by a legislative resolution of May 2, 1879, and very urgent and important matters demanding my presence abroad, and it being my duty and desire to do all I can in favor of the country,

I decree:

Solely. That the first vice-president take charge of the presidency of the republic in conformity with articles 90 and 93 of the constitution.

* * * * * * *

Given in the government house in Lima on the 18th day of December, 1879.

MARIANO I. PRADO.

Manuel G. de La Cotera.
B. Elguera.
Adolfo Quiroga.
J. M. Quimper.

[Inclosure 2 in No. 94.]

PROCLAMATION OF PRESIDENT PRADO.

The Constitutional President of the Republic to the Nation and to the Army:

Fellow Citizens: The great interests of the country demand that I shall leave to-day for abroad, separating myself for a short time from you, at a time when considerations of a different order counsel my remaining among you. The motives which induce me to adopt this resolution are in reality very great and very powerful. Respect it, for a man who like myself serves his country with good will and complete self denial has a right to exact it.

Soldiers, if your arms suffered partial disaster in the first days of November, on the 27th of the same month they were crowned with glory in the province of Tarapaca. I am sure that under any circumstances you will imitate the example of your comrades in the south.

Peruvians, his excellency the senior vice-president of the republic remains intrusted with the executive power, in accordance with the law. I recommend him to you to aid him in his acts with your co-operation.

In taking leave of you, I give you the assurance that I shall in due time be with you again. Have faith in your fellow-citizen and friend,

MARIANO I. PRADO.

Lima, December 18, 1879.

[Inclosure 3 in No. 94.]

PROCLAMATION OF GENERAL PIÉROLA.

To the People and the Army:

Silent and sorrowful before the exigent demands of the people and the army, I resigned myself to circumstances during the days which followed the shameful flight of Prado and the advent of the superannuated General La Puerta, hoping that the army would decide at last to overcome the scruples of a misunderstood loyalty which stayed a part of it from acting according to its convictions, which are those of the nation, and desirous of avoiding any collision between brothers and the loss of a part of our forces.

The headlong and impatient ambition of General La Cotera, after brutally stifling the unanimous voice of the people of Lima and Callao, provoked a conflict yesterday, employing the forces under his command to disarm the patriots of the army whose only aim was the salvation of the country and the defeat of the foreign foe.

In Lima but a few moments sufficed to show how irresistible was the patriotic desire of the people and the army, and it would have sufficed for me to remain a few hours more in the capital to end all resistance.

Yielding, nevertheless, to the motives I have already expressed, I preferred to retire to this city, which has received me without any manner of resistance, to the end of making impossible all chance of strife between brethren and of favoring the tranquil adhesion of those remaining in Lima to the political régime proclaimed months ago by the whole nation.

Thus all conflict is made utterly inexcusable, and throws in its true light the responsibility for its evils upon its sole authors.

That portion of the army still under their orders in Lima, will not, I am confident, permit this responsibility to become a fact, to the immeasurable injury of all. The hour of national reparation has struck. In the series of disasters which have marked the history of our foreign war, Peru has no part. In shaking off, as she now does, the old rule, she raises the most eloquent protests against that deplorable history, and presents herself worthy of her name and her destinies before the other peoples of the earth.

For us there is, as there can only be, but one aspiration: a swift and full triumph over the foreign enemy. To achieve this work, we are now all brothers, without the memory even of our past divisions, and drawn one to another by the indissoluble tie of love for Peru.

Whatever may retard for an instant the complete national unity is an act of treason to our country. Unity is the one condition of the power and triumph of Peru. To that end has ever consecrated and now consecrates his most zealous efforts, your fellow citizen and comrade in arms,

N. DE PIÉROLA.

CALLAO, December 22, 1879.

No. 215.

Mr. Christiancy to Mr. Evarts.

No. 97.] LEGATION OF THE UNITED STATES,
Lima, Peru, December 24, 1879. (Received January 22, 1880.)

SIR: I have the honor to inclose you a copy of my letter of the 19th instant to our consul at Iquique, in reference to his mails and in reference to his consular duties while that place shall remain in full possession of the Chilian forces.

I have, &c.,

I. P. CHRISTIANCY.

[Inclosure in No. 97.]

Mr. Christiaucy to Mr. Merriman.

DEAR SIR: Your two letters of the 23d ultimo were received some days since, and your previous letter as to the mails being stopped at Arica. But I waited to answer until I could see some way of getting a letter to you. Admiral Rodgers informs me that the English admiral expects to send one of his vessels as far south as Iquique, on Saturday, the 20th, and that he has politely offered to take any mail for him or me.

As to the mail having been heretofore stopped at Arica, this seemed unavoidable, as this government, so far as it had the power, had closed the port of Iquique. The minister of foreign affairs informs me that their post-office department will see that all the mail for you from here shall, as far as in their power, be delivered to our consular agent, Mr. Nugent, at Arica, to be forwarded by him in any way he may find practicable.

I notice what you say of the proceedings on the surrender of Iquique to the Chilian forces, and the means taken to preserve order. I think your course and that of the consular corps was wise and prudent. The document signed by the consular corps, with its translation, was also received, which, I think, shows that you acted wisely and well.

As to your suggestion to have it published, I did not think it right to publish it without the consent of the government here, and called on the minister for foreign relations for the purpose of ascertaining his wishes in the matter, and left with him for examination the Spanish copy, to be returned after he should have examined it. Two or three days after, he returned it, but without saying whether he wished it published or not; and as so much time had passed I did not think it best to press the publication so long after the event. But the government have not indicated to me the slightest disapprobation of the course you pursued, nor of the action of the consular corps.

I suppose you have forwarded a copy to Washington, and given them full information, or I would have sent a copy of this document and of your letter.

The taking of Iquique by the Chilian forces very materially circumscribes the sphere of your official powers; for while that place, or any other over which your jurisdiction as consul previously extended, is clearly under the complete control of the Chilian power, you can exercise no strictly official power except by the courtesy and consent of the Chilian authorities. They have the right, while in complete possession and control, to establish their own regulations, and may, if they choose, give to the captain of the port, for instance, or any other official appointed by them, full authority to grant clearances to vessels, &c., during their occupation of the place. Doubtless, from comity or courtesy (as they seem lately to be very liberal neutrals), they might assent to your exercising your official functions. But as Peru has, so far as she has the power, declared the port of Iquique closed, and you exercise your functions only by virtue of an appointment to Peru and under an exequatur from that power, I should recommend that you abstain from granting clearances to any vessels which would ostensibly give the right to enter Peruvian ports, because this, I am quite sure, would not now be respected by the Peruvian authorities.

While the complete and efficient control of the Chilian authorities continues over any part of the territory within your former jurisdiction, I should not attempt to exercise official functions in such territory occupied by them, except with the express or tacit approval of the Chilian authorities. But from comity and courtesy those authorities will doubtless recognize you as the protector of American citizens and their interests. It is for the present but a mere suspension of your official functions; and if Iquique or any other place within your former jurisdiction, now in the control of Chili, should in the end revert to Peru, your official functions would also revert to you as before.

I am, &c.,

I. P. CHRISTIANCY.

No. 216.

Mr. Christiancy to Mr. Evarts.

No. 98.] LEGATION OF THE UNITED STATES,

Lima, Peru, December 31, 1879. (Received January 22, 1880.)

SIR: Referring to my dispatch No. 94, showing the events which led to the breaking up of the old (nominally) constitutional government and the accession of Don Nicolás de Piérola to the dictatorship, I have the honor to inclose you several decrees and addresses of the dictator, showing the nature of the government established by him and the nature of the means employed to carry his will into effect; all of which, as you will perceive, have the merit of clearness and brevity.

From these various papers you will be able to judge of the present status of the government here.

I enumerate these various papers in the statement of inclosures herein.

I have, &c.,

I. P. CHRISTIANCY.

[Inclosure 1 in No. 98.—Translation.]

NICOLÁS DE PIÉROLA, Supreme Head of the Republic:

Considering:

Firstly. That the inhabitants of Lima and Callao, by their respective acts, have spontaneously invested me with the supreme authority in the State, with full and complete powers;

Secondly. That the army and navy of the republic have adhered to this step, which has been long the general aspiration of the country, and that it is confirmed by the army in the south and by all the towns in telegraphic communication with the capital;

I decree:

SOLE ARTICLE. With the title of Supreme Head of the Republic I accept the position and powers with which I have been invested.

The chief clerk of the ministry of foreign affairs is intrusted with the publication and communication to the proper persons of this decree.

Given in the government house in Lima, this 23d day of the month of December, 1879.

NICOLÁS DE PIÉROLA.

By order of his excellency.
The chief clerk of foreign affairs,
E. LARRABURE Y UNÁNUE.

[Inclosure 2 in No. 98.—Translation.]

Letter to His Holiness, Leon XIII.

NICOLÁS DE PIÉROLA, Supreme Chief of the Republic of Peru.

MOST BLESSED FATHER: A spontaneous vote of Peru, given simultaneously and unanimously by the people and the military and naval forces, has just invested me with the supreme command of the republic, with omnipotent powers, which, in accordance with national inspirations, manifested perseveringly for some time back, and with the most ardent desires of my heart, will be employed for the regeneration of the political institutions, which urgently demand it, striving before all else to prepare the triumph of our arms in the war in which we are engaged with Chili.

In communicating to your holiness my investiture with the supreme authority of this republic, so dear to the paternal heart of your holiness, I feel the most intimate complacency in solemnly ratifying the sentiments of unyielding faith and filial love with which I kiss the august hands of your holiness, asking from you your apostolic benediction.

Given in the palace of Lima on the 23d day of the month of December, in the year of Grace 1879.

[L. S.] NICOLÁS DE PIÉROLA.

The secretary of State for the department of foreign affairs and worship:
P. JOSÉ CALDERON.

[Inclosure 3 in No. 98.—Translation.]

The supreme chief has addressed the following letter to the chiefs of friendly States:

NICOLÁS DE PIÉROLA, Supreme Chief of the Republic of Peru.

GREAT AND GOOD FRIEND: The unanimous acclaim of the people, the army, and the navy of the country has just invested me with the supreme magistracy of Peru, with omnipotent authority, which I shall exercise, keeping in view the regeneration which our institutions demand, but above all and before all the triumph of the arms of the republic in the war in which it is engaged with Chili.

In announcing to ——— ——— my investiture with the supreme power, I have the very especial satisfaction of expressing the sentiments of loyal friendship in which I abound towards the and the person of , for whose prosperity and glory I offer the most sincere and fervent prayers.

Given in the palace of Lima on the twenty-third day of the month of December, in the year of our Lord 1879.

[L. S.] NICOLÁS DE PIÉROLA.

The secretary of state for the department of foreign affairs and worship:
PEDRO JOSÉ CALDERON.

[Inclosure 4 in No. 98.—Translation.]

NICOLÁS DE PIÉROLA, Supreme Head of the Republic.

Considering the inconvenience of the decree of interdiction of the 8th of November last, it is hereby annulled.

The secretary of finance is intrusted with the fulfillment, publication, and circulation of this decree.

Given in the government house in Lima this 25th day of December, 1879.

N. DE PIÉROLA.

MANUEL A. BARINAGA.

[Inclosure 5 in No. 89.—Translation.]

Provisional statute.

NICOLÁS DE PIÉROLA, Supreme Head of the State.

Inasmuch as it is my intention to conciliate the respect due to natural justice and the traditional policy of the republic, with the ample and speedy action which the regeneration of our institutions and the definite and glorious triumph of the national arms require—

I do hereby sanction the following provisional statute:

ARTICLE 1. The sovereignty and independence of Peru are the bases of its political and social existence.

ART. 2. The unity of the Peruvian family and the integrity of the territory, historically and juridically belonging to it, cannot be interrupted nor lessened without committing an act of treason against the country.

ART. 3. Article 4 of the old constitution relating to the religion of the State will remain unaltered.

ART. 4. The government guarantees primary instruction to all citizens, and encourages superior and scientific instruction.

ART. 5. The independence of the judicial power is sanctioned; but the government reserves to itself the right of watching effectively over the prompt and correct administration of justice.

ART. 6. The civil and penal codes remain in full vigor and force, whilst the necessary reforms are being initiated with regard to them.

ART. 7. Personal security, liberty, and property are guaranteed by the government.

The right to honor; equality in the eyes of the law; the liberty of the press, anonymous writings being prohibited; any such will be punished as pasquinades. Offenses committed through the medium of the press will not change their nature thereby, and will therefore be judg-d by the respective courts.

The liberty of industry, provided that same be no way harmful.

The liberty of association.

The right of petitioning for justice or pardon, individually or collectively, but in due form and manner.

ART. 8. Treason against the country, military cowardice and insubordination, desertion in the field, peculation, breach of public trust, bribery, embezzlement of public property, premeditated and treacherous homicide, robbing in gangs, whatever be the condition of the guilty party or the character with which he be invested, will be judged according to military law during the present war, and capital punishment inflicted. The property of anonymous societies, industrial, mercantile, or banking establishments, will be considered as public property for the application of the sentence.

ART. 9. Civic virtues and brave and heroic deeds will be rewarded by the munificence of the nation through the medium of its head.

ART. 10. A council of state is hereby created, composed as follows:

Of the archbishop of Lima.

The president of the congress of jurists.

The president of the supreme court of justice.

The president of the comptroller's office.

The prior of the consulate court (of commerce).

The rector of the University of Lima, and six councillors more, who will be appointed by the Supreme Head of the Republic, and one of whom must be a general of the army.

ART. 11. The government will consult the council of state with regard to such matters as, in its opinion, may require it. It will also act as a court of appeal and final decision in all litigious questions connected with the administration.

ART. 12. This statute will remain in force until the republic be endowed with definite institutions.

Given in the government house in Lima this twenty-seventh day of the month of December, 1879.

NICOLÁS DE PIÉROLA.

The secretary of state for foreign affairs and worship, and temporarily for government and police:

PEDRO JOSÉ CALDERON.

The secretary of state for justice and instruction:

FEDERICO PÁNIZO.

The secretary of state for public works, commerce, &c.:

MARIANO ECHEGARAY.

The secretary of state for war:

MIGUEL IGLESIAS.

The secretary of state for maritime affairs:

MANUEL VILLAR.

The secretary of state for financial matters:

MANUEL A. BARINAGA.

[Inclosure 6 in No. 98.]

Military organization of the Republic.

NICOLÁS DE PIÉROLA, Supreme Head of the Republic.

Considering:

That it is absolutely necessary to furnish the country with a proper military organization in order to insure the defense of its sovereignty and integrity of its territory,

I decree:

ARTICLE 1. The military forces of the nation will be formed of four armies in active service, as follows: Two armies of the south, styled first and second, respectively; one army of the center; one army of the north.

ART. 2. The reserve forces of these armies will be divided into movable and stationary reserves.

ART. 3. The following rule will be observed in raising the contingents for the formation of the different armies: Every Peruvian from 18 to 30 years of age must enter the army on active service, and those from 31 to 50 years old the reserve.

ART. 4. The respective contingents will be formed by the sub-prefects of the provinces, and placed at the orders of the departmental authorities.

ART. 5. The following are exempted from obligation of belonging to the army on active service and the movable reserves:

1st. All public employés in general.

2d. Professors of instruction exercising their profession.

3d. Members of colleges and universities.

4th. Those citizens who contribute 50 soles or more monthly for the war.

5th. Proprietors and employés of printing offices and printers.

6th. Lawyers and medical men exercising their professions, as proved by the respective license.

7th. Hospital and ambulance employés.

8th. The only sons of widowed mothers.

9th. The only brother of any citizen killed in the battles of the present war.

10th. All citizens physically disqualified for the profession of arms.

ART. 6. The stationary reserve will be formed of the citizens exempted by the foregoing article, and the superfluous forces of the movable reserve.

ART. 7. The contingents of the army on active service which result to be superfluous will join the reserves.

ART. 8. The organization of the armies will be decreed separately.

ART. 9. The secretary of state for war is intrusted with the fulfillment of this decree.

Given in the government house in Lima this 26th day of December, 1879.

N. DE PIÉROLA.

MIGUEL IGLESIAS.

No. 217.

Mr. Christiancy to Mr. Evarts.

No. 99.] LEGATION OF THE UNITED STATES,
Lima, Peru, December 31, 1879. (Received January 22, 1880.)

SIR: I have the honor to inform you that on the 26th instant I received a notice from the dean of the diplomatic corps, the legate of the Pope, that a meeting of the diplomatic corps in Lima would be held at his legation on the 28th at 3 p. m., and inviting me to attend, which I did.

I found, on meeting with the corps, as I expected, that it had reference to a recognition of the newly-installed government of Piérola, who had, through the dean, invited all the corps to call upon him at the palace on the 1st proximo, as had been customary here.

I listened for some time to what they had to say, and found that, so far as any expression was given, it was in favor of accepting the invitation. I then inquired if it was to be understood that the acceptance of the invitation would be considered as equivalent to a full recognition by our respective governments of the newly-established government, to which most, if not all of them, replied in the affirmative. I then explained fully to the corps the principles upon which I understood our government to act substantially as you will find stated in the inclosed letter to Mr. Calderon, the secretary of foreign relations, and said to the corps that I could not accept the invitation and make the call, except subject to that explanation, and reserving to my government the right to decide that question for itself; and that if I did attend it would be under an express explanation to this effect, but I also informed them that about the beginning of the month, anticipating the contingency which has happened, I had written for instructions, &c.

At the conclusion of the meeting I had in fact come to the conclusion that I would not join the corps in making the call, but subsequent reflection satisfied me that an unconditional refusal on my part (when all the other representatives of foreign powers had resolved to accept) might be interpreted as unfriendly to the government, which is, after all, the only government here, and so far as we have yet been able to hear from the people of Peru, much more acceptable to, and popular with, the people than the government it has displaced. I therefore concluded, in order to avoid misconstruction, to take the middle course indicated by the letter, a copy of which I inclose.

Hoping before this reaches you to have instructions which will authorize me to act,

I remain, &c.,

I. P. CHRISTIANCY.

[Inclosure in No. 99.]

Mr. Christiancy to Señor Calderon.

LEGATION OF THE UNITED STATES,
Lima, Peru, December 30, 1879.

MONSIEUR LE SECRÉTAIRE: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 26th instant (No. 30), informing me of the change in the Government of Peru, which has resulted in constituting His Excellency Don Nicolás de Piérola supreme head or governor of Peru, with full powers, &c, and that your excellency has been appointed secretary of foreign relations and worship. I cordially reciprocate the wish expressed by your excellency that the ties of friendship now so happily existing between the Republics of Peru and the United States of America may become every day more intimate under whatever form of government the people of Peru may choose to adopt.

But your excellency will appreciate the frankness and candor which compel me, as the representative of the United States of America, to explain the principles upon which, according to my understanding, my government acts upon the question of recognizing governments originating in revolution, and not according to the constitution or accustomed forms of law.

The Government of the United States recognize the people in all governments as the only legitimate source of political or governmental power, and though itself a constituent government it recognizes equally the legitimacy of any form of government the people of any nation may choose to adopt, either by formal vote or by tacit consent evinced by general acquiescence.

But being itself, and for itself, thoroughly devoted to constitutional government, it has not, as I understand its policy, committed to its ministers abroad, without instructions, the discretion and the right to bind it unconditionally upon the question of recognizing a new form of government, as in the present case, or. in other words, of finally deciding upon the nature and amount of the evidence showing the approval or acquiescence of the people in the change. And the case must be a very clear one indeed which would authorize its minister to take definitive action without instructions. In this view, and anticipating the change which has taken place here about the 1st of the present month, I asked instructions from my government with reference to the contingency which has occurred, and shall expect to receive them in the course of two or at most three weeks from this date.

In the mean time, while, from personal respect for the chief of the State and for yourself personally, as well as from a desire to throw no obstacle in the way of the successful action of the government, I may take part in acts from which recognition by my government might otherwise be implied. I, therefore, ask to reserve to my government the right of final decision of the question of recognition.

I avail myself, &c.,

I. P. CHRISTIANCY.

No. 218.

Mr. Christiancy to Mr. Evarts.

No. 102.] LEGATION OF THE UNITED STATES,
Lima, Peru, January 6, 1880. (Received February 3.)

SIR: Referring to my dispatches Nos. 90 and 91, I will say that there is little news of any importance of the operations of the armies on land; though the Chilians having now full possession of Tarapaca (and apparently will soon have of Tacna and all that vicinity) if not by this time of Moquequa (or Moquehua) have, as we learn to-day, landed a small force at Ylo and blockaded Mollendo, and it seems probable they intend to take those places, and with the force they now have and reinforcements about to be sent, to effectually cut off the communication of the allies at Arica with the interior by land, as they have already cut them off by sea, and thus, in time, to compel their surrender.

Peru has literally now no fleet afloat, except what is in the harbor of Callao, and one monitor at Arica. Chili has not yet attempted to blockade Callao, but is carrying on a desultory warfare upon Peruvian launches along the coast, and has destroyed all the guano works and launches at Lobos de Afuera, putting a full stop to all the guano trade of Peru for the present.

General (or President) Daza was deposed from the command of the Bolivian army on the 27th ultimo, but whether by the Bolivian Government or by the army officers, or both, I cannot yet ascertain, nor whether it is intended to deprive him of his position as President. But

Col. D. E. Camacho commands the Bolivian army; and the movement which brought about this change seems to have been one strongly in favor of the Peruvian alliance.

The government here is rapidly raising troops in the interior and bringing them to Lima and Callao; but they are of little use here, unless the Chilians should make a land attack here, which they will not do while the allies have their present strong force in the south, and the troops here cannot be sent to the aid of the army in the south by water, even as far as Mollendo, without an even chance of being captured; and to send them by land with the necessary munitions and supplies would require several months.

The present government keeps its own council better than the old, and we therefore can form no definite opinion as to the uses intended to be made of the large and constantly-increasing force here, whether it be intended for the southern army or only to meet an attack here should the southern army be defeated or compelled to capitulate. In the mean time the finances are not improving. Paper soles have stood now for about a week at 85 for an American double eagle, or say 83 for a draft on New York, and the sol is worth in exchange on London a fraction over 11 pence. What is to improve its value I do not see, though I see many causes which may reduce it still more.

I have, &c.,

I. P. CHRISTIANCY.

P. S.—January 7.—It now appears from news just received that Daza was deposed by the unanimous voice of the officers of the Bolivian army. We have also a rumor of a revolution in Bolivia, putting Dr. Oblitas in power, but nothing definite.

No. 219.

Mr. Christiancy to Mr. Evarts.

No. 103.] LEGATION OF THE UNITED STATES,
Lima, Peru, January 7, 1880. (Received February 3.)

SIR: Referring to my dispatch No. 98, I have the honor to say that I intended to have inclosed you in that dispatch the letter of General de la Cotera of the 27th ultimo, justifying his action in the late (nominally) constitutional government, which had not been translated by the press into English at the date of my dispatch, and which I had no time to translate. I inclose you now a translation taken from the South Pacific Times of the 1st instant. This explanation or appeal to the public would have had much more moral effect here if the author himself had not been known as a chronic revolutionist in the past, and if it were not quite generally believed here, as intimated in my dispatch No. 88, that he was the secret instigator of the abortive uprising of the 22d November to make him, instead of Piérola, dictator. But whatever may be the final verdict of history, the verdict of Peru, if taken to-day, would be that circumstances alone, and not principle, had made him; for the moment, the representative of constitutional government, that his sentiments of chivalry and personal honor were too strong to permit him to abandon the position in which he had been placed, unless by such abandonment he could himself be made dictator; that he has always appeared to better advantage in defeat than in victory, and that he never exhibited so much elevation of character as in his final, crushing defeat and deposition from power—if it should prove to be final. As to the government of the dictatorship, it must be acknowledged that it has shown much more activity, vigor, and consistency of purpose than the old.

It has been very prolific in decrees, which are too numerous for me to undertake to translate. They will soon constitute a code of themselves. At present they mostly relate to perfecting the organization of the government, and are generally well calculated to effect their object. In style they are admirable for their brevity—a brevity, however, which when the decree relates to individual rights (like most other dictatorial decrees) is ominous of liberty; and which assumes that all human affairs can be regulated upon a few straight lines or mathematical curves, and wholly ignores the infinite variety of forms which they assume, and subjects all those rights to what one man may determine that the public exigencies require.

I call your attention here to that portion of the decree in the nature of a provisional statute (sent you in my dispatch No. 98), which relates to the press, and the official construction which has been given it. Though by its terms only intended to take effect in thirty days, it has been officially construed to take effect at once in Lima and Callao. It has also been construed and enforced, as prohibiting a mere compilation of news from other papers, without the signature of the compiler; from which it will be seen that the same arbitrary discretion has been assumed in the construction as in the enactment of the decree.

But a decree suppressing the liberty of the press seems everywhere to be and to have been the logical and necessary consequence of a dictatorship.

I call attention, also, to that provision of the provisional statute in reference to religion, which, though in exact accord with the constitution, indicates by the promptness with which it was announced by decree, the influences which brought about the dictatorship and which are to be at once conciliated. The provision of the constitution referred to (Article 4) is in these words: "La nacion profesa la religion Catolica, Apostolica Romana, el estado la proteje, y no permite el ejercicio de otra alguna." Anglice: The nation professes the Catholic Apostolic Roman religion; the State protects it and does not permit the public exercise of any other.

But whatever may be the merits or demerits of the present dictatorial government, one thing is thus far clear, so far as yet heard from all parts of Peru, it seems not only to be acquiesced in, but to have met the approval of the people, the army and the navy, and, therefore, as I understand the principles adopted by our government, must be recognized as the choice of the people of Peru, and, therefore, in the international sense legitimate. There is no pretense of any other government.

I have, &c.,

I. P. CHRISTIANCY.

[Inclosure in No. 103.—Translation.]

Manifest of General la Cotera to the nation.

Although I calmly await the verdict of history with the clear conscience and proper pride which the fulfilment of duty inspires, I consider it right to protest before the country against the unfounded and rash accusation which the leader who has victoriously raised himself to power upon the ruins of the constitution, has launched at me.

Don Nicolas de Piérola looking about him for a victim, has chosen the writer as the object upon whose reputation as a soldier of the law, to cast the dark shadow of blame, a shadow which the conduct of the army itself has tended to dissipate, which in the moment of trial, seconding the example of its principal commanders, made the road easy for him to raise himself to power.

My stupid and impatient ambition is, in the opinion of the supreme head, the sole cause of the disgraceful and lamentable events of Sunday last; an ambition that was endeavoring to realize by various means, the political regeneration which the outlaw of yesterday and the patriot always has undertaken in face of the foreign invader, tearing into pieces the banner of the law.

Therefore it is easily to be understood that supposing me to have entertained those freedom-stifling intentions, it has not been that ambition which we both possessed in Señor Piérola's opinion that induced him to upset legality, but the fear lest it should not be he but myself, who should put, it into practice.

The country can consequently judge which of the two has been most animated with a stupid and impatient ambition. With regard to myself, there has only been the groundless suspicion of such a thing, whereas in the case of Señor Piérola that ambition has been practically evidenced, the writer's only crime in the eyes of his party, consisting in having endeavored, as a minister of the law, to defend constitutional order. If this is a crime, I am proud of being guilty of it.

To a calm and dispassionate observer of the late events, it is an undeniable truth that the triumph of Señor Pierola is due to the attitude assumed by the army, an army formed principally by myself, with all the abnegation and impartiality which the country's defense demanded of me. In forming it I had solely in view the luster of the noble profession which I have from an early age and the triumph of our arms over the treacherous enemy that has invaded our soil.

I never stopped to consider the political bearing of the officers to whose care I entrusted the brave bodies of men that swarmed in from the departments at the sacred call of an endangered country, and although I was aware that many of the generals and colonels I gave commands to, were addicted to Señor Piérola's cause, I never once harbored the slightest suspicion that in the critical moments we are passing through they would disregard the mandates of the law.

Colonel Arguedas is an example of the truth of my assertion. His sympathies for the political cause which has now triumphed were well known to me; notwithstanding I willingly gave him of the "Yca" battalion, in the belief that when the moment arrived for him to do battle with the foreign foe, he would fully sustain the reputation of our army.

Where, then, is that stupid ambition?

As minister and as an old soldier, I should have sought the aid of my companions in arms for the attainment of my revolutionary plans, and notwithstanding events have proved the falsity of the imputation with which they have endeavored to tarnish my honor, and shown that that army, my own creation, was a powerful auxiliary of a strange and impatient ambition.

History will judge the high representatives of that army, who, disobeying the legal government in the hour of danger, urged their subordinates to revolt and desertion; a fatal precedent which will prove a source of bitter and tremendous woe to the country.

The result of the late events, however, is perfectly logical. A target for the vengeful arrows of two parties, which for a long time have been striving for power, and one of them counting with the sympathies of the men who were called upon to defend the constitution, it was natural that I should succumb, alone and abandoned.

To the "Civil" party, to whose cause I have never lent my humble aid, I have been a living threat; to the Piérolists an obstacle.

Previous to last Sunday Civilists and Piérolists together respected the authority of the government of which I formed a part; but on that day of the final result the joy of the latter has been as the sadness of the former. A providential punishment! the voluntary suicide of a party devoured in the last days of its existence by rage and hatred.

There, therefore, remains to me the satisfaction of returning to private life without anything to stain my reputation as an old soldier, having fulfilled my sacred duty in the high position of president of the council of ministers and minister of war, conquered, it is true, but not in fair fight, as I have been accustomed to conquer and be conquered during my long public career.

With regard to my proceedings as a minister, I appeal to the impartial testimony of those of my fellow-citizens who are not blinded by political passions.

As long as I was a minister, my sole efforts were for the defense of the country; and in the firm persuasion that any revolution under present circumstances was a crime, I have fallen in defense of legality.

I trust, also, to the gentlemanly feelings of my successor that he will find valuable elements ready to hand, due to my persevering activity, and about which I do not consider it necessary to enter into particulars.

In a calm and resigned state of mind, therefore, I have no fear of the wrath of the powerful, and in the privacy of my home, far from the fierce arena of politics, I shall only gird on my sword again to fight the common foe.

MANUEL GONZALEZ DE LA COTERA.

LIMA, December 27, 1879.

No. 220.

Mr Christiancy to Mr. Evarts.

No. 104.] LEGATION OF THE UNITED STATES,
Lima, Peru, January 14, 1880. (Received February 7.)

SIR: I have the honor to inclose to you translations (taken from the South Pacific Times of yesterday) of several decrees of the Supreme Head of the Republic, and of other papers, showing the action of the government, as enumerated in the list of enclosures hereto appended.

These various decrees explain themselves about as well as I can explain them in a single dispatch, except that releasing the German steamer Luxor. That steamer was seized at Callao in May or early in June last for having brought contraband of war (guns and ammunition) from Montevideo to Valparaiso, for the Chilian Government. She was condemned by the prize court of Peru, and that decision affirmed by the supreme court of Peru. Still as she was not seized flagrante delicto, nor until her outward voyage had been completed and she had discharged her cargo at Callao, and was taking on return cargo, many doubts were expressed on the legality of the sentence. Some of the foreign ministers here had emphatically denied its legality. I was asked to give my opinion, but declined, as I could see no reason to justify me in meddling with it.

There was one thing, however, which weakened the force of the judgment materially. The court had based their judgment mainly on the ground of Peruvian statute law; and Peru alone could not create international law.

I have, &c.

I. P. CHRISTIANCY.

[Inclosure 1 in No. 104.]

THE FOREIGN DEBT.

NICOLAS DE PIÉROLA, Supreme Head of the Republic.

Considering—

First. That it is absolutely necessary to provide for the payment of the foreign debt of Peru, and to better the unfavorable conditions in which our creditors are placed, to their own prejudice and that of the credit of the nation.

Second. That the fiscal state to which the country is reduced, renders it impossible for it to fulfill to the letter the obligations it has contracted with respect to the holders of bonds of the foreign debt, and it is therefore compelled to discharge said obligations as far as its present resources will allow.

Third. That the greater portion of that debt originated in the construction of the national railways, to which purpose the loan was applied, and that, not only are the said railways specially mortgaged for the payment of the debt in question, but, the latter not being able to be duly attended to, they belong by right to our creditors.

Fourth. That the portion of the national territory where the guano deposits lie, also reserved for the payment of our foreign debt, having been occupied by the enemy, until said territory be recovered it is impossible to attend with the product of those resources to the payment of the debt, and it is indispensable, for the sake of our creditors themselves, to look with preference to the guano stocks in Europe for the necessary funds wherewith to attend to the prompt recovery of said territory.

Fifth. That as a modification of the conditions of payment of our debt is inevitable, the changing of the scrip likewise becomes inevitable.

I decree:

First. That the debts contracted in Europe in 1870, that which bears the name of the 1872 loan, and the bonds issued for the Pisco and Ica railroad, be consolidated into one single debt.

Second. That the following national railways, as they now stand, be made over to the holders of the bonds of the foreign debt of Peru, viz: the Mollendo and Cuzco, Ilo and Moquegua, Pisco, Ica, Lima, Chancay and Huacho, Callao and Oroya, Salaverry and Trujillo, Chimbote and Huaraz, Pascamayo and Cajamarca, and Payta, and Piura, for the amount of their cost in coin, the shares being exchanged for the bonds at par.

Third. Every bondholder will receive in railway shares and in new scrip, the total value of his present bonds, in the proportion of the amount for which the railways are handed over to the remnant of bonds to be exchanged.

Fourth. The transfer to be unconditional and effectual; so that the state will not exercise other rights over the said railways than those which it possesses over railways constructed and worked by private industry.

Fifth. The companies which may be constituted proprietors of these lines are authorized to extend them to their termination, and work them, enjoying an exclusive privilege during twenty-five years, to be counted from the date of transfer, and with the liberty of importing free of duty the materials required for the termination of such lines as are not entirely finished.

Sixth. In order to effect the operations to which the present decrees refer, let a committee be appointed in London, to be presided over by the minister plenipotentiary of Peru in Great Britain, and to be composed of himself, of the representative of the firm which last served as financial agent for Peru in Europe, and a citizen to be appointed by government. The bondholders, should they think fit, can depute two representatives of their own to take part in the labors of said committee.

Seventh. The transfer of property referred to the preceding articles having been effected, the remaining bonds of the foreign debt will be converted into new scrip at par, bearing the same name as that exchanged, which scrip will be served with an accumulative four per cent. per annum, applicable to the interest of two and a half per cent. each year, payable half yearly, and one and a half per cent. sinking-fund.

Eighth. The amortization will take place every six months, by means of sealed tenders under par, presented to the financial agency, and by lot, at par, for such portion as said sinking-fund fails to cover.

Ninth. Peru devotes to this service, as soon as the exportation of guano is resumed, the sum of two pounds on every ton which it sells in the markets of Europe and colonies (excepting the markets of France and Belgium), said two pounds to be deposited in the Bank of England by the seller of the Peruvian guano in the aforesaid markets, the half yearly service of the bonds being attended to with these funds, and whatever is over to be reserved for the next half year for the same purpose.

Tenth. In order fully to guarantee said service, the obligation of the contractor with Peru to make the deposit in question will be inserted in the guano-sale contracts which Peru may make; the holders of Peruvian bonds being henceforth and for the future authorized to embargo the guano exported, should said deposit not be made.

Eleventh. The stock of guano at present existing in Europe and its colonies, after the obligation it is pledged to, and the sum which Peru takes for the releasing of the guano deposits now occupied by the enemy, are discharged, will be applied to the extraordinary amortization of the Peruvian bonds, the service of interests and ordinary amortization to commence from the date of resumption of exportation of the article.

Twelfth. The representative of Peru in Europe will inform the holders of Peruvian bonds of the present decree.

The secretary of state of finance is intrusted with the fulfillment of this decree.

Given in the government house in Lima, this 7th day of the month of January, 1880.

NICOLAS DE PIÉROLA.

MANUEL A. BARINAGA.

[Inclosure 2 in No. 104.]

THE GUANO LOAN.

Inasmuch as the questions pending between the Supreme Government of Peru and the firm of Dreyfus Bros. & Co., of Paris, have this day been arranged, as shown in the respective contract; and as it has become absolutely necessary to put an immediate stop to the depreciation of guano in Europe, and the ruinous competition for Peru between the sellers of the article, no less than to provide the treasury with funds wherewith to attend to the expenses of the present war, and the Peruvian Guano Company having hitherto opposed difficulties in the way of selling the guano at the price which the treasury can obtain for it:

His honor, the secretary of finance, representing the Supreme Government of Peru, and Mr. Frederick Ford, representing the firm of Dreyfus Bros. & Co., of Paris, have agreed to the following:

1. Dreyfus Bros. & Co. bind themselves to purchase all the guano not sold to the public by the Peruvian Guano Company, Limited, and which the latter company possesses in stock or may add to their stock by exportation.

2. This guano will be paid for by the purchasers without an analysis being made of same previously, and according as they go on receiving it, at a uniform price of eleven pounds fifteen shillings per ton.

3. The Peruvian Guano Company will keep possession of the guano as a guarantee for its value, and will hand it over to Dreyfus Bros. & Co., according as the latter pay for it; the quantity delivered must not be less than one hundred thousand tons per half year. For this quantity they will pay the Peruvian Guano Company the proportion which corresponds to them by virtue of the following article, and the difference between that portion and the price fixed per ton they will carry in account with the Peruvian Government.

4. In order to fix the amount due to the Peruvian Guano Company on every ton of guano, the government accepts provisionally the debt balance against Peru, shown by their accounts presented up to the date of the coming into force of the present contract, and the amount of same, divided by the total number of tons in stock and afloat, will be the proportion corresponding to the company for every ton of guano delivered by it, Peru reserving to herself the right to question, when necessary, the correctness of the accounts of the company, any errors in which will be deducted from the last tons of guano to be delivered.

5. The actual stock of guano in Europe, and that afloat, being composed of guano of different qualities, and it being, therefore, necessary that the purchasers should first proceed to mix same, in order to obtain a uniform quality, Dreyfus Bros. & Co. will choose the one hundred thousand tons, the minimum half-yearly quantity, from the guano of different qualities in stock and afloat.

6. The Peruvian Guano Company will deliver the guano, free of all expenses, as they at present do with their customers, to Dreyfus Bros. & Co. or to their order.

7. Dreyfus Bros. & Co. will advance the treasury the sum of ——— (1) on account of the proportional amount corresponding to the Supreme Government of Peru on every ton of guano, after the proportion due the Peruvian Guano Company be deducted.

8. The government will draw bills at ninety days sight for this amount. This advance will gain a half-yearly interest of two and a half per cent., calculated on the balance remaining at the end of every six months, and it will be paid off with the proportion corresponding to the Peruvian Government on every ton of guano sold.

9. The Supreme Government of Peru binds itself not to export nor permit that others export any guano whatsoever to Europe and its colonies until the present stock be exhausted, with the exception of a reserve stock sufficient for six months' sale. The purchasers will take upon themselves the responsibility of advising when any market finds itself in such a condition. The government pledges the word of the nation not to export, nor to permit others to export any guano whatsoever to the before-mentioned markets, so long as the contract remains in force. Any cargo of guano introduced into them in spite of this stipulation will be forfeited, the introducers likewise suffering the penalties established by the penal laws of the respective countries. For this purpose the government invests the purchaser with the requisite powers in order that they may institute the necessary proceedings before the respective courts. The guano forfeited will be sold by the purchasing firm, and a commission of fifteen per cent. upon the net product of same paid into the Peruvian treasury.

10. The Supreme Government of Peru pledges itself not to receive from the Peruvian Guano Company, or from any other party, any sum whatsoever upon the guano to which this contract refers, for which purpose it will inform the Peruvian Guano Company and its agents of same having been made, Dreyfus Bros. & Co. being authorized to notify them also for their own part.

11. The Supreme Government of Peru binds itself to guarantee the interests of the holders of bonds of the external debt, so that the advance stipulated in the present contract may not signify any responsibility whatsoever for the purchasers, Dreyfus Bros. & Co.

12. The alienation and transfer of the guano, purchased and paid for by the latter, is unconditional and absolute, and they can in consequence dispose of same as they think best.

13. The purchase and advance accounts presented by Dreyfus Bros. & Co. will be examined and decided upon within the half year succeeding their presentation, at the expiration of which they will be considered as approved.

14. The profits which Dreyfus Bros. & Co. may derive from this contract are not liable to taxation in Peru.

15. This contract will only come into force should the Peruvian Guano Company not wish to enter into it for its own account. The Supreme Government of Peru, in event of said company not desiring to take it itself, pledging itself to remove all opposition which the said company might offer and bring the contract into force.

16. * * * * * *

Signed in duplicate in Lima this seventh day of the month of January, eighteen hundred and eighty.

MANUEL A. BARINAGA.
FRED. FORD,
Representing Dreyfus Bros. & Co.

LIMA, January 7, 1880.

The present proposed contract having been examined and found suitable to the fiscal interests, it is hereby approved in all its parts, and, consequently, let it be transcribed to the financial agent of Peru in Europe.

Register in the book of private documents in the council of secretaries, &c.

Rubric of H. E.

BARINAGA.

[Inclosure 3 in No. 104.]

ARRANGEMENT OF THE QUESTIONS PENDING BETWEEN THE GOVERNMENT AND THE FIRM OF DREYFUS BROS. & CO.

Inasmuch as it is indispensable that the questions which have arisen between the Supreme Government of Peru and the firm of Dreyfus Brothers & Co., of Paris, be at once settled, and that the guano market in Europe and the colonies be unburdened, so that Peru may be able to effect the sale of that article, without the injurious competition which would exist if Dreyfus Bros. & Co. were to continue likewise, and at the same time disposing of the guano they hold in stock and that which they export, his honor the secretary of finance, as representing the Supreme Government of Peru and Mr. Frederick Ford, representing the firm of Dreyfus Brothers & Co., of Paris, have agreed to the following:

1. The contract of the 14th of April, 1874, is to be declared canceled, and null and void of all effect in the future. Its value in the past is proved by deeds, which will be duly appreciated by the stipulations it contains.

2. Without prejudice to what is stipulated in clause 10, the government takes as basis for this arrangement the balance shown by the accounts presented by Dreyfus Brothers & Co., on the 30th of June, 1879, amounting to 21,083,095 soles, 85 cents, or say, £4,008,000 7*s.* 7*d.* at the exchange of 45*d.* and five-eighths of a penny per sol, agreed upon in the contract of August, 1869; and since it is impossible to pay same at the present moment, according to the tenor of article 26 of the same contract, Dreyfus Brothers & Co. will export the sufficient number of tons of guano of 1,000 kilograms each, to cover said balance, and they will credit same in account at the price paid by the new guano contractor, and in the absence of a contract, at the rate of five pounds sterling per ton. This guano will, from that moment pass to be for account, cost, and risk of Dreyfus Bros. & Co., together with all the rights annexed to its unconditional and effectual alienation, and without other restrictions than that stipulated in clause 9 of this contract.

3. The guano will be delivered in bulk in the ships' launches, by cargoes, with forty per cent. increase on the registered tonnage; but if the Supreme Government should succeed in stipulating with the new contractor for the article to be exported in sacks and weighed, its exportation by Dreyfus Bros. & Co. will be effected in a like manner.

4. Dreyfus Bros. & Co. will select in the guano deposits the guano which it may suit them to export.

5. Vessels will take out their loading-licenses in the deposits themselves, and from there they will be dispatched direct to their port of destination.

6. Dreyfus Bros. & Co. will pay for account of the Supreme Government the expenses of loading the guano they export, deducting same from the amount to be placed to the credit of the government for each cargo.

7. The Supreme Government will be directly responsible to the captains of vessels for the non-shipment of the cargo, and the delays occasioned by the authorities or the agents of the government in the deposits themselves or in any other part. Dreyfus Bros. & Co. are authorized to insert this clause in the charter parties.

8. Clauses 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, and 7 of this contract, will remain canceled, should the Supreme Government pay Dreyfus Brothers & Co. in cash; but in such an event the charters given by them will be respected by the government.

9. In order to destroy all competition in the guano markets, the guano that Dreyfus Bros. & Co. hold in stock, and that which they export in payment of the sum of money owing them by the Government of Peru, will be sold by them only in the markets of France (excluding its colonies) and Belgium, from the date upon which the new guano contract which the Supreme Government proposes to make, or that which it may celebrate on the basis of the actual stock in the hands of the Peruvian Guano Company, comes into force. In order to bring this stipulation into effect, the necessary exchange of guano will be made, when required, between Dreyfus Bros. & Co., and the new contractor.

10. As the settlement of Dreyfus Bros. & Co.'s accounts, and the decision of the questions arisen between them and former administrations in Peru, corresponds to the tribunals of the republic in virtue of the nature of those institutions and the special compact of August, 1869, already referred to (article 33) the decrees and resolutions issued by former administrations, whatever be their character, will only be regarded as the point of departure in the matter of such questions. The said tribunals alone will decide these questions, within the term of six months, solely in view of the contracts which have been in force, the laws of the republic, and according to the principles of justice and equity where said contracts and laws do not apply. Both the Supreme Government and the firm of Dreyfus Brothers & Co. will accept said decisions.

11. Any sum of money which the courts may adjudge Dreyfus Bros. & Co. to pay into the treasury will be deducted from the provisional balance set down in clause 2.

12. Dreyfus Bros. & Co. are at liberty to make over to other persons the rights conceded to them by the present contract.

MANUEL A. BARINAGA.
FRED. FORD,
Representing Dreyfus Bros. & Co., of Paris.

LIMA, January 7, 1880.

LIMA, January 7, 1880.

The present contract, entered into between the secretary of finance and Mr. Frederick Ford, representing the firm of Dreyfus Brothers & Co., of Paris, after due examination is hereby ratified in all its parts; and in consequence let it be duly drawn up as a public instrument.

Rubric of H. E.

BARINAGA.

[Inclosure 4 in No. 104.]

STATE OBLIGATIONS.

Considering:

First. That the public finances require regulating, and the obligations of the State need to be promptly discharged.

Secondly. That there is a large debt in existence, proceeding from the two previous administrations, the source, nature, and amount of which are equally unknown.

Thirdly. That so long as the debt in question be not made perfectly clear and liquidated, it is impossible to pay it or strike a proper fiscal balance.

It is resolved:

First. The public revenue will be solely applied for the payment of services lent and obligations contracted subsequent to the 24th of December last.

Secondly. Claims of prior date to the above, duly examined and proved to be genuine, will be disposed of when these operations are terminated.

Thirdly. In order to expedite these operations, and not to increase the ordinary labors of the respective functionaries, a commission is hereby appointed, composed of the following three employés, viz: Don José Manuel Osores, Don Pedro Carrion, and Don Genaro Balarezo, which commission will immediately proceed to convoke creditors of every description, divide them into their various classes, and liquidate the sum of their various accounts, reporting the result of their labors as soon as possible.

Fourthly. Said commissioners will receive, apart from their respective pensions, a gratification of one hundred and fifty soles per month, chargeable to the special expense account.

Let it be registered, &c.

Rubric of H. E.

BARINAGA.

[Inclosure 5 in No. 104.]

RELEASE OF THE LUXOR.

NICOLAS DE PIÉROLA, Supreme Head of the Republic.

Considering:

First. That the German colony, resident in Peru, merits special consideration on account of the probity and industry of its members, who have manifested cordial sympathy for the republic during the present war, and a lively enthusiasm for our cause.

Secondly. That the development of the new navigation companies on our coast is in the interest of Peru, and it is, therefore, useful to encourage them and promote their welfare.

In virtue of the faculties with which I am invested—

I decree:

That the steamer Luxor be handed over to the navigation company between Callao and Hamburg, styled Kosmos; and the said steamer is in consequence free to leave Callao, in whose waters she is at present anchored.

The secretary of state of finance and commerce is intrusted with the execution of this decree and with its publication and circulation.

Given in the government house, in Lima, this 10th day of January, 1880.

NICOLAS DE PIÉROLA.

MANUEL A. BARINAGA.

[Inclosure 6 in No. 104.]

INCOME TAX.

NICOLAS DE PIÉROLA, Supreme Head of the Republic.

Considering:

First. That it is obligatory that every inhabitant of a country should contribute in proportion to his resources to the public expenses.

Secondly. That it is necessary to regulate the actual public taxes, making them weigh equally upon all and facilitating their collection.

Thirdly. That the augmented expenses during the war make it likewise necessary and strictly requisite that taxation should be increased.

I decree:

First. The patent, property, industrial, and ecclesiastical taxes, and all others which, under different names, are chargeable on the produce of capital and labor, are amalgamated into one single tax, to be styled tax upon income.

Secondly. This tax will be chargeable at the rate of three per cent. upon all incomes, and must be paid by every inhabitant whose income is not under six hundred soles per annum, or who has not resided in the country less than one year.

Thirdly. Public employés are exempted from the payment of this tax, if they do not possess other means than their salary; but should they be in receipt of other means they must pay the tax on the latter, even although same may not reach the minimum fixed in the preceding article.

Fourthly. All males over 21 years of age whose income does not amount to six hundred soles per annum, will pay, those on the coast, 3 soles per annum, and those in the interior two soles, excepting those over 70 years of age and those who are incapable of work.

Fifthly. This tax will be collected every half year, in advance, by collectors appointed by the prefects, and who will be under the immediate vigilance of the subprefects and governors.

Sixthly. The collectors of the tax will receive four per cent. of the amount they collect, and they must give guarantees for the amount which they are to collect in the half year.

Seventhly. All other direct taxes in the republic are suppressed.

Eighthly. During the present war the amount of the tax, as fixed in the preceding articles, is doubled.

The secretary of state for finance is intrusted with the fulfillment of the present decree and with its publication and circulation.

Given in the government house, in Lima, this 8th day of the month of January, 1880.

NICOLAS DE PIÉROLA.

MANUEL A. BARINAGA.

No. 221.

Mr. Christiancy to Mr. Evarts.

No. 105.] LEGATION OF THE UNITED STATES,
Lima, Peru, January 14, 1880. (Received February 7.)

SIR: I have the honor to inclose to you a copy of a letter from S. C. Montjoy, our consul at Lambayeque, of the 3d instant, with a copy of my reply, No. 36, and a copy of my letter of this date to Mr. Osborn, our minister in Chili, No. 37.

I am, &c.,

I. P. CHRISTIANCY.

[Inclosure 1 in No. 105.]

Mr. Montjoy to Mr. Christiancy.

UNITED STATES CONSULATE,
Lambayeque, January 3, 1880.

HON. I. P. CHRISTIANCY,
United States Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary, Lima:

SIR: I have the honor to inform you that Mr. Rutter, consular agent at Payta, reports to me the destruction, at the port of Talara, of the pontoon, with its contents, belonging to the American Oil Company, exclusively American property, and I am informed also by the governor of the Lobos Islands that a large quantity of American property was destroyed by the Chilian fleet, although the owner represented to the Chilian commander the fact, and that he was a neutral, and the property not available for purposes of war. The governor also reports that a launch belonging to an American steam tug-boat was captured and taken away by the Chilian vessels, although made fast to the steamer and flying an American ensign. The flag was thrown into the sea and the launch taken away, all of which I have the honor to communicate, and am, sir, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

S. C. MONTJOY,
United States Consul.

[Inclosure 2 in No. 105.]

Mr. Christiancy to Mr. Montjoy.

No. 36.] LEGATION OF THE UNITED STATES,
Lima, Peru, January 14, 1880.

S. C. MONTJOY, Esq.,
United States Consul, Lambayeque:

SIR: Your letter of the 3d instant received. I had already been informed, by the owners, of the destruction, by the Chilian fleet, of the pontoon of the American Oil Company (known here as Meloy & Co.), and advised that a protest should be made through our consul at Callao (as Meloy & Co. reside here), and also that it would be well to protest through you or the consular agent at Payta.

As to the destruction of American property at the Lobos Islands, and especially the destruction of the American tug-boat, I recommend also that a protest be made by the captain or owner, through you. Not being accredited to, nor in correspondence with, the Chilian Government, I cannot myself assume to enter an official protest. But I advise you to give full information of the whole matter to Mr. Osborn, our minister at Santiago, that he may call the attention of the Chilian Government to the facts. And I will also send him a copy of your letter.

I am, very truly, your friend,

I. P. CHRISTIANCY.

[Inclosure 3 in No. 105.]

Mr. Christiancy to Mr. Osborn.

No. 37.] LEGATION OF THE UNITED STATES,
Lima, Peru, January 14, 1880.

SIR: I have the honor to inclose to you a copy of a letter from S. C. Montjoy, our consul at Lambayeque, in reference to depredations committed by the Chilian fleet upon the property of American citizens at Talara and at Lobos de Afuera, that you may bring the matter to the attention of the Chilian Government.

I have the honor to subscribe myself, as ever, your friend,

I. P. CHRISTIANCY.

Hon. THOS. A. OSBORN,
Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary of the United States for Chili.

No. 222.

Mr. Calderon to Mr. Evarts.

[Translation.]

DEPARTMENT OF FOREIGN RELATIONS AND WORSHIP,
Lima, January 14, 1880. (Received February 9.)

One of the first acts of the new Government of Peru, which I have the honor to represent in the department of foreign relations, was the abolition of the decree, which, under the old régime, interdicted commerce with Chili.

This act furnishes evidence of the lofty spirit, and of the sentiments of justice and propriety which influence its decisions, as well as of its firm purpose to diminish, to the utmost extent possible, the inconveniences and evils which a state of war necessarily involves.

The other belligerent does not appear to be actuated by the same motives, for, not content with the flagrant infractions of international law committed by it in making war against Peru, which have met with universal reprobation, it now claims that a mere notification of blockade shall be considered equivalent to the establishment of a blockade in those ports and inlets in which it doubtless thinks that it can thereby do us greater injury.

Being quite unable to close the entrances to the principal points on our extensive coast by a bona fide occupation with sufficient force, it now openly attempts to establish a paper blockade in the Pacific, which no nation has ever been able to maintain as legal, and which no first class European power would now even dare to mention.

The right of neutrals to disregard such a blockade is evident, and to tolerate it or to pay the slightest attention to it would be encouraging a claim which is radically unsustainable, but which would now cause a great public scandal if it were thought to be in anywise supported by those nations whose interests it seriously prejudices.

As we owe to our friends an undisguised expression of the truth in matters of such importance, I do not doubt that your excellency and your government will regard this communication as an evidence of the cordial feelings with which Peru maintains her relations with the United States of North America.

It affords me the greatest pleasure, &c.,

PEDRO JOSÉ CALDERON.

No. 223.

Mr. Calderon to Mr. Evarts.

[Translation.]

DEPARTMENT OF FOREIGN RELATIONS AND WORSHIP,
Lima, January 14, 1880. (Received February 9.)

Your excellency is aware that the boundary question, which had been twice settled, resulted in war between Bolivia and Chili, which latter nation finally declared hostilities against Peru, because she had formally expressed her determination to remain true to the treaty of alliance which she had concluded with the former of the two republics above named, although, at the same time, and in virtue of that treaty, she endeavored to restore friendly relations between the two sisters, and to preserve the equilibrium and peace of the continent.

Chili, proclaiming a revindication in which she constituted herself a party and a judge at the same time, had already seized, by surprise and by violence, the region of Autafagasta, which had been awarded to Bolivia by two successive treaties. She next occupied the entire Bolivian coast, and commenced acts of aggression against Peru, without being restrained by any consideration of humanity or by the defenseless condition of the towns on the coast, the law of nations, or respect for the interests of neutrals.

Peru, being totally unprepared for a war which she had never expected, was forced to sustain an unequal and disastrous naval struggle, in which her heroism will ever be a guarantee of the inevitable issue of her glorious though unfortunate arms.

They were no less so in the contest on land, although a single battle, the only one in which it can with propriety be said that real fighting took place, although against very great odds, was sufficient to give certain assurance of the final settlement, which will not be very long delayed, of the terrible conflict into which this noble republic has been provoked, notwithstanding its generous efforts and its honorable and upright purposes.

Finally the department of Tarapaca, at the southern extremity of the territory of Peru, has been occupied by the military forces of Chili, and Peru will make a reply to that occupation in the only way that is imperiously prescribed by her pride and by her honor.

In the mean time, however, Chili being able to derive nothing from this transitory fact outside of the sphere of the hostilities permitted by the law of nations, doubly violates that law, by violating the sovereignty of the republic, and by appropriating to herself what rightfully belongs to Peru. She violates Peruvian sovereignty by imposing taxes upon the saltpeter produced in that department, the excellent quality of which is well known throughout the world; and she unlawfully appropriates Peruvian property, inasmuch as she takes what belongs to the treasury of Peru, exporting and selling it in foreign markets.

Against such violations of her national majesty and such plundering of her treasury, Peru is armed by the moral force of right, which force she will use as she thinks proper, and by such material force as she may be able to command, in order to wrest her property from the hands of her enemy, or of those who assist that enemy in the work of spoliation. And we are not now speaking of a contingent future, for it is an actual fact that the saltpetre of Tarapaca, like that of the coast of Bolivia, is exported in neutral vessels, without whose aid Chili would be unable to consummate her unlawful design.

The flag of a friendly nation cannot cover property taken by violence from Peru, over which Peru will exercise her right of ownership without any limit save that of the force of which she may be able to dispose for this purpose.

The good faith of Peru, and her regard for her friends, lead her to make this frank declaration, which I hasten to communicate to your excellency in the name of the new government chosen by the republic, and I take pleasure in offering your excellency the assurance, &c.

PEDRO JOSÉ CALDERON.

No. 224.

Mr. Christiancy to Mr. Evarts.

No. 106.] LEGATION OF THE UNITED STATES,
Lima, Peru, January 21, 1880. (Received February 17.)

SIR: I have the honor to inclose translations of nine several decrees of the dictatorial government of Peru.

* * * * * * *

I also call special attention to the circulars issued by the secretary of foreign relations (Nos. 6 and 7) to the representatives of friendly and neutral nations in reference to the war, and the question of the right of neutral vessels to ship, under the authority of Chili, nitrates from the nitrate beds in those parts of Bolivia and Peru now in possession of the Chilian forces. This is a peculiar question, and one upon which I would like to receive and follow the views of the Department.

* * * * * * *

I have, &c.,

I. P. CHRISTIANCY.

[Inclosure 6 in No. 106.—Translation.]

The following two circulars referring to the war have been addressed to the representatives of friendly nations:

CIRCULAR.] LIMA, January 14, 1880.

Your excellency is aware that a question of limits, though twice decided, finally brought on war between Bolivia and Chili, which latter country finished by declaring war against Peru, also, on account of her having formally expressed her intention of remaining faithful to the treaty of alliance adjusted with the former of the two countries, although at the same time, and in virtue of that very treaty, she was straining every effort to re-establish fraternal relations between the belligerents and preserve the equilibrium and peace of the continent.

Chili, pretending to enforce an act of revindication in which she was herself both judge and plaintiff, had already, in a treacherous and violent manner, seized hold of the Antofagasta region, which had been adjudged to belong to Bolivia by two successive treaties, and subsequently occupied the entire Bolivian coast and opened hostilities on Peru without allowing herself to be detained in her course by any consideration of humanity for defenseless towns, or out of respect for the rights conceded by the laws of nations, or even out of consideration for the interests of neutral nations.

Peru, reposing in fatal confidence and totally unprepared for a war which she never expected to be engaged in, was forced to sustain an unequal and disastrous naval campaign, in which the heroism she displayed is a sufficient recompense for the final glorious, but disastrous, result.

Peru has likewise been similarly unfortunate on land, although one single day, the only one on which strictly speaking it can be said that a battle was properly fought, in spite of the superiority of the forces and elements opposed to her, was sufficient to enable the final result, which will not be long delayed, of the terrible duel to which this noble republic has been provoked, in spite of her generous desires and frank and honorable intentions, to be prophesied with the most complete certainty.

Finally, the department of Tarapaca, which forms the southern boundary of the Peruvian territory, has been occupied by the Chilian army, and Peru will reply to this act in the only way which her honor and pride dictate.

Chili, however, in the mean time, whose actions with respect to the territory temporarily occupied by her, should be limited to the exercise of the hostilities permitted by the law of nations, doubly violates it, attacking both the sovereignty and property of the republic. She arrogates the former to herself, imposing taxes on the nitrate industry of the department in question, the importance of which is notorious throughout the world, and she assails the latter, appropriating to her own uses the portion of the nitrate riches belonging to the Peruvian fisc, exporting and selling same in foreign markets.

To these attacks on the dignity and property of the nation, Peru opposes the moral force of justice, and will employ it, as may be thought most convenient, aided by the material force at her disposition, to rescue her property from the hands of her enemy or from those whoever may assist her in her work of plunder. And this is not a matter of a possible contingency in the future; for it is an actual fact that the saltpetre of Tarapaca, as well as that of the Bolivian coast, is being exported in neutral vessels, without the aid of which Chili would be powerless to carry out her criminal intent.

The flag of friendly nations cannot protect property of which Peru has been violently defrauded and over which she will exercise her due rights as far as her strength enables her.

The good faith and considerations which Peru shows for her friends induce her to make the foregoing frank declaration, which I have the honor of communicating to your excellency on behalf of the new government which the republic now possesses.

Begging your excellency to accept, &c.,

PEDRO JOSÉ CALDERON.

[Inclosure 7 in No. 106.—Translation.]

CIRCULAR.] LIMA, January 14, 1880.

One of the first acts of the new government of Peru, which I have the honor to represent in the department of foreign affairs, was to annul the decree issued by the former government establishing a commercial interdiction with Chili.

This act proves the elevated spirit and the sentiments of justice and propriety which preside over its every resolution, and testify to its firm intention of lessening, as far as possible of reducing to the narrowest limits, the inconveniences and evils attendant upon a state of war.

The enemy however does not appear to be animated with a like spirit, since not content with the flagrant violations of international law it has been guilty of whilst engaged in hostilities with Peru, and which have merited universal reprobation, Chili now pretends that the mere notification of the blockade of such ports, the closing of which she doubtless thinks will cause us the greatest damage, is sufficient for the efficaciousness of the blockade.

Being powerless to close the entrance to the principal ports on our extensive coast by occupying said entrance with a sufficient force for that purpose, she is manifestly striving to introduce into the Pacific a system of paper blockades, which can never possibly be maintained as legitimate, and which none of the principal European powers would even think of at the present day.

The right of neutrals to consider such a blockade as null and void of effect is manifestly plain, and to tolerate it or show the slightest respect for it, would be to encourage a pretension radically unsustainable, and which would become a scandal to the times we live in, were it to be supported in the slightest degree by those whom it most prejudices.

As it is right that the true state of the case should be laid before our friends in a matter of such weighty importance, I feel certain that your excellency and your government will look upon this communication as another proof of the cordial sentiments with which Peru maintains her relations with ——— ———.

I take this opportunity of assuring your excellency, &c.,

PEDRO JOSÉ CALDERON.

No. 225.

Mr. Christiancy to Mr. Evarts.

No. 108.] LEGATION OF THE UNITED STATES,
Lima, Peru, January 21, 1880. (Received February 17.)

SIR: Referring to my dispatch No. 102, I have the honor to state that absolutely no news of the progress of the war has since been received (or at least made public) here since that dispatch, except that the Chilian force landed at Ylo, as there mentioned, a few days after that time returned to the coast and re-embarked. It was only a reconnaissance in force.

We hear nothing definite of the revolution of Bolivia, except that Daza is a fugitive, and the revolutionary government of Bolivia is more enthusiastic in support of the war than that of Daza.

As to the destruction of the guano works at Lobos de Afuera, the Chilians did not establish a blockade there, and neutral vessels are again landing there, as I am informed.

I am, &c.,

I. P. CHRISTIANCY.

No. 226.

Mr. Evarts to Mr. Christiancy.

[Telegram.]

WASHINGTON, January 24, 1880.

CHRISTIANCY, Minister, Lima.

Time and manner of recognition left to your discretion.

EVARTS.

No. 227.

Mr. Evarts to Mr. Christiancy.

No. 55.] DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, January 26, 1880.

SIR: Your dispatch No. 99, of the 31st ultimo, has been received. It gives an account of a meeting of the diplomatic body at Lima, for the purpose of considering the expediency of recognizing the government of Piérola, the new governor of Peru.

Your course on the occasion was dignified and judicious, and, with your note to Mr. Calderon, the minister for foreign affairs, of the 30th of December, is fully approved. Although that note correctly states the principles which guide this government in the recognition of revolutionary rulers in other countries, I am not aware of any circumstances attending the recent change of government in Peru, which call for special reserve in recognizing Piérola. Inasmuch, however, as you are on the spot, and therefore are best capable of judging of the probability of the duration of Piérola's power and of his accountability to foreign governments, the question of his official recognition is left to your discretion. The telegram of the 24th instant, transcribed below, was forwarded to you accordingly.

I am, sir, &c.,

WM. M. EVARTS.

No. 228.

Mr. Christiancy to Mr. Evarts.

No. 111.] LEGATION OF THE UNITED STATES,
Lima, Peru, January 28, 1880. (Received February 25.)

SIR: I have the honor to inclose to you a copy of my letter of the 25th instant to C. A. Nugent, esq., our consular agent at Arica; also a copy and translation of the letter of Admiral Montero, in command of the Peruvian forces at Arica, on the subject of the blockade of the port of Mollendo by Chili, dated the 9th instant.

The whole substance of the reply of the consuls to the note of the admiral appears in my letter, of which copy is inclosed.

I call special attention to the advice I have, in this letter, given to our consular agent on the question of blockade, that I may be corrected if in error at the earliest practicable moment.

I am, &c.,

I. P. CHRISTIANCY

[Inclosure 1 in No. 111.]

Mr. Christiancy to Mr. Nugent.

LEGATION OF THE UNITED STATES,
Lima, Peru, January 26, 1880.

SIR: Your letter (No. 2) of the 14th instant received, inclosing a copy of the letter of Admiral Montero, commander of the Peruvian forces at Arica, dated January 9, on the subject of the blockade, and the reply of the consular corps thereto, informing the admiral that the contents of his letter would be referred to the ministers of their respective countries.

At this distance, with the uncertainty and irregularity of the mails, I can give you no specific advice applicable to the precise state of facts which may exist at any moment, as that state of facts may be changing from day to day. In fact I am informed here, through the British minister, that since the letter of Admiral Montero, another vessel has been added to the Chilian blockade squadron in front of Arica, and another to that blockading Mollendo. I can only lay down for your guidance some general principles recognized and insisted upon by the Government of the United States, as applicable to blockades, and leave you to apply them to cases of American vessels entering or seeking to enter the port claimed by Chilian authorities to be blockaded. No nation has taken stronger ground or more persistently maintained it against mere paper blockades. The American doctrine is that, to entitle a blockade to the recognition of neutrals, or in any manner to affect the rights of neutral vessels to enter or depart from the port claimed to be blockaded, the blockade must be maintained by the presence of such a force as to render the entrance or departure of the neutral vessel manifestly dangerous. The principal adopted by the treaty of Paris (of April 16, 1856), to which both Chili and Peru have become parties (upon this point), does not differ very materially from the American doctrine, though it may seem to go even further, as it requires "that blockades, to be binding, must be effectual; that is to say, maintained by a force sufficient in reality to prevent access to the coast of the enemy." But whether this really goes further than the American rule we need not discuss as you and I are to be governed in our official action by the latter, and under this, the mere fact that a neutral vessel might slip in or out unobserved, at night, or during a fog, could not of itself be held to invalidate the blockade. And if the blockading squadron be driven off the port by a storm, this will not invalidate it, if they return to their post as soon as the weather will permit. But if they are driven from the port by the enemy or voluntarily leave it, for even a few days (possibly for a single day), this terminates the blockade, and it cannot be re-established without giving, de novo, a fair notice to neutrals.

A practical question of some importance may arise upon the course which I understand has been quite usual with the Chilian blockading squadron, of withdrawing so far from the port at night, and sometimes by day, that first, vessels might innocently enter without the knowledge that a blockade had existed there, and second, vessels which had been informed that the blockade had existed some time before, might, on approaching the port to see whether it still existed, and seeing no blockading vessels and receiving no warning from them, might enter in good faith, believing that the blockade had been abandoned.

In neither of these cases could such vessel be properly seized as a prize for a breach of the blockade; but should receive reasonable notice to depart, or not to land or receive cargo. And if this habit of leaving the port thus unguarded should continue for any great length of time, I doubt whether all neutral nations would not be justified in treating it as inefficient for any purpose, and absolutely null. Such intermittent blockade must, in time, it seems to me, become intolerable to neutrals.

Should the blockading squadron attempt to seize or interfere with any American vessel, in violation of any of the principles above laid down, my advice is that you make a proper protest, and allow officers and owners of such vessels, through you, to protest against such action.

I am, &c.,

I. P. CHRISTIANCY.

[Inclosure 2 in No. 111.—Translation.]

The Peruvian admiral to the consular body at Arica.

ARICA, January 9, 1880.

SIR: I think it opportune to place under the knowledge of the honorable consular corps residing in this department that some merchant vessels of neutrals have entered and departed freely the port of Mollendo, notwithstanding the men-of-war of the Republic of Chili, which announced the blockade, were cruising off the port mentioned. Such has been the case with the steamer Bolivia of the English company on the 17th of the same month; nevertheless, two Chilian vessels, perhaps, were at sight, which is publicly known. And as these cases are frequently and inevitably repeated, and especially on the south coast of the republic, where the naval forces of Chili are simulating that hostility which the law of nations recognizes as blockade and for the efficiency of which invariable rules have been established, I think it my duty to call the attention of the foreign consular body here to the subject, they having under their care the custody of the interests of the citizens of their respective nations, in order to guard the rights which they so worthily represent, and in obedience to the principles universally acknowleged. Be pleased to consider seriously the tenor of this note, and appreciate properly the question of the legality of the proceedings to the Chilian squadron; as it is seen that they cannot substantially sustain the effectual blockade in conformity to the sound and incontrovertible doctrine of international law. Such blockade, although claimed to have existed, is de facto relinquished for want of effectual and immediate force to maintain it, and in virtue of the facts to which I have referred.

With distinction and consideration of esteem, it is grateful to me to subscribe myself, &c.,

L. MONTERO.

To the DEAN of the honorable consular corps residing in Tacna.

No. 229.

Mr. Christiancy to Mr. Evarts.

No. 112.] LEGATION OF THE UNITED STATES,
Lima, Peru, January 28, 1880. (Received February 25.)

SIR: I have the honor to inclose to you a copy of my letter of the 24th instant to Mr. Merriam, our consul at Iquique.

I call attention to this letter, especially as regards granting clearances to American vessels shipping nitrates from Iquique on account and under authority of Chili. The circular of the secretary of foreign relations of Peru on this subject will be found in my dispatch No. 106, inclosures 6, 106, and 7, 106.

It does not seem to me that the right of our consul at Iquique, holding his exequatur from Peru, necessarily depends upon the merits of the question of belligerent right to ship nitrates as between Peru and Chili, nor that the question is necessarily the same as would arise upon a clearance granted by an American consul in a Chilian port to a vessel loaded with such nitrates. But if I am in error in the advice I have given, I wish to be promptly corrected.

The question is to me a somewhat novel one, and I have to depend upon the general principles which seem to me applicable to the circumstances. Fortunately, however, there is very little American shipping on this coast.

I have, &c.,

I. P. CHRISTIANCY.

[Inclosure in No. 112.]

Mr. Christiancy to Mr. Merriam.

LEGATION OF THE UNITED STATES,
Lima, Peru, January 24, 1880.

SIR: Your letter No. 49, of the 17th instant, is received. I think your course in exercising your official functions with the full consent and approbation of the Chilian authorities now in possession of Iquique and the surrounding country is strictly right so long as your official acts shall in no measure be made to operate to the injury of or in hostility to the rights of Peru, or to such as she claims and which are still in contest between her and Chili. But any official act which might aid either of the parties to the contest might be complained of by the other as a departure from the duties of strict neutrality.

You are appointed only as a consul to Peru, and hold your exequatur from its government only, and, therefore, as it seems to me, you cannot, even with the assent of the Chilian authorities, do any official act to which the assent of the Peruvian Government might not fairly be presumed. That assent may be presumed to the extent of allowing you to protect American citizens and to exercise your ordinary functions in reference to American seamen, and upon conflicts arising between the officers and seamen of American merchant vessels, and no objection would now be made to granting clearances to American vessels engaged in any other trade than that of shipping salitres (excepting also contraband, of course).

But the question of granting clearances to American vessels which may load with salitres at Iquique stands upon peculiar grounds. These saliters come from Peruvian soil, which, though now in possession of Chili, is yet in dispute and subject to the arbitrament of arms. Peru, in the circulars of her secretary of foreign relations, has taken the ground that the rights of war, as the contest now stands, do not give Chili the right to deprive the territory of this property and to transport and sell it on Chilian account, and Peru claims that no title can thus be acquired.

Under these circumstances, for you to grant clearances to vessels shipping this nitrate in hostility to Peru and for the direct benefit of Chili, may, I am inclined to think, be properly looked upon by Peru as an unfriendly act tending to aid her enemy in the prosecution of the war. I know that such is the view taken by the government here, and as the shipping of this nitrate at Iquique must now be under the exclusive authority of Chili, and you are not accredited to that country, I think the Peruvian Government would withdraw your exequatur should you grant clearances in such cases. It is true that your refusal to grant such clearances may not stop the injury to Peru, because the Chilian authorities may authorize their own captain of the port or other officer to give clearances, which would avail for what they were worth as the acts of a government or authority de facto.

I shall lay the matter before our government and be guided by its instructions, but in the mean time, until different instructions are received from our government, I think the safest course for you is to act upon the advice above given.

I am, &c.,

I. P. CHRISTIANCY.

No. 230.

Mr. Evarts to Mr. Tracy.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, January 31, 1880.

SIR: On the 28th instant I had the honor to hold a personal interview with you, when you placed in my hands an office copy and translation of a letter from the new President of the Republic of Peru, Don Nicholás de Piérola, to the President of the United States, notifying his accession to the supreme magistracy of Peru. You then observed that you desired to present the original of that letter, but before forwarding it you expressed a wish to know whether it would be received, adding that you had been instructed by the government of President Piérola to continue in the capacity of chargé d'affaires, but without new letters of credence. I then had the honor of replying that I would lay the matter before the President, and at a subsequent interview inform you of his conclusions upon the subject.

Upon consideration the President has decided to recognize the government established in Peru by His Excellency Don Nicolás de Piérola and to receive the ceremonial letter of the latter, it being understood by this government that the people of Peru were driven to the acceptance of a new government on a provisional basis, by the external pressure of their affairs, and that the accession of General Piérola to power was not accomplished by civil strife or factious insurrection.

I had the honor to communicate this decision to you, orally, in an interview held yesterday, having previously received from your hands the original letter of President Piérola for transmission to the President of the United States. It now affords me pleasure to communicate this decision to you in a more formal manner, and to express my personal gratification at the continuance of the friendly relations which have marked your intercourse with this department since you assumed the responsible charge confided to you.

Observing that the President will doubtless reply at an early day to the letter of President Piérola, and that his answer will be transmitted through the usual channel of the United States diplomatic representative at Lima, I tender you, sir, the renewed assurance of my highest consideration.

WM. M. EVARTS.

No. 231.

Mr. Evarts to Mr. Christiancy.

No. 57.] DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, February 4, 1880.

SIR: I inclose herein a copy of my note to the chargé d'affaires of Peru in the United States, of the 31st ultimo,* communicating to him the information that the President had decided to recognize the government in Peru of His Excellency Don Nicolás de Piérola, &c. It is presumed that you have already availed yourself of the discretion as to the recognition of that government given you by No. 55; if not, you will at once enter upon full relations with the established power.

* For inclosure see document No. 230, ante.

Observing that no new credentials will be necessary, I am, &c.,

WM. M. EVARTS.

No. 232.

Mr. Christiancy to Mr. Evarts.

No. 115.] LEGATION OF THE UNITED STATES,
Lima, Peru, February 10, 1880. (Received March 9.)

SIR: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt, on the 5th instant, of your telegram of January 24 (by mail from Valparaiso), in reference to the recognition of the present Government of Peru.

And I have the honor to state that in view of the facts that this government had met with the universal concurrence and acquiescence of the people of Peru, and that there was no pretense or claim in Peru to any other government than that of Piérola as dictator, I could find no principle of international law which would authorize me longer to withhold a full recognition. I sent to the secretary of state for foreign affairs my letter of the 5th February, No. 25, of which I inclose a copy.

I have, &c.,

I. P. CHRISTIANCY.

[Inclosure in No. 115.]

Mr. Christiancy to Señor Calderon.

No. 25.] LEGATION OF THE UNITED STATES,
Lima, Peru, February 5, 1880.

MONSIEUR LE MINISTRE: I have the honor to inform your excellency that I have this day received a telegram from the Secretary of State of the United States of America, dated the 24th ultimo, in answer to a dispatch of mine detailing the change of government which resulted in making His Excellency Don Nicolás de Piérola Supreme Head of the Government. By that telegram the time and manner of recognition are left to my discretion, and being entirely satisfied that this change has met the cordial concurrence of the people of Peru, and that within the principles defined in my note to your excellency of the 30th December last, No. 22, this government is now entitled to recognition by friendly nations, I take this early opportunity to communicate to you and through you to the government its formal recognition by the United States of America.

Please accept, &c.,

I. P. CHRISTIANCY.

Eximo Señor Don PEDRO JOSÉ CALDERON,
Secretario de Relaciones Exteriores del Peru.

No. 233.

Mr. Christiancy to Mr. Evarts.

No. 117.] LEGATION OF THE UNITED STATES,
Lima, Peru, February 11, 1880. (Received March 9.)

SIR: I have the honor to inclose to you a copy of my letter of February 7 (No. 42) to J. W. Merriam, explaining to him the meaning of my letters 34 and 39.

I should have sent this before the 1st February, but he had written me that he expected to be here by the 1st instant. He called on the 7th, and I made the explanation verbally, but to avoid any mistake I concluded to write this, that he might have it in writing, and put it on file.

I am, &c.,

I. P. CHRISTIANCY.

[Inclosure in No. 117.]

Mr. Christiancy to Mr. Merriam.

No. 42.] LEGATION OF THE UNITED STATES,
Lima, Peru, February 7, 1880.

J. W. MERRIAM, Esq.,
United States Consul at Iquique:

SIR: You will remember that I, this afternoon, called your attention to the fact that on looking over my letters to you, Nos. 34 and 39, I discovered that I had in those letters used the term "clearance" in an enlarged and untechnical sense, as including all the official acts of the consul necessary to the departure of an American vessel from the port at which you were stationed, such as putting your name upon the clearance given by the authorities of the port, and your certificate to the invoices, when I ought more properly to have avoided the term "clearance" which has a technical meaning and strictly speaking is not granted by the consul.

The whole context and my whole cause of reasoning shows that this was my meaning, and I am glad to learn that you have been led into no error by my careless use of the word "clearance." As I told you I had intended to write you at the next mail making this explanation.

I write this that you may put it on file as a written explanation of my two letters referred to.

I am, very truly, your friend,

I. P. CHRISTIANCY.

No. 234.

Mr. Evarts to Mr. Christiancy.

No. 58.] DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, February 18, 1880.

SIR: I have to acknowledge the receipt of your No. 105, with the copies of correspondence inclosed therein, relative to the destruction of property of the American Oil Company at Talara, and of other American property at the Lobos Islands, by the fleet of Chili.

Your action in the premises in transmitting the information to the minister of the United States at Santiago, and the advice given in your letter to Consul Montjoy, at Lambayeque, are approved. The Department will at once communicate with Mr. Osborn, on the subject of your dispatch.

I am, &c.,

WM. M. EVARTS.

No. 235.

Mr. Evarts to Mr. Christiancy.

No. 63.] DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, March 1, 1880.

SIR: Your dispatch, No. 106, of the 21st January last, has been received. It is accompanied by translations of certain recent decrees of the Peruvian Government and copies of circulars addressed by the minister of foreign affairs of Peru to the representatives of friendly nations. All these inclosures, with the exception of those which you number 6 and 7, relate to internal affairs of that country, and do not appear to call for any special instructions. One of the papers referred to, however, assumes that Chili has seized those nitrates on the Peruvian coast which Peru claims as her own, and is exporting their products in neutral vessels, and that, therefore, Peruvian cruisers will not respect a neutral flag detected in that business.

Although in the present subdued condition of the Peruvian navy there may not be much risk of capture of neutral vessels by the Peruvian men of war, it is proper that you should remind that government of the eighteenth article of its treaty of 1870 with the United States, which expressly stipulates that free ships shall give freedom to goods, and that everything shall be deemed free which shall be found on board the vessels belonging to citizens of either of the contracting parties, although the whole lading or a part thereof should belong to the enemies of either, articles contraband of war always excepted. It seems clear, therefore, that if a Peruvian cruiser should capture an American vessel whose cargo, in whole or in part, should consist of the nitrate referred to, the treaty would be violated in a case for which it was specially intended to provide. For such an act that government would certainly be held accountable. It is hoped, therefore, that that government, as a proof of its friendly disposition toward that of the United States, and of its desire to observe in good faith its formal treaty stipulations, will either so modify the circular referred to or will give such orders as may prevent an act of which we should have such just cause to complain.

I have received copies of the two circulars through the chargé d'affaires of Peru in Washington, and have prepared replies thereto, which I inclose. You will please retain copies of the same on your files, and deliver the originals.

I am, sir, &c.,

WM. M. EVARTS.

No. 236.

Mr. Evarts to Señor Calderon.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, March 1, 1880.

SIR: I have received, through Mr. José Carlos Tracy, the chargé d'affaires accredited to this government, your excellency's note of January 14 last, complaining that nitrate from that part of Peru which is occupied by the military forces of Chili is shipped thence in neutral vessels, and claiming the right to detain or capture such vessels on the high seas.

In reply, I have the honor to acquaint your excellency that I have received a copy of the same paper from Mr. Christiancy, the minister of the United States at Lima, and I have instructed him upon the subject. He will, doubtless, in due time, make known to your excellency the views therein expressed, which, therefore, I will not now repeat.

I avail, &c.,

WM. M. EVARTS.

No. 237.

Mr. Evarts to Señor Calderon.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, March 1, 1880.

SIR: I have received, through Mr. Tracy, the note of your excellency of the 14th of January last, which represents that the prohibition against intercourse with Chili, which had been decreed by the late administration of Peru, had been repealed. Your excellency also represents that the blockade declared by Chili of certain ports and inlets of the territories of her adversaries, is inefficient.

In reply, I have the honor to state that hitherto this Department has not received from any other quarter similar information or any complaint upon that subject. If, however, the fact should be as your excellency represents, it will probably enable those interested in a resumption of the intercourse between Peru and Chili to avail themselves of the opening made for them by the repeal of the prohibitory decree to which your excellency adverts.

The views of this government on the subject of blockade are, it is presumed, well known to the Government of Chili. If, therefore, the cruisers of that government shall capture or detain a vessel of the United States for having, in the absence of a force competent to prevent it, entered a port or inlet of her enemies, which had been declared in a state of blockade, reparation for that act will be required.

I avail, &c.,

WM. M. EVARTS.

No. 238.

Mr. Evarts to Mr. Christiancy.

No. 64.] DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, March 1, 1880.

SIR: I have received your No. 111, in which you transmit a copy of your letter of January 26 last, to Mr. Nugent, consular agent of the United States at Arica, in reference to the blockade of Mollendo, and a copy and translation of a letter of Admiral Montero to the dean of the consular corps, residing in his department, and in reply desire to approve the tenor of your communication to Mr. Nugent. You will, of course, pay no attention to any manifesto in regard to the subject of your dispatch, unless addressed directly to yourself as the diplomatic representative of the United States.

I am, sir, &c.,

WM. M. EVARTS.

No. 239.

Mr. Evarts to Mr. Christiancy.

No. 65.] DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, March 2, 1880.

SIR: Your dispatch No. 112, of the 28th January last, has been received. It relates to the authority of the consul of the United States at Iquique to grant clearances to American vessels. Your letter to him upon the subject is in general approved. No consul, pursuant to our law or regulations, has the right to grant a clearance to any American vessel, even if his post is at a port conquered and possessed by the enemy of the country from whose government he may have received his exequatur. It is the exclusive province of the belligerent authority for the time being—civil, military, or naval—to grant such clearances, and the consul, as is required in time of peace, should not deliver the vessel's papers until the clearance shall have been presented to him by the master. The consul's course is not to be governed or influenced by the components of the cargo of the vessel. If these, according to the existing authority, may lawfully be exported, the consul cannot properly gainsay that opinion. It is natural that Peru should be incensed at the exportation of nitrate for the benefit and account of her adversary. It is to be regretted, however, that she should allow her resentment to lead her to claim a belligerent right not acknowledged by any authority, that of capturing on the high seas vessels of a neutral for having on board a cargo from a place which she owned before the war. In this case, however, her title to it was annulled, or at least suspended, by the armed occupation by Chili of the region whence the article was taken. The attempt of Peru, therefore, to avenge upon neutrals her want of good fortune in the contest will not, it is to be feared, add to her reputation for magnanimity or regard to public law, and certainly will not be acquiesced in by the governments of neutrals, whose interests may thereby be affected.

I am, &c.,

WM. M. EVARTS.

No. 240.

Mr. Christiancy to Mr. Evarts.

No. 123.] LEGATION OF THE UNITED STATES,
Lima, Peru, March 3, 1880. (Received March 27.)

SIR: In the absence of any important news, and for the purpose of enabling you to judge something of the nature of the dictatorial government here, I inclose you the following translations of decrees:

1st. Of a decree of the 23d February, annulling the contract purporting to have been made by Rosas and Goyeneche (commissioners sent to Europe by the Prado government), and sequestering the property of said commissioners.

2d. A decree in reference to the letting or leasing of church property, and that of charitable institutions.

3d. A decree requiring the publishers of newspapers, when such papers have published articles attacking or reflecting upon individuals, to allow to such individuals double the space in the same paper for a reply, without charge, &c.

4th. In relation to the prosecution and imprisonment of Don José Maria Quimper, minister of finance, under the late government, for improperly issuing and certifying a decree not signed by the late President.

I call especial attention to the above decree (3–123), which seems to be founded upon a strong appreciation of fairness and justice, and calculated to put some restraint upon the license of the press in attacking individuals or private character. It is quite possible that a similar principle might be generally adopted with advantage in other countries besides Peru.

I have, &c.,

I. P. CHRISTIANCY.

[Inclosure 1 in No. 123.]

Official decrees.

THE GOYENECHE-ROSAS CONTRACT.

We supply below a translation of the decree or resolution of the government annulling the guano and nitrate contract concluded in Paris on the 7th ultimo, by Messrs. Rosas and Goyeneche, with the Credit Industriel Company:

LIMA, February 23, 1880.

In view of the official communications dated the 16th of January last, addressed by the ex-fiscal commissioners, Don Juan Marciano de Goyeneche y Gamio and Don Francisco Rosas, to the secretary of state for finance.

In view of the two contracts therein referred to, bearing date the 7th of the same month, with the documents accompanying them.

In view of the document containing the decision of commissioners, Goyeneche and Rosas, annulling the guano consignment contract celebrated in 1876, with the cessionaries of the Peruvian Guano Company (Limited).

And considering—

Firstly. That the mere fact of the political change which took place in Peru on the 23d of December last, once known in Europe, as it was since the 29th of the same month, was equivalent to the suspension of the plenary powers with which said commissioners were invested.

Secondly. That for greater precaution the government transmitted express orders to them not to celebrate any contract not ad referendum.

Thirdly. That, although the commissioners allege that they were unable to decipher the telegraphic dispatch which contained that order, the latter was not only known by many in Paris and by the commissioners themselves, but, even were this not so, the fact of their having been unable to decipher the telegram should, of itself, have been sufficient to induce them to refrain from entering into any contract, at least one of definite character.

Fourthly. That the contract celebrated by them is in direct opposition to the law of authorization of the 13th of October, 1879, inserted in the respective plenary powers, and that, besides, said contract pledges the nitrate of Tarapaca in virtue of a mere government authorization which the executive power of that period had no authority to issue nor bind the state by.

Fifthly. That on entirely their own responsibility they have declared the existing contract with the Peruvian Guano Company, Limited, rescinded, which only the Peruvian tribunals are authorzied to do, certainly not the executive power, and still less its commissioners.

Sixthly. That it is highly necessary to strip the contracts in question of the appearance of validity with which their authors have striven to invest them, going so far even as to make an international notification of an unusual and unauthorized nature, the right being reserved to examine them carefully in order to estimate their convenience or inconvenience with regard to the state.

Seventhly. That the parties who have made this contract with Goyeneche and Rosas cannot profess an ignorance which might redeem the contract for the r own part, inasmuch as the stipulations of said contract are in opposition to the express tenor of the plenary powers of the Peruvian commissioners, without exhibiting which the contract could not have been drawn up.

Eighthly. That the latter have consequently been guilty of abusing the high confidence placed in them and of disobeying the orders of the government in a matter of the greatest and most transcendental importance, the enormity of which is aggravated in consideration of the present state of affairs in the Repub ic.

Ninthly. That it is necessary to take precautions that the fiscal interests may not be prejudiced or in any way affected by such abuse and d sobedience.

It is resolved—

First. That the commissioners in question be submitted for trial before the respective courts.

Secondly. That from this date and without further notification, the property rights and actions of said commissioners be declared subject to fiscal responsibility and embargoed.

Thirdly. That the Banco Garantizador de Valores be appointed depositary for said property in Lima, and the Banco de Arequipa, in the city of the same name, which depositaries will pay the same interest on the sums they receive as they do on sight deposits.

Fourthly. That those who make the contracts with the parties whose property has been thus laid under embargo, or who deliver moneys to them in place of contracting or handing such moneys to the depositaries, will be directly responsible for the value of such contracts or delivery of such moneys, and will also suffer the penalty which they incur for infringing this decree.

Fifthly. That the two contracts in question be declared null and void of all effect and be looked upon as mere proposals.

Sixthly. That said contracts, with all the documents referred to in them, be published and submitted to the council of state in order that the latter may give its consultative opinion on the same, so that the necessary resolution be issued.

Let it be published, &c.

Rubric of his excellency.

BARINAGO.

[Inclosure 2 in No. 193.]

CHURCH PROPERTY.

NICOLÁS DE PIÉROLA, Supreme Head of the Republic:

Considering—

First. That it is necessary to put a stop to the undue speculation of which the property belonging to the church and to the public-benefit institutions has been the object, by means of contracts prejudicial to their revenues, and which divert them from the purposes to which they are destined, to the undue advantage of the administrators and contractors.

Secondly. That the government proposes to adopt measures later on with regard to the property in question, which, while they will help the treasury, may better serve its object.

I decree:

It is absolutely prohibited to make any emphyteutic contract in connection with ecclesiastical property or that of any institution whatsoever of worship or public benefit, and all other deeds of lease of such property will remain null unless approved by the government.

The secretary of state for foreign affairs and worship is charged with the punctual observance of this decree, and with its publication and circulation.

Given in the palace in Lima, this 19th day of February, 1880.

N. DE PIÉROLA.

PEDRO JOSÉ CALDERON.

Responsible for translation.

J. LAWTON.

[Inclosure 3 in No. 123.—Translation.]

THE GOVERNMENT AND THE PRESS.

The following decree has been issued:

NICOLÁS DE PIÉROLA, Supreme Head of the Republic:

Considering—

First. That the practice of occupying the press with purely personal matters neither serves any purpose nor is an efficacious guarantee for the rights attacked outside of the papers, but is rather calculated to damage the reputation and good name of the person so occupying it.

Secondly. That consequently every person attacked through the medium of the press should be supplied with the means of defending himself in proportion to the severity of the attack made upon him.

Thirdly. That this is the more just, considering that not every person who is attacked through the medium of the press is able to pay for defending himself, and even were this not so, it is not right to abuse the liberty of the press and provoke a person to spend money in defending himself.

Fourthly. That the owner of the printing establishment, by reason of which such attack is made, also lends his co-operation to the practicing of the kind of abuses which this decree is intended to remedy.

I decree:

ARTICLE 1. Every victim of defamation, invective, or ridicule, and in general every citizen whose reputation is in any way damaged through the medium of the press has the right, in order to vindicate himself. to occupy gratis in the paper in which he is attacked double the space which the article occupied that attacked his reputation.

ARTICLE 2. Should the attack not have been made through the medium of a paper, but in a book, pamphlet, or fly-sheet, &c., the obligation of publishing gratis the vindication will fall upon the owner of the printing establishment where the attack was printed; whenever the party attacked may wish to make use of his right, double the amount of matter in the book, pamphlet, or fly-sheet being printed, or the owner of such printing establishment shall pay the cost of the offended person's defense in any paper and place which the latter may select should he prefer to use such means of defense.

ART. 3. If the attack be made in a paper, the editor of such paper will be under the obligation of inserting the vindication in preference to any other matter, with the exception of the official publications under penalty of paying, if he delay in doing so, a fine of from ten to fifty pounds sterling to the offended party, which will be collected by the political authorities, and he shall also publish the article in which the latter defends himself. The same applies to the case pointed out in article 2.

What is ordered in this decree does not impede the offended party taking criminal action before the respective court for the punishment of the delinquent, if he be proved guilty in accordance with the law.

The secretary of state for justice and instruction is intrusted with the publication and circulation of this decree.

Given in the palace of government in Lima, this 21st day of February, 1880.

N. DE PIÉROLA.

FREDERICO PANIZO.

[Inclosure 4 in No. 123.—Translation.]

IMPRISONMENT OF DOCTOR QUIMPER, LATE MINISTER OF FINANCE.

LIMA, February 23, 1880.

In view of the documents annexed to the official communication addressed to the secretary of finance by ex-Fiscal Commissioners Don Juan M. de Goyeneche and Don Francisco Rosas, dated the 16th ultimo, amongst which is an official note forwarded to them on the 26th of November last by the ex-minister of finance and commerce, Don José Maria Quimper.

In view of the original of said note, the autograph copy of which exists in the copy-book of that ministry.

In view, finally, of the supposed supreme decree of the same date, authorizing said fiscal commissioners to pledge the nitrate of Tarapaca in the arrangements which they might enter into with the holders of Peruvian bonds and in the contracts which they might celebrate, the original of which document exists in the same office.

And inasmuch as it appears—

First. That the said decree bears no other signature than that of ex-Minister Quimper and consequently the then head of the state had no part in that most important resolution.

Secondly. That notwithstanding this in the official communication forwarded by the ex-minister he falsely affirms that it bore the rubric of his excellency, which constitutes the crime of forgery, for which the penal code provides.

Thirdly. That even had the decree in question been issued and signed by the head of the state the responsibility of the latter would not cover the minister's responsibility who thus disposed of national property without any authorization whatsoever, an offense aggravated by the serious state of affairs prevailing in the republic.

Fourthly. That in view of such deeds it is indispensable not only to hold the author of them criminally responsible but to take the necessary precautions in order that the fiscal interests at stake may not be prejudiced.

It is resolved:

First. That Don José Maria Quimper, ex-minister of finance and commerce, be submitted for trial and apprehended in order that he may be placed at the disposal of the proper court.

Secondly. That the property rights and actions belonging to the said Don José Maria Quimper be declared subject to fiscal responsibility and be embargoed.

Thirdly. That the Banco Garantizador de Valores be appointed depository for said property and its products, which bank will pay the same interest on the sums of money it receives as it does on sight deposits.

Fourthly. That those who make contracts with the person whose property is embargoed, or deliver moneys to him, in place of contracting or delivering such moneys to the depository, will be held directly responsible for the value of any such contracts or delivery of moneys, and will also suffer the penalty which they incur for violating this decree.

Let it be published, &c.

Rubric of his excellency.

BARINAGA.

No. 241.

Mr. Tracy to Mr. Evarts.

LEGATION OF PERU IN THE UNITED STATES,
New York, March 9, 1880. (Received March 11.)

SIR: Not long since the newspapers of this city published a cable report purporting to have been received, via England, from Buenos Ayres, announcing the rupture of the alliance between the Republics of Bolivia and Peru. Emanating, as it evidently did, from unfriendly sources, I did not deem the report entitled to any credit, but I did not feel authorized to deny it simply because I could not believe it.

In the inclosed copy of the bulletin, of 11th February last, of El Peruano, the official organ of the Government of Peru, your excellency will note that General Narciso Campero, having been proclaimed Provisional President of Bolivia, by the most important departments of the republic, entered Oruro on the 19th of January last, and assumed control of the affairs of the nation; that his authority had been recognized by the commission (junta) in charge of the government at La Paz; and that all fears of any civil strife in that country had disappeared, your excellency will likewise observe that at the public meetings held in various places on account of the recent political changes, not only was the alliance between Bolivia and Peru ratified, but many of them declared in favor of a Peru-Bolivian confederation.

I venture to call your excellency's attention to this, in order that if the before mentioned newspaper report should have been seen by you, you may understand there was no other foundation for it than the hope of our enemies that they had finally succeeded in the efforts they have undoubtedly been making for many months to induce Bolivia to prove false to Peru, but which efforts have happily not been successful.

The undersigned avails himself of this occasion to renew to his excellency the Secretary of State, the assurance of his high esteem and most distinguished consideration.

JOSÉ CARLOS TRACY.

[Extract from bulletin of El Peruano of February 11, 1880.—Translation]

BOLIVIA.

General D. Narciso Campero, having been proclaimed Provisional President of Bolivia by the most important departments of the said republic, entered Oruro on the 19th of January, with a portion of the division under his command, and issued a decree assuming the chief command of the nation.

The governmental junta of La Paz has recognized the authority of General Campero, and all fear of civil discord in our sister and allied republic of Bolivia has disappeared.

Colonel Elodora Camacho will continue as commanding general of the Bolivian army stationed at Tacna.

It is said that General Daza has desisted from all claim to the chief magistracy, and that he has determined to remain at Arequipa with his family.

The instruments signed by the towns, in connection with the political events to which we have referred, not only ratify the alliance which unites Bolivia with Peru but a Peruvian-Bolivian confederacy is therein advocated.

The hopes, therefore, that were entertained by the Chilian press that a rupture would soon occur in the alliance of the two nations which are now marching unitedly against that republic in defense of their dearest and most fundamental rights, have been frustrated.

No. 242.

Mr. Evarts to Mr. Christiancy.

No. 69.] WASHINGTON, March 10.

SIR: I have to acknowledge the receipt of your No. 115, and to approve the action taken by you as detailed therein, relative to the recognition of the new Government of Peru.

Referring to instruction No. 57, communicating copy of correspondence with Mr. Tracy on this subject,

I am, &c.,

WM. M. EVARTS.

No. 243.

Mr. Christiancy to Mr. Evarts.

No. 133.] LEGATION OF THE UNITED STATES,
Lima, Peru, March 17, 1880. (Received April 10.)

SIR: I have the honor to inclose to you a slip from the South Pacific Times of yesterday, stating all the reliable information we yet have of the operations of two Chilian vessels in the north, though we have rumors of somewhat similar operations at other ports, and the probability of their attacking Payta in a similar manner.

I will further say that last week an armed steam transport, the Talisman, was sent by the Peruvian Government from Callao south, with some two hundred military officers to re-enforce the army of the south at Arica, with several thousand stands of arms, with ammunition, provisions, and clothing. They landed the men and cargo at Quilca, some forty miles by the road from Yslay, whence they will have to move by land to Arica, unless they find the interior, like the coast from Yslay south, in possession of the Chilians, in which case they will probably join the Peruvian forces or some of the Bolivians further in the interior and in rear of the Chilians, say, at Arequipa or Moquegua.

The Talisman returned safely to Callao this morning.

I have, &c.,

I. P. CHRISTIANCY.

No. 244.

Mr. Calderon to Mr. Tracy.

[Translation.]

DEPARTMENT OF FOREIGN AFFAIRS AND WORSHIP,
Lima, March 17, 1880.

Señor Don JOSÉ CARLOS TRACY,
Chargé d'Affaires of Peru in the United States of North America:

Chili advances more and more in the road of illegal hostilities and her own dishonor.

In my circular of January 14, to friendly powers, I have already denounced and condemned the excesses against the sovereignty and property of Peru, committed until then with manifest abuse of the military occupation of Tarapaca, and all with the sole idea of carrying into effect her purpose of despoiling Peru of the rich products of that portion of the republic.

Now, as you will see in the inclosed bulletin, by the two proclamations published in Iquique on the 23d and 25th of February last, Chili has resolved to grasp from the hands of the nitrate manufacturers all that which, according to their respective contracts, should be exported and sold as belonging to the Peruvian exchequer, in order to export and sell it on account of the Chilian exchequer, as if it were her own property; and on the pretext of an imaginary permission solicited by foreign holders of Peruvian bonds, has authorized the shipment of guano from our deposits which she declares occupied by her troops, notwithstanding these are insufficient for a real and permanent occupation of said deposits, or even a part of them, and which are not even designated in the decree.

Although this assumes the perfect right of said bondholders to pay themselves their dues by these means, the license granted them is worth from twenty to thirty shillings per ton, a manifest defraudation and the sole purpose of the concession, and everything leads to the belief that the presentation of this petition was procured by secret dealings and actual collusion to obtain the wealth of Peru and divide it among those who imagine that by this fraudulent arrangement they have found an easy though disgraceful way of obtaining an object which they will find it difficult to reconcile to their own consciences.

Against these acts, incited by a devouring thirst for the property of others, and by her great need of resources wherewith to continue this unjust war, the savage nature of which is daily becoming more and more marked, the Peruvian Government has been forced to make the declarations contained in the decrees of the 15th instant, which are to be found in the aforesaid bulletin.

You will also find therein the loyal and frank declaration of the Secretary of finance, dated the 27th of January, in which he fully testifies all that has been done by the new government with regard to its finances abroad, consulting the well-known interests of its creditors, even in spite of the inevitable demands of the war.

The dignity of Peru, her self-respect, the care of her interests, and the intelligent good faith with which she must carry out her sacred engagements of her credit, have prescribed the line of conduct revealed by the documents to which I have referred.

Provoked into a war which we never could have looked upon, on our part, save as a great continental necessity, and as a duel of honor, we now find ourselves before an enemy who does not wage the battle on this ground, and who, insensible to the noble calls of justice and honor, disregarding the most obvious principles of the law of nations, of humanity and of civilization, converts an international struggle into treacherous assaults on defenseless persons, pillage, war without quarter, and unlimited destruction.

Against this frenzy, which makes Chili forget even what she owes to herself as a Christian republic, Peru offers the manly perseverance necessary for the vindication of her rights, and the reparation of the damages received in consequence of this scandalous abuse of power.

Meanwhile, she cannot but consider as accomplices of her enemy all those who, without any possible excuse, under the protection of a neutral flag, co-operate in the depredation of her wealth, and help to increase the resources with which Chili is outraging and destroying all that which the community of civilized nations holds as respectable and sacred.

She will, therefore, treat as enemies all such co-operators, who having of their own free will violated the neutrality which, for their own protection, they should have respected, lose, ipso facto, all right to any protection, by taking part in an act of usurpation and embezzlement which nothing can justify, inasmuch as during the present war Chili has not made any special claim or demand against Peru, either before or since the declaration of war. Chili declared and makes war against Peru simply because she is the ally of Bolivia. This is the sole cause of her hostilities. All that does not tend to weaken the forces of the republic, or to destroy, when absolutely necessary, any materials by which injury might be occasioned to our foe, is iniquitous and contrary to universal morality and the law of nations, and warrants reprisals not exceeding that measure which should be observed by a nation that respects itself and is conscious of its imprescriptible duties.

You will please read this dispatch and the inclosed bulletin to the chief of the foreign office of that government, and furnish him with copies of both, should he so desire.

God keep you many years.

PEDRO JOSÉ CALDERON.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT,
Lima, January 27, 1880.

To the Financial Agent of Peru in Europe:

SIR: In a former letter I spoke to you of an exposition I would make about the motives that have influenced the government in its first steps with reference to the finances, and particularly to the foreign credit of Peru; and by especial request of his excellency, the supreme chief of the republic, I now comply with this duty.

Peru is at present undergoing a very difficult trial, from which she will undoubtedly reap two great benefits, her regeneration at home and proving to the world her elements of power and strength; although her difficulties and complications are now very great, she must nevertheless conquer them to attain this object.

However painful it may be, yet we must inevitably look back on the last ten years in order to understand better the difficulties and complications in which we are now placed.

Exaggerations of prosperity, against which proved useless all the efforts of the present President of the republic, then minister of finance in 1872, brought about the initiation of the new foreign loan of the following year, which occasioned his separation from the government, and was the starting point of the indefensible financial situation through which the republic has ever since had to struggle.

That loan, most imprudent in itself, since it was to absorb in its own service the greater part of the income of the nation, had scarcely commenced at the inauguration of the new government of that year. That government not only did not annul it, as it could and ought to have done, but the most unfortunate manner in which it was carried out in Europe, emitting its obligations at truly ruinous rates, decided the disaster. And this fact, together with the series of economical and political errors of those four years, brought on the suspension of payments abroad, and misery and ruin at home.

The succeeding government did not remedy the evil. Following the same path which had been condemned by the whole country, protesting against it even under arms on several occasions, it only succeeded in widening the breach that had already been opened.

A terrible blow was dealt to the flourishing saltpeter industry, under pretext of forming a new financial resource, thereby ruining the manufactures and the public treasury, depriving the former of their nitrate, and creating for the latter an enormous debt of nearly 20,000,000 of soles.

Our principal income, the guano, became, by virtue of the contracts celebrated since 1874, reduced to an incredibly small amount. Coin disappeared entirely from our market, being replaced by the greatest of economical calamities, the paper money of forced currency. The internal consolidated debt increased immensely; the floating debt appeared; and even the servants of the state were frequently without pay.

Such a sad situation, together with other grave symptoms of administrative and political disorder, encouraged Chili, covetous of her neighbor's riches, to appropriate the Bolivian coast, convinced that the powerlessness to which Peru had been reduced would prevent her interfering in such a culpable enterprise.

The Chilians could not have chosen a better opportunity, knowing that the treasury of Peru was empty, and that she was completely unprepared on land as well as at sea; thus our republic found itself engaged in a war, that in other circumstances Chili would never have dared to provoke.

Notwithstanding this, the natural advantages of Peru, the patriotism and extreme generosity of her people, would have sufficed to balk Chili, had it not been for the conduct of her government, which brought about the loss of her fleet, and the inexplicable disaster of San Francisco, followed by the disappearance of the head of the government.

The Peruvian people who, with their generous efforts, had endeavored to retard this crisis, and upon whom the war had imposed complete forgetfulness of the past and a firm adhesion to even the very originators of their sufferings, at length saw the end of the same. With a unanimity, which has few examples in history, they overturned, on the 22d of December last, the then existing political power.

That event, which to an ordinary observer would merely appear as one of so many disturbances of Spanish America, is, to all who know the country and will meditate for a moment on the circumstances under which it took place, and the causes which produced it, but the eloquent protest of the entire nation against the political period which terminated on 23d of December last. That national protest does not alone comprehend the military events during the actual campaign, but also the entire policy which has brought them about, and the administrative path followed by the overthrown régime.

And this is the reason that, notwithstanding the fervent respect of the Peruvian people and their actual chief for the sovereignty of law and liberty, they have with common consent established a provisional dictatorship, accepted by both, only as an imperious and temporary necessity which the present circumstances demand

I must now confine myself to the administrative department, and more especially to the line of conduct observed by the two preceding governments toward our foreign creditors.

Hence arises the evil, and not altogethor from the want of material compliance with stipulated liabilities.

A nation, as an individual, may find itself trammeled much to its regret by circumstances such as to deprive it of the means of paying the whole of its debts.

But a nation, with even more reason than an individual, can never deviate from the open path which its duty, its integrity, and clearly its own profit indicate, should be maintained; it should, with sincerity and loyalty, make known its situation and omit no sacrifice or effort that will reveal its earnest desire to satisfy its creditors within the limits of possibility.

And now it is very hard but necessary to confess, the two preceding governments have erred in this respect, thereby drawing upon the nation the most lamentable consequences; whereas, the first acts of the new regime and the purpose of this note is to prove our intention of fulfilling religiously this duty.

On the accession to the command of the government by the present head of the republic, the following was the situation as regards our foreign creditors and our means of fulfilling our engagements with them:

The external debt, owing to its enormous amount, even given the rehabilitation of our revenues, the termination of the war, and the reduction of public expenses could not be attended to according to the compact as to interest and sinking-fund. In this case the only honorable course was to declare it. And as it is evident that that debt was in the greater part contracted in order to employ the money in the construction of railroads, it was but honest to deprive ourselves of these and deliver them without hesitation into the hands of our creditors. This took place according to the supreme decree of the 7th of January of the present year, the railroads being given over to the creditors, not for their corresponding value in bonds, but for the amount in hard cash that we had spent on their construction.

It was afterwards needful to seek, by reducing our public expenses and augmenting taxes, the highest "superavit" possible to give to our creditors.

This has been done by the decree already cited, establishing a payment of 4 per cent. annually, by means of £2 sterling on each ton of guano exported, to be deposited in the Bank of England, reserving to our creditors the right of obtaining for themselves that deposit from the exporter contracting with Peru, and to lay an embargo on the article exported.

In order to attain this object we have been forced to reduce by one-half our estimate of expenses, and to obtain more funds by taxing the people.

I do not know that it would have been possible to have done more.

It is true the payment of the external debt does not commence at once, but the reason is evident; through the events of the war our guano deposits are in possession of the enemy, and, therefore, in order to place their produce at the disposal of our creditors it will be necessary to re-obtain possession of them. Before that there is no possibility of our thus utilizing them.

We were in possession of guano, already exported into Europe, which we might at once have put into the hands of our creditors, and this would have been done had not their own interests been against it.

For, as I have already said, in consequence of the war, our guano deposits are in power of the enemy.

Consequently, and, even laying aside the great national interest in the maintenance of our dignity and right, it was necessary to decide between two steps: either to obtain from the guano stored in Europe the requisite funds to complete our armament, in order to recover by force the guano deposits, which will permanently furnish the payment of the external debt, or to yield to our creditors the comparatively small amount of the value of the stored guano, but thereby placing ourselves in the impossibility of speedily recovering the property which we destine to the payment of our debt.

Between these two extremes it was not difficult to decide. On the 7th of January last we signed a contract by which we deduct from the value of the guano stored in Europe merely the necessary amount to make up our armament, leaving the rest for an extraordinary amortization of the debt (Art. II of the supreme decree of the 7th of January, 1880).

The official acts to which I refer have been so planned that not even the exceptional situation of the war can damage the existing agreements with our creditors, but rather improve them.

By the terms of the compact, which took place in London, on the 7th of June, 1876, the fulfillment of which has, with reason, been demanded by the holders of our bonds, Peru was to appropriate from the value of the exported guano sold in Europe, the sum of £700,000 annually, leaving to the demands of the debt only the remainder of the yearly profits, which, however, in consequence of the mode of conducting the sale, have, up till now, been delusive. For this reason Peru will only take, and that for once alone, a portion of the value of the stock, renouncing the annual payments agreed upon, which would amount to a far higher sum.

With the object of obtaining from the guano sold in Europe sure funds for the war, and certain profit for the bondholders, it was needful to overturn the system employed till now in the exportation of guano; removing the causes which have rendered its value so profitless in the last few years.

Of these causes there were two: 1st. The ruinous competition between the house in possession of the guano formerly bought, "Dreyfus Brothers & Co.," and the present consignee, "Peruvian Guano Company Limited;" 2d, the insecure and variable profits according to the consignment and quality of the guano, instead of the sale of the entire stock at a fixed and uniform price.

Allowing the existence of the two mentioned houses in possession simultaneously of the market, and both of them with stock for sale, it is not difficult to see that the only means of doing away with the competition which reduced the products of the guano so low as to render it of no value to us, or to our creditors, was to divide the market between the two. The second cause of the evil could only be remedied by finding a purchaser of all the stock at a fixed and uniform price.

Now, no sensible person will deny that to obtain this result on a practical basis and with the speed which the situation demands, would give rise to disputes between the said houses. There was no other road then open, but to make an arrangement granting them all they claimed, in order to obtain:

1st. The much desired separation of the markets and consequent suppression of the competition.

2d. The attainment of the largest fixed and certain price possible for the European stock; allowing full liberty to discuss quietly and through the respective tribunals the rights claimed by the two houses. This has been obtained in the arrangement made with Dreyfus Bros. & Co., on the 7th of January, and in the additional contract of the same date which was first proposed to the "Peruvian Guano Company Limited."

By any other means the Government would only have given rise to misunderstandings which would have been prejudicial to itself and to its creditors, with no better result than that of rendering the situation worse than it was before.

As the Government cannot now dispose of any guano but that which is stored in Europe, it would be delusive and prejudicial to make any contract relative to the exportation of any. Delusive, because having to employ its means to recover the use of its deposits and to re-establish the export, and it certainly not being possible to consent that this should be effected, under the protection of a foreign power, overlooking the national rights of the country, there was nothing on which to base a contract. Prejudicial also, because every contract would cause needless disadvantages to the Peruvian treasury on account of the delay in the delivery of the article and the uncertainties of the struggles to recover it.

We had then to limit ourselves to the guano in possession of our agents, reserving till after the campaign that which is now in the hands of our enemy.

Everything that we could do has therefore been done with regard to the guano (considering our situation), in favor of the interests of our creditors, which are identical with those of the national treasury. The delusive income of its sales in Europe have been enormously increased and converted into a certain and fixed sum. The service of the debt agreed upon in the London contract of 1876, at 3 per cent. per annum, we have carried to 4 per cent., and with guarantees and securities of unfailing compliance. We have given in part payment properties of real value, such as all our railroads. And, finally, even in spite of the war, we have renounced the annual income latterly agreed upon with our creditors, leaving them the value of even the guano stored in Europe, receiving, once for all, only a portion of it; and that with the object of helping us to recover the deposits of guano which are now in the hands of the enemy.

The nitrate was, doubtless, another article in the hands of the government; and although it has not been considered in the arrangement for the payment of our foreign debt, we should not have hesitated for one moment in throwing it in, to serve our creditors better.

There were, however, two insurmountable obstacles to this: First, that the government had taken possession of the saltpeter mines from the proprietors, giving them in exchange documents which have never been canceled, nor can they ever be paid for with the other revenues of the country; in reality these mines do not belong to us, and it would have been equivalent to disposing of property which belongs only to the nitrate manufacturers.

The second impediment is obvious. The department of Tarapacá being occupied by the Chilians, any transaction relative to saltpeter would be purely chimerical, before turning them out. Even if we had a right to dispose of the nitrate, which is not ours, the opportunity has not yet arrived to place it at the disposal of our creditors. Among these there have been some who consider that Peru should yield to them the export of guano, and even of nitrate, in order that they may pay themselves, allowing so much per ton to Peru. The convenience of this step has been encouraged by the idea that as neutrals the bondholders would be allowed to export these articles, in spite of the actual possession of the enemy, and shielded by their respective flags. This would amount to the establishment of a sort of foreign protectorate over our territory, when we ourselves are fully able and determined to drive the enemy out, without need of foreign aid. No foreign government would lend their aid to such foolish pretensions; nor would Peru and its present government ever consent to such a thing

Laying that aside, and supposing that we had again obtained possession of our territory, no sensible government could possibly accept a proposition to allow the creditors to come and pay themselves.

Without a complete abdication of national rights and functions, it is not possible to transfer the administration of national resources, before first proving that the government is incapable of acting for itself. It would be like the affairs of a bankrupt being arranged by his creditors, and Peru, fortunately, does not yet find herself in that position.

Besides which, such a proceeding would not be a security even to the bondholders. So numerous as they are, belonging to all social conditions, and not even able to agree or act in unison, what would be the practical signification of giving up to them the management of the guano and nitrate? Would their interests be better guaranteed by the person or persons who would be appointed to represent them, than by a people of a government, who, although they may suffer disturbances, will always exist, and are not liable to the mistakes and errors of private individuals?

Supposing that Peru were to consent to transfer the management of the nitrate and guano to an imaginary body entitled "bondholders," the consequence would be that a speculator chosen by them (if this were possible) would undertake the extraction and sale of guano and nitrate, and the distribution of its profits in a manner which would not offer nearly such security as if this election were made by the government of the country; their responsibility would cease, but not their right of intervention, since a portion of the profits of this export have been given up to them.

It is not the interest of the large number of bondholders that produces the excitement of a few, and their attempts to take upon themselves the management of the guano and nitrate at all hazards. It is a gross speculation, fomented by the intrigues of Chili to their own advantage, but to the great detriment of Peru and her creditors; this fact they cannot ignore. All this is so anomalous and rotten that it is not worth the trouble of investigation; and if I touch upon it at all, it is merely because, last year this pretension made its appearance in a proposition presented by a very small number of Peruvian bondholders, and in one or two foreign newspapers.

The confusion in this affair has reached to such an extent, that there are even some who conceive the possibility of an understanding between the Peruvian bondholders and the enemy with whom we are at war.

We will do the greater portion of our bondholders the honor of believing that it has been far from their intention to share with the enemy the riches of Peru; for it is certain that that would be the only interest that would lead the latter to this international scandal. The respective governments of these could not help looking upon this as an offense against justice and the common interests of States. Finally, for us as for any other nation in a similar case, there is but one conclusion: The immediate canceling of all debts to such as should commence by disavowing the fact which existed between us in order to consummate one with our enemy to our detriment.

If such a thing should happen, however, it will only prove a gross injustice, of which the perpetrators would reap but little benefit, because Peru has the firm determination, and has the means wherewith to drive the Chilians out of the territory, which it is only occupying temporarily.

Not even during this occupation would such an attempt be profitable, because as the government has already declared in an international dispatch, the very ships used to export the nitrate and the guano abstracted from Peru would be only taking undue advantage of their flags, if neutral, which, for this very reason, would not protect them from being seized by us or in our name.

In conclusion, the official acts to which this dispatch refers, as will be very easily seen by the slightest examination, have consulted as much as possible our foreign credit, and with it, the interests of our foreign creditors. Any other steps will only be prejudicial to them as well as to the republic.

The new government which Peru has chosen, interpreting the national will, even in the midst of the preoccupations of the war, has, nevertheless, devoted its first attention to the service of our creditors. Seconded by them, as Peru has a right to expect, our government will have put an end to the damages they have had to suffer, much to the regret of the whole nation, which will thus be vindicated by practical and undeniable facts from the charges against her, owing to the blunders of her former rulers.

I trust that you will make such use of this communication as to make known its contents to our bondholders, as it is the particular desire of his excellency the chief of state, as well as mine, that they should be thoroughly convinced that Peru and her government are proceeding with loyalty, and feel the greatest interest in their rights, which will no doubt be proved by the terms of this exposition, and the painful frankness with which I have stated the declarations it contains relative to the former political period.

May God preserve you.

MANUEL A. BARINAGA.

DEPARTMENT OF FINANCE.

NICOLÁS DE PIÉROLA, Supreme Head of the Republic.

In view of the proclamation published in Iquique, on the 25th of February, by the general-in-chief of the forces of the Chilian army occupying Tarapacá; and,

Considering,

1st. That the de facto dominion exercised by the Chilian forces, and that only temporarily, over the Peruvian guano deposits, has not and cannot annul the seigniory and exclusive proprietorship by Peru of said deposits.

2d. That the right has not been accorded to the bondholders by their bonds of paying themselves by working themselves the guano; and that, even if such were the case, it would be indispensable that an agreement be previously made as to the mode of carrying out the same.

3d. That neither the whole nor much less any portion of the bondholders, in whose favor the guano contained in said deposits is hypothecated, could ever have it in their power to make such agreement with any other authority than with the Peruvian Republic, with which they contracted as the sole and absolute owner of that substance, and much less could they cede a part of the value thereof, thus constituting themselves auxiliaries of the enemies of Peru.

4th. That Peru finds herself by duty compelled to oppose the attempted defraudation, not only in the name of her own rights, but in that of the great number of her creditors, whose interests it is her duty to study.

5th. That, therefore, on the supposition that some portion of the said bondholders, as is insinuated by the proclamation referred to, have solicited from Chili a permission, which she has no right to grant, and which appears to all intents and purposes to be a collusion for the purpose of defrauding Peruvian interests, such bondholders have, by their own deliberate will, broken the compact on which their credit was based, at the same time inflicting serious injury to the national sovereignty, which they have ignored and set at naught.

I decree,

1st. That the proclamation dated and published in Iquique, on the 25th February, by the general-in-chief of the Chilian forces occupying the department of Tarapacá, be declared a felonious assault against the sovereignty of Peru and depredatory of the guano in her deposits.

2d. The bondholders, who may in reality have solicited the permission to which said proclamation refers, to extract guano in payment of their credits, have thus lost, ipso facto, their rights to establish their claims against Peru any time or in any form whatsoever.

3d. The Peruvian Government will pursue, without further limit than that of the force of which she may be able to dispose for the purpose, the vessels in which the exportation of the guano may be effected, and will confiscate them whatever flag may cover them.

4th. The diplomatic and consular agents of Peru abroad will demand from the competent authorities the embargo of any cargo of guano exported in virtue of the proclamation referred to.

The secretaries of marine and hacienda are intrusted with the execution, publication, and circulation of this decree.

Given at the government house in Lima on the 15th day of March, 1880.

N. DE PIÉROLA.
MANUEL A. BARINAGA.

NICOLÁS DE PIÉROLA, Supreme Chief of the Nation.

In view of the proclamation published in Iquique on the 23d of February last, by the general-in-chief of the reserved army of Chili, on the export and sale of Peruvian nitrate, manufactured in the department of Tarapaca, the rest of the orders given on the subject by the Chilian agents in that territory; and

Considering:

1st. That the military occupation of said department by the Chilian forces, is a transitory fact, which can by no means authorize the appropriation of the riches of that territory, whether they belong to private people or to the exchequer of Perú, against whom Chili neither has, nor ever has had, before or after the war, any demand whatever, the fulfillment of which she might have to enforce by this means.

2d. Consequently that the decrees contained in the said proclamation respecting the Peruvian nitrate, amount to an embezzlement, without any motive or protest whatever in its justification, but a scandalous abuse of power.

3d. That for this reason the manufacturers and exporters of nitrate are bound to resist the consummation of this felony by every means possible with the object of complying faithfully with their engagements, which cannot be modified or altered by a foreign authority, which has usurped the national sovereignty, on pain of the strictest responsibility.

4th. That if a neutral flag protect the enemy's merchandise, this principle cannot be applicable to extracted or embezzled merchandise, and therefore the neutral ships that offer themselves to carry the guano or nitrate of Peru on Chili's account, commit an abuse against their flag and cannot shelter themselves under the terms of the Paris Congress.

I decree:

1st. That the said proclamation of the general-in-chief of the Chilian reserve army, dated and published in Iquique on the 23d of February of the present year, and the rest of the orders relative to the same affair be declared a felonious assault against the sovereignty of Peru, and depredatory of her property.

2d. The Government of Peru will persecute, without further limit than that of the force of which she may be able to dispose for the purpose, all vessels in which the exportation of the nitrate may be effected, and will confiscate them, whatever the flag that covers them.

3d. The nitrate company being authorized by their contract to persecute all exportation and fraudulent sale of the nitrate, will do so especially in the case, employing every possible means to that effect.

4th. The manufacturers and exporters of the nitrate of Tarapacá, who are not able to prove that they have only yielded to superior force in defense of the interests of the Peruvian exchequer, will be responsible for the losses caused thereby.

The secretaries of marine and finance are intrusted with the execution, publication, and circulation of this decree.

Given at the government house, in Lima, on the 15th day of the month of March, 1880.

N. DE PIÉROLA.
MANUAL A. BARINAGA.

No. 245.

Mr. Evarts to Mr. Tracy.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, March 22, 1880.

SIR: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your note of the 9th instant, relative to reports which you have received, evincing the friendly relations which exist between the Governments of Peru and Bolivia, and also of its inclosure.

Accept, sir, &c.,

WM. M. EVARTS.

Señor Don JOSÉ CARLOS TRACY.

No. 246.

Mr. Christiancy to Mr. Evarts.

No. 137.] LEGATION OF THE UNITED STATES,
Lima, Peru, March 23, 1880. (Received April 13.)

SIR: Referring to my dispatch, No. 133, I have to say in continuation of the progress and incidents of the war, that since that dispatch we have no further reliable information of the depredations of the Chilian vessels along the northern coasts.

But on the 19th instant, as will appear by a slip from the South Pacific Times of this day, herein inclosed, which is believed to be entirely authentic, the Chilian vessels completely destroyed all the works for loading guano, &c., at the Chincha Islands.

It seems also, from various reports, that last week (the exact day I cannot ascertain) a Chilian force of from 2,000 to 3,000 men marched from Ilo to Mollendo, and that with some marines, who were near or arrived there about that time, they completely burned, sacked, and destroyed the town, railway, and railway station, wantonly destroying the lives of peaceable inhabitants, and in some instances ravishing women. I have seen no official account of this, but the British minister informs me that he has from the British consul, and that the facts are a disgrace to civilized warfare, though he says he thinks the cases of actual ravishing were but two. Some accounts state, and these in charity, I am inclined to believe, that some marines, with some insubordinate soldiers, who had broken open and sacked the custom-house, got intoxicated upon the liquors found there, and in this way were led into these excesses, and that the Chilian authorities intend to try the offenders by a court-martial. I hope, for the sake of humanity, that this may be the true version of the affair.

The orders, however, given by the Chilian Government to their fleet to destroy all the Peruvian ports, can hardly be carried out without great inhumanity and even barbarity, and that towards neutrals, English, Americans, French, Italians, and Germans, in whose hands, collectively, is most of the business and property in all these ports, many thousands of whom, if they are to be attacked without notice or opportunity of removing themselves or their property out of danger, are likely to lose their lives, or if they escape with these to be left penniless as many have already been.

But Peru, under her new régime, is beginning to show some signs of life, and is putting forth more vigorous efforts for national defense. And from what I have thus far observed, I do not hesitate to say, that if the present supreme chief had been in power from the beginning of the war, with the means which the former administration possessed, he would have accomplished much more than they did; and that his rule is about the best and most efficient form of government which it would be practicable to select for such a crisis and in such a country. I say this without intending any reflection upon the former government, and without surrendering any of my life-long antipathies to mere personal government. There are times and countries in which no other form of government can be rendered efficient.

But to proceed with the war. The Union, the only naval vessel left to Peru, except the monitor Manco Capac, at Arica, and the Atahualpa, at Callao, a wooden steam corvette, with 10 guns, entered the port of Arica before daylight on the 17th instant, taking arms, ammunition, &c., to reinforce the army in Arica; she was not seen by any of the enemies' vessels until she had been engaged some three hours in unloading cargo. Then the Cochrane and the Huascar opened the attack, which was continued for nine hours, aimed principally against the Union, which continued to fire from one side, while the unloading went on upon the other, she being also protected by the batteries on shore, and by the monitor Manco Capac. Finally, at 5 o'clock p. m., having discharged her cargo, she left at the south (instead of the north as the Chilians seem to have expected) and came safely away, arriving in Callao on the 20th, her loss having been one killed and eight wounded, the smoke-stack and some steam-pipes having been injured, and some slight injury to the vessel. I inclose a more detailed account, taken from the South Pacific Times of to-day.

This is looked upon by the naval officers (of the various nations) now here as a very gallant act, and one that would have been pronounced, beforehand, as desperate or impossible.

There have been for several days rumors, brought here by some of the passenger steamers from the south, of a conflict at Moquegua, between the Peruvians and Chilians, in which the latter are reported to have suffered a severe defeat, but I can find no reliable confirmation of the rumor.

I have, &c.,

I. P. CHRISTIANCY.

P. S.—MARCH 24. Since writing the above I have been furnished with the following information in reference to the affair at Mollendo, by Captain Brown, of the Alaska, and which he derives from Captain D'Arcy, of Her Majesty's steamship Shannon, just arrived from Arica, by which it seems that a force (Chilian) of about 2,000 went by transport to Yslay; that the object of the expedition was to march from that point and take Mollendo, in the hopes of being able to obtain railroad material for use at Ilo. The sea was so rough at Islay that only about 300 men could be landed. This small force marched on Mollendo to find it evacuated by the Peruvian troops, and abandoned by its citizens. The transport then entered Mollendo Bay and landed the troops. They had orders to bring away everything that would be useful, and to destroy all government property. The Chilians got drunk and set fire to every building, in spite of the endeavor of the officers to prevent such vandalism. They remained at Mollendo only one day.

I. P. C.

No. 247.

Mr. Christiancy to Mr. Evarts.

No. 138.] LEGATION OF THE UNITED STATES,
Lima, Peru, March 24, 1880. (Received April 13.)

SIR: I have the honor to inclose to you the circular issued on the 17th instant by the secretary of foreign relations of Peru to her diplomatic agents abroad, in relation to the sale of nitrates by Chilian authority in the province of Tarapaca, and to the inhuman manner in which Chili is carrying on the war.

Probably you will receive the same circular from Mr. Tracy, the chargé d'affaires of Peru, if not already received. On the subject of the nitrates, you are probably sufficiently informed already, or soon will be, through the representative of Peru. (See my dispatches Nos. 112 and 117.)

But I will say here that in view of what the Chilian fleet has already done, and what seems to be now threatened, there would seem to be some foundation for the complaint that Chili is violating the humane rules of modern warfare.

I have it from an eye-witness (not official) who was at Eten the other day when that town was fired into, that no notice had been given to the inhabitants of such intent, that there was no military force in the town, and no provocation given by the inhabitants by firing upon the assailants, or otherwise; and from the nature of the order of the Chilian Government to destroy all the Peruvian ports, the like course is to be expected in other ports of Peru.

In fact, I have the information (through Captain Brown, of the Alaska), obtained from the captain of a neutral naval vessel just arrived from Arica, that one of the highest authorities in Chili had just declared to him (the captain of the neutral naval vessel), that in the course of two weeks they not only intended to blockade Callao (which is all legitimate enough), but to appear before Chorillos (a mere watering place, nine miles from Lima, inhabited mainly by foreigners for health, and not even a commercial town, not having any military defense). That they intended to exact of that town a heavy contribution, and if not promptly paid, to destroy the town.

This mode of carrying on the war by Chili has produced a strong feeling here among all the representatives of foreign (neutral) powers—English, German, Italian, and French. A protest of the diplomatic corps has been suggested, and the representatives of one of those former, from whom I least expected it, who has a strong naval force here (but whose name I am not at liberty to mention), has suggested that the corps ought not only to protest against attacks made without notice upon the peaceable citizens of unarmed towns, but to insist that, before any of the towns upon the coast, even Callao, should be bombarded, a reasonable time should be given for the inhabitants, and especially neutrals, to remove themselves and property from danger, and for all foreign shipping to leave, and all foreign consuls to remove their archives and effects to some place of safety; and that, if these reasonable demands should not be complied with, then to place the vessels of war of the neutral nations between the Chilian fleet and the shore, with orders to return any fire the assailing fleet might make upon the town.

There will, doubtless, be a meeting of the corps in a few days, and, if so, I shall endeavor to act coolly and with circumspection; and while I shall avoid protesting against any of the regular and legitimate means which one belligerent may, according to the more humane practices of modern warfare, properly use to weaken its opponent, I shall nevertheless readily join in protesting against all such means as are supported only by savage or semi-barbarous practices of past ages, but condemned by the more humane codes of modern warfare. Humanity has some rights, even higher than those of belligerents.

I have, &c.,

I. P. CHRISTIANCY.

No. 248.

Mr. Christiancy to Mr. Evarts.

[Confidential.]

No. 139.] LEGATION OF THE UNITED STATES,
Lima, Peru, March 24, 1880. (Received April 13.)

SIR: I have the honor to state to you some things which, in the present state of affairs, ought to be treated as strictly confidential. In the first place there is a very general and very intense hostile feeling here against the English, and in the second place a very kindly feeling towards the United States.

---

* For inclosure, see document No. 244.

To some extent the feeling of hostility to England is well founded. England has more influence in Chili than any other power. Many of the business men in that country are English by birth or descent. The most efficient men in her navy, officers, engineers, and gunners are English, and there are many of them in her armies. The recent action of many of the English holders of Peruvian bonds, payable from proceeds of guano, in accepting the proffer of Chili to take guano under Chilian authority from Peruvian guano-beds, has intensified this hostile feeling.

The whole transportation business from Panama south to Valparaiso is in the hands of an English steamboat company, the Pacific Steam Navigation Company, running steamers from Panama to Callao, whence other steamers of the same line go on to Valparaiso, and vice versa, changing steamers at Callao.

Most of the officers of these steamers running from Callao south, especially, are believed, and perhaps with some reason, to be very strong in their feelings in favor of Chili in this contest, and are believed to furnish to Chili much more intelligence of what is going on in Peru than they furnish to Peru of what is going on in Chili. To some extent, I have no doubt this is true, though I do not think it true to the extent which the present existing feelings of the Peruvians lead them to believe. These southern steamers have doubtless often carried contraband for the benefit of the Chilians, and sometimes for the benefit of Peru.

On the other hand the steamers of the same line running north to Panama have often carried contraband for the benefit of Peru, and, possibly sometimes, for the benefit of Chili. In short, it was impossible for a line of steamers running along the coasts of both belligerents to do business at all, without occasionally violating the strict rules of neutrality; and, as I once told the English minister, and the agent of this steamship line, the only way in which they could preserve the duties of strict neutrality was to balance its infractions between the belligerents.

I would scorn to stir up or even encourage a feeling against the English or any other people here, or to take advantage of any prejudice wrongfully existing for the benefit of the United States. But it cannot be concealed that there is a strong feeling here against the English though they have now more of the foreign commerce of Peru than any other nation, and it is also evident to me that there is, to some extent, good ground for this feeling. The feeling, is so deeply fixed that it will require years to overcome it. And in the meanwhile, while we have done nothing to create this hostile feeling, and have not the power to allay it, the question occurs whether we should not be entirely justified in availing ourselves of the existing fact, and of the kind feeling of Peruvians towards the United States, in extending, as far as possible, our commerce with Peru. We can do little to extend direct trade between the two countries, unless we change somewhat our tariff on wool and on sugar, the two leading products of Peru.

But it would be in the power of enterprising Americans to establish a line of steamers on this coast from Panama to Callao, at least (and even to the southern boundary of Peru), which would effectually put an end to the business of the English line along the Peruvian coast, at least, and this of itself would tend rapidly to introduce American products into Peru.

I had an interview with Don Nicolás de Piérola, the supreme chief of Peru, a few days since, in which he expressed the most ardent desire for the establishment of such a line, assuring me that it would not only take the Peruvian business, but that the Government of Peru, if necessary, would give it direct aid. He promised me, in answer to my suggestion, that his government would furnish me the statistics, bearing upon the feasibility of such an enterprise. It occurred to me (that while I am not at liberty to correspond with individuals in the United States upon the subject) I might properly communicate the subject to you, and that you might have conference or correspondence with that class of enterprising Americans, who might find it for their advantage to inquire into the matter, and perhaps to establish such a line. Perhaps the Pacific Mail Company might think well of it.

The English line pays well, not only the main line to Panama, but the branch line north along the Peruvian coast. I submit these suggestions to your consideration, expecting before long to have the necessary statistics to enable business men to judge of the feasibility of the enterprise.

I have, &c.,

I. P. CHRISTIANCY.

No. 249.

Mr. Christiancy to Mr. Evarts.

No. 140.] LEGATION OF THE UNITED STATES,
Lima, Peru, March 24, 1880. (Received April 13.)

SIR: I have the honor to inclose to you the copy of a letter and protest from Mr. Montjoy, our consul at Lambayeque, which I have just received, in reference to the depredations of the Chilian fleet at Lobos Islands, and at Eten. The injury, as you will readily perceive, is much clearer than the remedy.

I shall, however, forward a copy of his letter and protest to our minister in Santiago.

I have, &c.,

I. P. CHRISTIANCY.

[Inclosure in No. 140.]

Mr. Montjoy to Mr. Christiancy.

CONSULATE OF THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA,
Lambayeque, March 17, 1880.

SIR: I have the honor to transcribe to your excellency the following report from Mr. Stalpe, of Lobos de Afuera Islands, of the proceedings of the Chilian cruisers at those islands, and also the attack made by the same vessels upon the port and town of Eten:

"LOBOS DE AFUERA, March 16.

"On the 10th instant there arrived here the Chilian corvette Chacabuco and transport Loa, which, after notifying the governor of their intent, proceeded to burn and destroy moles, platforms, cars, launches, &c., and to embark everything movable found on the islands, including mules, horses, live-stock, and provisions, as well from the company's stores as from the purveyor's store, over which the English consular flag was flying. In fine, they have completely stripped us of everything, and, as I telegraphed you on the 13th instant, I am sending the people away as fast as possible, leaving the contracted Chinamen until the last. In the interest of humanity and at my urgent solicitations, the commander, Don Oscar Viel, left me rice and charqui for eight days, and spared the steamer Ballestas, which he said was forfeited by her voyages being illegal, on my representation that she was absolutely necessary to transport the people to the mainland, as we could not depart upon the ships, which do not feel inclined to move at present.

"The commander assured me that his orders to take away everything were most positive. The mole is this time completely destroyed, and the loading may be considered as definitely suspended."

"Althongh the Chilians arrived within ten hours of being sighted, I was able to sink the launches at their buoys, whence I will presently raise them, and the ships saved three by sinking them on their bow chains; the launches which they could not dispose of in that way were seized and destroyed, and the steamer Aurora was burned."

The Chilians, as you will doubtless have heard, had fired seven shots from a Metrailleuse at the locomotive engine which was on the mole at Eten, and eleven shells at the town, which fortunately did no damage, owing to the elevation of the guns necessary to raise them over the bluff (50 feet high) which forms the coast, the shells passing over the town and exploding on the prairie (pampa) beyond. This, however, without notice or any provocation on the part of the inhabitants, who have no means of defense or preservation, except that of flying from their homes.

The commander of the Chilian naval forces notified us that his orders are to await a re-enforcement of ships and to destroy all the ports from Payta to Callao. A third Chilian ship joined the squadron at Eten, after which they proceeded to sea, and we have seen them no more.

The resolution of the Chilian Government, as expressed by the commander of the bombarding forces, Capt. Oscar Viel, to destroy the ports of the coast, will, no doubt, arouse your attention as also that of the other foreign diplomatic officers in Peru, from the fact that at least 90 per cent. of all the immovable property in those ports belongs to foreign residents, such as dwellings, storehouses, &c. What favorable effect the destruction of such property can have upon the result of the war is not very clear to me, and therefore I request your serious consideration of the disastrous effects of such acts upon the Americans engaged in commerce and trade on the coast—effects which destroy the strenuous efforts of our government and citizens for the last few years to promote and encourage trade and commerce with Peru, and to procure in this country an outlet for our manufactures and products. The solution of this difficult situation I leave to your excellency, as eminently qualified by your capacity and position. Still, I consider it to be my duty, as an officer of the United States, to protest, in the name of our government and of her citizens resident in this district, and I therefore, do now most publicly and solemnly protest against all such barbarous and inhuman acts as directed chiefly and solely against American and other foreign citizens and their lives and property, and declaring that such acts do not and cannot contribute in any manner towards debilitating or harassing the people or Government of Peru, with whom Chili is at war, but are evidently and solely acts directed with premeditation against neutral residents of foreign nations who are peaceably prosecuting their legitimate trade and commerce under the protection of the general law of nations.

The fact that a very considerable part of the property of neutral residents in those ports consist in immovable property—store-houses, dwellings, &c., which cannot be removed to a place of safety, makes evident the determination of the Government of Chili (to whom this fact is well known) to wage deliberate war upon friendly nations, their subjects or citizens. It being a notorious fact that the property of Chilians who were established in Peru has been not only not confiscated but respected and protected by the Peruvian authorities, makes the more anomalous and exceptional the case of other foreign residents in this republic; it appearing that they only being neutrals are to suffer the brunt of the rancor of Chili, and calls for immediate remedy. The property in several of these ports being chiefly American, imposes upon me the obligation to protect them in so far as my duty and desires will permit, to insure for them, their families and property, that security for which the recent accounts of the outrageous sacking and burning of the towns of Pisagua and Mollendo, where defenseless women were violated and murdered, and innocent children thrown into the flames to perish, justly cause them to fear. And the fact that almost the total population of those places were foreign residents, who continued to reside there in the fancied security of peaceful neutrality from such barbarous attacks on the part of the Chilian forces. In view, therefore, of these precedents and others which show the determination of Chili to carry indiscriminate disaster and calamity among the peaceful neutral residents, and which has called forth the unanimous and indignant protest of the diplomatic corps in Santiago, Chili, I again make solemn and public protest against the Government of Chili, in the name of the Government of the United States, and her citizens, and of those citizens of other nations not here represented who have requested me in this matter, and to declare that the United States Government will hold the said Government of Chili responsible, and will demand payment for her citizens for all losses and damages in their persons and property that they have suffered or may hereafter suffer by act of wanton hostility towards them not authorized by legitimate warfare, reserving the right to amplify and extend this declaration of protest as need or occasion may require.

And in order that the Government of Chili may not be ignorant of this solemn act, I request your excellency to forward copy to the minister of the United States in that republic to present to that government, and, also, if your excellency considers necessary or politic, to present this to the notice of the members of the honorable diplomatic corps in Lima, that they may act as each may consider best in the interest of his own citizens.

I have, &c.,

T. C. MONTJOY,
United States Consul.

No. 250.

Mr. Christiancy to Mr. Evarts.

No. 145.] LEGATION OF THE UNITED STATES,
Lima, Peru, March 31, 1880. (Received April 24.)

SIR: As an evidence of the delicate and dangerous position of many American citizens in Peru, their intense feeling against the manner in which Chili is carrying on the war, and their strong and earnest hope that the minister of the United States here should take some speedy and energetic action for their protection, I have the honor to inclose a copy of a communication, this day addressed to me by some sixty-nine American citizens and firms, resident in Lima, Callao, Chorillos, and Miraflores, and there are many more, I am informed, who are yet to sign.

I deeply sympathize with these citizens of the United States, and am disposed to accede to their request for protection, just so far as the principles of international law will permit me to go, but I cannot consent to violate any of the clearly recognized principles of that law, even to protect our own citizens domiciled in Peru. I can see no way in which I can aid those resident or doing business in Callao, except to insist that, if a blockade of that port shall take place, a reasonable time shall be given to neutrals to remove from the port, and, if a bombardment is to be had, that a reasonable time shall be given for all peaceable and unarmed inhabitants to remove with their personal effects beyond the reach of hostile shot. Callao is a fortified town, and an important military post of Peru, defended by forts, batteries, and an armed force. It is, therefore, a legitimate point of attack, and the town is so situated, with reference to its forts and batteries, that these latter cannot be attacked without endangering the town itself. As to a town thus situated and defended, I must admit that less length of notice may be required of the establishment of a blockade, or of the opening of a bombardment, than would be required in the case of an open, unfortified, merely commercial town, undefended by a military force. If bombardment of towns of the latter description is permissible at all, when no resistance is shown, no military force opposes (which I fear the lingering barbarism of past ages still recognizes as a part of international law, but which I think would be "more honored in the breach than the observance"), common sense and common humanity would seem, at least, to require a notice sufficient for all non-combatants to remove with their household goods out of the reach of the guns.

But, there is still another class of towns along or near the coast, such as Chorillos and Miraflores, which are not in any sense even commercial towns, nor defended by any military force or works, where vessels never land, but which are merely watering places of resort for peaceable people, and women and children for their health, but which are within reach of long range guns from the Chilian fleet. As to such towns a bombardment would be directly and exclusively against peaceable and unarmed inhabitants, and in my opinion no more permissible upon any sound principle, than the indiscriminate slaughter of the same unarmed, peaceable, and defenseless citizens anywhere in the interior. It would not be legitimate war in either case, except so far as might be necessary to reach an armed enemy near or beyond them, but simply wholesale murder, and ought to be condemned by all nations making any pretension to civilization.

But, I shall decide upon nothing hastily, nor until a decision becomes necessary. I met to-day the French, English, and German ministers, and the Italian chargé d'affaires at a breakfast at the French minister's. We had some consultation upon these matters. Some of them felt disposed to go a little further than I could go. But we are to meet again, ten days hence, or sooner, should the Chilian fleet make it necessary.

While I do not wish to take any such advanced ground as would interfere with the freedom of either belligerent to carry on the war in any legitimate manner, nor insist upon any restrictions to which we would not ourselves be willing readily to submit; yet, on the other hand, I do not wish American citizens to feel that their government will not go as far to protect them as other civilized and commercial nations are ready to go in protecting theirs.

I may have to act, to some extent, upon my own responsibility, as I shall probably have to act before I can receive instructions from the Department.

I have, &c.,

I. P. CHRISTIANCY.

[Inclosure 1 in No. 145.]

American citizens to Mr Christiancy.

To His Excellency the Hon. I. P. CHRISTIANCY,
Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary of the United States of America to Peru:

SIR: We, the undersigned, citizens of the United States, engaged in commerce, trade, and other occupations, now temporarily residing in Peru, most respectfully call the attention of your excellency to the orders given by the Government of Chili to its fleet, to burn and destroy every port on the coast of Peru, and to the fact that the last news from the south brings the notice that their fleet is preparing to come, if not already on its way, to destroy the towns and ports of this vicinity. We have the terrible example of the barbarous mode of warfare of the Chilians in the sacking and burning of Pisagua, and more recently Mollendo, Islas de Lobos, and Eten, where the most unparalleled crimes and indignities have been committed, together with a wanton and cruel destruction of foreign property. Our countrymen resident in those places have suffered to an immense amount. At Tumbes, Talara, Islas de Lobos, Eten, &c., the whole property plundered or destroyed has been that of our citizens or of those of other neutral nations. We are all well aware, sir, that under the present recognized international code the neutral resident in a belligerent country suffers equally with the native, but we cannot consent that the right of a belligerent be so far exercised that he be permitted to wage exclusive war against the neutral residents in his enemy's country. Thus far the greater part of the losses and disasters have fallen upon neutral residents, and should the designs of the Chilians be permitted to be carried out, almost every such resident will be reduced to destitution. The watering places of Chorillos, Barranco, Miraflores, and Ancon are only the resorts of invalids and convalescents. They are neither centers of trade, commercial ports, or military posts; and of the elegant and costly residences, a great portion pertain to neutrals, and are the abodes of their wives and children, who are now perturbed with fear and alarm at the impending danger, fears unfortunately too well founded, as we have seen, so far that the war as carried on by the Chilian fleet has been but the marauding attacks of pirates and buccaneers, with the exception in favor of those of the seventeenth century, that their valor led them to attack forts and fortified places to conquer and pillage; whereas we have seen during the last year that the bravery of the Chilian naval forces has been displayed mostly in attacks on the defenceless, where the groans of the sick, the supplications of women, and the wails of children have been the only resisting force, and where against such fearful foes plunder, conflagration, murder, violation, utter ruin, and disaster have accompanied their footsteps, and to such an unwarranted and barbarous extent has this proceeded as to call forth the unanimous and indignant protest of diplomatic representatives of all civilized nations at Santiago, Chili.

Callao, the great center of foreign trade with Peru, is a city of 35,000 to 40,000 inhabitants, of which more than two-thirds are neutrals. Around the ancient fortresses of the Spanish rule, has grown up an important commercial town of almost exclusive foreign enterprise; and, although international law provides that the fortified places of the enemy are legitimate points of attack, still, to-day, the enormous range of the instruments of modern warfare permit an insignificant force to destroy, almost with impunity, large and populous cities; and, as we have seen at Arica and other points on the coast, the Chilian ships of war have preferred to make the peaceful and neutral dwellings of those places the objective point of their artillery rather than risk a possible disaster from a duel with the batteries, and that hitherto, women and children have been the victims of those valorous encounters.

Considering, therefore, that we have well grounded precedents to fear the destruction of our homes and property, and the sacrifice of the lives of ourselves, our wives, and children; and further, that the greater number of the ports of Peru are mere business and commercial centers or health resorts of invalids, surrounded, for leagues, by inhospitable and impracticable belts of desert where the means of flight or removal are scanty and altogether inadequate.

And, further, that we have left our country to establish its trade and extend its commerce and influence in Peru and to contribute to its greatness under the solemn pledge of protection and such interpretation of the code of international warfare as may mitigate and avert unnecessary attacks upon our lives and the destruction of our property when such operations, as in the present case, do not conduce either to the termination of the war or to the harassing or weakening of the enemy.

And, further, that we cannot see or suffer that the strenuous efforts of our government, our citizens, and ourselves, exerted for a number of years to the end of asserting and securing our proper amount and proportion of trade, commerce, and influence, in this South American republic, be destroyed in a manner not justified by legitimate warfare nor with due regard to the rights of neutral citizens of friendly nations.

And, further, that Chili, founded upon the bombardment of Valparaiso in 1866, by the Spanish naval forces, in which foreign residents were the chief sufferers, seeks to-day to spread dismay and terror among their enemies by the devastation and destruction of neutrals and non-combatants upon whom has fallen, so far, almost the entire consequences of the war.

Therefore, we here most earnestly petition your excellency to take such steps as you may, in your superior wisdom, consider best adapted for the protection of ourselves, families, and property, and to make on our behalf a most earnest and effective remonstrance against the proposed attacks upon our defenseless residences in Chorillos, Barranco, Miraflores, Ancon, Chimbote, etc., and to exert the whole weight, influence, and discretionary power of your position, to mitigate and avert the evils of a bombardment of the town of Callao, limiting so far as diplomacy may avail, the danger and destruction to the combating forces of the forts and ships of war, and to the end and purpose of using all precautionary means of redress and protection in our power. We here make this public and solemn collective protest against the manner in which Chili has, and proposes to carry on the war, as inhuman, barbarous, and unworthy of a civilized nation, and against the destruction of ourselves and property by her armed forces, who have thus far directed their attacks against us, peaceful and non-combating neutrals, and we do demand and claim, through our government, just indemnity and payment from the Republic of Chili for all losses, damages, whatsoever, which we have suffered or may hereafter suffer, through the acts of Chilian forces not justified by the rules of modern civilized warfare.

We are, sir, your excellency's most obedient servants.

Lima, March 30, 1880.

JOHN C. MEIGGS,
A. A. BLIVEN,
(and sixty-six others.)

No. 251.

Mr. Christiancy to Mr. Evarts.

No. 148.] LEGATION OF THE UNITED STATES,
Lima, Peru, April 6, 1880. (Received April 27.)

SIR: I have the honor to inform you that I have written to J. W. Merriam, our consul at Iquique, under date of 5th instant, giving him an exact copy of so much of your dispatch No. 65 as relates to his official duties, which he will, of course, follow.

I have, &c.

I. P. CHRISTIANCY.

No. 252.

Mr. Christiancy to Mr. Evarts.

No. 151.] LEGATION OF THE UNITED STATES,
Lima, Peru, April 6, 1880. (Received April 27.)

SIR: Referring to your dispatch No. 63, I have the honor to inclose herein a copy of my official note to the secretary of foreign relations of Peru, of April 3 (No. 39), calling his attention to the eighteenth article of the treaty between the United States and Peru, and expressing to him the views entertained by our government of the effect of that treaty as to American vessels transporting nitrates from that part of Peru now in the military occupation of Chili.

I desire further to say, that from the first appearance of the circular of the secretary of foreign relations I had taken the same views of the clause to which you allude that you have expressed in your dispatch. But as I knew that Peru had no cruisers which could safely get south of Iquique for the present, I looked upon that clause in the decree as brutum fulmen, an abstraction so far at least as the United States were concerned; and thought it good policy to allow the other foreign representatives here to deal with that abstraction, until it should become a practical question.

I have, &c.

I. P. CHRISTIANCY.

[Inclosure 1 in No. 151.]

Mr. Christiancy to Señor Calderon.

No. 39.] LEGATION OF THE UNITED STATES,
Lima, Peru, April 3, 1880.

MONSIEUR LE SECRÉTAIRE: By reference to the letter of Hon. Wm. M. Evarts, Secretary of State of the United States, to your excellency, dated the 1st of March last, which I had the honor to send to your excellency to-day, it will be seen that I am expected to explain to your excellency the views which my government entertains of that part of your excellency's circular of the 14th January last, which in effect, declares that the flag of a neutral and friendly nation shall not protect from capture, by Peruvian cruisers, nitrates shipped under the authority of Chili from that part of Peru in military possession of Chili, upon such vessels of neutral and friendly nations.

In the performance of the duty thus imposed upon me, I have the honor to call your excellency's attention to the eighteenth article of the treaty of 1870, between the United States and Peru, and to inform you that in the opinion of the Government of the United States the shipment of such nitrates upon vessels owned by citizens of the United States is directly and expressly covered and protected by said article, which in substance (among other things) provides, that free ships shall give freedom to goods, and that everything shall be deemed free which shall be found on board the vessels belonging to the citizens of either of the contracting parties, although the whole lading, or a part thereof should belong to the enemies of either, articles contraband of war always excepted; and that, in the opinion of the Government of the United States, if a Peruvian cruiser should capture an American vessel, or seize its cargo, or any part of it, because that cargo, in whole or in part, should consist of the nitrates referred to in the circular of your excellency, such capture or seizure would constitute a clear violation of said eighteenth article of the treaty.

The Government of the United States, therefore, confidently trusts that the Government of Peru, upon having its attention thus called to the treaty, will, from its friendly disposition to the United States, and its desire to preserve inviolate the faith of its treaty, either so modify the circular referred to, or will give such orders as may prevent an act which would give to the United States such just cause of complaint.

The undersigned will not permit himself to doubt that, upon a careful examination of the treaty, this reasonable request will be readily complied with.

I improve this new opportunity to renew to your excellency the assurance of my high regard and esteem.

I. P. CHRISTIANCY.

Exc'mo Señor Don PEDRO JOSÉ CALDERON,
Secretario de Relaciones Exteriores, &c., &c., del Peru.

No. 253.

Mr. Christiancy to Mr. Evarts.

No. 156.] LEGATION OF THE UNITED STATES,
Lima, Peru, April 14, 1880. (Received May 5.)

SIR: I have been ill for the last ten days, a portion of the time confined to my bed, which I hope will be sufficient excuse for any deficiency in my correspondence. I dictate this to my clerk, being unable myself to write. The military situation is substantially as follows:

The Chilian land forces have taken Moquegua and Tarata, and are reported now to have reached Locumba, while the Peruvian forces, under the command of Montero, have left Arica and are now supposed to be at Tacna, except perhaps a thousand men left manning the batteries and defending Arica. There are also understood to be several thousand of the Peruvian forces at Arequipa and its vicinity. It is also reported that there are some of the Bolivian forces at or near Tacna co-operating with Montero. We hear various rumors that a battle has been fought in that vicinity, resulting in favor of the Peruvians. I think all such report as yet wholly unreliable.

By water the Chilians have full command of the sea, and on Saturday last, the 10th instant, a portion of the Chilian fleet, consisting of Blanco Encalada, Huascar, Angamos, Pilcomayo, and Matias Cousino, and two other vessels (whose names are not yet ascertained), with some torpedo launches, appeared at the northern entrance of the port of Callao, just before daylight, and an attempt was made by a torpedo launch to blow up the Peruvian corvette Union, which failed on account of the launches and timber collected around the Union for the purpose of making repairs. On the same day a notice was given by the Chilian admiral to the dean of the consular corps of Callao of his intention to blockade that port, and giving eight days for the neutral vessels then in port to load, unload, and depart; at the same time intimating his intention to attack the military defenses of that port, and that it might become necessary for him, in attacking such military defenses, to fire upon and endanger the town.

The fair inference from his language was that the same period of eight days would be given for the peaceable inhabitants to remove themselves and their movable property out of the range of the guns. The consular corps subsequently requested of him to extend the period of eight to fifteen days, to which he, on the 13th, by letter addressed to the corps, assented to add to the former notification two days, making the period ten instead of eight days, and at the same time signifying that the same length of time would be given for neutrals and non-combatants to remove from the town before he should open fire upon its defenses, unless, in the mean time, he should be provoked to an earlier attack by being fired upon by the Peruvian forces, or an earlier attack should become necessary by some demonstration made by such Peruvian forces.

Considering that Callao is a fortified town, defended by forts, batteries, and military forces, which, by the laws of war, the Chilian fleet have a right to attack, I deem this notice entirely reasonable.

In the mean time it is understood that the regular line of mail steamers from Panama to Callao and back will be allowed to enter and depart with the mail and passengers, but we have no assurance, as yet, that a similar privilege will be accorded after the ten days expire, the 20th of this month.

It is therefore quite probable that it may be several weeks before I shall again be able to communicate with you.

The inhabitants of Callao are fleeing with their property to Lima, and American citizens both of Callao and Lima are appealing to this legation for protection, and though I am out of health, and have no means of protecting them, except such as the United States flag and the position of a minister of the United States may give, I propose to remain at my post and afford them all such protection as may be in my power; though my own private affairs make it imperative that I should leave for the United States at the first moment I can receive leave for that purpose, twice already requested, but not yet answered. I should not now leave until the present crisis is over, if I had the express permission of the President; but I may be allowed again to call the attention of the Department to my two letters requesting a temporary leave of absence, of which I may avail myself at the first moment that the public interest will permit.

I inclose, herein, a copy of the South Pacific Times of the 13th instant, showing substantially the present position of affairs here.

I will further say that the paper currency of Peru has, since the notification of the blockade, fallen to eight paper soles for one American dollar.

I have, &c.,

I. P. CHRISTIANCY.

No. 254.

Mr. Christiancy to Mr. Evarts.

No. 157.] LEGATION OF THE UNITED STATES,
Lima, Peru, April 18, 1880. (Received May 17.)

SIR: Though scarcely able to be out of my bed, yet, as events are becoming interesting here, I make this effort to keep you informed.

Referring to my last dispatch in reference to the progress of the war (No. 156) I will say that since that dispatch the diplomatic corps have had two meetings, and at the meeting yesterday all unanimously approved and signed the communication to the Chilian admiral, a copy of which I here inclose with translation.

The third point is understood to apply at present to the city of Lima, six miles from the Bay of Callao (but it might be reached by shot from very long-range guns from the Bay of Chorillos, say five miles, the intention to do which has been declared), and of course generally to all other towns due notice of the bombardment of which shall not have been given.

I will further say that immediately after my last dispatch, No. 156, at a meeting of the ministers of England, France, and Germany, and the chargé d'affaires of Italy, it was unanimously resolved that the notice of the blockade given by the Chilian admiral applied only to Callao.

Knowledge of this resolution was, I suppose, conveyed to the Chilian admiral, when he declared that the notice was intended to apply also to the towns of Chorillos, Miraflores, and Magdelena; but I am satisfied from information received through the British minister, who, as well as the commander of the English naval vessels here, seems to be on very friendly if not intimate terms with the Chilian admiral, that the Chilian fleet do not intend to fire upon the three latter towns unless provoked by hostile demonstrations therefrom, though the blockade will apply to them.

The regular line of English mail steamers (upon which we all have to rely for our mails north and south) is no longer permitted to enter Callao. But the port of Ancon (20 miles north) is as yet open, and a steamer from there to Panama is expected to leave on the 22d, by which I expect this to go.

On the 20th, at 12 m., we expect the bombardment upon Callao to commence. The Chilians have eight vessels here, among which are Blanco Encalado, the Huascar, and the Angamos, and it is believed they will have more before the attack is commenced. Our consul, Mr. Clayton, has, with my advice, removed the archives of the consulate on board the Onward to await the result.

On land, the only news of importance since my last is that Campero, after having put down the revolution against him at La Paz, has joined Montero, the Peruvian commander at Tacna, with from 2,500 to 3,000 men (and that more are coming from Bolivia), making at present, of the allies at Tacna, some 13,000 or 13,500 men. The Peruvians are also said to have some 7,000 at Arequipa.

Such, in brief, is the present situation, but a few days may change it all.

In the mean time the Peruvian paper soles are quoted for exchange at from 6¾ pence to 7 pence, or, in American gold, at, say from 13 to 14 cents per sol.

I have, &c.,

I. P. CHRISTIANCY.

P. S.—I inclose copy of the answer of the Chilian admiral to the communication of the diplomatic corps above referred to.

P. S. 2d, April 21.—No bombardment yet commenced on Callao.

[Inclosure 1 in No. 157.—Translation.]

Diplomatic corps to Admiral Riveros.

LIMA, April 17, 1880.

The undersigned, after reading the note of Admiral Riveros, to the consular corps of Callao, are convinced that, in conformity to his declarations, the chief of the blockading squadron, on making use of the rights of war, coinciding with his own interest, is aware of the rights due to neutral individuals and their properties. Nevertheless, the correspondence between Admiral Riveros and the consular corps leaving some points uncertain, they deem it their duty, in order to protect the interests of those under their charge, as well as to cover their responsibility towards their respective governments, to make the following declaration:

1st. That they reserve all questions in regard to the damages which may be caused, without military necessity, to the persons and property of neutrals.

2d. That they especially make these reservations in case of the bombardment of open and undefended localities.

3d. They do so likewise in the case of a bombardment of a town not expressly designated in a previous notification.

The undersigned hope that the Chilian admiral will be pleased to acknowledge the receipt of these reservations, and avail themselves of this occasion to offer him the assurance of their high consideration.

The minister of Ecuador:

J. DE T. PINTO.

The minister of the Argentine Republic:

JOSÉ DE URIBURU.

The minister of France:

E. DE VORGES.

The minister of the United States:

I. P. CHRISTIANCY.

The minister of Great Britian:

SPENCER ST. JOHN.

The minister of Germany:

V. GRAMATZKI.

Chargé d'Affaires of Italy:

J. B. VIVIANI.

Charge d'Affaires of Brazil:

MELLO Y. ALVIM.

[Inclosure 2 in No. 157.—Translation.]

Admial Riveros to the diplomatic corps.

APRIL 18, 1880.

The undersigned has the honor to acknowledge the receipt of the esteemed collective note, dated yesterday, which the honorable diplomatic corps of Lima, has been pleased to address to him.

That valuable communication has for object to establish declarations and reservations on the following points:

1st. In the case that the persons and property of neutrals will be damaged without military necessity.

2d. In case of the bombardment of open and undefended localities.

3d. In case of the bombardment of a town not expressly designated in a previous notification.

The undersigned, while sustaining the declarations and communications which, in the proper opportunity, addressed to the honorable consular corps of Callao, and to the commanders of the naval forces of neutrals in this harbor, has the honor to acknowledge the receipt of that respectful note, placing to the knowledge of the honorable gentlemen who signed it that, by the first opportunity, he will make it his duty to transmit the original to the Supreme Government of Chili.

The undersigned commander thinks proper to repeat here his declaration that, as far as the necessities of war and his instructions will permit, he will never forget the duties which the principles of humanity impose upon him, and the respect due to those who have not the character of belligerents.

The undersigned has the honor to offer, &c.,

No. 255.

Mr. Evarts to Mr. Christiancy.

No. 76.] DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, April 19, 1880.

SIR: I have to acknowledge the receipt of your No. 140, in which you inclose a report of Consul Montjoy, relative to the destruction of neutral property at the Lobos Islands by Chilian vessels.

The Department had received information from our minister at Santiago of the issuance of the order, which appears to have been in part carried out at these islands, on the occasion referred to, and also of a representation made by the minister to the Chilian Government, to the end of procuring a modification of the order in the interest of neutral citizens of the United States. This government will not fail to protest to the minister of Chili in Washington against the conduct of the war, to the injury of citizens of the United States; and should Peru pursue a like course to that of Chili, it will be expected that you will make due representations to the minister of foreign affairs, to prevent damage to the citizens of this country and to restrict the collisions of a military character, the cruelties and devastations of the war.

I am, &c.,

WM. M. EVARTS.

No. 256.

Mr. Evarts to Mr. Christiancy.

No. 77.] DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, April 23, 1880.

SIR: I transmit herein for your information a copy of a late* instruction sent to Mr. Adams, the newly-appointed minister of the United States to Bolivia, respecting a proposition of Chili touching an exchange between those countries of prisoners of war.

I am, sir, &c.,

WM. M. EVARTS.

No. 257.

Mr. Tracy to Mr. Evarts.

[Translation.]

PERUVIAN LEGATION,
New York, April 26, 1880. (Received April 27.)

SIR: Yesterday, Sunday, the 25th instant, this legation received, through the Peruvian consul-general at Panama, a telegram from the Supreme Government of Peru, which reads as follows:

Callao blockaded. Peruvian Government has declared the inlets to be major ports, and the ports between Casma and Pisco to be minor ports.

---

* For inclosure see correspondence with United States minister to Bolivia, document No. 22.

I have the honor to communicate this to your excellency for such action as you may deem proper, and I take advantage of this opportunity to renew, &c.,

JOSÉ CARLOS TRACY.

No. 258.

Mr. Evarts to Mr. Tracy.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, April 28, 1880.

SIR: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your note of the 26th of April instant, communicating information of the blockade of Callao, &c., and to say in reply that I have acquainted the Treasury Department with the intelligence received.

Accept, sir, &c.,

WM. M. EVARTS.

No. 259.

Mr. Christiancy to Mr. Evarts.

No. 159.] LEGATION OF THE UNITED STATES,
Lima, Peru, April 28, 1880. (Received May 24.)

SIR: Referring to my dispatch No. 157, I have the honor to state that no authentic news has since been received as to the operations of the armies in the south; that on the 22d instant, at 2 o'clock p. m., the Chilian fleet, blockading Callao, or rather that part of it consisting of the Angamos, the Huascar, and the Pilcomayo, opened fire upon the defenses of Callao, and upon the monitor Atahualpa, the corvette Union, and the transport Oroya, which latter were inside the mole, and in great part protected by it.

The fleet fired about 120 shots, killing one man on the Union and wounding one or two others; wounding 4 on the Atahualpa, and on the Rimac 1, killing one man in the arsenal and three horses, and wounding two men, also wounding one man at the south battery.

This seems to have been the extent of the injuries inflicted by the bombardment.

The batteries fired somewhat more shots than the fleet, though most of them fell short of reaching the fleet, which was some 5,000 to 5,500 meters from the shore, and had the advantage of longer range guns. We have no information of the casualties which may have happened to the Chilian fleet.

The fleet drew off before 5 o'clock p. m., and the attack has not been renewed, though the blockade is strictly kept up.

We hear rumors to-day that the port of Ancon will be blockaded on the 1st May, but no notice yet given. Should it be so our mails can only be sent from Chimbote, unless some arrangement shall be made between the neutral naval vessels and the Chilian admiral to send and receive the mails.

I have, &c.,

I. P. CHRISTIANCY.

P. S.—Whether the Peruvian batteries threw shot to the full extent of their range may be doubtful. I can only say that if I had been in command of those batteries they should not, on that occasion, have thrown their shot more than half or two-thirds their range, for reasons which must be obvious to every one who knows that the guns of the fleet had really the longest range.

I. P. C.

No. 260.

Mr. Christiancy to Mr. Evarts.

No. 162.] LEGATION OF THE UNITED STATES,
Lima, Peru, May 5, 1880. (Received May 31.)

SIR: I have the honor to inform you that since my dispatch, No. 159, absolutely nothing of any moment has taken place on land or sea in this Chili, Peru, and Bolivian war, so far as intelligence has been received here.

The attempt to bombard Callao has not been repeated, and it seems to be the opinion of the neutral naval officers here that it will not be until the result between the land armies in the south shall be known.

The Peruvians, since my last, have erected another water battery of heavy guns.

The blockade of Callao is strictly enforced, but the port of Ancon, 20 miles north (communicating with Lima by railroad), is still open, and no notice yet given of intention to blockade, though we are expecting it daily.

I am, &c.,
I. P. CHRISTIANCY.

No. 261.

Mr. Christiancy to Mr. Evarts.

No. 165.] LEGATION OF THE UNITED STATES,
Lima, Peru, May 12, 1880. (Received June 5.)

SIR: I have the honor to inform you that on the 10th instant, at 2 o'clock p. m., the Chilian fleet renewed the bombardment of Callao and its defenses, and continued it until after 5 p. m., all the vessels of the fleet participating, and firing together about 364 shots, and the batteries and Peruvian shipping replying with less than half that number.

The range of the 500-pound Rodman guns and of the 1,000-pound guns of the batteries was found to be greater than expected, and many of the 500-pound guns fired clear over the enemy's vessels. But very little damage was done by the guns of the Chilian fleet, none to any of the batteries. The Peruvian corvette Union and the transport Oroya, as well as the transport Chalaco, were slightly injured, and a few men wounded upon them. The only report of killed and wounded given by the government is 3 killed, of whom 2 were women, and 12 wounded, mostly non-combatants. But our naval officers think there must have been more, and that the Peruvian authorities purposely conceal the facts.

The Huascar was hit once or twice by guns from the batteries, and the Peruvians claim that they also hit the Blanco and the O'Higgins; but if this is so, it is clear that no serious damage was done.

Yesterday notice was given by the Chilian admiral of the blockade of Ancon, giving eight days, of which this is the first, for neutrals to quit the port. How we are to get our mails away after that is not yet determined.

We have rumors here of some successes of the allied army in the south. It is said they surprised and took Moquegua with all the sick and wounded of the Chilians, amounting to some 1,600 men, and some 800 soldiers on duty. But this needs further confirmation before it can be taken for granted.

No one here yet talks of peace.

I am, &c.,

I. P. CHRISTIANCY.

No. 262.

Mr. Christiancy to Mr. Evarts.

No. 172.] LEGATION OF THE UNITED STATES,
Lima, Peru, May 28, 1880. (Received June 26.)

SIR: I have the honor to inform you that I have this moment received the letter of Mr. Osborn of 13th instant, from Santiago.

I have now only time to refer you to a copy of my letter to Mr. Osborn of May 7, which I inclose, and to say that, so far as yet known here, the situation is exactly the same as when that letter was written.

It is generally believed here that the land armies in the south must, ere this, have come to a decisive engagement, and all efforts for and prospect of bringing about a peace, hinge upon that result. I will say here that the supreme chief of Peru fully understands the position of the United States in reference to peace, and cordially approves it, and that Bolivia will undoubtedly concur with Peru. But I must say also, that I have no assurance from him that he would be ready to treat for peace on any such terms as indicated in Mr. Osborn's letter, even in case of a crushing defeat of the allied forces in the south. And my own impression is that he would not listen to such terms under any calamities the Chilians may be able to inflict.

On the other hand, should the allies be successful in the land contest, I think there might be a fair opening for efforts to secure peace, as the terms in that event would not be likely to be so humiliating to Peru.

I have, &c.,

I. P. CHRISTIANCY.

[Inclosure in No. 172.]

Mr. Christiancy to Mr. Osborn.

No. 60. (Misc.)] LEGATION OF THE UNITED STATES,
Lima, Peru, May 7, 1880.

SIR: Referring to the instructions of the State Department in the Secretary's dispatch of March 9, in reference to influences likely to be brought to bear upon Chili on the one side and Peru especially on the other, to constrain them to make peace, and the policy of our government in such a contingency, as well as the policy of friendly mediation, and referring you also to the instructions of identical effect which I am assured have been sent to you, I will say that I am ready and anxious to contribute by any legitimate means in my power to bring about a peace, and to carry out the policy indicated by our government, at the earliest practicable moment, and in doing so I wish to co-operate cordially with you.

But while the present dead-lock continues, and especially until the land armies now in the south of Peru shall have had a decisive battle, so as to show that one or the other is clearly victorious on land, I see nothing which can be done here in the desired direction. I hope you will watch matters in Chili as relates to these questions and keep me posted.

I am, &c.,

I. P. CHRISTIANCY.

No. 263.

Mr. Christiancy to Mr. Evarts.

No. 173.] LEGATION OF THE UNITED STATES,
Lima, Peru, June 7, 1880. (Received July 2.)

SIR: Referring to my dispatch No. 165, in relation to the progress of the war, I have to say: 1st, in relation to the blockade of Callao and Ancon, that it has been effectual as a blockade, but that several bombardments of Callao have since been made by the Chilian fleet with little effect and no decisive results; the damage done to the town and Peruvian shipping not amounting to one-tenth the cost of the ammunition expended by the Chilian fleet.

Many attempts have been made by both sides with torpedoes, but all have been utter failures so far as relates to the blowing up of vessels. Yet the fear of them had evidently operated to keep the blockading squadrons at this and other ports at a respectful distance, especially at night. There have been several encounters of the torpedo launches in the bay of Callao at night, none of which was of much importance, except that of the night of the 24th May, in which the Chilians suffered most, losing their steel torpedo launch, the best in their service, which cost from $125,000 to $150,000, and was of greater capacity than any of the Peruvian or any other of the Chilian launches.

I send you the official report of this transaction from Lieutenant Galvez, the hero of the occasion, as published in the South Pacific Times. If it is not entirely intelligible, it is probably owing to the fact that the transaction itself was somewhat confused, even to the actors themselves. (See South Pacific Times, of June 4, inclosed, article marked $\frac{1}{1}\frac{1}{7}\frac{1}{1}$.)

So much for the naval operations.

On land. For many weeks we were without any reliable news of importance. For some two months the hostile armies appeared to be playing what the French call cache-cache, hiding from each other, till finally the allied forces, with the exception of 3,000 to 4,000 men at Arequipa, under Colonel Leiva, took up their position at Tacna; and the Chilians, after several times changing their base on the coast and their position in the interior, owing, it is supposed, to the difficulty of transporting their artillery and stores, concentrated their forces at or near Sama, and moved upon Tacna in force.

As far as the facts can be ascertained, almost all of which came from Chilian sources, and mostly unofficial, an affair of outposts took place near Tacna, on the 25th May, in which the Chilians had the advantage. On the 26th the battle became general, and was continued into the 27th, when the allied forces were driven from their positions and from the town of Tacna, and the Chilian forces took possession of the town, the allies retreating and taking up a strong position at Palca. (See the map inclosed, made by my clerk, who is familiar with that region, and has given the names and positions of several of the places not found on any general map.*)

The first intelligence we received here of the above transaction was June 1, when the small Chilian steamer Tolten arrived and communicated with the Chilian fleet, and the only dispatch the steamer brought was "Tacna taken; Campero prisoner."

On the 5th instant the English man-of-war Ganet arrived here, having left Arica on the 2d instant, and the only entirely reliable news she brings is the following sent me by Captain George Brown, of the United States steam frigate Alaska.

At Arica all that was known on the 2d, when she left, was that the Chilians occupied Tacna on the 27th ultimo, after two days' fighting, and drove the Peruvians into the hills and beyond the point where the water supply could possibly be cut off.

There are only 1,500 Peruvian troops in Arica: off the port are three Chilian transports loaded with troops and supplies; also two men-of-war.

By various reports since heard from Peruvian, and some from Chilian sources, it is left in great doubt whether Campero was wounded or taken prisoner; it is reported that Montero was the general wounded, and not taken prisoner. It is also reported, and generally believed here, that Colonel Leiva, with 3,000 or 4,000 men from Arequipa, was at Ilabaya or Sama on his way to join the main body of the allies at Pachia, but how much of this is reliable it is at present impossible to say.

What is reliable among all the contradictory reports is: 1st. That the allies suffered a defeat at Tacna; that they have fallen back towards the Bolivian frontier, having lost 8 pieces of cannon and several Gatlings, a loss which cannot be supplied. 2d. That both parties fought well, and the contest was sanguinary, but that the Chilians, by superiority of number and superior artillery and cavalry, triumphed. 3d. That a part of the Chilian army his been sent to attack Arica from the land side, while the Peruvians have not over 1,500 men and some 14 heavy guns, formerly directed to the seaport, now turned to the interior to defend the town; and the probability is that the next steamer from the south will bring the news of the capture of Arica.

It has been currently reported, and the foreign ministers here generally believe the report, that as soon as the Chilians should be clearly victorious on land in the south they would propose terms of peace, but this has not yet been done, and the government here do not yet consider the disasters in the south at all decisive; and the spirit of the people here, and of the supreme chief who represents them, is such that it is felt to be useless to propose to them negotiations for peace until they recognize the utter hopelessness of continuing the contest. All the representatives of foreign powers here are, so far as I can judge, as anxious for peace as I am.

My relations are entirely cordial with the supreme chief; and should Arica be taken, as seems now probable, and should the Chilians then offer terms of peace, I shall venture to make to him such suggestions to this end as I think just and advisable under all the circumstances of the case; but I do not intend to go further than to suggest. I will not take upon myself the responsibility of advising, as this might be looked upon as officious. Chili, I am satisfied, wants peace as well as Peru; but the great obstacle, in my opinion, is likely to be the exorbitant demands of Chili, flushed with victory by land and by sea. But I think there will be quite a general concurrence of all the foreign representatives here to aid in moderating such demands; and if the effort of negotiation shall once take the shape of a proposition from either party there would be good ground for believing that a proper result might be reached.

---

* The map referred to is omitted from the present publication.

The first step would naturally be an armistice. The Chilians would probably demand, in the first instance, the whole province of Tarapaca, but this might, in the progress of negotiation, come down to a proposition for a pecuniary indemnity for the expenses of the war, with a claim by Chili to hold the province as a security for the indemnity until it should be paid, &c. But if the principle of indemnity can be once agreed upon, and perhaps the original question of boundary, the foundation is laid for arbitration; and from what I know of the disposition of this government, and believe of that of Bolivia, as well as what Mr. Osborn writes of the disposition of Chili, I think the United States would be selected as the arbitrator. Complications may arise as to Bolivia, and for this reason it is particularly unfortunate that Mr. Adams has not yet arrived. But I hope for his arrival by the next steamer.

No effort of mine shall be wanting to bring about a peace. But I have great fears that this government, embittered as it is by defeat, may refuse any terms. Chili cannot conquer Peru, though she may financially ruin her, and this is not in the interest of any nation represented here.

I have, &c.,

I. P. CHRISTIANCY.

[Inclosure No. 1 in No. 173.—From the South Pacific Times, June 4, 1880.]

THE ENGAGEMENT BETWEEN THE PERUVIAN AND CHILIAN LAUNCHES.

(Official report.)

The following is a translation of the official report of Lieutenant Galvez of the engagement between the Peruvian launch Independencia and two Chilian launches on the night of 24th ultimo, already alluded to:

LIMA, May 29, 1880.

To the Captain of the Navy, Chief of the Staff of the Department:

In compliance with my duty I have to advise you of the occurrences during the night of the 24th ultimo, when I was fulfilling the commission confided to me by your department, which had placed under my orders the steam-launch Independencia.

At 11 p. m. I took command of the launch, having under my orders the midshipman San Martin and thirteen men, consisting of engineers, firemen, the coxswain and seamen; the doctor, Don Manuel Ugarte, also embarked, having obtained permission to accompany me on the expedition.

From 11 p. m. until 2 a. m. nothing extraordinary occurred, and having carried out the orders I had received I was about to return, when I observed that a Chilian launch was advancing from the point of the island to the anchorage of the neutral vessels.

As was my duty I went to meet her and fired at her four shots from our cannon. Unfortunately the ring-bolts gave way and the gun was rendered useless.

The Chilian launch, of far better speed than ours, placed herself out of our reach, and I then gave orders to retire. A few moments afterwards I saw the launch I had chased, accompanied by a larger one with two funnels, was coming towards me to cut off my retreat.

The greater speed of these launches enabled them to effect their object, and in a few moments they were within musket shot. I gave orders immediately to fire from our Gatling gun and the muskets we had, but another accident happened: the Gatling gun got out of order, and I found myself without the means of attack against the enemy, who was much stronger, and who was now rapidly advancing.

I had with me in the launch a torpedo loaded with 100 pounds of common powder, and without loss of time, and assisted by Señor Ugarte, I fired the fuse, using for this purpose the flame of the lamp, and so held the torpedo until the bow of the Chilian launches touched our stern. Señor Ugarte and myself threw the torpedo on the deck of the enemy's launch, but as it occurred to me that the five-minute fuse might allow them time to cut it or throw the torpedo overboard, and thus frustrate my project of blowing them up, I fired at the torpedo with the arm I had, causing it to explode at the second shot. Señor Ugarte and myself were thrown by the explosion to the bottom of our launch, and, although I remained stunned with the blow, I felt that the enemy was firing upon us with his Gatling guns. In a few moments the water inundated the Independencia, and as I felt she was going down I tried to get rid of my great-coat and muffler; in this I was assisted by the seaman, Pablo Villanueva, who had suffered a slight contusion; alone it would have been impossible for me to do so. The Independencia was going down, taking us with her, but fortunately for me as soon as she touched the bottom I made an effort to save myself and reached the surface, when a few moments afterwards I was taken prisoner by a Chilian boat.

With my face and hands burnt by the explosion of the torpedo, blind, and almost deaf in the first moments, and much bruised by my fall, I scarcely know what happened to me.

I was taken to the Blanco Encalada, and removed from her the same morning to the Keelder Castle, having received in both vessels the assistance which my condition required.

Among the Chilians who spoke with me I found Lieutenant Señoret, who informed me that the launch which he commanded had sunk, together with ours, but more fortunate than myself, he had only received a slight wound on the arm.

I cannot give you any exact account of the damages caused to the enemy, but on our part I feel certain that we have to deplore the loss of the intrepid Señor Ugarte, the midshipman, San Martin, and some others, because at the bottom of the Independencia I felt three bodies close to me when she went down.

It is my duty to recommend to the supreme government the good behavior of the crew of the Independencia; they all did their duty, especially Dr. Ugarte, who distinguished himself and did not hesitate to sacrifice his life in assisting me to throw the torpedo which destroyed the Chilian launch and our own, rather than allow the latter to be taken or destroyed by the enemy. I have also to recommend the seaman, Pablo Villanueva, who, at the moment when the Independencia was sinking and when we were completely under the fire of the enemy, their launches being much higher out of the water than ours, offered to sacrifice himself with me, and assisted to save my life.

Your honor will please to bring to the knowledge of the supreme government this report. There remains to me the satisfaction of having done on my part all that I could in obedience to my duty as an officer and a citizen.

May God have you in his keeping.

Not being able to sign, in consequence of my wounds, my brother, Don Justiniano A. Galvez, does so at my request.

For José Galvez, second lieutenant of the monitor Atahualpa.

JUSTINIANO A. GALVEZ.

No. 264.

Mr. Christiancy to Mr. Evarts.

[Confidential.]

No. 175.] LEGATION OF THE UNITED STATES,
LIMA, PERU, June 10, 1880. (Received July 29.)

SIR: I have the honor to inclose to you the copy of a confidential letter of Mr. Osborn, our minister to Chili, dated May 21, in reference to our consul at Iquique. Also copy of my letter of to-day to Mr. Merriam, the consul.

Also copy of my letter to Mr. Osborn in reference to same, of this date.

I have, &c.,

I. P. CHRISTIANCY.

[Inclosure No. 1 in No. 175.]

Mr. Osborn to Mr. Christiancy.

[Confidential.]

LEGATION OF THE UNITED STATES,
Santiago, Chili, May 21, 1880.

SIR: The mail which leaves Valparaiso to-morrow will close here in a few minutes and I must therefore make my communication quite brief.

I have just returned from a conference with the minister of foreign relations, wherein, among other subjects, was discussed some proceedings of our consul at Iquique, Dr. Merriam.

While I was at Iquique in April, Dr. Merriam informed me of the talk which he had had with Captain Lynch, the Chilian military officer in charge, in which Captain L. had intimated that he (Merriam) was not properly observing his obligations as a neutral official, and had suggested that it might become necessary, in a certain contingency, to send him out of the district. At Dr. Merriam's suggestion I conversed with Captain Lynch in regard to the matter, and in the course of our talk I requested him, if he had any complaints to make of the doctor, to correspond with his government at Santiago on the subject. Knowing well of the strong sympathies of Merriam for Peru, a fact which was not at all singular in view of all the circumstances, I took occasion to caution him regarding his course and especially against the transmission of correspondence, by virtue of his privilege, to or for the enemy. He answered me that nothing of the kind had been done by him, and promised me faithfully that it should not. Captain Lynch, however, was quite confident that the consulate had been used for the purpose of carrying on a correspondence in the interest of the Peruvian Government. In view of the promises and assurances made me by Merriam—voluntary of course, for I asked him for none—you can judge of my astonishment to-day at being told by the minister that the government had positive evidence that our consulate in Iquique was being used as had been charged.

I intimated that I had doubt in regard to it, when he produced an envelope (which had been inclosed in another addressed to Merriam, as consul) directed to the minister of war at Lima, and containing official communications from General Montero. I saw the direction on the envelope and the message which it contained, and know that there can be no mistake about it. They assure me that it was forwarded from Arica under cover to Merriam as consul, but how they got possession of it I did not learn.

There are some troops at Iquique, and I fear that if this should become known, Merriam's life there would not be safe. I think he ought to leave there, and that some other person should be named to take temporary charge of the consulate. If you should see fit to make an appointment there for temporary purposes, I do not doubt that the Chilian officials would recognize it. There are two Americans in Iquique by the names of Holcomb and one whose name I have forgotten, living with Dr. Watrous or Walters. Either of them is perfectly competent and either would, I judge, take charge of the consulate if asked by you.

Very truly, yours,

THOMAS A. OSBORN.

[Inclosure No. 2 in No. 175.]

Mr. Christiancy to Mr. Merriam.

[Confidential.]

LEGATION OF THE UNITED STATES,
Lima, Peru, June 10, 1880.

DEAR SIR: I have just received a letter from Mr. Osborn, our minister at Santiago, in which he says the Chilian minister of foreign relations, complains that your consulate is being used for the transmission of correspondence to the Peruvian Government, and that the minister produced to him (Osborn) an envelope which had been inclosed in another addressed to you as consul, directed to the minister of war at Lima, and containing official communication from General Montero. Mr. Osborn thinks that your life will not be safe in Iquique, when this is known there. Unless, therefore, you can explain this to the authorities there in such manner as to show that you had been imposed upon, and unconsciously sent this correspondence, I think it would be wise for you to avail yourself of the first safe opportunity to come up to Lima or some other place in the north until the present war is closed.

Our consuls, and even our ministers may sometimes be imposed upon in such matters, but we must not knowingly transmit letters or communications for either belligerent. We must preserve strict neutrality.

I am, &c.,

I. P. CHRISTIANCY.

[Inclosure No. 3 in No. 175.]

Mr. Christiancy to Mr. Osborn.

[Private and confidential.]

LEGATION OF THE UNITED STATES,
Lima, Peru, June 10, 1880.

SIR: I received your confidential letter of May 21, in reference to our consul at Iquique, and his forwarding letters from Peruvian officers to the Government of Lima.

I inclose you the copy of a letter I have written this day to Mr. Merriam, our consul at Iquique.

I do not think the case one in which I ought to make any appointment to fill his place, even if he should resign. He is accredited only to Peru and holds only the exequatur of that government. And Iquique being in the full possession of Chili for the present, it is only matter of grace and favor from both governments that he could exercise the duties of a consul there, and so it would be with any successor while things remain as they are. I will write the Secretary of State and let him act his pleasure in the matter.

I have, &c.,

I. P. CHRISTIANCY.

No. 265.

Mr. Christiancy to Mr. Evarts.

No. 177.] LEGATION OF THE UNITED STATES,
Lima, Peru, June 13, 1880. (Received July 29.)

SIR: Referring to my dispatch No. 173 of June 7th, on the progress of the war and the question of peace, I have now to say that nothing of importance has since occurred at Callao or Ancon—no further attempt at bombardment.

But in the south the news since received here shows that the defeat of the allies at Tacna was more crushing and decisive than appeared from the first reports. At the time of my dispatch No. 173 of June 7, it was reported and believed here that Montero had fallen back to Pachia or Palca with some 4,000 men, but it now appears he fell back to Tarata, and that he can muster there only some 1,500 and that the Bolivian force (amount not known) are on their way back to Bolivia, their commander reporting that they go to raise more Bolivian forces to renew the contest.

It also now appears that the Bolivian general, Campero, provisional president of Bolivia (who was commander-in-chief of the allied forces), on the eve of the contest, May 25, resigned, both as provisional president of Bolivia and as commander-in-chief of the allied forces, placing himself and Bolivian forces under the orders of the Peruvian general, Montero. But it seems from a report received here from General Montero that he did not accept the resignation, and that Campero continued as commander-in-chief during the battle, at least.

We have no intelligence yet of Colonel Leiva, with the Peruvian force from Arequipa, having formed a junction with Montero, so that the Chilians may now be said to be practically in full possession of all Tarapaca and so much of the Department of Moquegua, as lies south of about 17½ degrees south latitude.

It would also seem that a large part, if not the main body of the Chilian army (we have no account of their numbers) were turned back from Tacna, after the victory there, and attacked and took Arica from the land side by assault, on tne 7th June, taking all the Peruvian forces there prisoners, except those killed in the assault; and that the Peruvian monitor, Manco Capac, finding herself without support and being attacked from the land side, as well as by the Chilian fleet, was sunk by her officers with several launches, and that the officers and crew are prisoners on the Chilian fleet.

I inclose you translation: 1st, of the Chilian account of the capture of Arica; and, 2d, an account of the same from a neutral source. These being matter of detail, I do not send same in Spanish, as I have stated above the general result.

I also send you a translation of the report of General Montero just received here.

From such results it would certainly seem to disinterested observers that "the end cometh," or ought to come soon. And I know it is the common opinion of all the representatives of neutral nations now at Lima, and of the neutral naval officers here, that Peru, if guided by wise counsels, must accept any reasonable terms of peace which may be offered by Chili, for, though Peru has now he re at Lima and Callao an army of from 20,000 to 22,000 men, well armed and equipped, and might, and probably would, succeed in repelling any land force which Chili could bring here, yet Chili, having full command of the sea, may transport her army to any part of the Peruvian coast, and her fleet may make a permanent conquest of all the insular possessions of Peru, and even capture much more of the mainland, it being impossible for Peru to transport troops and munitions of war by land in time to meet such force, owing to the nature of the country.

In view of the present situation, I ventured, yesterday, to call upon the supreme chief, and in a confidential conference I explained to him that, from what I had heard from various sources (unofficial), I thought it quite probable that the Chilian Government, having now gained a decisive advantage by land in the south, would offer terms of peace, which would probably be sent through some member of the diplomatic corps here, and that, should such an event take place, while I would not venture to advise him, he would, I knew, permit me to suggest for his consideration, whether the present condition of affairs did not render it for the interest of Peru to receive and consider such proposition, and whether, if the war was continued, he could expect as favorable terms as at present; that the propositions which might in the first place be made by Chili, now flushed with victory, might be exorbitant, yet, if negotiations were once entered upon, counter-propositions might be made and answered, and perhaps reasonable terms (under all the circumstances) might in the end be reached; that to this end a great point would be gained if an armistice could be agreed upon, and negotiations fairly opened, &c.

He was already aware of the position of our government, and I intimated to him again that if at any time the combatants should indicate a desire for its good offices in bringing about a peace, they would be readily given; that I did not ask him for an immediate answer to these suggestions, but only threw them out for his consideration, &c., and if at any time he thought I could, in any legitimate way, contribute to a peaceable solution, he had only to let me know.

He received my suggestions in the kindest manner, and, though he did not say so in so many words, I thought I could perceive by his manner that he would be glad to secure peace on any reasonable terms, and would feel grateful to our government for any effort which might lead to such a result.

I am, in common with the rest of the diplomatic corps here, daily expecting some proposition from Chili for peace, as she is now in a condition to make such proposal; and should it be made, however extravagant it might be, I have hopes that it would, through the influence of the representatives of friendly nations, both here and at Santiago, be in the end modified down to such reasonable limits that Peru could accept without too much humiliation.

But Peru is not in a condition now to offer terms, only to receive them; and, if Chili should not make any proffer of peace, I think the contest will continue for some time.

All the neutral nations (except possibly Ecuador, the Argentine Republic, and Brazil) have a common interest in putting an end to this war. None of them want to make any conquests or to gain territory here, but all seek commercial advantages only. And even England, whose people haye been somewhat partial to Chili in this war, and to whom Chili may also feel a partiality, would, on commercial grounds, be quite as much interested in the commerce of Peru as in that of Chili, unless indeed Chili should conquer so large a part of Peru as to make her commerce of more importance than that of Peru, which, however, is not so at present.

I hold myself ready to take any step, and to go anywhere, in the interest of peace.

A few days, or, at most, a few weeks will probably determine whether any effectual steps can be taken in that direction.

JUNE 14.

I have just time to add that, at the instance of Mr. de Vorges, the French minister, a meeting of the diplomatic corps was held to-day, for consultation upon the present state of things, the result of which was that the dean of the corps (Mr. Pinto, envoy extraordinary and minister plenipotentiary of Salvador) was requested to see the supreme chief, and assure him that if Chili should make a proposition for peace, all were ready to afford him their good offices to that end.

But it is now rumored (as coming from the Chilian admiral in the Bay of Callao) that the popular feeling in Chili is so strong against Peru that the Chilian Government dare not propose terms of peace as they intended. I give this as a rumor only.

General Adams, minister to Bolivia, has just arrived here, and attended the conference with me.

I have, &c.,

I. P. CHRISTIANCY.

[Inclosure No. 1 in No. 177.—Translation.—From the newspaper "el 21 de Mayo," Chilian source.]

THE CAPTURE OF ARICA.

IQUIQUE, June 8.

Arica was attacked yesterday at daylight.

The third of the line opened fire upon the citadel, where the Peruvian forces were concentrated. The citadel was taken at the point of the bayonet; there were found 450 of the enemy killed and the remainder taken prisoners.

The fourth of the line commanded by its second chief, the gallant St. Martin, attacked the fortress called the Morro, which was likewise taken at the point of the bayonet, where were found killed Commanders Moore and Bolognese, Peruvian commanders of the place. At 7.30 a. m. the officers of the Manco-Capac, seeing that the forts were lost to them, sunk their vessel in 12 fathoms of water; they did the same with the steam-launches. It is believed all this can be saved.

The Peruvians blew up two of their forts with dynamite.

The enemy's loss is 700 killed, 100 wounded, and 600 prisoners. The rest of their forces could not escape, the retreat being closed by our cavalry.

The national flag waved over all the ports at 8.30 a. m.

[Inclosure No. 2 in No. 177.]

Neutral letter.

ARICA, June 7.

On the morning of the 5th the Chilians sent a flag of truce, intimating the surrender of the place, to which the commander-general answered that it was his intention, and that of his officers, to resist with all his might, and to fulfill their duty.

Much courtesy was displayed on both sides.

Then the artillery opened fire and continued doing so during the 5th and 6th. This last day the vessels of war took part in the combat, keeping at apparent and safe distance from the forts.

The neutral vessels, having refugees on board, retired some five miles.

This morning (7th) at break of day the Chilians attacked the forts on land, as well as those defending the port.

After a serious resistance the two eastern forts were taken, and a struggle took place to capture the Morro, which was finally accomplished at 7.30 a. m.

The Peruvians blew up the three forts of the port and sunk the Manco Capac.

The vessels did not enter into combat to-day; the captain and crew of the monitor took to their boats. They were all taken prisoners by the Itata, where Commander Logomarcino is also to be found.

The Cochrane received a shot on the 6th, which killed 26 men. The Covadonga received three shots.

[Inclosure No. 3 in No. 177.—Translation.]

GENERAL-IN-CHIEF OF THE FIRST ARMY OF THE SOUTH.

TARÀTA, May 29, 1880.

To the Secretary of War:

In fulfillment of a painful duty which cannot be avoided, I communicate to your excellency the result of our combat on the 25th instant with the Chilian army, having no intelligence up to this moment from the commandant generals of our first army of the south.

By order of the commander-in-chief I took command of the right flank of the allied army; the left flank was assigned to Colonel Eleodoro Camacho.

The artillery opened fire at 7.30 a. m. until 11 a. m., when that of the musketry began. The enemy's fire was directed mostly towards the left flank, for which reason the commander-in-chief sent to me for reinforcement, which order I immediately complied with, sending the Bolivian battalions, Alianza and Aroma, under my command. Soon after sending these the fire became general. The commander-in-chief asked for more force to guard the left flank, and without hesitating I sent battalion Second Provisional of Lima. The commander-in-chief will, I hope, justly appreciate the gallant behavior of this distinguished corps.

The reinforcement sent to the left flank deprived me completely of the reserve force.

And without any other force than that of the front line, we resisted the double attack of the enemy by the flank and rear, until our brave soldiers were obliged to retreat towards Tacna, in order to renew the combat there, owing to the immense number of the enemy.

Being persuaded that my plan had failed, I left Tacna after 5 p. m., retreating as slowly as was necessary to give vigor to our soldiers and be ready to fight again, in case of being pursued.

In the allied army there were troops of both republics, those of Bolivia following the road by San Francisco, while ours followed the road towards the place from where I write and am now engaged in its reorganization.

The unfortunate result of the combat of the 25th is owed merely to the excessive number of the enemy, and not to the bad quality of our men. It is so certain that our troops fought gallantly, that out of 12 battalions under my command, 6 commanding officers and one commander-general have been killed, whose names will be retained with pride in the history of our country.

Besides this serious loss, we have to lament that of many subordinate officers, not taking in account the large number of wounded, which list will be forwarded to your excellency as soon as the commanding generals send in their report to Colonel Velarde, chief of the staff.

The necessity of leaving forces in Arica, in order to defend it, disabled me from presenting more than 8,000 men against 20,000 of the enemy, and before that immense superiority of number the gallantry of our troops was as useless for success as the manly enthusiasm shown in those supreme moments by the heroic citizens of Tacna.

If the result of this combat has not met our hopes, it has again proved that our army is not deficient in enthusiasm and courage; my mind influenced by the sorrowful impression of the unexpected disaster, my confidence revives, considering how common amongst us magnanimous and grand deeds are done.

If this war be continued, as I hope it will be, it will assure us the final triumph, if we avail ourselves as we ought to of the merit and spirit of our troops, and of the teaching of bitter experience. Republics like Peru are neither annihilated nor subdued by a partial defeat, which should and ought to bring forth the ultimate victory over the enemy.

Be your excellency pleased to bring to the knowledge of his excellency the supreme chief, this brief report, assuring him at the same time the pain and grief caused to the Peruvian army by the death of General G. M. Perez, chief of staff of the allied army, and the mortal wound of Colonel Eleodoro Camacho, commander-in-chief of the Bolivian army.

God guard your excellency.

L. MONTERO.

No. 266.

Mr. Christiancy to Mr. Evarts.

No. 178.] LEGATION OF THE UNITED STATES,
Lima, Peru, June 19, 1880. (Received July 29.)

SIR: Referring to my dispatch No. 117, on the progress of the war and the prospects of peace, I have to say that no conflict of arms has since taken place, either by sea or land, so far as known here. But on the 17th instant notice was given by the Chilian admiral of the blockade of Chancay, some 18 miles north of Ancon, and that 48 hours only were given for neutral vessels to quit the port.

There was, however, an American vessel, the Spartan, Captain Crossley, in that port, who represented to me that he could not get on board the necessary ballast in that short time; and there was also an English vessel in a like situation. I therefore suggested to Captain Brown, of the Alaska, that it might be well for him to see the Chilian admiral on the subject, which he did yesterday and obtained three additional days' time for the purpose, for the benefit of all the neutral vessels in that port.

I may, I hope, properly add here that Captain Brown is very highly appreciated by the officers of all the neutral naval vessels here.

From all the information which has yet reached here though unofficial (a part of it comes, however, from * * , verbally reported by him to the officers of the last English mail steamer from the south), but generally believed here by the foreign legations, as well as by the public at large, the Chilian soldiery committed the most cruel excesses at Arica, upon the capture of that town, killing and robbing indiscriminately all the people they met in the streets and houses of the place, and behaving more like a band of roving savages than like a regularly organized soldiery of a civilized nation, and though they, in a modified sense, respected our flag, so far as our consular agent was concerned, not taking the liberty to kill him, yet that they completely stripped him of his personal property, taking even his clothing.

Such are the reports, the truth of which, however, I cannot vouch for. The consular agent has not yet written me, or rather I have received nothing from him. Some allowance, doubtless, must be made for the license of the soldiery in a place taken by storm. But their conduct seems, so far as property was concerned, to have been the same as at the taking of Mollendo, when there was no resistance and no opposing military force.

For the question of peace, I refer you to my next dispatch No. 179.

I have, &c.,

I. P. CHRISTIANCY.

No. 267.

Mr. Christiancy to Mr. Evarts.

No. 179.] LEGATION OF THE UNITED STATES,
Lima, Peru, June 20, 1880. (Received July 29.)

SIR: Referring to my dispatch No. 177, upon the progress of the war and the question of peace, I have now to inform you that on the 14th instant (the day after the dean of the diplomatic corps and the French minister had called upon the supreme chief in the name of the corps, as stated at the close of my dispatch No. 177), there appeared in the Patria and in El Peruano the address or proclamation of the supreme chief to the nation, a copy of which I here inclose, marked, with a translation from the South Pacific Times.

On the 16th instant appeared in the Patria (official paper) the "Protocol of the preliminary bases of the federal union of Peru and Bolivia," a copy of which, with the translation, I here inclose. Also the "Supplementary protocol of the preliminary bases of the union of Peru and Bolivia," of which I inclose copy, with a translation.

The proclamation is substantially in accord with the answer given by the supreme chief in person to the dean of the diplomatic corps and the French minister the day before. And those best acquainted with the supreme chief, and his personal characteristics, seem generally to believe that he spoke his real sentiments in that proclamation, and that he relies much for his future success upon the arrangement for a federal union with Bolivia, which, though not to take effect until December, 1880, it is quite generally believed will prevent further danger from the intrigues of Chili, to detach Bolivia from the Peruvian alliance, and to aid in partitioning the southern portion of Peru; and it is the general opinion among the best informed Peruvians and foreigners here that such federal union, if carried into effect, will be highly and permanently beneficial to both Peru and Bolivia, though, in the mean time, revolutions may take place in Peru, and especially in Bolivia, which may prevent the union, but it is believed the general public opinion in Bolivia and Peru is and will remain in favor of the union, and such is my impression from the best information I can obtain.

The effect of the publication of these protocols has been to raise the market value of the paper currency here, which had fallen to 5 pence per sol, in exchange on London, and which is now freely granted by English houses here at the rate of $6\frac{1}{4}$ pence per sol.

On the other hand it is easy to see that the bold and defiant tone of the proclamation may be susceptible of an interpretation consistent with and even favorable to peace. The supreme chief may have realized the fact that he would not be likely to obtain reasonable terms of peace by showing any evidence of despondency or want of confidence in the ability of Peru to retrieve the calamities of the war, and to snatch victory from defeat. He may have deliberately concluded that the best mode of procuring fair terms of peace from Chili was to show a bold and defiant front.

If the first interpretation of the intent of his proclamation be correct, I see no prospect of peace for the next year at least; if the second be the correct interpretation, then much, if not all, will depend upon the question whether Chili will now offer terms of peace. She is now in a position to do so without national humiliation, while Peru is not; and I think the war will continue indefinitely, or until Peru should be effectually conquered, before she will beg for a peace under defeat.

But if Chili should now make an offer of peace, though her terms might, at first, be extravagant, if negotiations could once be opened, I have still strong hopes that by counter-propositions and further negotiations with the influence of the diplomatic corps here and at Santiago, the terms could be so modified that Peru might accept them; but this is matter of opinion only, in which I may be mistaken.

In the mean time, I, in common with the diplomatic corps here, am still expecting some proposition of peace from Chili. If Chili makes no such offer, I have no definite opinion when or how the war is likely to end. I shall carefully bear in mind your instructions in reference to the means and the manner of bringing about a peace.

I have, &c.

I. P. CHRISTIANCY.

[Inclosure 1 in No. 179.]

[From The South Pacific Times, June 15, 1880.]*

The Supreme Chief to the Nation:

FELLOW CITIZENS: Our patriotism has just received a rude shock. The unexpected check sustained by our first army of the south, brought about by a series of errors, and which can only be explained by the impatience of our army to meet the enemy, has given to the latter, at great cost, the useless occupation of Tacna and Arica, after a most heroic and memorable resistance.

A people bold and firm, who feel that they deserve to triumph, receive with pride, as does Peru, those checks, which only dishearten the weak.

It is well! By the pain with which we count our victims will be forged the sword of justice with which we shall repel our invaders. The blood shed claims vengeance, and shall have it, ample and complete. The example of our martyrs makes soldiers spring up by thousands, and there is not in Peru one who does not feel proud of them. Chili, conqueror, will find its conquests very dear. Peru to-day is to be feared a hundred times more by Chili than at the commencement of the campaign, and recovers in mistortune the strength forgotten in the days of confidence and tranquillity.

Chili does not understand, cannot understand, what to a generous and high-spirited people means hearths trampled under foot, the blood of its sons shed, and the majesty of the nation outraged by those who should tremble at its anger; and judging us by themselves, they have dreamt that they could obtain the peace they covet, in order not to succumb to our inevitable and legitimate triumph.

Yesterday Chili dreamt also in our intestine struggles, but Peru and Bolivia have to-day only one voice, one thought. Chili sought to destroy the alliance, and all that she has reaped is the making of two peoples one only. She attempts to hem us in by a blockade, but will only hasten the solution of our internal questions, and by so doing enable us to recover that strength which to-morrow she will look upon affrighted.

Chili is building up day by day with her ephemeral successes her own ruin, and by each of her costly blows wastes the strength which might be able to resist us at a future time. Our resources are untouched, but theirs are coming to an end. They are living on what they borrow, to their own ruin and to the undeceiving of the deluded persons who discount their barren triumphs. They have played in Tacna a stroke of fortune which is utterly useless to them, which prostrates them and makes us arise more vigorous and determined than before.

Let them burn; let them efface our undefended towns on the coast; let them lay waste our fields, if they can. We are determined to all, save the renouncing the vindication of our right, the ceding one inch of our soil, the asking from us, to save themselves a peace, which they will never be able to force upon us.

Fellow countrymen, you have confided to me the recovery of our national rights trampled under foot without even a pretext. My task, therefore, is to seek the recovery of our rights without rest, seek it at any cost, seek it until it be obtained. Behind me stand six million men. And when I fall, fortune, which may deny to me the being present at the triumph of my country, will not deny me, I trust, the right to die in its defense, secure of victory.

Justice is with us. Victory has never been denied to those who, fighting for their home and country, become worthy of them by their determination and self-sacrifice.

Lima, June 13, 1880.

N. DE PIÉROLA.

[Inclosure 2 in No. 179.—Translation.]

Protocol of the preliminary bases of the federal union of Peru and Bolivia.

In Lima, capital of the Republic of Peru, on the 11th day of June, in the year 1880, the undersigned plenipotentiaries of Peru and Bolivia, having met in the hall of public audience of the secretary of foreign relations and worship, and after having exhibited to one another their respective powers and found the same to be sufficient and in due form to proceed to stipulate and agree upon that which may the better tend toward the object of drawing closer the bonds of fraternity which nature and historical events have created between the two republics; of consolidating their domestic peace and providing for their security abroad; of assuring the general welfare of their inhabitants, and extending the blessings of independence and liberty to the present and future generations; of promoting, likewise, that prosperty and greatness to which, by a common destiny, the rich and beautiful regions embraced in their vast territories are called, in conformity to the aspirations generally manifested by public opinion in the two countries, respecting the necessities of adopting a new political organization which, modifying their present internal constitution and uniting at the same time their power and resources in one sole nationality, may fully and efficiently bring about these ends; agreed in the name of their governments, and in order that they may previously be submitted to the approval of the people of Peru and of Bolivia, upon the following bases of union of the two countries:

I. Peru and Bolivia shall become a single nation called the Peru-Bolivian United States. This union is based upon American public law, and is formed to confirm the independence, the inviolability, the internal tranquillity, and external security of the states embraced therein, and to promote their development and prosperity.

II. The present departments of each of the two republics, saving such modifications as may be sanctioned by the constitutional assembly, shall be formed into independent states, having their own institutions and laws, not to conflict, however, with the constitution or laws of the union. Nevertheless, the departments of Tacna and of Oruro, of Potosi and Tarapaca shall form the states denominated Tacna of Oruro and Potosi of Tarapaca. The regions of the "Chaco" and of the "Beni" in Bolivia, and that called the "Montania" in Peru, as well as other territories which may exist in analogous conditions, shall form federal districts, subject to special legislation, and to the direct control of the government of the union.

III. The states shall constitute their sovereignty according to the principles of the republican representative system, to the declarations and guarantees of the national constitution, and to those laws of the union which assume to them the administration of justice, the municipal organization, primary education, and material progress, all to be supported out of their own resources.

IV. The union of the States is indissoluble, consequently no state can separate itself therefrom.

V. The states are equal in rights. That of citizenship is common to them all.

VI. No new state can be formed within the territory of another or others, nor can one be formed of two or more, without the vote of the legislatures of each of the states interested, and the sanction of the national Congress, given in two sessions, with entirely renewed personality of voters.

VII. The states cannot make treaties, one with another, save for the furthering of the administration of justice, of ecomonic interests or works of common utility, with the consent of the national Congress. They do not enjoy the right of asylum with respect to one another.

VIII. The states do not exercise the power delegated to the nation. Consequently they cannot represent it before other powers. Nor can they make laws concerning foreign commerce or navigation, nor establish custom-houses; nor coin money; nor charter banks of issue without the permission of the general government; nor alter the codes which Congress may sanction for the union; nor make laws regarding citizenship or naturalization, nor fit out ships of war or raise armies, save in case of invasion or imminent danger from abroad, giving in such case immediate notice to the national government.

IX. No state can declare or make war on another. Their complaints shall be submitted to the judgment and decision of the supreme federal court. Any act of hostility shall be deemed an act of civil war, which it is the duty of the national government to quell and suppress in the exercise of its attributes.

X. The governors of the states are the natural agents of the national government, to exact compliance with the constitution and laws of the union.

XI. It is obligatory upon the states to furnish the quota of troops corresponding to them, to form the national army in time of peace or war.

XII. The national government shall be vested in the legislative, executive, and judicial powers of the union.

XIII. A Congress, composed of two chambers, one of National Deputies, and the other of state senators, shall exercise the national legislative authority.

XIV. The Chamber of Deputies shall be composed of representatives elected directly by the citizens of the states, which shall be considered, for this purpose, as electorial districts, the number of such representatives being determined in proportion to the population. Their term of office shall be four years.

XV. The senate shall be composed of two senators from each state, elected by their several legislatures. Each senator shall have a vote, and their term of office shall be six years. The functions of the senate shall be permanent.

XVI. The national Congress shall meet, ordinarily, each year. Nevertheless, it may be convoked, extraordinarily, by the executive, and for determined objects.

XVII. The national executive authority shall be vested in a citizen, with the title of President of the Peru-Bolivian United States, assisted by ministers of state, and in case of the absence or impediment of the former, by a Vice-President who shall be the president of the Senate, and who shall have no vote save in case of a tie. The term of office for the President shall be for five years, and he shall not be eligible for reelection until after the lapse of a like period. The ministry shall be formed of citizens of the two united republics, at least during two presidential terms, consulting, as far as may be possible, equality of representation.

XVIII. The President of the union shall be elected by direct voting by the citizens of the States, according to their several laws; but each one shall vote for two citizens, one of whom shall be of the state and the other not. Should no citizen obtain an absolute majority of votes, the federal Congress shall choose from among the three who may have obtained the relative majority.

XIX. The judicial authority of the union shall be exercised by a supreme court of justice and by such special tribunals as Congress may establish for the nation.

XX. The duties and their limitations of the high powers of the union shall be fixed by the national constitution, according to the principles of this system of government, consecrated by the practice of those nations who have already adopted it.

XXI. The constitutional assembly shall designate the place within the territory which is to be the capital of the union, and which shall be under the immediate authority of the President of the United States.

XXII. The national government shall provide for the expenses of the union from the funds in the treasury, which shall be formed by the product of import and export duties, of the sale or rental of government lands, of the natural products of the soil, of the post-office department, of general indirect tax, and of such other resources as may be voted by the federal Congress. The tax upon incomes and local contributions belong to the treasuries of the States or municipalities.

XXIII. The national government shall not intervene in the territory of the States, except to cause the constitution and federal laws to be respected, and at the request of their constituted authorities, to sustain or re-establish them, should they be threatened by invasion from another State, or deposed by sedition.

XXIV. Within the republic the circulation of merchandise produced or manufactured in the country, as well as that of the goods or merchandise which may have been dispatched through the custom-houses of the union, shall be free of duty. In this exemption are not included municipal taxes, the creation of which, however, must be submitted to the legislature of the State.

XXV. The vehicles, vessels, or animals carrying the articles mentioned in the preceding section, tools and materials for the construction of roads, river or telegraphic communication between the States, as well as the herds passing from the territory of one state to another, enjoy the exemption.

XXVI. The representation abroad of the union belongs exclusively to the federal executive, who will invite friendly nations to a revision of such treaties as they respectively may have celebrated with Peru and with Bolivia, in order to renew and unify the same.

XXVII. Peru and Bolivia owe nothing whatever to one another for account of the expenses which the war of both countries against Chili may have caused them up to the date of the union.

In witness whereof the undersigned plenipotentiaries, authorized ad hoc by their respective governments, signed and sealed the present protocol the day and date above written.

(In duplicate.)

PEDRO JOSÉ CALDERON,
Secretary of Foreign Affairs and Worship.
[L. S.]

Authorized ad hoc.

MELCHOR TERRAZAS,
Minister Plenipotentiary of Bolivia.
[L. S.]

Authorized ad hoc.
A true copy.

CALDERON.

[Inclosure 3 in No. 179.]

Protocol complementary of the preliminary bases of the federal union of Peru and Bolivia.

In Lima, capital of the Republic of Peru, the 11th day of June, in the year 1880, the undersigned plenipotentiaries having met in the hall of public audience of the department of foreign affairs and worship, with the object of completing the bases of the federal union of Peru and Bolivia, which they have stipulated and agreed upon under this same date, with other points of accessory or transient character, in order thus to obviate the obstacles which might arise to the more prompt and effectual realization of an act so important to both republics, agree upon the following:

I. The preliminary bases of union shall be submitted to the acceptance of the people of Peru and Bolivia, without which they shall be of no effect.

II. This acceptance, expressed in such form as circumstances may permit, shall moreover contain the declaration whether the establishing of the federal system shall be at once proceeded with or not.

III. In the affirmative event, and until the constitution and federal institutions by the constitutional assembly, which shall meet in the city of Arequipa on the 9th of December, 1881 (unless events arising from the war shall compel an anticipation or further delay, which shall be determined by a vote of the provisional Senate), there shall be a provisional federal system established upon the following bases:

First. The federal government shall be formed of the supreme chief of the two nations, one being the president and the other the vice-president of the union.

A popular election of the said magistrates being impossible in the initial condition of the union, and in view of the motives of availability, the first named office is assigned to the supreme chief of Peru, and the second to that of Bolivia.

Second. A provisional senate, composed of ten representatives designated by Peru and an equal number by Bolivia, shall undertake the drawing up of the constitution and organic laws of the union, especially the electoral law for deputies to the constitutional assembly, and shall act, likewise, as a consulting body for the central government.

Third. From this moment the custom-houses between Peru and Bolivia are abolished, and the political and economic union of both republics fully established.

Fourth. The provisional senate shall prepare drafts of federal laws upon post-offices and telegraphs, upon custom-houses, upon money and banking institutions, upon the railroads of the union, upon the appropriations for the same, upon literary and artistic copyright, obligatory military service, and other matters of general interest.

Fifth. The federal constitution shall be in force provisionally during five years from its promulgation, within which time such amendments and reforms as experience may suggest shall be made. The last legislature of this period of five years shall put it definitely in force, and no alterations can thereafter be made in it, save by virtue of the provisions established therein for the purpose.

Sixth. The States shall be governed and administered provisionally until the federal and their own individual constitution be sanctioned by governors appointed by the supreme chiefs of Peru and Bolivia, respectively, for those departments which are to become States in either country, and by common consent for those of Tacna de Oruro and Potosi de Tarapaca.

These governors shall be subject to the laws at present in force in their respective departments, and to the instructions issued by the provisional government of the union.

In the States of Tacna de Oruro and Potosi de Tarapaca the government of the union, with the vote of the senate, will decide as may be necessary such conflicting cases as may arise from the different legislations of the two countries to which the departments forming the said States originally belonged.

The removal and substitution of governors once appointed shall be made by the provisional senate.

Seventh. A mixed commission shall undertake the fixing of the public debt of Peru and Bolivia in its different forms.

Eighth. Another commission, likewise mixed, shall study and suggest the most proper territorial demarkation of the States, that the same may be submitted for the approbation of Congress within the period of provincial constitutionality.

Ninth. The coat of arms of the Peru-Bolivian United States shall be of Germanic form; it shall have in the center a sun of the color of gold, surrounded by stars of the same color, upon a purple ground, and in the upper part a condor resting upon and seizing it with his talons.

The war flag of the said States shall be of rectangular form, the contiguous sides of which shall be in the proportion of one to two-thirds, and it shall bear in the center the same sun and the same stars as the shield upon a similar ground.

Tenth. In case of vacancy of the office of the provisional president or vice-president, it shall be filled by election by the senate, to be made—each member thereof voting for two citizens—one Peruvian and one Bolivian.

The models of the coat of arms and flags are annexed to this protocol.

In witness whereof the undersigned plenipotentiaries signed and sealed the same on the day and date above set forth.

(In duplicate.)

PEDRO JOSÉ CALDERON.
MELCHOR TERRAZAS.

No. 268.

Mr. Hay to Mr. Christiancy.

No. 90.] DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, June 30, 1880.

SIR: A dispatch (No. 149) has been received from Mr. Osborn, minister at Santiago, by which it appears that serious charges have been brought by the Chilian Government against Mr. Merriam, consul of the United States, at Iquique. The purport of the charges is that Mr. Merriam has assisted the Peruvian Government in keeping up communication with its southern army, contrary to the obligations of a neutral and what must be expected from the representative of a neutral government. You will investigate these statements, which, as I understand, have been made to you in detail by Mr. Osborn already, and in case you are convinced of their truth you will remove Mr. Merriam, placing the consulate in the hands of the vice-consul, if a proper person; otherwise in the charge of some United States citizen residing at Iquique.

I am, &c.,

JOHN HAY,
Acting Secretary.

No. 269.

Mr. Christiancy to Mr. Evarts.

No. 183.] LEGATION OF THE UNITED STATES,
Lima, Peru, July 5, 1880. (Received August 14.)

SIR: Referring to my No. 179, on the progress of the war and the question of peace, I have the honor to inform you that no further operations have taken place on land. But we have some more reliable information of the battle of Tacna, and some which I think reliable of the taking of Arica and of the conduct of the Chilian soldiery at Tacna and Arica after all the fighting had ceased. Most of this information upon which I rely was given me by Mr. ———, who was at Tacna at the time of the battle and the next day, and went to Arica a few days after, and who came up on our frigate, Alaska, from Pisco here on my return from Mollendo. He says that the night before the battle of Tacna, Montero, the Peruvian commander, insisted upon making, and did, with part of his forces, undertake to make, a night attack upon the Chilian army; but that, in the darkness and confusion, they mistook their way, wandered about all night, and seen (but not attacked) by the Chilians, were only able to get back to their own lines at daylight, a few minutes before the battle of the 26th opened, and were compelled to go into battle hungry and thirsty and overcome with fatigue; that they nevertheless fought well, as did the whole of the allied force, until the Chilians brought in their reserves of three regiments, when the allies (who had no reserve) came in, when they finally fled; that the allied force did not exceed 7,000 or 7,500 men in the battle, and the Chilian force did not exceed 8,000, but the latter were much better supplied with artillery and Gatlings and that the loss on each side in killed and wounded was very nearly equal, but that the Chilian soldiery killed most of the wounded found on the field, which is the true reason why, according to all the accounts even from Chilian sources, the number reported killed of the allied forces was much or more than the number reported wounded; that after the battle all the allied officers found dead upon the field were stripped, robbed, and left naked, and all the privates stripped of every vestige of clothing of any value; that the allied army is completely broken up, Montero retreating with less than 1,000 men in the ranks, and Campero with still less.

He also says (contrary to the first reports received here) that there was but one day's fighting, the 26th, which was about 6 or 7 miles above Tacna.

It is right that I should say here that though Mr. Nugent, our consular agent at Arica, has not written me, Mr. Merriam, our consul at Iquique, sends me an extract from a letter written by Mr. Nugent to him, dated June 17, in which Mr. Nugent says:

I was on the field immediately after the fight. * * * The number of killed on both sides is about 3,000, rather more of the Chilian than of the allied forces. The wounded from the two armies between 3,500 and 4,000.

He was not at Arica when it was taken, but went back there some days after, and he says:

I must say that the benavior of the Chilians, both in Tacna and Arica, is most disgraceful. In Tacna the greater part of the houses have been robbed and many of them destroyed. All the "chacras" (small farms, gardens, &c.) have been destroyed. Murders are committed every day. In fact, nobody is safe here now. In Arica they murdered the helpless and wounded, and gave very little quarter. In our house, the English consulate, they found a great many refugees, and took them out into the plaza and had them shot, and then sacked the house. The greater part of the town has been burned and sacked. The house in which I had my consulate was sacked, and I have been told that the flag was torn down and trampled upon, and during the night they set fire to it and burned it to the ground. I wish you (our consul at Iquique) to advise me as to this matter, and to let me know how to act. As I was not at Arica during the fight, I cannot tell whether it is true as regards the flag, but the person in charge of the house represents it to be true. As the house belongs to my family I should like to know whether I have any right to claim or not. If so, please let me know how to make it.

Now, in reference to this letter of Nugent, I have to say that I learn from Captain Brown, of the Alaska, that when he was at Arica some months ago Nugent kept his consular agency in the same house now spoken of by Nugent as the British consulate, and not in the house which was burned, which was the house belonging to his grandmother, Mrs. McLean, the best house on the west coast, over which he seems to have placed the American flag, but he may, prior to this affair, have removed his consular agency to this house, with the archives, and, in that event, I think the Chilians committed an outrage upon our government, but I must inquire into the facts before I can give him any advice. I do not know whether the American flag was also flying over the house where he formerly kept his office as consular agent, and from which the refugees were taken out and shot upon the plaza. If it turns out that the placing of the American flag upon the McLean house was but a ruse to preserve that house, and he really had not there established his consular agency, I shall advise him that, as a British subject, he must look for protection and advice to the representatives of his own government.

Now, as to the conduct of the Chilians at Tacna, I must say that the French consular agent represents it in a somewhat less flagrant form. He says that after the taking of Tacna there was but little of abuse or outrage in the city proper; some few houses plundered; two Italians and eight Chinamen killed, and in the suburbs and neighboring chacras general robbery and plunder.

As to Arica, after the town and forts had been taken and all resistance had ceased, the statements of the French consular agent to the outrages committed by the Chilian soldiery are more distinct and positive than those of Mr. Nugent. He says that after Arica had been taken and all resistance had ceased many inhabitants of Arica had taken refuge in the building where our consular agent had kept his office (as stated by Captain Brown, of the Alaska), and among them some Peruvian soldiers, who had changed their uniform for citizens' dress, had sought refuge in that house (whether the American flag was flying then I do not know), and that the Chilian soldiery, apparently under the command of their officers, came to the house and took indiscriminately 59 men who were there—took them on to the public plaza and there deliberately shot them all.

This, if true, is not war, but deliberate wholesale murder, unprovoked by anything yet done by the allied forces, and in the cause of civilization and humanity, calls for an indignant protest from all civilized nations.

The blockade of Callao and Ancon. As to these, nothing of importance has taken place since my last, until about 4 o'clock p. m. of the 3d July, when the Loa, an armed transport of the Chilian blockading fleet (an iron steamer formerly belonging to the English Pacific Steam Navigation Company, but sold to Chili about the beginning of the war), was blown up and sunk by a Peruvian torpedo by a very clever ruse de guerre of the Peruvians.

It seems (for the special details I have heard are unreliable) that the Peruvians had prepared a small launch on the night of the 2d instant with 300 pounds of dynamite in the bottom, and covered this over with a full loading of poultry, ducks, potatoes, and other vegetables, some of which were, by concealed cords, attached to wires connected with the dynamite; that the Loa had been north, probably to Ancon, and was returning to join the fleet; that the Peruvians had, by a row-boat, towed this launch far out towards the Chilian fleet, and as the Loa approached from the north and made towards the launch to capture it, the Peruvian row-boat abandoned the launch and made for the shore, which they reached, a boat sent out by the Loa capturing the launch and taking it up alongside of the Loa as a prize; but while close to the stern of the Loa and being unloaded the explosion took place, completely blowing off the stern of the Loa, which sunk in four minutes with 140 men, some 60 alone of the crew escaping.

No proposition for peace has yet been received from Chili, and the preparations by the Peruvian Government and the tone of its decrees (which I will endeavor to send you by the next mail) show clearly that Peru is not disposed to offer terms, and that the war may be indefinitely continued.

The tone of the Chilian press and what is said by Chilian officers tend to show that the popular voice in Chili is for an expedition to Lima, to dictate terms of peace in the Peruvian capital.

I have, &c.,

I. P. CHRISTIANCY.

No. 270.

Mr. Christiancy to Mr. Evarts.

No. 184.] LEGATION OF THE UNITED STATES,
Lima, Peru, July 8, 1880. (Received August 13, 1880.)

SIR: As relating to the question of the continuance of the war or the probability of peace, I send you the following extract from a private unofficial letter of Mr. Osborn, our minister to Chili, dated Santiago, June 18, viz:

> I may add that there is no prospect now of a proposition being made by Chili to terminate the war, as suggested by me heretofore. Public opinion clearly demands a prosecution of the war until Peru shall ask for peace, or until Lima shall fall. The cabinet has been reorganized in conformity with this view.

Of the wisdom of this resolution on the part of Chili I have nothing to say, though it seems to me to be the result of popular passion rather than the cool judgment of her best statesmen, as she could easily hold all she has taken from Peru, and all she expects to hold, without further bloodshed or the hazard of further conflict.

But I am strongly of the opinion that Peru will, under these circumstances, offer no terms of peace until or unless her army near Lima shall be overwhelmed and Lima shall be captured.

Peru has now in the vicinity of Lima and Callao an army, as near as I can ascertain, of from 22,000 to 24,000 men, most of whom are well drilled, and all the infantry well armed with Remington rifles.

In addition to these every able-bodied man in the province of Lima over 16 and under 60 is called out and being organized. Most of these will not be armed with Remingtons, but such arms as may be accessible, each regiment having a particular kind of guns and ammunition.

They have also between 40 and 50 pieces of artillery, but mostly small, from three to five pounders, breech-loaders and rifled (a few smooth-bore, and some ten Krupp guns). What they lack most, in my judgment, is a larger class of smoth-bore field guns (such as the old Napoleon guns) for grape and canister.

Very few of the Peruvians, either officers or men, have any experience of actual warfare, while Chili will probably bring 6,000 to 7,000 from the south of Peru who have had the experience of one campaign.

I do not think Chili can well bring here an army exceeding 18,000 to 20,000 men; and to meet these I think Peru will, by the time they can reach here, have from 25,000 to 30,000.

I do not think the Chilian fleet can reduce the defenses of Callao, and therefore the Chilians will have to land at or near Ancon, 20 miles north of Callao, or at Chorillos, which is a bad place for landing, or at Chira, 3 or 4 miles south, or at Chilca, or the valley of Lurin, to the south.

Making, therefore, due allowance for the facts that the Chilians are probably better supplied with artillery and Gatlings; that some of them have had experience of actual warfare, and that coming from a temperate climate they are somewhat more vigorous race than the Peruvians, the chances of the conflict here may be said to be pretty nearly equally balanced.

I have, &c.,

I. P. CHRISTIANCY.

P. S.—On reflection, I am strongly inclined to the opinion that the Chilians, instead of coming in the first instance to Lima, will first direct their efforts to the taking of Mollendo, Arequipa, and Puno, and the railroad connecting these places, press on to La Paz, Bolivia, and contrive to sever the alliance between Bolivia and Peru, and after this, if necessary, organize their expedition to Lima. My only reason for this opinion is that it seems to me manifestly better for the interest of Chili to take this course than to come directly to Lima.

As ever, &c.,

I. P. CHRISTIANCY.

No. 271.

Mr. Christiancy to Mr. Evarts.

No. 185.] LEGATION OF THE UNITED STATES,
Lima, Peru, July 9, 1880. (Received August 13.)

SIR: I have the honor to inclose to you the following:

1st. The proclamation and decree of the Supreme Chief of Peru, dated June 27.

2d. The official note of the secretary of foreign relations and worship to the archbishop of Lima in reference to church property, &c.

3d. The reply of the archbishop thereto.

4th. The decree of the archbishop in reference to contributions to be made by the church to the government.

5th. The note of the secretary of government to the Secretary of War in reference to military passports, together with translations of each of above.

In reference to the sixth article of the decree of June 27, I have to say that I have advised American citizens here that they cannot organize and act as an urban guard upon the principle expressed in that article without a breach of neutrality, as they seem there to be invited to take the place of the police of Lima, for the purpose of enabling that police to go into the active army of Peru.

I, last night, had a conference with the supreme chief upon this point, having previously consulted with some of the foreign ministers, and I explained to him the difficulty growing out of the wording of article 6 alluded to, and suggested the repeal of the same, and its replacement by an article embodying the following ideas:

Citizens of neutral nations resident in Lima, for the purpose of protecting themselves, their families and property, and to that end, for preserving the peace and good order of the city against domestic violence and disorder during the exigencies of the present war, are invited to organize themselves into bodies of urban guards, they being hereby authorized to elect their chief and subordinate officers, so as to act as far as possible in concert, reporting such elections to the mayor of the city. And such officers so chosen may, for the purposes aforesaid, arrest any person committing violence or theft, or in any manner disturbing the peace or good order of the city, delivering the persons so arrested to the proper civil municipal officers of the city, with a written statement of the cause of the arrest; and the proper civil officers of said city shall have power to try the offences charged against the persons so arrested.

The supreme chief accorded fully to the ideas above expressed, and disclaimed any other meaning or intention of the sixth article of his decree, and gave me to understand that either that article would be so modified or the municipal authorities would be authorized and requested to extend the invitation on the principles explained by me.

There is a strong desire among neutrals here to organize for self-protection on the principles I have above expressed, and I think all the foreign ministers will agree in it.

Referring now to the seventh article of the same decree, I will say that a serious question may arise whether that article does not violate the spirit of the second article of our treaty with Peru. But on consultation with the supreme chief he assures me that if I will give him a list of the names of American citizens wishing to leave the country he will at once cause the proper military passports to be issued; and so long as he does this I do not think it necessary to stand upon any mere punctilios.

I will now only further remark that if the decree of the archbishop be faithfully carried into effect (which I doubt) it will place in the hands of the government many millions of dollars—I should say not less than $10,000,000, as the wealth of Peru is now mainly found in its churches. But I doubt if the government will realize from this source one-fifth of this amount.

On consultation with the foreign ministers here, I think we shall each grant to our respective citizens here a certificate of citizenship, to be placed upon the doors of their houses, certifying also that they are authorized to use the flag, and that the commanders of the Chilian forces, if they appear before Lima, will be informed of this and requested to respect the flag and the houses over which it is raised.

I shall also open the legation to all who may choose to come to it for refuge in case of danger.

With these precautions, I have no fear, so long as the Chilian soldiery shall remain under the control of their officers; but if in the midst of conflict in the streets or the sacking of the city the soldiery should escape the control of their officers nothing would be sacred, and I may be doomed to destruction as well as others. But I trust to the moral force of our flag and do not permit myself to doubt the efficiency of its protection.

I am, &c.,

I. P. CHRISTIANCY.

[Inclosure 1 in No. 185.]

[South Pacific Times, July 5, 1880.]

THE GOVERNMENT.

PROCLAMATION.

His excellency the Supreme Chief promulgated yesterday the following important proclamation:

[Translation.]

NICOLÁS DE PIÉROLA, Supreme Chief of the Republic and Protector of the Native Race.

Considering:

That Lima having more than sufficient means of defense against any attempt of attack on the part of the enemy, and it being necessary to place the city in a state to effect this object in order to allow the government to employ the army in the more active pursuit of the war,

I decree:

ARTICLE 1. The city and province of Lima are declared to be on a defensive military footing.

2. The Mobile and Sedentary Reserve force of the province of Lima are called out for active service; consequently all Peruvians residing in the province of not more than 60 years of age and not less than 16, without distinction as to class or employment, will present themselves to the proper authority within15 days from this date.

3. Those who belong to the Mobile and Sedentary Reserve will cease daily their occupations from 10 a. m. until 2 p. m., and it will be their duty to present themselves in uniform, at the places which their respective chiefs may appoint, in order to dedicate 2 hours to military exercises. In consequence the workshops and offices and commercial traffic will be closed from 10 a. m. until 2 p. m.

4. The only persons exempt from military exercises are the ecclesiastics, doctors of medicine, apothecaries, medical assistants, and others employed in the service of the hospitals, civil and military; also all employés in the public service belonging to the departments of war and government, the prefecture of the department, and the subprefecture of the province. Those who are physically incapable of taking up arms will be exempted afterwards, according to the decision of the tribunal of qualification which will be established for that purpose.

5. Those who do not present themselves within the time prescribed, or refuse to comply with the duties to which they are called, will be sent immediately to the army for active service.

6. Foreigners, residents in the province of Lima, are invited to organize and constitute themselves as an urban guard, in order to take charge of property and preserve order whilst the citizens are employed in the military service. The urban guard will choose and propose the persons who are to command them.

7. No inhabitant of the capital will be allowed to leave it without a proper passport from the military authority, with the exception of the purveyors and carriers of provisions, registered as such and provided with a ticket to that effect.

8. All persons in possession of arms must present them to the prefecture within 15 days, and in exchange for them will receive a document accrediting their delivery, in order that they may recover them or their value as soon as the present state of things may cease. Those who contravene this order or do not denounce those who have arms in their possession will be considered as traitors to the Republic and liable to due punishment.

9. The defensive forces of Lima which do not belong to the active army or to the Mobile Reserve will wear as uniform a blue tunic, girded with a leather shoulder-belt, and cartridge-box; cap to be of blue cloth, with a straight peak, with the number of the battalion in yellow metal. The uniform of the officers will be the same, with the difference that they are to have on their tunics and caps white stripes and the number of their battalion in white metal. The badges of the classes will be of red cloth, on the shoulders and cuffs; the sword with a leather waist-band. The officers and men belonging to the artillery will wear red stripes. The distinctive marks for officers are to be white. All to be according to the patterns which will be supplied by the general staff of this force.

The secretaries of war and government are charged with the carrying out of this decree and the publishing of it by proclamation, and its circulation.

Given in the government house of Lima, on the 27th day of June, 1880.

NICOLAS DE PIÉROLA.

MIGUEL IGLESIAS,
Secretary of War.
NEMESIO ORBEGOSO,
Secretary of Government.

[Inclosure 2 in No. 185.]

PASSPORTS.

We translate from La Patria the following note, addressed by the secretary of government to the secretary of war, dated 30th ultimo, relating to passports:

Mr. SECRETARY OF STATE FOR THE WAR DEPARTMENT:

Under this date I have addressed the following note to the prefect of the department:

For the due carrying out of the order comprised in the proclamation published on the 28th instant, prohibiting any inhabitant of this province to leave it without the requisite passport, duly issued by the military authorities, you will proceed to give the necessary orders to the managers of the Transandine and Chancay Railways so that they may not allow any passenger to leave the province of Lima unless he present a passport issued by the secretary of war, with the signature or rubric of the Supreme Chief. You will also direct the governors and commissaries of police of this province to see that the before-mentioned proclamation be strictly complied with; and you have further to command the subprefects, governors, and police commissaries of the other provinces of the department that they observe the same regulations with passengers who may arrive from this department or province at the places of their jurisdiction without this requisite, with exception of the purveyors or carriers of provisions who can produce their tickets, making known at the same time to the last-mentioned functionaries and to the managers of the railways that those persons who should not present such authorization are to be compelled to return to this capital under proper custody, and to be delivered up to the prefecture.

For the due observance of these regulations the province of Callao is considered as one with that of Lima.

All which I have the pleasure to transcribe to your honor for your guidance as to the regulations which you may consider necessary to communicate to the military commanders in this department.

May God keep your honor.

NEMESIO ORBEGOSO.

No. 272.

Mr. Evarts to Mr. Christiancy.

No. 93.] DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, July 30, 1880.

SIR: Having regard to the contents of a dispatch (No. 148) from Mr. Osborn, minister of the United States at Santiago, wherein he inclosed a copy of a letter of May 13, last, addressed to you, I telegraphed you yesterday—

Press upon Peruvian Government our desire to aid in restoring peace on honorable terms, between nations to which we are sincerely and equally friendly. A like instruction is sent to-day to Santiago.

In answer to Mr. Osborn's No. 148, above referred to, I have approved the tenor of that minister's letter to you, suggesting a method by which the Government of the United States might make its good offices available in mediation between the powers now at war on the Pacific coast.

I am, &c.,

WM. M. EVARTS.

No. 273.

Mr. Christiancy to Mr. Evarts.

[Confidential.]

No. 190.] LEGATION OF THE UNITED STATES,
Lima, Peru, August 14, 1880. (Received September 17.)

SIR: Owing to the stringent police regulations adopted by the Peruvian Government (and I am disposed to think properly adopted) I have been constantly employed in the protection of American citizens, whenever I have been able to work at all. I have been for some days so out of health as to be unable to write. I dictate this to my clerk.

The pressure of business in the protection of American citizens is now nearly passed.

And bearing in mind your instructions to avail myself of every opportunity to bring about a peace between Chili, Peru, and Bolivia, and having received intelligence upon which, I think, I have good reasons to rely, that all three of the belligerent nations are anxious for peace, notwithstanding their public professions to the contrary, I have determined to leave Lima for Santiago, Chili, with a view of opening the way to negotiations to that end; and I expect to leave to-morrow on the United States steamer Wachusett for Valparaiso, and expect to be absent between three and four weeks. It will be a special effort of mine to avoid all publicity in this movement, until such measures can be taken as to open negotiations, which, if once open, will, in my opinion, by counter propositions and further negotiations finally result in peace, probably through the friendly mediation of a neutral power, and, as I hope, the United States. I am the more anxious for this result because I have good reasons to believe that strong efforts are being made for the intervention of European powers to put an end to the present war.

I have, &c.,

I. P. CHRISTIANCY.

P. S.—I have no information from Mr. Osborn that the Chilian Government is desirous of peace; but I have seen evidence which I deem authentic and more direct that Chili is willing to make a proposition through some third power. I am under a pledge not to state that evidence at present even to you.

I. P. CHRISTIANCY.

No. 274.

Mr. Hay to Mr. Christiancy.

No. 97.] DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, August 16, 1880.

SIR: On the 13th instant the following telegram was received from the minister of the United States at Santiago: "Chili will accept mediation in form suggested in my dispatch, May 20th." You were apprised of that form by a letter of Mr. Osborn, addressed to you May 13, last, and were informed by instruction No. 93, of July 30, that the Secretary approved the same.

In reference to the above, you were telegraphed on the 13th instant as follows:

Have reason to think Chili not indisposed to our mediations and that negotiations might be opened under our auspices. Report to me your view as to disposition of Peru.

I am, &c.,

JOHN HAY,
Acting Secretary.

No. 275.

Mr. Hay to Mr. Christiancy.

No. 99.] DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, August 16, 1880.

SIR: I have to acknowledge the receipt of your No. 175 in relation to the charges brought by the Chilian authorities to the effect that Mr. Merriam, consul of the United States at Iquique, has lent his position there to the furtherance of Peruvian interests as opposed to those of Chili.

Approving your course in the premises, asking for a fuller report when the course of events shall make it practicable,

I am, &c.,

JOHN HAY,
Acting Secretary.

No. 276.

Mr. Hay to Mr. Christiancy.

No. 102.] DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, August 25, 1880.

SIR: Referring to your Nos. 178 and 183 it would appear that the information you had obtained up to the date of the latter in relation to the treatment experienced by Mr. Nugent, consular agent of the United States at Arica, and by the consulate there at the hands of the Chilian forces on the capture of that place, is not sufficiently definite to enable the department to make proper representations in the matter through the minister of the United States at Santiago;

When you shall have learned the absolute state of facts you will please embody the same in a dispatch referring to this instruction by number and date. On the receipt thereof the department will determine with relation to instructing Mr. Osborn in the premises.

I am, &c.,

JOHN HAY,
Acting Secretary.

No. 277.

Mr. Christiancy to Mr. Evarts.

[Confidential and personal.]

LEGATION OF THE UNITED STATES,
Lima, Peru, September 12, 1880. (Received October 22.)

SIR: Referring to the postscript to my dispatch No. 190, and having this day returned from Santiago, I write this confidential note to explain the nature of the evidence I had received which induced me to go to Santiago.

I had been shown an intercepted letter written by the President of Chili to the Chilian admiral at Callao, in which he says in substance that the government is desirous of peace and wishes to make some proposition to Peru, and thinks it would be best to make it through some third power. This letter was dated July 25.

I waited about eight days after seeing this letter, expecting to hear from Mr. Osborn, but received nothing, and fearing that some other power might be selected and that the United States might lose its proper prestige, I suggested to Captain Gillis, the senior officer of our squadron, that, as he had three vessels here whose business it was to cruise along the coasts of the belligerents, it might conduce to the public interest if he could send one south as far as Valparaiso, taking me along and bringing me back. He sent the Wachusett, and I went along and have just returned. Five days after I had left Mr. Osborn's letter of July 31 was received here by my clerk, and on September 9 his letter, of August 12 and August 20, informing me of the provisional acceptance by Chili of our mediation, were received here in my absence, which I have just opened.

As Mr. Osborn has kept you informed of his action and that of the Chilian Government in reference to our mediation, so far as it appears from the letters above referred to, I need not here go over the same ground.

But I will say that if I could have known the contents of those letters here before I went I should not probably have gone at all, and yet I am now satisfied that it was well I did go, as it enabled Mr. Osborn and myself to concert the proper mode of corresponding with Mr. Adams at La Paz and with the several governments and of hastening an opening of negotiations under the mediation of the United States.

For further particulars I refer you to my despatch No. 191. I ask that the present letter may not go on the regular files of the department, but that it may be treated as entirely confidential.

I have, &c.,

I. P. CHRISTIANCY.

No. 278.

Mr. Christiancy to Mr. Evarts.

No. 191.] LEGATION OF THE UNITED STATES,
Lima, Peru, September 13, 1880. (Received October 22.)

SIR: Referring to my personal and confidential letter to you of yesterday, showing the reasons for my going to Santiago, I have the honor to state that on the evening of the 27th August, I arrived at Santiago, Chili, where I at once learned from Mr. Osborn what had taken place between him and the Chilian Government, in reference to the entering upon negotiations with Peru and Bolivia under the mediation of the United States, of which I take it for granted Mr. Osborn has fully informed you.

Mr. Osborn showed me your telegram No. 1 to him, without date, and that of August 17, 1880 (a copy of which last I received, directed to me, from our consul at Valparaiso, and which had been sent forward to me to Lima, having to go by mail from Arica, and which I find here upon my return). Mr. Osborn also showed me his note of the verbal interview of the 6th August with the President and secretary of foreign relations of Chili, dated August 10, which I suppose he sent to you.

But I learned from Mr. Osborn that, before his conference of the 6th August with the Chilian Government, the minister of Italy, with the concurrence of the French minister and the quasi approval of the English minister, had proposed to Chili a negotiation with Peru on the basis of giving up to Chili the province or department of Tarapacá, in full of everything, and had informed the Chilian Government that they expected, through their colleagues of Peru, to get the assent of the Peruvian Government to these terms, which they had not yet obtained.

On the 28th August, by appointment arranged through Mr. Osborn, we had a conference with Mr. Pinto, the President of Chili, and his secretary of foreign relations, in which they confirmed the substance of all Mr. Osborn had told me. I said to them that if the proposition originating with the Italian minister should be accepted by Peru, there was no occasion and no room for mediation of the United States or any other power, as all the rest would be mere matter of form, and that the respective governments could accomplish this themselves; the services of mere couriers, instead of ambassadors, being all that would be necessary.

I could readily perceive that (though they did not in any way indicate that any better terms would be granted) they had not full faith that these terms would be promptly accepted by Peru, and they declared that they had accepted the friendly mediation of the United States, and should not retract it, though it might be rendered useless if the terms proposed by the Italian minister should be accepted.

I learn since I have returned here that the ministers of Italy, France, and England did not venture to propose to the Peruvian Government the terms of peace proposed by the Italian minister in Chili, but had simply inquired of the Peruvian Government if it was willing to appoint ambassadors to confer with those of Chili upon terms of peace, and that the Peruvian Government had to this given an affirmative answer.

I will further say that while at Santiago, in view of the failure of the acceptance by Peru of the Italian proposition, and for the purpose of having Bolivia also represented in any conference for peace under the mediation of the United States, it was arranged with the Chilian Government that letters should be given me to the commanding general (Baguedano) at Arica and to the Chilian admiral at Callao, which the general would forward to Mr. Adams, at La Paz, by express, and that the admirals should forward at the first opportunity any letter I should write to Mr. Osborn. These letters were written and given to me, and I have handed them to the general and the admiral. I also agreed with Mr. Osborn upon a key to be used between him and me from Arica south (as there is no telegraph north of that point).

Immediately on my return from the south, on the 11th instant, I had a full conference with the Supreme Chief of Peru; informed him of the acceptance by Chili of the mediation of the United States and the proposed negotiations, and asked him for a definite answer to be given by the 14th. He asked me to give him in writing the substance of our interview, which I did yesterday, a copy of which I inclose, and to which I call your special attention, as it explains many details which will save me the trouble of repeating here. He is to give me an answer to-morrow, but I may not have it in time to go by this mail, which I expect to send by the Lackawanna to-morrow morning.

I have no reason to doubt that the mediation of our government will be accepted, and that ambassadors will meet at Arica (or, perhaps, at Callao) from all the belligerent powers about the 5th October, and that peace will be the result.

The only unfortunate circumstance is that a Chilian expedition is now operating at Chimbote and along the north coast of Peru, which creates much irritation, as they are levying contributions not only upon towns but upon private property, even of neutrals. But this is no fault of mine, since, if the Peruvian Government had authorized me to say to the Chilian Government that she was ready to negotiate (which I was morally certain she was, but did not wish to appear as asking peace), I could, I am confident, have prevented the operations of this expedition. But I was not authorized to state this to the Chilian Government. Peru must take the consequences.

I have, &c.,

I. P. CHRISTIANCY.

P. S.—SEPTEMBER 14. I am verbally informed by the supreme chief of Peru this morning that Peru, accepts, and that he will send me an official note to that effect this evening, but I may not receive it in time to go by the Lackawanna for Chimbote with this letter to-morrow morning.

I. P. CHRISTIANCY.

[Inclosure in No. 191.]

Mr. Christiancy to Mr. Barinaga.

LEGATION OF THE UNITED STATES,
Lima, Peru, September 11, 1880.

MONSIEUR LE SECRÉTAIRE: I have the honor to inform you that I have just returned from Santiago, Chili, where I went for the purpose of consulting my colleague, Mr. Osborn, United States minister to Chili, and to ascertain so far as I could, the disposition of the Chilian Government in reference to putting an end to the war now unhappily existing between that country on one side and Peru and Bolivia on the other.

I am happy to be able to inform you that my colleague (Mr. Osborn) had already, as early as the 6th of August last, had a conference with the Chilian Government in reference to entering upon negotiations for peace, under the auspices of the friendly mediation of the United States of America, and that he found the Chilan Government well disposed to that end and to that mode of reaching it.

And that your government may be fully possessed of the facts bearing upon this question and of the mode proposed for effecting the object, I give you below the note made by Mr. Osborn of his verbal conference with the Chilian Government, and I will further say that this proposed mode of proceeding has been submitted to and expressly approved by the Government of the United States.

"Memorandum of conference.

"On the 6th of August, 1880, Mr. Osborn visited President Pinto and Minister Valderrama, touching the subject of mediation by the United States in the present war, and after some general conversation, in which the President expressed himself desirous of arriving at an early peace, Mr. Osborn read from a telegraphic message he had received from Mr. Evarts, Secretary of State of the United States, instructing him to press upon the Chilian Government the desire of the United States to aid in restoring peace.

"The President expressed his gratitude to the President of the United States for his kindness, but thought that the great distance intervening and the difficulties in the way of mail communications presented obstacles to prompt action, if meditation should mean reference of all matters to Washington. Mr. Osborn replied that he understood that the United States Government was desirous of serving the belligerents in whatever way might seem best calculated to procure the desired result, and as to them might seem advisable; but, that, anticipating the force of the suggestion of President Pinto, in May last, he had written to the government at Washington, and to his colleague at Lima, suggesting that if the United States should be called upon to mediate, in his judgment, the best mode of proceeding would be to request the belligerent governments to appoint duly empowered ambassadors to meet at some point on their coast on board an American man-of-war, and there to confer regarding the settlement of their difficulties in the presence of and with the advice and assistance of such ambassador or ambassadors as the United States Government might designate for that purpose.

"To his dispatch to the foregoing effect, Mr. Osborn stated that he had not yet received an answer, but that he believed that his suggestion would prove acceptable to his government. President Pinto and Minister Valderrama expressed themselves as satisfied with the form suggested for mediation, and the President, after a conference with his advisers, caus d Mr. Osborn to be informed, at another conference with Minister Valderrama, on the 10th of August, that the Chilian Government would be pleased to accept the services of the United States Government in the capacity of a mediator in the form by Mr. Osborn suggested, August 10, 1880."

I will further say that I personally had an interview with the President and Secretary of State of Chili, who confirmed to me the substance of Mr. Osborn's note, and wished to know of me if the Government of Peru was willing to accept the mediation of the United States, and to enter upon negotiations in that way. I was compelled to say that I had no authority from the Peruvian Government to answer that question; but that I could only give them my impression; that as Chili had accepted the mediation of the United States, neither Peru nor Bolivia would refuse it.

Mr. Osborn wrote to Mr. Adams, our colleage at La Paz, some three weeks ago, explaining the whole matter, and requesting him to ascertain the disposition of the Bolivian Government and to let him and me know; but mails to La Paz are uncertain, and both Mr. Osborn and myself wrote him while I was there, and the secretary of foreign relations wrote to General Baguedano (the Chilian general), who promised to forward them at once, and if Bolivia assents we reques'ed Mr. Adams to be at Arica with the ambassadors of Bolivia by the 5th October.

The Chilian Admiral Riveros has been instructed to hasten forward any letters I may wish to send to Mr. Osborn.

The Chilian Government assents that Peru may send an unarmed vessel to Arica for the convenience of her ambassadors and their conveyance there, if desired, and Admiral Riveros has orders accordingly.

It now only remains for your government to decide whether it will accept the friendly mediation of the United States to open negotiations in the manner proposed.

I improve this opportunity to express to your excellency the high regard and esteem with which I subscribe myself, &c.,

I. P. CHRISTIANCY.

His Excellency Señor Don MANUEL M. BARINAGA,
Secretary of the Treasury, and Acting Secretary of Foreign Relations, &c., of Peru.

No. 279.

Mr. Christiancy to Mr. Evarts.

No. 194.] LEGATION OF THE UNITED STATES,
Lima, Peru, September 17, 1880. (Received October 18.)

SIR: Referring to my dispatch No. 191, I have the honor to inclose to you the reply of the supreme chief of Peru, sent me in writing, together with a translation. The document, as you will see, is peculiar: though it does clearly accept the mediation of the United States, and by implication, when construed with reference to the circumstances and the verbal explanation of the plan of negotiations, must be understood as consenting to the negotiations in the manner proposed, with an indignant protest against the acts of Chili along the north coast of Peru, the main and direct object of which seems to be the levying of contributions upon private property, and destroying the property in case of non-payment—a mode of warfare the legitimacy of which is at least questionable,—and which the general opinion of the diplomatic corps here pronounces inadmissible under the humane principles of modern warfare, though all admit the right of a belligerent under the present recognized laws of war to impose contributions upon towns, cities, and other political organizations of an enemy's country, as well as the right to destroy individual property whenever it may become incidentally necessary in carrying out any proper military enterprise, but not the right to demand forced contributions from the owners of mere private property, or to destroy such property, and to make this the special end and object of an expedition where there is no armed enemy to be opposed, and the owners are non-combatants.

I send copy of telegram from Colonel Lynch, Chilian commander, to Mr. Derteano, owner of a sugar estate worth $3,000,000, which has been destroyed for non-payment.

I deeply regret this expedition as very inopportune, so far as it affects the question of peace, but I was in no condition to ask Chili to refrain from it so long as I could not assure them of the acceptance by Peru and Bolivia of our mediation, nor was there any express understanding with Chili that they should refrain from any military operations prior to the opening of negotiations.

I wrote a letter to Mr. Osborn from Arica September 7, and a similar one to Mr. Adams. I send you here a copy of that to Mr. Osborn, as ollows:

ARICA, September 7, 1880.

HON. THOMAS A. OSBORN,
Santiago, Chili:

SIR: I have to advise you of my arrival at this port at 8 a. m. to-day, on board the Wachusett. I found that General Baguedano was absent in Tacna, but Colonel Valdivieso, commander of the post, called upon me at once and offered his services. I delivered to him the letter of the minister of foreign relations and my dispatches, to be forwarded to La Paz, calling upon him for that purpose at headquarters.

Allow me to say that, in my opinion, as soon as ambassadors shall have met for negotiating peace, with the mediation of the United States, an armistice of two or three weeks at least should be established, as I think it would increase the probability of success, to avoid during the negotiations all further causes of irritation during the conference. In fact, without such armistice it would be naturally inferred that the party or parties refusing the armistice had little faith in the result. Besides, it seems to me it would not be entirely respectful to the United States, as mediator, to refuse such armistice.

Your dispatch received just as I am closing this. I can find no dispatches or letters to or for you here, nor for Mr. Adams.

Immediately on receiving verbal notice from the supreme chief of the acceptance of our mediation, on the 13th instant, I wrote to the commander of the Chilian expedition a letter, of which I send you copy (a copy of which was also sent to the Chilian admiral on same day).

On the 14th I wrote him another letter for the protection of property of Edward C. DuBois, of which I inclose copy.

On the 15th instant I went on board the Chilian admiral's ship to see if he could forward a letter or dispatch (from me to Mr. Osborn) to Arica, to be telegraphed thence, but he had no vessel which he could send, and knew of no mode earlier than the mail steamer for the south, which would not go before the 19th or 20th. I left with and showed to him a telegraphic dispatch for Mr. Osborn, informing him of acceptance of mediation by Peru and Bolivia, inclosed in a letter to our consular agent at Arica, to be sent by telegraph from Arica. These the admiral was to send by his first opportunity.

On my return to the Lackawanna I suggested to Captain Gillis to send the Wachusett to Arica to deliver a letter and dispatch to our consular agent there, a copy of which letter and dispatch I here inclose. Captain Gillis assented, and the Wachusett left on the morning of the 16th, which will get the dispatch to Mr. Osborn from four to six days sooner than it could have gone by the mail steamer.

While on board the Blanco Encalada, the admiral informed me that both he and Colonel Lynch (commander of the land expedition) had orders to spare the property belonging to neutrals as far as possible.

I thereupon wrote to Colonel Lynch, on the 16th instant, the letter (of which I here inclose copy) in behalf of John W. Grace, an American citizen, which may serve as a sample of many others which I have since written, and upon which I have been kept nearly all my time busy. Copies are preserved and can be sent if you wish; but I have not clerical force to send them all now.

On the 16th instant I met the diplomatic corps here at the call of the dean, to consider some matters of little importance, about which I will not trouble you now, and after these things were disposed of I volunteered to make a candid statement to them of all that had occurred in Chili in reference to the mediation of the United States, assuring them, as I believe the truth to be, that the American ministers had not, in any way, sought to defeat any of the efforts of the ministers of other nations to bring about a peace; that the information received from the Government of Chili and from Mr. Osborn only gave me to understand that the attempt at negotiation initiated by the Italian and French ministers was based upon the idea that Peru, as a preliminary condition to negotiation, was to assent to the cession of Tarapacá to Chili, which Peru had not yet assented to, and the Chilian Government did not seem to trust that she would in the first instance, and as an indispensable condition to negotiations, and had therefore accepted the mediation of the United States; that I had said to the Chilian Government that if the supposed proposition, based upon the cession of Tarapacá, should be accepted by Peru there was no occasion for any mediation, &c., and that, therefore, I had not supposed that the proffered mediation could, in any way, antagonize the negotiations set on foot by the Italian and French ministers and approved by the English minister here; that the common interest of all neutral nations was for peace between the belligerents, and that I did not suppose that any government sought—and I knew that my government did not seek—any peculiar advantage from a treaty of peace, nor any advantage which would not be common to all other neutral nations; that I had never made any secret of the fact, but had uniformly told them, for more than a year past, that the United States was ready to offer her friendly mediation, whenever all the belligerents should indicate their willingness to accept it, notice of which had been communicated to all the belligerents.

In answer to these explanations I, for the first time, learned from the Italian, French, and English ministers here that Chili had ever intimated to them or their colleagues at Santiago a willingness to enter upon negotiations at large, and without the indispensable condition, as a basis, of the cession of Tarapacá; but I was now (September 16), for the first time, informed of this, and that Peru had assented to it. But the Government of Peru had never given me any such intimation, and has not now.

The supreme chief has been absent since the 16th at the north, and has not yet returned. I have explained to all the diplomatic corps everything in relation to the mediation of the United States (except the telegrams to me and Mr. Osborn).

There is evidently some chagrin on the part of the ministers of Italy, France, and England, that their good offices (tendered, I am bound to suppose, in equal good faith) have been rejected and our mediation accepted, but so far as I am able to discover they can only complain of the government of Chili, as the ministers of the United States have acted in perfect good faith, so far as I know and believe.

As I have some slight reason to suspect (and most of the foreign ministers here believe), from information from the South, that Chili may be contemplating an expedition against Lima, which I think wholly inconsistent with mediation in the mode proposed, I prepared and sent away yesterday, by the British mail line, the dispatch to Mr. Osborn, of which I send you a copy (which is to be telegraphed from Arica).

Should this expedition take place before and in the face of the proposed negotiations, I shall be compelled to look upon it as a violation of good faith, as I must be, and the Chilian Government must necessarily have known that I must be, here to protect my legation and the citizens of the United States in such contingency.

I have, &c.,

I. P. CHRISTIANCY.

[Inclosure 1 in No. 194.—Translation.]

Mr. Barinaga to Mr. Christiancy.

OFFICE OF THE SECRETARY FOR FOREIGN AFFAIRS,
Lima, September 14, 1880.

Mr. MINISTER: Having been informed by your excellency of your voyage to Santiago de Chili, with the object of offering to the government of that republic the mediation of the United States in order to bring about a peace with Peru and Bolivia, a mediation which, having been accepted by Chili, you have therefore proposed to my government, I have to make known to your excellency that, after conferring with the minister plenipotentiary of Bolivia, my government has decided to accept your offer, purely from deference to the Government of the United States, and notwithstanding that the motives which induced Chili to declare war against Peru and the manner in which she has carried it on up to the present day prove to us how far she is from the path of moderation and justice, without which no peace is possible, as I had the honor to make known to your excellency in our verbal conference upon this matter.

The acts which the Chilian forces have just committed more than a hundred leagues distant from our army, and without any warlike object, sacking, burning, and destroying the property of both natives and foreigners, immediately after accepting the mediation of your government, are not only not compatible with the regard due to a friendly mediator, but create a feeling of indignation which it is very difficult to repress. My government limits itself to the expression of this feeling, leaving to that of your excellency, and to your excellency also, the manner of appreciating our conduct.

My government believes that, if its desire for peace and the regard it has for the government and people of the United States have determined it (notwithstanding the evident justice of its cause and the confidence it has respecting the exit of the war, and leaving on one side all that we have suffered), to entertain negotiations for peace, still all such motives will fall before the painful evidence we have that we are fighting with those who infringe the laws of civilization and the respect which every nation should show one to another.

I have the pleasure on this occasion to offer to your excellency my esteem.

MANUEL A. BARINAGA.

His Excellency Mr. I. P. CHRISTIANCY,
Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary of the United States of America.

[Inclosure 2 in No. 194—Telegram.]

Colonel Lynch to Mr. Derteano.

T. DERTEANO:

In accordance with the instructions which I have received from my government, I impose on your sugar factory (Ingenis) of Palo Seco a war contribution of 100,000 pesos, in silver, or the equivalent of this sum. If you do not reply immediately, giving the corresponding orders to your employé to pay the said contribution, I shall have, to my regret, to destroy completely the factory of Palo Seco. You may state the manner of paying the mentioned war contribution.

(Signed:) The chief of the division of the Chilian army at Chimbote.

[Inclosure 3 in No. 194.]

Mr. Christiancy to Mr. Osborn.

(In the body of Mr. Christiancy's dispatch.)

[Inclosure 4 in No. 194.]

Mr. Christiancy to the Chilian Commander.

No. 72.] LEGATION OF THE UNITED STATES,
Lima, Peru, September 13, 1880.

To the Commander of the Chilian forces at Chimbote and in the north of Peru:

SIR: I have just returned from Santiago, where, with the American minister, Mr. Osborn, I had a full and free conference with the Chilian Government, which has accepted the mediation of the United States for the negotiations of peace with Peru and Bolivia. I am now authorized to say that Peru accepts that mediation, and that negotiations for peace will be at once entered upon. When I consulted with the Chilian Government I was not authorized to say that Peru would accept the mediation of the United States, but now I am authorized to say that Peru accepts and that the ambassadors of all the belligerents are likely to meet as early as the fore part of October next for that purpose,

I do not and cannot assume to interfere with any instructions you may have from your government as to the course you have been directed to take; but you will, I hope, appreciate my motives and those of the government I represent (which is equally friendly to all the belligerents) when I suggest to you that, so far as your orders will permit, it would be judicious and tend to the attainment of an early peace, to avoid all depredations and causes of irritation not rendered obligatory by your orders. And you will permit me to say that I know there is a very strong feeling among the ministers of foreign governments here and at Santiago against depredations upon mere private property not demanded by some actual military necessity in attacking the armed forces of your enemy, or the levying contributions upon it, and especially as such depredations may be committed or forced contributions levied upon private property known to belong to citizens of friendly and neutral nations, from which, as you can readily see, many complications and reclamations may arise.

The Government of Chili will be at once informed of the acceptance by Peru of the friendly mediation of the United States and her readiness to enter upon negotiations under such auspices.

Had I been able while at Santiago to assure the Chilian Government of the willingness of Peru thus to enter upon negotiations, as Chili consented to do, I am strongly inclined to the opinion that, if your expedition had been dispatched at all, it would have been under orders somewhat modified and less stringent than they now probably are; but I cannot ask you to adopt my opinion. I fully recognize the fact that you must act upon your own views of what the circumstances and the orders of your government may demand.

Allow me in conclusion to express to your excellency the high regard and esteem with which I subscribe myself, &c.,

I. P. CHRISTIANCY,
United States Minister to Peru.

[Inclosure 5 in No. 194.]

Mr. Christiancy to the Chilian Commander.

No. 73.] LEGATION OF THE UNITED STATES,
Lima, Peru, September 14, 1880.

To the Commander of the Chilian forces at Chimbote and in the north of Peru:

SIR: I am well aware that the property of neutrals in an enemy's country must, to a considerable extent, abide the like risks of war as that of individual citizens of the enemy's country.

But one of the principal causes of this rule is the difficulty which the attacking belligerent must encounter in ascertaining whether the property belongs to citizens of a friendly nation or to those of the belligerent nation. For the purpose of enabling you to decide this question in the case I am about to present, I have the honor to inform you that the Hacienda Suchiman, thirty miles from the port of Chimbote, and upon the line of the Chimbote and Huaraz Railway, is the exclusive property of Edward C. DuBois, a citizen of the United States of America, and that he is also the owner of all the buildings, crops, stock, and property on said Hacienda, due proof of which ownership has been filed in this legation.

I should, therefore, esteem it as a friendly act towards the Government of the United States if said Hacienda and property can be exempted from all depredations not rendered actually necessary by the exigencies of war.

Please accept the assurance of the high regard and esteem with which I have the honor to subscribe myself, &c.,

I. P. CHRISTIANCY,
United States Minister to Peru.

[Inclosure 6 in No. 194.]

Mr. Christiancy to Mr. Nugent.

LEGATION OF THE UNITED STATES,
Lima, Peru, September 15, 1880.

DEAR SIR: Please send by government telegraph the inclosed dispatch to Mr. Osborn, American minister to Santiago, without a moment's delay.

Please also forward to him by first mail the letter I send you for Mr. Osborn, by steamer.

Yours truly,

I. P. CHRISTIANCY,

C. M. NUGENT, Esq.,
United States Consular Agent, Arica, Peru.

[Inclosure 7 in No. 194.—Telegram.]

Mr. Christiancy to Mr. Osborn.

LEGATION OF THE UNITED STATES,
Lima, Peru, September 15, 1880.

Hon. THOMAS A. OSBORN,
United States Minister, Santiago:

Peru accepts; Bolivia, through her minister here accepts. But the depredations now being committed upon private property of non-combatants along the coast of Peru are calculated to exasperate the people and defeat the prospect of peace.

I. P. CHRISTIANCY.

[Inclosure 8 in 194.]

Mr. Christiancy to Chilian Commander.

LEGATION OF THE UNITED STATES,
Lima, Peru, September 16, 1880.

To the Commander of the Chilian forces along the coast of Peru, North of Callao:

SIR: Being informed by Admiral Tuneros that the orders of your government to him and to yourself are to spare as far as possible the property of citizens of neutral and friendly nations, which I am sure will be properly appreciated by all such nations, in order to enable you to carry into full effect the good intentions of your government. I take the liberty of informing you that John W. Grace, esq., recently of California, now temporarily resident of Lima, is a citizen of the United States of America, and entitled to protection as such, and I further certify that he has filed in this legation satisfactory and clear evidence that he is the true and lawful owner of the sugar estate known as Checlin and Hacienda Arrelea, situated in the province of Trujillo, and you will allow me to express the hope that these properties may be exempted from injury by your forces.

Please accept the assurance of the high regard and esteem with which I have the honor to subscribe myself, &c.,

I. P. CHRISTIANCY,
Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary of the United States to Peru.

[Inclosure 9 in 194.—Telegram.]

Mr. Christiancy to Mr. Osborn.

LEGATION OF THE UNITED STATES,
Lima, Peru, September 16, 1880.

Hon. THOMAS A. OSBORN,
United States Minister, Santiago, Chili:

Should the reputed expedition of the Chilian army to Lima take place before and in the face of the proposed negotiations there will be no mediation. It would place the United States in an ignominious position. The acceptance of Peru might be withdrawn, and I should not be able to leave Lima, though it were not withdrawn; as in that event I should be compelled to be at my post here and all our naval vessels would have to be here. If Chili does not wish to prevent peace she will not send this expedition now. If expedition does not come, expect to be at Arica with ambassadors about 5th October.

I. P. CHRISTIANCY,
United States Minister.

No. 280.

Mr. Christiancy to Mr. Evarts.

No. 195.] LEGATION OF THE UNITED STATES,
Lima, Peru, September 18, 1880. (Received October 22.)

SIR: Referring to your dispatch No 90, in reference to complaint of Chilian Government against Mr. Merriam, our consul at Iquique, I have the honor to inform you that I had no means or opportunity to investigate the charge until I went south to Santiago, as stated in my recent dispatches. I was informed by Mr. Osborn, at Santiago, as well as by the office of foreign relations there, that Mr. Merriam was suspected of being the medium of communication between Peruvian officers and their government, and of being generally friendly to Peru, but the only specific charge against him was that sent you by Mr. Osborn, to which you refer in your dispatch No. 90.

On my return from Valparaiso, on September 6, 1880, I got the Wachusett to stop at Iquique (finding we should lose no time, as we should otherwise arrive at Arica in the night and have to wait till morning.) I there called upon Mr. Merriam, who most explicitly denied the only specific charge made against him, that of forwarding a letter or attempting to forward a letter from the Peruvian general, Montero, to his government, and all notice or knowledge that any such letter as that referred to had ever been addressed to him, or that he had ever received it.

I inclose here a copy of his statement made in writing, September 6, 1880, also a copy of his supplemental letter of September 6, received by me three days since by mail.

It will be readily seen that, in the face of these letters, I cannot remove Mr. Merriam without some evidence tending to impeach his statements. I saw the captain of the port of Iquique September 6, and said to him that I had no evidence of any wrong in this matter on the part of Mr. Merriam, and that if he had any, I would thank him to forward it to me, as our government would not uphold our consul in aiding to keep up such correspondence of Peruvian officers to the prejudice of Chili.

Certainly the mere attempt of General Montero to get Merriam to forward the letter in question, without any knowledge of this on the part of Merriam and without such letter ever reaching his hands, cannot be treated as evidence against him. He married a Peruvian wife, and his sympathies may be with Peru, and probably are so, but this is too indefinite a cause for me to act upon in removing him. The department has a larger discretion.

I am, &c.,

I. P. CHRISTIANCY.

[Inclosure 1 in No. 195.]

Mr. Merriam to Mr. Christiancy.

SEPTEMBER 6, 1880.

* * * With reference to the subject of your dispatch, marked "confidential," dated June 10 last, I will state to you that your dispatch gave me the first intimation which I ever had that General Montero had ever proposed to send official correspondence through this consulate. Had he or any other of the belligerent parties proposed to me to forward such communications I should certainly have refused to do so. The correspondence referred to never came into my possession, nor did I know until I received your letter that such correspondence had been sent to my care; nor have I ever to my knowledge been the medium of communication, directly or indirectly, since the beginning of the war up to the present time, between the belligerents.

J. W. MERRIAM,
United States Consul.

[Inclosure 2 in No. 195.]

Mr. Merriam to Mr. Christiancy.

CONSULATE OF THE UNITED STATES,
Iquique, September 6, 1880.

SIR: As supplementary to the conversation which we had in the consulate this morning I wish to put in writing, in an official form, one or two statements with reference to the subject of your dispatch marked "confidential," dated June 10 last. I will state that that dispatch gave me the first intimation which I ever had that General Montero had ever proposed to send official correspondence through this consulate.

Had he or any other of the belligerent parties proposed to me to forward such communications I should certainly have refused to do so.

The correspondence referred to never came into my possession, nor did I know until I received your letter that such correspondence had been sent to my care; nor have I ever, to my knowledge, been the medium of communication, directly or indirectly, since the beginning of the war up to the present time, between the belligerents.

I have, &c.,

J. W. MERRIAM.

No. 281.

Mr. Christiancy to Mr. Evarts.

No. 197.] LEGATION OF THE UNITED STATES,
Lima, Peru, September 30, 1880. (Received November 16.)

SIR: I leave to-morrow morning on the Lackawanna for Arica, to attend the proposed negotiations there, the Peruvian negotiators going on an unarmed ship of their own, the Limeña. Owing to the Chilian operations along the north coast of Peru, and the destruction of public and private property there (where there is no Peruvian armed force), and the exasperation thus caused, the whole scheme of mediation has, after it had been agreed to by Peru, and I had notified Mr. Osborn of this, been upon the point of being abandoned and rejected by Peru, and it has been only after my most earnest and repeated efforts that she has finally agreed to go on with the attempt to negotiate under our mediation; and, I confess, I have not now so strong a hope of a successful issue of the negotiations as I had three weeks ago.

Chili has evidently for the present determined to insist upon the cession of Tarapaca, and the Peruvian Government profess to have determined not to cede an inch of territory.

Both Peru and Bolivia now prefer the arbitration of the United States to her mediation, because they think that the demands of Chili will be so exorbitant that no agreement can be reached, and they wished to change the whole programme to that of arbitration. I have said to them that this would be departing from all the preliminary arrangements which had been agreed upon by all the parties; that it would lead to delay, as our government would first have to be consulted as well as that of Chili, and that it would place the Governments of Peru and Bolivia in an awkward position, after both had accepted, now to retract; besides, it would be in no way complimentary to the United States, to say the least; that it was best to make the attempt to negotiate as at first proposed; and if that should disclose an impossibility to agree upon terms, then arbitration might be attempted and even proposed by the negotiators; but that it was in every way desirable that all the belligerents should, if possible, first agree upon some general basis, and then to submit minor questions only to the arbitration of a third power; as no such third power would desire to decide upon the whole question (upon an open field) upon what terms the belligerents should settle a peace, &c. They have finally yielded to this reasoning, and the attempt to negotiate under our mediation will proceed.

I have been so constantly engaged in these matters and in providing for the protection of American citizens, especially during my absence and in making preparations to leave, that I have not been able to write you upon several subjects of interest, nor even to prepare my quarterly account for the quarter ending to-day, but I have instructed my clerk, Mr. Renant, to send you several newspapers showing the operations of the war and the financial expedients resorted to here; and if any great event likely to be interesting to you should occur here during my absence to inform you, signing his name only as my clerk.

I have, &c.,

I. P. CHRISTIANCY.

No. 282.

Mr. Christiancy to Mr. Evarts.

No. 198.] LEGATION OF THE UNITED STATES,
On board U. S. Steamer Lackawanna,
Bay of Arica, Peru, October 24, 1880. (Received November 16.)

SIR: Referring to my last dispatch from the legation at Lima, No. 197, I will say that I left Lima on the morning of October 1 and went on board the Lackawanna, which was ready to sail at 12 m., and we had expected the Chilian vessel Chalaco, with the Peruvian plenipotentiaries to be ready to leave then; but she did not get out of port until evening. We, therefore, did not leave until 6 a. m. of the 2d instant. The Peruvian Government was averse to Arica as the place of negotiations, and ordered their vessel to stop at Mollendo, hoping that I would be able to get Chili to consent that the negotiations should take place there or at some other place north of Pacocha and not in possession of Chilian troops. We, therefore, left the Chalaco with the Peruvian plenipotentiaries at Mollendo, where I had expected to meet Mr. Adams; but, he not having arrived, I telegraphed him to come on, and I then went on to Arica with the Lackawanna, where I arrived at daylight on the 6th instant, expecting to find Mr. Osborn and the Chilian plenipotentiaries, but found they had not arrived, and from telegrams from him and a letter I received here, found it a little doubtful whether they were coming at all. By the 9th, however, it was settled that they would come. In the mean time I had been making an effort to induce the Chilian Government to consent to a change of place, but finding they would not consent to a change until preliminaries should be agreed upon, and that if we waited for the mail-steamer to communicate with the Peruvian negotiators some days might be lost, I induced Captain Gillis to return with me to Mollendo, where I met them and explained the situation, but got no express consent from them to come to Arica.

Mr. Adams and the Bolivian negotiators arrived at Mollendo while we were there on the 12th instant, and Mr. Adams came with us here, leaving Mollendo on the 14th in the morning, and arriving here in the evening, yet uncertain whether the Peruvian plenipotentiaries would come here, but informing them that we should wait here for them a short time, and if they did not come, should start for Callao.

Mr. Baptista (one of the Bolivian negotiators who had come down with us) wrote to his colleague and the Peruvian negotiators at Mollendo, urging them to come, and I also wrote, and on the evening of the 20th instant, the Chalaco arrived here with the negotiators of Peru and the remaining one from Bolivia, Mr. Osborn and some of the Chilian negotiators having in the mean time arrived here on the 17th, and the others since. On the 22d, at 12 m., the necessary notices and preliminary measures having been given and taken, the plenipotentiaries held their first preliminary meeting in the cabin of the Lackawanna; Mr. Osborn, the senior United States minister on the part of the United States acting as chairman; and their respective powers being found in due form, the plenipotentiaries of Chili (in accordance with our suggestion previously made) handed to the plenipotentiaries of Peru and Bolivia (now on board the Chalaco) their first proposition or basis of peace, and the meeting closed. The Peruvian and Bolivian plenipotentiaries have these propositions now under consideration, and have given notice that they will be ready for another meeting on board the Lackawanna tomorrow at 1 p. m.

I inclose a translation of the terms or essential bases demanded by Chili, as furnished to the plenipotentiaries of the allies. I have not time to give copy in Spanish, as the mail-steamer which will take this is now in port. I will simply say of these propositions that to me they do not appear to have been made with any expectation that they would be accepted by the allies; since they are such that they could hardly be accepted without such a degree of national humiliation as would be inconsistent with that self-respect essential to the independent national existence of the allies; and if made with the serious intention of being insisted upon, I should be satisfied there will be no peace, and that Chili is not desirous of peace.

But I think the more reasonable conclusion is that they were purposely made much more exacting than the negotiators intend ultimately to insist upon, for the purpose of drawing out propositions of a more moderate and reasonable character from the allies, and I am strongly inclined to the belief that Chili will be satisfied with a cession by Bolivia of all her possessions between the Andes and the coast, and by Peru of the province of Tarapaca, bounded north by the river Camarones, in full of all her demands. Such, I was semi-officially informed by the President and Secretary of State of Chili, and by Mr. Hunaens (selected by them to communicate with me) when I was in Santiago, about the close of August last, and when they informed me they had accepted the mediation of the United States. But the probabilities of the result will now soon begin to develop.

For the present and until the negotiations among the plenipotentiaries elicit the real points of disagreement, we, as mediators, do not propose to interfere.

I am, &c.,

I. P. CHRISTIANCY.

[Inclosure in No. 198.—Translation.]

Memorandum of the essential conditions which Chili exacts in order to arrive at a peace, presented by the Chilian plenipotentiaries to the Peruvian and Bolivian plenipotentiaries in the conference held on board the United States ship Lackawanna, the 22d of October, 1880.

First. Cession to Chili of such territory of Peru and Bolivia as extends to the south of the valley of Camarones and to the west of the line of the Andean Cordillera, which separates Peru and Bolivia, as far as the valley of the Chacarilla, and to the west also of a line which, from this point being prolonged, would strike the frontier of the Argentine Republic, passing through the center of Lake Ascotan.

Second. Payment to Chili by Peru and Bolivia jointly of the sum of twenty millions of dollars, four millions whereof are to be paid in cash.

Third. Return of the properties of which Chilian citizens in Peru and Bolivia have been despoiled.

Fourth. Return of the transport Rimac.

Fifth. Abrogation of the secret treaty made between Peru and Bolivia in the year 1873, leaving at the same time void, and of no effect whatever, the steps taken to bring about a confederation between the two nations.

Sixth. Retention on the part of Chili of the territory of Moquegua, Tacna, and Arica occupied by Chilian forces, until the obligations to which the preceding conditions refer have been complied with.

Seventh. The obligation on the part of Peru not to fortify the port of Arica when it shall be given up to her, nor at any time, and an understanding that in future it shall be an exclusively commercial port.

A true copy.

On board the Lackawana, Arica, October 22, 1880.

DOMINGO GANA,
Secretary of the Plenipotentiary of Chili.

Mr. García to Mr. Evarts.

No. 283.

[Translation.]

LEGATION OF PERU IN THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA.
New York, October 25, 1880. (Received October 27.)

MOST EXCELLENT SIR: I hasten to inform your excellency that I have received a telegram from Panama, by which I am officially informed of the acceptance by my government of the good offices proffered by that of your excellency through your representatives in Peru, Bolivia, and Chili, with a view to securing the restoration of peace among those republics. I am also informed that my country has appointed Dr. Antonio Arenas and Captain Aurelio García y García, a naval officer, to represent it in the negotiations which are to be commenced.

Peru, having been forced into a struggle which she did not provoke and for which she was not prepared, has suffered, as your excellency is aware, every kind of injury, both material and moral, hoping to be able, sooner or later, to make a suitable return for the same; and it is just at the moment when she is in possession of the elements necessary to check the advance of Chili that your excellency's government interposes and offers to put an end to the disastrous war in which we are involved.

The contest is not one of my country's seeking. Having been attacked by surprise, she has done no more than defend herself against the most unjust of all aggressions. Although constantly fighting at an immense disadvantage, she has shed her blood and sacrificed her treasure in order to furnish evidence to the world that she is worthy of the place which she occupies among free nations. The material results, however, have been unfavorable to her, and she has been forced to undergo the sore trial of suffering the outrages of the victor, which have indeed been greatly at variance with what is sanctioned by justice and by modern civilization.

Recently, after Chili had accepted your excellency's mediation, a portion of her army landed in the most defenseless part of my country, where, in violation of every principle and of every consideration, it was guilty of excesses which I do not here characterize as I might, out of respect both to your excellency and to myself. Nevertheless, Peru will enter the path of peace, through the mediation of the great American Republic, thus obeying her generous instincts and suppressing the feelings of just indignation which the acts of vandalism that have been committed by her implacable enemy have necessarily aroused in her breast. Unfortunately this will not suffice for the success of the negotiations, which have doubtless by this time begun. But little is to be expected from a country that carries on war as Chili has thus far done, exciting the abhorrence of all civilized nations, and I do not expect that your excellency will attain the object which you so nobly have in view. The advantage which the fortune of arms has given to that country renders it highly improbable that she will comply with reasonable requirements, and it is almost certain that the war will have to be continued, while it is impossible for any one to foretell what will be the end of its horrors. Be this as it may, Peru will ever gratefully remember that your excellency's government has taken the most lively interest in bringing about the termination of a conflict which ought never to have been commenced, but in which she has given splendid evidences of her profound respect for the principles of right and of social ethics.

I avail myself of this occasion to offer your excellency the assurance of my highest respect and consideration, and to subscribe myself your excellency's faithful and obedient servant.

IGNO. GARCÍA.

No. 284.

Mr. Christiancy to Mr. Evarts.

[Telegram.]

SANTIAGO DE CHILI, October 27, 1880.

SECRETARY OF STATE,
Washington, United States.

Peru refuses Tarapaca; Chili refuses arbitration of United States.

CHRISTIANCY.

No. 285.

Mr. Christiancy to Mr. Evarts.

No. 200.] LEGATION OF THE UNITED STATES,
Lima, Peru, November 2, 1880. (Received December 6.)

SIR: I have the honor to inclose to you the protocols of the conferences of the plenipotentiaries of Peru, Bolivia, and Chili, held at Arica from the 22d to the 27th October last under the mediation of the United States; also translation of the same. These protocols show the whole substance of the conferences, but in explanation of the time and manner of the presentation of the terms proposed by Chili as the basis on which she was willing to negotiate, and which were handed to Mr.

Arenas, as stated on pages 15 and 16 first protocol, it is proper to say that they were handed to the latter just as he was about to address the conference, and he did not read them before he spoke, nor were they read till after the first meeting was broken up. This may explain some of the remarks of the Peruvian and Bolivian plenipotentiaries made at the first meeting.

I wish further to say that while I think the Chilian Government itself was honestly desirous of peace when they accepted the mediation of the United States, and may still have wished for peace at the time of the conferences, yet from many circumstances I am satisfied or at least strongly inclined to believe that before the conferences actually took place the government had been driven by the popular clamor of its citizens, instigated and encouraged by several parties in opposition, to give up the hope, and even the purpose of making a fair and reasonable effort to secure peace, and that the government was, in effect, compelled to demand such terms as even, in their own opinion, could afford no probability of acceptance by the allies, and thus, in effect, as they must have known, to render the mediation of the United States utterly nugatory.

I am led to this conclusion,

1st. By information given me by Mr. Osborn, as to the increased violence of the popular clamor to go to Lima, and its effect upon the Chilian Government.

2d. By the fact that when I was in Chili about the last of August, and had an informal conference with the President and his Secretary of State, as well as Mr. Hunaeus, who had been authorized to confer with me, no such exorbitant terms of peace were demanded, but only the cession of Tarapaca by Peru and, as I understood, the Bolivian littoral south of it, though the latter (as to Bolivia, was left mainly to be inferred rather than expressed).

3d. From the fact that the Peruvian officers at Tacna and Arica, where I met them on the 6th, 7th, and 8th October, spoke apparently with strong hopes of peace, but after about the 18th or 20th of October, and more especially after some of the plenipotentiaries of Chili arrived at Arica, the general tone of remarks of Chilian officers seemed to have entirely changed, and they declared generally to those with whom they conversed (as reported to me) that there would be no peace, and that they expected to go to Lima.

4th. The rapid preparations making before our eyes for that expedition.

5th. The fact that when the Peruvian plenipotentiaries arrived on the Chalaco in the Bay of Arica, and during the seven or eight days they were there, none of the Chilian authorities, nor their plenipotentiaries, called upon them at all, nor offered them any civilities.

6th. That while the Peruvian vessel remained in the Bay of Arica, the Chilians took occasion to fix a target a little further out from the Morro than this vessel, and but a short distance ahead of it, and spent the whole afternoon in firing from the Morro at this target with their artillery; and the Huascar which came in while we were there and remained some two or three days, when she left, took occasion to run almost around the Chalaco, as if purposely to insult the Peruvian plenipotentiaries; and,

7th. The general tone of most of the Chilian press which I have seen, which demands not only the capture, but the sacking and pillage of Lima, which the common soldiery, as I am informed, declare has been held out to them as an inducement to volunteer, but for which I will not vouch, as I am slow to believe that any respectable officers of Chili could be guilty of such extravagance, though subordinate enlisting officers may be.

From all present appearances I shall expect the Chilian army around Lima within about a month from this time, perhaps sooner, and possibly later, though, as it seems to me, it would be their true policy, before coming here, to take the railroad from Mollendo through Arequipa to Puno, and to hold all south of that line, which I have some suspicion they may do before coming here.

Peru has here some thirty-five thousand men to defend Lima; they are well armed, and if well drilled and commanded ought to be able to protect Lima; but they lack experience, and nothing but the actual trial can decide whether Lima can be taken. If taken I shall expect the worst, as the Chilian soldiery, though personally brave, are slightly superior in civilization to our Utes and Sioux Indians in their mode of carrying on practical warfare. Their officers may endeavor to keep them within the rules of civilized warfare, but they have hitherto failed, and I think will again fail, should they be victorious.

But, whatever may happen, I propose to remain at my post, to rely upon the protection of our flag, and afford all the protection in my power to American citizens.

I have not the time to-day to give you a full account of the various steps which have been taken by letters and by telegraph to bring about the meeting of the plenipotentiaries at Arica, and to give you copies of the various letters and telegrams which became necessary. This I must defer to a future occasion, as I think it more important now to give you the results and their causes.

I have, &c.,

I. P. CHRISTIANCY.

[Inclosure 1 in No. 200.]

Report of Messrs. Osborn, Christiancy, and Adams to Mr. Evarts.

ON BOARD U. S. S. LACKAWANNA,
Bay of Arica, October 27, 1880.

SIR: The undersigned, ministers of the United States, accredited to the Governments of Chili, Peru, and Bolivia, respectfully report that, in pursuance of arrangements concluded by us with the governments to which we are accredited, on the 22d of October instant, the following-named plenipotentiaries met in conference in our presence on board the United States ship Lackawanna, then anchored in the Bay of Arica, for the purpose of discussing the existing complications between the three belligerents, and concluding, if possible, a peace:

Don Mariano Baptista and Don Juan Crisóstomo Carrillo, plenipotentiaries of Bolivia;

Don Eulogio Altamirano, Don José Francisco Vergara, and Don Eusebio Lillo, plenipotentiaries of Chili; and Don Antonio Arenas and Don Aurelio García y García, plenipotentiaries of Peru.

Charles S. Rand, of Lima, was duly named secretary and interpreter for the undersigned pending the conference.

The powers of the various ministers were duly exchanged, and after a brief session the conference adjourned.

It again convened on the 25th of October, when the discussion of the subject which brought them together was entered upon and continued at length. An adjournment was finally had with the understanding that there should be another reunion on the 27th. On this latter day the conference again assembled and, after again exchanging views, the conclusion was unanimously reached that, in view of the instructions which they had received from their respective governments, it would be useless for them longer to continue their efforts for the purpose of bringing about a peace.

Having exhausted upon our part all efforts to produce a desirable result, we were reluctantly compelled to the conclusion that a dissolution of the conference was unavoidable. Thereupon the conference was declared closed.

We have the honor to inclose herein protocols of the conference in Spanish, with English translations thereof, and to remain,

Very respectfully, &c.,

THOMAS A. OSBORN,
United States Minister to Chili.
I. P. CHRISTIANCY,
United States Minister to Peru.
CHARLES ADAMS,
Minister Resident to Bolivia.

[Inclosure 2 in No. 200.—Translation.]

Protocols of the Conference held between the plenipotentiaries of Bolivia, Chili, and Peru upon the mediation offered by the United States of America.

PROTOCOL NO. 1.

On board of the North American corvette Lackawanna, in the Bay of Arica, on the twenty-second day of October, of the year one thousand eight hundred and eighty, the plenipotentiaries having met together, as follows:

For the Republic of Bolivia, his excellency Señor MARIANO BAPTISTA.

For the Republic of Chili, their excellencies Señores EULOGIO ALTAMIRANO, EUSEBIO LILLO, and Colonel Don JOSÉ FRANCISCO VERGARA, secretary of state in the departments of war and the navy.

For the Republic of Peru, their excellencies Señores ANTONIO ARENAS and AURELIO GARCÍA Y GARCÍA.

In presence of their excellencies the representatives of the Republic of the United States of North America, Mr. THOMAS A. OSBORN, accredited near the Government of Chili; Mr. ISAAC P. CHRISTIANCY, accredited near the Government of Peru, and General CHARLES ADAMS, accredited near the Government of Bolivia.

His excellency Mr. OSBORN, dean of the American ministers, stated that the three representatives of the United States had seen fit to appoint Mr. Charles S. Rand as their secretary and interpreter, and that he presumed that each legation had appointed one ad hoc; he begged, therefore, that if in the translations made by Mr. Rand, as interpreter, there should be observed the least inexactness, they would call attention thereto at once.

His excellency Mr. OSBORN then said that the representatives of the United States desired that the sessions of this conference should be opened with as little ceremony as may be compatible with the gravity of the occasion, and regard it as useless at this moment to enter into a consideration of the question as to the origin of the mediation proposed by the United States, or the priority of its suggestion; that it is very gratifying to record that the conference is an accomplished fact, as is attested to-day by the assembling here of the honorable members thereof; and it is hoped that it will enter upon its deliberations with an earnest purpose to bring about the high object for which it has been convened; that it is unnecessary to give assurances that the government and people of the United States feel a profound interest in the welfare of the three nations engaged in the present war; nor could it be otherwise, since the United States inaugurated republican government in America, and are, therefore, in a measure responsible for its existence here; that, having been the first to recognize the independence of these republics, they have watched with a careful eye, from that day till now, their efforts to keep pace with an advancing civilization, and have rejoiced in their progress and prosperity; that they feel that republican institutions are to-day on trial before the world, and that in bringing about a happy exit thereof all our nations here represented are equally interested; that it is but natural, therefore, that they should deeply deplore the existence of the present state of war, and should anxiously desire its termination; that it is this feeling which has inspired the present attitude of the United States, and it is the sincere hope of its government that ere this conference shall adjourn, an honorable and a lasting peace may be brought about; that the plenipotentiaries of the three republics are doubtless aware of the exact position occupied by the American representatives, yet it may not be superfluous to state that they do not propose to take any part whatever in the discussion of the questions which may come before the conference; that the bases upon which peace is to be reached are questions for the exclusive consideration of the plenipotentiaries; but that nevertheless they are ready and willing to assist the negotiators with their friendly co-operation whenever the same may seem desirable. He closed, saying: "We beg you, gentlemen, we implore you, to labor earnestly to bring about a peace, and, in the name of our government, we hope that your efforts may be crowned with success."

Mr. OSBORN then declared that the presentation and exchange of credentials was in order, which having been proceeded with, they were found to be in good and due form.

His excellency Mr. BAPTISTA caused to be noted, in presenting the credentials of his colleague, his excellency Hon. Señor JUAN CRISÓSTOMO CARRILLO, plenipotentiary of Bolivia, that the latter was prevented from being present at this first session by serious illness caused by his being upon the sea.

Mr. OSBORN then declared the sessions of the conference open.

His excellency Mr. ALTAMIRANO said that, in his own name and that of his colleagues, he hastened to comply with the charge intrusted to him by his government, manifesting that the noble and disinterested efforts made by the most worthy representatives of the American Union to put an end to the sacrifices of war had awakened the gratitude of the government and people of Chili; and that, whatever might be the result of the conferences, and even although they should not result in the bringing about of peace, Chili could never ignore the magnitude of the service rendered; that he took pleasure in recognizing the exactness of the observation of Mr. OSBORN, when in justifying the interest manifested by the great nation of the north in her development and prosperity, he recalled the fact that she had been the first to recognize the independence of Chili, adding that the proceedings of to-day evidenced that the same noble policy continued exercising its beneficent influence upon these republics. Touching the grave question of the moment, he stated that circumstances rendered it an imperative duty to endeavor to bring about an immediate solution; that, seeking for the mode of procedure best calculated to secure this end, he had thought necessary to group together in a memorandum the propositions which, according to his instructions, should form the groundwork of the treaty, in order that their excellencies the representatives of Peru and Bolivia, after duly considering them, might indicate whether the discussion could be opened upon those bases; since, proceeding otherwise, the risk would be incurred of wasting time unnecessarily, since, even were the earlier difficulties overcome, there would be no security that the last might not prove insuperable; that if this form of procedure were adopted, one copy of the memorandum referred to would be placed in the hands of his excellency Mr. ARENAS, a second in the hands of his excellency Mr. BAPTISTA, and a third copy delivered to the worthy president of the conference.

Mr. ALTAMIRANO concluded, stating that the memorandum contained only the principal demands of his government; that, later, they might be presented in another form more adequate to figure as articles of a treaty, and that, opportunely, he would present for discussion other propositions which, while of importance, had not been included in the memorandum, since, in view of their character, they were not considered as offering insuperable difficulties.

His excellency Mr. ARENAS said that his first expression in the name of the Government of Peru was one of cordial gratitude to that of the Great American Republic for the friendly attitude it had assumed during the present war in the Pacific, and for the earnest endeavors made by it for the termination of the dissensions to-day separating three republics, at one time sisters; that the government and people of Peru will never forget the elevated policy and fraternal sentiments which, from the time of her independence till to-day, have prompted the international course of the United States; that in so far as relates to the representatives of Peru in these conferences, it is his duty to declare with frank sincerity that they have come here with the idea of obtaining peace, it being always understood that it be equally honorable for Peru, for Bolivia, and for Chili; that upon this ground they will treat with entire good faith, under the guidance of the principles of honor and of justice; that he entertained the hope of reaching a settlement; but should this not be attained, there would remain to the plenipotentiaries of Peru the satisfaction of having endeavored to re-establish harmony upon this continent; that he agrees with Señor ALTAMIRANO in believing that the points to be discussed should be clearly defined so as not to lose time in the examination of indeterminate questions, and in that sense accepts the form proposed for the proceedings to be followed, adding, however, that the propositions contained in the memorandum just presented by Mr. ALTAMIRANO, of the contents of which the representatives of Peru are unaware, should be the subject of careful and serious study, for which reason he does not think it would be proper to name at once the day for the next conference, and requests, in conclusion, that the necessary time be allowed him to study the matter, offering on his part to advise his excellency Mr. Osborn, so soon as the plenipotentiaries are ready, that he may be pleased to call a further session.

His excellency Mr. BAPTISTA said that he, in turn, felt the necessity of expressing the sentiments of his government and people; that the United States had, as it were, created and modeled the democratic institutions of South America, which from their birth had developed by their example; that the United States exerted a legitimate influence upon the signification and progress of their political life; it was not strange, therefore, that its government should intervene amicably, upon the first occasion when, according to the accurate judgment of its representatives, these very institutions are put upon trial. In order to maintain them, the Government of Bolivia will join in negotiations for peace with sincerity, with no other limits in obtaining it than right and justice, interpreted not with the help of declamation but according to the reality of events as they present themselves. He believed that the belligerent governments would seriously seek this solution, and that the elevation of ideas and of character of their excellencies the plenipotentiaries was a guarantee of effective deliberations, which would seek inspiration, not in the ephemeral excitement of the political passions of the three nationalities, but in the real, permanent, and well considered interests of the countries they represented; that as regarded the proposition of his excellency Señor ALTAMIRANO, he understood that it was not a simple memorandum of questions, but a series of propositions; that only thus would the labors of the conference be facilitated; that in this sense he accepted the proposition.

His excellency Mr. CHRISTIANCY said that he had but few words to add to what had already been said by his colleague, Mr. OSBORN, the senior representative of the United States, and in which he fully concurred; that the United States having taken the lead in the establishment of republican institutions on this continent, that government and its people felt a deep interest in the peace and prosperity of all the South American republics and of their institutions, born under the influence of their initiative; that for these reasons they desired to do all in their power, through their good offices, to promote the peace and harmony of these States; that there were many other considerations which should exert a powerful influence upon the representatives of the three belligerent nations here assembled; that the people of all were descended from one common nationality, spoke the same language, possessed the same institutions, customs, and modes of thought, and professed the same religion, and that many of them were bound together by the dearest of family ties, and that, finally, from the high and distinguished character of the illustrious representatives chosen to take part in the present conference, he looked confidently for a favorable solution.

At the suggestion of his excellency Mr. OSBORN, announcing that everything relative to the mediators, or whatsoever might interest their government, should be under the charge of their secretary, it was agreed that the protocol of the conference should be drawn up by the secretaries of the several legations. His excellency Mr. ARENAS stated that the secretary for Peru was Dr. Mariano Nicolás Valcrácel. His excellency Mr. ALTAMIRANO presented Mr. Domingo Gana as secretary for Chili, and his excellency Mr. BAPTISTA, Mr. Felix Arelino Aramayo for Bolivia.

Before adjourning it was agreed that his excellency Mr. ARENAS should indicate through his excellency Mr. OSBORN a day for the second conference, so soon as he had studied the memorandum presented by his excellency Mr. ALTAMIRANO, and which it was agreed should be inserted in the present minutes, its tenor being as follows:

"Memorandum of the essential conditions which Chili demands in order to arrive at a peace, presented by the Chilian plenipotentiaries in the conference held on board the United States ship Lackawanna, the 22d of October, 1880.

"First. Cession to Chili of such territory of Peru and Bolivia as extends to the south of the valley of Camarones and to the west of the line of the Andean Cordillera which separates Peru and Bolivia, as far as the valley of the Chacarilla, and to the west also of a line which, being prolonged from this point, would strike the Argentine frontier, passing through the center of Lake Ascotan.

"Second. Payment to Chili by Peru and Bolivia jointly of the sum of twenty millions of dollars, four millions whereof are to be paid in cash

"Third. Return of the properties of which Chilian citizens in Peru and Bolivia have been despoiled.

"Fourth. Return of the transport Rimac.

"Fifth. Abrogation of the secret treaty made between Peru and Bolivia in the year 1873, leaving at the same time the steps taken to bring about a confederation between the two nations void and of no effect whatever.

"Sixth. Retention on the part of Chili of the territory of Moquegua, Tacna, and Arica, occupied by Chilian forces, until the obligations to which the preceding conditions refer have been complied with.

"Seventh. An obligation on the part of Peru not to fortify the port of Arica when it shall be given up to her, nor at any time, and an undertaking that in future it shall be an exclusively commercial port."

Whereupon the session adjourned at 1 o'clock p. m.

In witness whereof they signed.

M. BAPTISTA.
JUAN C. CARRILLO.
J. F. VERGARA.
E. ALTAMIRANO.
EUS. LILLO.
ANTO. ARENAS AURELIO GA. Y GARCÍA.
THOMAS A. OSBORN.
I. P. CHRISTIANCY.
CHARLES ADAMS.

F. AVELINO ARAMAYO,
Secretary of the Bolivian Legation.
DOMINGO GANA,
Secretary of the Plenipotentiaries of Chili.
M. N. VALCÁRCEL,
Secretary of the Plenipotentiaries of Peru.
CHARLES S. RAND,
Secretary and Interpreter of the Mediators.

PROTOCOL NO. 2.

[Translation.]

On board the North American corvette Lackawanna, in the Bay of Arica, the twenty-fifth day of October, one thousand eight hundred and eighty, all the plenipotentiaries having met together, viz:

On the part of Bolivia, their excellencies Señor MARIANO BAPTISTA and Señor JUAN CRISÓSTOMO CARRILLO;

On the part of Chili, their excellencies Señores JOSÉ FRANCISCO VERGARA, secretary of state in the departments of war and the navy, EULOGIO ALTAMIRANO, and EUSEBIO LILLO;

On the part of Peru, their excellencies Señores ANTONIO ARENAS and AURELIO GARCÍA Y GARCÍA;

In the presence of the representatives of the United States of North America, his excellency Mr. THOMAS A. OSBORN, accredited near the Government of Chili, his excellency Mr. ISAAC P. CHRISTIANCY, accredited near the Government of Peru, and his excellency General CHARLES ADAMS, accredited near the Government of Bolivia.

The session was declared open at 1 o'clock, p. m.

The minutes of the preceding session were read and approved.

His excellency Mr. OSBORN inquired in what form the minutes should be signed, and it was agreed that they should be signed by all the plenipotentiaries and by the three representatives of the United States. They consequently proceeded to sign four copies, one of which remained in the office of the secretary of their excellencies the mediating ministers, another was destined for Bolivia, the third for Chili, and the remaining one for Peru.

His excellency Señor ARÉNAS then stated that the representatives of Peru had carefully studied the document presented by his excellency Mr. ALTAMIRANO, in which he sets forth, in the name of his government, the conditions under which peace may be obtained; that he waived the consideration of the words forming the title of that document, because, although some of them appeared unacceptable, he believed they had been employed without preconceived design; nor would he allude to the causes which had brought about the war, nor to the reasons which have been adduced to justify it, since a discussion of these points would be barren under present circumstances, and would only tend to remove the discussion from that calmness with which it is desirable to treat the grave question which has given rise to this conference.

Mr. ARENAS said in regard to the conditions proposed by his excellency the plenipotentiary of Chili that they had produced upon him a painful impression, since they close the door upon any reasonable or tranquil discussion; that the first one, especially, is so insurmountable an obstacle in the way of pacific negotiation that it is equivalent to an intimation to proceed no farther; that Chili has obtained advantages in the present war, holding in military occupation in consequence thereof certain districts of Peruvian and Bolivian territory over which she had never claimed any urisdiction, but having occupied them after various combats, she to-day believes herself transformed into the owner thereof, and that her military occupation is a title of dominion; that like doctrines certainly were sustained in other times and distant regions, but in Spanish America have not been invoked from the time of the independence down to the present time, having been considered incompatible with the tutelary bases of republican institutions; they lapsed beneath the powerful influence of the existing political system, and because they were highly dangerous for all South American republics.

Leaving these general considerations, which refer to the interests and tranquillity of the nations of this section of America, his excellency proceeded to examine the first of the conditions of peace presented by Chili, in its relation to Peru. The Republic of Peru, he said, by reason of its predominant ideas, the principles it professes, and the feelings animating all classes of society, is incapable of consenting to the seizure of any portion of her territory, and still less of that which to-day constitutes the principal source of her wealth. He was not unaware that nations, in the absence of a supreme judge who might settle their controversies, generally decide them upon the battle-field, the conqueror who has obtained the decisive victory (which is not the case in the present war) exacting that the party conquered, and without the means of continuing the struggle, shall yield to the demands which were the cause of hostilities; that in Peru these ideas are rooted in the public mind, being those professed and respected in republican America, and that he therefore believes, taking into consideration the present situation of the belligerents, a peace which was founded upon a cession of territory and a revival of the obsolete right of conquest would be an impossible peace; that even were the plenipotentiaries of Peru to accept and their government to ratify it—a supposition impossible to entertain—national sentiment would reject it and the continuation of the war be inevitable; that if the first condition be insisted upon, presenting it as indispensable in order to arrive at a settlement, all hope of peace must be relinquished, the efforts now being made become fruitless, with the prospect of new and disastrous hostilities before the belligerents; that, finally, the representatives of Peru deplore this result, not merely as patriots, but as Americans and as sincere friends of humanity. The fault cannot be imputed to them or to their government, since, if these negotiations fail, it will be through the influence of certain passions which have become inflamed so as to present as necessary the carrying on of a war of extermination, the consequences of which, if they be not measured to-day, will be suffered to-morrow.

His excellency Mr. ALTAMIRANO inquired if either of the representatives of Bolivia desired to add anything to the remarks of his excellency Mr. ARENAS, in order that his reply might embrace the joint expression of opinion of the allies.

His excellency Mr. BAPTISTA stated that he would prefer to hear the reply of one of the representatives of Chili to the plenipotentiary of Peru who had just spoken, after which he would manifest his views in regard to the rights of Bolivia.

His excellency Mr. ALTAMIRANO said that he found it difficult to describe the impression made upon him by the remarkable discourse of his excellency Mr. ARENAS. It is partly a painful one, since, after these utterances, all hope of a proximate peace seems vain, and yet it is to a certain extent grateful, since, as he hastens to acknowledge, he finds there all that clearness, all that firmness, all that honorable frankness which the statesman should employ when the honor and future of his country are in question.

For his own part, added his excellency Mr. ALTAMIRANO, he would proceed likewise to manifest the opinion of his government, which is in perfect harmony with that of his country, and would endeavor, in imitation of his excellency Mr. ARENAS, to express that opinion with perfect clearness and frankness.

In the first place, he declared that, in drawing up the memorandum, neither he nor his colleagues had the intention of employing any word which might appear unacceptable to their excellencies the representatives of Peru and Bolivia, and asked that a note be made of this manifestation. That paper was a simple memorandum, which, according to the intention of the first impulse, was not intended to figure among the documents of the conference.

Having made this declaration, which he trusted would be accepted, he would enter upon the principal question, as desired by his excellency Mr. BAPTISTA, and in so doing he would not swerve, for any consideration, from his firm intention not to contribute to leading the debate from proper limits. Keeping this end in view, he would not recall the origin and causes of this war, since it might bring up painful memories and recriminations; but would here place upon record that his government had sustained its lack of responsibility for events which have arrayed in arms three sister nations, and which cause the shedding to-day of the most precious blood of their children.

Chili, accepting the war as a painful necessity, threw herself into it without thinking of the sacrifices it imposed upon her, and in defending her rights and the honor of her flag, has sacrificed her dearest sons and spent her treasure without stint.

Such being the situation, her government has accepted with sincerity the idea of bringing the war to a close, always with the understanding that it be possible to attain a lasting peace, which shall compensate the sacrifices made, and permit Chili to return to labor, which is her existence. His government believes that to give these conditions to a peace, it is indispensable to advance her line of frontier. She would thus endeavor partly to compensate the great sacrifices made by the country, and insure the peace of the future. This demand is, for the Government of Chili, for the country, and for the plenipotentiaries who speak in her name, at this moment, indeclinable, because it is just.

The regions extending to the south of Camarones owe their present development and their progress entirely to Chilian labor and Chilian capital. The desert had been fertilized by the sweat of her laboring men before it was watered by the blood of her heroes.

To withdraw the authority and the flag of Chili from Camarones would be a cowardly abandonment of thousands of her citizens, and a return, with aggravation, to the old and untenable situation.

His excellency Señor ALTAMIRANO continued, saying that he could not conceive how his excellency Señor ARENAS could affirm that this pretension of Chili was in conflict with accepted principles and with established practice. The history of all modern wars contradicts his excellency and the examples of ratification of frontiers in America are numerous and belong to contemporaneous history. In the so-called conquest by Chili there is but one new phase, the fact that the territory in question, as he had stated a moment since, owes its present status to Chilian labor and enterprise.

I again repeat, Chili cannot withdraw her flag from that territory. The plenipotentiaries of Chili cannot sign any treaty so providing, or, should they sign it, their government and country would refuse their sanction.

His excellency Dr. ARENAS stated that he would not refute, point by point, the arguments of his excellency Señor ALTAMIRANO, since such refutation would be barren of results. Judging from the remarks he had just heard, Chili would not recede from her demands. There might be, nevertheless, in the opinion of his excellency, some means which, without compromising the future, might conduce to an honorable and permanent peace. He believed that the people of this continent have political and social affinities; that the animosities born of the momentary struggle are not to be eternal, and hence deduces the necessity for resolving this question with elevated judgment and abnegation of sentiment.

His excellency Mr. CHRISTIANCY suggested that, as the Chilian plenipotentiaries had submitted certain propositions to those of Peru and Bolivia, which had been combated in this conference, so, perhaps, the latter might in turn present a proposal or a series of proposals tending to reach a solution. It might thus appear, perhaps, that the differences are not so irreconcilable as at first they may seem, and a practical as well as favorable result be attained.

His excellency Señor BAPTISTA said: "The categorical declarations of his excellency Señor ALTAMIRANO appear to close the door to discussion. I appreciate, on the other hand, the frankness and courtesy with which he has proceeded. I will endeavor to keep pace with him in dignity of expression and clearness of reasoning. Let my words, therefore, if of no higher worth, be taken as the expression of our opinions. Their object is twofold; the one will be the collective statement of our views, the other, and individual utterance of my own.

"We, the plenipotentiaries of Bolivia, find ourselves in perfect accord with the explicit declarations of his excellency Señor ARENAS upon the fundamental point of the acquisition of territory, be it called advance, cession, compensation, or conquest, and we so think, inspired by the origin and development of the political life of our America. We obey that first impulse which fifty years ago launched her upon her well-marked and hitherto unchecked career. There was error, perhaps, in not strictly obeying, from the beginning, the direction which a true appreciation of the future of the continent imposed upon our statesmen. Children of a common parent, mingling in one common mode of life, nourished by the same blood, bound by the same religion, animated by that bulwark handed down from the mother country, and the only one she saved in her decadence, the municipality; divided at most in local sections, it seems that the expansion of public life among us ought to have been more in common, more reciprocal, and more united. This was demonstrated by the undivided achievement of our independence, in which we labored as one family, without distinction of flag, pressing onward from La Plata, mingled in Chili, grouped together as a single, army in Upper and Lower Peru. In the hour of our emancipation it would seem, therefore, that we ought to have constituted ourselves into one grand autonomy, sectionally divided, instead of breaking it up into jealous nationalities, which, thanks to those artificial combinations, might become hostile. So felt our great men, and they early endeavored to lead us back to our primitive source of expansion. But their efforts, from the time of Bolivar, have been by means of ineffectual decrees and declarations, which, so far as they influenced our real life, went no further than mere aspirations. The men of forethought then considered that the desired reactions should be sought through other methods, more practical and more applicable to designs so vast. To endeavor to unite, successively and gradually, our different nationalities by the inducements of their mutual interests, to unify their economic and fiscal systems, to advance gradually by compacts that should draw us still more closely together, these were the aim and object of every truly American thought and sentiment. So my government understood it, and with this object in view it endeavored to develop its national policy in the treaty of alliance which unites it with the people of Peru. It is to be regretted that the unexpected and violent nature of subsequent events should have falsified the true and natural commentary of that treaty. Intrinsically considered, properly studied, it was nothing more than a first agreement, the initial basis of American solidarity. It signifies peace on the frontiers, an open stipulation so that all might intervene to satisfy this first necessity. The Argentine Republic was invited, and in the counsels of my country it was then thought most natural and most proper to tender a similar invitation to the Republic of Chili.

"Another movement, notable in both republics, that of confederation, has the same motives and tends to satisfy the same needs. For this, there are in Bolivia two parties, which for a moment differed upon the question of method, but finally agreed to reject all tumultuous action, all appeal to popular clamor, leaving to the public conscience, prudently ascertained, to the criterion of the people, tranquilly consulted, the study and the acceptance of the new project, the discussion of which should be far removed from the warlike atmosphere now surrounding us and transferred with studious calm to its proper region, that of peace, since by its very nature it cannot be an instrument of war, but rather a pledge of successive conciliations. This is not a digression, but a necessary antecedent to the considerations which follow. We are passing through a crisis which tends to turn us aside from these special precedents, and from that historical current which should mold and influence the traits peculiar to our American life. One great deviation, until now unique, was that of Paraguay, which has dazzled the political conscience of some statesmen. America may perhaps be unable to resist a second and more extensive example. She would oscillate in her career irremediably. Let us not place in her bosom a perpetual source of uneasiness. Let us not station on the frontiers of her republics watchful and jealous powers, each mistrustful of the other, and absorbing, for their constantly increasing land and naval armaments, the very life blood of the country. Our legitimate expansion, that to which we have a natural right, is that of trade, of communication, of the employment of capital, in all of which the most powerful nation will best succeed. As conquerors and conquered, we should equally suffer from an abnormal condition of affairs, which would leave for the one the sullen labor of revenge, and for the other the sterile and costly task of preventing it. The reasons given by Mr. ALTAMIRANO, to justify the necessity of his first condition, would be more than satisfied by the study of another proposition, which I beg to present as a simple personal indication of my own. I declare frankly that the natural results of success should be recognized and accepted. In the course of this campaign the advantages are on the side of Chili. Let us shape our action according to the requirements of the events of the war as they have occurred. It may, therefore, be assumed that the payment of an indemnity to Chili would be just. Let her retain the territory occupied as security, and let proper measures be taken to satisfy the demands which could justly be made against us out of the revenue derived from the same territory. This course could protect and guarantee the interests of all, and might be supplemented by other measures, which should insure satisfactorily the property and enterprises of Chili.

We are in perfect harmony with his excellency Señor ARENAS in recognizing and respecting the elevated intention prompting his excellency Señor ALTAMIRANO in the drawing up of his propositions. The ambiguous meaning of certain expressions, such as those of essential conditions which Chili demands, which at first sight seemed to bar the entrance to a free discussion among the plenipotentiaries, disappears before his loyal explanation. I repeat, there is no reason to dwell a moment longer upon this incident. To sum up, we do not accept the appropriation of the territory as a simple result of belligerent acts, whatever the name to the seizure. But I yet hope that a ground of discussion may present itself, whereon conciliatory measures may find room."

His excellency Señor ALTAMIRANO observed that he found himself obliged to return to the discussion, since he could not permit the remarks of his excellency Señor BAPTISTA to pass unnoticed. In his eloquent discourse, and defending the policy of the government of his country, his excellency has presented the treaty, which, in 1873, united Bolivia and Peru with a common purpose, as a frank and honest manifestation of the earnest effort of Bolivia to bring more closely together these nations, now unfortunately at variance, and states that they should march together, recalling the fact that they made the campaign of independence side by side, and that the destiny awaiting them in the future is the same. His excellency Señor ALTAMIRANO added that he recognized the astonishing ability with which his excellency Señor BAPTISTA in his discourse upon the signification and reach of the treaty of 1873, had avoided the shoals; but his excellency will permit him, without qualifying that act of international policy, and without recalling the intent concealed between the lines of its text, to here enter protest and again repeat with his government that in that compact is to be found the justification of the attitude of Chili and her demands. For the rest, he joins with enthusiasm in the noble and elevated views of his excellency the plenipotentiary of Bolivia, when he asks for these countries that union which is strength, and in the future will be the only source of their greatness and of the world's respect.

But, speaking in the presence of Americans, the representatives of Chili do not need to recall the earnest efforts of their government, nor what offerings or of what value, those she has laid upon the altar of American union and fraternity. Far less is this required in the presence of eminent Peruvians and Bolivians, who know the history of their country, since they themselves have helped to make it.

The representatives of Chili may rest tranquilly therefore; neither their government nor their country can be accused of employing a policy of hatred, nor of seeking her aggrandizement in the ruin of those she had called her brethren.

The solutions to this question are not infinite. There are, perhaps, but two; that indicated by Chili, and that which his excellency Señor BAPTISTA has been pleased to suggest. If the plenipotentiary of Chili declared for his part in the first conference that the condition proposed was indeclinable, and now repeats it, it was because his government considers the second combination deficient and inacceptable.

It is sad, he observed in conclusion, to have to resist appeals such as those which have just been made to us by their excellencies Messrs. ARENAS and BAPTISTA, but if the extension of the frontier be an insuperable obstacle to peace, Chili cannot, ought not, to remove that obstacle.

His excellency Señor GARCÍA Y GARCÍA stated that he would not have uttered a single word after the brilliant efforts of his colleagues, their excellencies Señores ARENAS and BAPTISTA, who have so fully gone over the ground in defense of the unquestionable rights of Peru and Bolivia, if certain doctrines developed by his excellency Señor ALTAMIRANO had not rendered necessary a rectification, demanded by the prestige of America, and which, derived from her history and her traditions, exhibits the sentiments of Peru and her loyal international policy in all epochs. At the same time his excellency will endeavor to develop an idea already put forth, offering the clearest evidence of the spirit of justice with which he has come to these conferences.

He had given profound attention, said his excellency Señor GARCÍA Y GARCÍA, to the remarks of his excellency Mr. OSBORN, when, in the inaugural session, he said that the Government of the United States was to a certain extent responsible before the world in regard to the republics of the new continent, derived from the political principles and system of government which the former had implanted by their example, and which, under no circumstances, should be allowed to fall into discredit. These fraternal declarations are doubtless founded upon that great principle, uttered as a notification in the face of the world by one of the most illustrious Presidents of the Union, and practically maintained by all of his worthy successors. "America for the Americans," exclaimed President Monroe upon a solemn occasion, and in framing that immortal sentence he established the foundations of the new American public law, which, destroying all hope of usurpation, banished forever from the new continent those lords of divine right so well schooled to conquest as the surest means of expanding their territory. Hence it follows, since right and justice are one, and equally applicable abroad and at home, that the right of territorial sovereignty in America can only be voided by the spontaneous consent of nations, ratified by the approbation of the respective peoples. If, unfortunately, these prudent maxims be disregarded or violated, there would be at once sown broadcast the seeds of interminable dissensions, like those which with frequency occur on the old continent, and which would compel each State, as his excellency Señor BAPTISTA has well said, to maintain those immense armies and navies, the insatiable guardians of what they are pleased to call "armed peace or European equilibrium," which are nothing more than the precautions taken by each to avoid being dismembered or absorbed by the other, his neighbor.

Peru does not boast of her observance of these principles, nor has she awakened to them in consequence of the reverses suffered by her during the present war. This was her invariable course when, having been provoked into a rash and inconsiderate war in 1858, she held sway with her then powerful fleet over the entire Ecuadorian coast and adjacent islands, and occupied with her army the flourishing province of Guayaquil. How tempting the opportunity for an ambitious state. Nothing was easier than to have held permanent possession of that rich naval station, which would have been of such utility to Peru; but her interest gave way before her respect for the territorial integrity of nations constituted at the birth of republican America; and it is well known, your excellencies will remember, that once satisfied. and leaving many benefits behind, Peru abandoned those shores, without carrying with her even a sample of their sands.

Nor is it possible for his excellency Señor GARCÍA Y GARCÍA, as he desires to place upon record, to pass over in silence one of the reasons given by his excellency Señor ALTAMIRANO as a singular title for the dominion which Chili seeks to establish over the territory of Tarapaca. He remembers that his excellency the plenipotentiary of Chili maintained that the entire population of that province being Chilian, and the capital and labor employed in its establishments being likewise Chilian, therefore to them belongs possession of the territory.

While his excellency Señor GARCÍA waves the consideration of the extension of "entire," as employed by his excellency Señor ALTAMIRANO, since, as the expression is totally at variance with the facts, he cannot believe that he would pretend to sustain it, nor that such was his intention, he cannot restrain the natural expression of his surprise at hearing reasoning so remarkable from one whose profound learning and elevated political stature render him a figure in American history he has ever contemplated with admiration. But his astonishment is greater upon reflecting that such views have been uttered in the presence of their excellencies, the three mediating ministers, whose great nation owes its immense development precisely to the foreign capital and labor which daily flow to its shores.

"With what hilarity," he exclaimed, "would be received in the political circles of Washington, the doctrine that should assert the right of Prince Bismarck to annex some of the newer Western States to the German Empire, the bulk of their population being German; or that Her Majesty Queen Victoria could, under like title, take possession of New York, a large portion of the inhabitants whereof are Irishmen!"

Having thus brought to mind the political principles briefly alluded to, and which are the only sure foundations of peace in America, having mentioned the historical fact, to which allusion has just been made, and to which other similar historical data are not added, for the sake of brevity, he added that he applauded the rectitude of views in which his excellency Señor BAPTISTA abounded, nor could it be otherwise; but deeming it indispensable to give to those ideas a tangible form, as it were, that shall carry conviction of our good faith to those dispassionate observers who are contemplating these republics; that shall satisfy our common decorum, and silence the exaggerations that may arise in our respective countries, he proposes that all the points of these differences to which his excellency Señor BAPTISTA has alluded, and which shall be detailed in posterior discussions, be submitted to the arbitration without appeal of the Government of the United States of America, called to that high position by their elevated morality, their position on the continent, and the spirit of concord manifested impartially in favor of all the belligerent nations here represented.

His excellency Señor ARENAS added, seconding the views of his excellency Señor GARCÍA Y GARCÍA, that the arbitration proposed is the most practical and decorous solution that could be reached, abandoning thus the crooked paths trodden by these countries since the war began. He begged, once and again, their excellencies the representatives of Chili to ponder and meditate upon the direful consequences of a contrary determination.

His excellency Mr. VÉRGARA said that it was not his intention in taking the floor to follow his excellency Señor GARCÍA Y GARCÍA through the various points of the argument to which he had just listened. He would confine himself to the proposal of arbitration which had been presented for debate, in order to declare peremptorily in the name of his government and in that of his colleagues that he does not accept it, in any form whatever. Chili has always professed a decided preference for this rational and equitable mode of procedure for the settlement of international questions, considering it as most in conformity with the tendencies of modern civilization, as well as the most suitable to her own. She has furnished evidence of this in all her disagreements with other nations, and very specially in the question which has brought about the present war. Before taking up arms and appealing to force, she repeatedly proposed to lay before an arbiter the settlement of the difficulty. Her voice was unheard, and she found herself unwillingly dragged into war.

Launched upon this course, which has demanded enormous efforts and sacrifices, Chili has succeeded, through the repeated triumphs of her arms, in placing herself in a position of vantage permitting her to demand a peace, guaranteeing the future and compensating the injuries she has received and the sacrifices imposed upon her. As she has incurred all the risks of war, exposing herself to the disastrous consequences of reverses of fortune, so also should she enjoy her unquestionable right to profit by the advantages given her by their successful result. Chili seeks an enduring peace, which shall consult both her present and future interests, which shall be proportioned to the elements and power she possesses to obtain it, to the labor already performed, and to well-founded national aspirations. This peace she will negotiate directly with her adversaries when they accept the conditions she deems necessary for her security, and there is no reason whatever why she should deliver up to other hands, honorable and secure as they may be, the decision of her destinies. For these reasons she declares that she rejects the proposed arbitration.

His excellency Señor LILLO said that he had not expected to have addressed this solemn conference, but the proposal of arbitration presented by his excellency Señor GARCÍA Y GARCÍA compelled him to forego his intention. He believed it his duty to fully indorse the rejection of that proposal already manifested by his honorable colleague, Señor VERGARA.

He understood and accepted arbitration when it was desired to avoid a war. This is the most worthy, the nobler course, harmonizing best with the principles of civilization and fraternity which should guide enlightened nations, and more especially those who by their antecedents and intimate relations form a single family; but arbitration has its opportune moment, and this, for the negotiations of peace which occupy us to-day, has unfortunately passed.

Arbitration, after the struggle and after the victory, cannot be a solution acceptable to Chili. What could she ask of the arbiter? That he value the sacrifices made by Chili in a war to which she had been provoked? That he estimate the price of the blood of her sons? That he calculate the indemnity due to her efforts? That he foresee all that would be required in the future, so that she should not be under the painful necessity of having again to take up arms in defense of her rights and her tranquillity?

Solutions to questions like these, after costly and sanguinary victories, can and ought only to be given by the nation which has crowned such sacrifices by success.

His excellency one of the plenipotentiaries of Bolivia has invoked American fraternity, and the necessity of not causing antecedents to figure in the settlement of this contest which might establish in the public law of these countries the idea of conquest. The speaker accepted and applauded the sentiments of fraternity alluded to, but war will be more difficult in the future in proportion as the sacrifices it imposes are greater for those who attempt to provoke it.

Chili neither desires nor will she ever consent to establish the right of conquest. What she asks is a just compensation for her sacrifices in this fatal struggle, and protection to communities essentially Chilian, who would not accept the fact of their abandonment, since they live and flourish to-day under the shadow of her flag.

Cession of territory, after great advantages obtained in war, is a fact which has frequently occurred in republican America in modern times. Nations which have so acted have had no reason to repent, since, while seeking just compensation for their efforts, they carried wealth and progress to the regions surrendered to them.

Arbitration, and arbitration at the hands of the great nation, model of republican institutions, will be always accepted by Chili with the applause of the people; but the opportune moment has gone by, and to accept it, under present circumstances, would be, for Chili, an act of vacillation and of weakness.

He understood that the plan proposed by his excellency Señor BAPTISTA might be taken into consideration. According to it, Chili would fix her war indemnity and her conditions, retaining possession of the Peruvian territory now occupied by her arms, as a guarantee, until she should receive the satisfaction of her demands. He repeats that he understands this solution, but it is not that which the instructions of their government impose upon them, and although personally he thinks these indications worthy of consideration, he is compelled to remain within the limits of the instructions received.

His excellency Mr. CARRILLO said:

"The grave and positive declarations which have been made in regard to the principal proposition presented are calculated to almost extinguish the hope of a peaceful arrangement. Nevertheless, the idea is so grand, so great the interest of the questions submitted to the deliberations of this honorable assembly of plenipotentiaries, that I deem it indispensable to endeavor, if possible, yet to find a formula of acceptable solution, which if not immediately considered, as being irreconcilable with existing instructions, might be submitted by their excellencies, the plenipotentiaries, to their respective governments.

"Arbitration has just been proposed, and in this highly conciliatory measure may perhaps be found a peaceful solution.

"We cannot ignore that the deliberations of the present conference attract, at this moment, the attention of the civilized world. Here is to be decided, not only the fate and future of the three republics, but the great interests of America. The precedents for the new public law of South America are about to be established, a legislation which, from the especial character of its conditions, cannot but diverge from European doctrines. There the traditions of predominence, the diversity and tendency of races to unification, maintain a permanent struggle between the past and progress. Europe, in spite of her noble aspirations, still finds herself confined within a circle of iron from which she cannot escape. In the meanwhile America, formed of peoples ushered into political life by their own exertions, and established under identical institutions, knows no other tradition than that of having struggled against conquest and against the mastery of force, from which she has separated forever. With her, wars of preponderance have no reason to exist, and even the practices of war must become less disastrous and cruel.

"Thus international disagreements, however grave, between nations closely bound by their origin and common destiny, should in preference be settled by conciliatory methods, such as the proposed arbitration. Arbitration, your excellencies, as an honorable expedient, is the supreme aspiration of nations, and there is no question, however grave and difficult, that cannot, by this means, reach a most satisfactory result.

"The only objection that has been urged against abitration consists in that, in the opinion of his excellency Señor LILLO, the Republic of Chili cannot permit that a third party estimate the price of the blood of her sons, or the value of her sacrifices. I fail to find sufficient solidity in this reasoning. The very expression, 'estimate the price of blood,' is not in my opinion the most proper. The arbitrator, in his high impartiality, would appreciate the demands of the Government of Chili, with due reference to her sacrifices, to the blood shed and to the advantages obtained, up to the present, in the field. If these demands are just, if the blood that has been shed confers upon a belligerent the right to obtain concessions, if the securing of peace requires sacrifices from the other states, even to the modification of their international frontiers, and if all this is in conformity with the rights of war, the friendly power, constituted by common confidence into a tribunal of arbitration, will so decide; its award will consult that which is most equitable, most proper for the establishment of a lasting peace. If this procedure is worthy of all concerned, there is no reason to doubt that the arbitrator would consult the interest of Chili, in the state in which the war is at this moment. This decision would come out from the sacred regions of impartiality, it would be the calm expression emanating from justice, and would bring with it reconciliation and true peace, entirely honorable for Chili and acceptable without humiliation by the other republics.

"If the arbitral award should prove adverse to the interests of Bolivia and of Peru, and should declare the necessity of territorial concessions, the allied republics, even in this case, would bow to this decision in homage to this supreme tribunal of nations.

"For the first time and at the expiration of more than a year of war, too protracted for young republics who are sacrificing their population and their resources, has the voice of reason instead of force, for the decision of the question of the Pacific, been raised by an American nation. The only expedient remaining is arbitration; through it American interests and republican institutions may yet be saved.

"From the midst of Europe, where international boundaries are frequently changed in contradiction to the progress of right; where a race or a power rules over another to-day, to be in turn perturbed to-morrow; from there the brightest minds, the profoundest thinkers, contemplate America as the true country of the justice, the equality, and the fraternity of nations. From that continent is sent forth the brilliant light of progress and justice to find unobstructed realization in America.

"Will the Republic of Chili, which has attained, earlier than the rest, remarkable progress, and which is consequently called upon to march in the van of this movement, introduce into the policy of America the practices imposed upon Europe for reasons adverse to progress?

"I recall another argument against arbitration, 'that it could only be accepted before war.' Arbitration, your excellencies, which reconciles all differences, is acceptable, in my judgment, at the outset of a war, to prevent it, during its course, to stop its ravages, and up to the close of the contest, in honor of the victor, who should have the wise foresight to leave the declaration of conditions to the arbitration of a respected neutral power. Victory would thus insure her advantages, and achieve peace without the hatred of the vanquished.

"Moreover, international arbitration is distinct from that employed in questions of private interest. In these the judge confines himself to the decision of the original question, its conditions remaining unaltered. International disagreements are appreciated and decided with all amplitude, and according to the condition of the parties or the belligerents, and in conformity to the rights derived from the war.

"The proposition of my colleague, his excellency Señor BAPTISTA, has been expressed as his private opinion; for my own part, I indorse it, and am persuaded that, for the sake of great international interests, it will be approved by the government of my country. I renew it therefore in this form: 'Statu quo of the territory occupied by the forces of Chili, pending the decision of the tribunal of arbitration proposed upon all points in dispute;' a solution frank and American.

"Before concluding, I deem it opportune to state that when the respected mediation of the most excellent Government of the United States of America was offered to Bolivia, my government, as well as public opinion, felt satisfied that peace would result; for that mediation was accompanied by another word—arbitration—which signifies justice and honor for all, humiliation to none.

"In this persuasion, and with a policy of frankness, the Bolivian plenipotentiaries have come to this conference."

His excellency Mr. OSBORN remarked that it seemed proper to him, as well as to his colleagues, to place upon record that the Government of the United States does not seek the position of arbiter in this question. A strict compliance with the duties inherent to that position would involve much trouble and great labor, and while he could not doubt that his government would accept the position if duly requested to do so, it was nevertheless proper that it be understood that its representatives did not court that distinction.

His excellency Señor ALTAMIRANO stated that, after the brilliant argument just made by his excellency Señor CARRILLO, in favor of the abitration proposed by his excellency Señor GARCÍA Y GARCÍA, he is compelled to once more weary the conference with his remarks:

It is very painful for him and for his colleagues, and doubtless will be for his government, to refuse a proposal for arbitration; to decline to accept a judge so highly placed and so nobly inspired as the Government of the United States.

It is necessary, therefore, to clearly establish that arbitration is the standard which Chili has invariably raised in her international questions, and it is, above all, necessary to remember that, in order to avoid this sanguinary war, she also offered to appeal to judges before drawing the sword. That was the moment, and it is most deplorable that her offer was not accepted.

According to his excellency Señor CARRILLO, if this conference should close with the acceptance of arbitration it would be an epoch of glory for America, and a just, lofty, and noble policy would be inaugurated for the future.

His excellency Mr. ALTAMIRANO concurred with his excellency in the desire to see arbitration elevated to the position of the sole and obligatory method of deciding differences between nations; but if it were in the present instance accepted by the plenipotentiaries of Chili, they would be justly accused and justly condemned at home as guilty of desertion from duty, and almost of treason to the clearest rights and interests of their country.

He warmly indorses his colleagues, therefore, in their rejection of the proposal of his excellency Señor GARCÍA Y GARCÍA, and would here conclude were it not that he must address a single word to that honorable gentleman.

His excellency Señor GARCÍA Y GARCÍA rejecting indignantly, in the name of civilization, the principle of conquest invoked by Chili, has reminded us that Peru, when victorious in Guayaquil, withdrew without carrying away a grain of her sands, and leaving behind her the memory of many benefits.

Señor ALTAMIRANO does not propose to give a course of history, since for his part he does not wish that the tone of these discussions, hitherto calm and dignified, should be changed by any act of his; but should he do so, he might find examples of rectifications of boundary, perhaps of the very line separating Peru from Ecuador; but this would be useless, and after the declarations made, would lead to nothing.

His excellency Mr. OSBORN inquired whether any one of those present desired to take the floor, and no one expressing a wish to do so, declared the conference adjourned until Wednesday, the 27th, at 12 o'clock noon, and the session closed at 4 p. m.

M. BAPTISTA.
JUAN C. CARRILLO.
J. F. VERGARA.
E. ALTAMIRANO.
EUS. LILLO.
ANTONIO ARENAS.
AURELIO GARCÍA Y GARCÍA.
THOMAS A. OSBORN.
I. P. CHRISTIANCY.
CHARLES ADAMS.

F. AVELINO ARAMAYO,
Secretary of the Bolivian Legation.
DOMINGO GANA,
Secretary of the Plenipotentiaries of Chili.
M. N. VALCÁRCEL,
Secretary of the Plenipotentiaries of Peru.
CHARLES S. RAND,
Secretary and Interpreter of the Mediators.

PROTOCOL No. 3.

[Translation:]

On board of the North American corvette Lackawanna, in the bay of Arica, on the twenty-seventh day of October, 1880, all the plenipotentiaries having met together, viz:

On the part of Bolivia, their excellencies Dr. D. MARIANO BAPTISTA and Dr. Don JUAN CRISÓSTOMO CARRILLO.

On the part of Chili, their excellencies Señores D. JOSÉ FRANCISCO VERGARA, secretary of state in the departments of war and the navy, D. EULOGIO ALTAMIRANO, and D. EUSEBIO LILLO.

On the part of Peru, their excellencies Dr. D. ANTONIO ARENAS and D. AURELIO GARCÍA Y GARCÍA.

In the presence of their excellencies, the mediating ministers of the United States of America, THOMAS A. OSBORN, esq., ISAAC P. CHRISTIANCY, esq., and General CHARLES ADAMS.

His excellency Mr. OSBORN expressed his thanks to their excellencies the plenipotentiaries for their presence, and his hope that the time which had elapsed since the preceding session may have allowed them to discover some means of arranging existing difficulties.

He then declared the conference open.

The minutes of the preceding meeting were read and approved.

Mr. OSBORN then signified his readiness to hear any suggestions that it might be thought proper to make.

He then addressed himself to each one of their excellencies the plenipotentiaries of Chili, asking him if he had anything to observe in relation to the matters under discussion. Their excellencies the plenipotentiaries of Chili stated that in conformity to their instructions it was impossible for them to make any modification whatever in the condition laid down.

His excellency Mr. OSBORN then invited each one of their excellencies the plenipotentiaries of Peru to manifest, if so disposed, their ideas upon the subject. Their excellencies the plenipotentiaries of Peru declared, in reply, that as Chili insisted upon the maintaining of the first condition, and the arbitration proposed by them not having been accepted, it was impossible for them to go into an examination of the other conditions; that every door had been closed to them, and the continuation of the war rendered necessary; and that the responsibility of its consequences must not rest upon Peru, who had indicated a decorous means of reaching peace.

His excellency Mr. OSBORN invited in turn their excellencies the plenipotentiaries of Bolivia to make known their ideas, and they stated that for their part they considered the situation to be clearly and sharply defined. There is one condition, the first presented by their excellencies the plenipotentiaries of Chili, as indeclinable, which the allies cannot accept. There is another, that of arbitration, suggested by their excellencies the plenipotentiaries of the allied republics and rejected by those of Chili; and there is finally a third, which has been proposed separately by the representatives of Bolivia, but which has not been taken into consideration. They consider, in view of this result, that the negotiation has reached its close, and regret that the political situation of the respective countries should not have permitted a common agreement to have been reached.

His excellency Mr. OSBORN declared that he and his colleagues profoundly lament that the conference should not have yielded the pacific and conciliatory results hoped from it, and believe that the same impression will be made upon the government and people of the United States when the fact is communicated to them that the friendly mediation of the United States has been fruitless.

He therefore declared the conference closed, in witness whereof they signed.

M. BAPTISTA.
JUAN C. CARRILLO.
J. F. VERGARA.
E. ALTAMIRANO.
EUS. LILLO.
ANTONIO ARENAS.
AURELIO GARCÍA Y GARCÍA.
THOMAS A. OSBORN.
I. P. CHRISTIANCY.
CHARLES ADAMS.

F. AVELINO ARAMAYO,
Secretary of the Bolivian Legation.
DOMINGO GANA,
Secretary of the Plenipotentiaries of Chili.
M. N. VALCÁRCEL,
Secretary of the Plenipotentiaries of Peru.
CHARLES S. RAND,
Secretary and Interpreter of the Mediators.

No. 286.

Mr. Christiancy to Mr. Evarts.

No. 202.] LEGATION OF THE UNITED STATES,
Lima, Peru, November 2, 1880. (Received December 6.)

SIR: I deem it proper to explain to you the causes of my sending you the telegrams of the 28th October from Arica and that of November 1 from here, and the facts and circumstances under which they were sent.

When the conferences at Arica had completely failed, on the 27th October I proposed to Mr. Osborn (who was the senior minister of the United States, who had presided at the conferences) that he should telegraph to you, not only the fact that the conferences had failed, but that the two points of disagreement which lead to that disagreement, viz, the refusal of Peru to cede Tarapaca and the rejection by Chili of the arbitration of the United States. He seemed to be particularly anxious to avoid telegraphing that Chili had refused the arbitration of the United States, and declared that he should only telegraph you that "the conference had ended without result." I then informed him that I thought it proper to let you know the points of difference which caused the failure to agree, and that I proposed to telegraph that Peru refused to cede Tarapaca and Chili rejected the proposed arbitration of the United States. Upon the last point Mr. Osborn, I thought, seemed to be peculiarly sensitive and very unwilling that it should be announced that Chili had rejected the arbitration of the United States.

Supposing that he would telegraph as he had proposed, I prepared a dispatch in the following words, which I thought would supplement his, viz: "Peru refuses Tarapaca; Chili refuses arbitration of the United States."

But when I found that it would cost nearly $200 to send it, I hesitated, thinking you might deem it unnecessary after Mr. Osborn's dispatch. But on consulting the Peruvian negotiators they thought it very important that my dispatch should be sent, and offered to pay the expense. I therefore sent it, and they paid the expense, $100 in silver and $66.66 in gold.

After arriving here the Peruvian Government, believing that my dispatch from Arica had probably been suppressed in Chili, through which it had to pass, wished me to telegraph to you via Panama, they paying the expense. I therefore telegraphed you from here November 1 to same effect via Panama, to be sent there by mail from here, Peru paying the expense.

I have, &c.,

I. P. CHRISTIANCY.

No. 287.

Mr. Christiancy to Mr. Evarts.

No. 204.] LEGATION OF THE UNITED STATES,
Lima, Peru, November 5, 1880. (Received December 17.)

SIR: Referring to my dispatch No. 200, which was written in great haste to be got off to Chimbote by steamer Adams, I notice that I omitted one fact which it may be important for you to understand.

The basis of negotiations, so far as related to the acquisition of territory by Chili, as foreshadowed by Mr. Baptista, viz, that a certain sum should be agreed upon as due to Chili for the expenses of the war, and that Chili should retain the possession of the whole or a part of the territory now in her possession as security for the payment of that sum, seemed to me to offer the only light out of the dead-lock in which the parties found themselves. I therefore urged upon the Peruvian plenipotentiaries that they should make a proposition upon this basis. I was, in reply, told by them that they would have been quite willing to do so if they had not been precluded by the positive declaration of the Chilian plenipotentiaries that no such proposition could be entertained, but that the unqualified acceptance of their first proposition was an indispensable condition to all further attempts at negotiation. And this being the fact, as appears by the protocols, I could not urge them further to make such a proposition.

I am, &c.,

I. P. CHRISTIANCY.

No. 288.

Mr. Calderon to Mr. Evarts.

[Translation.]

DEPARTMENT OF FOREIGN RELATIONS AND WORSHIP,
Lima, November 5, 1880. (Received December 21.)

It is proper that it should be known to America and to the world at large who is responsible for the great perturbation which the present war on the Pacific coast has brought upon this continent, causing, at the same time, incalculable injury to the industry and commerce of all nations with which we are on terms of friendship; it is proper that it should be clearly established upon whom rests the responsibility for the bloodshed and for the suffering which, in a sphere far above that of material interest, has been originated, and will continue to be so, for Heaven knows how long, by the wicked war into which we have been forced, without being influenced ourselves by ambition of any kind, or by any selfish motive whatever: it is proper that our friends should know how great was the self-abnegation manifested by us when an opportunity of seeking justice through peaceful channels was offered, and how arrogant and treacherous was the attitude assumed by our adversaries, who never did, and do not now, entertain any design, save the realization of a preconceived plan for their own aggrandizement at the expense, and in derogation of the honor of others.

I have already had the honor directly to inform your excellency how a question relative to the boundary between the Republic of Chili and that of Bolivia, our ally, was the sole cause of the war on the Pacific coast. Chili has now made known with her own mouth (as your excellency will see by the copy which accompanies this circular), in all its monstrous proportions, what she so long and so obstinately denied, viz, that the real cause of her conduct in her differences with Bolivia has been no other than that which I have just stated; and she has revealed to us at the same time the astounding advances that she has made in her ambitious views.

These are, indeed, the result of a morbid condition and of the febrile delirium to which great passions lead when not checked in time, yet this delirium is occasioning the greatest disasters in this portion of America, and is a presage of the most serious dangers in the future.

It is important, therefore, that it should be denounced before the community of civilized nations, and it is high time that it should receive an exemplary check.

The inclosed memorandum,* which was presented at the conference held at Arica, by the plenipotentiaries of Chili, as a recapitulation of the conditions deemed essential to the restoration of peace, is a concise statement, which cannot be disavowed by our enemies, of their real views and purposes in this war.

I beg your excellency, as the duty is a somewhat important one, to permit me to point out, to the best of my ability, the moral deformity which these conditions indicate.

The first is "the cession to Chili of the territories of Peru and Bolivia, which extend to the south of the Camarones Valley, and to the west of the line which separates Peru from Bolivia in the Andes Mountains, to the Chacarilla Valley, and also to the west of a line extending from the latter point to the Argentine frontier, passing through the center of Lake Ascotan."

The demands which Chili makes of the allies are by no means small. Peru has even more reason than Bolivia to be astonished at their magnitude, because, after all, she never had, and never could have any dispute with the common enemy concerning boundaries, nor did Chili ever, either before the war or after it had been declared, raise any claim that Peru was her debtor.

When one looks on the map of the two republics (whose dismemberment Chili so coolly demands), at the portion of territory belonging to both, which she seeks to appropriate to herself, the feeling of indignation which first arises is succeeded by one of amusement, which is increased by the reasons which are alleged for the spoliation with all the solemnity which befits a diplomatic conference held in the presence of a mediator who is worthy of all respect.

Let us see what are these reasons:

First. The necessity which Chili feels of enlarging her territory by rectifying her frontiers for her future security.

Second. The fact that she has fertilized those wilds with the labor and the capital of her citizens, who have settled in those regions in large numbers, and whom she cannot abandon, especially after the blood of her heroes has been shed there and she has established a military occupation of the country.

The first of these extraordinary arguments is simply egotistical communism, expressed without the least shadow of shame, with the irritating concomitant of styling "a rectification of frontiers" that which at the first view is a twofold increase of territory.

The second is herein reduced to the language of truth and honesty, so far as concerns Peru.

Inasmuch as a vast field of speculation and fabulous returns for Chilian capital has lain open gratuitously, affording lucrative and reformatory employment for the worthless class which overflowed from Chili, driven forth, moreover, into foreign parts by an administration as discreet as it was far-sighted, therefore Chili makes her own the territory from which she derived such important benefits. That is to say, that what should have constrained her to gratitude is turned by her, scandalously, into a claim of usurpation, and this not limited to the space held by her armed force, but to regions to which has not been extended, neither can be extended, the abuse of a material force and preponderance as ephemeral as the circumstances from which it springs.

*See Protocol No. 1 of the conferences of Arica, document No. 285, ante.

Moreover, the mere enunciation of the pretensions of Chili is an insult to the public law of our age, which condemns territorial acquisitions by means of conquest, and which has not tolerated cessions of this class, except when they have been, in some sense, excused by historic reasons and by the imperative exigencies of peace and common tranquillity, and even then consulting the essential and sacred condition of the liberty of a people, which condition has never failed to find the most conscientious support, even among the advocates of hereditary kingdoms.

Moreover, the pretension of Chili is subversive of American public law, and in violation, especially, of a positive principle, formulated, recognized, and adhered to until now by all of the republics of Spanish origin established on this continent. At the same time that they stood before the world with the decree of emancipation which they had won in the tribunal of arms, they proclaimed with one voice, as a guarantee of peace and safeguard of their repose for the future, the permanent establishment of the possessions and respective frontiers of each of them, adopting, to that end, the brief but expressive phrase of the celebrated Roman injunction uti possidetis ita possideatis.

In view thereof, there never has been any question among the possessors of these vast dominions as to the rule which they should follow in case of doubt or conflict touching territorial extension. All that has been discussed in such cases has simply been the just application to the subject in controversy of the principle sanctioned as fundamental for the decision of all such questions.

The uti possidetis, a practical principle, which sprang forth from the nature of things at the epoch of the independence of these republics, established the equilibrium necessary and proper for the development and progress of all of them, without prejudice, however, to such free acts as, by modifying their status, might tend to larger advantages and fuller greatness.

To-day Chili, while seeking to destroy that equilibrium, in violation of the primordial basis of the international constitution of these republics, endeavors to impose upon Bolivia and Peru, by the fifth of the conditions now under consideration, the rupture of the purely defensive alliance they have made, and the annulment of the federal union which they have agreed upon and which is now in the path of completion and full execution. The tyranny of Chili, if there were the force to sustain it, would be the most irritating and vexatious of any that could be devised for the sovereignty and freedom of both republics. No; it is not possible to permit such absurd pretensions to be even enunciated without bringing them to judgment and branding them before all the world with the stigma they deserve.

After having unexpectedly declared war against the allies, and having revived, in the most cruel and horrible manner, a barbarity which humanity had with shame consigned to oblivion, Chili dares to demand, in the second of her essential conditions of peace, an enormous indemnity for the expenses she has incurred for the sole purpose of inflicting calamities and injuries, the complete reparation of which would be due to us in good right, but which Chili can never give us, so far is her wealth and her solvency inferior to the losses she has caused to us.

Chili, in her conditions of peace, has not only put herself outside of the pale of right, but is completely opposed to the right.

"The restoration of the property of which Chilian companies and citizens have been despoiled in Peru and Bolivia," exacted by the third condition of the memorandum, is devoid of all signification with respect to Peru, who has carried her generous chivalry to the extent of leaving all such property intact, notwithstanding that the ferocious conduct of her adversary warranted her in the adoption of every kind of retortion and reprisals.

The fourth condition demands the return of the transport Rimac, captured according to all rules in the course of a naval battle for which Peru was wholly unfit, notwithstanding that Chili holds all that she has taken from us on the seas through her temporary superiority, which was due solely to the unfortunate confidence in which Peru slumbered, while reposing faith in the flattering assurances of her sister and former ally, in a contest from which she derived all the advantages and Peru reaped all the disadvantages.

To complete the picture of the pretensions of the memorandum, the sixth and seventh conditions thereof involve, for the present and until Peru shall have satisfied those previously set forth, the retention by Chili of the districts of Moquegua, Tacna, and Arica, and, as to this latter port, for the future, the prohibition of fortifying it upon its return to Peru.

Even if not just, the harmony and transcendental foresight of the conditions proposed by Chili for deigning to grant us peace is undeniable.

Not we, but the world, and especially America, will pass final judgment thereon; and its judgment, dictated by a sense of justice, will be the re-establishment of the moral order which Chili has overthrown in this fratricidal war to the affronting of civilization and humanity.

My government, for its part, maintains and has declared the irrevocable resolve to be faithful to its honor and to the solemn charge which the supreme chief of the republic received from the people of Peru when he was chosen as their leader under such grave and difficult circumstances, and when absolute powers were conferred by them upon him.

I beg your excellency to be pleased to accept on this occasion the assurances of the high consideration and distinguished appreciation with which I have the pleasure to subscribe myself

Your excellency's faithful and obedient servant,

PEDRO JOSÉ CALDERON.

NOTE.—For Annex No. 1, being the text of the memorandum of the essential conditions of peace presented by Chili in the conference of Arica, see Mr. Christiancy's No. 200 of November 2, 1880, document No. 285, ante.

For Annex No. 2, being the protocols of the conference of Arica, see the same, document No. 285, ante.

No. 289.

Mr. Hay to Mr. Christiancy.

No. 108.] DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, November 9, 1880.

SIR: I have to acknowledge the receipt of your No. 195, and to approve the investigation made by you into the facts of the charge preferred by the Chilian Government against Mr. Merriam, the consul of the United States at Iquique, that he had allowed himself to become a medium of communication between the Peruvian General Montero and his government. You will, of course, give proper attention to any further complaint or evidence on the subject that may be laid before you.

I am, sir, &c.,

JOHN HAY,
Acting Secretary.

No. 290.

Mr. Christiancy to Mr. Evarts.

[Private and confidential.]

No. 209.] LEGATION OF THE UNITED STATES,
Lima, Peru, November 11, 1880. (Received December 17.)

SIR: I think it right that I should inform you of certain impressions I received in a conversation with some of the members of the diplomatic corps, held at the legation of Mr. Pinto, of Salvador, who is the dean of the diplomatic corps.

The question of the most proper mode of protecting the legations and consulates of neutral nations here in case of the taking and sacking of Lima being the subject of conversation at the moment, started by me with the view of eliciting some manifestation of designs of intervention which I suspected to exist with some of the foreign ministers, I was strongly impressed with the idea from what was said by the English minister, and to some extent by the minister of France, as well as the peculiar reserve exhibited by them upon some points, that both the English and French ministers have been seeking to get their governments to intervene in the present war here, or that their governments have given them cause to believe they contemplated such intervention. It would be difficult to give you all the slight shades of expression which together seemed to indicate this, while few of the expressions taken alone would furnish much ground for the inference. But one point in particular seemed to me by itself to furnish a pretty strong inference of the kind. When I spoke of what might be expected in case the Chilian army should take Lima by storm, and how little safety even our legations might find from an infuriated soldiery which could not be controlled by their officers, a point which for months before they seemed to think a very important one, the British minister said in substance, "Oh, in such a case or before matters reach such a stage the Peruvian Government must yield, and make peace;" to which I replied in substance, "Yes, if they choose to, but if not we cannot compel them to." No direct reply was made to this answer, but I could readily perceive that the French minister seemed entirely to concur with the minister of England, and that both were very reticent as to the means of forcing a peaceful result in such a case. I attach the more significance to these things because very frequently in the course of the last eight months both these ministers, as well as the minister of Germany, have frequently intimated, and sometimes plainly said to me, that there ought to be intervention, and that peace could only be brought about in that way. But the minister of Germany has lately said nothing of the kind, and

I hear it rumored that his government will not intervene. But, on the other hand, the French minister, who last year said to me, on repeated occasions extending over a period of four or five months, "Your government is the only one that can bring about peace here." And he often urged that the United States ought to press mediation, yet the moment he found that all the belligerents had accepted our mediation he showed nearly as much petty jealousy as the minister of England, and both alike not only showed their hostility but joined, not in my presence, in the attempt to throw ridicule upon it, while they at the same time were attempting to induce Peru to accept peace by ceding Tarapaca to Chili, which I think it quite probable, at least, they think of compelling Peru to do by active intervention.

The secret motive, if it can be said to be kept a secret at all, is, I think, to be found in the fact that a large amount of the salitre bonds and of the guano bonds, for which the salitres and guano of Tarapaca are pledged, and which, especially the latter, constitute a lien upon the territory or beds where they are found, are held in England, and a considerable amount in France, and Chili is willing to—if in fact she would be bound to—assume their payment, and more confidence is placed in the ability and the disposition of Chili than of Peru to pay them.

I have not the slightest doubt that all the influence of the English ministers here at Santiago, and probably those of France, and possibly Italy, was used to thwart the success of our mediation, as I understand and believe that the English minister here, immediately on learning that Chili had accepted our mediation boasted in substance that he would prevent the success of that effort. They did not expect that we would be able even to get the parties together to open negotiations and were greatly chagrined when they found we did finally succeed in this.

Now, it might have been, and possibly might yet be, wise for the allies to accept peace by the cession by Bolivia and Peru of the territory claimed by Chili, rather than to continue the war, but whether the settlement of peace upon such terms would be wise for the allies, or not, is a question for them to decide, each for itself, and for any neutral nation to deny them that right is, it seems to me, virtually to deny them the essential rights of independent national existence.

It will be readily seen from what I have already said that the apprehended intervention under the circumstances would amount to little else than the active aid of the intervening powers given to Chili, at present victorious, both by sea and land, for the purpose of crushing both Peru and Bolivia.

I know that the Peruvian Government looks upon the apprehended intervention in this light, and is more apprehensive of injury from it than from all the power of Chili.

I have had no express instructions from you applicable to such a contingency, but, judging from our past history and from all that has been shadowed forth in your dispatches, I infer that our government will be opposed to such intervention, and I shall act accordingly until I receive instructions to the contrary, and shall protest against it if it be attempted to be carried out here before I receive such instructions.

I regret that I am not able to telegraph you from here.

I would certainly attempt to do so from Panama, if I had been furnished with a key, and may yet before the mail leaves, send by letter a dispatch to our consul at Panama, to be forwarded by him, if it can be done, to be paid for by you.

But I hesitate, especially as your dispatches show a desire to avoid such extraordinary expenses, except in cases of clear necessity.

I have, &c.,

I. P. CHRISTIANCY.

No. 291.

Mr. Evarts to Mr. García.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, November 13, 1880.

SIR: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your note of the 25th ultimo, expressing the appreciation which must be felt by Peru of the proffer made of the good offices of this government in the direction of securing peace between that republic and the Government of Chili, and at the same time an apprehension that this movement might not reach the desired result.

In reply, I regret to observe that, although the proposition of the United States was held acceptable by all the belligerents, it seems to have been thus far fruitless; and this government awaits with interest information of the course of the conference held in pursuance of the benevolent wishes of the United States, and of the reasons of its failure.

Notwithstanding the miscarriage of the impartial and humane efforts of this government in the interests of a pacification (which it cannot regard but with chagrin as well as regret), the United States will welcome any further opportunity it may have to promote, by any proper means, the restoration of peace.

I profit by this occasion, &c.,

WM. M. EVARTS.

No. 292.

Mr. Evarts to Mr. Christiancy.

No. 109.] DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, November 27, 1880.

SIR: I subjoin the text of a telegram which was sent to Mr. Osborn, envoy extraordinary and minister plenipotentiary of the United States at Santiago, by this Department on the 19th instant:

You are authorized to unite with your colleagues in pressing upon Chili the adoption of the measures agreed upon in a diplomatic conference at Lima for securing the lives and property of neutrals when Lima is attacked. This authority is to be used only in case these measures are approved by Christiancy and yourself as within neutral policy and this concurrent representation seems to you useful. You are also authorized to join in asking a direct answer from Chili, if in your judgment the requirement is justified by the situation. Telegraph your action.

I am, sir, &c.,

WM. M. EVARTS.

No. 293.

Mr. García to Mr. Evarts.

[Translation.]

LEGATION OF PERU IN THE UNITED STATES,
New York, November 27, 1880. (Received November 29.)

To His Excellency the SECRETARY OF STATE:

SIR: I have the honor to inform your excellency that I received the official telegram, a copy of which is herewith inclosed, on the 25th instant, from Panama. As it merely confirms what was already known to your excellency, as appears from your esteemed communication of the 13th instant, which was duly received by me, it did not seem to me necessary to transmit this information to you sooner.

I am, as ever, your excellency's faithful and obedient servant,

IGNO. GARCÍA.

(Copy.)

To the CHARGÉ D'AFFAIRES of Peru:

This information is sent by supreme order. Belligerents accepted American mediation. Plenipotentiaries began conference. It proved a total failure. Chili demanded cession of territory, which Peru rejected.

LARRAÑAGA

No. 294.

Mr. Evarts to Mr. García.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, December 1, 1880.

SIR: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your note of the 27th ultimo, and of the copy of the telegram received by you on the 25th, announcing the failure of the negotiations toward peace, which had been entered upon by Peru and Chili.

Again expressing the great regret felt by this government at the apparently unfortunate result of the efforts for peace which had commended themselves to the good judgment of other nations, I beg to renew to you, sir, the assurances of my high consideration.

WM. M. EVARTS.

No. 295.

Mr. Evarts to Mr. Christiancy.

No. 112.] DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, December 13, 1880.

SIR: I have to acknowledge the receipt of your No. 200, of the 2d ultimo, and of the protocols of the conferences of the plenipotentiaries of Peru, Bolivia, and Chili, held at Arica, from the 22d to the 27th October last, under the mediation of the United States.

This government cannot cease to entertain the most serious regret that its efforts in the direction of securing peace between the belligerents have met with so little apparent success thus far, but it still stands ready to render its assistance to that end in every proper way.

I am, &c.,

WM. M. EVARTS.

No. 296.

Mr. García to Mr. Evarts.

[Translation.]

LEGATION OF PERU IN THE UNITED STATES,
New York, December 18, 1880. (Received December 21.)

SIR: I have the honor to transmit to you a copy of the circular which the secretary of foreign relations of Peru has addressed, under date of 5th November, ultimo, to the diplomatic agents of my country abroad. I would have desired to go in person to fulfill the gratifying duty of reading the document in question to your excellency, as therein prescribed, but a serious illness prevents me.

I improve, &c.,

IGNO. GARCÍA.

[Inclosure—Translation.*]

CIRCULAR.

To the diplomatic agents of Peru.

OFFICE OF THE SECRETARY OF FOREIGN RELATIONS AND WORSHIP,
Lima, November 5, 1880.

The mediation offered by the United States of North America in order to put an end to the war in the Pacific, and accepted by the allies with the greatest sincerity and self-denial, has failed in consequence of the absurd pretensions of Chili, who has likewise refused the arbitration proposed in the conferences of Arica, because, as she does not seek justice, neither does she desire an impartial judge.

We have gone as far as dignity and honor permit us, endeavoring to forget our just indignation and the anger which Chilian vandalism has excited in the breast of the people. The noise of arms, which has not ceased, even when the enemy affected to enter upon the paths of conciliation, will therefore continue.

All that is inhuman, disastrous, and abominable in the present struggle, and whatever may occur until its end, will be exclusively chargeable to Chili, who has allowed herself to be carried away by the most ignoble and degrading passions, which cannot be satisfied but by the complete extermination of her adversaries, which she considers easy in the midst of her madness caused by the innocent blood she had shed, and her depredations and iniquities. She accepted the mediation with the deliberate intention of making it useless if Peru accepted it, reserving to herself the placing of insurmountable difficulties in the way of an agreement.

Thus is explained that, at the same time that she agreed to such a measure of friendly reconciliation, she brought ruin and devastation to the undefended departments of the coast of the north, destroying in a moment valuable property, the result of industry, and the disappearance of which is prejudicial to commerce.

Thus is explained her tenacious obstinacy in fixing on the port of Arica, a place under the pressure of her arms, for the holding of the conferences. She endeavored to irritate our susceptibility in order to leave to us, at least in appearance, the responsibility of refusing to enter into the conferences for peace.

Thus is explained how, in the first of them, her plenipotentiaries presented, as unalterable, conditions the acceptance of which would have been an ignominious suicide.

---

*This translation is taken from the South Pacific Times of November 12, 1880.

Peru, after having deferred to everything which was merely fortuitous, and controlling the fiery impetus of her pride, which, on the other hand, she satisfied by ordering her plenipotentiaries not to stipulate, except in the last case, the cessation of hostilities during the conferences, assumed in these the noble attitude she has maintained since the commencement of the war, and which she will not deviate from to its end.

The law of honor, and only that, prescribed to her the taking part, unarmed, in the struggle, and she feels quite sure of concluding it with honor and glory.

Here it is as well to record briefly the conduct observed by Chili since the commencement of the war, always the same in her uncontrollable employment of double dealing and treachery.

After obtaining immense advantages in the two treaties of 1866 and 1874, respecting boundaries with the neighboring Republic of Bolivia, unsatisfied and restless then, and every day still more so, at not having pushed her frontiers to the point her covetousness longed for, she waited the first opportunity and sought the first pretext which might present itself to revindicate, according to the language employed by her on the occasion, the rich territories which international faith had guaranteed definitively to our ally.

We feel ashamed at having to present to the world the occasion which Chili found propitious for the realization of her unlawful design; such was the tax of ten cents, sanctioned by the Congress of Bolivia, on the "Compañia de Salitre y Ferrocarriles de Antofagasta," which then declared itself in a most skillful manner under the protection of Chili.

The diplomacy of this republic anticipated and hastened the proceedings of Chili; very soon afterwards a rupture of relations took place; Chili spoke of arbitration as to-day she does of mediation, and obtained, as she now wishes to do with respect to the latter, that it should remain a chimera. Thus she pretended, according to the system to which she is accustomed, to give a color of justice, first, to the sudden invasion of Antofagasta, and afterwards to that of the whole Bolivian coast.

Peru, who prides herself on having initiated almost from the commencement of her independent life, with the most exalted views, the real fraternity of the American republics; who has on different occasions assembled in her capital congresses for such an important object; who at this very moment has the pleasure to see in this city the congress of jurists of her sister republics which endeavor to realize the beautiful ideal of harmonizing the institutions of modern society; Peru, leagued by a treaty of defensive alliance with Bolivia, the secret of which for well-founded reasons was stipulated in it, but which imposed on her a mission of peace in the disagreement between her ally and Chili, went to Santiago animated with the most sincere wishes; and it is necessary to acknowledge that neither good-will nor the most assiduous solicitude was wanting on the part of our representative in the fulfillment of his honorable mission.

The secret, merely official, of the alliance (because for statesmen in the three republics, with few exceptions, no such secret existed) served as a pretext to the Government of Chili for rejecting the mission of Señor Lavalle, rendering useless the fraternal purposes of Peru, precipitating the declaration of the casus fœderis, and immediately afterwards darting upon our coast, commencing the series of shocking hostilities which have continued since, each time with more fury, and which she proposes to crown worthily without any other limit than the extent of her power to carry them out.

Chili, on turning her arms against Peru, who she knew could only defend herself by her courage and her natural nobleness, was under the delusion that she could humiliate and trample upon Peru without great efforts or sacrifices.

Desperate and frantic at being undeceived, she carried to a greater extent than was conceivable, even to those acquainted with that nation, her barbarous hostilities.

Nothing has sufficed to stay the hands of our ruthless enemies. Neither the undefended state of the towns, nor the innocence of the victims, nor the chastity of the women, nor the weakness of infancy, nor the veneration due to old age, nor unfortunate courage, nor the convulsions of agony, nor the sacred character of neutrality, nor the even more sacred character of the ambulances in which the wounded have been assassinated without pity, nor the sanctity of the temples, in fact no respect, divine or human, not even that due to her own honor, has been sufficiently powerful to make Chili return to the bosom of Christian civilization, in which, after what has been referred to, it is licit to doubt whether she ever really was, notwithstanding her ridiculous vanity and much talked of progress.

Full of hatred and envy against Peru, whose superiority cannot be unacknowledged without blotting out history and stifling the voice of a fame which has become a universal proverb; drunken with blood and devoured by thirst for our fabulous riches, Chili proclaims an attack upon this capital which she considers as the last bulwark of defense of Peru. For this reason she has not hesitated to reject, openly, the arbitration proposed by our plenipotentiaries at Arica, who designated at the same time as judge the great republic of the north, which had the highest title in every respect to fulfill such a noble and humane duty. Chili would not admit it, under the frivolous pretext that the time for arbitration had passed, as if at any moment the intervention of wisdom and justice should not be welcome in order to put an end to a struggle which is a disgrace, not only to America but to Europe, and when only a short time ago, the 3d of September last, she has made a treaty with the United States of Colombia in which it is stipulated that all differences between both republics are to be settled by arbitration, and when Peru has been asked to adhere to said treaty by an invitation received by our government only by the last steamer.

Peru is, therefore, for Chili a hateful exception in treating of peace. Be it so! Let her come, not as she imagines, to end, but to begin the war. The generous blood which Peru has shed in torrents will become fruitful. The entirely disinterested worship which she pays to honor, without being terrified by the sacrifice of all her other treasures, which she considers as secondary, will give to her arms the reward they deserve. Her heroes of to-day will repeat the actions of those of yesterday, and the crown of a final triumph, so much the more splendid as it will have been costly, will bind her proud and immaculate brow.

This is the faith of the government of his excellency the supreme chief, to whom the republic, on constituting him arbiter of her destiny, charged him, above all, with the triumph of the national arms. He will omit nothing to attain this object, and he confides in attaining it as the judgment of God in the duel to the death which has become inevitable, owing to the want of reason and the insolence of our enemy.

You will be pleased to read this dispatch to the minister for foreign affairs, and leave him a copy should he desire it.

May God preserve you many years.

PEDRO JOSÉ CALDERON.

No. 297.

Mr. Hay to Mr. García.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, December 22, 1880.

SIR: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your note of the 18th instant, transmitting, for the information of this government, a copy of the diplomatic circular sent on the 5th ultimo by the secretary of foreign relations of Peru to the diplomatic agents of that country abroad. Regretting that your illness should have deprived me of the pleasure of receiving your personal communication of this circular, I avail myself, &c.,

JOHN HAY,
Acting Secretary.

No. 298.

Mr. Christiancy to Mr. Evarts.

No. 226.] LEGATION OF THE UNITED STATES,
Lima, Peru, December 31, 1880. (Received February 5, 1881.)

SIR: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your dispatch No. 109 (108 not yet arrived), containing the copy of your telegram to Mr. Osborn of the 19th November.

But for your letter I should never have heard of your telegram, as I have not had one word from Mr. Osborn since I left him at Arica, until December 24 (the day after I received your dispatch), when I received his letter of December 3, written two weeks after your telegram to him. And even this letter, of which I send you a copy, says nothing of the telegram.

I cannot say that I am at all surprised at this, whether he had received the telegram or not.

You will notice that his letter does not show that Chili has agreed to all the "measures agreed upon in diplomatic conference at Lima," and that it is quite general and rather indefinite. And it was therefore quite essential that I should know the contents of your telegram which he could have telegraphed to Arica, whence I could have had it by mail long before his letter of the 3d instant was written—not to say received.

The charitable conclusion perhaps ought to be either that he had not received your telegram or that he had sent me a copy which did not reach me. But I must confess to some doubt of the truth of this charitable inference.

I inclose you a copy of my letter of December 14, 1880, which will speak for itself. It touches only those false reports of the Chilian press which had then come to my ears. Since then I have learned that the Chilian press has gone much further in its attacks upon me, some articles charging me with having gone to Chili only for my health, and that I had no idea of being able to bring about peace by mediation; when I went down afterwards in October, other articles do not scruple to charge me with acting as a Peruvian spy, all such articles, of course, assuming that I had no authority for saying to Colonel Lynch or the Peruvian Government that Chili had accepted the mediation of the United States, and at the time I said so to each of them.

Now, the truth of what took place at Santiago when I was there, from 27th to 31st August last, is fully stated in my dispatch No. 191 (and my confidential dispatch of the previous day shows the reason why I went there).

The truth of the fact stated by me, that Chili had accepted the mediation of the United States as early as August 30, at least, can be shown by a mass of evidence in my hands, which is simply overwhelming. Mr. Osborn's own letters and telegrams to me and memorandum drawn by himself and his letters to Mr. Adams among others; and inferentially also by the letters (copies of which I have) of the secretary of state of Chili to General Baquedano and to Admiral Riveros (both of which I delivered personally), and, I presume by what Mr. Osborn must have written to the Department. And these will show that Chili had accepted our mediation (not our "good offices" merely, nor to use the language of his note to that government of the 6th October, while I was in Arica awaiting him by his own appointment, our "mediation in the form of good offices," which, to me, conveys no definite or intelligible idea, and when after seeing his note in a Chilian paper while at Arica, I asked him if Chili had not accepted our good offices in the form of mediation, he replied, yes; and I was quite unable to make him comprehend that there was any difference between the two propositions, the consequence of all which was that by his action Chili, which had accepted our mediation as early as the 30th August, on the strength of which I procured the acceptance by Peru of our mediation on the 14th September, was allowed to place herself before the world as having accepted only our "good offices," and that only on the 7th October, and the further consequence was to place me before the world as a deliberate liar).

I have not yet had time, and have not now, to make copies of all the papers showing the details which led to and accompanied the conference at Arica; in fact I have doubted whether the Department would wish to lumber up its files with them, but I will send them if desired. I am now constantly employed in providing for the protection of American, Swiss, and Colombian citizens (the Chilian forces being within 10 miles of Lima and the final battle expected every moment).

Now, one of the principal reasons for the bitterness of the Chilian press againt me is, no doubt, the action of S. C. Montjoy in assuring Colonel Lynch that I was acting fraudulently. (See my letter to Montjoy. Dispatch 215, No. $\frac{1}{215}$). But the principal ground for these attacks of the Chilian press originated, as I am satified, from the too easy compliance of my colleague in Chili with the wishes of the Chilian Government, and his desire to enable that government to meet the bitter opposition of the war party in Chili. The case, as explained to me by Mr. Osborn himself, at Arica, was just this. Immediately after I had left Chili (August 31), the opposition or war party charged the government with having, through me, taken some steps for peace; the government were put on the defensive; and Mr. Hunaeus, a senator (who had been employed by the President to communicate with me in the first instance), being interrogated in the senate in reference to this, denied everything of the kind, and declared that I had come there only to see my colleague, Mr. Osborn; and the whole idea of negotiating with Peru and Bolivia was kept a secret from the Chilian people until after I arrived at Arica, October 6. While I was at Arica, my letter to Colonel Lynch, or its contents, had been sent to General Baquedano and thence to the Chilian Government, and Mr. Osborn during the conferences, having learned the fact, undertook to make me believe that I had gone too far in stating to Colonel Lynch that I had had a conference with the Chilian Government and that that government had accepted our mediation, &c. We differed upon that point as we differ now.

Now, while his action has tended to strengthen in Chili the belief of my falsehood and evil designs, and to place me before the public in Chili in the worst light, I do not charge him with that particular design, nor am I willing to believe that he was actuated by any malice towards me; but I do think his inordinate desire to sustain the government against the attacks of their opponents has had all the bad effects upon me that it could have had if such had been his feelings and intentions. I cannot and will not enter into newspaper controversy, though the consequence of the action of Montjoy and my colleague may be to render all my efforts for the protection of American, Swiss, and Colombian citizens abortive, and even to endanger myself in case Lima should be taken by storm. Yet I propose to stand by the truth and depend upon the moral protection of our flag, trusting that time will bring my vindication.

I have, &c.,

I. P. CHRISTIANCY.

[Inclosure 1 in No. 226.]

Mr. Osborn to Mr. Christiancy.

LEGATION OF THE UNITED STATES,
Santiago, Chili, December 3, 1880.

SIR: I have been formally assured by this government of its desire to protect the lives and property of neutrals in Lima and Callao, if those places should be attacked by the Chilian army. To that end the commanding general of the army has been directed to consult with the dean of the diplomatic corps in Lima, and to adopt his suggestions in so far as they may not tend to embarrass the legitimate operations of the army in its movements against the enemy.

Very respectfully, &c.,

THOMAS A. OSBORN.

[Inclosure 2 in No. 226.]

Mr. Christiancy to Mr. Osborn.

LEGATION OF THE UNITED STATES,
Lima, Peru, December 14, 1881.

SIR: You have probably seen by the Chilian papers that I have been accused—1st, of falsely stating, when I wrote to Colonel Lynch, September 13, that Chili had accepted the mediation of the United States, and that I had had an interview with the Chilian Government, &c. I have no apology to make for either of the above statements; for both are true in substance and effect, and neither calculated or intended to deceive Colonel Lynch.

It is true that I, as minister to Peru, could not act officially in Chili; but it is equally true that the President of that government, together with his secretary of foreign relations, could (and did) act officially at Santiago, and that you also could act officially at the interview we both had with the President and secretary of foreign relations, when we went together to the palace and had that interview, and when the President and secretary—in answer to my statement that it did not yet appear that the mediation of the United States could have any effect until it was known whether the propositions made by or through the Italian and French ministers should be accepted—replied that they had already accepted the mediation of the United States and should not withdraw it, of which you had previously informed me; and you knew and I knew, and the President and secretary for foreign relations of Chili (who are in effect the government as to foreign relations) knew that that declaration was made to me as the basis upon which I was to ascertain whether Peru would accept the mediation of the United States and enter upon the negotiations, as you had proposed. And the note written by yourself as to the action we were to take shows beyond the slightest doubt that such was your understanding, and your own letters, before and since, show the same. I have, therefore, no apology to make for my letter to Colonel Lynch, above referred to. It was true in substance and effect, as you know and the President and secretary of foreign relations of Peru know, as I know and as God knows. When writing to Lynch I was looking to the substance and effect of things, and I stated them truly. I was not seeking to "divide a hair north or northwest side." Those who claim merit for feats of the latter kind are welcome to all the glory they can secure, and I willingly surrender the whole of that field of controversy to them, having myself no ambition in that direction.

My letter to Colonel Lynch was, therefore, entirely true in substance and effect, and any statement which may be got up by the aid of logical necromancy to show the contrary, from whatever source it may come, is false in substance and effect. Never was a letter written in more perfect good faith than mine to Colonel Lynch, and I am still of the opinion that but for the opposition party in Chili, which drove the government from its honest purpose of securing peace upon fair and honorable terms, that letter would have been approved by the Chilian Government itself. That opposition, which drove the government from its first purpose, together with the exasperation caused by the Lynch raid, were the two main causes which rendered all efforts for peace utterly futile. That opposition drove the Chilian Government to make their propositions for peace in the most exorbitant and repulsive form, while the exasperation on the other side made Peru more averse to any terms. This is the truth of history, and you and I know it. I do not propose that any other view shall pass for history without my protest.

Now, in reference to the charge or insinuation, made by Colonel Lynch, that I had undertaken to deceive him by writing to him, that the estates "Chiclin" and "Hacienda Arriba," in the valley of Chicama were the property of John W. Grace, an American citizen, I have to reply that this charge or insinuation is false, and my letter to him was true, as I believe, in every particular. His charge rests wholly upon information given him by individuals who did not speak from the title papers, and who were interested in compelling the payment of a contribution upon this property, for the purpose of lessening their own contributions, and upon the false and, as I believe, the interested assertions of S. C. Montjoy, United States consul at Lambayeque, who was the author of the protest, made by Americans in Peru last March, against the mode in which Chili carried on the war, the authorship of which was falsely charged against Charles S. Rand, esq., when I was in Santiago, last August.

When I wrote to Colonel Lynch, I spoke from the title papers which I had seen and which are filed in this office. The title, as I understand, was the whole and absolute title that was conveyed to Mr. Grace on the 4th of August last. And I took the precaution, as in other cases, to take the affidavit of Mr. Grace of the fact of his ownership, in addition to the title papers, and upon these I relied in good faith, and still believe that the title was, and still is, in Mr. Grace, as stated by me in my letter to Lynch.

But I will do Mr. Lynch the credit to say that, from information which I have received, and which is now in writing in this legation, I am inclined to believe that, but for the false information given him by Montjoy, and by other owners of property, as aforesaid, he was disposed to exempt and would have exempted the property as that of an American citizen.

I have, &c.,

I. P. CHRISTIANCY.

No. 299.

Mr. Christiancy to Mr. Evarts.

No. 230.] LEGATION OF THE UNITED STATES,
Lima, Peru, January 22, 1881. (Received February 15.)

SIR: Lima was quietly surrendered to the Chilian forces on the 17th instant. I wished and intended to have given you a detailed account of the events and causes which have led to this result. But on the 15th instant, at 2 o'clock p. m., I went with the whole diplomatic corps to Miraflores, some 5 miles (in a direct line) from Lima, to receive from President Piérola his answer to the terms offered by the Chilian general, Baquedano, through the committee of our diplomatic corps, on the morning of that day (said committee consisting of Mr. Pinto, our dean, and the French and English minister, who had that morning arranged an armistice to last until 12 o'clock that night for the purpose of getting the answer of Piérola). We found Piérola and his staff at breakfast in a large house at Miraflores, and were waiting for him to come out, and some of his officers were just coming out from the table, when a single heavy gun was heard, and in less than a minute the battle opened along the whole lines, and at a distance of but about 80 rods south of us, the shot, even from the small-arms, pattering thick and fast upon the buildings around us, and the air being filled with flying shells exploding all around us. It is not yet fully known who fired the first gun, but it is, I think, quite evident that both the Chilian commander and Piérola were equally taken by surprise, and the probability is that it was the unauthorized act of some subaltern officer.

The diplomatic corps fled to the rear towards Lima for their lives, and got somewhat scattered, some of them reaching the railroad train (which had taken us out), some distance to the north of the train, and some, like myself, endeavoring to strike the railroad ahead of the train, but being cut off by walls and ditches, were compelled to walk a devious course back to Lima. I was one of the latter unfortunate class, was under the shells of the Chilian fleet and army, falling thick around me, for two hours before I could get out of range, climbing smooth perpendicular walls between fields and around chacras and old buildings, wading water courses, and traveling some 8 miles to get 4 miles ahead, until my muscular powers were thoroughly exhausted—finding on my return some 600 to 700 refugees—women and children in the legation, who had sought asylum there, and before 9 o'clock at night over 1,200, which increased next day and night to over 1,500 of all nationalities, and all this while more than half the time I was unable to stand upon my feet from the fatigue.

I have just got rid of the refugees, but the strain upon my muscular powers has been such that even yet I cannot walk or stand for half the time, and yet I am constantly besieged with complaints from Americans, Swiss, and Colombians against depredations upon their persons or property from the Chilian soldiery, which I endeavor to get redressed as well as I can. I am therefore in no condition to give you a detailed statement of events at present, but shall do so as soon as I can.

I will only say here that, from all the reports I hear from every quarter, the Chilians killed all the Peruvian wounded they found upon the field. They deliberately burned Chorrillas, after all necessity for such outrages had ended. They did the same to Barranca and Miraflores; and since all the fighting has been over they have burned sugar plantations with standing cane upon them. They have robbed, as I am informed, some haciendas belonging to Colombian citizens, under the protection of this legation, and I fear, also, some belonging to Americans, most of which is doubtless due to the special pains taken by Mr. Montjoy to cause the Chilian officers to believe that I was acting in bad faith towards them; and some of it, from the inordinate desire of my colleague in Chili to make himself popular with the government there by assenting and giving currency to the false and vindictive attacks of the Chilian press against me, as I know the basest and most vindictive attacks of their press come from an intimate and familiar friend of my colleague.

The Chilians have, as yet, behaved remarkably well in Lima, and thus far respected their promise to protect life and property; and I must do their officers the justice to say, I think they intend to enforce order in the city and to treat the inhabitants kindly.

Piérola, who constitutes the only recognized government of Peru, was last heard of at Canta, some fifty miles northeast of Lima. He is at present supposed to intend to arouse the interior to arms. But he has no money or arms, and, I think, would have acted more wisely if he had remained here. The Chilians, I feel quite sure, would have treated him kindly, and recognized him as the only government with which they could treat for peace. I think they would be glad to have him return for that purpose. I am quite unable to write you further to-day, as I am scarcely able to be out of bed.

I have, &c.,

I. P. CHRISTIANCY.

No. 300.

Mr. Evarts to Mr. Christiancy.

No. 119.] DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, January 25, 1881.

SIR: I regret that a report which has been communicated to the Department obliges me to request that you will make a strong representation in the premises to the Peruvian Government, should you find on inquiry that the report is well founded. This report is that the Peruvians have made use, during the present war with Chili, of "boats containing explosive materials" which have "in some instances been sent adrift on the chance of their being fallen in with by some of the Chilian blockading squadron." How far the case of the launch to which you refer in your No. 183, which was loaded with concealed dynamite, comes within the description of cases mentioned, the Department has not the requisite data to determine.

It is sufficiently obvious that this practice must be fraught with danger to neutral vessels entitled to protection under the law of nations, and that in case American vessels are injured thereby, this government can do no less than hold the Government of Peru responsible for any damage which may be thus occasioned.

There is no disposition on the part of this government to act in anywise nor in any spirit which may be construed as unnecessarily critical of the methods whereby Peru seeks to protect her life or territory against any enemy whatsoever; but it will appear, I think, to the high sense of propriety which has in times past distinguished the councils of the Peruvian Government, and which without doubt still abides therein, that in case it is ascertained that means and ways so dangerous to neutrals and those adverted to have been for any reason suffered to be adopted by her forces, or any part of them, they should be at once checked, not only for the benefit of Peru, but in the interest of a wise and chivalrous warfare, which should constantly afford to neutral powers the highest possible consideration.

It is understood that the British minister at Lima may be instructed to make like representations on the part of his government.

I am, sir, &c.,

WM. M. EVARTS.

No. 301.

Mr. Christiancy to Mr. Evarts.

No. 237.] LEGATION OF THE UNITED STATES,
Lima, Peru, February 2, 1881. (Received March 2.)

SIR: I had intended before this time to have sent you a connected and intelligible account of the military operations which culminated in the taking of Lima by the military forces of Chili, and of the correspondence of the diplomatic corps, first with the Government of Chili (through their colleagues in Santiago), and second, with the general-in-chief of the Chilian forces prior to the battles of the 13th and 15th ultimo, but several causes have prevented me thus far from performing this duty.

1st. I have been ill most of the time since the battle of Miraflores, on the 15th ultimo, in which I was caught and from which I made my brilliant advance upon Lima, and have been in the hands of a physician until to-day.

2d. I have not been able to get from the dean of the diplomatic corps (Mr. Pinto, from Salvador) copies of the diplomatic correspondence above referred to. My clerk has just got the originals and is making copies and translations.

3d. A part of the documents to which I wished to refer (with many other papers relating to the war, and the conferences at Arica, which might be necessary to refer to in future correspondence) was sent to the Lackawanna for safe-keeping, until it should be known whether Lima was to be sacked and burned; and this vessel left Callao a week ago for Chimbote, and has not yet returned.

I must, therefore, confine myself to the briefest possible explanation and the most pressing exigencies of the present situation. Lima, through its alcalde (mayor) representing the municipal government, having on the 16th ultimo surrendered at discretion, on the promise of protection to life and property, on condition that their entry should not be opposed and that they should not be fired upon. There was great danger that this last condition would not be complied with and but for the Urban Guard, composed entirely of neutrals (who, at the invitation of the Peruvian Government had for eight or ten days before the first battle protected the city from disorder, but just before the first battle had been discharged by the government, because they had inadvertently stopped one of the ministers of the government in the street at night). On Sunday, the 16th, the Peruvian army, having been beaten the day before at Miraflores, was completely disbanded, and Lima was filled with them, many of them still retaining their arms, all without organization or officers. They were all negroes, Indians, mulattoes, cholos, and mixed bloods of the lowest order (as there had been no white men in the ranks of the Peruvian army, except in the reserve, consisting of white men from Lima and Callao).

These disbanded soldiers, who had been forced into the army against their will and were now thrown upon the world as outcasts, who had no place to go to, and no means of supplying themselves with food, and were really suffering from hunger, deserved, as I thought, pity and sympathy. But late in the afternoon (of the 16th) we began—I say "we," for there were at that time in the legation and under my protection some 1,550 women and children—we began to hear firing and cries of rage and of distress along the streets, as if pandemonium itself had suddenly burst up, as with an earthquake shock, along all the streets in the city.

It was soon evident that a concerted and general, though disorderly and riotous, attack was being made upon the poor inoffensive Chinese, their shops and houses, where food was sold in small quantities; but the attack was not confined to these, it extended to almost all the pulperias, or small shops, where food and liquor were sold.

Immediate death by the rifle-shot was the penalty of resistance, and the poor Chinese almost everywhere met the same penalty without resistance. Louder and louder, as the night drew on, and louder and more pervading, horrible, and bewildering as the night progressed, became the mingled cries of vengeance and distress, and louder and ever increasing the roar of rifle-shots along the streets, until their continuous roll resembled that of a regular battle. By 10 o'clock the flames of burning buildings in various parts of the city began to illuminate the skies, and still further to terrify the hearts of the already terrified inhabitants with the prospect of a general conflagration.

Several large buildings were burned to the ground; but, thanks to the mud or clay and reeds, which compose most of the buildings of Lima, a fire can spread but slowly, and its spread was checked after several valuable buildings had been burned, among them several large and valuable Chinese stores along the principal streets.

It was a night, or rather a nightmare, of chaos and unutterable horrors, a "triste noche" which defies all analysis or detail of description. But towards the dawn it began to become evident that the demon of chaos and disorder had begun to lose his force; his powers were becoming weak by sheer force of over-exertion; phrenzy had yielded to exhaustion. The Peruvian citizens, however, whose soldiers these rioters had been, were in no position to put them down, and though many of the native citizens of Lima of the better class would have rejoiced to see the reign of terror ended, they seemed utterly paralyzed, as these men were so lately their defenders.

It was now the dawn of day, and the Chilian forces were to enter at 2 o'clock p. m. If these disorderly elements were not subdued before that time there was every reason to fear that some and probably many of them, under the influence of liquor, would fire upon the Chilian forces, and Lima would then be laid in ashes.

But at the terrible moment, when all seemed lost, before the morning sun rose over the Andes, a new star of hope made its appearance upon the horizon. Through all the chaotic horrors of the night an element of order, guided by intelligence, had been doing its work, and barbarism and brutality were destined to feel the force of civilization and intelligence, with an intelligent purpose to enforce order. Though comparatively few in number the Urban Guard through all the horrors of the preceding night, had been organizing; and with the dawn of day quietly but resolutely took the streets "still as the breeze, but dreadful as the storm." A few of them had pistols, others policemen's clubs. As they came in contact with the armed rabble, often ten or fifteen to their one, they demanded their arms and their surrender. If any one refused this demand he was at once shot or knocked down and killed. The rabble at once realized that here was a power they could not resist. They threw down their arms and fled to their dens or hiding places. A few of the Urban Guards and great numbers of the rioters were killed. This process was still going on at 2 o'clock, p. m., on the 17th. The Chilian commander, learning this, waited for the entry of his forces for some two hours more, by which time order was restored, and all danger of firing upon his troops was over, when he sent in some 3,000 of his best disciplined men, who quietly entered without noise or demonstration of any kind, and Lima was saved from destruction. [All neutrals and many of the Peruvians felt a sense of relief upon the entry of the Chilian forces, and as to neutrals, I think, they dread the departure of the Chilian forces as much as they dreaded their entrance; as in case of their departure the neutrals will be subjected to the prejudices, the passions, and the hatred of the Peruvians of the lower orders.]

Since that time much of the rest of the army has marched quietly through Lima and encamped outside. General Saavedra is the chief civil governor of Lima under Chilian power, and seems to be doing all in his power to preserve order. Still many horrible outrages have occurred—rapes and murders—probably in spite of the utmost vigilance of the governor, but which would not have happened from a civilized soldiery. And if Chili chooses to employ savages as soldiers she must be held responsible before the world for all such excesses as would not have been committed by a civilized soldiery under proper discipline. In the mean time the Chilian commanders are greatly embarrassed by their victory, as they can find no Peruvian government with which they can treat for peace. Piérola, at last advices, was at Tarma, still bent upon pursuing the war, though he has no army, no arms, and no financial resources, and if he insists upon continuing the war will ruin Peru without benefitting himself. He is now, however, inclined to treat under the mediation of the diplomatic corps. But the Chilian authorities, as long ago as the 14th, before the battle of Miraflores, plainly declared to our corps its determination to admit no mediation. And the diplomatic corps will not probably intervene against the will of Chili.

It is now 3 o'clock p. m., and at 5 or 6 p. m. I am expecting a diplomatic meeting to take into consideration a letter of Piérola. If he is not disposed to treat for peace on reasonable terms, I think a provisional government will be installed here, consisting of the municipal authorities and the notables of the vicinity, by whom a treaty of peace will be negotiated, subject to the approval of Congress, which in that event will be convened at the earliest possible moment.

FEBRUARY 4, 1881.—Nothing new has occurred since writing the above.

The neutrals here, who saved the city from destruction by putting down the disbanded Peruvian soldiery, dread the hostility of the Peruvians when the moment comes for the evacuation of Lima by the Chilian forces.

They fear that the "foreigners" will then be accused of having aided the Chilians to take possession of Lima, and that the vengeance of the lower classes, at least, will be directed against them for the very action which saved the city from destruction.

In the mean time it is a most ominous fact that the general-in-chief of the Chilian forces is constantly harping upon what he calls the treachery of the Peruvians in opening the battle of Miraflores during the armistice which had been agreed upon, and this for the purpose apparently of justifying extreme measures of retaliation. The effort seems to be, on the part of the Chilians, to fix upon Piérola the preconceived design of violating the armistice, and in this view the Actualidad of the 31st ultimo contains an article setting forth what purports to be a telegram from a Mr. "Velazco" (some irresponsible person) to the prefect of Callao, stating, on the authority of a report by the Miraflores Railroad that the Peruvians were about to attack, &c. (a copy of which telegram, and the article in the paper, I inclose, with a translation). In reference to this I wish to say, first, that I doubt the authenticity of any such telegram. No Peruvian speaks of that railroad as the Miraflores Railroad, but always as the Chorrillos Railroad. Second, if the dispatch be genuine, it only purports to be a report by the railroad, for which the commander of the Peruvian forces was in no way responsible; and was probably the natural inference of the reporter (whoever he was) from the close and increasing proximity of the lines of the respective armies.

The whole diplomatic corps were witnesses to the utter surprise on the part of Piérola and his staff at the opening of the battle, and all saw the confusion, the surprise, &c., and "mounting in hot haste" of Piérola and his staff at the sound of the guns. From all that can be learned, thus far, the surprise was equally great on the part of General Baquedano and his staff. But from the best information I can thus far obtain, it would seem (that though Baquedano had reserved the right to complete the movement of his forces already commenced), the Peruvian forces did not understand that he was at liberty to move up into their very faces, or into their lines, as this would be to make the armistice a farce; and I am inclined to believe that the movement of the Chilians upon the Peruvian lines was such as to induce the latter to believe an immediate attack was intended, and that thus provoked some Peruvians, without proper authority, fired the first gun.

But I will not undertake to decide so grave a question without further evidence. One thing is, I think, entirely clear, that the great mass of the Chilian soldiery came here under the belief that they should be gratified by the sacking and plunder of Lima, and that the general-in-chief, who naturally seeks to retain the good will of his soldiery, may feel a little cramped by the terms of surrender which he accorded at the instance of neutrals, and may therefore not be strongly averse to indulging the general understanding and wish of his soldiers upon any pretext which might excuse it, seems to me not wholly improbable, though I shall be slow to credit this until the event shall demonstrate it. And I hope there may be nothing to afford even the pretext for such indulgence.

I have, &c.,

I. P. CHRISTIANCY.

[Inclosure in Mr. Christiancy's 237.—Translation.]

THE PERFIDY OF MIRAFLORES.

CALLAO, January 31, 1881.

Editors La Actualidad:

In the account of the battle of Miraflores, given by you in No. 78 of your paper, you state that in the Chilian general staff, at first, the rupture of hostility on the part of Miraflores, the 15th instant, was attributed to the hastiness of some inexpert and nervous Peruvian chief, but that aferwards light was thrown over the subject, and it was discovered that the responsibility of what occurred there rested on the Peruvian dictator. Closing your article, you say that the part of the veil which shadowed over the mysterious tragedy of Miraflores and which the hands of contemporaries did not raise, will be raised by the hands of history.

My purpose, Mr. Editor, is to contribute for my part to that task of serious investigation, communicating to you a document which fully confirms your assurance, and discloses clearly the preconceived treacherous blow which cost so many valuable lives of the Chilian army, and covered with mourning the most respectable homes of the Peruvian capital. That document is the following telegram sent from the palace to the commander-in-chief of Callao, at 1 p. m., the 15th instant, one hour before the firing commenced.

[Telegram from palace.]

"Mr. PREFECT: From the railroad of Miraflores they communicate that within a few moments the combat will commence. The line formed, only wait orders to fire. Much enthusiasm.

"VELAZCO."

"A true copy:

"D. CAVIAZCO ALBANO,
"Secretary General.

"Yours, &c.,
(Signed thus:)

* * *
* *."

As it is seen, at 1 p. m., the hour in which the armistice agreed upon the same morning was in all its vigor, and the conquerors of Chorillos were completely careless in the Peruvian camp of Miraflores, one of the most treacherous attacks, and one of which there is no record in history, was preparing, and the line formed only waited orders to fire on a credulous and confiding enemy.

As it is seen, an hour before the battle commenced, the army of the Peruvian dictator was ready to fire, and that violent breach of military agreement produced much enthusiasm in the ranks of its infractors, instead of serious disquiet.

This is a shameful discovery for the authors of the scandal and specially mortifying to South American soldiers, a discovery which we could leave aside, without commentary, in the archives of human misery, should it not involve lessons, which the directors of the Chilian army should avail themselves of, and the dignity of foreign representatives in Peru should not stand between.

The Chilian military authority will know, doubtless, what is to be hoped of the word and loyalty of a chief who laid for his generous adversary the nameless ambuscade of Miraflores.

The foreign diplomatic corps for its part, remembering the compromising part which they were obliged to perform in the conclusion of the armistice, and the audacious and brutal farce of which its members were the object, making them go to Miraflores in the moments in which, as it resulted in the telegram we publish to-day, the attack was preparing, will no doubt assume a resolute attitude towards the government which used towards them such unjustifiable proceedings.

The faith of the arrangements insolently violated and the stream of Chilian and Peruvian blood shed without object demand an exemplary punishment.

No. 302.

Mr. Piérola to Mr. Garcia.

[Telegram.]

JAMAICA, February 8, 1881.

After two desperate battles, we have evacuated Lima and Callao, to remove pretexts for outrages by the enemy.

The government has retreated to the interior, determined to resist to the last extremity, but without refusing to treat upon bearable (tolerable) bases.

Mr. Christiancy has no instructions.

Arbitration by foreign neutral powers would be the best and most efficacious.

PIÉROLA.

No. 303.

Mr. Evarts to Mr. Christiancy.

No. 123.] DEPARTMENT OF STATE,

Washington, February 10, 1881.

SIR: I have this moment received from Mr. Garcia, the Peruvian chargé d'affairés in the United States, the following telegraphic dispatch, which came by the way of Jamaica:

> After two desperate battles, we have evacuated Lima and Callao, to remove pretexts for outrages by the enemy.
>
> The government has retreated to the interior, determined to resist to the last extremity, but without refusing to treat upon bearable (tolerable) bases.
>
> Mr. Christiancy has no instructions.
>
> Arbitration by foreign neutral powers would be the best and most efficacious.
>
> PIÉROLA.

The Chilian minister informs me to-day that he has no information whatever but the public announcement of the occupation of Lima. I am also without any dispatch or telegram from yourself or Mr. Osborn, giving me any information of the recent important results of the war, such as have been publicly reported. Under these circumstances, and in view of the telegram above quoted, I find it necessary to desire you to press upon the Government of Peru, and on such Chilian authorities as you may have access to, the earnest desire of this government to bring about a peace without unnecessary delay and upon reasonable and honorable terms, compatible with the true welfare of all the belligerents, and so as to be lasting.

You will urge the desire of this government with that pressure which appears to you admissible under all the circumstances, and proper to the gravity of the occasion.

I am, &c.,

WM. M. EVARTS.

No. 304.

Mr. Christiancy to Mr. Evarts.

No. 240.] LEGATION OF THE UNITED STATES,

Lima, Peru, February 15, 1881. (Received March 18.)

SIR: I have the honor to inclose to you the copy of a letter of October 5, 1880, written by Mr. Valderrama, secretary of foreign relations, of Chili, to the French minister at Santiago, in reference to the protection of neutral property in the contemplated expedition upon Lima and Callao; also a translation of the same.

Also a copy and translation of a letter of Mr. Pinto (minister of Salvador), the dean of the diplomatic corps in Lima, to the general-in-chief of the Chilian forces, dated December 28th last.

Also a letter of General Baquedano, in reply to last above, dated December 30, 1880.

Also a letter of January 1, 1881, from Mr, Pinto, the dean of our diplomatic corps, to General Baquedano, in reply to his last above, with translation.

Also a copy of a letter of General Baquedano in reply to the last above, dated January 6, 1881, with a translation.

Also a copy of a letter from General Baquedano to the dean of the diplomatic corps, dated Chorillos, 15th January, at 11 p. m., with translation.

No. $\frac{4}{240}$ (above) embodies the principles which I had the honor to submit to the diplomatic corps, on the day of its date, in the shape of a simple declaration of principles adopted by the corps, and stated in a slightly different form in the letter.

I have included all the above that you may have a full view of the correspondence in reference to the transactions alluded to; but the most important of all, in reference to the numerous claims likely to be presented against Chili by American, Swiss, and Colombian citizens, is the above No. $\frac{1}{240}$. This was written to the French minister in Chili, in answer to a letter of his, in behalf of all neutrals here; and the answer No. $\frac{1}{240}$ applies equally to all. It was sent by the French minister in Chili to his colleague here and presented to and read before our diplomatic corps, as it was no doubt intended to be.

It will be seen it adopts the very plan of protecting neutral property which had been already adopted by us, and this plan we continued, not only in Lima, but in Chorillos, Miraflores, and everywhere else in Peru; and we trusted and believed that this plan would prove effectual, and that the neutral property, having the placards with the certificates and flag referred to, would be respected by the Chilian forces; at least, that such property would not be deliberately taken or destroyed without military necessity. Of course we did not expect such protection against the risks of battle, or those naturally incident to the taking of a town by bombardment or storm, while any resistance was kept up in such town. But, even in such cases, we did think we had a right to rely upon the promise of the Chilian Government, that such property should not be deliberately taken or destroyed, after all resistance and all fighting had ceased, and especially one, two, or three days after, when all necessity for its taking or destruction had ceased.

Now, it clearly appears from the official report of General Baquedano, that all fighting, even in Chorillos, had ceased, and that his victory then was complete at 2 o'clock p. m. of the 13th January, (see extract from that report, here inclosed, and referred to in the margin). And yet that "the towns of Chorillos and Barranco, as a consequence of their resistance, were destroyed and burned." Now, the fact, as I am informed from all quarters, is, that there was no fighting at Barranco (a village intermediate between Chorillos and Miraflores), and that no fire of any importance occurred until about 5 or 6 o'clock p. m. in Chorillos; that at about the hour last mentioned, the most densely built part of the town was deliberately set on fire by the soldiery, and every living inhabitant in the town—of whom there were many who had remained—having been killed, most of them were piled up in the houses and burned with them. But a large portion of the best houses in the town, many of them owned by neutrals (some American, some Swiss, and, I think, some Colombian, among the rest), were deliberately burned the next day, and some of them two days after, after having been robbed of their furniture (most of it of the most costly kind), which was sent on board the Chilian fleet, before the torches or hand-grenades were applied to the houses; and these very houses had upon them the flags and placards agreed upon with the Chilian Government.

And when I state what I am on all hands informed, is the fact, though I do not personally know it, that the house sometimes occupied by the minister of Brazil and that of the Brazilian consulate, were spared (a fact which shows the alliance between Brazil and Chili, explaining the reason why the Argentine Republic had been kept quiet during this war), and that a guard was sent to protect the house sometimes occupied by the French minister, who had a friend upon the Chilian general's staff, it will be hard to resist the conviction that the burning of the rest of the town was deliberate, and after all necessity for such destruction had ceased.

As to Barranco, where there had been no fighting, the British minister, who went out with our dean and the French minister to see General Baquedano, on the morning of the 15th (two days after the first battle and before the second) informed me that as he passed Barranco the Chilian soldiers were engaged in deliberately burning the town.

The same thing, as I am informed and believe, took place at Miraflores, inhabited largely by neutrals, among whom were several American and Swiss, who had the proper flags and placards up. A part of the town was burned the night after the battle of the afternoon of the 15th; but some of the best buildings one and two days after.

Now, it is precisely upon this ground that the robbery and destruction were deliberately committed, after all necessity or excuse for such acts had ceased, that many claims have already been filed by American and Swiss citizens in this legation. These claims I have not yet forwarded to Mr. Osborn in Chili, believing it best, first to submit, as I now do to you, the substantial facts upon which all of them must rest, and to take your instructions whether to send them first to your department, or to Mr. Osborn.

I have the honor, &c.,

I. P. CHRISTIANCY.

[Inclosure No. 1 in No. 249.—Translation.]

Mr. Valderrama to the French minister to Chili.

SANTIAGO, October 5, 1880.

SIR: After the conference which I had the honor to hold with your excellency yesterday, and during which your excellency signified to me the warm interest which you feel that the Government of Chili should adopt efficacious measures to guard the persons and interests of neutrals in the event that the proposed expedition of the Chilian forces on Lima should be realized, I have been commissioned by his excellency the President, to address a special note to the general-in-chief of the army of operations, in order to satisfy, as far as possible, the wishes expressed by your excellency. In fulfillment of it, I address this day a note to the general-in-chief, in which I bring to his knowledge:

1st. That the government wishes that neutral persons and their interests be carefully respected during the military operations against Lima and Callao.

2d. That in order to make such respect practicable, to hear the indications which the honorable dean of the diplomatic corps may make, and to attend all those which without embarrassing in any way the action of our forces may tend to guarantee neutral persons and their property.

3d. I also tell him that your excellency has indicated to me, in order to have neutral persons and their interests easily certified to, the former will hold a certificate of the legation of which he is a citizen or subject, and the latter will have, besides the flag of its nation, a placard, authorized by the seal and signature of the legation, fixed in a visible place on the property.

The government feels confident that the general-in-chief will take special care in harmonizing the important interests of neutrals, with those corresponding to Chili, as belligerent.

I improve this opportunity to reiterate to your excellency the sentiments of high and distinguished consideration with which I am, &c.,

MELGUIADES VALDERRAMA.

[Inclosure 2 in No. 240.—Translation.]

Mr Pinto to General Baquedano.

LEGATION OF SALVADOR,
Lima, December 28, 1880.

Mr. GENERAL-IN-CHIEF: The diplomatic corps accredited in Lima, anxious about the perils to which the important and valuable interests confided to their care may be subjected, on account of the struggle which soon is to take place at the doors of the city, has agreed that the undersigned, as the dean of the corps, would place himself in immediate communication with your excellency, thus following also the indication from the cabinet of Santiago, with the object of providing in common accord the means which may be adopted to diminish, as much as possible, the risks and perils to which the foreign colonies may be exposed.

The attention of neutral governments has, for some time back, been directed to the disentanglement of the present war, and to the possible eventualities which, in all cases, may affect the conditions of its numerous citizens, and whose interests can be reckoned at hundreds of millions.

With this motive, for the legitimate purpose of securing due protection to such valuable interests, the governments which have legations established in Santiago prescribed to those legations in advance to make such efforts with the Government of Chili as may tend better to reach that end, and the security of our compatriots without embarrassing the military action of the belligerents.

In accord with those precautions our colleagues at Santiago, after an understanding with the Government of Chili, which gave its best attention to those observations, have solicited our indications as to the measures which, according to our judgment, would be more efficacious for the object proposed. In consequence we have drawn and forwarded to them the annexed scheme, a copy of which we inclose, which has met the express and implicit approbation of all our governments.

The cabinet of Santiago, supposing that, perhaps, in certain cases, military operations would prevent the complete application of the measures proposed, has preferred not to bind itself with, but to adopt definitely only a part of the project referred to, promising, as to the other part of the same project, to send orders to the commander-in-chief of the expedition with the view that said commander will have an understanding with the diplomatic corps, represented by its dean, in relation to those measures which circumstances will permit to adopt for their most ample fulfillment.

I am now placed under the circumstances to propose to your excellency the commencement of those relations of reciprocal intelligence, which place us in a relation for me to fulfill the duties of my position under the present circumstances, and on the part of your excellency to accomplish the orders of your government, being both able to concur, through our agreement, to attenuate and lessen the horrors inherent to the war, and recognizing, in that manner, the age of civilization which we now enjoy.

As far as it concerns us, we have endeavored that all foreigners be provided with a certificate showing their nationality, allowing them to fix, in a visible place on their domicile or house of commerce, a placard with their national colors, authorized by their respective legations or consulate general. This placard and the national flag which most of them will hoist will be sufficient proof. Besides we have established certain private localities, which will be recognized by special signs and held by persons duly authorized by us, which will be the deposits of goods of our respective citizens, and asylums for their families, when these should feel themselves in better security there. In order that your excellency may have a better judgment of this I annex to the present a plan of Lima, in which the legations, the asylums and deposits of goods, and foreign houses of commerce, are shown, upon which we wish to call the attention and care of your excellency by reason of their special nationality. Your excellency will find also, in the same plan, the houses of every one of the members of the American congress of jurists in Lima, whose existence in Lima is well known by the cabinet of Santiago, and whose title and duties are evidently worthy of special consideration.

As to the indications which we think it our duty to make to your excellency, they could evidently not differ from the programme already proposed to the Government of Chili, and which, as before stated, has received the approval of our governments. For the rest, we have always understood that the measures which your excellency will adopt, will be according to the legitimate exigencies of the war and the security of the army under your command.

Among those measures, there is one, above all, which the diplomatic corps allows itself to recommend specially to the consideration of your excellency. It is that in relation to the entry of the troops, in the case that by consequence of events, the city of Lima should capitulate or cease to be defended. In such case, in fact, the entry in mass, of numerous troops, without necessity, would occasion great inconvenience. For that reason, besides consulting the way to obviate inconveniences, we think there would be positive advantages, in the successive entries of the troops, and that such entry should be made only by a number sufficient to guarantee its occupation.

This is a measure we have no doubt has already occurred to your excellency, as others proper for the occasion, which will tend to avoid unnecessary evils, to humanize the war, and to reduce its destructive action to the limits prescribed by the rights of nations and Christian civilization, under which guard modern nations are ennobled and dignified.

As to the rest, promoting this communication for mutual intelligence, I think that I have only anticipated your excellency's ideas in the same sense, since through them we prevent as much as possible the horrors of the war, and avoid prejudice to the neutrals resident in these countries, and perhaps their annecessary ruin—which might give room to grave complications—and at the same time avoid the criticism, more or less severe, on the countries engaged in the struggle by other nations of the world which are contemplating them.

I improve this occasion, Mr. General-in-Chief, to offer to you rexcellency the assurance of my high consideration.

J. DE T. PINTO.

[Inclosure 3 in No. 240.—Translation.]

General Baquedano to Mr. Pinto.

LURIN, December 30, 1880.

I had the honor to receive the note dated 28th instant, in which your excellency, as the dean of the diplomatic corps, resident in Lima, has been pleased to address me, with the view to establish correspondence between us, in order to avoid as much as possible the damages which may be suffered by neutrals in their persons and property by the operations which the army under my command may realize in defeating the army defending that capital.

It is very satisfactory to me to say to your excellency, in answer to the note above mentioned, that it is with pleasure I initiate those relations, and that should your excellency wish, either to communicate with me personally or by written letters, you will always find me disposed to receive with kindness all those suggestions which tend to lessen as far as possible the wrongs and evils of the war.

I will do, in that light, all in my power, if the army of the enemy do not make of the city of Lima the base of its defense.

But, if the contrary takes place, and I should be obliged to take it by assault, your excellency will understand that it could not be possible for me, either to give a term before commencing hostilities against that capital, or limit the consequences of that combat and the occupation by main force, as your excellency and myself wish it. In that case the city will forcibly be subdued to the rules of war and suffer all its rigorous consequences.

Wishing that the relations initiated by this note may efficaciously tend to the humane views which have influenced your excellency in addressing your excellency's note to me, I improve this grateful opportunity to offer to your excellency the assurance of my highest consideration.

MANUEL BAQUEDANO.

[Inclosure 4 in No. 240.—Translation.]

Mr. Pinto to General Baquedano.

LEGATION OF SALVADOR,
Lima, January 1, 1881.

MR. GENERAL IN-CHIEF: I had the honor to receive the answer your excellency has been pleased to give to my letter of the 28th December last, the contents of which were immediately placed before the diplomatic corps for their knowledge.

My colleagues accept with pleasure the assurances which your excellency has transmitted. They could not but conceive doubts on your excellency's answer referring to the principal part of my note, that part which refers to the entrance of troops into Lima. This part involves great importance in the opinion of our governments, expressly approved by many of them, and we must, therefore, insist again and solicit of your excellency to let us know in a precise manner if your intention is, as we understand it, to let but a limited number of selected force enter the city in the particular case that it should not be taken by storm.

It must have come to the knowledge of your excellency the rumors given by the press of Chili relative to the sacking of Lima, notwithstanding that we understand this is not the idea of the Government of Chili, proper only to past ages, we cannot leave aside and must take into consideration that the suggestions thrown to the public might have raised in the minds of soldiers tendencies against which special precautions are necessary.

We are placed now under the necessity to point them out to your excellency, not doubting, however, that you are willing to adopt them in order to prevent unnecessary wrongs, and cover your responsibility before your own country and the opinion of the world.

We do not deny that, in the event of the city of Lima being taken by main force, it would be impossible to limit the entrance of troops, nor for the city to avoid undergoing all the rigorous eventualities of the war. Nevertheless, we cannot, and we ought not, to reckon among those eventualities the plunder of this city. Your excellency knows well that the laws of war, as they are now accepted by Christian civilization, condemn the plundering of private property, as also attacking defenseless and noncombatant persons, even in the case of a city being taken by assault. Our ideas agree generally on that point, and your excellency will readily understand that it could not be possible for us to remain indifferent at witnessing scenes condemned by the unanimous opinion of the countries we represent.

The diplomatic corps is grateful to your excellency for the frank deference with which your excellency accepted the relations it initiated, and hope they will not prove fruitless towards the noble purpose of humanizing the war, saving, as much as possible, large neutral interests not involved in it, and the reputation before universal public opinion of the people who sustain it.

Having thus fulfilled the commission received from my colleagues, it remains for me to renew to your excellency the assurance of my high consideration.

JORGE DE T. PINTO.

[Inclosure 5 in No. 240.—Translation.]

General Baquedano to Mr. Pinto.

No. 423.] LURIN, January 6, 1881.

MR. MINISTER: I have this moment received your excellency's note, dated the 1st instant, in which your excellency asks if, in the event that the city of Lima opposes no resistance against the force of my command, I will occupy it only with a select force? In the contrary case, which is that of resistance, your excellency and honorable colleagues of the diplomatic corps condemn plunder, and wish to have security that my troops will not perform such acts.

In answer to that letter my duty is merely to declare to your excellency that the purpose of my government and my own is clearly stipulated in my note of December 30 last.

Your excellency may understand that the passionate declarations of the press of both belligerent countries cannot be the subject of official discussion. Consequently your excellency will allow me not to refer to the suggestion I found in the note of your excellency as to the instigation of plunder which your excellency has thought to have found in the press of my country.

As to the rest your excellency may rest assured that my firm intention is to humanize the war and prevent unnecessary wrongs to undefended inhabitants in accord with the progress of the civilization of this century.

But to this only my promise must be limited, because the future means which I may adopt, will depend upon circumstances which I cannot foresee nor your excellency stipulate, because they will necessarily correspond with the attitude the army of the enemy may assume.

I improve this opportunity to reiterate to your excellency the assurance of the high consideration with which I subscribe myself your excellency's obedient servant.

MANUEL BAQUEDANO.

[Inclosure 6 in No. 240.—Translation.]

General Baquedano to Mr. Pinto.

CHORILLOS, January 15, 1881.—11 p. m.

Mr. DEAN: Your excellency knows that in consequence of the initiative voluntarily taken by the honorable diplomatic corps to cease hostilities against that city I have not carried into effect this morning the attack prepared against the forces of the Peruvian army defending Miraflores.

Your excellency knows, and the honorable ministers of France and England also know, that I, during the conference which we had to day, refused to prolong the term asked from me in order to interpose their good offices near the Government of Peru with the same pacific view; but that at last yielding to the repeated entreaties of your excellency and of your honorable colleagues, and as a proof of special deference to neutrals, I consented to wait for the answer which your excellency was to give to me until midnight of this day.

Well, the army of the enemy, whose chiefs were to know the arrangements made by the honorable diplomatic corps and to have received proper orders, opened fire to-day at 2.20 p. m. upon the undersigned, his chief of the general staff and aids who reconnoitered the field to see the situation of our troops.

This treachery of the enemy obliges me to hasten the operations under my care, and, in consequence, I address myself to your excellency craving to communicate to your honorable colleagues the resolution I made to bombard to-morrow, if I think it opportune, the city of Lima, until I obtain its unconditional surrender.

With sentiments of distinguished consideration, I subscribe myself, your obedient servant,

MANUEL BAQUEDANO.

[Inclosure 7 in No. 240.—Translation La Actualidad, Lima, February 4, 1881.]

Extract from General Baquedano's report to his government dated January 16, 1881.

* * * At nine our victory was complete in Chorillos and on the fortified hills extending to the south; but about 8,000 men which remained there still continued to resist. With these forces a second battle took place. It was necessary to drive them out from each one of the streets and houses of the town and from the heights, which they held. This obstinate combat lasted until 2 o'clock p. m., at which hour the battle was over with a victory which gave us possession of the enemy's entire line and of the towns of Chorillos and Barranco, which as a consequence of their resistance were burned and destroyed.

No. 305.

Mr. Christiancy to Mr. Evarts.

No. 242.] LEGATION OF THE UNITED STATES,
Lima, Peru, February 16, 1881. (Received March 18.)

SIR: Referring to my dispatches Nos. 230 and 232 in reference to the question of peace, and with what Peruvian Government it is to be made, I have the honor to state that though, in many respects, the condition of things remains substantially the same as when those dispatches were written, yet some slight progress has been made toward a solution.

1st. The Chilian authorities here, even before the last battle, had declared that upon the question of peace they should decline the mediation of any other nation, and since they have been in Lima, they have declared that they would not accept, even the good offices of any neutral government, nor those of their diplomatic representatives here, and that they will only treat with the Peruvian Government.

2d. While for some time after their entrance into Lima, they professed to be ready to treat with Piérola as the only recognized government of Peru, yet after the letter of Piérola, or rather his secretary-general, to the diplomatic corps, dated the 20th January, 1881, had been published (I think by Piérola in some paper in Peru), a copy of which, with a translation, will accompany my next dispatch, No. 243, the Chilian authorities here have declared that they would not recognize Piérola as the Government of Peru nor treat with him until that letter should be withdrawn. And efforts have been made to initiate another Peruvian Government under the auspices of the "notables" at and near Lima. But none of the various parties seem to have men of sufficiently commanding influence to secure the general popular support, and none of them to be willing to incur the hazard of assuming powers of government while Piérola remains as dictator and does not resign.

In the mean time the Peruvian judicial officers, having been invited to enter upon the exercise of their jurisdiction, which they have declined to do, martial law, which is certainly better than no law, has been proclaimed in Lima, Callao, and the surrounding country in possession of the Chilian forces; their courts-martial adjudicating summarily and giving only verbal decrees and judgments, which are promptly executed by their military authorities. And I am glad to be able to testify that the Chilian officials have conducted themselves with great propriety and fidelity in the preservation of the peace and good order of the city of Lima.

Several outrages, rapes, robberies, &c., it is true, have been committed by individuals of the lower classes of their soldiery, but for which, as I am informed, the offenders have been severely punished as soon as they could be discovered.

Piérola remains at Tarma and sometimes at Jauja, beyond the first range of Andes, the Chilians having control of the whole of the Calloa, Lima and Oroya Railroad to Chicla, its present termination.

Several Peruvian missions have been sent to confer with him, with the sanction of the Chilian authorities, and though he was, at first, averse to any attempt at negotiation, yet since then, finding himself without funds or arms, and utterly unable to carry on the war, he, nearly a week since, resolved to negotiate for peace, and for that purpose appointed three plenipotentiaries resident in Lima, and the necessary instructions were given them. But one of these commissioners has declined to accept and this produces another delay of about a week.

But the two other commissioners have had informal conferences with the Chilian authorities, who, as I am informed, do not refuse to treat with Piérola, provided the letter in question shall be withdrawn.

The terms will, of course, be such as Chili chooses to dictate, a capitulation or surrender at discretion on the part of Peru, which is utterly prostrate, and, from the Andes to the sea, virtually in their possession and completely under the control of Chili.

But Chili has, by this last supreme effort, also exhausted herself, and could not continue to contest much longer, except as she can contrive to live upon Peru, and make her bear the expenses, which she is now attempting to do, having just sent an expedition of some 6,000 men to the region of Trujillo, probably for the purpose of levying contributions, and destroying property which does not pay them. They have also established a commission here to levy upon the inhabitants of Lima and Callao a forced contribution, and it is understood the lists are now being made out. The decree or bando for this does not expressly exempt even neutrals, though it is the opinion of the diplomatic corps generally that neutrals are not intended to be included. We shall soon see; and if neutrals shall be included there will probably be an energetic protest from the diplomatic corps.

It is evident that Chili means to leave Peru in a condition which shall not render her a dangerous neighbor hereafter. She will now probably demand the cession, not only of Tarapaca, but of the province of Moquegna, including Arica and Tacna, thus depriving Peru of most of her nitrate deposits and many of her guano-beds. And, judging from the tone of the Chilian paper in Lima (the Actualidad), there is some reason for supposing that Chili is now endeavoring to instigate the government of Ecuador to seize upon the northern portion of Peru, a part of which once belonged to Ecuador; and I should not be surprised if Brazil, taking advantage of this opportunity, should take possession of a large portion of Northeastern Peru (the best portion of it, but now held by the wild Indians), and that by these several means the most important portions of Peru should be partitioned among her neighbors, a result which, should it take place, will not be calculated for the preservation of peace in any of these countries.

I have, &c.,

I. P. CHRISTIANCY.

No. 306.

Mr. Evarts to Mr. Christiancy.

No. 129. Confidential.] DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, February 17, 1881.

SIR: The question of the restoration of peace in South America, ever present to this government, as you will have amply seen by my instruction No. 123 of the 10th instant, of which I send a duplicate to you by the hands of the same messenger who carries this present instruction, is presented to me to-day in a phase which I feel warranted in making known to you with whatever of confidence and reserve its nature may counsel.

Your latest dispatches, received here on the 15th instant, cover dates up to the 23d ultimo, and represent the success of the Chilian arms, as shown in the occupancy of the national metropolis by the invaders and the administration of its affairs by their officers, thus confirming the advices of the public press. And yet, at your time of writing, this condition of affairs left it problematical how far the prospect of a successful negotiation for ultimate peace might have been thereby hastened.

This Department has been approached by Count Montferrand, of Paris, and Mr. Suarez, understood to be a Peruvian citizen, with certain proposals or calculations of important financial interests in Europe looking to financial aids and facilities to enable the two nations to liquidate advantageously to both, as it is argued, the obligations produced by the war and needing to be met as part of the terms of peace.

I have said to Mr. Suarez, who goes to Lima by the same steamer which carries this instruction, that I am always ready to press the mediation of this government towards early and honorable peace between the belligerents; that the financial facility and aid which the private interests he represents can furnish towards a liquidation of the pecuniary obligations that the war may have created and which may need to be met, are calculated to assist the restoration of peace; that, in this light, they will be laid before the representatives of the United States in Peru and Chili; and that any further responsibility of this government can only be determined by actual negotiations between the belligerents asking this government to assume them.

The "programme," as it is called by these gentlemen, it would seem, might form an element in the calculations of the belligerents as to the resources at their recourse in settling the terms of peace.

In this sense I have inclosed herewith two copies of the "programme" for your consideration, and for such comparison of views on it as Mr. Suarez (should he call on you) might invite and you might find it prudent to hold.

It is to be observed that any part or responsibility that this government might be asked by the belligerents, or by any financial administration that might be admitted by them into the adjustment considered or adopted to take, is reserved by this government to be treated with entire freedom whenever the matter should arise for consideration.

Count Montferrand and Mr. Suarez have both come to me under respectable introductions, and the financial bodies and persons whom they appear to represent, are well known and of much weight in financial circles.

You will, however, understand that the matter is placed before you only as an element which, if it can be made valuable and conducive to peace, this government would not like to have wanting to the belligerents, if their negotiations would find it useful.

You can impart to your colleagues, Mr. Osborn and General Adams, as much of this communication as occasion may suggest, but always in confidence.

I am, &c.,

WM. M. EVARTS.

[Inclosure.]

Programme for mediation between Peru and Chili.

I.

The neutrality of the guano and nitrate deposits, so as to avoid ill-feeling between the two nations, which would result from a surrender of the territory, and at the same time to guarantee to the creditors said deposits (pledged to them), against all future difficulties or competitions.

II.

The working of the neutral deposits to be entrusted to an institution of credit, offering a financial basis of unquestionable standing and ability to assure public confidence in any engagement it shall undertake in regard to all the interests.

III.

THE BASIS OF THE TRANSACTION.

The contract of the Credit Industriel, dated at Paris, January 7, 1880, so modified as to give satisfaction to every interest, allowing, namely:

First. To Chili.—The royalty claimed by her of £1 10*s.* per ton, or £450,000 per annum, which would permit a loan of £4,000,000 to be raised to pay a reasonable war indemnity.

Second. To Peru.—The amount which she has declared indispensable for her internal budget, £450,000 per annum.

Third. To the bondholders.—The balance, which represents 3½ per cent. on the principal of the standing debt.

IV.

The funding of the nitrate debt in order to permit the redemption of the guano Peruvian debt, and to increase, if necessary, the royalties appropriated to Peru and Chili.

V.

To lay a cable from Panama to Peru (Callao), to aid the development of commercial relations with the last-named country, and assist in the restoration of her credit. There could be appropriated for the benefit of said cable a subsidy to be derived from the funded nitrate debt.

We can assert that this programme, should it be proposed by the United States, would be endorsed by the great European powers whose subjects are the creditors of Peru, mainly England, France, Belgium, and Holland.

STATEMENT.

FIRST.

The guano, including manipulation and mixing of same, will yearly produce on a sale of 300,000 tons		£3,600,000
I. Freight and expenses, estimated at £4 per ton	£1,200,000
From which is to be deducted—
II. Peruvian royalty, £1 10*s.*	450,000
III. Chilian royalty, £1 10*s.*	450,000
		2,100,000
		1,500,000
IV. Remuneration to the Credit Industriel of 20 per cent. on the net proceeds		300,000
Leaving to be distributed every year to the bondholders, viz, 3½ per cent.		1,200,000

SECOND.

The expropriated nitrate produces, per annum, on a sale of 200,000 tons, at £14 per ton		£2,800,000
I. Manufacturing and transporting to the place of shipment, at, say, £6 per ton	£1,200,000
From which is to be deducted,
II. Freight and expenses, say, £4 per ton	800,000
		2,000,000
Net		800,000
The nitrate debt amounts to £4,000,000, and requires 8 per cent. interest and 2 per cent. sinking fund, viz, £400,000 per annum. This amount could be reduced, namely, make the interest 5 per cent. and 1 per cent. sinking fund, and to refund it in "bons de delegation," which, being negotiable in Europe, would secure to their holders more than they would lose by the change		240,000
Leaving a clear balance of		560,000

To be appropriated to—

The redemption of Peruvian bonds	300,000
Chilian royalty	100,000
Peruvian royalty	100,000
Subsidy to the cable	60,000
	560,000

The foregoing will therefore permit regularly to be appropriated each year:

I. To Chili, £550,000; that is to say, an amount more than sufficient to raise a loan of £4,000,000 to £5,000,000.

II. To Peru, £550,000; that is to say, more than the treasury has ever regularly received.

III. To the bondholders, £1,200,000. This is an income less than the one originally promised, £2,600,000; but it will be perfectly sure, as it will be protected against all chances by the neutrality secured.

It is sufficient to read the foregoing programme and the figures attached to it to acknowledge:

A. That said arrangement is acceptable to both nations, since it will permit them to settle peace without any sacrifice to their national pride, and securing to each one a large pecuniary compensation.

B. That said arrangement is acceptable to the creditors of Peru, since it gives to them a security which they have never had, in return for abandonment of a portion of their interests.

C. That said arrangement would be acceptable to any mediator, since it does not impose a sacrifice of any interests, and it permits the restoration of the credit of two nations, whose ruin will cause trouble in the commercial world.

A. GUILLAUME,
President of the Peruvian Bondholders' French Committee.

No. 307.

Mr. Christiancy to Mr. Evarts.

No. 243.] LEGATION OF THE UNITED STATES,
Lima, Peru, February 19, 1881. (Received March 18.)

SIR: I have the honor to inclose the copy (and translation) of a letter from Aurelio García y García, secretary-general of Piérola, to the dean of the diplomatic corps resident in Lima, dated Canta, January 20, 1881. This is the letter which the Chilian officers and representatives here insist shall be withdrawn before they will consent to treat with Piérola as the Government of Peru.

Now, though the Chilian authorities have not, so far as I know, specified the particular part of this letter to which they object, yet I am inclined to believe it must be that part which charges the Chilians with having treacherously opened the battle in defiance of the armistice which had been agreed upon, as I am inclined to believe that all the other charges contained in the letter are true, and that they could not be successfully denied by the Chilian authorities. It is quite true, I think, from the universal reports which I have heard, that the towns of Chorillos, Barranco, and Miraflores were wantonly and unnecessarily burned, after all resistance had ceased, and that Barranco never resisted at all. I think also that it is entirely true that the Chilians murdered upon the field of battle, on the 13th, at least such wounded soldiers as they found upon the field from which the Peruvians had retired. They may or may not have excepted Peruvian officers, but the general report from Chilian officers, as given to me from officers * * who have conversed with them, is that as a rule they killed on the field all the Peruvian wounded who fell into their hands, with the occasional exception, possibly, of Peruvian officers.

I know that when at Arica, in September, the Chilian governor of the place informed me that in taking Arica they took no wounded Peruvian soldiers there, and from all I could learn from all sources the same was substantially the fact at the battle of Tacna, with very slight exceptions. It may be, and I hope it is, true that after the battle of Miraflores, when the Chilians knew the Peruvians were totally defeated and disbanded, they may have saved some of the Peruvian wounded found upon the field; but all their reports thus far have shown a greater number of Peruvians killed than wounded, which tends strongly to show the truth of the reports that the wounded Peruvians found upon the field were put out of their sufferings in the shortest possible manner. In making these statements I do not profess to speak upon my own knowledge, but upon the best information I can obtain, which I hope, for the honor of humanity, may turn out to be untrue.

What the letter says of the Chilian navy forming a line of battle in front of Miraflores and the advance of the Chilian army on the 15th after the armistice is, from the best information I can obtain, substantially true. It is at least quite certain that the Chilian army continued after the armistice to extend its left wing around and near the right wing of the Peruvian army, and these, at least, to approach much nearer to the latter; but whether the rest of their line advanced nearer is not so clear, though I think the weight of evidence, judging from all sources of information, is that they did advance in several parts of their line nearer to the Peruvian line.

But the great question is, whether the right to do this was or was not reserved by General Baquedano in granting the armistice. He claims that it was, while Piérola, through his secretary, in the letter in question, appears to ignore any such condition, and assumes that the battle was opened by the Chilians. Upon this point (who fired the first gun and thus opened the battle), while I and the rest of the diplomatic corps, being at Piérola's headquarters in Miraflores when the battle opened, supposed the attack had been commenced by the Chilians, yet subsequent information has gone far to satisfy me that the first gun was fired from the side of the Peruvians; probably the unauthorized act of some subordinate officer, provoked by seeing General Baquedano and his staff reconnoitering within a few hundred yards of their front, and probably also seeing the advance of the Chilian army near the right of the Peruvian positions.

But that General Baquedano believed that he had reserved the right to make these movements and this reconnaissance there can be scarcely room for doubt, as he was himself with his staff in the most exposed position when the firing commenced, and lost his horse, and was compelled to hasten to the rear and to bring up the troops who, like himself, had been thrown off their guard by the armistice.

On the other hand, I was, with all the diplomatic corps, an eye-witness to the utter surprise and astonishment, not to say terror, of Piérola and his staff, at the sudden and, to them and to us, unexpected opening of the battle; and I have not the slightest reason to doubt that they were relying in good faith upon the armistice, and believed at the time that it had been violated by the Chilians, and that the battle had been opened by them. Whether he learned the contrary during or after the battle I cannot say. As he was some little distance in the rear and fled when his forces were routed, I am inclined to think he had not learned the fact (that his own forces first opened fire) at the time when this letter of the 20th January was written.

The whole merits, therefore, in my view, turn upon the question what were really the terms of the armistice? This was arranged with General Baquedano, verbally by the committee of the diplomatic corps (consisting of the dean and the ministers of France and England).

It is greatly to be regretted that in so grave a matter the terms had not been put in writing to avoid misconception and misconstruction. The letter of the secretary-general of Piérola, above referred to, gives what Piérola claims to have been the terms as communicated to him verbally. The Chilian secretary of war writing, or rather telegraphing, to his government on the 16th January, simply says, "A committee of the diplomatic corps, composed of the ministers of England, France, and Salvador, came yesterday to this camp at the request of the Supreme Chief of Peru, and an armistice was arranged between them and the Chilian commander-in-chief to expire at 12 o'clock of the same night." Here no conditions are mentioned.

General Baquedano, in reporting the same transaction to his government on the 16th, simply says of the armistice:

> After mature deliberation, I promised not to open fire that day, and to wait their reply until 12 o'clock at night; as this kind of armistice involved no other compromise, I continued making my preparations for the combat.

Now, aside from these official declarations, I learn verbally from Mr. St. John, the British minister, that General Baquedano, in assenting to the armistice, did reserve the right to complete the movement already begun of massing his artillery on his left (the right of the Peruvian line), and he sometimes states it as a right to complete any movement already began; but, so far as I can learn, this was the only movement so begun. Now, whether this condition (whatever it was)was fully explained to and understood by Piéralo I think there is some room for doubt, though I am far from charging or believing that the French and English ministers or the dean of the corps purposely withheld from Piérola these conditions. Yet, in the haste and excitement incident to their conference with him, I can readily see that there was much room for misapprehension, and that Piérola may not have had the same full apprehension of these conditions that General Baquedano had.

This is all I can, with propriety, say of this affair until further authentic information shall be obtained.

I have, &c.,

I. P. CHRISTIANCY.

[Inclosure in No. 243.—Translation.]

Señor Garcia to the Dean of the Diplomatic Corps.

SECRETARY-GENERAL,
Canta, January 20, 1881.

After the battle of Chorillos of the 13th instant, between the part of the national army defending that line and the invading forces of Chili, his excellency the Supreme Chief of the republic ordered the retreat of the army on the positions of Miraflores, which were also the camp of the Lima reserve.

The morning of the 14th instant a Chilian flag of truce, accompanying Col. Miguel Iglesias, commander-in-chief of the first division of the Peruvian army, and who was made a prisoner during the battle of the previous day, made their appearance towards the right front of our line. Their object was to ask a pass for Colonel Iglesias, who, under word of honor, came on a mission from General Baquedano to the Supreme Chief. This being granted, Colonel Iglesias made known to his excellency the object of his mission, which was to ascertain if, on the part of the Government of Peru, propositions of peace would be heard. The affirmative answer of his excellency led to an open field for any negotiation, he specifying moreover that those propositions could either be made by writing or verbally, by a negotiator duly authorized. With that frank answer Colonel Iglesias went back to the camp of the enemy.

Two hours afterwards a second flag of truce was seen by our advanced guards, and with it the Chilian chief, Señor Guillermo Lira Errazuris, who was introduced into the general staff of his excellency the Supreme Chief. The undersigned, who was ordered to communicate with the Chilian chief referred to, heard his proposition, which was to disoccupy immediately the positions of Miraflores in order to be occupied by the Chilian army; this was demanded as a previous and indispensable condition before commencing the discussion.

Miraflores being the support of our right wing and the dominant point of that second line of defense, such pretension was equivalent to exacting a complete victory without exertion or loss of any kind.

Similar observations and many others pertinent to the occasion, which I omit to state to avoid confusion, were not sufficient to modify in the least the ideas of the Chilian commissioner, whose intentions were evidently directed to his single object, going so far as to reject the proposition of a short armistice, which I stated as a means for discussion, free from the natural excitement of the recent contest which we had just sustained and in face of the new one which we now found imminent. In view of the impossibility of an agreement, we ended this fictitious negotiation for peace.

It was then when the friendly mediation of the honorable diplomatic corps accredited to Peru begun, initiated by a commission chosen from among them and composed of the honorable ministers S. St. John and De Vorges, who asked his excellency if Peru would accept their friendly mediation which they proposed, and offering at the same time to go to the camp of the enemy for that purpose.

Such worthy and benevolent proceeding will always be cause of gratitude from the people and Government of Peru.

The facility of communication, and afterwards that of going to the Chilian camp, which those honorable ministers, in representation of all their colleagues, have had are too well known to your excellency to mention them here.

But it is indispensable to remember, because it is for the prestige of those representatives, for that of the friendly nations to Peru, in which name they acted, and for military honor, which is uniform in all the civilized nations of the world, that negotiations of peace were opened under the friendly intervention of the diplomatic corps. His excellency receiving word through your excellency and the honorable ministers of Great Britain and France, Messrs. Spencer St. John and De Vorges, of the assurance given by the Chilian General Baquedano, and accepted by him in the same form, that no act of hostility would be practiced until 12 o'clock of the night of Saturday, the 15th, the time which said general limited to receive an answer to the propositions of peace, and which declaration, according to the rules of war, constituted a true armistice.

Notwithstanding such solemn agreement, the Chilian navy, composed of 14 ships, formed a line of attack in front of Miraflores from the morning of the 15th, and the army on the other hand advanced in line of battle in front of our line, shortening the distance to some 1,800 meters, placing conveniently its artillery, and taking advantageous positions which they could not have taken without great sacrifice.

Of all these movements, which infringed what had been agreed upon, his excellency the Supreme Chief received constant notice, in the presence of Admiral Sterling, of the British fleet in the Pacific; Admiral Du Petit Thouars, of the French fleet; the commander of the corvette, Christoval Colon, chief of the Italian fleet, and another commander of an English vessel, all of whom went there to offer their humane and friendly action; but as all this took place in the rooms inhabited by his excellency the Supreme Chief, in the presence of all the members of the diplomatic corps, it was impossible to the loyalty of the Supreme Chief to admit that, under such exceptional circumstances, an act of perfidy was intended to be realized which could hardly occur even among the half-savage tribes of Africa or Araucania.

While this was happening, his excellency, as also your excellency, the admirals and commanders, who at that moment were in his company, received as first notice the fire which simultaneously broke out at 1.30 p. m.* from the Chilian army and navy upon Miraflores, and on our right wing, beginning thus the battle of Saturday 15th, which treacherous origin was witnessed, with imminent peril of their lives, by your honorable colleagues, the admirals and commanders already named, as also the naval officers of the United States, France, Great Britain, and Italy, who were added to our general staff.

The soldiers of a nation who, like those of Chili, have, with many of our chiefs and officers prisoners, coolly and cowardly shot them, assassinating on the battle-field the helpless wounded, and totally burning, after their occupation, the towns of Chorillos, Barranco, and Miraflores, and following the fatal logic of barbarism, were bound to disregard all moral respect and military agreement.

---

* The actual time was 2.20 p. m.—I. P. C.

The object of the present letter, which I have been ordered to address to your excellency, is to leave an official record of the authenticity of those facts, craving your excellency to give a copy of it to each of your honorable colleagues, for all of whom this is intended.

I remain, &c.,

AURELIO G. Y GARCÍA.

No. 308.

Mr. Christiancy to Mr. Evarts.

No. 245.] LEGATION OF THE UNITED STATES,
Lima, Peru, February 25, 1881. (Received April 5.)

SIR: Referring to my dispatch No. 242, I have the honor to inform you that since then the Chilian authorities here have definitively determined not to treat with Piérola, at present the only recognized government of Peru, recognized by all the other governments who have representatives here, and by Chili herself by treating with him at Arica.

A movement has therefore been initiated among some of the leading citizens of Lima and Callao, and encouraged by the Chilian authorities, to establish a new government in opposition to that of Piérola (who is still at Tarma or Jauja). And at a meeting of 110 of those citizens a Mr. Francisco García Calderon was, by a fair majority of that meeting, declared to constitute, to use their own language, the "unipersonal government" of Peru.

At a superficial glance this would seem to be an attempt to get rid of one distatorship clearly adopted by the people of the whole Peruvian Republic, and recognized by foreign governments, including Chili, for a new dictatorship, adopted by the majority of a self-constituted meeting of 110 men of Lima and Callao, and recognized as yet by nobody else except Chili. In this aspect merely it would, of course, be simply ludicrous.

But the intention, as professed by this new "unipersonal government" and by the Chilian newspaper here (for no Peruvian paper is allowed to be published here) is that this movement for the establishment of a new government shall be submitted in some form to the people of Peru; that an appeal shall be made to the people, who shall be invited to sanction this government until a Congress can be called together to ratify it or to establish another in some form. And, of course, if the people of Peru choose to ratify or concur in this or any other form of government, it must then be considered legitimate and acknowledged as such. But Chili does not intend to accept any treaty as final without its ratification by a Peruvian Congress, though she may, in the mean time, agree upon a provisional treaty with this provisional government, only to be submitted to and ratified by a Congress.

The friends of this new movement profess to have two objects in view: First (which no one doubts their desire to attain), to secure a peace with Chili; and, second, by this appeal to the people to get back to a constitutional government under the constitution in force before the dictatorship; but this last object many appear to doubt. Owing to the difficulty of communication, it will take some time, I should say nearly or quite two months, to get here an authentic expression of the will of the people in all parts of Peru in any fair and regular way. In the mean time the Chilian army will probably continue in Peru, living upon the country.

If the appeal to the people succeeds in securing the popular support, peace (upon such terms as Chili may choose to dictate) will probably be the result.

But if, as I fear may happen, the people of only a part of Peru may approve, and those of any considerable portion should still adhere to Piérola, the result would be likely to prove calamitous indeed to Peru, producing a civil war in addition to the war with Chili.

It is the opinion (or, I would rather say, the strong suspicion) of many that this result is what is desired by Chili, and that her efforts are intended to produce it for the purpose of enabling her to demand a larger cession of territory, if not to give her an excuse for seizing the whole of Peru.

The main ground for this opinion, or suspicion is, that Chili refused to recognize or treat with Piérola, the only recognized government, after he had consented to treat and appointed his commissioners; but, until shown by further developments, I am not ready to attribute to them the design of attempting the permanent conquest of the whole of Peru, though there are some Peruvians and many foreign residents who would prefer this result as best calculated to give the country a more stable government.

In the proposed appeal to the people by the new provisional or proposed provisional government, I think it probable that the portion of Peru west of the Andes will ratify the movement, as much of it has already been overrun by the Chilian forces, and the people clearly see that the Peruvian Government, whether the new, or the old, is, and will be for a long time, powerless to afford protection; and that peace, therefore, is absolutely essential.

But that portion of Peru east of the western range of the Andes, the best, but least peopled part of Peru, the people have felt less of the evils, and none of the ravages of the war. Piérola is among them; and if, now that Chili has refused to treat with him, he should conclude to attempt to sustain his own government, or induce the people to refuse the recognition of a new one, the worst consequences are likely to follow. He has, it is true, scarcely any arms or munitions, and no funds to purchase them, or means to get them into the interior, if he could purchase any amount of them. Nothing more than a guerrilla warfare, could, therefore, be carried on; but this would be sufficient to ruin Peru, and justify Chili in the use of the harshest measures.

I am informed by General Adams, from La Paz, February 6th, that the Bolivians do not take it for granted that the war is over; that they are just now importing arms through the Argentine Republic, and he thinks the war likely to continue. It may be that Piérola may make his way south and join with Bolivia to prolong the war; but this is not my opinion. I am strongly inclined to think that when Bolivia comes to understand fully the inability of Peru to take a principal part in the war, she will make a separate peace.

I have, &c.,

I. P. CHRISTIANCY.

No. 309.

Mr. Christiancy to Mr. Blaine.

No. 251.] LEGATION OF THE UNITED STATES,
Lima, Peru, March 8, 1881. (Received April 5.)

SIR: Referring to your dispatch No. 119, I have the honor to reply—

1st. That if any danger to neutral vessels ever existed from Peruvian boats "containing explosive materials" being "sent adrift on the chance of their falling in with some of the Chilian blockading squadron," that danger had all passed some days before your dispatch was written, as you will have discovered from my dispatches; the Chilians having the entire possession of the Peruvian coast, and there being no further opposition to them along the entire coast of Peru.

2d. I know of no government of Peru to whom I could present a remonstrance, except to Piérola, who is in the interior beyond the first range of the Andes at Jauja, and has not, so far as I am yet informed, appointed any minister of foreign relations with whom I can correspond.

3d. I will say that there never has been any real danger to neutral vessels from the cause mentioned, so far as I know or have been informed. But three instances have occurred during the war (so far as I have ever heard) which could by any possible latitude of construction come within the grounds of complaint mentioned. The first was the case of the Loa, mentioned in my dispatch No. 183, which occurred in the bay of Callao far within the blockading lines, where no neutral vessel (except naval) had any right to come, and where for months they had not attempted to come; and the neutral naval vessels within the bay or near it, not being, like the Chilian vessels, likely to seek to take prizes, and knowing that both belligerents equally were using all the stratagems in their power to injure each other, and being on the alert for these were in no danger of being caught in the trap set by either.

No complaint was ever made or suggested to me on behalf of any merchant vessel of the United States, nor of any of our naval vessels on this score.

The only other cases which have come to the knowledge of the public, in which the Peruvians had put concealed dynamite in any boat or launch, was in the case of the blowing up of the Chilian naval vessel the Covadonga. This took place in the harbor of Chancay, and in the following manner: The captain of the port had a very fine and attractive row-boat, in which he had formerly been accustomed to go out to the vessels anchoring there. In this boat it seems there had, just before the destruction of the Covadonga, been concealed a large quantity of dynamite between the outer and inner skin of the boat. The boat was then anchored or fastened to the shore. The Covadonga came in and destroyed several other row-boats and launches or sunk them; but this one being so fine a boat and so attractive the officers of the Covadonga could not resist the temptation of taking it for their own use. They therefore sent in a small boat for the purpose of taking her, and the seamen in the Chilian boat fearing some ruse de guerre passed their oars all around and under her before venturing to seize her, but finding nothing they took her and rowed her to the Covadonga, when ropes were put into the rings of this boat and they began to hoist her up by the aid of the ship's davits; at this moment the explosion took place, sinking the Covadonga.

Surely here was no danger of any neutral vessel, merchant or naval, being caught in the trap, as none of them would have ventured to seize upon the boat recognized as that of the captain of the port.

There was one other case in which the Peruvians sent out a launch with dynamite in the port of Callao, toward the Chilian fleet, which blew up before reaching the fleet. This created no danger to the neutral naval vessels, and no merchant vessels were in the port or allowed to be there.

I have, &c.,

I. P. CHRISTIANCY.

No. 310.

Mr. Christiancy to Mr. Blaine.

No. 253.] LEGATION OF THE UNITED STATES,
Lima, Peru, March 8, 1881. (Received April 5.)

SIR: In reply to your dispatch No. 123 I have the honor to state that I believe the telegram of Piérola therein stated to be entirely correct, though I had no knowledge that he had sent it.

It is quite true, as you state, I had not informed you by telegraph of the taking of Lima by the Chilian forces, &c. There were several reasons why I did not telegraph: 1st. There is no telegraph line from here, the nearest being Panama, and the next nearest from Arica by way of Valparaiso and Europe. 2d. I have never been furnished with a cipher, and my dispatch, therefore, would be public. 3d. My experience in telegraphing, or attempting to do so, has not been favorable, as I telegraphed you from Arica (via Europe) on the 28th October last, the result of the conferences there, and again sent one to same effect by mail to Panama to be telegraphed to you from there, in the early part of November, and have to this day received no acknowledgment of the receipt of either, and I am in doubt whether either has been received. These were both sent without expense to the United States. 4th. I knew that by the ordinary channel of telegraphy from Chili to Europe you would hear all I could telegraph as soon as I could send a dispatch, and this without cost to our Government. 5th. I was careful to keep you informed by my dispatches by mail of all that had taken place, never neglecting a single mail, and long before this you must have received those dispatches, though not till after your dispatch No. 123 was written.

I have not been unmindful of the desire of my government expressed by you, in which I fully participate, to bring about a peace between the belligerents "upon reasonable and honorable terms compatible with the true welfare of all the belligerents, and so as to be lasting." But I find little room for any efforts of mine in the face of the repeated declarations of the Chilian authorities here that they will not admit the mediation or even the good offices of any other government or of its representatives here in any arrangement for peace.

Under such circumstances you will readily perceive that I need more specific instructions before I can press upon the Chilian authorities any definite terms of peace.

On the other hand, Piérola, the only government yet recognized by Peru and by all foreign representatives here, is in the interior at Jauja, willing and anxious to treat for peace—as I know from his letter to a friend here shown to me some days since. But the Chilian authorities here have declared, as I have already informed you, that they will not recognize him as the Government of Peru, nor treat with him as such.

If I can see any opening where my efforts can be of any avail for peace, I shall not lose the opportunity.

For a further explanation of this matter, I refer you to my next dispatch.

I have, &c.,

I. P. CHRISTIANCY.

No. 311.

Mr. Christiancy to Mr. Blaine.

No. 254.] LEGATION OF THE UNITED STATES,
Lima, Peru, March 9, 1881. (Received April 5.)

SIR: I have the honor to inclose to you the copy of a circular, addressed by Piérola, through his chief secretary, García y García, to all the members of the diplomatic corps here, dated Jauja, March 1, 1881, together with an English translation of the same.

I need not comment upon this except to say that, with the exception of its complaint of the mere paper blockades, it is, in my opinion, as well founded in fact as papers of this kind can be expected to be, and not very materially variant from the actual truth.

I understand from report (though I have not seen the decree) that Piérola has issued a decree for the election of a congress on the first of May next, to meet at Ayacucho, on the third day of June next.

I understand also from general public report, that the Chilian authorities here declare, not only that they will not recognize Piérola as the Government of Peru, nor treat with him, but that they will not recognize a congress called together by him, or elected under his decree. I hope this is not true, since, under present circumstances, it authorizes a more or less strong suspicion that they are seeking to produce or continue such a state of chaos as to afford a pretext for the general spoliation of not only all public property of Peru but the private property of her individual citizens.

The attempt to form a new Peruvian government here in opposition to that of Piérola, described in my dispatch No. 245, seems from present appearances to have utterly failed. Mr. F. G. Calderon found great difficulty in getting proper ministers to hold offices under him; but when he finally thought he had got this arranged, he, for the first time, as it would seem, began to inquire how far his Chilian friends meant to allow his government to govern.

He requested that the Chilian army should be withdrawn from the city of Lima, that he should be allowed to occupy the government palace and raise over it the Peruvian flag, and that he should be allowed to control the custom-house and the collection of duties, &c., all of which was refused; whereupon, as I understand, his proposed ministers refused to act, and he himself was disposed to decline the task of forming a government. It is now again reported that he has not finally given up the attempt, but as yet nothing definite has resulted.

During the time that these efforts to form a new government were in progress, and while they promised success, the movements previously set on foot by the Chilian authorities for levying war contributions were allowed to rest without any step taken for their enforcement. But as soon as the attempt to form the new government had apparently failed, viz, on the 5th instant, General Saavedra, at present commander-in-chief of the Chilian forces, issued the bando (decree) of the last-named date, a copy of which, with translation, I herewith inclose.

And on the 7th instant he issued the further decree for the collection of $1,000,000, for the month of February, being $20,000 from each of the fifty persons named, of which I also inclose a copy with a translation.

I call your special attention to the penalty imposed by this decree for non-payment at the day—the destruction of property of the delinquent to three times the amount.

According to the information I have received, and which I think trustworthy, many of the persons named will be able, without much suffering, to raise the $20,000, but many of them will not, as in some cases it is all that the man is worth, and in some much more than he is worth.

In some cases the only property the man owns consists of houses and lots in the city of Lima or in Callao, with furniture, &c. To destroy these by fire would endanger the whole city, neutrals and natives suffering alike. It may be otherwise destroyed.

But this wanton destruction of private property seems to me to verge very closely upon a violation of that humane law of modern warfare which forbids making war upon unarmed, non-resisting private citizens, or upon their individual property. And though the laws of war seem yet to permit the levying of war contributions, I would suggest that, according to the best and most approved practice of the civilized nations of to-day that right should only be exercised upon municipalities or other governmental divisions of a country, leaving the local authorities (who much better know the ability of their respective citizens) to apportion the burden.

I had the honor to call your attention to this point in my dispatch of September 17 last, No. 194, in hopes that I might receive some instructions upon it, but as yet I have not had a word in reply.

You will permit me further to suggest, whether if an invading army can levy its contributions directly upon private persons and destroy their property for non-payment, that humane rule of modern warfare which forbids making war upon, seizing, or destroying private property without any offer or idea of compensation, cannot at any moment be set aside by merely changing the name of the operation to that of "contribution." For instance, the commander of the invading force going to a hacienda or sugar estate, says to the owner, "I want $100,000 out of your property for the support of my army or the expenses of the war; the laws of modern warfare do not permit me directly to seize it or to destroy it, without giving you compensation or promising such compensation in future. But I can demand it as a 'war contribution,' without any idea of compensation, and destroy all your property as a penalty for non-payment of that contribution."

It is respectfully suggested that the distinction between these two modes of proceeding is a very thin and not a very tangible one. (See Woolsey's introduction to the study of international law, section 130.)

It is right, I think, in connection with the decree of General Saavedra of March 7, above referred to (No. $\frac{3}{254}$), to remark that an influential portion of the most influential portion of the Chilian press is very bitter and abusive toward General Baquedano, for not having sacked and burned Lima; and how far the severe measures now proposed for collection of the war contributions may have been produced by the influence of that press (an influence which prevented any desire for peace at Arica) I do not know, but leave you to draw your own inferences.

It is right also that I should inform you that from public rumor, (which, I think, is generally credited by the diplomatic corps, though I have seen nothing official to warrant the belief), it is generally believed here that the Chilian authorities here intend to carry away with them to Chili not only all warlike material and machinery (of which no one can complain) but all the paintings, statuary, and libraries belonging to Peru and to the municipality of Lima. As to the last, it is sincerely to be hoped that the Chilian Government may not dim the lustre of their victory by acts so repugnant to the sentiments of modern civilization; and for one, unless otherwise instructed, I shall be ready to join with the diplomatic corps in an earnest protest against such barbarism.

I have, &c.,

I. P. CHRISTIANCY.

[Inclosure 1 in No. 251.—Translation.]

Mr. García to Mr. Christiancy.

CIRCULAR.

SIR: The war which the Republic of Chili has waged against those of Peru and Bolivia during nearly two years carries with it a complete perturbation of the principles of international law, which, either by tacit consent or by the solemn stipulations of treaties, regulate the action of States in their common relations.

Without dwelling for the present upon the origin, sufficiently elucidated already, of this war, which knows no other cause than the sordid interest of our gratuitous provokers and adversaries, it becomes my duty, now that extraordinary occurrences have created an exceptional situation in the capital of the republic, to call the attention of those nations friendly to Peru to the antecedents which, during the course of the struggle, have marked such irregularities, and the development of which, tenaciously sought by Chili, is the only cause of the agitation in which the South Pacific States still live.

The blockade of our port of Iquique, established by the same squadron which brought the declaration of war against Peru, made by Chili, on the 4th of April, 1879, was the beginning of hostilities against this country.

This act of premeditated surprise was the answer to the friendly steps being at that moment taken in Santiago by our extraordinary mission charged with the re-establishment of harmony between Bolivia and Chili, which had been interrupted by the warlike occupation of the Bolivian port of Antofogasta, consummated on the 14th of February antecedent.

In order to justify its aggressive action, much has been said on the part of the Government of Chili in regard to the treaty of alliance entered into years ago between the Republics of Peru and Bolivia, but it is sufficient to read that document of mutual preservation to become convinced that it involves no hostile intention towards anyspecified nation, nor much less does it bind them to make common cause in the complications wherein one or the other nation might find itself entangled; each one, on the contrary, reserving to itself the right of declaring when the causus fœderis had arrived, an emergency in regard to which Peru had certainly advanced no opinion whatever.

Solemnly bound as is Chili to the treaty of Paris, which abolished the so-called paper blockades, or those of mere notification, nothing in that undertaking has stopped her, and her vessels, after many months of useless delay in Iquique, employed themselves in cruising in various belts of our coast, blockading, by means of simple notifications, ports which they had not naval forces sufficient to close, and which they consequently only visited occasionally.

Private property, out of the pale of military operations, the object of the greatest respect in the struggles of modern times, and one of the most precious triumphs of the civilization of to-day, has been, during the contest we sustain, that which has suffered the most frequent and disastrous blows from the land and naval forces of Chili, wheresoever these have presented themselves.

The useless and intentional destruction by fire of Pisagua, Tacna, Mollendo, Chorillos, Barranco, Miraflores, Ancon, Chancay, San Nicolas, Palo Seco, and many other towns and flourishing industrial establishments, as well as the removal and embarkation from all of them of merchandise and household furniture, belonging to natives and foreigners, in full view of all who happened to be present at these different places, bear undeniable testimony to the truth of my assertions.

Unarmed and unprepared as was Peru to sustain a war so carried on, it is not strange that, wanting in a navy sufficient to oppose that of the enemy, the latter, domineering over our extended coast, should with impunity carry his troops and ships wheresoever he might propose to hostilize us. The natural consequence of such military movements could not be other than the unmolested occupation of the unprotected seaboard valleys and towns, or that occupation facilitated as a result of battles, wherein always, and for the same reasons, we fought with inferior forces upon our side.

If, after the advantages gained by Chili, there had at any time followed the enunciation of the motives impelling her to go to war, and of the redress she expected to claim in order to put an end to it, it is beyond doubt she would have evidenced a respect for the customs established between nations who go to war to obtain the legitimate satisfaction of grievances or reparation of wounded interests, and we, listening to her proposals, and bringing them to the light of a calm discussion, would have put a decorous end to the irreparable losses and disasters which the belligerents of to-day will forever lament.

But, far from this, every military advance of Chili in our territory was the signal for new armaments and increase in her expeditionary forces, while in the congress of Chili and in her press it was that of unreserved propaganda of the annihilation and extermination of Peru.

This plan reprobated by Christianity, and which will appear to the right minded impossible to conceive is nevertheless to all appearances that which presents itself to us to-day.

Intentionally, and so as not to set forth in this tranquil document the bitterness overflowing the heart of every patriot, I omit the details—moreover well known—of the manner in which Chili presented herself in the Arica conferences, and of the intentions there revealed by her plenipotentiaries, or to mention the pretended negotiations of Miraflores. History, with her impartial criterion, will judge both events.

The Chilian Government, consistent with its already manifested designs for completing the ruin of Peru, it has been her most constant endeavor, since the occupation of Lima and Callao on the 17th of January last, to promote all kinds of internal dissensions. With this object it has established in the former city a semi-official newspaper, which, issuing from the government printing-office, has occupied itself since its inauguration in spreading abroad all kinds of imposture, in defaming our public men, discrediting the principles governing society, and artfully endeavoring to prove the non-existence of a government, notwithstanding the fact that that of his excellency the supreme chief has the obedience of the entire nation, without excepting a single village.

These artful wiles, aimed against the sovereignty of Peru, did not at first possess the gravity they have later attained, since, although the work of well-known authors, they had until now no official character.

After the occupation of Lima, and it being in consequence thereof impossible to treat directly with the honorable diplomatic corps resident in that capital, the government accredited as its confidential agent near that body Dr. Don Manuel Yrigoyen, whose only duty was to continue the mediation by that corps, and accepted in Miraflores on the 14th of January last.

The interposition of the friendly powers, at the same time that it consulted the decorum of the belligerents, was a sure guarantee of justice and exactness in the solution of the pending conflict, but the peremptory declaration made by the Chilian agents that they would in no case admit that interposition, a resistance impossible of any worthy explanation, although it clearly showed the true views of Chili in the present war, frustrated that efficient mode of solution.

His excellency the Supreme Chief, wishing nevertheless to do away with even the remotest pretext under which our enemies might shelter themselves in order to carry on the war, named plenipotentiaries, fully authorized to negotiate directly a peace with those whom the Government of Chili might see fit to designate with like object.

The conciliatory efforts of our ministers, Doctors D. Antonio Arenas and D. Lino Alarca, have been entirely sterile. Messrs. Vergara and Altamirano, who state that they possess full powers to negotiate a peace as representatives of Chili, declared that, "refusing to treat with his excellency the supreme chief they considered themselves as carrying out their instructions, which ordered them not to treat save with a government solidly sustained by the national will." General Baquedano had also replied to our envoys that Colonel Don Francisco Vergara and Don Eulogio Altamirano were the plenipotentiaries named by the Republic of Chili to treat with those who might be designated by the government which Peru might desire to give herself. We have here, therefore, the commander-in-chief of the Chilian army and the plenipotentiaries of the nation constituted as deciders and arbitrators of the legitimacy of the government of Peru We have here the fact, new in the annals of the political relations between peoples, of the refusal to admit by a stranger as a national government that which the whole country recognizes as such, and in order that the deformity may be more monstrous life and impulse are given, beneath the shadow of the Chilian flag, to meetings whose strength lies there alone, establishing thereby an odious protectorate that will always be repudiated by the Peruvian people, whatever the depths of their misfortunes, and in spite of the terrible martial law with which the semi-official organ at the same time threatens public manifestations tending to defend the autonomy and independence of the nation, however tranquil they may be.

I leave to the profound sagacity of your excellency the appreciation of events which you yourself have witnessed, and the truth of which is perfectly known to you.

The authority of his excellency the supreme chief having been derived from the confidence which the people of Peru have deposited in him, and which they still maintain, strengthening it daily by new proofs of adhesion, he will maintain unshaken that authority until he can deposit it in the hands of the national representatives, laying it down before the assembly elected by the people, which will soon meet, in accordance with the supreme decree of this date, so that it may also freely deliberate upon the future destinies of the country, in view of the situation created by the causes to which I have referred.

Be pleased, your excellency, to place these facts before the Government of the United States of North America, so worthily represented by your excellency near the Government of Peru.

With sentiments of the highest consideration and esteem, I am, &c.,

AURELIO GARCÍA Y GARCÍA.

[Inclosure 2 in No. 254.—Translation.]

Decree or bando of General Saavedra (at present commander-in-chief) of the 5th of March, 1881.

No. 496.

Having seen the foregoing note of the minister of war in the field,

I decree:

1st. There shall be established in the city of Lima an office of "Collector of the contributions of war," whose functions and obligations are as follows:

1st. To take under its charge and inventory the property and things of every kind which the public buildings and establishments (of which the army has taken possession) may contain, as well as all articles of a warlike character.

2d. To point out and take note of all that pertains to the public administration and which may not yet be in possession of the army, for the purpose of providing the proper measures in reference thereto.

3d. To ascertain and take accurate note of all things which have been remitted to Chili, its destination, and the party sending the same.

4th. To inquire what remittances may be properly made to Chili, and to effectuate those that shall be determined upon, specifying the kinds, with all the details and a proper valuation, directing them to the proper parties, as shall be determined upon.

5th. To propose the contributions which are to be collected for the maintenance of the army, and in general for all the expenses which the military occupation occasions.

6th. To collect the contributions which shall be decreed, and to deposit them in the commissariat of the army.

7th. To represent the supervision which may be decreed in any of the public establishments or institutions, in the administration of funds.

2d. This office may establish branch offices outside of Lima, with the same object, at other points occupied by the army, previous approval being obtained.

3d. The chief of the office shall propose the rest of the employés and their salaries and a regulation which comprehends the proceedings to be had to fulfill the objects of this office.

4th. Don Alvaro Francisco Alvarado is named chief of the office for the collection of contributions of war, with the salary and compensation which he now has as an officer of the general intendencia of the army and navy in active service.

Let it be recorded and published, and let an account be given to the supreme government for its approbation.

C. SAAVEDRA.

[Inclosure 3 in No. 254.—Translation from Actualidad, March 7, 1881.]

THE CONTRIBUTION OF WAR, ONE MILLION MONTHLY.—LIST OF THOSE WHO MUST PAY FOR MONTH OF FEBRUARY.

CORNELIO SAAVEDRA, general of brigade and in chief of the army of operations of the Republic of Chili.

Whereas, having in view the execution of article 3 of the decree of the 9th February last, and the note of the minister of war of the 5th of the present month,

I decree:

1st. That the department of Lima and Callao shall pay monthly the sum of one million of pesos in silver, or its equivalent in current money, according to the exchange of the time, to meet the expenses of the army of occupation.

2d. The million for the month of February last shall be paid by the persons mentioned below, each of whom shall contribute twenty thousand pesos in coin for his quota.

[Here follow fifty names for 20,000 pesos each.]

3d. The space of eight days is conceded from this date for the persons designated in the foregoing article to present themselves to complete the payment of the quota, fixed at twenty thousand pesos, in coin, assigned to each, into the office charged with the collection of the war contributions ordered by the decree of the 5th of the present month.

4th. If any of the persons named shall not pay his quota within the time fixed proceedings shall be taken to destroy, for the present, of the property of the delinquent at least three times the value, without prejudice to the right of personal compulsion.

5th. The chief of the general staff, Col. Don Pedro Lagos, is charged with the execution of this decree, and to this end the chief of the office of collection shall give an account on the same day of the term fixed by article 3 of the persons who have failed to make such payment.

6th. From this date no person of Peruvian nationality can absent himself from Lima or Callao without a passport previously issued from the general staff, under the penalty to the infractors of being tried before a military tribunal. This article does not apply to those who travel only between said two cities.

Let it be recorded and published. To the end that this decree shall be brought to the knowledge of all, it shall be published by proclaiming the same in public and fixing it up in hand-bills in the most public places of this city and Callao, it being the intention that this publication shall have the effect of a personal notice.

Given at the palace of government in Lima on the 7th of March, 1881.

CORNELIO SAAVEDRA.

No. 312.

Mr. Christiancy to Mr. Blaine.

No. 256.] LEGATION OF THE UNITED STATES,
Lima, Peru, March 16, 1881. (Received April 11.)

SIR: Referring to my dispatch No. 254 (last paragraph), I have the honor to inform you that since that I have ascertained that, even before that letter was written, the whole of the public library, known as "Biblioteca de San Pedro," in Lima, belonging to the Government of Peru, and the largest and most valuable in South America, had already been taken by the Chilians and put on board the fleet to be sent to Chili.

And before and since that dispatch they have, as I am informed, also taken from the exposition grounds and buildings belonging to the Benevolent Society of Lima all the paintings and pictures in the buildings on those grounds, all the collection of animals (a menagerie of them), and everything of value that could be taken; the laboratory and the appurtenances of the School of Medicine, amounting to over half a million of dollars, and everything that could be moved from the school of Arts in Lima, consisting of models, machinery, &c., for teaching in the arts and sciences and in the various trades. This School of Arts belonged to the Government of Peru.

For myself, I look upon this as a violation of the rules of civilized warfare, which calls for an earnest protest on behalf of all civilized nations; and I have been in favor of such protest being made by the diplomatic corps here. I am satisfied that the large majority of the corps would join in it; but there are some who, while agreeing that it is contrary to the modern principles of warfare, yet, for reasons of policy, think it not best to make the protest, lest it might prejudice the Chilian Government against neutrals here.

A meeting of the diplomatic corps was held yesterday at my suggestion, made the day before. But I was taken sick the night before and was totally unable to attend; and I understand no action was taken by the corps upon this point.

I have, &c.,

I. P. CHRISTIANCY.

P. S.—If I thought the failure of protest could in any manner operate as an acquiescence in the propriety of such acts on the part of Chili, I should protest against them, though I might stand alone. But as I am not accredited to Chili, I do not suppose that my neglect to protest can be construed into an approval by my government.

I. P. C.

No. 313.

Mr. Christiancy to Mr. Blaine.

No. 257.] LEGATION OF THE UNITED STATES,
Lima, Peru, March 16, 1881. (Received April 11.)

SIR: Referring to my dispatch No. 254, in reference to the attempt to form a new government of Peru, under the auspices of the Chilian authorities, I have the honor now further to inform you that the attempt, though for a time apparently abandoned, has since been persisted in; and on the 12th instant that new government was installed at the small hamlet (too small to be called a village) of Magdalena, about 3 miles from Lima, which has been declared neutral territory; and that the provisional president, Francisco García Calderon, has appointed Aurelio Denegri president of the council and minister of finance, Manuel Velarde minister of government and public works, José Miguel Velez, minister of justice and public worship, and M. M. Galvez, minister of foreign relations.

For your information in respect to this new government, I inclose three numbers* of El Orden, the organ of this government, of the 12th, 14th, and 15th instant, which I have no time to translate, but which will show the progress of things up to this date.

As Piérola still claims to be the Government of Peru, the great question for me and other ministers here to decide is that of recognition, all having heretofore recognized Piérola. My own view is that I cannot recognize this new provisional government until it shall appear to be a government of Peru, instead of Lima and Callao; in short, without instructions from you, I cannot recognize it until satisfied from a vote of the people or clear acquiescence the larger portion of the people seem to have adopted it, nor until it shall show some evidence of the power to sustain itself as the Government of Peru.

---

* The inclosures are lengthy and in the Spanish language. They will be furnished if deemed necessary.

If, for instance, Piérola holds one-half of Peru and Calderon the other, I could not recognize the latter, unless so instructed by the Department.

I am just informed that this new provisional government, with the aid of a committee of the diplomatic corps, have made an arrangement by which a little time is given for the payment of the $1,000,000 due on the 14th on their paying $200,000 to-day, and that the penalty for non-payment is not to be enforced by the proposed destruction of property. But I cannot give you the particulars with certainty, as I am unable to go out.

I have, &c.,

I. P. CHRISTIANCY.

No. 314.

Mr. Christiancy to Mr. Blaine.

No. 261.] LEGATION OF THE UNITED STATES,
Lima, Peru, March 21, 1881. (Received April 16.)

SIR: Referring to my dispatches Nos. 253 and 259, I have now the honor further to inform you in further answer to your dispatch No. 123 that as the Chilian authorities here had constantly declared their fixed determination not to accept the arbitration, mediation, or even the good offices of any other government in bringing about a peace with Peru and Bolivia, I could see no door open by which I could approach the Chilian authorities here, without appearing to be officiously impertinent and intermeddling. Nevertheless, on the 16th instant, hearing that General Saavedra and Mr. Altamirano (the last of whom seemed to be the representative of the Chilian Government here in matters not strictly military), were to leave on that day for Chili, I left on that day with Mr. Vergara, the Chilian secretary of war at the palace, to be shown to Mr. Altamirano before he should leave, of copy of so much of your dispatch No. 123 as reads as follows:

> I find it necessary to desire you to press upon the Government of Peru, and on such Chilian authorities as you may have access to, the earnest desire of this government to bring about a peace without unnecessary delay, and upon reasonable and honorable terms compatible with the true welfare of all the belligerents, so as to be lasting.

I thought it well that Mr. Altamirano should take this, or the knowledge of this, with him to the Government of Chili. But I did not think it wise to go any farther at this moment, or without farther instructions from your Department, as it appears to me quite evident that the Chilian Government have determined to make Peru drink the last dregs in the cup of national humiliation, in any peace she will be ready to grant, and that nothing short of active intervention of the United States, or some foreign power or powers, can defeat the determination. And, though it is not for the interest of the United States or any other neutral power thus to humiliate Peru, yet in view of the traditional policy of the United States, it would not be possible for me thus to intervene between the three belligerents, towards whom our government entertains equally friendly sentiments. I could only be warranted in doing so by the express directions of my government.

Please see my next dispatch, No. 262, in answer to your No. 129.

I have, &c.,

I. P. CHRISTIANCY.

No. 315.

Mr. Christiancy to Mr. Blaine.

[Confidential extract.]

No. 262.] LEGATION OF THE UNITED STATES,
Lima, Peru, March 21, 1881. (Received April 16.)

SIR: I have the honor to inform you that I have waited some days, in hopes of being able to give some intelligible answer to your confidential dispatch No. 129; but as yet I can only tell you what has taken place between me and Mr. Suarez, and give you such impressions upon the question of the practicability of his schemes as the present aspect of affairs has produced upon my own mind.

1st. I have had several interviews with Mr. Suarez; in which, however, I have been able to get no very definite ideas from him as to the modus operandi of securing the adoption of his plan.

He has, as he informs me, had interviews with the French minister here, who gives him no definite encouragement, and professes to be waiting for instructions from his government.

2d. My own impression is that, though this plan might have been acceptable to Chili in an earlier stage of the war, say before the battle of Tacna, and possibly before the conferences at Arica, yet that the time has now passed when it could be made acceptable to Chili, which is so flushed with her recent victories, and so confident of being able to force Peru into compliance with any demand she may choose to make, that she would consider such a proposition so wholly inadmissible that nothing short of the active, and, perhaps, hostile intervention, of the United States, England, and France, or some of them, could now compel her to accept the plan proposed.

3d. I have some reason to think that Mr. Suarez has been indiscreet in allowing the programme to become public before any practicable plan could be adopted for its accomplishment. The last Panama Star and Herald, which arrived here, has the programme set out in full, and copied from the New York Herald in an article very decidedly hostile to it. This will reach Chili in a few days, and will so arouse the war party that the government will not dare to entertain such means of settlement for a moment.

In view of these considerations I have not thought it best to avail myself at present of the liberty granted me to "communicate to my colleagues, Mr. Osborn and Mr. Adams, so much of this communication as occasion might suggest, but always in confidence," especially as I could not well communicate a part without the whole; and Mr. Suarez concurs with me that, at present, it would not be best to make such communication. He and I are satisfied that both Peru and Bolivia would gladly accept this programme as a means of solving the present difficulties; and that the whole difficulty would be in procuring the assent of Chili. He therefore talks of going to Chili; but I doubt whether he will do this.

As this is a purely confidential dispatch, I avail myself of the immunity which that confidence affords, to express to you certain opinions and impressions, which I would not venture upon if the dispatch could be expected to be published to the world.

1st. The principal foreign trade of Chili is with England, by way of the cape or the straits, and many of the largest houses of trade in Chili are English. Many of the officers in the Chilian army and navy are Englishmen; and Chili has obtained from England most of her arms, at least artillery, as well as her naval vessels.

From these and other causes the sympathy between Chilians and the English has been much stronger than between them and the people or Government of the United States. The Chilian Government and people are therefore much more sensitive to English than to American influence. To some, though to a much less extent, these remarks in reference to England apply also to France, though it may be doubted whether the sympathy between Chili and France is such as, in any great degree, to affect results.

On the other hand, though England has a much larger commerce with Peru than the United States have, and the only line of steamers along her coast is English; yet the sympathies of both the government and people of Peru have been much stronger for the United States than for England, and I may truly say than for all the rest of the world. They have constantly hoped that the United States would, in some way, interfere to protect them from the calamities which now overwhelm them. And I am entirely confident that the Government of Peru (whatever that may turn out to be), as well as all her intelligent (if not all her) citizens would welcome a protectorate of the United States, and I think, that those of Bolivia would do the same.

As a matter of opinion, (sustained, I think, by the majority of intelligent Americans here), I will go farther and say, I believe the people of Peru would be glad if their country could be annexed to the United States. * * * One thing, however, is, I think, entirely certain, that the present war here has reached such a stage, that the influence of the United States on this coast upon any question connected with the present war, or the settlement of peace, can only be secured by active intervention, in some form, against the will of the Chilian Government. Whether our government is prepared to take this attitude, it is for your Department, and not for me, to decide.

I am ready to follow any instructions which your Department may see fit to give.

I have &c.,

I. P. CHRISTIANCY.

P. S.—Since writing the above, I am informed by Mr. Suarez that he intends to leave for the United States by the first steamer.

No. 316.

Mr. Christiancy to Mr. Blaine.

No. 263.] LEGATION OF THE UNITED STATES,
Lima, Peru, March 22, 1881. (Received April 16.)

SIR: Referring to my dispatches Nos. 254 and 256, I have the honor to say that when those dispatches were written, I had only received the facts by general public report. I now inclose to you the letter of Señor Manuel de Odriozola, the director of the Biblioteca Nacional del Peru, dated March 10, but received only on the 19th, showing the spoliation of that library by the Chilian authorities, together with a translation of the same.

Referring to my dispatch, No. 256, in which I stated the value of the laboratory, &c., of the School of Medicine taken by the Chilian authorities at $500,000, I have now to say that I think the value was overstated. I now understand that the laboratory was purchased in Paris for 600,000 francs. I cannot get reliable official evidence in these matters. But the fact of the laboratory having been taken by the Chilian forces (whatever may have been its value) is beyond doubt.

I have, &c.,

I. P. CHRISTIANCY.

[Inclosure No. 1 in No. 263.—Translation.]

Mr. Odriozola to Mr. Christiancy.

LIMA, March 10, 1881.

The undersigned, director of the national library of Peru, has the honor to address himself to your excellency, in order that you may bring to the knowledge of your government the fact of the crime against civilization committed by the Chilian authorities in Lima.

To take as their property libraries, archives, cabinets of science and anatomy, and others which symbolize the intellectual progress of a nation, or help to facilitate its development, is to restore to war a character of barbarism foreign to the civilization of the age and the practices of Christian and enlightened belligerents, and to the universally recognized principles of right.

The Library of Lima was founded in 1822, a few months after the declaration of independence, and was considered by all the literary travelers, who have visited it, as the best among the libraries of Latin America. Being enriched through the protection of subsequent governments, and the gifts of private persons, it had, at the close of 1880, very nearly 50,000 printed volumes (not reckoning duplicate editions), and over 800 interesting manuscripts. True bibliographical curiosities, among which were not a few unreplaceable, or books printed during the first century after the discovery of printing, and which, as your excellency knows, are priceless works at present, very rare, either from the copies being exhausted or for not having been reprinted, especially in the branch of literature and history, the production of nearly all the chroniclers of America, a section in which the establishment was unrivaled, and books presented by foreign governments, among which the United States of America figured largely. Such, Mr. Minister, was the Library of Lima, a library of which we, the sons of Peru, were justly proud.

The capital of Lima having been surrendered to the Chilian forces the 17th January, more than a month elapsed, during which the invaders respected the institutions of learning, no fear was felt up to that time that the Chilian authorities would dare to consider as spoils of war the cabinets of the School of Medicine and university, the apparatus of the School of Arts and Mines, or the important collection of the national archives, and of other institutions of purely scientific, literary, or artistic character.

On the 26th of February, at 3 p. m., the keys of the library were demanded of us, and from that day forward the most scandalous robbery was carried on, the books being carried to Callao in carts, and, I understand, they being shipped to Santiago. The library has been sacked as though it represented war material, and but a few more days will be necessary to finish this act of rapine, carried on under the shadow of the flag of a people considered as civilized and enlightened.

In addressing myself to your excellency, I do it in order that the protest which I make in the name of civilization, morality, and justice may appear before America and humanity, complying in this with a double duty imposed upon me, by my duty as the director of the library, and my patriotism.

With sentiments of high consideration and respect, I have the honor to subscribe myself, your excellency's obedient servant,

ML. DE ODRIOZOLA.

His Excellency I. P. CHRISTIANCY,
Minister of the United States in Lima.

No. 317.

Mr. Christiancy to Mr. Blaine.

No. 264.] LEGATION OF THE UNITED STATES,
Lima, Peru, March 23, 1881. (Received April 16.)

SIR: I have the honor to inform you that Señor Manuel M. Galvez, the secretary of foreign relations under the new government, set up or attempted to be set up for Peru, called to see me yesterday, and especially to inquire what attitude the United States would be likely to take upon the question of peace with Chili, &c.

I explained to him fully that the position of our government had thus far been one of strict neutrality between the belligerents; that while our government was ready now, as always heretofore, to use her good offices by way of mediation or arbitration (to bring about a peace), with the consent of all the belligerents; yet that I had received no instructions which would indicate that she was willing to enter upon an active intervention against the will of Chili or the other belligerents; that, while I was satisfied that our government would regret to see a peace forced upon Peru, which would humiliate her and degrade her, and was desirous of a peace which should be honorable and beneficial to all parties—and therefore likely to be lasting—yet in view of the declared intention of the Chilian authorities not to admit the mediation or good offices of any other government in fixing the terms of peace, and in view of the traditional policy of our government not to intervene in the affairs of others, except with the consent of all the nations concerned, I could give him no assurance that she would now be willing to depart from that policy and intervene between Chili and Peru, against the will of, and therefore in a hostile attitude to, the former; but that I had kept my government informed, and should follow any instructions I might receive. He then inquired what I thought of the policy of sending a special envoy to the United States. I frankly told him that I saw but one objection to this, and that this might be but temporary, viz., that as yet it did not sufficiently appear that this new government was the government of Peru, and that, until this should appear, the United States might not be willing to recognize it as such; that, inasmuch as our government, with all the other governments represented here, had recognized the Government of Piérola, I should myself, in the absence of instructions to the contrary, be compelled to wait until it should appear by vote or acquiescence of the people of Peru, that the majority approved or acquiesced in the new government, and that I was inclined to think my government would be likely to take the same view of the question; and that, as yet, I had seen no sufficient evidence of this approval or acquiescence; but that the very moment I should have such evidence I should recognize the new government, without waiting instructions; and that all our government wished to know was what is the Government of Peru, when they would at once recognize it; but they could not make themselves parties in a contest between two governments, both claiming to be the Government of Peru, until the people of Peru, had decided that question for themselves, &c.

I learn this morning (in a somewhat confidential manner) that this new government intends to send by the steamer of to-morrow, as envoy, or agent, to Washington, a Mr. José Manuel Cantuarias. So far as I can learn, he has the reputation of an honest man, of considerable ability. He has been consul of Peru to China, and has held, with credit, several offices under the Government of Peru.

I have, &c.,

I. P. CHRISTIANCY.

No. 318.

Mr. Christiancy to Mr. Blaine.

No. 265.] LEGATION OF THE UNITED STATES,
Lima, Peru, March 23, 1881. (Received April 16.)

SIR: Referring to my dispatch No. 263, I have the honor to inclose to you an extract from an editorial in the Actualidad, the Chilian Government organ here, of March 21, with a translation, showing that the Chilian commanders claim, as conquerors, the right to take the apparatus of the School of Arts, as well as books, scientific apparatus, and paintings; that they place all the public buildings, including the palace of government, ending with the last hut or tent of the guards, and all public works, the railroads, with all the bridges over water-courses crossing public roads, on the same ground.

That you may understand the full significance of this, I will say that the Orden, the only paper here published in the interest of the new Peruvian Government, had complained in a very mild and subdued form of the taking of libraries, scientific apparatus, and the property of schools and colleges; and this editorial in the Actualidad (the whole of which is very severe) makes this answer.

It is true they place the right claimed upon the ground of indemnifying themselves for the expenses of war, and compelling the enemy to put an end to the war. But it is easy to see that this pretext may always be put forth with equal justice, and thus the obligation to respect libraries, paintings, works of science and art, as well as schools, colleges, and public buildings, may always be evaded, if it can be in the present case.

I have, &c.,

I. P. CHRISTIANCY.

[Inclosure No. 1 in No. 265.—Translation.—From La Actualidad, March 21, 1881.]

* * * * * * *

The Chilian authorities have determined to follow and will still continue to dispose of national property of Peru, with the indisputable right, conceded by all the nations of the world to the conqueror, when it is to repay himself the expenses of the war, and when he has at hand the means of coercion, which obliges the enemy to put an end to the war, in order to prevent worse evils.

This is, nevertheless, the protest of the gentlemen of El Orden, what the Chilian authorities have done with the work-shops of cartridges, the machines of the school of arts, with books and instruments of sciences, and with one historical picture.

They can do it to-morrow with all the public buildings, beginning from the palace of government and ending with the last sentry-box.

They can, the day after to-morrow, still follow in doing so with all the public works, beginning with the railroads and ending even with the bridges over the water-courses crossing public works.

This is the right of the conqueror, and that of the conquered is to keep silence when he has not sought in time the means to avoid those evils of which he complains.

Consequently, we protest against the protests dissemblingly initiated by El Orden No. 14, accentuated in No. 15, and probably so out of all limits in to-day's number, or to-morrow's, or that of any of those days.

To begin by estimating, to follow with complaints, and to continue with charges, may end very soon, in great haste, with the armed protest, which is the last tone of the scale.

No. 319.

Mr. Christiancy to Mr. Blaine.

No. 266.] LEGATION OF THE UNITED STATES,
Lima, Peru, March 23, 1881. (Received April 16.)

SIR: The new Peruvian Government, having on the 14th instant arranged with the Chilian authorities here to pay down 200,000*s* silver, of the million then due for February, according to the Chilian decree, and to pay the balance, 800,000 silver soles, within one month, I here inclose you copy and translation of the decree of this Peruvian Government, dated the 14th, but published only yesterday, for raising the amount in the shape of what is called a loan, and which, so far as the decree shows, would seem to be a voluntary loan; but as it seems to me quite probable that few will come forward voluntarily to take the loan, I presume the government must look to some means to enforce it as a forced loan; if not, I am inclined to think the money will not be raised in time.

The three-and-a-half pence mentioned in the decree is intended as the value of the paper sol, practically the only currency now circulating in Peru, the gold and silver coin having almost entirely left the country, as is usual, if not universal, where an inferior currency is in general circulation.

And Peru, from having formerly been thought the richest country in precious metals in the world, is now probably the poorest for practical purposes, though she still has inexhaustible mines, mostly unworked, in the interior.

I have, &c.,

I. P. CHRISTIANCY.

[Inclosure in No. 266.—Translation.]

MAGDALENA, March 14, 18·1.

In conformity to the agreement of the council of ministers, proceed to raise a national loan, destined to cover the war contribution imposed by the chief of the Chilian forces, on the following conditions:

1st. The loan will draw an interest of six per cent. per annum.

2d. It will be repaid in fiscal notes, at an exchange not less than three and a half pence per sol. The amounts paid in, for this loan, in pounds sterling, shall be reckoned at this same exchange.

3d. The reimbursement shall be made out of the outstanding and accruing taxes on property in Lima and Callao; 30 per cent. of the free income of the Calloa custom-house, and with the income of the stamp contribution.

4th. The administration and recovery of the taxes and stamp contribution shall be confided to a commission selected from among the lenders.

5th. The refunding shall be at par, and by lots, paying the capital and interest on same.

Communicate it; have it registered and published.

Signature of his excellency,

DENEGRI.

No. 320.

Mr. Christiancy to Mr. Blaine.

No. 273.] LEGATION OF THE UNITED STATES,
Lima, Peru, March 31, 1881. (Received April 25.)

SIR: Referring to my dispatch No. 264, I have now to inform you that, from all present appearances, the new Peruvian Government, of which Mr. Garcia Calderon is the head, does not seem likely to be recognized by the people of Peru; and so far as any manifestations of the popular will have come to my knowledge, the mass of the people seems likely to continue its adherence to the Dictator Piérola. Circumstances yet to occur may change all this; but as yet, from the best information I can get, the very localities on whose concurrence the new government counted, still adhere to Piérola, and, even here in Lima, the municipal government, at a meeting held yesterday, unanimously decided not to recognize it. And when the alcalde (mayor) went to consult the Chilian secretary of war at the palace, he was informed that the Chilian Government did not yet recognize the new government (waiting, doubtless, to see that it should first be recognized by the people of Peru). And when the alcalde asked what the municipal government should do, in case the new pretended government should demand the building of the municipality and seek to turn them out, the secretary of war replied, in substance, that he did not know; but that if any disturbance of the peace should take place in a quarrel between the new government and the municipal authorities, he should send them all alike to prison.

I have, &c.,

I. P. CHRISTIANCY.

No. 321.

Mr. Christiancy to Mr. Blaine.

No. 276.] LEGATION OF THE UNITED STATES,
Lima, Peru, April 4, 1881. (Received April 26.)

SIR: Referring to my dispatch No. 256 (second paragraph), in which I stated, in substance, upon report, among other things, that the Chilians had taken from the exposition grounds, belonging to the Benevolent Society of Lima, the collection of animals there, I have now to make this correction, viz: That these animals had not then been taken (a few days since), but preparations had been made to take them, and the cages were already taken to the grounds, in which they were to be shipped, and there is no doubt they will be taken.

I have, &c.,

I. P. CHRISTIANCY.

No. 322.

Mr. Christiancy to Mr. Blaine.

No. 277.] LEGATION OF THE UNITED STATES,
Lima, Peru, April 4, 1881. (Received April 26.)

SIR: Referring to my dispatches, Nos. 257, 264, and 273, in reference to the question, What is the Government of Peru, I have now the honor further to inform you that since my dispatch No. 273, the alcalde (mayor of the old municipality under the Piérola government) refused to carry out the unanimous resolution of the municipal council, and allowed the council of 1879 to come in and take possession, in accordance with the decree of the provisional government of Garcia Calderon. I will further say that this is the only indication, since the above dispatches, of the acceptance of the provisional government by Peru.

Even the northern provinces, upon which it counted (and when I supposed the terror of the Chilian arms would have secured the adherence of the people), seem to be overwhelmingly opposed to the provisional government of Calderon, and to adhere to Piérola. This is also the case in the south. Arequipa, upon which the new government relied, so far as it has spoken at all, has pronounced in favor of Piérola, and so in Pisco, and almost everywhere; though in all these localities, many of the people, feeling the absolute necessity of an immediate peace, were disposed to support the new government, which, however, to me seems, thus far, to have lost rather than gained in popular favor.

The interests of Peru undoubtedly require the earliest possible peace, and in this view, I am inclined to think it would be best for Peru to acquiesce in the new government. But my own opinion of the expediency of the one or the other can have no weight upon the question of recognition; all I am to regulate my own conduct by upon that question is the consideration, which is the government of Peru; and however much I might think the majority have erred in their choice, yet, upon the question of recognition, I shall be compelled to follow that decision unless I receive other instructions from your department. At present all the indications are that nearly all the inhabitants east of the Andes still adhere to Piérola, and that the same is the fact with the majority between the mountains and the coast.

Each of these governments (so called) has called a congress—that of Pierola, to meet at Ayacucho on the 3d of June, and that of Garcia Calderon, to meet at Lima or its vicinity on the 15th of May. If both succeed in getting a congress together, it would seem that confusion will be still more confounded and that chaos must reign supreme.

Referring to my dispatch No. 257, I will further say that this provisional government assumed to pay, and I think did pay, $200,000 of the forced contribution of $1,000,000, imposed by the Chilian authorities upon fifty Peruvian citizens of Lima and Callao, and further assumed to pay the balance of $800,000 by the 14th April. And in the attempt to carry out this undertaking this provisional government has assessed the leading capitalists such sums as in their judgment they can pay, including in this assessment a few Americans and other neutral citizens (which the Chilians did not).

Some of our American citizens domiciled here will doubtless pay under protest, as I have advised all who have applied to me to do, if they pay at all. Others will not pay, but by my advice will insist, without admitting the validity of the provisional government, that even if the legitimacy of the government be admitted, it has no right to compel American citizens to pay, as it is a forced contribution or forced loan, which is forbidden by the second article of our treaty of September 6, 1870, with Peru.

If compelled by force to pay, I shall advise them to pay under protest. Of course, if a general tax should be ratably imposed upon the real estate of Lima, &c., including American citizens, by a government acknowledged as the Government of Peru, or being in fact such, taxes of this kind would have to be paid in the same manner as if the owner were a native citizen of Peru. But the present imposition is not of this character, but is simply imposed upon the person.

I have, &c.,

I. P. CHRISTIANCY.

P. S.—Since writing the above, one American citizen who protested against the right to impose 40,000 soles as a contribution to meet the Chilian requisition, and whose protest was in the form I had suggested, relying upon our treaty, has just informed me that he has seen Garcia Calderon, the so-called President, who admits that he cannot impose such a burden upon American citizens, and that he declares the intention now not to attempt to enforce it upon any neutrals.

I. P. C.

No. 323.

Mr. Christiancy to Mr. Blaine.

No. 278.] LEGATION OF THE UNITED STATES,
Lima, Peru, April 5, 1881. (Received April 26.)

SIR: I have the honor to inform you that the Chilian press established in Lima has for some two or three weeks apparently forsehadowed a design on the part of the Chilian authorities, and, probably, of the Chilian Government, to bring about a confederation, to consist of Chili, Bolivia, and at least that part of Peru between the Andes and the Pacific (being that portion of Peru accessible to the army of Chili by reason of her complete control of the sea), leaving that portion of Peru east of the western range of the Andes to join, if she can be induced to do so, and, if not, to form a separate government by itself, cut off from the coast, as it would be.

This idea may be thrown out and apparently advocated, merely in terrorem, to compel the Peruvians to accept the government of Garcia Calderon, and thereby secure a peace upon such terms as Chili may choose to dictate, or it may be with deliberate intention of forcing the compliance of that part of Peru west of the mountains.

Now, while I am well satisfied that a confederation of the three republics, if it could be brought about upon cordial and friendly terms—in other words, in accordance with the sympathies and prejudices of the people of the three republics—would be the best arrangement for all of them, and that, in such an event, Ecuador and Colombia, and, possibly, all the other republics of South America might be brought into the plan, forming a union on the plan of the United States of America, yet now I look upon this scheme (if it is seriously entertained by Chili) as utterly visionary, so far, at least, as it relates to Peru (and probably so as to Bolivia). Had Chili, after her victory at Tacna, or at the conference at Arica, made such a proposition it might possibly have been entertained, though I think the old quarrel between the Pizarros and the Almagros—the "men of Peru and the men of Chili"—has been transmitted by descent and become hereditary. It is also possible that, even after the Chilian victories at San Juan and Miraflores, such a union might have been formed (which I think, however, would not have been lasting) had the Chilians pursued a conciliatory policy towards Peru, instead of pursuing, as they did, the most vindictive policy and the most humiliating course towards Peru, exciting a deep feeling of hatred and revenge in the minds of Peruvians generally, which will for a century prevent any cordial union. And now any union to which the Peruvians might be compelled for the time to consent would be felt by them to be—as it really would be—nothing more nor less than actual conquest under the flimsy disguise of "union or confederation."

I have, &c.,

I. P. CHRISTIANCY.

No. 324.

Mr. Christiancy to Mr. Blaine.

No. 282.] LEGATION OF THE UNITED STATES,
Lima, Peru, April 13, 1881. (Received May 5.)

SIR: I have the honor to inclose to you a copy of my letter of the 11th instant to B. H. Kauffmann, our consular agent at Pacasmayo, Peru, in reference to the right of Peruvian or Chilian authorities to levy forced or extraordinary contributions upon American citizens, and to say further that those questions are likely to arise almost daily during the Chilian occupation.

I have, &c.,

I. P. CHRISTIANCY.

[Inclosure in No. 282.]

Mr. Christiancy to Mr. Kauffmann.

LEGATION OF THE UNITED STATES,
Lima, Peru, April 11, 1881.

DEAR SIR: I have just received your letter of the 10th January last, with that of April 6, explaining the oversight in not sooner sending the former letter, informing me of the occupation of that province by the Chilian forces; that they have made requisitions upon the municipal authorities for sustenance, and that in the distribution of the quotas the authorities (Peruvian, as I understand it) have made no distinction between foreign neutral property and that of Peruvians, and asking my opinion whether neutrals are obliged to pay contributions thus imposed.

In reply, I have to say that if the contribution is imposed upon the real estate of American or other neutral citizens by the Peruvian authorities, such neutral citizens, so far as relates to such real estate, and any taxes or burdens imposed thereon, are to be treated exactly as if they were Peruvians, such real estate and its immediate products, such as crops, partaking of the Peruvian national character. But if the forced contribution in question be imposed upon the person instead of the property of an American citizen, then it is safe for you to take the ground, as against such forced or extraordinary contribution, that American citizens are exempt therefrom under the second article of the treaty of September 6, 1870, which, among other things, provides that American citizens "shall not be called upon for any forced loan or extraordinary contribution for any military expedition or for any public purpose whatever."

There might, it is true, be a possible doubt whether this exemption would apply in behalf of an American citizen domiciled in Peru (that is, residing and having his house in Peru, especially with a family, and without any present intention of removing therefrom).

But whatever doubt there may be upon this last point, it is the safest course for you and for me to insist that the exemption applies as well to American citizens domiciled in Peru as to those who are here for a mere temporary purpose. I advised one American citizen, domiciled in Lima, and upon whom just such a forced contribution was proposed to be levied by the present provisional government here, to take the ground that he was exempt under the treaty. He called upon Mr. Calderon, the head of the provisional government, and took this ground, whereupon Mr. Calderon frankly admitted that he was exempt.

But Chili, having no treaty with the United States, is not bound by the law of nations to treat American citizens, domiciled in Peru, differently from native Peruvians, and may treat them in the same manner, and in some cases (such as the bombardment of a town or a battle in the country) they would not be bound, and in fact, could not make any distinction, though the American citizen might be there for a mere temporary purpose.

But in what is called the "Lynch raid" in September and October last, the Chilian Government had given orders to protect neutral property as far as possible, applying this even to real estate, and, I presume, they have such orders still, and they have quite generally sought to spare it here, further than they were bound to by the law of nations, except at Chorillos, Barranco, and Miraflores.

Finally, I would advise that if any American citizen shall be driven or induced, either by the Peruvian or Chilian authorities, to pay any such contributions, he should pay it under protest made through you, so as to save whatever rights of reclamation he may have.

I will ask you to do me the favor to make a copy of this letter and send it to Mr. Alfred Lapoint, our vice-consul at Chiclayo, and ask him to send a copy to each of our consular agents in his district, viz: Henry C. Smith, at Tumbez; Charles Stalpe, at Lobos de Afuero, and James H. Hayball, at Chimbote.

I am, &c.,

I. P. CHRISTIANCY.

No. 325.

Mr. Christiancy to Mr. Blaine.

No. 283.] LEGATION OF THE UNITED STATES,
Lima, Peru, April 13, 1881. (Received May 5.)

SIR: Referring to my dispatch, No. 277, upon the question, What constitutes the Government of Peru, I have the honor to inform you that nothing has since occurred which contributes to change the aspect of the question. Each government, from time to time, contrives to get statements of acts of adhesion signed by many citizens, and these often come from the same locality, the population being divided. But upon the whole the evidence, as yet, is quite clear that the overwhelming majority of the people of Peru are opposed to the provisional grovernment, and still adhere to Piérola, and at present, if the Chilian army should leave to-morrow, the only safety of the members of the provisional government would be to leave with them.

In my own private opinion, however, if the provisional government had come up without any appearance of support from the Chilian authorities, it would have had many elements of popularity, and would probably have succeeded in obtaining the acquiescence of the people. This new government realizes the importance of an early peace with Chili, the necessity of which must be recognized by every thoughtful man, while that of Piérola professes to intend to carry on the war; but it has no means for the purpose at present, and my own opinion is that any efforts to do so will end in still greater calamities to Peru.

I have, &c.,

I. P. CHRISTIANCY.

No. 326.

Mr. Christiancy to Mr. Blaine.

No. 285.] LEGATION OF THE UNITED STATES,
Lima, Peru, April 17, 1881. (Received May 17.)

SIR: Up to the time of the capture of Lima, I endeavored to keep the Department informed of the progress of the war, and I intended after Lima was taken to give you an account of the maneuvers of the respective armies prior to the battle of San Juan (13th January), and that of Miraflores on the 15th January. But as Lieutenant Mullen, from the United States steamer Adams, accompanied the general staff of the Chilian army, and Lieutenant Houston, from the Lackawanna, was with the general staff of the Peruvian army from some weeks before these battles until they were closed, I wished, for the purpose of getting information in an authentic form, to obtain copies of their respective reports, which were promised me, and for which I waited. But I have never received either, and therefore have only to refer to their reports in the office of the Secretary of the Navy.

Since those battles there has been no actual fighting; some 6,000 of them having gone north along the coast and into the rich valleys near the coast to levy war contributions, where they find no hostile force to oppose them; some 5,000, more or less, returned to Chili, and from 5,000 to 7,000 have remained in and about Lima and Callao until 3 days ago, as I shall presently state.

Piérola, at last accounts, remained at Janja with a small force of about 200 men, but he still claims to be the Government of Peru, and issues his decrees as such, being as yet apparently sustained by the large majority of the people of Peru. (He has, a few days ago, issued a decree, declaring all persons traitors who aid or support the provisional government, and subjecting them to summary trial by court-martial, and his sub-chief, Solar, has issued a like decree at Arequipa.)

He sent General Montero some time since to the north to act in his interest, who is now supposed to be in the interior somewhere back of Trujillo, attempting to get up a military force in the interior. But we have no reliable intelligence whether he has succeeded in raising any such force. But Solar, at Arequipa (in the south), is reported to have under his command there somewhere from 5,000 to 7,000 men well armed, and the friends of Piérola expect the Bolivians to send to Solar's aid some 2,000 to 3,000 men. It is generally supposed that Piérola keeps up communication with Solar by couriers by way of Ayachuco, Cuzco, and Puno, and that he is endeavoring to stir up the people there and everywhere in the interior to maintain a kind of guerrilla warfare against the Chilian forces wherever the latter may attempt to penetrate into the interior.

The Chilian forces have full possession of the Oroya Railroad, which follows the valley of the Rimec and is finished to Chicla, 86 miles from Callao (where it reaches the height of 12,220 feet above the sea.)

In going up this road from Lima the valley grows narrower, and about 25 miles above Lima it becomes a mere narrow gorge, and so continues to Chicla, with here and there a small expansion of comparatively level ground, where some lateral gulch joins the main valley; but with the exception of these the mountains rise abruptly from the Rimec to heights and knobs varying from 2,000 to 5,000 feet, and so very steep (in some places perpendicular, and all entirely naked,) that they cannot be climbed in front by man, and in very few places even by the goat, except at long distances where the side valleys come in, though they may almost all be climbed by a circuitous course from the rear. This is the character of the valley or gorge, at least from Chosica (29 miles above Lima) to Chicla, the present terminus of the railroad; and thence about 18 miles to the summit of the pass (over 15,000 feet above the sea) and for at least that distance on the other side the road is but a mule path, among even worse precipices, where horses, mules, and even men, have for much of the way to go single file; and, whereas, for much of the distance along the railroad, a few hundred men judiciously placed along the mountain tops, mostly out of the reach of fire, could without firing a shot, and by simply rolling rocks down the mountain, destroy an army below of ten times their own number.

Some weeks ago the Chilians established at Chosica a hospital for their sick (and perhaps some of the wounded) soldiers, which was left under the protection of a small force. Some ten days ago, these soldiers, whose camp was just at the foot of the mountain, were suddenly surprised by the rush down the mountains of large quantities of stones, set in motion by mountaineers most of whom were out of sight, and several Chilian soldiers were killed and more wounded.

This movement is believed to have been got up by two leading men known to be friendly to Piérola, and is supposed to have been with his consent.

About a week ago, a force of several hundred Chilians was sent up to chastise these mountaineers and to take vengeance upon them. In the execution of this object, they penetrated some side valleys, where there were three small villages embowered in fruit trees, the inhabitants escaping to the mountains; they destroyed the villages and as near as can be ascertained, killed some forty of the men, who could be reached from below, with their shot, and lost of their own force some 5 or 6 killed and 15 to 20 wounded.

On the evening of the 14th instant, in the most secret and quiet manner, four trains of cars loaded with Chilian soldiery of all arms of the service were dispatched from here to Chicla, with the design, as is generally understood, of marching from Chicla to Jauja, to surprise and capture Piérola, or drive him away. Reports were in circulation here, yesterday, that there had been fighting up the road or beyond Chicla, and that the Chilians had met with some loss. Those reports, however, are wholly unreliable. Still, last evening and this morning, as I am informed, some three trains more loaded with Chilian soldiers have been dispatched up the road, which must with those sent before make some 3,000 men in all.

It is also a common report here, which I am inclined to believe (though none but the Chilian officers know, and they are reticent), that another Chilian expedition left Pisco (a little over 100 miles south of Lima) for the interior, intended to cross the mountains and to strike somewhere near Ayachuco, or to the south of it, to cut off the flight of Piérola to the south. It is also rumored, but I think with less probability, that another Chilian force has been sent into the interior through some valley to the north, to intercept Piérola, should he attempt to go north.

But I look upon these movements (the last of which I think is not probable) as only auxiliary to the great expedition which all the Chilian press declares (and the Chilian officers here confirm) is now rapidly preparing for the capture of Arequipa, and the Mollendo, Arequipa and Puno railroad.

This expedition will, I think, be immediately set on foot, and, judging from the past, I am inclined to believe it will be successful; though many who know the country and the people there better than I do, think otherwise.

Upon the whole, present appearances seem to warrant, at least, the suspicion of a design on the part of Chili to attempt a full and final conquest of the whole of Peru, and its final annexation to Chili.

It is quite clear that this attempt could not succeed if the people in the interior had arms; but as they have not, they would seem to be situated with respect to the Chilian forces much as the Indian race was with respect to Pizarro and his forces, at the time of the first conquest, and may fall in the same manner; though such a result would not, in my opinion, result in a permanent peace, but a chronic state of war for centuries to come. But, as to the suspicion of such a design on the part of Chili, it may be proper to mention that some wealthy Peruvians who support the provisional government of Calderon, have been heard to express their wish that Chili might take and govern the whole of Peru; and there are not wanting strong suspicions among the Peruvians that this is the ultimate purpose for which the provisional government is working.

I express no opinion of my own upon this point; it is too difficult to get authentic information, as nothing like free newspaper discussion is permitted here. Any paper indulging in anything like free discussion being at once suppressed and its editors thrown into prison.

I have, &c.,

I. P. CHRISTIANCY.

No. 327.

Mr. Christiancy to Mr. Blaine.

No. 286.] LEGATION OF THE UNITED STATES,
Lima, Peru, April 19, 1881. (Received May 17.)

SIR: Referring to my dispatch No. 285, I have the honor to inclose to you an editorial from the Actualidad, the Chilian Government paper in Lima, together with a translation.

This article foreshadows in very plain terms what has for some time been suspected as to the real designs of Chili towards Peru.

It is, however, possible that it is written more for the purpose of driving the Peruvian people into the support of the provisional government with which Chili believes she can settle peace on her own terms. We shall soon see.

I have, &c.,

I. P. CHRISTIANCY.

[Inclosure in No. 286.—Cuttings from Actualidad and translation.]

The comedy follows.

Peru continues presenting to the world the most sorrowful spectacle that any nation ever presented in the hour of sacrifices and trial, when passion ought to be suppressed by the realization of great national calamity and to be concealed like a filthy leper, to give place to the noble and elevated efforts of those who seek the salvation of the country, inspiring all for good, for the common safety, and happiness.

Far from this, acts of disorganized anarchy from day to day give new confirmation and emphasis in terms which even now cannot be doubted for a moment that their only hope is for the retirement of the Chilian forces from Lima and Callao that they may unchain, as a final curse, a spontaneous social cataclysm, in which there shall be seen to arise from the lowest depths of society all the bad passions to float on the surface and to burst forth in a dizzy and devastating career like the "trompa marina," which makes whirls on the surface of the ocean.

Let us see what is passing. The government of Garcia Calderon orders the municipality of Lima to be prosecuted judicially for rebellion.

The ex-dictator, from his oriental mansion of Jauja, is issuing circulars to the diplomatic corps, accusing it (the provisional government) of usurping powers which belong exclusively to him as proprietor, as if the sovereignty of a nation was but merchandise which could be bought or seized from the country by violence, and which claims to receive a species of consecration from divine right.

The prefect, Solar, on the other hand, without circumlocution, and not to lose time in fabricating circulars, declare the government of Calderon traitors and condemns them to death.

On the other side, Señor Garcia Calderon addresses to Solar a paternal philippic to attract back to the fold this stray ewe.

Surely we have in this comedy the actors beating each other in fine style, with or without reason.

Señor Garcia Calderon (strikes) the municipality; Piérola, Garcia Calderon; the latter hits Solar, and Solar strikes at all the world.

Involuntarily there occurs to our memory that passage of Don Quixote—

"And as the saying runs, the cat went for the rat, the rat for the cord, the cord for the stick; the muleteer was beating Sancho, Sancho, the girl, and the girl returned the compliment; the landlord beat the girl, and they were going at it so freely that they really took no time for rest. The best work came in when the landlord's candle went out, and as they were left in the dark the beating went on all around indiscriminately, and without compassion, so much so that wherever they dropped their hands nothing was left entire."

Nothing less is passing among the men who still hold in their hands some fragments of the extinguished power of the nation.

It appears that with them the lamp of intelligence has been extinguished, and they give thrusts and counter-thrusts, like the blind, striking right and left, disconcerting the few feeble elements with which they might yet strengthen the action of the government, which seeks to combine all the scattered elements to give them unity under a single hand, and to place them at the service of the single work worthy of engaging the efforts of the whole country at this time, the organization of an administration which shall run no risk of being overwhelmed in the chaos of anarchy, which would endanger safety of the little which the war has left intact.

This continual conflict between the men who have remained in a situation to employ in the salvation of their country the few resources saved from shipwreck, if it shall continue longer, there will remain, no doubt, that Peru goes through a crisis in which the standard of judgment of those who still hold the last remain of military power is lost, and the inspirations of patriotism extinguished, goes on submitting, of its own accord, to a system of tutelage which is gradually imposed upon them by the very nature of coming events, and which acts foreshadow, merely, the rapidity with which the national dissolution of Peruvian personality is taking place.

All this comes amidst the perplexity produced by the stupefaction from great calamities; amidst the intoxication of political passions; amidst diplomatic circulars, judgments, philippics, excommunications, charges of treason, and fulminating decrees of death.

In the mean time, however, aside from the efforts of Mr. Garcia Calderon, there is not a great action, not a civic virtue which rises to the height of the situation in order to mitigate reciprocal hatred, and to place in a single hand, in the hand guided by common sense, the last floating plank of the great national shipwreck.

The curtain of the comedy is still raised, and Chili, impassible, quiet, serene, with folded arms, contemplates from her box the combat of decrees and circulars, where projectiles are crossing each other like a real bombardment.

At the most she says to herself, before locking up the insane and non compotes in the asylum, the sane must name guardians for the administration of their property.

No. 328.

Mr. Elmore to Mr. Blaine.

WASHINGTON, May 4, 1881.

SIR: Thanking your excellency for your kind and frank reception at our late unofficial interview, I have now the honor to inclose for your consideration a copy and a translation of my letter of credence from the provisional government of Peru, constituting me the confidential agent of that government to the United States of America.

You will observe that claiming only to be the head of a provisional government, President Garcia Calderon has given me the character, not of an ordinary, but of a special diplomatic agent, investing me, however, with the most ample powers of a plenipotentiary to treat and agree on any and all subjects with your excellency's government.

I readily acknowledge that the United States Government, more than any other required the existence of certain conditions for the recognition of new governments, particularly in republican countries; but I am convinced that your excellency's government will be justified in recognizing the provisional government of Señor Garcia Calderon, in view of the extraordinary situation of Peru and of the exceptional circumstances under which that provisional government has been formed, its character, and its purposes.

As regards the unfortunate condition of Peru, your excellency is acquainted with the events of the last two years. Without here entering into long details, which I am ready to furnish you in conference or in writing, it is enough to state that, during the course of the war, the constitutionally elected president, General Prado, having left the country, a dictatorial government was formed in December, 1879, under the lead of Señor Piérola, who proclaimed himself dictator, after a bloody fight in the streets of Lima—a coup d'état graphically described by your minister in Peru in a dispatch to the State Department which appears published in the last volume of the Foreign Relations of the United States. That anti-republican government failed, as all such governments must always fail on this continent. The dispersion of its forces, the occupation of the capital and a part of the territory by the armies of Chili, and the complete disintegration of the civil authority represented by Señor Piérola, who with a few followers, has fled to the other side of the mountains, and with whom the representatives of the Chilian Government have declared themselves unwilling to treat hereafter, left Peru absolutely without any government which could either enforce order within, or treat with Chili as to terms of peace.

Under these circumstances, the people of Lima, representing largely the wealth, intelligence, and interests of the republic, supported by like demonstrations in other provinces of the country, called upon Señor Francisco Garcia Calderon, an eminent jurist and statesman and one of the most distinguished citizens of Peru, to organize a provisional government which recognizes as its only foundation the constitution of the country and as its only power the existing laws, and which has been established only to restore that constitution to its full vigor, and to summon the national Congress to meet on the 15th of the present month of May. No true patriot could have hesitated.

The government of Señor Garcia Calderon represents, on the one side, the aspiration of the Peruvian people to re-establish the reign of constitutional law and order; and, on the other, it represents the only means the republic possesses to bring about the conclusion of a treaty of peace with its present invaders.

Occupying this position of heavy responsibility, what Señor Garcia Calderon has instructed me to ask is, not the recognition of his present government as the permanent Government of Peru, but as the only organized authority which can enable the people to resume their constitutional rights and restore the government its regular action. Upon the absolute necessity of this course I need not dwell. It will be admitted that it is worthy of the position and power of the United States, and in conformity with its traditional policy, to aid in this hour of need a younger and sister republic. Peru is now occupied by a hostile force, and the terms of peace, upon which only it will be withdrawn, cannot be either accepted or executed without a responsible and recognized government. The burden of this occupation and the sacrifices necessary to secure any treaty of peace with Chili must fall upon that portion of the republic in which the people have delegated in the most emphatic manner their authority to Señor Garcia Calderon. What he desires is, that foreign powers, especially the United States of America, should recognize the force and obligation of his position, and by that recognition encourage the people of Peru in the prompt restoration of constitutional authority.

The first and most important act, however, of Señor Garcia Calderon's government will be to conclude a treaty of peace with Chili, thus securing to Peru its sovereignty as an independent nation. Now, it is especially for this high and noble purpose that Peru appeals to the United States of America, and it is most particularly to this end that the Provisional Government of Peru has appointed the undersigned as its organ of communication with your excellency's government. I am desirous to lay before your excellency the earnest petition of Peru in this regard, and shall proceed to do so when your excellency advises me of my recognition as the representative of the Provisional Government of Peru.

The Peruvian people have always looked up to the United States for advice and counsel, and for its aid and support whenever needed, especially when its republican institutions or integrity have been threatened. My country deeply feels how much it owes to the great republic in the past, and more particularly for the efforts lately made by the United States to mediate in the present war. But the extraordinary events which are rapidly developing in South America are of such a dangerous and unexpected nature that, as soon as you give me the opportunity to do so, I desire, in accordance with my instructions, to lay before you the true tendency of those events, and to show you that the United States are interested in interposing their action in the settlement of this South American conflict, if they wish that republican institutions and the independence of the nations of this continent should be maintained.

The Provisional Government of Peru anxiously desires that the terms of peace with Chili be settled, with the advice and mediation of the United States, as the only means which will secure its continuance.

To this end I beg your excellency to please appoint a day and hour when I may have the honor to hand to your excellency the original letter of credence which accredits me as the confidential agent of Peru to the United States of America.

I have the honor, &c.,

J. F. ELMORE.

[Inclosure in note from Mr. Elmore.—Translation.]

Mr. Galvez to Mr Blaine.

DEPARTMENT OF FOREIGN AFFAIRS, Magdalena, March 28, 1881.

SIR: The earnest desire which animates his excellency the Provisional President of Peru, to cultivate and draw closer the friendly relations which exist between Peru and the United States of America has induced him to intrust Señor Federico Elmore with the honorable mission of presenting to your excellency this letter, which accredits him as the confidential agent of Peru to the United States of America.

The intimate knowledge I have of the distinguished personal qualities of Señor Elmore, of his capacity, and of his zeal for the public service, satisfies me that your excellency will receive him with benevolence, and you will please give faith and credit to all communications he may address to your excellency within the limits of his instructions, and principally in regard to the earnest desire of the Peruvian Government to draw closer the friendly relations between our countries.

I avail myself, &c.,

M. M. GALVEZ.

His Excellency THE SECRETARY OF STATE OF THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA.

No. 329.

Mr. Christiancy to Mr. Blaine.

[Extract.]

(Personal and confidential.)

LEGATION OF THE UNITED STATES,
Lima, Peru, May 4, 1881. (Received May 26.)

SIR: Referring to my dispatch No. 286, dated April 19, 1881, I wish to say confidentially and for your own eye alone (for the present), that, in my opinion, the Chilian Government intend to establish a kind of provincial government of their own over Peru, or so much of it as they can control, which, in my opinion (unless England and France, or the United States should actively intervene to prevent it), will be all of Peru west of the first range of Andes, and possibly still more.

Should such a result take place, I am inclined to think it would be equivalent to establishing the ascendency of English, over American influence on this coast, so long as such a provincial government should be maintained.

Some of my reasons for this conclusion will appear in my confidential dispatch No. 162, to which I refer, and so far as American commerce on this coast may be concerned, the products of Chili are mostly similar to those of our grain-producing States, viz, the cereals.

The productions of Peru are very different, though some of them might compete to a considerable extent with those of our country.

For a general view of the staple productions of Peru, her exports and imports, the value of her trade, and the various questions connected with the increase of our trade here, I refer you to the dispatches of Mr. Gibbs, my predecessor in this legation, Nos. 244 and 284, merely remarking that when I came here, the present war had just been declared, and it has been impossible to obtain any reliable statistics of commerce, but that it is evident there has been a great decrease of production and of exports and imports. The Chilians having taken the nitrate districts in the south, the production of this article by Peru is, for the present, practically extinguished; and Chili having command of the sea, Peruvian production and exportation of guano have been reduced to a very small fraction of what they were before. But I am informed by persons who profess to have made personal examination, that there are nitrate deposits in the north of Peru, nearly, if not quite, as rich and extensive as those in the south.

As to manufactured cotton, of course no one would think of importing it into the United States, as they can afford to pay more for it in England. As to wool and sugar, our tariff is such that its importation into the United States is practically prohibited. Our wool growers would not consent to a reduction of duty upon ordinary wools; yet there is one kind of wool—the alpaca—which would not compete at all with home production. But England now takes practically all of this which is produced in Peru and Bolivia; and it may be worthy of consideration whether the mere local interests of Louisiana ought to deprive the whole Union of the benefits which would result from admitting Peruvian sugars at a reduced duty. But, not to go further into particulars, it is evident from the nature of the products and exports of Peru, she must find commerce with England, under past and present circumstances, more advantageous than with the United States, as England takes more of her products in return and thereby helps her more in the way of exchange.

While railroads were being constructed here, there were considerable importations of locomotives, railroad cars, and railroad plant, and may be again, if they ever get a settled government here. There has, also, been a small trade in furniture, the smaller kinds of hardware and cutlery, and farming implements, machinery, &c.; though, except upon some of the larger plantations, the demand for farming implements is small, as most of the small agriculturists prefer the antiquated method of plowing their lands with a crooked stick (iron pointed), and with oxen hitched by the horns.

Owing mostly to the mountainous character of the country, wagons or wheel carriages are unknown, except in a few of the larger cities (and lumber wagons on the sugar and rice plantations), the transportation being carried on almost everywhere on the backs of mules and donkeys, much of it even in the cities.

Another thing which has given to England the control of the commerce of this entire coast, is the establishment of an excellent line of steamers, at first largely subsidized, but now receiving no direct subsidy, and yet doing a profitable business. If the establishment of an American competing line would tend very largely to increase our commerce here, and to open large markets for our trade, I should be ready to give up my habitual opposition to such subsidies until the line could compete with opposition without them. But the other causes which I have mentioned (and many others which might be mentioned), which, aside from and independent of her line of steamers, tend to give England the control of the commerce of this entire coast, would still continue to operate, and an American line could not be supported without large subsidies.

The great mass of all classes of Peruvians feel a very strong attachment to the United States and a bitter hatred to England. Still, in matters of trade, pecuniary interest will, in the main, control.

Upon the whole, my conclusion is, that the only effectual way for the United States to control the commerce of Peru, and to preserve a commanding or even a material influence along this coast, is either actively to intervene in compelling a settlement of peace upon reasonable terms or to control Peru by a protectorate or by annexation, for either of which I am satisfied at least three-fourths, if not four-fifths, of her population would gladly vote to-day.

Unless the United States take one of these courses in the present emergency the "Monroe doctrine," so called, will be considered a myth in all the South American States. Whether our government ought so far to depart from its traditions as to adopt any one of these courses is not for me to decide, nor to discuss the means necessary to carry any of these ideas into effect, nor do I express any opinion as to the propriety of any such projects, except to say that I should individually be strongly opposed to the idea of annexation, unless it could be had on terms that Peru should, for at least ten years, be subject to a territorial government, on the general plan of our territorial governments, and then to be admitted as States, at the discretion of Congress. In that ten years Peru would, under such a system, become wholly North American in its ideas.

These projects have lately been often and strongly pressed upon me by Peruvians, and I find that some of the Catholic clergy, even, are in favor of annexation. My only answer has uniformly been that, in my opinion, our people were not yet disposed to adopt any such policy; but that I would bring the whole matter, at the proper time, to the attention of my government, and be guided by their instructions.

I ought here to say, by way of introduction to what follows, that with my own personal observation of over two years, and the best sources of information I have been able to obtain, I am unable to discover any sufficient elements here for establishing an independent or even any kind of regular or permanent government of Peru; certainly no form of popular government by the Peruvians themselves. To state all the grounds for this conclusion would require a volume. I can only refer to a few of the fundamental reasons for this state of things, and for this conclusion. The original immigration into this country from Spain did not consist of men who, like the original colonists in the United States, only sought to better their conditions by honest, persevering industry, but of adventurers, seeking only to make money rapidly, by robbing the original inhabitants and by sudden accumulations of wealth from mines of silver and gold.

They found here a people well advanced in the arts of agriculture, producing all that was necessary for the support and comfort of the inhabitants (then amounting to some 8,000,000 or 9,000,000, in what is now Peru). They found every foot of ground in a high state of cultivation, wherever it was possible to bring water for irrigation. They not only seized upon all these lands and improvements, but made all the inhabitants slaves, and assigned the former owners, by repartiamentos, as slaves to the few Spanish immigrants, to each of whom large tracts of country were granted, often amounting to ten, fifteen, or twenty townships, in our country. Many of the original inhabitants were also assigned as slaves to the leading men who settled in the towns and cities. The Spaniard would not labor and did not, but all the labor was done by the enslaved race, and afterwards, in some measure, by African slaves.

Nearly all the Spanish adventurers either took Indian wives or, which was more common, kept a harem of Indian girls, as many as he chose; but as a general rule they did not treat their children as slaves, but recognized them as their children. In this way it has happened that almost all the people of Peru are of this mixed race, and the mixture with the negro; so that I do not think there are now in the city of Lima two hundred families of pure white blood, and probably not in all Peru 200,000 of the white race unmixed. Slavery was only finally abolished here in 1856 (see Article IV of constitution of that year), and all the old ideas and habits of the people remain. Labor is looked upon as a disgrace and degradation, and as only fit for a servile race. Any man of standing in Lima, to-day, who purchases an article at a store, however small the package, would at once lose caste if he dared to take it home in his hand. He must have a servant to carry it for him. The consequence of all this is, that all the sugar and rice estates, instead of employing free labor, have resorted to the Chinese, who are nominally imported into this country as hired servants, but, except in the cities under the eyes of responsible officers, these Chinese are treated with about the same severity as the slaves were in our Southern States, and in many respects worse, as they are generally locked in their quarters and kept under guard at night, and so many conditions are attached to their contracts of which they do not know the effect, upon which the employer assumes the right to decide, that in some and, I think, in most cases, after the Chinaman has served five or ten years he finds he has more time yet to serve than he had when he commenced, and few, if any, ever come out freemen.

There are many foreigners here, especially Italians, and some of other nationalities, who are not ashamed to live by their labor in some of the various trades. But aside from these and the Chinese the whole manual labor of Peru is performed mostly by the Indians and races mixed with them, who had been slaves, and by negroes and their mixed descendants, who had also been of the servile race, who constitute at least three-fourths of all the inhabitants of Peru. These, though now nominally free, are almost all treated in the interior (away from the cities) as practically slaves; their rights being almost wholly disregarded by the authorities, who, in many, if not in most, cases assume to fix the prices of labor of various kinds, which is also, to some extent, done even in the cities. The wages of these people, since I have been here, have not exceeded from 10 to 20 cents per day in our money.

It is also from these poor classes of people that all the Peruvian soldiery were drawn (except the "Lima Reserves," who were temporarily raised for the defense of Lima), and these forces were called volunteers; but the way they were made to volunteer was for officers to go through the country with an armed escort, and compel the poor fellows to fall in. If they refused, they were taken by force, tied together, and put on the cars, or compelled to march to Lima. I have myself seen scores of such volunteers, thus tied, marching through the streets of Lima. Not a single white man did I ever see in the ranks (though the officers were whites), except the "reserves" above mentioned. All these men of Indian descent are docile, amiable, and brave, and will fight as long as their officers will stand; but the officers (all white) fled by scores and hundreds from San Juan and Miraflores, leaving their men to do the same. The battle of the 13th opened at daylight, some 10 miles from Lima, and at 9 o'clock a. m. I saw in the streets of Lima enough Peruvian officers with shoulder-straps to make an entire regiment. It is but right to say here that the Chilian army, though called volunteers, was, much of it, raised in the same way, and from similar mixed races, more largely Indians mixed with whites and less with Africans. (I have seen but few white men in their ranks.) The Indians of Chili and the mixture of Indians and whites are more vigorous, enterprising, desperate, and cruel than the corresponding races in Peru, partaking more of the Araucanian type; but the Chilian officers were far superior to those of Peru, and less under the blind guidance of the church (though the private soldiers are about equally so), and the government of Chili is composed of more enlightened men wholly emancipated from the control of the church and ready to adopt all modern improvements in warfare.

But to return, after this long digression, to the question of labor and the laboring classes, I must say that, with my democratic and republican ideas, knowing that the great masses of people in all countries always have been and always will be compelled to get their living by the sweat of their brows, and fully believing that the government which best secures the greatest good of the greatest number is to be esteemed the best, I am compelled to estimate the prosperity of every country by the adequacy or inadequacy of the compensation which it enables the great mass of its citizens to obtain for its labor. That country which secures to them the highest compensation is the most prosperous, and that which secures them the least is the worst and least prosperous.

From what I have already said, it might appear sufficiently evident that the laboring classes in Peru are sunk beyond the hope of redemption. * * *

Every man naturally looks only to what he deems his own immediate interest or elevation to power; and, when placed in power, he seeks only to enrich himself by the opportunities which his office gives him to appropriate the public funds to his own use. This has become so settled a conviction in the public mind that whenever any man obtains office it is at once assumed by the people that such is his object. This opinion is, doubtless, sometimes unjust, but on looking back through the various governments and forms of governments, I am satisfied this conviction is generally well founded. If, for instance (except in a time of war when no administration would dare to entertain any claim), any man had a claim against the government, well or ill founded, he could get it allowed by giving a fair share of it to the President and cabinet officers, and however good the claim might be, it was seldom allowed without this reward.

The joint commission got up here by * * * in favor of American claims, was no exception to the general rule; and, I am informed, several claims were allowed against Peru, which never should have been allowed at all, or only for a much smaller sum; * * * allowing some special friend, such as ———, to make the arrangements between the claimants and the officers of the government, and these claimants paying sometimes 70 per cent. and upwards of their claims, which percentage, to all appearance, must have been shared among all the parties acting in the scheme.

This however, is only a sample of the mode in which the public business has generally been transacted by the various Peruvian Governments here for many years past. A few honest men have, from time to time, been in office, who could not thus be bought, but were compelled to retire from office.

There seems to be no fixed principle of honesty, no idea even of that self-sacrificing patriotism which is essential to a proper and honest administration of government.

Such are the people of Peru. The picture has been but feebly drawn.

I have only been able to touch the prominent points, the "vestigia." To fill it up would require a large volume, which I have not time to write nor you to read. * * * Chili has been able to secure a more permanent government, and better to enforce financial honesty in her administration, and to preserve her public credit. But the grievances of and impositions upon her laboring classes—the great mass of her people—are essentially the same as in Peru; and the grade of civilization among the masses even below that of Peru, the church having equal control over them, and committing the same kinds of abuses.

In short, I would not advise the United States or her people or any other enlightened people to take any stock in any of the South American republics, unless they can take the controlling stock. This they could easily have in Peru, if they choose to take it. The disposition of the masses of the people is favorable to the United States. A United States protectorate or annexation would be hailed with delight. In the hands or under the control of the United States, Peru would soon again become one of the richest countries of the world. I will not trouble you with her geography, which, if you do not already know, you can readily learn. There is enough of the country to make five or six large States, to say nothing of other parts of Peru, which are well known. The eastern slope of the Andes, along the upper branches of the Amazon, is one of the richest agricultural countries in the world; stocked with the most valuable timber and producing everything which a tropical climate can produce, but at present almost entirely in possession of the wild Indians; and I give only the opinion of geologists and that of all intelligent travelers when I say that there are still more valuable mines of silver and gold in Peru than in any other country of like extent in the world. And if it belonged to the United States it would not be two years before it would eclipse California, Nevada, Colorado, and all the mining regions along the Rocky Mountains in the production of the precious metals.

Fifty thousand enterprising citizens of the United States would control the whole population and make Peru wholly (North) American.

Peru under the control of our country, we should control all the other republics of South America, and the "Monroe doctrine" would become a verity. Large markets would be opened to our productions and manufactures and a wide field opened for the enterprise of our people.

Whether all these advantages are sufficient to outweigh the wise, traditional policy of our government it is not for me to express an opinion. I only bring the matter to the attention of my government, leaving that government to decide.

If Peru lay contiguous to the United States, our citizens would soon relieve our government from all responsibility by taking possession of the country, and in due time asking its admission as a part of the United States.

But, as a single individual, I must declare my utter repugnance to the idea of its incorporation as a part of our Union, until American ideas first get control of its population. I want no more such discordant elements, until we have digested and assimilated what we have already.

* * * * * * *

This letter must be treated as perfectly confidential, for your own eye and that of the President alone. I do not even copy it in the records of the legation, and ask that it may not be placed on file in the Department. My own life, even, would not be safe here for one day if it were made public.

I have, &c.,

I. P. CHRISTIANCY.

Hon. JAMES G. BLAINE,
Secretary of State, Washington, D. C.

No. 330.

Mr. Christiancy to Mr. Blaine.

No. 292.] LEGATION OF THE UNITED STATES,
Lima, Peru, May 5, 1881. (Received June 2.)

SIR: Referring to my dispatches Nos. 230, 237, and 242, in reference to the question whether the Chilians or Peruvians were most responsible for the breach of the armistice on the 15th of January last, I have now to say that the question has at last been practically solved. The committee of the diplomatic corps, consisting of Mr. Pinto, of Salvador (its dean), and the ministers of England and France, who, with the dean, constituted the committee of the corps, who, on the morning of the 15th January, arranged the armistice with General Baquedano, and the Chilian staff, seeing the report of General Baquedano, as made to his own government, have felt it their duty to make an official statement of the real terms of the armistice, which is quite different from the statement of the report of General Baquedano. The general, in his report, stated substantially that he reserved the right of making any movement in the mean time, with the single condition that he was not to open fire upon the Peruvians until 12 o'clock of the night of the 15th. This, if true, would have allowed him to move his lines up to the front of and into the very lines of the Peruvian force; to attack them by his cavalry, so long as they used only the sabre, and did not fire, &c.; all which would, of course, render the armistice a farce.

But it will be seen by the joint statement of the three ministers, who arranged the terms (which I here inclose, with a translation), that the right reserved by the Chilian authorities—to make any new movement in the mean time or to complete any movement already commenced—was under the express reservation that such movement should not go beyond the grand (or advanced) guard of their army, which, of course, must mean as that guard was then placed (at about 7 o'clock in the morning). Any other meaning would make nonsense, when the actual circumstances are considered.

Now, it clearly appears, from the report of the chief of the Chilian artillery, when compared with other well-known facts, that their artillery on their left (the Peruvian right) was moved far in advance of the position held by the "grand guard" in the morning, and that this movement took place as early as 11 a. m., and that this commandant of artillery, finding himself so far in advance of the rest of the Chilian army, sent a request to have the infantry advanced to cover his flanks, which was promptly accorded, thus bringing the Chilian line much nearer to the Peruvian line than was contemplated by the armistice; that even General Baquedano, with his staff, reconnoitering when the battle opened, was far in advance of the line held by his "grand guard" in the morning; in short, that this forward movement was such as naturally and reasonably to induce the belief in the Peruvian forces, that the Chilians were deliberately setting the terms of the armistice at defiance, and intended to attack them in defiance of the armistice. In this view the responsibility for the breach of the armistice must rest upon the Chilian commanders, though the first gun was fired by the Peruvians.

I make no further comments upon this transaction than to say, that in a war between these South American governments, experience has demonstrated that the same scrupulous good faith in the observance of any armistice, or any other arrangement between belligerents, is hardly to be expected as would be expected with the more enlightened nations of Europe and in the United States.

I have, &c.,

I. P. CHRISTIANCY.

[Inclosure in No. 292.—Translation.]

We, the undersigned, ministers of Salvador, France, and England, being authorized to offer the good offices of the diplomatic corps, to the two belligerents, after the battle of Chorillos,

Considering, that the report of General Baquedano does not state exactly the facts as they took place on the morning of the 15th January, during our interview with the chiefs of the Chilian army.

Considering besides that the publication of that report tends to give an erroneous impression of the character of our action, and the arrangement agreed upon,

We declare:

1st. That we presented ourselves at the conference at the request of Mr. Piéroła, in order to learn the conditions of peace.

2d. That after these having been brought to our knowledge unofficially, and other conditions, preliminary to all negotiation having been placed before us officially, we asked a suspension of hostilities in order to give the supreme chief time to deliberate.

3d. That we agreed that that suspension of hostilities should last until midnight of the same day.

4th. That the Chilians insisting upon completing a movement already commenced, we agreed to this. But under the express reservation accepted by them, that the movement should not go beyond the grand guard (advance guards) of their army. (Meaning as then placed.)

In faith of which, and in order that the truth may appear, we have signed the present procès verbal.

Lima, April 27, 1881.

I. DE P. PINTO,
Minister Plenipotentiary of Salvador.
E. DE VERGES,
Minister of the French Republic.
SPENCER ST. JOHN,
Her Majesty's Minister Resident.

No. 331.

Mr. Christiancy to Mr. Blaine.

No. 295.] LEGATION OF THE UNITED STATES,
Lima, Peru, May 8, 1881. (Received June 2.)

SIR: I have the honor to inclose to you the copy of a letter from B. H. Kauffmann, our consular agent at Pacasmayo, dated May 5, 1881, in reference to the attempt of the Peruvian authorities to levy war contributions upon American citizens, and their conclusion to desist from that attempt.

I have, &c.,

I. P. CHRISTIANCY.

[Inclosure in No. 295.]

Mr. Kauffmann to Mr. Christiancy.

UNITED STATES CONSULAR AGENCY,
Pacasmayo, Peru, May 5, 1881.

SIR: I have the honor to acknowledge receipt of your notes Nos. 146 and 147, in the former of which you advise me of the appointment of Mr. A. Lapoint to be United States vice-consul at Chiclayo, and in the latter you kindly reply to my letter making inquiry as to the status of neutrals in reference to payment of contributions for the sustenance of the detachment of the Chilian army of occupation now stationed in this province.

I now have the satisfaction of stating that in view of your letter, and the quotation (respecting) of treaty stipulations respecting the levying of extraordinary contributions, the Peruvian authorities (who pretended to levy the said contribution) have desisted from their pretensions to that end.

I am, &c.

B. H. KAUFFMANN.

No. 332.

Mr. Christiancy to Mr. Blaine.

No. 296.] LEGATION OF THE UNITED STATES,
Lima, Peru, May 9, 1881. (Received June 2.)

SIR: I have intimated, in several of my late dispatches, that the action of the Chilian Government, as shown by their officers here, fore shadowed the intention of that government to hold the whole of Peru- or so much of it as they should find practicable, at least all west sum-, mits of the western range of the Andes, as a permanent conquest.

Enough has now transpired to show that my suspicions were correct.

The mask has now been completely thrown off. The Chilian papers, both in Chili and Peru, openly declare this as the intention of the Chilian Government; and the military officers here openly declare the same thing. Colonel Lagos, the commander of the Chilian forces here, had made an arrangement with the provisional government of Francisco Garcia Calderon, to allow his government the control of the custom-house in the northern ports of Peru, to enable him to support his government and the right to send some 500 or 600 soldiers to the northern towns to enforce his authority to this end.

But some four or five days since the assistant secretary of war of Chili arrived here and the above arrangement was at once disapproved and revoked, and Senior Calderon's soldiers were not allowed to embark; and no effort is now made to conceal the intention to occupy Peru indefinitely; but this intention is publically declared.

As explained by the best informed Chilian officers, the plan is to establish a civil government here under the protection of her army, a kind of provincial government, similar to that of the old viceroys, while the country belonged to Spain. Some of the Chilian officers give out that the arrangement is to last for some five years, more or less, until Peru shall have been able to establish a government of its own; but how it is to do this while the country is under the Government of Chili, which is not likely to tolerate any attempt of this kind, is not explained.

In plain English, it is now clear that Chili means to hold the whole of Peru by right of conquest if she can.

Is there anything to prevent this result? Certainly (as to that part of Peru west of the summits of the western range of Andes) nothing short of the intervention of some European power or powers, or that of the United States.

The ministers of England and France had been authorized by their respective governments to offer their good offices by way of mediation, and though this offer had not been directly repulsed by Chili, but (as near as I can learn) accepted under qualifications, those ministers now (under the present resolution of the Chilian Government) find no opening for the success of their efforts. Our minister in Chili has doubtless offered the mediation of our government, but the result must necessarily be the same. Mediation, simply as such, must now be utterly fruitless. Intervention against the will of Chili seems the only means of preventing the absorption of the greater part, or the whole of Peru by Chili.

Will any European government thus intervene? It seems to be well settled that the German Empire will not, nor will it even interfere by way of offering mediation. It is not at all likely that Italy would do so alone, though she has a powerful fleet. Russia and Austria have little interest in the question, and there remain only England and France, both of which seem to act in perfect accord, through their representatives here.

That England will not intervene as against Chili is sufficiently evident, not only from what is stated in my private and personal dispatch of last week, but from information I have this day received from the British minister, who informs me there is not the slightest probability that England will so intervene.

Will the United States do so?

This is a question which is not for me to answer. I have kept your department fully advised of the facts upon which the solution of the question depends, and here my duty ends, until I shall receive instructions, which I am ready on all occasions to follow.

I ought to say further here that the provisional government had been endeavoring to get the old congress of 1879 to meet here or at Chorillos on the 15th instant, but they still lacked 34 of a quorum. I think now the idea of holding a congress will be abandoned, and that the Chilian authorities will not permit its meeting, if a quorum should be obtained. In fact it would seem now that the provincial government must go down. But we shall soon see.

I have, &c.,

I. P. CHRISTIANCY.

P. S.—Perhaps I ought to add here (what sufficiently appears in my former dispatches), that the principal grounds upon which the Chilian authorities claim to base the right to adopt this policy of indefinite occupation, viz, that it has become necessary, because the Peruvians have neglected to form a government with which they could treat, and the anarchy which results from this state of things has been deliberately produced by their own action, and, to all appearance, for the very purpose of furnishing a pretext for the policy which they have finally adopted. They could have readily treated with Piérola, who was anxious to treat, and who had been and still is recognized by all the governments represented here, and by the Chilians themselves at Arica. But they refused to treat with him, and encouraged the setting up the provisional government of Calderon, and from time to time encouraged that government in its efforts, to some extent, but soon began to treat it with contempt, and to cut off from it one privilege after another, still allowing it to appeal to the people of Peru for their adhesion, and to call congress together, thus dividing the people of Peru between Piérola and Calderon in a manner which threatened civil war.

The ruse has been successful in producing the result desired, but quite unsuccessful, so far as relates to the concealment of the true motives of their action.

P. S.—MAY 11.—I learn from a letter this day received from Mr. Osborn, that the Chilian Government actually rejected the offer of mediation by England and France.—I. P. C.

No. 333.

Mr. Blaine to Mr. Christiancy.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, May 9, 1881.

No. 143.]

SIR: In your last dispatch, No. —, you informed this Department that the Chilian Government refused absolutely to recognize General Piérola as representing the civil authority in Peru, and that Señor Calderon was at the head of a provisional government.

If the Calderon government is supported by the character and intelligence of Peru and is really endeavoring to restore constitutional government with a view both to order within and negotiation with Chili for peace, you may recognize it as the existing provisional government, and render what aid you can by advice and good offices to that end.

Mr. Elmore has been received by me as the confidential agent of such provisional government.

I am, &c.,

JAMES G. BLAINE.

No. 334.

Mr. Blaine to Mr. Christiancy.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, May 12, 1881.

No. 144.]

SIR: I have to acknowledge the receipt of your No. 282, and to approve the tenor of your letter (a copy of which you inclose) to Mr. Kauffmann, consular agent, &c., on the question of the right of Peruvian or Chilian authorities to levy forced or extraordinary contributions upon American citizens in Peru.

I am, &c.,

JAMES G. BLAINE.

No. 335.

Mr. Christiancy to Mr. Blaine.

No. 301.]

LEGATION OF THE UNITED STATES,
Lima, Peru, May 17, 1881. (Received June 17.)

SIR: I have the honor to inform you that on the 14th instant the following appeared in El Oden of Lima, the paper which is the organ of the provisional government of Calderon, viz:

[Cablegrama oficial, Paris, 12 de Mayo, Valparaiso, 13, a la 1.50 p. m.]

Presidente CALDERON, Lima:

Elmore telegrafia de Washington, que le comunique que el gobierno Calderon ha sido reconocido por el Gobierno Americano.

[English: official cablegram, Paris, May 12, Valparaiso, 13th, at 1.50 p. m.]

President CALDERON, Lima:

Elmore telegraphs from Washington saying that the Calderon government has been recognized by the American Government.

If I could confidently rely upon the authenticity of this, I should, of course, at once recognize the provisional government, though no other minister here has yet done so. The dispatch looks authentic on its face, when taken in connection with the facts that Elmore is understood here to be the agent of Calderon's government at Washington, that Goyeneche is a relation of Calderon, that he is the wealthiest citizen of Peru, that he resides in Paris, and that Calderon has had the charge of his property and business here.

For these reasons all the ministers of foreign nations here have taken it for granted that the cablegram is authentic, and that the United States has recognized the provisional government. They have inquired of me, and I have been compelled to say to them that they knew as much as I did in reference to the matter, as all the evidence I had, was the publication of the dispatch in the paper; that it might be true, but that it seemed to me that in a matter of such importance it would naturally be supposed my government would have telegraphed me, instead of leaving me to guess at the authenticity of the dispatch sent as this was, through a party in no way authorized to speak for my government, and that for these reasons I doubted the truth of the dispatch, and that I must therefore wait for direct official information from my government before taking any step officially for recognition until I should see satisfactory evidence that Peru had acquiesced in the provisional government; the evidence of which I have not yet seen, though for the last week that government seems to have made some progress in this direction; since, so far as we can learn, Piérola has been driven from Jauja, and his present whereabouts is unknown.

I have, &c.,

I. P. CHRISTIANCY.

No. 336.

Mr. Christiancy to Mr. Blaine.

No. 302.] LEGATION OF THE UNITED STATES,
Lima, Peru, May 17, 1881. (Received June 17.)

SIR: Referring to my dispatch No. 296, I have the honor to inform you that though the tone of the Chilian press here and in Chili remains the same upon the subject of "occupacion indefinida" (indefinite occupation), the Chilian authorities here have, within the last few days, allowed señor Calderon's government to send to the northern coast some 300 soldiers, to enable him to enforce his authority there, but whether this is in aid of his right to collect duties there, or to enable him to drive the prefects of Piérola from the provinces, is not publicly known here; though I think the latter is the purpose; but, in either view, it gives some ground for a suspicion that the ground taken by the Chilian papers and officers in favor of "indefinite occupation" may have been taken only in terrorem, to drive the people into the support of the Calderon government, as I suggested in my dispatch No. 286.

There is still another ground for this suspicion. It is well known that the present Government of Chili is composed of the liberal party, which, if left to its own free choice, would have always been willing to make peace upon reasonable terms; but this liberal party holds power by a very small majority, and all the other parties and fragments of parties combine for the purpose of putting it down, each in hopes that his own party may gain something by the change.

The most prominent of these opposition parties are the extreme war party and the church party. In deference to these and the opposition generally, all of whom have found it for their interest to act with the extreme war party, the present Secretary of War, Vergara, was put into the cabinet.

He is an able and practical man, with too much intelligence not to see the excesses of the populace, who compose the mass of the extreme war party.

An election is soon to come off for president of the republic. Santa Maria is the candidate of the liberals, and General Baquedano is likely to be the representative of the war party. The fear that the war party may succeed, and the knowledge that a successful general is always popular with the masses, may have driven even the liberal party to take ground in favor of "indefinite occupation," and during the political campaign to show themselves as extreme in this direction as their opponents, without any real intention of carrying out the extremes of that policy if elected.

Besides all these things the relations of Chili with the Argentine Republic are by no means cordial, and Chili may have some apprehensions that, with her long backbone exposed, the Argentines may almost any day penetrate between her spinal processes, and strike a fatal blow at her vital parts. My own opinion is, that any attempt of Chili to hold Peru as a conquered country will, at no very distant day, lead to this or a similar catastrophe, and I have some suspicion that the Chilian Government see this in the same light as I do. But it is not possible at present to ascertain precisely the ideas of the Chilian Government, if they have any very definite policy, which I doubt.

The 15th instant was the day fixed by Calderon for the meeting of congress, but about 25 were still wanting to make a quorum.

I have, &c.,

I. P. CHRISTIANCY.

P. S.—MAY 23.—Since writing the above it has become still more probable that the threat of "indefinite occupation" was intended only to drive the Peruvians into the support of the provisional government, as two days ago they allowed this government to send 75 soldiers to Tarma, Oroya, &c., to control that part of the country, so as to allow the members of congress to come to Lima, and it now begins to look as if Calderon might secure a quorum (two-thirds) of the congress. If he does succeed, it will be some evidence that Peru acquiesces in that government. And if he gets the two-thirds of the members, I think I shall at once recognize the provisional government, or that of congress and the president they may elect, unless, in the mean time, I shall receive other instructions.

Your friend, &c.,

I. P. C.

No. 337.

Mr. Christiancy to Mr. Blaine.

No. 305.] LEGATION OF THE UNITED STATES,
Lima, Peru, May 23, 1881. (Received June 17.)

SIR: Referring to my dispatch No. 285, in which I stated it as probable that the Chilians had sent an expedition from Pisco at the south and from some point at the north to co-operate with the force sent via Chicla into the department of Junin, so as to cut off the retreat of Piérola from Jauja, I have now the honor to state that from all sources of recent information no such additional expeditions were sent; that the expedition sent via Chicla went to Cerro de Pasco, to Tarma, and to Oroya; that it is not entirely certain that they have even yet taken Jauja, though I think this probable, and it is now intimated in the papers that this force sent via Chicla to Cerro de Pasco is ordered to return.

I have direct information from the secretary general of Piérola that the latter left Jauja for the south on the 28th April, and I infer that he is at this time at or near Arequipa, but he expected, when he left Jauja, to return to Ayacucho by the 6th June, at which time the congress called by him were to meet there.

Referring to my same dispatch, 285, I have further to say that the contemplated Chilian expedition to Arequipa has not yet taken place, so far as we can learn here. The papers lately have been silent on the subject.

Still, unless peace should soon take place, I look upon the expedition as a necessity, and am inclined to believe it would be successful.

I have, &c.,

I. P. CHRISTIANCY.

No. 338.

Mr. Christiancy to Mr. Blaine.

No. 310.] LEGATION OF THE UNITED STATES,
Lima, Peru, May 27, 1881. (Received June 27.)

SIR: I have the honor to inform you that on the 1st instant I, with every other member of the diplomatic corps here, received a circular letter, dated April 30, from M. M. Galvez, claiming to be the secretary of foreign relations of Peru, under the provisional government of Doctor Don Francisco Garcia Calderon, stating the installation of that government and the names of the cabinet officers; this being evidently written to invite a recognition by the diplomatic corps. A meeting of that corps was called a day or two after to consider the propriety of answering. The whole corps agreed that there was yet no sufficient evidence that this provisional government had become the Government de facto of Peru, and all concurred in the resolution not as yet to make any reply. Another meeting of the corps was held yesterday, upon the same subject, and while all (with the possible exception of one) agreed that there was yet no sufficient ground for recognition, yet several, of whom I was one, thought it would be proper to acknowledge the receipt of the letter, but in a manner which could not be construed as a recognition. Some two or three seemed to object to answering, because they thought they could not do so without implying a recognition.

I saw no difficulty in this, and feeling that it was right to treat with entire frankness and candor the men claiming to constitute the government, I have therefore written to Mr. Galvez the letter of the 26th instant, a copy of which I inclose.

In connection with this I refer to my dispatch No. 264, stating the explanation I then gave Mr. Galvez.

On the 25th of March I also wrote a note to Piérola, or rather his Secretary-General, explaining to him the ground upon which I should proceed with reference to recognition, to exactly the same effect, and almost in the same words as in the conversation with Galvez. (I also sent him copy of so much of Department dispatch No. 123, as relates to the desire of our government to bring about an early peace.)

The above note was sent by the private courier of a friend of mine, as the mails in that direction cannot be trusted at all, but its receipt has been acknowledged.

As to the progress which the Calderon government have been making I, refer you to my dispatches Nos. 277, 283, 285, 302, and 305.

Since my dispatch 302, the provisional government have been allowed to send some 225 more men, making about 300 in all, into the province of Junin, for the purpose, as I suppose, of allowing the congressmen from that region to come to Lima. But this force is too small to prevent Piérola's congress from meeting at Ayacucho on the 6th June, as it is reported and believed here that Piérola will bring them from the south at least 1,000 men.

Such is the position at present. There is no difference of opinion in the diplomatic corps as to the principles of recognition. But all seem now to have become satisfied that unless the provisional government shall succeed there will be little hope of an early peace.

I have, &c.,

I. P. CHRISTIANCY.

P. S.—JUNE 1.—I send inclosed copy and translation of telegram this day received by the dean of the diplomatic corps from Piérola's secretary-general, dated May 26. This movement may lead to delay in the recognition of the provisional government until it can be ascertained what success Piérola may have in obtaining a national representation.—I. P. C.

[Inclosure I in No. 310.]

Mr. Christiancy to Mr. Galvez.

LEGATION OF THE UNITED STATES,
Lima, Peru, May 26, 1881.

Señor Don M. M. GALVEZ.

I received your letter of April 30, informing me of the installation of the provisional government, of which Señor Doctor Don Francisco Garcia Calderon was said to be the head, and naming the other executive officers.

I have refrained from answering your letter hitherto, not by reason of any disrespect for or hostility to Mr. Calderon or to you, or to any of the persons mentioned as his cabinet. But (as I had the honor verbally to explain to you some time ago) because my government had acknowledged and instructed me to acknowledge the government of Piérola; and upon the principles upon which my government have heretofore acted in like cases I could not without its instructions, recognize another Government of Peru, hostile to that already recognized, until it shall clearly and satisfactorily appear to me that the majority of the people of Peru have adopted, or acquiesced in the new government. The moment this shall satisfactorily appear, I shall, on the part of my government, most cordially recognize the new government without waiting any instructions. I have carefully endeavored to obtain all the evidence in my power upon this point; and, though this new movement to establish a government in opposition to that of Piérola seems for the last few weeks to have made considerable progress in obtaining the approval of the people of Peru, I cannot yet say that the evidence is sufficiently clear, that it has, up to this time, been adopted by the majority.

Should it obtain a quorum of the congress which it has called together, this would be strong proof in its favor, and sufficient for me, unless it should appear at that time probable that the congress called by Piérola would be more likely to represent the majority, in which case I should have to wait a few days to ascertain the facts.

I have kept my government fully informed of the principles upon which I intended to act on this question of recognition, unless otherwise instructed, and though there has been ample time for receiving their instructions by mail, if not satisfied with the course I intend to pursue, I have yet received no instructions whatever upon this point; from which I am compelled to infer that there must be some mistake in the telegram from Paris published in El Orden of the 14th instant. Had I received such a telegram from my government, I should have promptly recognized the new government. But very clearly I cannot act upon this unofficial dispatch.

Please accept the assurance, &c.,

I. P. CHRISTIANCY.

[Inclosure 2 in No. 310.—Telegram.—Translation.]

(Received in Chala, May 26, at 8.40 p. m., from Arequipa, May 26, 1881.)

No. 190.

Señor JORGE DE TEZAMES PINTO,

Dean of the Diplomatic Corps, Lima:

His excellency the supreme chief, his secretary-general (subscribing), and suit, arrived yesterday at this city, his excellency having been the object of the warmest demonstrations of adhesion and enthusiasm in all the departments on his passage. We shall remain at Arequipa until the 15th June, and leave on that date for Ayacucho, in order to install on the first of July the national assembly, the meeting of which has been postponed to that date.

Be pleased to transmit this communication to the honorable colleagues of the diplomatic corps, of whom I subscribe myself their obedient servant,

AURELIO GARCÍA y GARCÍA.

No. 339.

Mr. Blaine to Mr. Hurlbut.

No. 2.] DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, June 15, 1881.

SIR: The deplorable condition of Peru, the disorganization of its government, and the absence of precise and trustworthy information as to the state of affairs now existing in that unhappy country, render it impossible to give you instructions as full and definite as I would desire.

Judging from the most recent dispatches from our ministers, you will probably find on the part of the Chilian authorities in possession of Peru a willingness to facilitate the establishment of the provisional government which has been attempted by Señor Calderon. If so you will do all you properly can to encourage the Peruvians to accept any reasonable conditions and limitations with which this concession may be accompanied. It is vitally important to Peru that she be allowed to resume the functions of a native and orderly government, both for the purposes of internal administration and the negotiation of peace. To obtain this end it would be far better to accept conditions which may be hard and unwelcome than by demanding too much to force the continuance of the military control of Chili. It is hoped that you will be able, in your necessary association with the Chilian authorities, to impress upon them that the more liberal and considerate their policy, the surer it will be to obtain a lasting and satisfactory settlement. The Peruvians cannot but be aware of the sympathy and interest of the people and Government of the United States, and will, I feel confident, be prepared to give to your representations the consideration to which the friendly anxiety of this government entitles them.

The United States cannot refuse to recognize the rights which the Chilian Government has acquired by the successes of the war, and it may be that a cession of territory will be the necessary price to be paid for peace. It would seem to be injudicious for Peru to declare that under no circumstances could the loss of territory be accepted as the result of negotiation. The great objects of the provisional authorities of Peru would seem to be to secure the establishment of a constitutional government, and next to succeed in the opening of negotiations for peace without the declaration of preliminary conditions as an ultimatum on either side. It will be difficult, perhaps, to obtain this from Chili; but as the Chilian Government has distinctly repudiated the idea that this was a war of conquest, the Government of Peru may fairly claim the opportunity to make propositions of indemnity and guarantee before submitting to a cession of territory. As far as the influence of the United States will go in Chili, it will be exerted to induce the Chilian Government to consent that the question of the cession of territory should be the subject of negotiation and not the condition precedent upon which alone negotiation shall commence. If you can aid the Government of Peru in securing such a result, you will have rendered the service which seems most pressing. Whether it is in the power of the Peruvian Government to make any arrangements at home or abroad, singly or with the assistance of friendly powers, which will furnish the necessary indemnity or supply the required guarantee, you will be better able to advise me after you have reached your post.

As you are aware more than one proposition has been submitted to the consideration of this government looking to a friendly intervention by which Peru might be enabled to meet the conditions which would probably be imposed. Circumstances do not seem at present opportune for such action; but if, upon full knowledge of the condition of Peru, you can inform this government that Peru can devise and carry into practical effect a plan by which all the reasonable conditions of Chili can be met without sacrificing the integrity of Peruvian territory, the Government of the United States would be willing to offer its good offices towards the execution of such a project.

As a strictly confidential communication, I inclose you a copy of instructions sent this day to the United States minister at Santiago. You will thus be advised of the position which this government assumes toward all the parties to this deplorable conflict. It is the desire of the United States to act in a spirit of the sincerest friendship to the three republics, and to use its influence solely in the interest of an honorable and lasting peace.

I am, &c.,

JAMES G. BLAINE.

No. 340.

Mr. Christiancy to Mr. Blaine.

No. 319.] LEGATION OF THE UNITED STATES,
Lima, Peru, June 16, 1881. (Received July 6.)

SIR: In reply to your dispatch No. 143 I have the honor to say that that dispatch places upon me the grave responsibility of determining as matters of fact three distinct propositions, upon none of which have I been able to obtain any very satisfactory evidence:

1st. Whether the provisional government of Señor Calderon is supported by the character and influence of Peru;

2d. Whether it is really endeavoring to restore constitutional government; and

3d. If so, whether it is with a view to order within and negotiation with Chili for peace.

The first question under present circumstances is a very difficult one to decide just now. If mere money or financial "influence" be referred to, this is to be found along the coast, which is completely controlled by the Chilians, and consists of the wealthy owners of sugar plantations and the mercantile class, who seek for peace at any price and upon any terms. But if "by influence" or the weight of influence upon political or government matters (which I conclude must be your meaning), then there is great room for doubt, and I am much inclined to think it may turn out to be against the provisional government. It is a very embarrassing question to decide.

Upon the other two questions I have no ground, except the professions of the provisional government, upon which to decide them; but I am inclined to believe they should be decided in the affirmative.

The first is the difficult question. The provisional government has not yet succeeded in getting the attendance of a quorum of congress, though it has a full quorum of the senate, but lacks twelve members of a quorum of the house.

At my request of yesterday the dean of the diplomatic corps has called a meeting of the corps for 2 o'clock to day, to enable me to get their opinion upon these questions of fact, but this will be too late for the mail to-day.

I had a full conference two days since with Señor Calderon, and have a favorable opinion of him.

But I yesterday had a conference with Admiral Lynch, commander of the Chilian forces here, and with Señor Godoy, the representative of Chili in political matters here, and I found at once that they do not want the provisional government of Peru recognized yet, both saying to me that they had not recognized it on the part of Chili, and that they did not wish it recognized by other nations until they had recognized it. I also yesterday ascertained from a perfectly reliable source, that the Chilian representatives here have, within a few days past, approached at least one of the commissioners by Piérola to negotiate peace, to know if such commissioners were still authorized to act, holding out to them hopes that they would still negotiate with him. The position is full of complications, but upon the whole it would certainly seem to be the object of Chili at present to play off one of these Peruvian governments against the other; to give Chili a fair pretext to hold permanent occupation of Peru. It may be that in a few days I may obtain sufficient information to bring the case within the principle you have laid, and if so, I shall act at once. Since I, as well as you and all true Americans, prefer a constitutional government to a dictatorship.

I am, &c.,

I. P. CHRISTIANCY.

P. S.—This provisional government is not, even as such, a government de facto in any part of Peru, except in a little hamlet of Magdalena.—I. P. C.

No. 341.

Mr. Christiancy to Mr. Blaine.

Confidential.

No. 320.] LEGATION OF THE UNITED STATES,
Lima, Peru, June 21, 1881. (Received July 18.)

SIR: Referring to my dispatch No. 319, I have the honor to inform you of the result of the diplomatic meeting therein referred to. I found it to be the opinion of the corps, 1st, that the provisional government (so called) is supported by the weight of character and political influence of Peru; 2d, that the purpose of that government is to restore constitutional government in Peru; 3d, that it seeks to restore internal order; 4th, that it wishes to make peace with Chili; but, 5th, that this provisional government (so called) cannot, under present circumstances, be considered a government de facto, so as to warrant its recognition on that ground.

I am inclined to concur with the corps in all the above points, though I still have some doubts upon the first, and am not without some suspicions as to the second, third, and fourth.

This might seem, at first view, to bring the case within the principles of your dispatch No. 143, and to authorize (though it does not instruct) me to recognize what is called the Calderon or provisional government. But your dispatch, when carefully considered, may, and perhaps must, be construed as having been written with the understanding that the Calderon government was a government de facto of at least a large part of Peru.

The fact is that it is not a government de facto, or in the exercise of the functions of government anywhere, except so far as the Chilian authorities choose to allow it to exercise any powers of the kind, and these are confined within very narrow limits. It has been allowed to exercise thus far full powers only in the little hamlet of Magdalena, and has been allowed to send a few hundred men to Huaray and a still smaller force to the department of Junin to drive out the prefects who had been appointed by Piérola and to get the members of congress from those places to come here. It has also prefects friendly to it in most of the western slope of the Andes, except in the south.

But the courts of justice have not been restored anywhere, not even in Lima, and the whole country, except what is held by Piérola, is subject to such martial law as the Chilian authorities see fit to impose. In short, the Calderon government has thus far been used only as the instrument of Chili to carry out her own purposes, and there are not wanting many intelligent Peruvians and neutrals here who believe that it is the purpose of the Calderon government to aid Chili in keeping Peru permanently under the control of Chili as a permanent conquest.

It is well known here that many men of wealth among the Peruvians prefer that the Chilians should govern the country, as they think it would establish a more permanent government than Peru is likely to, and that their property would be more safe, but even those would prefer a protectorate of or annexation to the United States.

Señor F. Garcia Calderon is a wealthy man, and the representative of the Goyeneches, the wealthiest family in Peru. I am inclined, nevertheless, to believe that he is acting in good faith to Peru, with the hope of establishing peace, but I do not feel certain of it. If he is acting in good faith, I am satisfied the Chilians are deceiving him.

Now, on looking carefully at your dispatch No. 143, I see clearly that one of your objects in recognizing the Calderon government is to bring about peace with Chili, which implies your desire for the continued national existence of Peru, and does not admit the idea of its permanent conquest by Chili.

But I am now fully satisfied that Chili does not intend to make peace with Peru at all unless driven to do so by outside pressure. For the grounds of this opinion I refer you to my last dispatch, No. 319, and wish now to say further, that on Sunday last (19th instant) Mr. Godoy, the political representative of Chili here, called upon me at the legation, and we had a free and general conversation upon the whole situation. I remarked to him (as I had before) that I had received instructions from my government under which I might feel authorized to recognize the Calderon government, which I had supposed and believed my government had supposed would be looked upon by Chili as rather friendly than hostile to Chili, inasmuch as the Calderon government had been encouraged by Chili. He again repeated that Chili had not yet recognized it. I said substantially that if the Calderon government should succeed in obtaining a quorum of congress it would be strong evidence that it represented the nation. To this he seemed to assent.

I further remarked, that while my government preserved its strict neutrality, it was anxious for peace between the belligerents at the earliest practicable period; and I thought this might be brought about if a quorum of congress should be obtained, or at least as soon as the government should be able to get back fully to a constitutional government. To this he replied, "It will be a very long time before a peace can be settled."

He did not know that I knew he and the Chilian authorities had been coquetting with the friends and commissioners of Piérola. But I could readily see, from this as well as the conversation referred to in my dispatch No. 319, that they did not wish any encouragement or prestige to be given to the Calderon government, except what they might choose to give; and I could not but infer they were playing off the Calderon government against that of Piérola, for the purpose of furnishing a plausible pretext for holding the whole of Peru, or so much of it as they could.

From this statement it will be readily seen that a literal compliance with the permission given in your dispatch to recognize the Calderon government, would be likely to violate its spirit and intent; and, before departing from the safe and generally approved rule of recognizing a new government, that it should appear to be a government de facto. I think I ought to wait, at least until the arrival of another mail (there having been no connection last week at the Isthmus), as in the mean time you will have received other dispatches from me which may enable you to give instructions more applicable to the present state of facts. I have thought it best to wait, at least till the arrival of the next mail, before acting, and as my successor, who will come with the latest instructions, may wish to have a clear field, I may wait till he arrives before making a final decision.

In coming to these conclusions I have done what I think you would have done, in view of all the circumstances, had you been in my place and acting under the like instructions.

No other foreign minister here is willing yet to recognize this Calderon government, and I think I see an anxiety on the part of some of them to see the United States depart from the generally received doctrine of recognizing new governments only when they have become governments de facto.

Whatever support the "Calderon government" may appear to have, it is the settled and unanimous opinion of all intelligent men here, that it would not last a day after the Chilian forces should leave the country. And my own opinion is, that if the United States should recognize it to-day, the Chilian authorities would take good care that any prestige it might gain from such recognition should be more than counterbalanced by the more stringent limitations it would impose upon any exercise of governmental powers.

I have, &c.,

I. P. CHRISTIANCY.

No. 342.

Mr. Christiancy to Mr. Blaine.

No. 322.] LEGATION OF THE UNITED STATES,
Lima, Peru, June 28, 1881. (Received July 18.)

SIR: Referring to my dispatch No. 320, I have now the honor further to say that I have been carefully considering the question of the recognition of the provisional government therein referred to, and having received nothing by the last mail in any way modifying your dispatch No. 143, and knowing that I had kept you fully informed of all the facts necessary to a decision, and seeing that the question whether the Calderon government was a government de facto was not expressly made a condition, and that the fact of your having already received Mr. Elmore as the confidential agent of that government, which I take to be a clear indication that you would expect me to recognize that government if I found the facts you had stated as hypothetical to be true, but more especially hearing a rumor here as having come from the United States that my successor would not come here until peace was settled, and, therefore, fearing that my neglect to make the requisition might be construed as a design on my part to delay his coming, I finally concluded, on the 26th instant, to recognize the provisional government as such, and I here inclose copy of my letter to Mr. Galvez, Minister of Foreign Affairs, making the recognition.

I must confess that, if left to act entirely to my own judgment, I should not have recognized this provisional government until it should have become a government de facto, or until it should have succeeded in assembling a quorum of congress, nor until we could have seen whether this congress or that of Piérola (national assembly) at Ayacucho should represent the most of the people of Peru. But I claim no right to set up my own judgment against that of my government, believing strict obedience to the wishes of my government my first and sole duty.

In making the recognition, I have thought it best to place it on the precise grounds indicated by your instructions, believing that it would have a better effect in aiding this incipient government by a clear intimation that our government was more inclined to encourage constitutional than dictatorial government, and that they wished to aid in restoring peace between these belligerent republics.

I have, &c.,

I. P. CHRISTIANCY.

[Inclosure in No. 322.]

Mr. Christiancy to Mr. Galvez.

LEGATION OF THE UNITED STATES,
Lima, Peru, June 26, 1881.

MONSIEUR LE MINISTRE: My government, having been informed of the organization at Magdalena of what, in your circular note to me of April 30 last, is styled a provisional government under the presidency of Señor Doctor Don Francisco Garcia Calderon, has given me instructions, in substance, that if I find, 1st, that such provisional government is supported by the weight of character and influence of Peru; 2d, that it is endeavoring to restore constitutional government, with a view both to internal order and negotiations with Chili for peace, then I am to recognize it as a provisional government.

Believing, from the best evidence I can obtain, that each of these hypothetical propositions is sufficiently established in the affirmative, I therefore formally express such recognition on the part of the Government of the United States.

Please accept the assurance, &c.,

I. P. CHRISTIANCY.

No. 343.

Mr. Christiancy to Mr. Blaine.

No. 327.] LEGATION OF THE UNITED STATES,
Lima, Peru, July 6, 1881. (Received July 26.)

SIR: Referring to your dispatch No. 148, and to my dispatch No. 322, I have the honor to state that, as I had some reason to fear when I wrote the last dispatch, I have still more reason to fear now, that the recognition of the provisional government of Francisco Garcia Calderon was premature, I have now further to say that the forces of that government sent to the north have, some 58 to 68 of them (for the reports do not agree), gone over to Admiral Montero, a partisan of Piérola, and that those sent into the department of Junin have been effectually driven out by the friends of Piérola within the last few days, and their prospects for forming a government are not as good now as before; yet, in view of your dispatch No. 150, as well as your previous dispatches, it is very clear that you had determined upon the recognition of the provisional government, and that I only complied with your wish in making the recognition.

I fear, however, this recognition will lead to many complications. But I have obeyed what I was compelled to consider your orders.

I am, &c.,

I. P. CHRISTIANCY.

No. 344.

Mr. Christiancy to Mr. Blaine.

No. 330.] LEGATION OF THE UNITED STATES,
Lima, Peru, July 12, 1881. (Received August 2.)

SIR: I have the honor to inclose to you copy and translation of the circular letter of Mr. Galvez, secretary of foreign relations of Peru, dated yesterday, stating the installation of Congress, and the law passed continuing Mr. Calderon as President until the people shall elect another, &c., of which I have acknowledged the receipt.

A quorum of Congress was obtained, but I think there is room for doubt whether the means adopted to get some of the members here were strictly regular.

I have, &c.,

I. P. CHRISTIANCY.

[Inclosure in No. 330.—Translation.]

Mr. Galvez to Mr. Christiancy.

CIRCULAR.

DEPARTMENT OF FOREIGN RELATIONS,
Magdalena, July 11, 1881.

SIR: I have the honor to bring to the knowledge of your excellency that the national Congress having been installed yesterday in the town of Chorillos, it has enacted a law by which the powers conferred by the people upon His Excellency Francisco Garcia Calderon as President of the republic, are confirmed and continued according to the political constitution of 1860, until some other citizen shall be elected by the people to replace him.

Craving your excellency to inform the Government of the United States of these facts, it is grateful to me to reiterate to your excellency the assurance of my high consideration.

M. M. GALVEZ.

Hon. I. P. CHRISTIANCY,
Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary of the United States of America.

No. 345.

Mr. Hurlbut to Mr. Blaine.

MEMORANDUM.

At this city I have had opportunity to see the principal newspapers of the South American republics. A very strong and general sentiment appears in all of them against any dismemberment of Peru.

This feeling is naturally strongest in the Argentine Republic, whose relations with Chili are complicated; but it is expressed with much strength of argument by Colombia, Venezuela, and Ecuador.

All these articles refer to the agreement of 1810, in which without special definition of boundaries the doctrine of "Uti possidetis" was accepted as the basis.

Chili is charged with being the first to break up the harmony, and her pretensions are regarded as dangerous to the entire family on the continent.

There is no doubt that these articles reflect the feelings of the ruling classes.

Colombia has invited the other South American states to a congress at Panama, to establish among other things the rule that all disputes shall be determined by arbitration.

The Argentine Republic is now giving transit over its territory for arms and munitions and other supplies to La Paz, the capital of Bolivia, and thus to the forces of Piérola and Campero. As that republic has good reason to apprehend war with Chili, and is now anxiously waiting for an iron-clad from England, so as to meet the Chilian navy on equal terms, it is good strategy for her to keep alive the war in Peru and Bolivia to occupy the Chilian forces, until they can be met on equal terms.

This purpose of the Argentines will have a tendency to prolong the war and to strengthen the party of Piérola, to the extent of causing serious embarrassment in negotiation for peace.

I am inclined to believe that the Chilians themselves are embarrassed by their present position, as it is not at all impossible that the Argentines may avail themselves of the first opportunity after they are prepared to declare war upon Chili.

The drift of public sentiment and the attitude of her nearest and most powerful neighbor are evidently producing some effect in Santiago.

It is lamentable that at this moment there should be a double government in Peru, one of which in the end will probably have to be suppressed by force. An effective union between Piérola and the government of La Paz, in the Trans-Andine departments of Peru and Bolivia, if supported even passively by the Argentine Government, can be so handled by a brave and energetic man as to be very annoying and very expensive to Chili.

The consul-general of Peru, at this place, Colonel Larranegra, is a very intense follower of Piérola, and denies the authority of the Calderon government; while the Peruvian minister resident to Central America, Thomas Lameo, now in this city, considers the Calderon government the only hope of peace and of return to constitutional government.

From the evident difference in character of the two men I consider it additional evidence of the fact as generally reported, that the better classes of Peru support the Calderon government, yet it is to be remembered that it is from the inferior classes of society in these countries that revolutions are recruited.

No. 346.

Mr. Blaine to Mr. Hurlbut.

No. 7.] DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, August 4, 1881.

SIR: As you are aware several communications have been recently addressed to this Department in reference to certain alleged claims of citizens of the United States upon the Government of Peru, with most urgent request for the good offices of the United States Government in their behalf. While I cannot anticipate that in the present distressed and unsettled condition of that country our representations, however urgent, will receive prompt or satisfactory attention, I deem it best, in view of possible contingencies, to furnish you with general instructions. The two claims for which special consideration and active intervention have been asked are those known as the Cochet claim and the Landreau claim. In reference to the Cochet claim there has been no information laid before the Department of a sufficiently definite character to warrant a specific instruction, and in the absence of the requisite data here you will be left to take such steps as may seem expedient on investigating the origin and character of the claim. The primal point at issue is whether any American citizen or association of citizens has acquired an interest in the claim in a manner entitling him or them to the good offices of this government in making any representation to Peru. As the American holders of the claim or their attorneys will be on the ground, you will no doubt be placed in possession of all the facts, but you will take no step committing your government to the use of its good offices without first reporting in full to the Department for well considered and definite instruction. In regard to the Landreau claim, I see no reason to differ from the conclusion to which my predecessors seem to have arrived. John C. Landreau was an American citizen, apparently entitled under a lawful contract to reasonable compensation for important services to the Peruvian Government. In conformity with the established practice of our government, while you cannot in such case make an official demand for the settlement of this claim, you will employ your good offices to procure its prompt and just consideration. You will have observed that in the contract made by the Peruvian Government with Landreau and his brother it is expressly stipulated that any questions arising under its provisions should be submitted to the judicial tribunal of Peru, and that in no case shall diplomatic intervention be asked. You will also notice that the supreme court of Peru, sustaining a decision of the court below, has ruled that it had no jurisdiction of this contract, thus leaving Landreau in a position in which he can neither appeal to his own government nor obtain a judgment from the tribunals to which, by the contract, he was authorized to apply.

While this government will not, as at present informed, undertake to construe the contract or to decide upon the extent of the compensation due Landreau, you are instructed to call the attention of the Peruvian Government to this injustice, and say that the Government of the United States will expect some adequate and proper means to be provided by which Landreau can obtain a judicial decision upon his rights. If the constitution of the Peruvian courts or the interpretation of the law by Peruvian judges deprives Landreau of the justice which the contract itself guaranteed him, then, in the opinion of this government, Peru is bound in duty and in honor to do one of three things, viz: Supply an impartial tribunal, extend the jurisdiction of the present courts, or submit the case of Landreau to arbitration. I desire also to call your attention to the fact that in the anticipated treaty which is to adjust the relations of Chili and Peru, the latter may possibly be compelled to submit to the loss of territory. If the territory to be surrendered should include the guano deposits which were discovered by Landreau, and for the discovery of which Peru contracted to pay him a royalty upon the tonnage removed, then the Peruvian Government should in the treaty stipulate with Chili for the preservation and payment to Landreau of the amount due under his contract. If transfer be made to Chili it should be understood that this claim of an American citizen, if fairly adjudicated in his favor, shall be treated as a proper lien on the property to which it attaches, and that Chili accepts the cession with that condition annexed. As it may be presumed that you will be fully informed as to the progress of the negotiations between Chili and Peru for a treaty of peace, you will make such effort as you judiciously can to secure for Landreau a fair settlement of his claim. You will take special care to notify both the Chilian and Peruvian authorities of the character and status of the claim in order that no definitive treaty of peace shall be made in disregard of the rights which Landreau may be found to possess.

I am, &c.,

JAMES G. BLAINE.

No. 347.

Mr. Hurlbut to Mr. Blaine.

No. 2.] LEGATION OF THE UNITED STATES,
Lima, Peru, August 10, 1881. (Received September 2.)

SIR: I propose, in this dispatch, to lay before you the precise situation of affairs in this country, so far as I have been able to ascertain such situation, both military and political.

The military situation is perfectly simple. Peru is effectually conquered. She has no longer any army or navy; she has no soldiers, no ships of war, no fortresses, no guns in position or in the field, no munitions of war, no means of buying any, no revenue, no treasury.

War, as such, is finished, so far as she is concerned, and has been for six months.

The Chilians have captured or destroyed her navy, have occupied, and still hold her entire sea-coast, her capital city, and her custom-houses. They have occupied in force the territory of Tarapaca, with its nitrate beds, and they hold the guano deposits, and all the accessible and fertile valleys debouching on the sea. They collect the duties at all the ports, they sell the nitrates and guano, they levy heavy contributions on the cities, and on the planters in the country held by them. The duties at the custom-houses collected by them in June were $400,000 in silver.

In the interior there is some show of resistance, but infinitely more show than substance. Secure in the physical obstacles to the march of troops, small bands of irregulars travel over the slopes of the Andes, more dangerous to their countrymen than to the Chilians. Regular war is out of the question, and, for all practical purposes, armed resistance to the Chilian force has ceased.

In so far as regards the political situation of the country in its internal relations, I consider that the government of Garcia Calderon was properly recognized by my predecessor. It is not a regular or constitutional government, but it is infinitely more so than that of Piérola, which was a violent usurpation, autocratic and despotic. Around the Calderon government all the better class of men, the holders of property, the men of education, the friends of constitutional order and of peace, are disposed to assemble.

There has been, and is now in session a national Congress, representing in its number a very decided majority, and a full quorum of senators and representatives, long since legitimately elected under all constitutional forms.

This Congress has recognized Mr. Calderon, and re-elected him as Provisional President. Calderon and his cabinet are perfectly ready to give way, at any time, to any man of character, who can unite all elements in the nation, and who may be approved by the Congress.

To this end negotiations are now going on with Piérola and his adherents. It is hoped they may succeed, and that a single head of the republic may be recognized by all.

The element now represented by the Calderon government desires peace, and Congress has authorized the Provisional President to enter into negotiations for that purpose.

I now propose to state to you the difficulties and special hardships which surround the Calderon government in their honest attempt to procure fair conditions of peace.

In the first place, the Chilian authorities have never recognized this government in any clear and distinct form. It has, from the beginning, been tolerated, consented to, and in some particulars, aided, by the Chilian military authorities; a procedure on their part which may either be from a real desire to re-establish order in Peru, or more probably to foster a division in the nation, which would still farther diminish her capacity for resistance.

Pursuant to the resolution of Congress, Mr. Calderon named his plenipotentiaries to confer on terms of peace with Mr. Manuel Godoy, the Chilian commissioner. Mr. Godoy has so far declined to receive these plenipotentiaries, and the reason is evident. By reception and the exchange of credentials the government of Mr. Calderon would be effectually recognized as the authority in Peru. Godoy then proposed to confer directly with President Calderon, but insisted that the conferences should be of a private character. To this the Peruvians replied, that the making of peace was an affair of the highest public nature, with which they could only deal in their public character, and reiterated their request for exchange of credentials. Mr. Godoy has taken time to-day to refer the question by telegraph to Santiago.

It is the purpose of the Peruvians to insist on recognition, and to prolong the discussion as much as possible.

I gather from various sources, and with reasonable certainty, the actual purposes of Chili.

It appears to be the declared intention of the existing government in Chili to make the cession of the department of Mochequa up to the river Ilo, the sine qua non of peace.

To such cession it is simply impossible for any Peruvian Government to consent; first, because public indignation would overthrow any that should so consent; second, because the constitution of Peru expressly forbids the execution of any treaty which diminishes the territorial integrity or reduces the sovereignty of Peru; and third, because the possession of that territory by Peru is the only visible means of future support, and of payment of their large public debt.

Yet it is in the power of the Chilian military authorities to extinguish the Calderon government, and thus leave the country to anarchy; and I feel satisfied that if they cannot obtain from Calderon submission to such terms as they are likely to dictate, they will dissipate his government, unless it shall be sustained by some stronger power.

Mr. Calderon says to me, that he will not consent, in any event, to the division of Peruvian territory, and that he will endure any consequences. He also says, that he is prepared to pay any indemnity in reason, to twenty, thirty, or even forty millions of dollars, and inasmuch as the Chilian Government officially state that $30,000,000 is the limit of their war expenses, and that they have received large sums, the indemnity would seem to be abundant. I fear that Peru, alone, cannot hope for endurable terms of peace from Chili, yet although utterly beaten in the war, she ought still to be considered as a nation.

All South America, except Brazil, is opposed to the pretensions of Chili, and all, without exception, look to the United States as the sole hope for the future of Peru, and as the only power capable of checking this greed of conquest.

It is, in my deliberate and carefully considered judgment, the proper time for the United States to act as a friend to both parties, and to say very kindly, but very firmly, to Chili, that war has fulfilled all its legitimate purposes; that longer continuance of the state of war would be disastrous to both countries, and an unnecessary invasion of the rights of neutrals, engaged in commerce or owning as they do, large properties in Peru; and that a peace honorable to both countries should be concluded as soon as possible, on fair terms as to indemnity. It will be remembered that Chili in the Arica conferences denied any purpose of acquiring territory by conquest, and placed her demand for cession of territory solely upon the ground that Bolivia and Peru had not the means to pay a money indemnity.

Inasmuch as Peru offers to pay and can pay a money indemnity, the forcible annexation of territory ought not to be permitted. By such action on the part of our government we would gain the highest influence in South America, we should subserve the purposes of a truer civilization, and inaugurate a higher style of national and international law on this continent.

In whatever form this may be done, if done at all, it ought to be done very speedily, and as a very serious emergency may arise at any time, I should be happy to receive from the Department by telegraph, some indication of approval or disapproval of my views.

As I am at present advised, after careful consideration of the instructions given to myself and Mr. Kilpatrick, and the personal conferences held with you, I shall not interfere with Mr. Godoy or his negotiations unless it shall be apparent that the purpose is to crush out the national life of Peru. In that case I shall calmly and strongly protest against such a course, and indicate in distinct terms that such action does not at all conform to the wishes of the United States, and meets with its disapproval. This, however, only in case the emergency shall arise before I hear from the Department.

I am well aware that the proper channel of communication is at Santiago, but inasmuch as the peace conferences have been undertaken here, I should desire full instructions.

The condition is very serious, and demands prompt action if it be the purpose of the United States to save Peru from being obliterated as an independent power.

You may be assured that I shall not precipitate matters, but shall endeavor in all ways to have the preliminary negotiations prolonged, that you may have full time for consideration and for transmission of instructions both to Lima and Santiago. I inclose copy of a confidential letter to General Kilpatrick, and close by repeating that no such opportunity for the just extension of American influence in the interest of humanity has been presented to my knowledge, and that the failure to use it would, in my judgment, relegate the whole of South America over to European influences, which are openly or covertly hostile to the United States, at all events so far as their representatives on this coast are concerned.

The English steamer leaves Panama every Wednesday, and a telegram to that point would reach me in nine days after its delivery.

I have, &c.,

S. A. HURLBUT.

[Inclosure in No. 2]

Mr. Hurlbut to General Kilpatrick.

LEGATION OF THE UNITED STATES,
Lima, Peru, August 5, 1881.

MY DEAR SIR: I have assumed charge of this legation on the 3d instant, relieving Mr. Christiancy. I have seen enough of the situation here to assure me that the hope of a permanent and honorable peace is not likely to be realized unless the conquerors exercise far more moderation in their demands than now appears probable. No government under any form can stand in Peru, which would consent to the cession of territory. It is understood that the Chilian authorities will demand a cession which shall include the whole or a large part of the department of Mochequa, and all to the south of that. As such cession would include the most productive part of the Peruvian territory, on which the debt of the republic is largely secured, it is evident that nothing but the last extremity would justify such surrender.

You are undoubtedly aware of the wishes of our government in the matter. These wishes I understand to be, 1st. That peace on fair and honorable terms should be arranged as speedily as possible. 2d. That the integrity of the Peruvian territory should be maintained. 3d. That full, fair, and reasonable indemnity ought to be made to Chili for the expenses of the war.

The United States are not disposed to recognize on this continent the European notion of addition to territory by conquest, and as we are becoming day by day more interested in the commerce of the Pacific, it becomes daily of more importance to us that peace should prevail.

Now it appears to me that a peace dictated in humiliating terms by a conqueror, or extorted under pressure of superior force, necessarily brings with it the seeds of perpetual war, and that it would be the most unfortunate thing for the future prosperity of Chili. If that nation proposes to pursue the path of conquest and to depend upon military strength for her future greatness, she will array against herself the public sentiment, not only of America, but of the civilized world. Her highest interest, it seems to me, is to conclude her successful campaign by such terms of peace as may leave Peru an independent nation, and without any other humiliation than that which necessarily comes from defeat in arms. I am perfectly sure that terms of money indemnity can be arranged. I am equally sure that to demand, as condition of peace, the surrender of the south, will be equivalent to denial of peace at all, for the reason given, that no government which concedes this can live. The result will be disorganization in Peru, the formation of guerrilla bands, the destruction of vast amounts of property, and a heavy burden and continual drain upon the resources of Chili, both in money and in men. At present we recognize the government of Garcia Calderon, to bridge over the present chasm. He has in session a very decided majority of the lawfully elected members of Congress. Congress has authorized him to treat with Señor Godoy on terms of peace. I am afraid that that astute diplomat intends to play fast and loose. As yet he has not recognized Calderon officially, nor has he consented to exchange credentials and powers with his plenipotentiaries. This of course would be complete recognition, which undoubtedly should precede any conference on matters of substance. In other words, I think he intends to recognize only in the event of obtaining his own terms, and if he fail in this, to say "you represent nobody, are not a government, and we decline to confer farther with you."

My own opinion is, that it is full time for the United States to take a very decided part in the affairs of South America, and I shall communicate all the facts of the situation to the Secretary of State. * * * *

Your friend and colleague,

S. A. HURLBUT.

No. 348.

Mr. Hurlbut to Mr. Blaine.

No. 5.] LEGATION OF THE UNITED STATES,
Lima, Peru, August 17, 1881. (Received September 17.)

SIR: On Sunday last Señor Godoy, Chilian commissioner, had an extended conference with Provisional President Calderon, in which he insisted that the peace conferences should be conducted between himself and Calderon in his private capacity, and if the results were satisfactory then the formal treaty should be executed by plenipotentiaries already named by Calderon.

This proposition was firmly refused by Calderon, who insisted on his part that he must be recognized either tacitly by recognition of his plenipotentiaries or openly in an official communication.

The conference was then adjourned until to-day (Wednesday).

On yesterday, to the surprise of every one, Godoy left on the steamer for Santiago without any further communication. Various reasons are assigned for this sudden departure. He was undoubtedly called home by telegraph, probably for the purpose of more full discussion.

It is understood that the Santa Maria Government proposes to withdraw the whole Chilian force to Tarapacá; and as a sudden withdrawal would be likely, in the present state of things, to be followed by mob rule and great violence in Lima, and as Godoy's family are largely interested in property in this city, it is thought that he has gone home to press this consideration upon Santa Maria.

In the event of such withdrawal of Chilian troops, without first permitting the Peruvian authorities to supply themselves with arms, the only means of avoiding or controlling the "commune" here, will be the Urban Guard, consisting of foreigners, and they are wretchedly supplied with arms.

Piérola is still issuing proclamations, and is said to have about 5,000 men. He failed to assemble a congress of any pretense to regularity, and calls his gathering a national assembly. The members were dictated by himself and ought to be unanimous.

The situation continues to present little hope, unless the United States can and will exercise a salutary pressure upon the belligerents, for which, in due course of time, both parties will be properly grateful.

I have, &c.,

S. A. HURLBUT.

No. 349.

Mr. Hurlbut to Mr. Blaine.

No. 6.] LEGATION OF THE UNITED STATES,
Lima, Peru, August 24, 1881. (Received September 17.)

SIR: Since my last (No. 5) nothing special has occurred in relation to the questions between Chili and Peru.

On yesterday I had a long conversation with Mr. Quimper, formerly minister of internal affairs of this country. He is a man of strong intelligence, thoroughly acquainted with this country, and on intimate terms with Santa Maria and the leading spirits of Chili. He gave me valuable information on two points:

First. That if the Calderon government shall succeed in negotiating peace without cession of territory all factions would at once disappear.

Second. That from his private letters from Santa Maria he finds that the tone of the Chilian demands is lowered, and they talk now of indemnity in other form than territorial.

Much of this, I believe, is owing to the idea, current in Chili as well as here, of a probable action by the United States to secure peace; of which action the people at large have very vague and extravagant notions.

Rumors of all kinds are current, all, however, based upon the same premise, that in some form or other the United States will be able to check the extravagant demands of Chili, and her tendency to dictate rather than discuss terms of settlement.

I am more than ever convinced that a firm and temperate statement of the views of our government will control the action of Chili. Meanwhile time, which is an important element for Peru, has been gained, for negotiations cannot now be open before the 1st of October.

If Chili will meet Peru in discussion upon the terms of peace as equal meets with equal, and not as an imperious dictator, terms can be arranged.

The voice of the United States can secure that, and for that voice I think both governments now wait.

I have, &c.,

S. A. HURLBUT.

No. 350.

Mr. Hurlbut to Mr. Blaine.

No. 8.] LEGATION OF THE UNITED STATES,
Lima, Peru, August 27, 1881. (Received September 27.)

SIR: I was favored on the 24th instant by a visit from Admiral Lynch, commanding the Chilian army of occupation.

In the course of this visit he introduced of his own accord the question between Chili and Peru, and said to me that there were many rumors afloat as to the attitude of the United States, and that he begged me to tell him frankly what I understood to be the position of our government. He further said that he did not ask this in any diplomatic sense, but wanted a free statement from me for his own guidance and information. I answered that there was no concealment nor wish to conceal on my part what the sentiments of the United States were, and that I would tell him exactly what we believed to be the rights and duties of the two parties. This I did verbally, and further said to him that I should at once reduce my views to writing to avoid any misapprehension.

Accordingly, on the 25th August, I forwarded to him the written statement inclosed, to which I ask your attention.

On receipt of this communication the admiral at once proceeded to confer with the British minister, and within three hours from the reception of my statement both the British and French ministers visited President Calderon, offered their good offices, and informed him that they fully believed that through Admiral Lynch they could influence Chili to an honorable peace. They also said to him that peace could be arranged without cession of territory. Calderon, to whom I had sent a copy of my statement to Lynch, understood perfectly the sequence of affairs, and attributes the whole of their sudden and favorable interest in Peruvian affairs to the effect of the memorandum, especially as both the English and French ministers have uniformly told him heretofore that Chili would not be content except with cession of territory, and have as uniformly advised him to consent to such cession. The change was so abrupt and so favorable that it can hardly be explained on any other basis.

I am informed that Admiral Lynch sent a copy of the memorandum to his government, and I sent one to General Kilpatrick for his information and for such action as he might think best to take.

I am happy to say that the Calderon government express themselves as very much pleased with the memorandum.

I am greatly obliged to Admiral Lynch for giving me the opportunity of formal expression of my views, as otherwise it would have appeared intrusive, and perhaps impertinent, to have offered such a statement.

I am confident that you will approve the substance of the memorandum, and I would like General Kilpatrick to be instructed to express similar views in case of opportunity given.

Mr. Christiancy was in the questionable habit of calling together the diplomatic corps and taking counsel on almost all questions, which practically emasculated the United States and deprived them of their proper leadership. The English and French ministers seem somewhat aggrieved, or pretend to be, at action of any kind by me without concurrence, but, as I stated to one of them, the position of the United States is its own, and only to be determined by itself.

I have, &c.,

S. A. HURLBUT.

[Inclosure in No. 8.]

Mr. Hurlbut to Admiral Lynch.

LIMA, August 25, 1881.

ADMIRAL: In order to prevent any misconstruction as to the conversation I had with you on yesterday as to the condition of affairs between Peru and Chili, I have thought it best to reduce the statement to writing.

MEMORANDUM.

Without any reference to the causes of the war, I understand my government to be of the opinion that all legitimate purposes of war have been accomplished by the overwhelming defeat of the Peruvian armies, the capture or destruction of their navy, and the occupation of the capital and entire sea-coast.

When organized and respectable resistance has ceased the state of war ought to cease. That commerce and the rights of neutrals have been sufficiently injured; and that the large interests in Peru which are held by foreigners, many of them Americans, should not longer be imperiled by the unnecessary prolongation of the state of war.

For these reasons, and because of the friendly feeling of the United States to both parties, we are of the opinion that peace is the first duty of both nations.

I wish to state further, that while the United States recognize all the rights which a conqueror gains under the laws of civilized war, they do not approve of war for the purpose of territorial aggrandizement, nor of the violent dismemberment of a nation, except as a last resort and in extreme emergencies. As there never has been any question of boundaries between Peru and Chili, and therefore no frontiers to regulate, and as Chili has repeatedly, publicly, and officially disclaimed any purpose or design of forcible annexation of territory, we are clearly of opinion that such action now would not comport with the dignity and public faith of Chili, and would be disastrous to the future tranquillity of both countries by establishing a very serious grievance, which would constantly tend to manifest itself in disturbances.

The United States concede, as a matter of public law, that Chili has the right (under the code of war) to full indemnity for the expenses of the war; and that Peru ought to pay such indemnity as may be agreed on by the parties, or be determined by a disinterested arbiter, in case they cannot agree (if such mode be selected); and further, that Chili has the right to demand securities, if time is given for the payment.

But we are also very clearly of the opinion that Peru ought to have the opportunity, in full and free discussion of the terms of peace, to offer such indemnity as may be satisfactory; and that it is contrary to the rules which should prevail among enlightened nations to proceed at once, and as a sine quâ non of peace, to transfer territory, undoubtedly Peruvian, to the jurisdiction of Chili, without first demonstrating the inability or unwillingness of Peru to furnish indemnity in some other form.

Such a course on the part of Chili would meet with decided disfavor on the part of the United States.

It ought to be borne constantly in mind that Chili has won military reputation. and can afford to deal not only justly, but liberally. Peru has lost military reputation, and cannot afford much further humiliation, and that it is never wise to drive even a con quered people into desperation. Chili has acquired her high place among the nations by the benefits of a settled government; by due enforcement of the laws; by the labor and industry of her people; in short, by the arts of peace. To this she has added, in this war, splendid triumphs by land and sea. The United States would deeply regret if she should change her course and be carried away on a career of conquest, because the military and aggressive spirit would interfere with her true progress, excite dangerous animosities, and combine many elements against her. We are, therefore, of the opinion that the act of seizure of Peruvian territory and annexing the same to Chili, whether done by mere superior force or by dictating the same as an imperative condition of the cessation of hostilities, in manifest contradiction of previous disclaimers of such purpose by Chili, would justly be regarded, by other nations, as evidence that Chili had entered upon the path of aggression and conquest for the purpose of territorial aggrandizement. The United States desire, above all things, that peace should continue among the South American republics, and that commerce and industry should combine to develop their wonderful resources to their own advantage, and for the benefit of the world, and we are unable to see any good reason why the state of war should much longer continue, to the serious prejudice of such vast interests, nor any good reason why peace, on terms of justice, should not be consummated at an early period, without unnecessary humiliation to one party and with full satisfaction of all the appropriate demands of the other.

S. A. HURLBUT.

No. 351.

Mr. Blaine to Mr. Elmore.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, August 27, 1881.

SIR: I have had the honor to receive from your hands the letter whereby his excellency the minister of foreign relations of Peru acquaints me with your selection by the President of that republic as its minister resident accredited to this government.

The critical condition of the President of the United States at the present time forbids any immediate arrangement for the formal presentation of your credentials, but it will afford me, in the name of this government, great pleasure to enter forthwith into full diplomatic relations with you pending the observance of that formality. To this end I beg that you will kindly transmit to me now the office copy of the letter of credence which you bear from the President of Peru, leaving to a later day the presentation of the original to the President.

Agreeably to your verbal request, I have the pleasure to send you herewith a copy of the note of Señor Galvez, which you handed to me in our recent interview on the 26th instant.

Accept, sir, &c.,

JAMES G. BLAINE.

No. 352.

Mr. Elmore to Mr. Blaine.

[Translation.]

LEGATION OF PERU,
Washington, August 29, 1881. (Received August 30.)

SIR: I have had the honor to receive your excellency's esteemed letter of 27th instant, in which, referring to the communication addressed to your excellency by the minister of foreign relations of Peru, under date of June 15, 1881, and which I had the pleasure to place in your hands on the 26th of the present month, announcing to your excellency the recall of my predecessor, the chargé d'affaires Señor Ignacio García, and my appointment as minister resident of Peru to the Government of the United States. Your excellency is so good as to inform me that the critical condition of his excellency the President of the United States at the present time forbids any immediate arrangement for the formal presentation of my credentials; but that it will be agreeable to your excellency, in the name of your government, to enter forthwith into full diplomatic relations with me pending the observance of that formality. To this end you ask me to transmit to you now the office copy of my letter of credence from the President of Peru, leaving to a later date the presentation of the original to his excellency the President of the United States.

I beg to offer to your excellency, Mr. Secretary, my sincere thanks for this proof of the friendly disposition of your excellency's government, and I herewith have the pleasure to inclose the office copy and a translation of my letter of credence.

I also thank your excellency for the copy of the note of Señor Galvez, which you kindly sent me.

While continuing my most earnest prayers for the recovery of his excellency President Garfield, I have the honor to renew to your excellency the assurances of my highest and most distinguished consideration.

J. F. ELMORE.

[Inclosure in Mr. Elmore's note of August 29, 1881.—Translation.]

President of Peru to President of the United States.

Francisco Garcia Calderon, Provisional President of the Republic of Peru.

To His Excellency the President of the United States of America:

SIR: My most earnest and constant desire being to cultivate and draw closer the relations of friendship and good harmony which happily exist and are kept up unchangeable between Peru and the United States of America, I hasten to inform your excellency that I have chosen Dr. Don Juan Federico Elmore with the object that he may reside in the United States as the minister resident of Peru.

The intimate knowledge I have of the qualities which distinguished Dr. Don Juan Federico Elmore, and of his zeal for the public service, fully satisfies me as to the manner in which he will fulfill the high duties intrusted to him.

I hope that the person of this minister will be agreeable to your excellency, and that you will please honor him with a kind reception, giving full faith and credit to whatever he may say in the name of Peru, and more especially when expressing to your excellency my desire to maintain the good and friendly relations and the cordial intelligence existing with the Republic of the United States, for whose prosperity and that of your excellency I offer my most sincere wishes.

I beg your excellency to accept the expression of my highest consideration.

Written, signed, sealed, and countersigned by the minister of state in the department of foreign relations, at Magdalena, Lima, on the 14th day of the month of June, in the year 1881.

[L. S.]

F. GARCIA CALDERON.

El ministro de relaciones exteriores.

M. M. GALVEZ.

No. 353.

Mr. Blaine to Mr. Elmore.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, August 31, 1881.

SIR: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your note of the 29th instant, and of the office copy of the letter accrediting you as minister resident of Peru in Washington, which accompanied the same.

In accordance with the signification of my note of the 27th instant, the Department takes much pleasure in welcoming you as the diplomatic representative of Peru in the United States, and I trust before long to arrange the ceremony of your presentation to the President.

Accept, sir, &c.,

JAMES G. BLAINE.

No. 354.

Mr. Hurlbut to Mr. Blaine.

No. 11.] LEGATION OF THE UNITED STATES,
Lima, Peru, September 13, 1881. (Received ———.)

SIR: Negotiations are in progress between the Calderon government and the military chiefs of the north and center, Montero and Cacères, looking to a recognition of that government by these parties. I am inclined to think they will be successful; and in that case the Piérola faction will lose two-thirds of its strength and the whole of its prestige.

I have been very freely consulted in the matter by the agents of both parties, and have no doubt that the attitude assumed by me, as representative of the United States, in urging union, has had a very important effect.

Piérola seems to have lost his head completely, and has issued decrees of a nature so utterly inhuman as to alienate from him many elements of strength. He has issued orders to all his prefects to arrest and try by summary court-martial all persons who acknowledge, aid, or support the Calderon government, and if found guilty to shoot him at once. He has also imposed very heavy contributions on the property of all such persons within his lines, and orders his subordinates, in case payment shall not be made in eight days, to sell or to destroy such property.

These decrees are published in his official paper in Ayacucho, and are in my possession.

On the 10th day of September instant I received a letter from Señor García y García, secretary for Piérola, directed to me as minister, intended evidently to convince me that Piérola was in reality the choice of Peru.

Knowing, as Mr. Garcia did, that the United States had already recognized the Calderon government, it was a singular procedure, and almost an impertinence.

I took occasion to answer him at some length, and inclose a translation of his letter, and a copy of my reply.

I communicated to Calderon the letter of García and my answer, because I considered it a matter of good faith to do so, and I imagine he will use the documents in his correspondence with Montero and Cacères.

Nothing further will be known, as I suppose, of the intentions of Chili until after the 18th, when the Santa Maria government will commence.

Opinions are divided in Chili whether to withdraw their forces to Tarapaca, or to continue an indefinitely prolonged occupation of Peru. The latter, in my judgment, ought not to be permitted. Commercial and local interests, in which our people are largely interested, are perishing day by day in this abnormal state of affairs, and a stop ought to be put to it. I have in previous dispatches given my views very fully and only await an answer from the Department.

We are masters of the situation, if we choose so to be.

I am, sir, &c.,

S. A. HURLBUT.

[Inclosure 1 in No. 11.—Translation.]

Señor García to Mr. Hurlbut.

GENERAL DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Ayacucho, August 23, 1881.

SIR: The presence in Peru of an envoy of the great American Republic is always the cause of lively pleasure to my fellow citizens, whose sentiments of regard and admiration for that model nation are the natural result of deep-seated sympathies.

The national government, as the representative of such spontaneous and delicate feelings, fulfills its official duty, very agreeably in its nature at the present time, in congratulating your excellency on your safe arrival on the soil of our country.

Unfortunately the first views you have obtained have not shown to you those evidences of progress or of tranquillity which the weary traveler on his arrival to the hospitable shores of Peru could once contemplate with pleasure.

The foreign war, to which we were challenged without notice, has spread ruin and desolation wherever the enemy has planted his feet, and, as if such calamities were not themselves sufficient, a petty faction of unpatriotic Peruvians perpetuate these miseries, making of themselves in the village of Magdalena the docile instruments of the invader, although they are separated from all the country, in order to maintain this appearance of anarchy.

This truth, which your excellency will have discovered by your own examination of matters passing every day, must have formed in your mind the persuasion that there is no longer any perplexity in determining which is the "executive power" in Peru.

Guided undoubtedly by this foresight your excellency, in that republican and thoroughly practical spirit which characterizes your countrymen, said "the mission reserved for the sons of Peru is to give or refuse their powerful support, as the basis of that popular force, without which no government can long exist," and afterward, "notwithstanding the people of Peru are the only sovereign judges in this matter."

Now, then, this sovereign judge in Peru, whose right your excellency declares and recognizes, does not obey or support in the twenty departments of Peru which compose the republic (excepting only the cities on the coast occupied by the Chilian forces) any other government than that of His Excellency the President Señor Colonel Nicolás de Piérola, constitutionally proclaimed as such by the national assembly now in actual session, which representative body was created by election as free as ever took place in any nation.

The nature of this communication compels me to omit all commentary. I have only desired to present facts, and as these are themselves convincing in their nature, I ask that you will give them the attention which they deserve.

These facts, also, will be the subject of study on the part of the Secretary of State of the United States, to whose impartial and careful judgment they will have been submitted by the plenipotentiary in Washington of our ally, the Republic of Bolivia, in the absence of the chargé d' affaires, accredited by us in that capital.

The moral support which the factionists of Magdalena have sought to obtain by cultivating official relations with your excellency, compels me, in the love of peace, to direct to you this letter, which otherwise would seem contrary to diplomatic usages and to the ordinary practice.

I avail, &c.,

AURELIO GA. Y GARCÍA.

To His Excellency General STEPHEN A. HURLBUT,
Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary of the United States of America in Peru.

[Inclosure 2 in No. 11.]

Mr. Hurlbut to Señor García.

LEGATION OF THE UNITED STATES,
Lima, Peru, September 12, 1881.

SIR: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your communication of date of August 23, 1881.

In reply, permit me to say that it would not be proper for me to enter into any discussion as to the internal affairs of Peru unless in answer to some invitation to do so.

Inasmuch as you have, by your letter, opened the way, I propose to give you my opinion very frankly, yet with all possible kindness.

Peru is supposed to be a republic under a constitution, which ought to be the supreme law.

The seizure of supreme power by Señor Piérola and his assumption of an office not known to the constitution were revolutionary acts, and destructive of proper reverence for law.

The violent and forcible manner in which this revolution was accomplished gave to the undertaking the nature of a crime against liberty.

The dictatorial office was a simple tyranny, autocratic and despotic in its plans, in its titles, and in its acts. During its existence, the constitution of Peru was destroyed, and the mere will of one man was substituted for the laws and the constitution.

The people of Peru, suffering under a war of invasion, submitted to this autocracy because they believed it would lead them to victory. Foreign nations recognized it as a government de facto, but did not approve its creation nor its methods. Instead of victory, the dictatorship led to fatal defeats, and the dictator fled from the capital.

The people of Peru have had no opportunity, since that time, to have any free and fair expression of their wishes and their preferences.

The "national assembly" had no right, under the constitution, to exist, and its decrees have no more legal value than the expressed opinion of any equal number of private citizens. Their confirmation, therefore, of the vast and autocratic powers of the late dictator, under his new title of president, gives no greater validity, in law, to his authority or his pretensions.

It is with very great regret that I am compelled to say to you, that the recent decrees issued at Ayacucho, as to the persons and property of those who do not recognize Señor Piérola, are inhuman and barbarous, and of themselves stamp the government that uses such means, as being beyond the pale of law. Such violent edicts are to my mind conclusive proofs that the government with which you are connected depends solely upon force and not on public sentiment.

A strong government, secure in the affections of its people, would never have recourse to such means of cruelty and destruction.

Such measures compel all civilized goverments to look with disfavor upon the authority which make use of them.

So much I feel it my duty to say to you as to the government presided over by Señor Piérola.

The government presided over by Señor Calderon does not assume to possess perfect regularity. It is "provisional," that is to say, a temporary means of carrying on the functious of government, until the nation can act freely and fairly. It is supported by the national Congress, a body known to the constitution, and is an effort toward the re-establishment in this country of regular and constitutional government.

You are mistaken when you state that they are in sympathy with the Chilians. They are not. They want peace, as the whole country wants it, but they will not sacrifice the national honor nor cede the national territory to obtain it.

The Chilian authorities are in communication with both parties in Peru, and you yourself have written to Admiral Lynch. Chili wants and demands the territory of Tarapacá, and will recognize any one who will cede it. The Calderon cabinet will not; it remains to be seen whether the Piérola cabinet will. Meanwhile, under the system inaugurated at Ayacucho and carried out by the prefects, Peruvians are to-day worse enemies of Peruvians than the Chilians can be, and the efforts of the friends of Peru are paralyzed by your intestine dissensions.

When the United States ask of Chili why peace cannot be made, the answer is, that there is no government in Peru to make peace with. Is it not better to make an end to this state of things, and for all true sons of Peru to unite on some head of the nation, to whom all parties and all factions should yield for the purpose of saving the country from hopeless ruin, of restoring peace, and the orderly and quiet reign of the constitution and the laws?

I have, &c.,

S. A. HURLBUT.

To Señor AURELIO GARCÍA Y GARCÍA, Ayacucho.

No. 355.

Mr. Hurlbut to Mr. Blaine.

No. 12.] LEGATION OF THE UNITED STATES,
Lima, Peru, September 14, 1881. (Received ——— —, ———.)

SIR: I acknowledge the receipt of your dispatch No. 7, date August 4, 1881, in relation to certain alleged claims upon the Government of Peru. As to the Cochet claim, this legation has nothing but vague and sweeping statements, better adapted to creating a commercial enterprise than to any judicial or quasi-judicial action. I have been favored with two very extraordinary letters and some printed matter, emanating from Mr. J. R. Shipherd, to which I reply by this mail, asking specific statements as to the origin, character, and extent of the claim and the proofs in support of it. In the Landreau case the proofs are sufficient, and the condition in which the Peruvian Government has left the complainant forms a just ground for a decided appeal to their sense of justice. I shall follow the direction in your dispatch and interpose on behalf of this and all other American claims if any negotiation takes place between Peru and Chili which involves the loss of territory. I shall take special care that this claim and the attitude of the United States in respect to it be officially made known to the proper authorities of both governments. I beg leave to call your special attention to the extracts (given as inclosure to this) from a letter of Mr. J. R. Shipherd to me, dated 19th August, 1881. I need not say that if any such arrangement was in fact made that it would seem proper that I should be officially informed of it. As yet I have not received from the Department any telegram whatever, nor any instructions, except in your No. 7, which certainly do not touch the very strong points reported to me by Mr. Shipherd. As at present advised I have no faith whatsoever in the "Peruvian Company," not much in Mr. J. R. Shipherd, and am wholly in the dark as to the honesty or value and extent of the Cochet claim. If half of his statement is true, and the United States assumes charge of the claim, we should own Peru by a mortgage which can never be paid.

I am, &c.,

S. A. HURLBUT.

[Inclosure in No. 12.—Extract from letter of J. R. Shipherd to S. A. Hurlbut, date 19 August, 1881 professing to give report of an interview with Secretary Blaine.]

But this is not quite all. It is notorious that Chili, Peru, and certain creditors of Peru are at the very point to apportion among themselves, not only the guano, which is absolutely our property, but the only other available asset of Peru—the nitrates—also. If such appropriation were allowed, irreparable mischief might result. I therefore ask a preliminary injunction forbiding all progress in the direction of any such apportionment until the Landreau claim and the Cochet title are first properly recognized and provided for, the former paid as res adjudicata, the latter allowed or firmly disproved.

The secretary instantly responded: "That you will get, and I will make it my first business." On the 2d instant, very soon after, by direction of the secretary, I was advised that the identical instructions suggested had been that day sent you, both by cable and by post, and that I might rely upon the statu quo accordingly.

No. 356.

Mr. Hurlbut to Mr. Blaine.

SEPTEMBER 14, 1881. (Received October 4.)

SIR: After I had closed and sealed up my official mail I received from Mr. Quimper the inclosed letter and two copies of his History of Events, to be forwarded to you. Mr. Quimper is one of the strongest intellects and best-known men in Peru, and you may rely upon his statements. I have not time to translate his letter, but Mr. Elmore will do it for you.

I have read it hastily, and concur with him in his statement.

I can hardly expect you to read his pamphlet, although it is worth reading.

In great haste,

S. A. HURLBUT.

[Inclosure in Mr. Hurlburt's letter of September 14, 1881.—Translation.]

Mr. Quimper to Mr. Blaine.

LIMA, September 14, 1881.

ESTEEMED SIR: Although I have no special claim upon your attention, the fact of my being an American and a citizen of Peru induces me to take up my pen in order to describe the present condition of affairs in Peru, and I trust that you will kindly read what I have to say.

General Hurlbut's arrival at Lima, with instructions from the American Government, to endeavor by every means in its power, to effect the conclusion of an honorable peace between Chili and Peru, has led the nation to hope for a speedy and safe termination of the present unfortunate and anomalous state of things.

I do not propose to make any inquiries as to the policy which the enlightened government of the union proposes to pursue. I simply propose to lay before you a sketch of the present situation of affairs in Peru, together with a brief statement of the causes which have led to that situation.

Before the war Chili had no claim whatever upon Peru, inasmuch as the two countries did not border upon each other,* and as Peru had given no cause of complaint to Chili. As long ago as 1872 Peru made a treaty of alliance with Bolivia, but it never took effect, although several of the cases therein provided for arose. In the mean time an unimportant question between Chili and Bolivia led the former to occupy the Bolivian territory of Antofagasta. Peru then appeared as a mediator. She did so with perfect propriety at that time, since the treaty had become inoperative and the casus fœderis had not yet been declared.

The Peruvian minister at Santiago was busy with the subject of the mediation when Chili suddenly declared war against Peru.

This declaration of war was made at a time when our minister to Bolivia had, in pursuance of instructions from the Government of Peru, induced that nation to repeal the "ten-cent law," which was the cause of the war between Chili and Bolivia.

Peru, being completely defenseless, was taken entirely by surprise, and was obliged to put forth her utmost efforts to avoid being crushed at once. Her navy was in a wretched condition and greatly inferior to that of Chili, but was put on a war-footing at once. Her army, which consisted of but 3,000 wretchedly armed men, was sent to protect the southern frontier.

The history of this war and the true cause of our disasters are given in the statement which I have prepared, and which I inclose herewith, begging you to read it, or to have it read by some person in whom you have confidence. You will thereby become convinced that the victories of Chili were easily won without earning any real glory for the Chilian arms.

Chili entered the contest fully prepared, while Peru was taken wholly at a disadvantage, and was consequently obliged to succumb.

The internal situation of Peru is as follows: The constitutional Government of Peru

---

* Correct, although otherwise represented on many maps.

was preparing to collect war material for the purpose of conquering Chili, when Col. Nicolas Piérola, of the National Guard, formerly a conspirator, got up his revolution of December 21, 1879, whereby he destroyed all the institutions of the country and proclaimed himself dictator. The army initiated the movement, and was seconded by the people, who believed in the promise of victory which Piérola made, provided he were only invested with discretionary powers.

Sad is the history of that administration of one year, during which the so called dictator plunged the country into disaster of every kind, thus facilitating the definitive triumph of Chili at Chorillos and Miraflores.

The dictatorship, which was proclaimed de facto on the 21st of December, 1879, succumbed de facto on the 15th of January, 1881.

Piérola then became a fugitive in the interior of Peru, not having saved a single weapon during the disasters of January, although he might have done so, and the Chilian authorities in this capital, after they had occupied it, declared their unalterable determination to make no treaty of peace with him, though they expressed their readiness to do so with the constitutional government, which they considered the legitimate representative of the country.

In order, therefore, to secure peace, which was earnestly desired by the entire people of Peru, a provincial constitutional government was organized at Lima, with Mr. Garcia Calderon as President, who immediately convened the lawful Congress, that it might adopt suitable measures.

Congress met, and after ratifying the powers of Mr. Garcia Calderon, authorized him to conclude a peace with Chili.

In the mean time events have occurred in Peru, both in connection with its internal affairs and its relations with Chili, which have given an irregular aspect to the present situation.

The departments of Lima, Callao, Huanaco, Junin, Liberotad, Anacachs, Lambayeque, Amazonas, and many provinces belonging to others, have spontaneously recognized the government of Garcia Calderon, their principal citizens signing a declaration to that effect. Piérola's authorities, however, and the scanty forces still under his command, have brought the greater part of the aforesaid departments once more under the control of the dictator. The consequence is, that Mr. Garcia Calderon's provincial government exercises its authorities in but few of them.

This fact is not difficult of explanation. The warlike attitude that is still maintained by Peru towards Chili and the conduct of the Chilian army of occupation tend to sustain the bogus government of Piérola.

Yet it is absolutely certain that as soon as Chili shall have concluded an honorable treaty of peace with Mr. Garcia Calderon, all of Piérola's officers, together with the men under their commands, will recognize such treaty and the constitutional government.

The conduct of the Chilian authorities may be explained as follows:

The Chilians consented at Lima to the formation of the provisional government, because that course coincided with the determination which they had announced not to treat with Piérola. As soon, however, as they became convinced that the provisional government refused to admit that they had conquered Peru they began to oppose it openly, and to encourage Piérola, with a view to keeping Peru in a state of anarchy, so that they might be able to occupy the Peruvian coast indefinitely, availing themselves meanwhile of the country's resources, on the pretext that there was no actual government with which they could treat.

The Chilian authorities have always pursued a course calculated to prolong a state of anarchy in Peru. When they thought that Piérola's power was increasing they sent an expedition against him, and when they thought that the same was the case with the government of Mr. Garcia Calderon they did everything in their power to bring it into discredit and to increase the importance of Piérola.

Negotiations have recently been set on foot between Mr. Garcia Calderon and Mr. Godoy, the Chilian plenipotentiary, the object of which is the explicit recognition of the provisional government by Chili.

Nevertheless, Mr. Godoy has said that if the provisional government wished to be expressly recognized it must first settle the terms of peace with him.

There have been four conferences between the Chilian plenipotentiary and Mr. Garcia Calderon, and while the former was still saying that he was willing to continue them, he suddenly, without having given any warning, left for Chili.

This fact is explained, and, I think, correctly, by the knowledge which it is supposed that Mr. Godoy had of the mission intrusted to General Hurlbut. He went to Chili, he said, for the purpose of getting precise instructions for all cases that might arise.

The fact is, that when Mr. Godoy took his departure he left the negotiations suspended, and all prospects of peace at a standstill.

Such is the present condition of things. We shall be in a state of suspense until the return of the Chilian plenipotentiary.

Chili says that there is no government in Peru with which she can treat.

This is not true. The government of Mr. Garcia Calderon is one which fulfills all conditions of legitimacy, and its acts, so far as the conclusion of a peace is concerned, would be immediately accepted by the entire republic.

If it is not recognized by the considerable armed forces which apparently obey Piérola, this is because the proper time for such recognition has not yet arrived.

And it is not well that such recognition should take place, for if it should, the Chilian army would treat those forces as it has just done those of Magdalena, viz, disarm and disperse them; and since it would then consider the government of Mr. Garcia Calderon as a war government it would not be in the power of the latter to continue negotiations.

Given, then, the conditions of life now possessed by Mr. Garcia Calderon's government, it cannot and ought not to increase in power. It should make peace while in its present condition, and such a peace, as I have already remarked, would be accepted by the whole nation.

Peru will be mainly indebted for this great benefit, in any event, to the people and the enlightened government of the United States.

Accept, sir, the assurances of the regard of your faithful and obedient servant,

J. M. QUIMPER.

No. 357.

Mr. Hurlbut to Mr. Blaine.

No. 14.] LEGATION OF THE UNITED STATES,
Lima, Peru, September 21, 1881. (Received October 17.)

SIR: Since my last dispatch there has been nothing of any special consequence. I am still without any reply from General Kilpatrick to my communications, which is probably due to the severe illness with which he has been afflicted.

It appears to be of vital importance that the United States should determine, in advance, the position which they will hold in relation to the procurement of peace and the settlement of the questions between Peru and Chili.

I hope by the next steamer, or at all events by that which will arrive on October 1, to have some definite communication from you.

I believe that Chili will make the cession of Tarapacà a sine qua non of peace, and that on this point they will not admit of discussion, unless under pressure from some other power than Peru.

If the United States are disposed and ready to insist that Peru shall have the opportunity to offer a money indemnity, and thus escape cession of territory, I am satisfied that such insistance on our part should pass directly from the Secretary of State to the Chilian minister at Washington, and thus come with the highest authority.

If, however, the Department of State is not willing or prepared to take this step, I cannot see how I can exercise any wholesome influence upon the stronger of the two belligerents.

The governments both of Chili and Peru have undoubtedly been informed that the United States would view with serious disfavor any request for, or acceptance of, aid from any European government in this matter of American policy.

I know that Peru fully understands this, and I presume General Kilpatrick has communicated to Chili the views expressed in your instructions to him.

Being thus imperatively cut off from European aid, and practically limited by the act of the United States to the friendly offices of our government only, it would seem that a duty was, by its own act, imposed upon the United States, to render effective and positive aid to the solution of this question.

Valmacida, minister of foreign affairs of Chili, said lately in a speech in their Congress, "that Chili must soon determine for herself whether she should return to her ancient boundaries or extend herself over half the continent."

It is not, in my judgment, for the interest of the United States that there should be any very largely preponderating power in South America, and still less so, if that preponderance shall be acquired, not by regular growth and development, but by violent and military means.

Yet at this very time there is danger of just such preponderance, obtained by just such means, and the only preventive I can see for this evil is the direct and specific action of the United States.

There is danger, even now, that the treaty between Chili and the Argentine Republic may fail of ratification, in which case war between these republics appears inevitable, especially as the Argentines look with great apprehension upon the military and naval development of Chili as a perpetual threat to them.

The Argentine Republic is now ready for war, and if they believe it to be imminent in the near future, they will of course prosecute it, while Chili is embarrassed by Peru and Bolivia.

Thus it is possible that the future peace and good order of South America may hinge upon the determination to be taken by the United States, in reference to the proper conclusion of the Peru-Chilian affair.

It is a noticeable fact that the Chilian Government has asked from their Congress appropriations for an army of 24,000 men, and a full war establishment for their navy, for the coming year, indicating that they propose to continue the state of things which makes such expenditure necessary.

This force is a very heavy one for Chili to keep up, and is sufficient for active war operations, and excessive for what remains to be done in Peru. It is therefore considered by the Argentines to be in the line of a menace to that country.

In the internal affairs of Peru, there is as yet no special development, except that I believe the dissension from Piérola in the interior, and the tendency to support Calderon, to be on the increase.

I was in hopes to have received the message of President Santa Maria, in time for this mail, but it has not come, and as I have no communications from General Kilpatrick, I am quite in the dark, officially, as to the course of events in Santiago, and even as to the fact whether my colleague there is in harmony with my views.

Reports are very current that he is not, but you will of course be advised of his actions and his purposes.

I have, &c.,

S. A. HURLBUT.

No. 358.

Mr. Hurlbut to Mr. Blaine.

No. 16.] LEGATION OF THE UNITED STATES,
Lima, Peru, October 4, 1881. (Received ———.)

SIR: Since the date of my last (No. 15) events have occurred which demand precise statement, and deliberate consideration.

As you are aware, from the correspondence of my predecessor, the dictatorship of Piérola crumbled to pieces after the battles in front of Lima. Piérola himself disappeared. There was no government in fact.

In this emergency, many gentlemen of high standing attempted to reconstruct a constitutional government, and to that end requested of General La Puerta, who was the constitutional Vice-President, overthrown by the Piérola rebellion, that he would resume his lawful power. This he positively refused to do, on account of his inability from ill-health to perform the duties. The situation was peculiarly pressing, because the Chilian military authorities, on occupying the city of Lima, had imposed a pecuniary contribution of one million of soles, in silver, per month, and in accordance with their somewhat peculiar notions, had apportioned this immense sum on certain private citizens, supposed to be wealthy, in fixed amounts charged to each one, with the penalty that if not paid their property in this city should be destroyed and themselves imprisoned.

With such an order hanging over them it became necessary to establish some form of government which might represent them. Prado, the constitutional President had run away from Peru before the Piérola revolution was made and has never returned. La Puerta succeeded as Vice-President, was overthrown by Piérola, and, as I have stated, declined to serve.

Garcia Calderon was chosen to act as provisional President; was permitted to act as such by the Chilian authorities; was assigned a certain neutral zone or space near Magdalena by the Chilian authorities; was allowed to appoint all his ministers and other officers; to publish decrees; to assemble his Congress; to keep an armed force of one thousand men, and generally to perform the functions of government. Negotiations for peace were opened with him by Godoy, on behalf of and by the authority of Chili. He was allowed to borrow money on the faith of Peru, and to issue about eight millions of paper money, out of which he paid a heavy sum in ransom of the city of Lima. He was recognized by foreign nations as the lawful head of the Government of Peru, and as such received official visits, and publicly and openly exercised all the perogatives of sovereignty. This chain of facts constitute recognition by Chili of the Calderon government, fully as effective as if given in terms, and in official communications.

Some four weeks since, Admiral Lynch, the Chilian commander-in-chief, disarmed the Peruvian guard in Magdalena; but in an official communication to Mr. Calderon, as well as in conversation with me, put this act exclusively on a military basis, giving as a reason the actual or probable desertion of the force, which reason I accept, as a proper military precaution.

On the 26th September, without any notice, he seized the treasury, and has it now under guard, and stopped, by military order, the payment of all funds of any kind; appointed Chilian officers to collect certain local revenues accruing to the Calderon authorities, and forbade the Bank of London, Mexico, and South America, in which the Calderon funds were deposited, from paying over.

Having thus seized the means of living, he then, on the 28th September, issued the decree and sent the letter, which I forward translated, and inclosed in translation of letter from Mr. Galvez to me, thereby virtually commanding Calderon to cease his functions, and to surrender all his archives, books, and papers.

Mr. Calderon consulted with me on receipt of this order, and said very firmly that he should not obey it. Inasmuch as it was very probable that this act of disobedience would be promptly followed by military arrest, I suggested to Mr. Calderon the propriety of making some arrangement by which some legitimate successor could be provided in case he was disabled from acting. To this end the Congress, all of whose members were in Lima, was quietly assembled, and they proceeded to elect Admiral Montèro, now in command in the north of Peru, outside the Chilian lines, as Vice-President, thus continuing the constitutional succession. All of these acts are strictly legal, and not only according to the practice of Peru, but to the tenor of the constitution.

I also received from Mr. Galvez, the secretary for foreign affairs, such books, documents, and correspondence as he considered essential, and shall hold them in this legation.

These precautionary measures having been adopted, Mr. Calderon replied, under date of September 29th, to Admiral Lynch, in a well reasoned and dignified letter, which I also inclose in print, and in Spanish, as I have not yet found time to translate so long a document.

This letter has been sent by Admiral Lynch to his government, and since that time no further action has been taken, and I suppose none will be, until he receives instructions from Santiago.

I send, also in Spanish, the printed copy of Lynch's reply to Calderon's letter of the 29th.

I am not positive as to the real meaning of these extraordinary acts, but am inclined to think that the purpose is to abolish by force all respectable authority in Peru, and especially the one which the United States have recognized.

I find, also, that the British minister here, Sir Spencer St. John, is very frequently closeted with Admiral Lynch, and that their conferences are long.

It is a self-evident proposition that no act of Chili, whether from its civil or military authorities, can in any way operate upon the relations which the United States have maintained, or may choose to maintain with any government in Peru, nor can any military order prevent my treating with Mr. Calderon as representing the sovereignty of Peru.

I doubt whether even the Chilian doctrine, as expounded by Lynch, of the rights of conquerors will go so far as that. Yet, I see in the future no special limits to their possibilities of dictation.

There is a very decided tone of arrogance, both in the press of Chili and among their officers, born I think of their singular success in this war, which may easily become offensive.

The mask which the Chilian Government has worn to cover the real purpose of this war, is now removed, and it is openly avowed that peace will not be permitted, except on condition of cession of territory.

In looking back upon the whole history of events, prior to hostilities and since, I can have no doubt, but that the purpose, end, and aim of this war, declared by Chili against Peru and Bolivia, was in the beginning and is now the forcible acquisition of the nitrate and guano territory, both of Bolivia and Peru.

Everything else is made to bend to this purpose, and there is no reality in any pretense of peace on any other terms.

I shall await the action of the Department, and hope to be informed as early as possible, of such definite resolution as may be taken.

I am, sir, your obedient servant,

S. A. HURLBUT.

[Inclosure 1 in No. 16.—Translation.]

Mr. Galvez to Mr. Hurlbut.

MINISTRY OF FOREIGN AFFAIRS,
Lima, September 28, 1881.

Mr. MINISTER: On this day His Excellency the President has received the note and decree, a copy of which I have the honor to inclose to you.

The measures already taken by the commander of the army of occupation, in first disarming the guard which my government had at Magdalena, and afterwards in placing guards in the offices of the minister of hacienda, and in the public treasury, seizing upon all the funds of the government, gave reason to believe that the purpose of the Chilian Government was to cause all government in Peru to disappear, in order to carry into effect, not only the military occupation of Peru, the territory of the republic, but also the complete domination over the country. To-day, Mr. Minister, this presumption is a reality. The commander of the Chilian forces not only takes the direction of public affairs in Peru, but also suppresses all national government, prohibits the exercise of any act of sovereignty, and even demands, as if my government were a dependency of Chili, the surrender of the archives and documents which may be in its possession.

My government, which owes its existence to the choice of the people of Peru, and has for its rule of conduct respect to the constitution and the laws; my government which, in the presence of this same army of occupation, has quietly exercised its functions, finds itself, to-day, compelled to protest in the most solemn manner against this violent act of the Chilian Government which, I repeat, suppresses all national government, and necessarily prevents all negotiation for peace, and tends directly to absolute dominion over the whole republic.

The internal dissension in Peru will be the pretext under which Chili will insist that there is no government with which to treat, but the undoubted fact is that Chili does not wish that there should be any government in Peru with whom to negotiate, as a step to the destruction of the Peruvian nationality.

In giving to you, sir, the knowledge of such vastly important events, it is with the hope that you will communicate them to your government, so that it may plainly appear before America, and before the world, that my government in no respect admits the pretensions of Chili, and that at all times, under all circumstances, and in whatsoever place it may be found, it represents, and will represent, the supreme authority of Peru, until that nation, sole arbiter of its own purposes, shall decide as may correspond to its dignity and its interests.

I have the honor, Mr. Minister, to subscribe myself, your excellency's most faithful and obedient servant,

M. M. GALVEZ.

His Excellency STEPHEN A. HURLBUT,
Envoy Extraordinaire and Minister
Plenipotentiary of the United States.

[Inclosure 2 in No. 16.]

General Lynch to Señor Calderon.

LIMA, September 28, 1881.

Dr. FRANCISCO GARCIA CALDERON:

SIR: I have, on this day, issued a decree, by which I order the suspension of the exercise of all authority, which is not derived from these headquarters, except those municipal authorities actually in existence and allowed to continue for the purpose of collecting local taxes.

I take occasion to send to you, with this, a copy of my decree, the terms of which put an end to the government which, until now, has been in existence by our toleration, and presided over by you, and inasmuch as the documents, archives, and other effects in possession of the functionaries who have served under your orders, do not belong to them, but are public property, I trust that you will take the necessary measures to prevent any disposition of them, and will do me the favor of sending to my office, as soon as possible, a list of all of them.

With sentiments of distinguished consideration and esteem, I subscribe myself, your obedient and faithful servant,

P. LYNCH.

Copy of decree.

LIMA, September 28, 1881.

The GENERAL-IN-CHIEF of the Army of the North, Republic of Chili

Inasmuch as I have this day decreed as follows:

Hereafter in such part of the territory of Peru, as is now, or may hereafter be occupied by the forces of the army under my command, no acts of government will be permitted to be done, or exercised by any other functionaries or authorities than those established by these headquarters. The municipal authorities, which at present exist, shall, however, subsist and continue to receive municipal taxation for the purpose of providing for the necessities of local service.

Let this be recorded and report made.

In order, therefore, to give full notice to all persons, let this be published by proclamation, and by notices fixed on the most public places of the city.

P. LYNCH.

No. 359.

Mr. Hurlbut to Mr. Blaine.

No. 19.] LEGATION OF THE UNITED STATES,
Lima, Peru, October 5, 1881, 11 p. m. (Received ———.)

SIR: I have just consummated an agreement made with the Calderon government on the 20th September for the grant to the United States for a naval and coaling station at Chimbote.

The concessions set forth in the protocol are not so strong as I would have liked to obtain, but they are all that the President alone, without the approval of Congress, could give. I look upon it, in the relative position of the two countries, as giving us, should it be accepted by you, a very valuable foothold, which can hereafter be rendered more exclusive in matters of jurisdiction.

There is no question under Peruvian law but that the act of President Calderon is as effective in transferring rights as if he were a regularly elected President, and looking to the future I can see great possibilities in this grant. Chimbote Bay is by far the best on the Pacific coast, and the coal-mines in the interior, to which it is the entrance by way of the railroad under construction, furnish ample supplies, of good quality, of inexhaustible quantity, and at low prices.

The protocol and the approval of the same by President Calderon are inclosed with this dispatch. I have not time to elaborate this question by this mail, but will do so by the next.

I have also, at my own risk, concluded with President Calderon an arrangement by which the unfinished line of railway will be turned over by the government to me, as intermediary or trustee, to transfer the same to an American company, to complete, develope, and operate it. By so doing, it is easy to limit such company in the price to be charged the United States for coal, which ought not in any case exceed $5 per ton, and yet leave a large margin.

The possibilities for such a company are very large, as the country to be developed by the road is singularly rich in mines of metals and in agriculture.

This grant will include the completed and incomplete portions of the road, on which the government has already spent over $9,000,000, and the whole work can be completed now for $10,000,000.

The principal terms will be the payment to the Government of Peru of $1,000,000 in money and the same sum in paid-up stock to clear all existing incumbrances, for which sums they cede the clear right to construct and operate the road for twenty-five years after it is finished, without rent or liability to account. At the end of that period the Peruvian Government has the option to buy the road by paying the principal of its cost to the company or to lease it for twenty-five years more at 25 per cent. of net profits.

The papers cannot be ready before the next mail, and will contain other rights and privileges which I cannot now enumerate.

I have determined to accept this trust so as to save this very valuable grant from any possible chance of being lost to our country.

In great haste, I am, your obedient servant,

S. A. HURLBUT.

[Inclosure 1 in No. 19.]

PROTOCOL.

On the twentieth day of the month of September, one thousand eight hundred and eighty-one, the undersigned, Stephen A. Hurlbut, envoy extraordinary and minister plenipotentiary of the United States of America, and Manuel Maria Galvez, minister of foreign affairs of Peru, met in the office of the American legation for the purpose of establishing, in the name of their respective governments, an agreement with the object of giving due facilities to the American naval marine on the coast of the Pacific.

The propriety of such an agreement having been recognized by the undersigned, and they having also taken into consideration the stipulations contained in Article XIV (fourteenth) of the treaty of friendship, commerce, and navigation, now existing between the two countries, have agreed upon the following:

First. The Government of Peru concedes to that of the United States of America the right and power to establish a station for coaling in the port and harbor of Chimbote, and all facilities which may be necessary in order that the ships of war and merchant vessels of the United States may be supplied with that article and may station themselves in said port.

Second. The concession above made is not to be considered as exclusive in favor of the Government of the United States, inasmuch as the Government of Peru reserves to itself the right to make analogous concessions to other friendly powers who may solicit the same.

Third. The land which the Government of the United States may acquire for a coaling station, either from the state or from private persons, will remain subject to the general laws which rule in Peru in reference to the ownership of real estate.

Fourth. The concession to which the first article of this protocol relates is of an indefinite duration, and the government of Peru shall have the power to withdraw the same by first giving to that of the United States not less than one year's notice.

In testimony of which the undersigned have signed the above protocol in duplicate, and have attached to both copies their respective seals.

M. M. GÁLVEZ. [SEAL.]
S. A. HURLBUT. [SEAL.]

[Inclosure 2 in No. 19.]

Señor Galvez to Mr. Hurlbut.

[Translation.]

LIMA, September 23, 1881.

It is gratifying to me to announce to your excellency that, under to-day's date, his excellency, the Provisional President, has been pleased to issue a decree approving the protocol which I had the honor to sign, with your excellency on the 20th instant, for the purpose of giving certain facilities to the American Navy on the Pacific coast, and that in proper time the necessary orders in the premises will be given by the ministries of marine and of the treasury in order that the stipulations contained in the said protocol-agreement may have due fulfillment.

With sentiments of the most distinguished consideration, I subscribe myself,

Your excellency's faithful and obedient servant,

M. M. GALVEZ.

To his excellency STEPHEN A. HURLBUT, &c.

No. 360.

Mr. Hurlbut to Mr. Blaine.

No. 20.] LEGATION OF THE UNITED STATES,
Lima, Peru, October 13, 1881. (Received November 3.)

SIR: Since the last mail a very important series of events has been inaugurated. On the 5th and 6th of October the troops and people of Arequipa, in the southern military department of Peru, have proclaimed their adhesion to the Calderon government, in which they have already been followed by the forces in Puno, and probably in Cuzco. This region has been Piérola's stronghold, and as it is entirely outside of Chilian military authority, it has been caused by nothing but moral force.

Last night letters were received from Cacères, commanding the military department of the center, promising to do the same thing, and I feel quite sure that Montero, commanding the northern department, and lately elected Vice-President, has by this time announced a similar policy. It now seems quite certain that a very decided majority, at least, of Peru will support the Calderon government. I have done a good deal in a quiet way to bring about this result, for I felt it a point of honor to establish on a basis of popular support this government, recognized as such by the United States, and not recognized by England and France.

My diplomatic colleagues, especially the British minister, are quite attentive now, and the latter volunteered the statement to me that he was ready to accompany Mr. Calderon to Arequipa if he went there.

Piérola is believed to be at Ica, a port to the south, and is further believed to be trying to negotiate with the Chilians.

The declarations from Arequipa, especially if followed up elsewhere, are likely to embarrass the Chilian programme. The logic of their proposed suppression of Calderon was that he had no following; and when such following is developed, it would seem logical that they should recognize him.

Unfortunately it will not always do, with these people, to reason on logical bases as to their conduct in the future.

I believe that the authorities in Santiago are themselves disposed to be reasonable, but that the heart of the people is set upon acquisition of territory, and that they fear an overthrow from the military and popular element if they yield this point.

There is a certain degree of awkwardness, and likely to be more, in the position of Calderon. He, as President of Peru, a nation technically at war with Chili, is within the lines of military occupation, and subject to military law.

I incline to think that it is competent for the Chilians to order him outside of their lines, and I rather expect it to be done. In that case, if he should remove to the interior, north or south, it becomes a question whether I shall retain the legation here or follow the government to its new station.

There will be nothing that I could do away from Lima that I could not do here, except the impression that personal intercourse with the President and his ministers might make in maintaining the just influence of the United States.

I take occasion to reiterate my opinion that the opportunity for the United States to settle this war is open. The Argentine Republic has ratified the treaty of boundaries. This gives additional force to the rule of arbitration and mutual concession, and the good work commenced by the United States for the benefit of Chili ought to be complemented by similar results for the benefit of Peru.

I am as yet entirely without advices from you, either on the general subject of Chili-Peru, or as to the course taken, or to be taken, by the government and its representatives in these countries. This is of course attributable in great measure to the long and fatal illness of President Garfield, but it is quite important that this state of uncertainty should not much longer continue.

The papers for the grant of the Chimbote-Huaraz Railway are not yet complete.

Your obedient servant,

S. A. HURLBUT.

No. 361.

Mr. Hurlbut to Mr. Blaine.

No. 21.] LEGATION OF THE UNITED STATES,
Lima, Peru, October 13, 1881. (Received November 3.)

SIR: I have just received a very brief letter from General Kilpatrick, part of which I transcribe. I fear his situation is dangerous, and he evidently thinks so. In the event of his death, at this particular time, it will be difficult to supply his place as it ought to be supplied.

It is said here by the Chilian authorities that two Chilian commissioners, Altamirano and Novoa, are on their way here. They started to treat with Piérola, but the Arequipa affair throws him overboard, and if they treat at all it must be with Calderon. They will hold to the old claim of territorial cession, and as that cannot be admitted, the conferences will break up, unless arbitration be urged and accepted.

There is no earthly reason why this should not be done, and I believe Santa Maria can save himself from his own people by accepting arbitration.

To suggest this, and to enforce it, we shall need some one at Santiago, and if it should unfortunately happen that General Kilpatrick should die or become disabled the case should be met very promptly.

It is reported to me at this moment, on good authority, that Montèro has declared for Calderon, and I have seen a letter from Cacères, pledging his support whenever necessary. As Cacères's outlying pickets are close to the Chilian lines, and liable to be engaged at any moment, and Calderon within the lines, it is prudent not to be too open in the matter.

Your obedient servant,

S. A. HURLBUT.

[Inclosure in No. 21.]

General Kilpatrick to Mr. Hurlbut.

VILLE DEL MAR, September 30, 1881.

MY DEAR GENERAL: * * * * * * I am very ill, and have been for two months. I should not like to die here, and yet I may.

Yours,

KILPATRICK.

362.

Mr. Hitt to Mr. Elmore.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, October 13, 1881.

SIR: The Secretary of State, whose attention I called more especially to your communication of the 11th, stating that you would desire an interview with him in regard to Peruvian affairs, directs me to say to you that he will be glad to meet you at any time that you will call at the State Department in reference to the subject of which you spoke.

I have the honor, &c.,

ROBERT R. HITT,
Assistant Secretary.

No. 363.

Mr. Elmore to Mr. Blaine.

LEGATION OF PERU,
Washington, October 21, 1881. (Received ———.)

SIR: As the South Pacific cable is in the hands of the Chilians, the news from Peru which to-day's Washington and New York papers publish, came by steamer, being twenty-three days on the way.

Of course your excellency has the official version of the last act enacted by Chili in the drama which she has developed with a premeditation rarely equaled in history, and which convinces even the incredulous of what her intentions were. Not only two years and a half ago, when she declared war on Peru, after taking by force a piece of Bolivian territory, rich in nitrate of soda; not only nine years ago when she had her two iron-clads built in England to execute her purposes; not only fifteen years ago, when the Spanish fleet after burning Chili's principal port—Valparaiso—was defeated and driven away from the Pacific by the Peruvian batteries of Callao, filling Chili with rage and jealousy, but her intentions existed years ago, when she saw the wealth of Peru, consisting in the guano and subsequently the nitrate, which excited her envy and greed.

I have the honor to inclose herewith the newspaper correspondent's version and press comments upon the Chilian Admiral Lynch's orders suspending the civil authorities in all places in Peru occupied by the Chilian forces, and seizing the Peruvian treasury and bank of issue (nothing is said purposely about the authority of the provisional government). Allow me only to call your attention to the fact that as the Panama paper (from which most American papers copy) is in the interest of Chili, the remarks are mostly in justification of the Chilian acts, and the innuendoes are directed against Peru and those who have done something in support of her and of justice (inclosures Nos. 1, 2, 3, and 4). Of course it is evident that any introduction of bank-notes for the provisional government, or any alleged facts in connection with it, had absolutely nothing to do with the outrage committed by Admiral Lynch.

The explanation of it, Mr. Secretary, is simply this: Chili meant from the beginning, 1st, to take the territory containing Peru's wealth; 2d, to weaken the country in such a way that Peru should be incapable of resisting her now or in a long future. At the same time Chili counted upon two factors which she supposed in her favor: 1st, that all foreign nations were indifferent as to the fate of Peru; 2d, that no foreign nation would take interest in the reconstruction of order and of a constitutional government in Peru. But she counted also upon another factor to help her, namely, the continuance of internal dissention in Peru, which Chili, of course from years back, has always favored. Chili was right, unfortunately, in this last supposition. In regard to the two first mentioned, Chili made a grievous mistake, and her surprise on discovering it is the cause of her present rage, as shown by the first act of Chili's new President, Señor Santa Maria, the center of that group of Chilian politicians and financiers who resolved upon the plunder of her neighbors (as Chili wants not the territory itself, but the inexhaustible wealth in it).

Chili's mistake and surprise were caused by the friendly acts of the United States in trying to bring about a peace equally honorable for both belligerents, without detriment to the rights of Chili as the victor.

1st. Chili never believed that the United States would recognize the Calderon government (thinking that the United States would follow the lead of the European powers).

2d. Chili was disappointed when she saw that the recognition of the Calderon government by the United States was just, because that government meant to establish constitutional order in Peru, and to negotiate an honorable peace, which would restore to Peru her position among nations.

3d. Chili was displeased when she beheld that the United States had appointed as minister in Lima, a gentleman, General Hurlbut, whose talents, decision of character, and spirit of justice and fair play, were so distinct from Chili's purposes and practices.

4th. Chili was more displeased when she saw the words of conciliation and justice pronounced by the new United States minister in Peru, upon his reception by President Garcia Calderon; they showed a friendly disposition on the part of the United States towards Peru.

5th. Finally, Chili was terribly excited when she, for the first time, perceived that the United States Government would not see with favor the dismemberment of Peru, if Peru has otherwise a means of satisfying the just claims of her victorious enemy.

But, Mr. Secretary, if the United States, for all the historical reasons of the past, and of her inevitable destiny, has not the right to raise her voice on the affairs of this continent, then history would have to be rewritten, and no nation would have the right to take interest in the fortunes of sister nations.

The policy of the United States on this continent is well known, and your excellency's government recognized the government of Señor Garcia Calderon, because it was a constitutionally organized government (Mr. Piérola, being, by the tendencies of his life, able to be only a despotic ruler), and because the Calderon government was and is the only means of making constitutional government permanent in Peru.

The other reason the United States had for recognizing that provisional government was, because it was recognized by the Chilians who were ready to negotiate a peace with it. But, as the Calderon government was forbidden by a law of Congress to cede any Peruvian territory, as the United States recognized it, and as the United States preferred that, if it were possible, peace should be made without loss of territory to Peru, Chili it seems, decided that the existence of the government of Señor Garcia Calderon was incompatible with the execution of her plans and purposes.

This, Mr. Secretary, is the explanation of the news just arrived by steamer from Peru, which can only have surprised those who never understood the origin of the war and the real purposes of Chili.

At the same time, allow me to call your excellency's attention to the fact that Admiral Lynch's order does not make mention of the Calderon government as being suppressed, which was easy enough to do, as the material means at its disposal were so small. On this account no news has come by cable during the last twenty-three days of any such event.

Far from that, on the 14th of October, I received a cable message from Señor Rosas, the new Peruvian minister in France, dated Paris, 13th October, communicating a cable message from Señor Galvez, the minister of foreign relations of Peru (dated, no doubt, Lima, 12th October, as the cable is working), announcing the significant fact of the army of the south, Arequipa and Puno having recognized the provisional government of Señor Garcia Calderon.

Thus, the Calderon government was not only gaining popularity; not only had it the moral support of the United States, and other nations who had recognized it; not only was its moral strength increased by the perfectly correct and just appreciation of the iniquity of Señor Piérola's government, but it was gaining material strength, being recognized by the center of political power in Peru, Arequipa, and Puno, and by the very army who previously obeyed Piérola, because it was made to believe by Piérola that a continuation of the war with Chili was possible. For these very reasons, however, the Calderon government did not suit the purposes of Chili; it was becoming too strong and too respectable; and the consequence was that Peru was on the point of being reconstructed. Chili desires not only a dismembered Peru, but a prostrate and powerless neighbor.

The United States, by their action, have, I am proud and happy to say it, and the Peruvian people highly appreciate it, contributed more than any other nation, or any other circumstance, to give strength and respectability to the government of Señor Garcia Calderon. That government, as far as I know, and as regards its personnel, has not ceased to exist. It is the only constitutionally organized government Peru has proclaimed by the law of the constitutionally elected Congress of Peru.

Peru must have a constitutional government, and must have peace. Will the United States, only because Chili wishes to make both impossible in Peru, abandon Peru at this her most critical moment? A word from the United States would stop all lawless action on the part of Chili, and consummate the union of the Peruvian people, which had so successfully and so happily been inaugurated under the auspices of the United States.

In conclusion, as the representative of the legal government which your excellency's government recognizes, and of the orderly and respectable part of the people of the Republic of Peru (the oldest and most interesting country in South America, a nation of historical renown, and worthy of better fortune), I herewith repeat and confirm the sentiments I expressed in my address to the President of the United States, when I had the honor of presenting to him my letter of credence, as regards the influence which, in the opinion of Peru and my government, the United States should exercise on this continent, not only indirectly but directly—for the good of the South American states and in the interest of the United States, and of free institutions and civilization in general.

When I made that address I had already received the special instructions to which I referred in my letter to your excellency of the 11th instant.

On account of my hope that the ministers of the United States in Peru and Chili might succeed in bringing the belligerents together to negotiate in good faith an honorable peace (not having also had the opportunity of conferring with your excellency), I have not communicated to your excellency these instructions.

Now, however, in view of the selfish, unjust, and heartless policy of the Chilian Government, of which she no longer makes a secret, I solemnly execute the instructions I have received from the President of Peru, and hereby formally request the government of the United States to intervene between Chili and Peru in order to make a treaty of peace between the two republics possible. In view of the extraordinary and exorbitant pretensions of Chili (demanding among other things, not only a war indemnity, but the cession of a part of the Peruvian territory, and the occupation of another part), and in view of the barbarous manner in which Chili conducted the war, and of her iniquitous proceedings and unceasing spoliations since, my government has earnestly arrived at the conclusion that a treaty of peace cannot be signed without the intervention of the United States of America.

I beg your excellency's government to please decide upon the measures most conducive to the end proposed, if, in the judgment of your excellency's government, it is convenient that the United States should bring Chili to a sense of justice, helping my country to reorganize herself, much improved by the sad lessons of adversity, and eternally grateful to her generous and powerful sister, the great, true, and model republic.

I have the honor to inclose some further items of news from Peru, (Nos. 6, 7, 8, and 9), and to renew to your excellency the assurances of my highest and most distinguished consideration.

J. F. ELMORE.

[The inclosures referred to are numerous extracts from newspapers printed in the United States. They are not considered of sufficient importance to submit.]

No. 364.

Mr. Hurlbut to Mr. Blaine.

No. 23.] LEGATION OF THE UNITED STATES,
Lima, Peru, October 26, 1881. (Received ———.)

SIR: The Department of State will no doubt have been advised of the excitement in Chili, over the publication by the newspapers in that country of a copy of a "memoradum" addressed by me to Admiral Lynch, a document which I forwarded to the Department as inclosure to my dispatch No. 8, of the 27th August, 1881.

I do not know by whom the publication of this note was effected. It appeared first in the Chilian newspapers, and I presume was given to the press by the Chilian Government as a basis for the note of Mr. Valmaseda to Mr. Kilpatrick. It seems somewhat singular that although General Kilpatrick has been unable to write to me during all this time, anything more than a brief note as to his health, that he should yet have been able to answer the communication of Mr. Valmaseda on the very day of its date, and at such very considerable length.

It is not for me to criticise the act of my colleague at Santiago. I sent him a copy of the "memorandum" at the same time that I sent it to the Department.

I have not received from him any copy of the correspondence between him and the Chilian authorities, and my only knowledge of it comes from the publications in Chili and in this city.

If, however, these are to be accepted as correct, there would seem to be a radical difference between General Kilpatrick and myself, which demands the attention of the Department. Neither Mr. Kilpatrick nor the Chilian authorities have as yet attacked by argument the principles of international law laid down in the memorandum; nor do I believe that they can be successfully attacked.

They have chosen to affirm that these utterances contain a threat of active intervention on the part of the United States, which is nowhere asserted in the document. The question of what the United States may think proper to do, is one which can only be resolved by the President, and communicated when so resolved through the Department, and until so informed, it is not competent for General Kilpatrick or for me to limit the United States in any respect. I affirm that, according to my best judgment, the principles laid down in the "Lynch memorandum," are those which do in fact control, and in right ought to control the conduct of the United States; that they are and ought to be the bases of international law on this continent, and that Chili and Peru and all other powers in America, ought to accept and be guided by them. All this, of course, although clearly my opinion and belief, is subject to the revision and final determination of the State Department, and whatever may be the decision, it will be obeyed and faithfully carried out by me, so long as I have the honor to represent the United States in my present capacity. It, however, becomes my duty to represent to the Department the results which, in my judgment, may be expected from their decision.

Upon reaching the Isthmus, on my way down, I encountered in all the newspapers of the South American Republics, an expectation and desire that the United States, as natural head of the republican forms of this continent, should, in some way or other, put an end to this war between Chili and Peru.

I found, on arriving here, the same sentiment and belief, among the Chilians in the form of apprehension, among the Peruvians in that of hope. I found the English and French legations apprehending the same thing, but diligently at work to put all obstacles in the way of its fulfillment. I have been careful never to speak or write of any action whatever, on the part of the United States, but have never hesitated on proper occasion, to state what I believed, and now believe to be our opinions on the questions involved, and have never gone beyond what is set forth in the "Lynch memorandum."

Inasmuch as the United States had recognized Garcia Calderon as the President of Peru, I have done all I could properly do to unite Peru under his authority, and have succeeded in so doing, despite of the influences exercised against such a result by the other legations, notably those of England and France.

To-day no other government has any respectable foothold in Peru, and Piérola must either run away or fall a victim to mutiny in his own forces.

This dominant influence of the United States in Peru is now a fact, and has been acquired, as I have stated.

It is, in my judgment eminently worth while for the United States to keep this position, not only here but in all America, and their retention of this position depends upon their own action.

If the Government of the United States choose to say the word, this wretched state of things will cease. If they choose to say that the time for peace has arrived, peace will be made.

If they choose to say that the two countries should submit the question of indemnity to arbitration in case they cannot agree, such submission will be had, and the matter end honorably to both countries.

Unless the United States do take such positions, indefinite military occupation of Peru, or so much as the Chilian forces can cover, will be the result; anarchy, violence, plundering by petty war parties will dominate over the country, and the ruin of all foreign investments in the country will follow. If the United States, after denying to these people any application for aid from any European state, shall themselves refuse any help in their desperate situation, it would seem to be almost a breach of national faith. I myself, am a profound believer in the right and duty of the United States to control the political questions of this continent, to the exclusion of any and all European dictation. This belief I understand to be held also by the American people, and to have been asserted by Congress. This I also understand to be the doctrine of the administration which sent to me this place.

The opportunity to put the doctrine into practice is now before us, and as the communication is so slow I state here the probable course of affairs, and ask for instructions.

The two Chilian plenipotentiaries, Altamirano and Novoa, have arrived to-day. They are said to have full powers. They will either recognize the Calderon government or fail to find any with which they can treat. If they do not recognize that government I shall consider such fact evidence that they do not want peace. If they do, and peace negotiations commence, I believe they will drop the word "cession" and substitute "pledge;" that they will demand an enormous indemnity, and to hold the southern provinces as pledge and security for the payment.

Peru will offer thirty to forty millions as indemnity. This will be refused, and then affairs are at a stand. Peru will then offer to submit the question of amount to arbitration. This offer, I think, will be refused.

It seems to me that the opportunity for the United States will be to insist early in the negotiation, and forcibly, that the principle of arbitration shall be accepted and acted on.

The mode of such insistance must, of course, be determined by the Department, but I feel sure that it ought to be done, and done at an early stage, and before Chili commits herself by a refusal to entertain arbitration. I have no doubt of the result if so done. Chili cannot afford to refuse it. Peru asks nothing but an impartial arbiter, and the result will place the United States where they ought to be, as the acknowledged head of the republican system of America.

Yet very prompt action is necessary for this result, of which I hope to be promptly advised by telegraph or otherwise.

I have, &c.,

S. A. HURLBUT.

[Inclosure in No. 23.—Translation.]

Mr. Balmaceda to Mr. Kilpatrick.

MINISTRY OF FOREIGN AFFAIRS,
Santiago, the 8th of October, 1881.

SIR: The newspapers of Valparaiso and of this city have published the memorandum addressed on the 24th of August, by Mr. S. A. Hurlbut, United States minister in Lima, to the commander-in-chief of our army of occupation in that city, Rear-Admiral Lynch.

Mr. Hurlbut's letter, accompanying the memorandum referred to, has not, however, been published; in it the said gentleman began by saying to Admiral Lynch that in the conversation alluded to in the memorandum diplomatic affairs were not discussed (no se trataba de asuntos diplomaticos).

My government has thought it proper to draw attention to the irregularity of this conduct, disregarding the essential part of it, because they feel certain that the sentiments expressed in the memorandum are not the expressions of the wise, noble, and faithful policy observed by the United States with regard to the belligerents of the Pacific.

The strange publicity given to a document of small confidential importance, if we take into account its forms and the circumstances under which it was edited, compels me to address myself to your excellency, in order to obtain an answer that may establish officially the truth and sincerity of the relations so worthily cultivated by our respective governments.

Mr. Hurlbut's address in presenting his credentials to the government of Señor García Calderon, now at an end; the memorandum addressed to Mr. Lynch, in which "diplomatic affairs were not discussed;" his well-known letter against Piérola, before whom Mr. Christiancy had been credited, and whose envoys met in conference in Arica, in the presence and with the full countenance of the representative of the United States; all these facts might produce deplorable disturbances and encourage our enemies uselessly, stimulating fruitless resistance without finally affecting the result of a war that in any event may become sanguinary.

Chili was provoked to war; the property of her citizens was confiscated, and they themselves inhumanly expelled from their homes; her industries were abandoned by thousands who elected to vindicate their rights and honor; enormous sums of money were expended in the maintenance of the war; the priceless blood of her sons was poured out; the enemy was routed and reduced to a radical and absolute impotency. We shall carry on the war so far as may be necessary to compel the vanquished to conclude peace, and in the adjustment of peace, practicing our rights, we shall act so far as may be necessary to obtain due reparation for the evils produced by this war, for the future security of peace, and for the permanent stability of the republic.

We shall exercise fully the primitive right which authorizes us amply to guarantee our own existence, a right confirmed at all times by the practice of European powers and also by the United States, on this continent.

I feel confident that our rights as belligerents will be in the future as much respected by the United States as they have been to this very moment; the conduct of their representatives in Arica and during all the course of the war; their friendly participation in the treaty resolving the boundary controversies with the Argentine Republic; their worthy international traditions, and the respect which as a powerful nation they owe specially to independent and sovereign states; all these circumstances give me a perfect security that the United States will continue to be the officious, may it be said, but always the neutral friends in this protracted struggle sustained by us against our enemies in the Pacific.

Inasmuch as motives strange to my government will have created an uncertain state of things in the public mind, which may be misunderstood and occasion therefore disagreeable emergencies in the difficult circumstances which the state of war creates to the belligerents, I hope to receive from your excellency the assurances which in accordance with your instructions you may give to my government regarding the reciprocal good understanding which exists, and that will be maintained in an invariable manner, between the republics we have the honor to represent.

I have, &c.,

J. M. BALMACEDA.

No. 365.

Mr. Elmore to Mr. Blaine.

LEGATION OF PERU,
Washington, October 27, 1881. (Received ———.)

SIR: As your excellency is aware from our interview this morning, I only received to-day my government's dispatches regarding the order of Admiral Lynch of 28th September, which attempts to suppress, by a stroke of the pen, the government of Señor Calderon in Peru.

I have the honor to inclose herewith a copy of the circular letter on the subject addressed by Señor Galvez, minister of foreign relations for Peru, to the representatives of foreign powers in Peru (inclosure No. 1); also a printed copy of Señor Calderon's lengthy reply to Admiral Lynch (No. 2); also a correspondence and comments of an American paper (No. 3).

Your excellency will observe that the government of Señor Calderon protests against the arbitrary act of the Chilian admiral, and that the President and his cabinet have the firm decision of continuing in their posts, and exercising their functions at all times, under all circumstances, and at any place were they may be.

Your excellency will notice the solid and dignified arguments of Señor Calderon, proving in how many ways the Chilian Government and officials have recognized his government, showing that it has been recognized by various foreign nations, and that it was increasing daily in popularity. To this I repeat what I have previously stated in my letter of 21st instant, that by a cable from Lima of 12th October the army of the south in Arequipa and Puno also have recognized it; and now I add that in an extraordinary session of the Peruvian Congress,held in Lima on 29th September, Admiral Montero (who has been commanding some force and influence in the north of Peru) has been elected Vice-President of Peru), to act in conjunction with Señor Calderon.

I am desirous to be able to send to your excellency a translation of Señor Calderon's admirable letter, and hope to do so shortly. My long letter of 21st October to your excellency, which I confirm, makes it unnecessary for me to trouble your excellency with another long letter at present.

It is proved that it is because Señor Calderon cannot and will not accede to Chili's imperious demand of a cession of Peruvian territory, as a preliminary condition to commencing negotiations of peace, that Chili pretends to destroy his government, which your excellency's government recognized for such noble reasons.

I anxiously await your excellency's judgment upon this iniquitous proceeding of Chili, which tends to make all government impossible in Peru, and renders also the conclusion of a peace impossible; and I await with equal anxiety the reply of your excellency's government to my petition of the intervention of the United States, which will unite the Peruvian people, reconstruct constitutional government in Peru, and re-establish peace in South America.

I hope also to be able to explain to your excellency, verbally, other circumstances in connection with the state of affairs in South America which make the present situation most exceptional and the action of the United States most opportune.

I have the honor to renew to your excellency the assurances of my highest and most distinguished consideration.

J. F. ELMORE.

[Inclosure in Mr. Elmore's note of October 27, 1881. Translation.]

President García Calderon's reply to the letter of Admiral Lynch, Chilian commander-in-chief, communicating his order suspending the exercise of all civil authorities not appointed by the Chilian headquarters.

LIMA, September 29, 1881.

Señor PATRICIO LYNCH: Yesterday I received your letter of the same date, in which you inform me that in pursuance of the proclamation, of which you have sent me a copy, you have put an end to my government, and asking me for a statement of the papers, archives, and other effects which the officials who have served under my orders may hold.

If I was not in possession of other facts besides your letter, I would have but few words to say in reply to it, because neither the letter nor the proclamation express the real motive of your order.

But the facts which have developed since the disarmament of my troops at Magdalena; the conferences held toward the settlement of peace between Peru and Chili; the taking possession of the treasury offices under my administration, and the publications, both in the Chilian press and the Lima newspaper La Situacion, explain the motives of your proceedings, and make perfectly clear that as soon as the Government of Chili became convinced that I am not and have never been disposed to sacrifice the territory of Peru in a treaty of peace it began to take measures hostile to me, which have been carried on to the extreme of declaring my government abolished.

So explained, your proclamation has not the character of a simple military measure within the action of martial law, and on this account my reply cannot be short. It is necessary that the serious and momentous measure contained in the proclamation should be analyzed in detail, and for this reason I must occupy your attention for some time.

Although according to the rules of law and custom (which you have hitherto followed yourself, addressing always your letters to my minister of foreign relations), I should never communicate officially with anybody but through the various departments, I wish on this occasion to depart from those rules and myself reply to your letter and deal with the question at issue.

In February of the present year a respectable majority of this capital and Callao, considering that the government of Señor Piérola had come to an end for reasons of domestic politics, to which it is not necessary to refer here, decided to form a new government, which would satisfy the exigencies of the situation, and appointed me the Provisional President of Peru.

Being in possession of this authority, strengthened by the will of the people, I commenced to exercise my functions, and the most important ones which I executed at the inauguration of my government were the following two: The negotiations for the disoccupation by the Chilian forces of the zone within which I was to exercise my functions, and the payment of the war tax levied upon Lima and Callao.

If, on exercising those acts, I had thought that my powers did not derive from the people who have intrusted them to me, but from the Chilian authorities, I would certainly not have agreed to anything nor made engagements of any kind, because I would have had no power to enter into contracts.

But the Chilian plenipotentiaries and the commander-in-chief of the army of occupation treated with me, recognizing the fullness of my powers emanating from the popular will, and for that reason I concluded agreements with them.

And it is in truth impossible to think otherwise, if we take into consideration that, in order to realize the payment of the said war tax, I practiced two of the most important acts of national sovereignty, which are the issue of a loan contracted mostly with foreigners resident in the country and the issue of treasury notes, which are obligations which the Peruvian nation are bound to pay.

The Chilian authorities, by the fact of accepting as a part payment of the war tax the funds proceeding from the loan, and the not less important fact of receiving treasury notes, recognize my authority and my legitimate right to execute those two operations. The Peruvian Government alone, can bind Peru, and only from the Peruvian Government can the Chilian authorities receive titles of Peruvian credit in payment; because I, regarded as a simple citizen of this country, cannot issue documents of credit which shall impose obligations upon the republic.

If this were not so one of two consequences would result; either the Chilian authorities allowed themselves to be deceived by me, by receiving in payment for the tax a paper issued privately and without official value, or, in the belief that I was not the chief executive, gave their consent in order that I might deceive those foreign residents, borrowing money from them and issuing notes without legal value.

The former of these suppositions would do very little honor to the intelligence of Mes-ieurs Vergara and Altimarano, and the latter would constitute them accomplices in a fradulent emission, made by a person without authority to do so. Neither of the suppositions can be admitted, and hence it must be acknowledged that the Chilians recognized me from the beginning as the legitimate chief executive of Peru.

This recognition has become afterwards (if it were possible) more explicit, because Señor Joaquin Godoy, Chilian plenipotentiary, held conferences with me in regard to peace, which were initiated by him; because you have, after Señor Godoy's departure, informed me, through distinguished officials resident in this capital, that you had asked of your government full powers to treat with me, and because in the official communication addressed by you to Minister Galvez, after the disarmament of my troops at Magdalena, stated that the act was of a purely military nature, did not imply a change in the relations existing with me, and was not intended to interrupt the pending negotiations. It is then evident from the foregoing that I have been regarded by the Chilian authorities as a person fully authorized to conclude a treaty of peace, and as I cannot execute such an act in the capacity of a private citizen of Peru, it is necessary to acknowledge that the Chilian Government has recognized me as the chief of the legitimate Government of Peru.

I am certain that you accept this logical deduction, because otherwise we will be placed in another dilemma, viz, either the public men of Chili have committed the error of believing me to be the chief of the government without being so, or that knowing I was not such, they have resolved to treat with me, provided I was ready to accept terms favorable to Chili.

Out of respect for men who occupy high positions, and the considerations which governments should show each other, I do not accept either of these conclusions; neither do I believe that Chili accepts them, and therefore I repeat that my government is recognized by yours.

This being so, and it being also proved by the foregoing facts and by other facts of public notoriety that my government was established by the popular will and not by order or consent of the Government of Chili, I cannot accept your proclamation, which declares my government abolished as if it were one of the offices under your orders. My authority derives from the people who elected me and from the Peruvian Congress, who has confirmed and extended my powers, and as long as these two authorities do not appoint another to occupy my place, I am and shall continue to be the President of Peru, whatever may be the contingencies to which I may be exposed.

My powers do not, consequently, owe their existence to the toleration of the Chilian authorities, as you state, but they derive from a fountain beyond the control of those authorities. The sovereignty of Peru, which is the source of my powers, is not subject to the authority of Chili, or, to speak more correctly, it has not disappeared by the occupation of a part of the Peruvian territory, nor will it disappear if the whole territory were occupied. The word occupation itself expresses it clearly. On the other hand there would be toleration on the part of the forces who occupy the territory if the establishment of a government in the occupied territory were contrary to martial law. In such a case it could be said with reason that its acts were tolerated (not having then the right to practice any).

Martial law gives to the occupants the right to forbid all acts which may make the occupation insecure, and on this account they may forbid whatever may endanger their safety. In accordance with this rule, established by international law and by the practice of nations, you may oppose my having troops and my practicing all acts of hostility. Acknowledging this right when my troops at Magdalena were disarmed, I protested against that act, not because I have the right to keep an army, but because it violated our pre-existing engagements, and inasmuch as it might imply a rupture of relations with me. But as you declared that that measure was a purely military one, and dictated only by motives of safety, I recognized the force of martial law, and I did not insist on my reclamation. I continue, however, occupying without troops the zone of Magdalena, Miraflores, and Chorillos, and the authorities appointed by me are to this moment at those places, which your troops have not again occupied.

This fact, apparently insignificant, proves that you and I are perfectly in accord as regards the extent of martial law. I understand that I cannot exercise in Lima any function which may have the character of a public act or of an act of force, and I abstain from practicing the same; and you must be convinced that you cannot oppose any acts outside of that sphere, and for the same reason you have not opposed my constituting offices in Lima, transacting business in them, and practicing in general all governmental acts which do not require a public manifestation as an essential requisite for their validity.

According to these principles, you have had no right to take possession of the treasury nor to sequestrate the funds which the government possesses in the Bank of London, and which proceed from loans made by the bank itself; nor to demand the surrender of the other offices under my administration. Those establishments are not of a warlike character, and I myself have no war powers, consequently martial law cannot be invoked for such acts. Martial law is not conquest; martial law does not transfer Peruvian territory to the Chilian Government, and consequently in spite of that law I can and must exercise my authority, with the limitations indicated; and the offices under my administration should and must continue in operation.

To these considerations must be added the fact that many foreign nations have recognized my government as the legitimate government of Peru; and in virtue of that recognition I have contracted with foreigners residing in this country obligations which I must fulfill. If those countries had believed that my government could disappear by an order from the Chilian authorities, they would have never recognized me. But they have thought that Peru has the right to govern herself, and have established relations with me, and have now the right to require the fulfillment of the contracts entered into with their nationals.

I have, however, stated at the beginning of this letter that my resolution not to cede any Peruvian territory as the basis of the treaty of peace is the cause of the measures taken against me. Even under this supposition it will be easy to show that what is now required of me is not justifiable.

When my election took place, I received the mission to conclude a treaty of peace with Chili; and from that moment I made efforts not only to know the true opinions of the republic as regards the treaty, but also to study the terms proposed at Arica, and to find out if they were or not reasons strong enough to make them advisable. It does not require a great effort to see that the majority, if not the whole of Peru, is opposed to the cession of territory, and this being the fact, the treaty of peace, in which that cession were stipulated, would produce as a result, not only the overthrow of the government who were to sign it, but also the necessity of undertaking another war.

The first of these reasons, which belongs exclusively to the domestic politics of Peru, does not in truth concern the Republic of Chili; but the second reason is of serious import to Chili. To her and to Peru it is of the highest importance that the peace concluded should be such that it shall not be in future altered, and that hostilities be not again renewed; and as this end cannot be attained by accepting a condition of peace which the republic rejects, I ought not and must not sign a treaty in which under the name of peace, I should make a legacy of perpetual wars to my country and to the Republic of Chili.

The example of what passes in Europe cannot be alleged to destroy the force of the preceding consideration. On the contrary the extension of frontiers among the nations of Europe has been from the remotest time, and will continue to be in the future, the cause of formidable wars which destroy millions of men. In spite of the exuberance of population and wealth of the European nations, their large permanent armies are the cause of immense evils, and these are the natural consequence of the wars of frontiers, boundaries and conquest. If this system were to be introduced into America it would produce sooner or later the ruin of the continent. Our republics are not rich in capital or in population, as is proved by the fact that all are in need of immigration, and that the least commotion compels them to raise new loans, and to issue paper money.

If, in consequence of her first war, Chili has been forced to have recourse to the use of paper money, of which she was free, what will happen when she shall be obliged to sustain two or three more wars, or at least to keep up a considerable army to maintain the extension of her frontiers. Listening only to the passions of the hour, some may say that the future which I foresee will never be realized; but only ordinary minds will think so, and neither you nor the statesmen of Chili will agree with such.

Nations never perish; reactions easily operate in them, and frequently their reconstruction is as surprising as their fall had been unexpected.

Convinced as I am of all this, and longing for a lasting peace, I cannot make up my mind to dismember the territory of Peru. I do not wish that my name shall pass to posterity with the stigma of reprobation with which the people of America will brand the man who will legalize among them the fatal system of conquest; a high feeling of American policy guides me in this case, and compels me not to consent to the cession of territory.

I know very well that these ideas will not be agreeable to a considerable portion of the Chilian people, because at all times popular feeling has been intemperate. But I believe at the same time that you and all other Chilian statesmen will think as I do, because I have believed, and now believe that your government will conclude a treaty of peace without exacting territory. I accepted the office I hold, and now continue to hold it, and have not resigned it, because I have the same conviction, which has suffered no change; although, as I have said, I judge the measures taken against me have their origin in my refusal to give up Peruvian territory.

But I have thought also that nobler ideas will make their way hereafter among Chilian statesmen, and then a treaty of peace will be easily made, and we shall be able to conclude it in a way that it will afford us securities in the future. We should be unable to attain this end, if I could not pay to Chili the expenses of the war, but I have the certainty and the means to pay a reasonable indemnity, fixed by commen accord, or by arbitration; and this is another reason which compels me to oppose a cession of territory.

As, therefore, the possibility exists of settling, within a short time, the pending questions, and feeling as I do that no Peruvian will cede a part of the territory of his country as a basis of peace, the prolongation of the existing state of things, or what has been called the indefinite occupation of the Peruvian territory, offers, as all measures of the same nature, the inconvenience of being a defective settlement.

This is neither a state of war nor a state of peace, and causing serious injury to Peru, does also injure Chili. Instead of so anomalous a situation which forces both countries to exhaust their strength, and which will make wider and wider the separation caused by the war, is it not nobler, more grand, and more American to conclude a lasting peace that will secure a tranquil and glorious future to our countries?

These are reasons of such weight that I do not doubt but that they will influence your mind not only not to insist upon the closing of my public offices, but also to decide you to turn over to me those you have taken possession of. But if, as I presume, you act by order of your government, you may at least suspend all subsequent proceedings, transmitting to the Government of Chili the present letter, which I am sure will become the basis of our future understanding.

I am, &c.,

F. GARCIA CALDERON.

No. 366.

Mr. Blaine to Mr. Hurlbut.

[Telegram.]

WASHINGTON, October 27, 1881.

HURLBUT, Minister, Lima:

Influence of your position must not be used in aid of Credit Industriel, or any other financial or speculative association.

BLAINE.

No. 367.

Mr. Blaine to Mr. Hurlbut.

[Telegram.]

WASHINGTON, October 31, 1881.

HURLBUT, Minister, Lima:

Continue to recognize Calderon government until otherwise specially instructed.

Acknowledge receipt.

BLAINE.

No. 368.

Mr. Hurlbut to Mr. Blaine.

No. 24.] LEGATION OF THE UNITED STATES,
Lima, Peru, October 31, 1881. (Received November 25.)

SIR: The events which I indicated in my last dispatch (No. 23), in relation to the recognition of the Calderon government by the interior of this country have actually transpired. Montèro, commanding the north of Peru, has formally and officially proclaimed adhesion to this authority, with the hearty assent of the army and people.

Cacères, commanding the center, has undoubtedly followed, but official notice has not yet been received. The southern department, headquarters at Arequipa, led off in this peaceful revolution on the 8th day of October. Thus the fact which I deemed of primary consequence, the unity of Peru under a constitutional head, has been attained, and it has been attained in deference to the wishes of the United States, and in distinct opposition to the European legations, as well as to the pretensions of Chili.

Not a drop of blood has been shed, not a life lost in obtaining this result. Whatever may be the final settlement of affairs with Chili, I feel that this consolidation of public sentiment in Peru is a successful issue of one object of my mission here.

It is a matter of very deep regret to me that Mr. Kilpatrick has not been able to bring any influence to bear upon the Chilian administration at Santiago in favor of the recognition and support by Chili of the Calderon government.

I understand, by certain paragraphs in his "instructions," that through Mr. Osborn the United States had received substantial assurances from Chili of favorable action by that republic toward the Calderon government, and that Mr. Kilpatrick was directed, on proper occasion, to strengthen and confirm such purposes.

Unfortunately my colleague has not written me a single dispatch, and I can only guess at his actions from events. The process of military suppression of the Calderon government by Chili has been given you heretofore, and in Mr. Valmaseda's note to Mr. Kilpatrick of 8th October he evidently chose to consider this Calderon government as utterly dissipated, for he uses the term "ya fenecido" (already dead) as descriptive of its condition.

It has seemed to me that the whole conduct of Chili in this matter has been in bad faith.

Having given the pledge referred to to Mr. Osborn, they have violated it without excuse. I find their reason for so doing in the known fact that they could not obtain from Calderon a pledge of cession of territory, and therefore determined to destroy his authority. In this they have signally failed, and have in fact contributed to his present popularity in Peru. The commissioners, Altamirano and Novoa, have been in this city some six days. As yet, no approach has been made toward negotiation. I learn from various sources, of different degrees of credit, that they are considering the propriety of indefinite armed occupation, the establishment of Chilian civil service, and the consequent reduction of Peru to a Chilian province. This is undoubtedly what they would prefer. Their principal fear seems to be that Chili has not population enough to overrun and hold Peru. The idea next in favor is to demand cession of Tarapacá, Tacna, and Arica as condition precedent to consideration of peace, and as a sine qua non of entertaining any negotiations. They say that public opinion in Chili is united and resolute to keep these territories at all hazard, and that a failure so to do would overthrow their government.

It is probable that within ten days one or other of these propositions will be decided upon. At present they utterly ignore Calderon and his government, and I am of opinion that they will soon command him to leave their lines. This, of course, they have the right to do, and he is ready to go when they say so, and I should not be surprised in that case, if they should interfere with the legations established here, or at least with those which recognize Calderon.

The straightforward and manly course for them would be to acknowledge the known fact of Calderon's lawful Presidency, sustained by an overwhelming popular sentiment, and frankly to open negotiations with him on the subject of peace on terms of equality. But for the very reason that this course would be manly and straightforward, I judge that it will not be adopted. On the contrary, I have full reason to believe that they are now secretly treating with agents of Piérola.

I have already several times presented the apparent impossibility that Peru can receive the least courtesy, to say nothing of justice, in this controversy so long as she stands alone, and I continue to wait with patience the action and decision of the Executive at home.

There are many insolences in the official Chilian paper in this city, the only one allowed to be published, and there have been wrongs done to American citizens which for the present I do not forward to you, in the hope, though I fear a vain one, that the military authorities may correct these abuses.

As to the articles in the press I take no notice, but the others are more serious, and if not soon properly adjusted I shall be compelled to send them forward for your consideration. The situation is not pleasant, and requires of me an unusual forbearance, and a careful consideration of such steps as I may find necessary to maintain the rights of our citizens.

I have, &c.,

S. A. HURLBUT.

No. 369.

Mr. Hurlbut to Mr. Blaine.

[Extract.]

No. 25.] LEGATION OF THE UNITED STATES,
Lima, Peru, November 2, 1881. (Received November 25.)

SIR: I was surprised by receiving, on the 31st ultimo, a telegram from you dated 29th, which, when deciphered, read as follows:

Influence of your position must not be used in aid of Credit Industriel or any other financial or speculating association.

To this I immediately answered.

It has not been; it will not be.

I do not know the reasons why such a warning should be sent me. I have, of course, known that the "Credit Industriel" had made arrangements with the Peruvian Government to furnish them the funds wherewith to pay the money indemnity, which might be demanded. But the whole matter of that contract, of which I never knew the particulars, was concluded long before I arrived in Lima, in fact, as I am informed, before I was appointed to this place. To set the matter absolutely at rest, I inclose herewith a correspondence had this day with President Calderon, by which it appears that the last action taken was in the month of March last.

I have looked upon the matter of these money arrangements between this corporation and the Peruvian Government, as a matter exclusively Peruvian, and not in the most remote degree connected with this legation.

Mr. Jacob R. Shipherd, who claims to represent the Cochet claim, has written very peculiar letters to Mr. * * * in reference to that claim, and in his last letter complains somewhat indecently of the little interest I appear to take in the supposed claim or syndicate over which he claimed to preside.

From what Mr. * * * tells me of the contents of his last letter, it is possible that he or his allies have something to do with this charge as to the Credit Industriel.

I wrote to the Department, in my No. 12, my opinions upon the Cochet claim, on which Mr. Shipherd and his associates rely. I have also written in reply to Mr. Shipherd's letters giving him my views of his case so far as I know its merits. I have pointed out to him the utter defect of proof as to three positions, each vital.

The whole colossal speculation rests upon assumptions, not evidence. Thus, first, it is not true in fact that Cochet discovered either guano or its uses as a fertilizer. As such it has been known and used for hundreds of years, far back into the time of the Incas.

Second. It is not true that Peru ever recognized him in any such capacity.

Third. It is not true in fact that his rights, whatever they were, descended to his illegitimate son, under whom these parties claim, or at any event that any record of legitimation has thus far been produced.

I presented these defects to Mr. Shipherd, who does not like my criticism, and writes to Mr. * * * that he can get on quite well without me, as he has the whole government and all their friends on his side and pledged to his scheme.

I am very glad to be relieved, for he has overwhelmed me with voluminous matter, so strangely written, and with such singular assumptions, that I am inclined to doubt his sanity or his truthfulness.

I would be pleased to believe in his notions, and to feel certain that American citizens had a just claim to a thousand millions, but, unfortunately, I have no evidence in favor, and very much against. Inasmuch as he has relieved me of the affair, I have concluded to send you a very considerable portion of his correspondence, so that you may judge of the character of the statements I am called upon to believe.

In the short letter, the first of the series, dated June 2, 1881, you will perceive the modest proposition of a share in the enterprise. I request that he will show to you any and all letters received from me. Let it suffice for me now to say, that I never have proposed, nor do I now propose, to aid officially or otherwise any project having any relation to the money affairs of Peru, from any source, American or foreign, unless I am instructed so to do. I shall use my best endeavors to restore good government in Peru and to bring about a peace, but shall leave that republic free, as I have hitherto done, to negotiate as she pleases for the ransom of her national life.

I send the Shipherd papers herewith, to be read if you choose to take the trouble, and to be retained in the Department, as possibly they may be necessary for me to keep.

I have, &c.,

S. A. HURLBUT.

[Inclosure 1 in No. 25.]

Mr. Hurlbut to President Calderon.

UNITED STATES LEGATION,
Lima, Peru, November 2, 1881.

Will you do me the favor of giving me the actual date of the conclusion of the contract between your government and the Société du Crédit Industriel, for the information of my government.

I have the honor, &c.,

S. A. HURLBUT.

His Excellency F. GARCIA CALDERON,
President, &c., &c.

[Inclosure 2 in No. 25.—Translation.]

Mr. Calderon to Mr. Hurlbut.

LIMA, November 2, 1881.

S. A. HURLBUT, Esq., &c., &c.:

MY DEAR SIR, AND DISTINGUISHED FRIEND: I have to state for your information, in reply to your note of to-day, that the contract between this Government of Peru and the Société du Crédit Industriél, was signed in Paris on the 7th of January, 1880, and was modified by the government over which I preside in the month of March, in the present year, 1881. This is all that has occurred in relation to this matter.

I repeat to you the assurance of my most distinguished consideration, subscribing myself your true friend and obedient servant,

F. GARCIA CALDERON.

[Inclosure 3 in No. 25.]

Mr. Shipherd to Mr. Hurlbut.

LAW OFFICE OF JACOB R. SHIPHERD,
10 Spruce street, New York, June 2, 1881.

DEAR SIR: Of course we shall be glad to have yourself—so far as it may be entirely proper—and your personal friends interested with us, and I will reserve say $250,000 of the pool stock subject to your advice.

Terms of payment can suit individual convenience.

Very respectfully,

JACOB R. SHIPHERD.

Hon. S. A. HURLBUT,
Belvidere, Ill.

[Inclosure 4 in No. 25.]

Mr. Shipherd to Mr. Hurlbut.

NEW YORK,
10 Spruce street, June 2, 1881.

DEAR SIR: I have recently written to my trusted friend and former counsel, * * * inclosing him our pamphlet and asking his advice concerning the distribution of the Chicago allotment of stock. He is of the well-known * * family of the * * * National Bank, and is the counsel of the bank. He can give you accurate and ample information concerning me personally and my business record, and I shall be glad to have you question him as freely as you may desire.

Our special relations were terminated several years ago, and he ought to speak impartially now.

Yours truly,

JACOB R. SHIPHERD.

General HURLBUT.

[Inclosure 5 in No. 25.]

Mr. Shipherd to Mr. Hurlbut.

NEW YORK,
10 Spruce street, June 2, 1881.

DEAR SIR: Our interview, on the 30th ultimo, while satisfactory in general terms, did not include so full a discussion of certain specifications as might have been had, and I supplement it on my side with a few observations upon which I shall be glad to hear your comment.

First. At the foundation of the whole business lies, in our judgment, the exceptional equity of this claim.

It was the European culture of this French chemist that did infinitely more than merely point out heaps of guano not previously localized. For one hundred and fifty years the descendants of Spanish freebooters and cloddish natives had looked upon all these heaps and seen nothing. The value in them would have remained unknown for one hundred and fifty years more if some such scientist as Cochet had not come from the outer world to find it and point it out, and to compel, by persistent demonstration the perception of its true character. If an angel from heaven had been sent with a revelation, the boon could not have been greater or more exceptional. It was to Peru at once a new creation and an outright gift.

Second. The absoluteness of the present right must not be vaguely considered.

The definition suggested in my draught of points for an agreement is not original, but is borrowed from the comment of * * * when this claim was brought to his * * notice.

When Cochet discovered guano he became, under the law, the immediate and absolute owner of one-third of all the guano in Peru, and no act or undertaking of the Peruvian people alone, thereafter, could divest him of that title. At his option and that of his representatives it may either be claimed that his right was to one-third of each separate deposit, or was such that more than two-thirds of the total having been already removed, his right is absolute to every ounce now remaining. Whichever way the claim is put, the right to seize and hold what now remains must be admitted to be sole, supreme, and indisputable.

Third. Against a right so lawful, so equitable, so absolute, no defense can be admissible. If Peru is poor it is not Cochet's fault. He has already given her $1,200,000,000, which she has chosen to squander. If her bondholders have relied on guano that was Cochet's and not Peru's, that is merely a case of mistake in title. If Chili has exhausted herself in the endeavor to humble Peruvian pride, such exhaustion discloses no reason why Cochet should pay her bills. The fact that Cochet, as discoverer, was entitled to one-third, and the declaration that he was discoverer were facts published to all the world by Peru herself, and of facts so important and thus published all the world was bound to take notice. No whine of hardship can be listened to now.

Fourth. What consideration may have passed between successive owners of this claim in the chain, is, of course, immaterial also, provided they have been legal considerations. To the owners for whom the United States Government will speak, if it speaks at all, the cost will not be less than $100,000,000, and that is enough. If earlier sales were for smaller sums, it was only because Peru had denied justice until all hopes of justice had expired. The judicial view is the only just view.

Fifth. The owners of this claim have no other forum than the international, and in that they see only their own government sitting to judge. The President and his constitutional advisers will hear the cause and decree the justice so long denied by the debtor, and will easily enough enforce whatever they decree.

Sixth. To simplify the situation by removing all issue, we propose the agreement with Peru. If she were strong she would, of course, resist, and make another Landreau record to blister the pages of history, but—

"When the devil was sick
The devil a monk would be."

And at the moment when the choice must lie between Chilian robbery and the comfortable payment of an admitted debt, even Peru may choose to pay. It is certain that we can make her choose it with eagerness, and so choose it now that she cannot hereafter repudiate. This is probably the first hour since Cochet's rights came into being when they could practically be enforced.

Seventh. If Peru solemnly confesses judgment in the premises she confesses it under her own law of priority, a law made expressly for foreign creditors of the State, and published as such, and the international forum which may undertake to enforce this claim cannot choose but stand on that law. If, then, the only defendant is estopped and concluded, can third parties be allowed to intervene to defeat the plaintiff's admitted and adjudged rights?

Eighth. As to Chili, certainly she cannot, even by absorbing Peru, acquire any greater rights than Peru. What title has she then to consideration? * * * Comment upon this point was: "If Chili attempts to resist Cochet's demand for his own, she does but make herself immediately and directly liable for the whole debt, as for a tortious detention."

Ninth. Thus far, and primarily of the absolute right.

If the foregoing suggestions are within the facts, it results:

1. That the United States Government has now the clear right as against Peru, Chili, and all the world to intervene peremptorily to adjust all questions now pending at Lima.

2. That it is its duty so to intervene, because it alone can decree and enforce justice in the premises.

Tenth. There remain then, as always, the no less important questions of expediency and detail, and concerning these it is not necessary to speak at the moment with entire confidence in detail, because advantage may be taken and concessions must be made in the face of the facts which will change from day to day. Expediency is, after all, in sound diplomacy, only another name for exact justice—the justice due at the moment to all the interests involved—and it would be premature to decree finally before all the parties have been finally heard. Certain general rules and certain stable facts, however, may be safely considered in advance. Thus:

First. Nothing in the present situation need delay a general notification to all concerned that the United States must deem any arrangement to which it is not a controlling party provisional only, and subject to revision at the pleasure of the United States.

Second. The supremacy of the United States in the premises being first acknowledged, concession in detail may be promised—subject to the limitations of equity.

Third. The intervention of the United States, if based exclusively upon the property, rights of its citizens, involves no chance of political complications present or future, and must command the unqualified respect of all governments.

Fourth. No opportunity for an intervention so safe, so important, and so influential, perhaps, has heretofore occurred in our history, and no administration so favorably situated for moving in like premises has heretofore existed.

You will, I think, agree with me also that no President, within the memory of men now living, has sat at the head of the government less likely to neglect his official duty on the one hand, or to give way to mere zeal on the other.

Fifth. No need exists to furnish American money to either Chili or Peru. English and French merchants and bankers are already preparing to make large advances against guano and nitrate to be consigned. American merchants and bankers would gladly enough do likewise if only permitted.

If it is expedient to buy Chili off with $10,000,000, $20,000,000, or any other sum, there will not be the slightest difficulty in arranging the advances from either New York, Paris, or London, upon a purely customary commercial basis. As recently as last January $5,000,000 were placed in a bank in this city by a few American capitalists to be advanced to Peru in the midst of the war against no better security than President Piérola's agreement to consign guano, and this money was only withdrawn when the owners of Cochet's claim exhibited it and gave notice that they would attach every cargo that should arrive.

Sixth. If English, French, and American merchants are content to advance upon Peruvian and Chilian promises, it needs no saying how much more readily and liberally they would advance upon contracts with the Peruvian company, backed by the United States Government. Money would be thrust upon us in excess of all possible uses.

The third topic is that which concerns the personnel of the Peruvian company, and as I intimated to you the utmost frankness is recognized to be the government's due.

First. The claim was first purchased of Cochet's sole heir by an American merchant long resident at Lima, who discovered it very much as Cochet discovered guano, and who is entitled to like credit and reward, however liberal.

He sold interests to friends in the United States, who now unite with him in conveying to my clients. These clients, at the proper time, will cause such conveyance to be made for their account directly to the Peruvian company.

Second. One of the most valuable charters ever created in this country has been secured, and the transfer to my clients will probably be made within twenty days.

Third. My clients are not so well known that their names could be of special service, and for this reason they prefer to remain temporarily anonymous. Their identity will appear in due course.

Fourth. I have been intrusted with ample discretion in the matter of organization, and my only instructions are:

1. To make the executive worthy of the interest involved.

2. To make it absolutely satisfactory to the Executive of the United States.

These instructions will control me.

Fifth. You will perceive at once how easy my task is. I have no stock to float. I have no popular interest to awaken. I have, practically, no money to raise, and, especially, I have no bonds to market. I have only to seek the counsel of the wisest statesmen and financiers of the country and to avail myself of the definitive suggestions of * * * and under such advice to bring together, perhaps, one hundred stockholders, who shall choose from their own number a body of trustees and executive officers competent to administer the guano deposits and the nitrate beds upon an ordinary commercial basis, and out of the proceeds of sales to provide for all the creditors of Peru and the Peruvian Government itself, if necessary.

Sixth. Whether I am not myself overtasked by this trust the event alone can determine. What the probabilities are those who know my record can, perhaps, advise. If I am directly questioned, I may answer briefly that for twenty years I have been a successful organizer under conditions never so favorable as these. In the midst of the war I organized and administered the Freedmen's Aid Work in the Northwest and Southwest, covering fifteen States, and then consolidated the dozen organizations of the country into one, and administered the whole. When banking at Chicago and New York, I introduced western town and county bonds to an eastern market and made them popular by millions where they had been unknown or only distrusted. In 1871 I established at Frankfort-on-the-Main—then the investment center of Europe—the first American banking house opened there, and upon a then declining market sold $20,000,000 of new American railway securities in a few months.

Seventh. Among the representative gentlemen with whom I am already or shall soon be in confidential negotiation in the premises, I may name such as these [here follows a list of forty-five names of persons or firms which are here omitted], and out of a list not less select and representative the organization will be exclusively made.

As I intimated to you, with a view to nationalizing the corporation, stock will be allotted to select lists of the leading capitalists in Boston, Hartford, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Cleveland, Cincinnati, Chicago, and St. Louis; such lists to be made under expert local advice, and each city to be represented in the direction; the board of trustees to consist of, say, 21 members.

The very best executive and administrative talent will be employed, both in New York and in Peru, and such relations with the governments of all the countries interested will be cultivated as shall tend above all else to unqualified confidence and respect.

Eighth. The controlling sentiment of the present proprietors is wholly in accord with all the suggestions you made. While taking advantage of the present opportunity to enforce the definitive recognition of an equitable indebtedness, every movement of the creditors after such recognition should be helpful and friendly, and only so; and so far from taking any advantage of the inferior legal status of other creditors, we are ready to deal more than liberally with every one. There is enough for all if there is a proper administration, and it is precisely a proper administration we undertake to provide.

There is no occasion therefore for any competition in the English or French syndicates of merchants or bondholders. We must consign guano and niter to England, and we may as well consign to Anthony Gibbs & Co., as to any other house. We must consign also to the Continent, and if Dreyfuss & Co. will make fair terms, we may as well consign to them as to others. These concessions not only make these important interests our allies, but render immediately available as our own money, all the advances these strong houses already propose to make, and whatever other advances can be used to advantage our New York consignees will provide instantly.

There is absolutely nothing to be done which will not do itself the moment the Washington government gives notice of its right to supremacy.

As this note concerns itself with explanations which I should be glad to have reach the President at an early day, I rely upon your permission to forward him a copy at once.

I shall be particularly obliged if you will use the utmost frankness in such comments and suggestions as may occur to you; above all else we desire to avoid mistakes, and not less to do well than to mean well.

I am, sir, your obedient servant,

JACOB R. SHIPHERD.

The Hon. S. A. HURLBUT,
United States Minister to Peru, Belvidere, Ill.

[Inclosure in No. 25.]

Mr. Shipherd to Mr. Hurlbut.

Personal.] AUGUST 19, 1881.

MY DEAR SIR: When the gentleman to whom the inclosed letter is addressed calls for it, please deliver to him with the letter all the printed inclosures except the one upon which I have written your own name. He is represented to me to be a person of exceptional influence, intimately in the confidence of President Calderon. The letter concerns the documents, and the whole are expected to reach at once the Peruvian executive.

The progress in our case since your departure I will briefly outline.

By arrangement with the attorneys of the Landreau claim, we treat the two interests for present diplomatic purposes as one to a certain extent. The owners of the Cochet interest will, at the proper time, absorb the junior lien so as to protect the equities of the interests involved.

Among the present active attorneys of the Cochet interest are * * * (who has prepared a conclusive brief in support of all our demands), * * * who will probably be * * * colleague next year; * * * and others will be added in due course; and from these names you will safely draw your own inferences.

Not only have none of my expectations been disappointed so far—they have, as a whole, been far exceeded, and the horizon still widens.

You are concerned principally to know how we stand at * * * and I will enter first upon that topic.

After a preliminary conference between * * * and * * * I was telegraphed for, and I went on to Washington. * * * called for me, and we went, upon invitation, directly to * * * residence, where a most cordial greeting awaited us. The evening was occupied until near midnight and the next forenoon as well. All the phases of the two claims were carefully discussed, and from first to last, upon the unqualified postulate that the United States must protect fully all equitable rights of American citizens wherever vested.

At the close I was asked to state my immediate wishes, and replied, substantially, as follows:

"It seems to me that Landreau's claim must be deemed adjudicated by Congress and enforced accordingly.

"The final proofs in the Cochet case are not yet quite in technical form, and until they are no technical examination of the case can be made by the Department. Moreover, as to Cochet's interests, we have as yet no grievance to report, and may never have any."

[Before you will clearly understand the points next made you will need to read the inclosed pamphlet, upon which I have written your name, a translated reprint from the original Spanish copy in our possession.]

I continued:

"There is no evidence that any issue was ever raised by Cochet not shown in his pamphlet, and by that it appears that he raised two only—the one involving his right to be declared the true discoverer of guano, and the other concerning a special discovery in the treatment of nitrate bases. Of these the first was overwhelmingly adjudged in his favor, and upon that adjudication our case now rests; with the other, which remains undecided, we have no concern.

"If Cochet was the discoverer of guano, his discovery, as * * * observed, vested in him the title to one-third of all the guano in Peru, and he may, at his option, claim one-third of each heap, or any other equitable one-third of the total. This is not a claim, but a title as distinguished from a claim, and what descended to his lien, of whom we buy, was property ipso facto. For this property no demand has been denied, and presumably none will be. If, when the demand is made by legal and equitable American owners, a refusal follows, then, and not till then, will a conversion accrue, and then, and not till then, will an original wrong be committed; and this original wrong will be committed directly upon American citizens, whom it will then be the clear duty of their government to install in their property.

"But this is not quite all. It is notorious that Chili, Peru, and certain creditors of Peru, are at the very point of apportioning among themselves not only the guano, which is absolutely our property, but the only other available asset of Peru, the nitrate, also. If such appropriation were allowed, irreparable mischief might result.

"I therefore ask a preliminary injunction forbidding all progress in the direction of any such apportionment until the Landreau claim and the Cochet title are first properly recognized and provided for—the former paid as res adjudicata, and the latter allowed or fairly disproved."

The Secretary instantly responded, "That you will get, and I will make it my first business."

On the 2d instant, very soon after, by direction of the Secretary, I was advised that the identical instructions suggested had that day been sent you both by cable and by post, and that I might rely upon the status quo accordingly.

The inclosed letter to * * * is from an eminent friend of Peru, intimately known in executive circles alike at Lima and at Santiago, and, I believe, also at La Paz. He looks upon our overture as the great, the magnificent opportunity of Peru to retrieve all her sad past; and that you may well understand his view of the case, I have gained permission to add to these inclosures a (English) copy of the more important parts of his dispatch—these of course for your eye only.

I ought, perhaps, to use informal frankness concerning * * * , Mr. Calderon's confidential agent here. His principal attention has been openly devoted to forwarding the views of a French syndicate, of which Dreyfuss is the head, and a malodorous Cuban by the name of Suarez (he went out in the steamer with you, I am told) is the ostensible agent. The association (and I do not get this at second-hand) has materially lessened * * * influence in Washington, and as Dreyfuss is synonymous with Piérola, you will need no farther hint.

You perceive then that our programme, as approved, unqualifiedly by * * * is:

1. Unqualified demand for payment of the Landreau claim.
2. Proper attention to the demand about to be made for Cochet's property.
3. Peremptory stay of all negotiations touching the cession of guano, or nitrate, or territory, pending final adjustment of these American interests.

I rely upon your good opinion of us to spare us the need of saying what once for all I beg you to understand, that we address ourselves to you as minister only, and neither ask nor wish you to take any attitude toward these claims other than such as your official instructions shall authorize and require. We do confide in your patriotism and love of fair dealing to push with exceptional vigor if necessary and to their full logical limit the decisive instructions received, and to leave no government and no citizen in doubt that the United States is in dead earnest in the premises, and such vigor you may be sure, will be as distinctly and as gratefully appreciated by our company as by the Washington Government.

All that need be said under this head is summed up in the assurance that we address ourselves to you in exactly the same manner in which we are welcomed by * * * himself; we supply to you the identical information supplied to him, and shall be more than content if you as heartily stand for us at the front as he stands for us at headquarters.

If you will be so good as to advise me of the safe receipt of this, and the delivery of the inclosures to * * * please see that they are placed only in his own hand, and will favor me with such suggestions as may occur to you, the courtesy will be duly appreciated.

I remain, dear sir, very truly, yours,

JACOB R. SHIPHERD.

[Inclosure in No. —]

Endorsement: * * * to * * * * sent me by Mr. Shipherd.

Private copy.]

NEW YORK, August 20, 1881.

MY DEAR FRIEND: On presenting the inclosed note to his excellency the American minister, you will receive a set of four printed documents, two of them bound pamphlets. These, as you will see, are all private and confidential copies of papers, inaccessible to the public. I have been fortunate enough to obtain them, and to procure them to be sent for entire safety under seal to the American legation.

These papers hold the key to the one happy solution of all the troubles of Peru which yet remains possible, and I count myself the happiest of men that it is my privilege to place them within the reach of the Peruvian executive.

If the scheme now offered had been made in heaven and let down by angels, as was the sheet sent down to Saint Peter, it could not have more perfectly provided for all the present woes of unhappy Peru.

After carefully examining it and adding to what you find printed, the facts which I shall state in this letter, all of which came to me directly and officially from original sources and may be implicitly relied on, you will see what an opportunity pitiful heaven has at last sent.

These are the leading historical facts:

1. Cochet was the true and first and sole discoverer of the merchantable value of guano. But for him those vast heaps, more precious than all the gold and silver in the Cordilleras, might have lain dead and neglected to this day.

The sole intent of the decree of 1833 was to encourage persons to discover to the state sources of wealth within itself, unknown before; all other discoveries combined made since that day have not brought to the republic one-fourth the fresh wealth which has come through Cochet; if he be not entitled to the one-third then should no merit ever find reward. The whole civilized world with one voice will declare this.

2. Happily, indeed, his right has not only never been denied by Peru, but has always been admitted, and was solemnly adjudicated by the government in the report of the commissioners of premiums, as printed on page 13 of the pamphlet I send you, entitled "Truth Demonstrated and Calumny Defeated." See, also, the references upon page 43 of the Prospectus of the Peruvian Company.

It is only necessary, therefore, in order to make perfect use of the present opportunity, that the executive should be true to itself and to its own existing record, and recognize facts which it is impossible for any one to deny. The way is easy, plain, and most honorable.

3. The only dispute Cochet ever had with the government, as shown by his own pamphlet, was over his nitrate discovery, which seems not to have been appreciated, and which is no longer a living question. If an agreement as to the nitrate process could have been reached, he would immediately have received not only the prize awarded him as the discoverer of guano, but necessarily also, his one-third in full and in due course. Unhappily for himself, most happily now for Peru, he would yield nothing, and returned to France and died a pauper.

4. This stubbornness of the great discoverer, and the fact that his only heir, a natural son, Gelacio, born in Lima, was a mere child, and ignorant of his rights till an American brought them to his knowledge less than three years ago, explain in a moment how Providence held all the conditions silent for a generation to open them at this critical moment for Peru's salvation.

5. You will again note the special interposition of Providence. Although this great right has lain still so long, nothing of its vitality has been lost. Cochet was solemnly adjudged to be "the true discoverer," and thereupon, if not even earlier, he became, in the language of * * * , the first lawyer in the United States,—"Cochet became immediately the owner in fee absolute of one-third of all the guano in Peru, known and unknown, for being the discoverer of its value his right was inseparable from the thing wherever found, and that ownership could never be extinguished or limited, save by his own act."

6. This ownership, which, as you see, is no mere claim, but an adjudicated and undisputed title, had no value to the helpless heir—ignorant and penniless and unknown. American capitalists purchased it, however, and are now the owners of every pound of guano left in Peru, and of the money value of so much as has been sold in excess of the two-thirds belonging to the republic.

Their purchase is as valid as if they had bought land and buildings, and their government has, of course, the right and the duty to see them protected, and you may be sure it will thoroughly perform that duty and unhesitatingly exercise that right.

7. No demand has yet been made upon the Peruvian Government for the possession of this guano, but such a demand will be made in a few weeks by a commissioner to be sent out.

If the executive shall accede to the demand and freely consent that the owners of this great property may take it at once without the hinderance of Peru, then these owners must demand it of the Chilians, and if the Chilians detain it for an hour they will make themselves liable instantly for a tortious conversion, and you may be sure the Washington Government will make short work with them. Upon this point the owners of this great interest have long ago received the most sweeping assurances directly from the American Executive.

8. Now we may close the circuit. To consent that this American corporation shall take as a right the identical guano and nitrate which otherwise Chili will take anyhow, is all that is necessary to relieve Peru instantly and permanently by taking shelter under the broad wing of the United States and compelling Chili to settle all the rest with the United States.

9. If Peru—I do not admit the possibility—should refuse to deliver the guano demanded, and to pay at once the value of so much as is missing, then this refusal would be an original denial of justice directly to American citizens, and their government would then enforce their right against Peru herself, and sad indeed would be her condition then.

10. As to the Landreau claim, it, as you see, has been fully adjudicated by the American Congress, and the American minister at Lima has been peremptorily instructed to give notice that it can no longer be discussed, but must be paid.

11. The scheme of the conservative owners of Cochet's rights is, as you will see by the proposed treaty, the substitution of an insolvent assignment to creditors for the cruel humiliations of war.

The Cochet title has unquestionable priority, and, besides, he is the largest creditor. There is, therefore, every reason why his representatives should demand the control of the assets; and they show a handsome liberality in their offer to provide for all other creditors, including Chili, whom the United States is willing to recognize as a creditor for a reasonable war indemnity. This Peruvian Company, then, itself the chief and the first creditor, will take the guano and the nitrate in trust only for the benefit of all the creditors. [I may say to you privately that the company will protect you from any trouble with the Landreau interest, and that you may treat the two interests as one.] The company, then, being a creditor for, say, $1,000,000,000, is willing to restrict its preference to 6 per cent. upon one-half the sum (say, $30,000,000 annually), and out of the remainder of the income to create a sinking fund to retire all other indebtedness. It is ready to issue its scrip at par for all Peruvian paper, and thus to restore the government to practical solvency at once.

12. More than this, the manager of the syndicate, who will be the permanent president of the company, and who, with his immediate friends, will permanently control the entire policy of the company, is known to me and to Consul Tracy, and we have undoubted assurance that from the first the company will be prepared to render every assistance to the Peruvian executive which may be necessary to put it upon a proper footing in the first months of a new beginning. The owners of the company are among the most solid, safe, and conservative of men, and have framed a policy to last at least fifty years, and to secure the largest prosperity in the future, resting upon the most secure foundations of order, industry, commerce, and peace. They have commercial plans extending far beyond the limits of Peru. Their ambition is to make Peru the model South American Republic, and to repeat there all the best commercial methods known in this country. They are gentlemen of the purest character and of the most honorable ideals, and will admit to their circle none of any less honorable type.

13. I may say farther concerning these gentlemen, whose identity is known to me in detail, that they include the nearest personal and political friends of the Executive, and not only of the present Executive, but of the Vice-President as well, who will succeed to the Presidency in case of President Garfield's death. They also include representatives of the most powerful money corporations in the country, and you may rest absolutely assured that in dealing with them the Peruvian executive is for all practical purposes dealing directly with the power and the honesty of the United States itself. Once established in their great property in Peru they would be protected if necessary by the entire power of their government, no matter who the acting Executive might happen to be. For the commercial enterprise of this nation has now become as powerful as that of England once was, but most happily without any of that selfish greed which has made England the foe of her own colonies, and hereafter American property interests in foreign lands will be thoroughly taken care of.

14. The people of the United States, as we have seen in the matter of the proposed Panama Canal, are determined that no European government shall take foothold in this hemisphere, but they have no ambition for themselves except an honorable commercial ambition. They want no more territory, nor do they wish to meddle at all in the political affairs of sister republics. They are willing, as in the present instance, to forbid the victor an extreme cruelty upon the vanquished, and for the rest their only desire is to see every republic cultivate the arts of peace, and become happy and prosperous within its own borders.

15. I am able to tell you, on the highest authority, that the Department of State has long ago notified Chili in the plainest words that she will not be permitted to take any territory from either Peru or Bolivia, except it be found that there is no other possible way of securing her proper war indemnity. I am able, on the same authority, to tell you that she (Chili) has been notified that American citizens have filed at Washington their claim as owners of all the guano now in Peru, and that for every pound she takes she must hereafter account to the United States, and that she has also been notified that no cession of territory or property by Peru will be permitted until the Cochet and Landreau claims have first been provided for.

You perceive, therefore, that already Peru has a great friend at her back, and that henceforth it is only necessary for her to lean upon that friend to be wholly saved.

16. More than this, there is help for Bolivia, too.

The owners of the Cochet rights are clear-eyed men who see far into the future. Their first interest—I mean now their own first interest—is to see Peru restored to all prosperity. While they will not meddle in any quarrel not their own, they cannot allow any terms to be inserted into the treaty of peace which will so cripple Peru or Bolivia as to affect their own commercial plans, and they will not allow any such terms to be inserted. Upon this you may safely rely.

They will open the guano market and the nitrate market all over the world as it has never been opened yet. They will do a business of $100,000,000 a year when once their plans are perfected, and will open the now dead silver and quicksilver mines also, if properly encouraged, and will pay off all these debts that now look so hopeless easily enough, and leave Peru richer by far than she has ever yet been. All this is easy enough to American enterprise.

They are shrewd enough to see that they should have the Bolivian nitrate too, and if Bolivia will treat them fairly she too can be fully taken care of—by leasing under a proper commercial treaty all her nitrate territory to the Peruvian Company, which will then work the whole as one interest, and pay Bolivia a regular dividend out of the annual profits.

17. If you have noticed how such capitalists as these are now transforming Mexico, covering it with railroads and canals, and reopening its dead gold and silver and copper mines, you will see the example which may now be repeated in Peru.

At the head of the Mexican enterprise is General Grant, and with him are his friends. The managers of the Peruvian Company are not one whit less able in capital. Out of the midnight may spring at once the clear dawn.

18. * * * I beg you, therefore, to acquaint his excellency the President at once with all the foregoing facts, that he may be able to act with promptitude and intelligence.

19. From the first Mr. Shipherd has sought to reach, * * * but always in vain. He has, therefore, freely consulted * * * but * * * could only answer for himself, and could not of course bring anything to the notice of the Executive. I have, in the exigency, volunteered to place the facts within the President's reach, and having done so my duty is finished. In answer to questions directly asked me, I have not hesitated to express the belief that most eagerly would Peru embrace this great opportunity. I shall be compensated for this long letter if I can have immediate official assurance that I have not given bad advice.

* * * * * * *

The idea of a treaty with Bolivia is a recent one; a draft of outline is now being made, and when printed a copy will be sent you.

This is a long letter, but not so long as its theme, and if it opens a door of escape for unhappy Peru I shall be glad indeed that it was my privilege to write it. * * *

Mr. Shipherd to Mr. Elmore.

NEW YORK, August 25, 1881.

SIR: I have the honor to be charged with the duty of bringing to the official notice of your excellency the fact that one-third of all the guano lying in original deposits within the territory of Peru on the first day of January, 1841, is now, and for some time past has been, the property of Franklin Stewart and others, who are American citizens, and my clients, and whose title has duly descended from Alexander Cochet, duly adjudged to have been the first and true discoverer of guano in Peru, and in whom the fee absolute to such one-third was duly vested by the republic by operation of law.

And hereupon I am further charged to demand, as I now do, in behalf of these owners, due recognition by the existing government of all the rights of my clients in the premises as such owners, and the formal release in their favor of all custody, control, claim, and assertion contrary or adverse to the title herein asserted, so far as the Government and people of Peru are or may be concerned.

And hereupon I am further charged to demand, as I now do, payment in full, with interest from the date of removal for so much of the property hereby demanded as may not be found in the place of original deposit when the Government of Peru shall attest the release hereinabove demanded.

And hereupon I am further charged to protest, as I now do, against any and all negotiations and acts tending towards the cession, sale, lease, hypothecation, or other incumbrance or disposition of any property held, owned, or contolled by Peru pending the full satisfaction of the demands herein made and intended.

A copy of this notice and demand will be delivered to the honorable the Secretary of State at Washington, and a duplicate is herewith inclosed for transmission, at your official discretion, to His Excellency the President of Peru.

I shall be pleased to supply to His Excellency the President of Peru, upon due request, any further information appropriate to the premises, including all necessary evidences of the title herein asserted, and to designate a commissioner duly authorized to represent the owners in the immediate custody and control of the property hereby demanded.

In conclusion, I beg your excellency to receive, &c.,

JACOB R. SHIPHERD,
Attorney for Franklin Stewart and others, as aforesaid.

His Excellency the Hon. J. F. ELMORE,
Minister of Peru, Resident at Washington, D. C.

Mr. Shipherd to Mr. Martinez.

NEW YORK, August 26, 1881.

SIR: I have the honor to inclose herewith a copy of a communication heretofore addressed and delivered to his excellency the minister of Peru, resident at Washington. I add also another copy of the inclosure and a copy of this note to be forwarded at your official discretion, to His Excellency the President of Chili. A further copy of this note will be delivered to the honorable the Secretary of State at Washington.

The immediate and sincerely friendly purpose of this note is to spare the Government of Chili the serious embarrassment which would necessarily follow if the representatives of Chili now in Peru should continue to deal, however inadvertently, with the property of citizens of the United States, as if it were the property of Peru.

And hereupon I am authorized to assure your excellency in no doubtful terms of the readiness of my clients to recognize every act involved in the actual status resulting under the rules of war among civilized nations, from the campaign of Chili now closing, reserving only those indestructible rights of neutrals which even war must recognize and protect.

It is believed that so far from embarrassing or delaying the conclusion of a peace honorable alike to victor and vanquished, and just to all interests to be affected by the adjustment so much desired, and as yet so vainly sought, the interests which I have the honor to represent, may be so circumstanced as to afford to all parties an immediate and final solution of all urgent problems, and especially may afford the most efficient and substantial guarantees of a long period of peace and prosperity in the immediate future, that peace which tends only to industry and internal content, and indisposes to intrigue and to war.

It may be proper to prevent possible indistinctness, that I should specifically point out the necessary meanings of this communication as to the past as well as to the future, and with your excellency's indulgence I therefore proceed to observe—

First. That this notice of title is unqualified, and must be understood to imply whatever may be implied by an unqualified notice and demand in like premises.

Second. That Chili must account to the American owners for whatever guano she has removed or suffered to be removed from original deposits in Peru at any time since January 1, 1841.

Third. That Chili must, on and after the day of the delivery of this note and its inclosures to your excellency, recognize and protect the title herein asserted throughout the territory of Peru, so long as the military forces of Chili shall continue therein.

Fourth. That for any failure or refusal hereafter to recognize and to protect the title herein asserted, Chili must be held liable, and the aggrieved will then be necessarily remitted to the protection of their own government.

Fifth. It should not be overlooked that so long as the military forces of Chili continue in Peru, the undersigned must require of them directly, and must hold the Government of Chili directly responsible for all the protection, relief, and assistance, which but for such occupation the undersigned might properly demand of the Government of Peru; and express notice of such requirement is hereby given, together with like notice that for any detention or appropriation of or injury to the property of Peru, the debtor of the clients of the undersigned, after the delivery to your excellency of this notice, and pending the full satisfaction of the demands comprised in the memoranda herewith inclosed, the undersigned must and will hold the Government of Chili directly liable in full.

Of course I hold myself ready to supply to His Excellency the President of Chili, upon due request, all further information appropriate to the premises, including all necessary evidences of the title herein asserted, and to designate a commissioner, duly authorized to represent the owners in the immediate custody and control of the property herein demanded.

Not for a moment doubting the sincere readiness of the Government and people of Chili at all times to do justice, and fully confiding in the early and amicable adjustment of all issues concerning my clients,

I avail myself, &c.,

JACOB R. SHIPHERD,
Attorney, &c.

His Excellency Hon. MARTIAL MARTINEZ,
Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary of Chili, at Washington.

Mr. Shipherd to Mr. Hurlbut.

AUGUST 30, 1881.

MY DEAR SIR: I sent you a very important parcel by the last steamer, and herewith duplicate it throughout, to cover possible mischances of transportation.

At this writing, the President having passed, on the 26th and 27th, an exceedingly grave crisis, seems to be on the sure road to recovery. You will heartily share the general joy.

Our enterprise makes continuous progress, and I will keep you advised of all developments of interest. Of our commissioners plenipotentiary, one has been chosen and negotiations for the other are now pending. We shall always be glad to receive your suggestions, and shall reciprocate all courtesies shown.

Yours, truly,

J. R. SHIPHERD.

Mr. Shipherd to Mr. Hurlbut.

SEPTEMBER 6, 1881.

MY DEAR SIR: I must go away for a few days, and will leave this for my son to mail before the next steamer's mail closes.

The letters in the Herald and the World, received by last steamer, disclose the hearty vigor with which you have begun your great work, and you may be sure that vigor is appreciated.

I shall try to write at least briefly by every steamer to keep you advised of progress here.

We shall try to get our commissioners off during October, and they are being selected with very great care and under the constant advice of the Executive with reference to entire harmony with the government and its representatives, particularly yourself.

With this will be inclosed copies of drafts or demands on Peru and Chili, which will be, after final corrections, duly engrossed (and also printed), and personally served, say towards the end of this month. I should be glad if we could have the benefit of your advice in the premises, but it is thought better to deliver these at once; and some time before our commissioners sail you will greatly aid us, and in the reflex aid your own negotiations by frankly and fully advising us by post, pending the arrival of our commissioners, of whatever may aid us in shaping our plans and settling a policy. Of one thing you may, however, be assured once for all, and that is that from first to last we shall neither propose nor favor any measure which does not, above all else, tend to the "greatest good of the greatest number." The more worthy your own plans shall be of our great government, the heartier you will find our co-operation.

Faithfully, yours,

JACOB R. SHIPHERD.

Mr. Shipherd to Mr. Hurlbut.

SEPTEMBER 19, 1881.

MY DEAR SIR: On the 17th * * * called upon me, introduced by a * * * who is my friend, and we had a long and very satisfactory conference.

He informed me that he had some weeks since forwarded to President Calderon the papers I sent him, the same sent * * * and asked for duplicates. He explained to me the plans of the Société Industriale (in which he was deeply interested), and responded cordially to my suggestion that if our plans should succeed we would make a liberal co-operative arrangement with the société as a party legitimately entitled to fair recognition. He discussed the scheme with courteous deference, as if it were in principle settled, and only methods of giving it effect remained to be considered. He asked somewhat eagerly whether Peru might rely upon American protection in carrying out the agreement with us after she had made it, and seemed to have no anxiety on any other point; indeed, he said, "If that is assured all the rest will follow as smoothly as the flowing of a stream."

He surprised me with the statement that Dreyfuss not only is not in the société syndicate, but is hostile to it. I had heard the other statement always. Do you know what the truth is?

He welcomed my promise of a formal demand, to be served upon him, say, within fifteen days, which will initiate direct and decisive negotiations, and volunteered the offer to furnish me copies of the société's contract with the government in 1880. Nothing could have been more satisfactory than his entire manner and discourse. What its real significance and importance may turn out to be, of course we must wait for the future to disclose.

We note Piérola's resignation, but presume it to be merely a preliminary to his formal re-election, or election rather, to the presidency by his congress.

I wish you would inform me whether President Calderon has authority to conclude a treaty with us in the vacation of Congress?

Since my writing by the last steamer, I have been necessarily absent from the city, and our internal negotiations have been consequently suspended. I may have more news for you by the next steamer.

I should greatly prize your advice, and daily regret the distance that parts us. Do not fail to write with the utmost frankness and fullness, and by every mail, if practicable. If I can be of any service to you personally in any way, do not hesitate to command me.

As I write, the President is sinking again, and the gravest apprehensions prevail.

Faithfully, yours,

JACOB R. SHIPHERD.

Mr. Shipherd to Mr. Hurlbut.

SEPTEMBER 28, 1881.

MY DEAR SIR: Since my last the great change has come, and General Garfield's administration, so full of promise, is no more.

The Senate is to meet October 18, and the air is full of suggestions of an entirely new Cabinet. It is understood that General Grant advises that Mr. Fish be recalled to the control of the Department of State, and that this advice is likely to prevail. Of course the instructions you have already received will continue in force until specifically modified, and it shall be our care to prevent such modification. The nearest friends of the new President are, or will be, among our stockholders, and our original plan to offer General Grant himself a prominent seat in the direction will probably be carried out. Then, if Peru is wise enough to co-operate with us, I think no administration will refuse us the aid necessary to compel the acquiescence of Chili.

Until towards the middle of October I cannot receive your acknowledgment of my first message (August 20), but thereafter I shall hope to hear fully from you by every steamer. It seems to me I cannot be widely mistaken in assuming that such facts as I have been sending will be helpful and welcome to you; it is at least equally certain that similar advices from your office will be greatly useful here.

I may as well be frank enough to say farther that the intelligence and vigor with which you have begun your work fulfill our best hopes, and that if there is a change in the head of the Department of State we shall ask that no change be made at Lima.

Negotiations are pending with a leading Republican journal which, if concluded, will make it our especial organ. It has no Peruvian or Chilian correspondence. Either with this journal, or with some other equally good, and of the very first rank, we shall conclude arrangements, and these arrangements will entitle us to publish our own letters from Lima and Santiago. Can you retain for us competent men? The letters must be sent to me, and, after revision, I will publish them. The only satisfactory letter I have seen in the World is the one dated August 10; those in the Herald are of very ordinary quality, and there seem to be no others.

As soon as we are fairly afloat, within range of the public eye, there will be a keen appetite and a general market for Peruvian and Chilian news, and not merely gossippy, but able and comprehensive accounts should come by every mail. I have been twenty years in practical journalism, and know how such correspondence can be used. If you can secure competent men I wish you would do so; there shall be no scrimping of the pay.

I write to-day because I happen to have a leisure moment. If anything important develops before the mail closes I will write again.

Very faithfully, yours,

JACOB R. SHIPHERD.

No. 370.

Mr. Hurlbut to Mr. Blaine.

No. 26.] LEGATION OF THE UNITED STATES,
Lima, Peru, November 9, 1881. (Received December 3.)

SIR: The event of the week has been the arrest of President Calderon and Mr. Galvez, his minister for foreign affairs, by the Chilian military authorities.

You have been advised that on the 28th September Admiral Lynch, by order of that date, suppressed the Calderon government, and forbade the exercise of any authority by them.

Mr. Calderon has been quite careful to make no ostentatious display, but has never ceased to perform acts of authority. On the 4th of this month he caused a circular to be sent by his secretary, Mr. Galvez, to the diplomatic body of this city, giving them information of Montero's adhesion to his government. This act is said to be the provocation to this singular violence by Chili.

I am informed, on good authority, that the arrest was advised against by Altamirano and Novoa, but peremptorily ordered from Santiago. It was effected about 2 o'clock on Sunday morning, the 6th, with a good deal of unnecessary military display. A battalion was placed in the street in rear of his house and the entire block closely guarded. A company was thrown out across the front of this legation, which is only three doors from Mr. Calderon's house, probably to prevent his seeking asylum here. Mr. Calderon, however, had no idea of attempting escape, and was found in his house. He and Mr. Galvez were at once taken to Callao and put on board the iron-clad Cochrane, which sailed on Monday evening. Their destination is said to be Santiago.

The real purpose of this arrest undoubtedly was to check the strong movement in Peru toward the support of the constitutional government, and to continue the state of anarchy and confusion as a ground for Chilian occupation. It is also quite possible that it was intended to be understood by the people at large as the reply of Chili to the known support of that government by the United States. This purpose will of course be disavowed, but there is no doubt in my mind that it exists, nor that it is so understood by every one here.

The policy of Chili is transparent, and is in fact avowed in a semi-official way by their organ in this city, La Situacion. It is to hold this country under armed occupation until they can find or create some one with whom they can make peace on their own terms. The Calderon government, supported by nearly the whole of Peru, was rapidly acquiring a dignity and position which must have been recognized by all nations, but it was known that it would not submit to mere dictation of terms of peace. Therefore, by the use of pure force, the head of that government has been removed, and secret negotiations opened with Piérola.

I notified you of the fact of the arrest by telegraph of 7th.

As soon as Montero informs me that he has accepted and entered on the duties of President ad interim, as provided by law, I shall formally and publicly recognize his authority during Calderon's disability.

I am exceedingly anxious for some specific action by the United States, which shall establish the limits beyond which Chili will not be suffered to go, and I very deeply regret that the reported condition of General Kilpatrick is such that he cannot be expected to be at all active in any way. He still continues his absolute silence so far as I am concerned, and although I write to him every week, I send him nothing which I am not perfectly willing should be read by the Chilian ministers, as I have reason to believe it is. I place no confidence in the people who are around him, and I know that, in his state of health, he can give no personal attention to anything.

I am, &c.,

S. A. HURLBUT.

No. 371.

Mr. Blaine to Mr. Hurlbut.

No. 17.] DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, November 17, 1881.

SIR: Your No. 12, in reference to the Cochet and Landreau claims, indicates a prudent and discreet course on your part. After the instruction in my No. 7, in regard to this subject, had been mailed I became convinced that there was no need of even the preliminary inquiry, which I suggested in regard to the Cochet claim. There is no just ground whatever on which this government could intervene on behalf of it. In so far as there may be any basis for the claim at all, it originates in the demand of a native Peruvian against his government. If American citizens purchased an interest in such claim they purchased nothing more than the original claimant possessed. They did not and could not purchase the good offices of this government, and you are instructed not to extend them in the case of the Cochet claim. Your proposed course in regard to the Landreau claim is approved; but that claim must not, of course, be pressed in any manner that would seem to embarrass Peru in the hour of her great distress. Your previous instruction to use your good offices in procuring an adjudication of the Landreau claim was made in view of the possible fact—of which there was wide rumor—that numerous French and English claims were to be presented, in which event I was anxious that the resources of Peru should not be exhausted in the settlement of other claims to the prejudice and detriment of one belonging to an American citizen. You will still be guided by the spirit and intent of that instruction. The statements which you say were made to you by Mr. Jacob R. Shipherd are very extraordinary. It is in the first place extraordinary that he should have written to you at all, for I carefully advised him that ministers of the United States in foreign countries were not permitted to extend their good offices in aid of any claim unless so instructed by the Department of State. I repeatedly told him that any representations on behalf of the claims he was urging must be made at Lima by his own agents. His writing you was therefore an impropriety, and his attempting to instruct you as to what I had written you was as grotesquely absurd as the language he attributes to me. He simply makes the mistake common to a certain class of honest enthusiasts who imagine that the polite and patient listener is the author of their own extravagant fancies. I recognize several of the singular propositions imputed to me as having been made by Mr. Shipherd and not in any sense admitted or assented to by me. I told him in the three or four interviews which he sought with me that I could see no possible ground on which the United States Government could lend its good offices in aid of the Cochet claim. You will therefore pay no attention whatever to anything Mr. Shipherd may write you in regard to claims against the Government of Peru. You will, indeed, do well to return at once to the writers any letters you may receive relating to private claims, unless you first have the matter regularly referred to you by the Department of State. Such reference will never be made except in cases where in the judgment of the government there is a denial of justice to an American citizen. Legations of the United States in foreign countries must not be converted into agencies for the prosecution of private claims. Trusting to your sound discretion and prudent action in all matters of this character,

I am, &c.,

JAMES G. BLAINE.

No. 372.

Mr. Elmore to Mr. Blaine.

LEGATION OF PERU,
Washington, November 18, 1881. (Received November 18.)

SIR: When I had the honor to confer with your excellency on last Monday, 14th instant, I informed your excellency that I had telegraphic news of the adhesion of the Peruvian Admiral Montero to Señor Calderon's government, and also of the last and logical Chilian outrage, the arrest and taking to Chili of President Calderon and his secretary of state, Señor Galvez.

I have been waiting both for telegraphic advices and for the South Pacific mail (which has finally reached here to-day) in order to address to your excellency an exposé on the situation in Peru, which although so extraordinary and perhaps unique in history is not for that reason the less interesting.

I hope to hand my letter to your excellency to-morrow, when I shall again earnestly call your excellency's attention to a situation which has probably no other solution than the resolute intervention of your excellency's government in order to make constitutional government in Peru, and a lasting peace in South America, possible.

I have the honor to renew to your excellency the assurances of my highest and most distinguished consideration.

J. F. ELMORE.

No. 373.

Mr. Elmore to the President.

PERUVIAN LEGATION,
Washington, November 19, 1881. (Received ———.)

Mr. PRESIDENT: Although every foreign minister accredited to the chief of state enjoys the privilege of conferring with the sovereign or President upon the affairs of his own country, I have seldom asked for that honor, being, on principle, opposed to molesting the head of the nation, generally overburdened with too many cares and attentions. But it is not every day (if it ever occurred before in history) that when hostilities have ceased to exist, for nearly a year, the victorious government of one of the belligerents commits the stupendous outrage of taking and carrying off the recognized and unoffending President and secretary of state of the other belligerent. This, Mr. President, is what the Chilian Government has done with the President and the minister of foreign relations of Peru.

Such an event, and the complicated state of affairs in South America, authorize me, I think, and make it a solemn duty on my part, to request your excellency to grant me the high privllege of a short interview, when I wish to thank your excellency for all the good your excellency's government has done and is doing for my country, and also to personally explain some facts and events.

Your excellency would confer on me a lasting obligation by letting me know on what day and hour I may have the honor of calling upon your excellency.

I beg to offer to you, Mr. President, the assurances of my profound respect and most distinguished consideration.

J. F. ELMORE.

His Excellency President CHESTER A. ARTHUR,
Washington.

No. 374.

Mr. Blaine to Mr. Hurlbut.

No. 18.] DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, November 19, 1881.

SIR: On the 27th ultimo I sent you the following telegram: "Influence of your position must not be used in aid of Credit Industriel or any other financial or speculating association." On the 2d instant I received your reply in these words: "It has not been; it will not be." My reason for telegraphing you was the continual circulation of rumors that the aid of your legation was earnestly desired to promote the interest of the "Credit Industriel of France," an association which is making efforts to reorganize the finances of Peru. Agents of the Credit Industriel had visited the Department of State and ineffectually endeavored to enlist the interest of this government in their behalf. However trustworthy the Credit Industriel may be, I did not consider it proper for the Department to have anything whatever to do with it. It is a foreign corporation, responsible to French law, and must seek its patronage and protection from France. At the same time it is no part of your duty to interfere with its negotiations with the Peruvian government. If it can be made an effective instrumentality to aid that unhappy country in its prostrate and helpless condition it would be ungenerous and unjust to obstruct its operations. Your duty is negative, and you will have fully complied with your instruction by simply abstaining from all connection with the association. I have another word of caution to give you. I presume that you will be asked by the agents or officers of the Peruvian Company of New York to lend your influence as United States minister to promote its interests. It would, of course, present to you the claim of an American organization composed of reputable citizens and entitled to your good offices where they may, with propriety, be extended. But you will specially avoid any advocacy of the claims of that or any other company or individual in the pursuit of personal ends or business enterprises. To a minister of your experience I need not point out the proper distinction between diplomatic good offices and personal advocacy. To extend all proper protection to American citizens, and to secure for them in any interests they may have a respectful hearing before the tribunals of the country to which you are accredited, and generally to aid them with information and advice, are among the imperative and grateful duties of a minister—duties which increase his usefulness and add to his respect, and duties which I have no doubt you will faithfully perform. To go beyond and assume the tone of advocacy, with its inevitable inference of personal interest and its possible suspicion of improper interest, will at once impair, if it does not utterly destroy, the acceptability and efficiency of a diplomatic representative. I recite these elementary grounds at the present time, because, if I am correctly advised, all manner of schemes are on foot at Lima for the reorganization of the disordered finances of Peru, and the interested parties are seeking, first of all, the countenance and indorsement of the American legation. You will exercise the utmost care in any step you may take, and if any occasion shall arise where the interposition of this government may aid in restoring the credit of Peru you will confer by telegraph with the Department, and you will take no important step without full and explicit instruction.

I am, &c.,

JAMES G. BLAINE.

No. 375.

Mr. Blaine to Mr. Hurlbut.

No. 19.] DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, November 22, 1881.

SIR: Your dispatches to No. 23, inclusive, have been received, and I learn with regret that a construction has been put upon your language and conduct indicating a policy of active intervention on the part of this government, beyond the scope of your instructions. As those instructions were clear and explicit, and as this department is in the possession of no information which would seem to require the withdrawal of the confidence reposed in you, I must consider this interpretation of your words and acts as the result of some strange and perhaps prejudiced misconception.

My only material for forming an opinion consists of your memorandum to Admiral Lynch, your letter to Señor Garcia, the secretary of General Piérola, and the convention with President Calderon, ceding a naval station to the United States. I would have preferred that you should hold no communication with Admiral Lynch on questions of a diplomatic character. He was present as a military commander of Chilian forces, and you were accredited to Peru. Nor do I conceive that Admiral Lynch, as the commander of the Chilian army of occupation, had any right to ask or receive any formal assurance from you as to the opinions of your government. The United States was represented in Chili by a properly accredited minister, and from his own government the admiral could and ought to have received any information which it was important for him to have. It was to be expected, and even desired, that frank and friendly relations should exist between you, but I cannot consider such confidential communication as justifying a formal appeal to your colleague in Chili, for the correction or criticism of your conduct. If there was anything in your proceedings in Peru to which the government of Chili could properly take exception, a direct representation to this government, through the Chilian minister here, was due, both to the government and to yourself.

Having said this, I must add that the language of the memorandum was capable of not unnatural construction. While you said nothing that may not fairly be misconsidered warranted by your instructions, you omitted to say with equal emphasis some things which your instructions supplied, and which would perhaps have relieved the sensitive apprehensions of the Chilian authorities. For, while the United States would unquestionably "regard with disfavor" the imperious annexation of Peruvian territory as the right of conquest, you were distinctly informed that this government could not refuse to recognize that such annexation might become a necessary condition in a final treaty of peace. And the main purpose of your effort was expected to be, not so much a protest against any possible annexation, as an attempt by friendly but unofficial communications with the Chilian authorities (with whom you were daily associated), to induce them to support the policy of giving to Peru, without the imposition of harsh and absolute conditions precedent, the opportunity to show that the rights and interests of Chili could be satisfied without such annexation. There is enough in your memorandum, if carefully considered, to indicate this purpose, and I only regret that you did not state it with a distinctness, and if necessary with a repetition, which would have made impossible anything but the most willful misconception.

As at present advised I must express disapproval of your letter to Señor Garcia, the secretary of General Piérola. I think that your proper course in reference to Garcia's communication would have been either entirely to ignore it as claiming an official character which you could not recognize, or, if you deemed that courtesy required a reply, to state that you were accredited to the Calderon government, and could, therefore, know no other, and that any communication which General Piérola thought it his duty or interest to make, must be made directly to the government at Washington. You had no responsibility in the matter, and it was injudicious to assume any. The recognition of the Calderon government had been duly considered and decided by your own government, and you were neither instructed nor expected to furnish General Piérola or the Peruvian public with the reasons for that action. The following language in your letter to Señor Garcia might well be misunderstood:

"Chili desires, and asks for Tarapacá, and will recognize the government which agrees to its cession. The Calderon government will not cede it. It remains to be seen whether that of Piérola will prove more pliable."

It might easily be supposed, by an excited public opinion on either side, that such language was intended to imply that the Government of the United States had recognized the government of Calderon because of its resolution not to cede Peruvian territory. No such motive has ever been declared by this government. The government of Calderon was recognized because we believed it to the interest of both Chili and Peru that some respectable authority should be established which could restore internal order, and initiate responsible negotiations for peace. We desired that the Peruvian Government should have a fair opportunity to obtain the best terms it could, and hoped that it would be able to satisfy the just demands of Chili without the painful sacrifice of the national territory, But we did not make, and never intended to make, any special result of the peace negotiations the basis of our recognition of the Calderon government. What was best, and what was possible for Peru to do, we were anxious to the extent of our power to aid her in doing, by the use of whatever influence or consideration we enjoyed with Chili. Further than that, the Government of the United States has, as yet, expressed neither opinion nor intention.

I must also express the dissatisfaction of the Department at your telegram to the minister of the United States near the Argentine Confederation, suggesting that a minister be sent by that government to Peru.

This would have been clearly without the sphere of your proper official action at any time, but as there then existed a serious difference between Chili and the Argentine Confederation, you might naturally have anticipated that such a recommendation would be considered by Chili as an effort to effect a political combination against her. The United States was not in search of alliances to support a hostile demonstration against Chili, and such an anxiety might well be deemed inconsistent with the professions of an impartial mediation.

As to the convention with regard to a naval station in the bay of Chimbote, I am of the opinion that although it is a desirable arrangement the time is not opportune. I would be very unwilling to ask such a concession under circumstances which would almost seem to impose upon Peru the necessity of compliance with our request, and I have no doubt that whenever Peru is relieved from present embarrassments she would cheerfully grant any facilities which our naval or commercial interests might require. Nor in the present excited condition of public opinion in Chili would I be willing to afford to evil-disposed persons the opportunity to intimate that the United States contemplated the establishment of a naval rendezvous in the neighborhood of either Peru or Chili. The very natural and innocent convenience which we require might be misunderstood or misrepresented, and as our sole purpose is to be allowed, in a spirit of the most impartial friendship, to act as mediator between these two powers, I would prefer at present to ask no favors of the one and to excite no possible apprehension in the other.

Having thus stated with frankness the impression made upon the Department by such information as you have furnished it, it becomes my duty to add that this government is unable to understand the abolition of the Calderon government and the arrest of President Calderon himself by the Chilian authorities, or I suppose I ought to say by the Chilian Government, as the secretary for foreign affairs of that government has in a formal communication to Mr. Kilpatrick declared that the Calderon government "was at an end." As we recognized that government in supposed conformity with the wishes of Chili, and as no reason for its destruction has been given us, you will still consider yourself accredited to it, if any legitimate representative exists in the place of President Calderon. If none such exists you will remain in Lima until you receive further instructions, confining your communications with the Chilian authorities to such limits as your personal convenience and the maintenance of the rights and privileges of your legation may require.

The complicated condition of affairs resulting from the action of the Chilian Government, the time required for communication between the legations in Chili and Peru and this Department, and the unfortunate notoriety which the serious differences between yourself and your colleague in Chili have attracted—have, in the opinion of the President, imposed upon him the necessity of a special mission. This mission will be charged with the duty of expressing the views of the president upon the grave condition of affairs which your dispatches describe, and if possible with due consideration of the rights, interests, and susceptibilities of both nations to promote a settlement which shall restore to the suffering people of Peru the benefits of a well-ordered government, deliver both countries from the miseries and burdens of a protracted war, and place their future relations upon a foundation that will prove stable, because just and honorable.

I am, sir, your obedient servant,

JAMES G. BLAINE.

No. 376.

[Extract.]

Mr. Hurlbut to Mr. Blaine.

No. 28.] LEGATION OF THE UNITED STATES,
Lima, Peru, November 23, 1881. (Received December 21.)

SIR: * * * I also send with this a long letter from Mr. Jacob R. Shipherd, which I wish read and retained in the Department. I call attention to the part marked with lines. I have written to him declining any further correspondence, unless through the Department, and have also written a letter of explanation to * * * said by Shipherd to be his attorney.

I am, sir, your obedient servant,

S. A. HURLBUT.

[Inclosure in No. 28.]

Mr. Shipherd to Mr. Hurlbut.

NEW YORK, October 27, 1881.

SIR: I have yours of the 1st instant. You seem still to look upon our company and its possibilities only as something that may be "of great use" to Peru. I shall be content—extraordinary as the attitude is—to discuss it on that basis, and to applaud your generous sympathy with an unhappy country; and I will, if you wish, pardon to an excess of generosity in that direction the remarkable indifference, or seeming indifference, to the interests of your own countrymen. If you had heard a tithe of the comment made upon this seeming indifference by gentlemen whose only interest is to applaud and to be proud of you, you would at least credit my own observations with great moderation.

Our company, now fully organized, and already a formidable power, being, purely commercial, necessarily includes, however, not only those who, like myself, are your steadfast political friends, but men of all political parties and factions, all of whom would none the less gladly be your friends as minister, and would heartily uphold your hands, if you would give them the slightest opportunity to do so; but who cannot be expected, when they see you totally indifferent to their interests—or apparently so—to forbear criticism not only severe, but possibly unjust. Such is human nature.

If you had come to my office, as I understood you to earnestly assure me you would, before you sailed, I could have satisfied you as long ago as that upon all the points you now raise. If opportunities have been lost in the intervening period, you will, I trust not hold me alone to blame; and if you had been at the pains to deliver with the letter to Mr. * * * the accompanying documents, without which the letter was unintelligible, you would at least have not taken a responsibility which no one here has as yet been able to explain.

I sincerely beg your pardon if this frankness seems severe; it certainly is not meant to be rude, and is only used to give you some idea of the unhappy impression which the attitude of your legation has—erroneously or otherwise—made upon every person without exception, I believe, who looks from this view point. And nothing will give me sincerer pleasure than to be enabled to vindicate not only the perfect integrity of your motives, but what is almost equally important, the wisdom of your methods.

In a readiness to help Peru, no one at Lima or elsewhere can profess a sincerer desire than this company feels. So far as Peru is concerned we might safely ask her to do nothing except for herself alone. But we have rights as well as she, and have on idea of relegating them to any secondary rank. Of a government capable of the official record made in the Landreau case, it would hardly be wise to expect any refined analyses in practical ethics; no practicing attorney would hanker exactly for the privilege of submitting any cause to just that kind of a tribunal.

It is therefore with only a languid interest that we have at any time looked toward either the legal or the equitable strength of our case; we have assumed from the first that our chief reliance should be upon our ability to rescue Peru in articulo mortis from the jaws of the devouring conqueror.

But while this might suffice for the face to be turned toward Peru, it could not for a moment satisfy the gentlemen who constitute the Peruvian company, nor their counsel, nor the American Government. There must be at the bottom of all our plans, first the facts and next the proof of them, which would create open, clear, and incontestible equities, at least coextensive with our claim.

That such facts and such proofs do exist, the documents heretofore placed in your hands have been supposed to be prima facie evidence. Of more than a score of eminent attorneys, statesmen, and business men who have thoroughly and critically examined them, not one has at the end expressed a doubt, or failed to express a judgment that our case (prima facie) was complete.

It is always possible that such a body of experts may all be mistaken; but the probabilities hardly lie that way, do they?

For example, I sent for * * * this morning, and read him your letter without comment, and at the close asked him what he thought of the difficulties you suggest. His reply was, "I can see nothing whatever in them. The documents in General Hurlbut's hands are plain as the shining of the sun. If we are not badly advised by Peruvian authorities here, the natural son inherits; if we are badly advised on that point, it is immaterial, for we have the will."

Following my own order, I proceed then specifically to respond in turn to each of the points you suggest, and to these I may add a general observation or two.

First. I believe you are not aware that Alexandre Cochet, whom we supposed to have died intestate, in fact left a valid will, in which Gelacio is duly recognized and identified, and to whom all the testator's rights and properties are duly bequeathed. This will came to light in August last, and has been duly probated in Paris, and we have a properly attested copy of it here. This fact removes the only question you raise as to the chain of title.

Second. What did Cochet discover? His pamphlet shows clearly enough. Not the heaps of guano, not the original vague idea that it had fertilizing properties. But that marketable quality which brought all the millions into the public treasury.

The language of the committee of award is broader than this. (See p. 13 of Truth Demonstrated.) "The 5,000 tons of guano that the national representation is disposed to grant to the Señores, Allier and Quiroz, believing them to be the first discoverers of the fruitful properties of this manure."

On all the facts the committee award to Cochet the prize intended for the "first discoverers of the fruitful properties," and for those "first to introduce it into European markets."

The body of the report shows, if not in a precise, certainly in a very comprehensive and unquestionable way, the almost unlimited indebtedness of the republic to this extraordinary foreigner, and adjudges him to be—what his own collateral specifications show in detail that he was—the creator of the foreign guano market, the discoverer "of untold riches," which have ever since been flowing in upon his beneficiary.

The decree—(p. 44 of the prospectus)—is as broad as possible: "That any one, after the publication of these presents who shall have discovered ——— or other property belonging to the state, shall have a right to a third part."

If the intent of this decree was the benefit of the state by the discovery of available value, then the rule being as broad as the reason of it, must easily enough cover the value discovered in guano by Cochet alone.

If the intent was narrower than this, then it was only calculated to defeat itself. The interests of the state are inseparable from those of the discoverer.

Third. What was the award? That the prize appointed for "the first discoverers of the fruitful properties of this manure, and the first to introduce it into European markets," belonged to Alexandre Cochet.

Fourth. Who awarded it?

So far as appears at all, the final tribunal duly created and authorized by "the national representation."

Fifth. Does that award "bind" Peru? Apparently; why not? Who is Peru? Is not the act of an authorized agent the act of the principal?

But all this argumentation proceeds upon the assumption that Peru proposes to dispute this claim.

Is not such a presumption at least premature?

Until the demand served on the Peruvian minister at Washington on the 13th, perhaps no formal demand for this property has heretofore been made. In such case the present Peruvian executive is as free as the executive of 1841. He is embarrassed by none of the repudiations which cloud the contested Laudreau case, and may construe the report of the committee of award as freely as any other sovereign. The equities of Cochet's claim are simply enormous, and are so plain that no sane man can for a moment debate them as doubtful.

There is no sounder rule of legal construction than that where either law or equity may prevail; equity must prevail, and if President Calderon is not clear that upon merely and narrowly legal analysis the award defines Cochet to be the true discoverer of guano—upon the notorious facts collateral to and contemporaneous with the award, he cannot for a moment doubt that the finding of the committee amounts to exactly that, and to nothing less.

The Landreau record needs no comment and will bear none. The opportunity now given to do cheerfully a great justice, and at the same moment to reap an enormous reward should need no enforcement.

If it is asked, May Peru act freely in existing premises? The complete answer is: Why not?

The decision which must be made upon the demand now pending is a purely executive decision, addressed to the executive of a sovereignty. If Mr. Calderon's government is sufficiently constitutional to negotiate for peace upon terms involving the dismemberment of territory—and the Chilians have always been ready to treat with him on this basis, and by such readiness are estopped, it must certainly have the inferior authority to quitclaim the property of non-residents, and to make a treaty with this company which will preserve the republic; in exigencies, mere committees of safety, may for the public good assume unlimited power. Is not this safe ground, in your judgment?

You may certainly rely, my dear sir, that every view suggested herein has the hearty approval of counsel entitled to the highest respect, and that we count ourselves fortunate in submitting these views for revision and criticism to counselors as able as yourself and President Calderon. We are perfectly aware that our demands and Mr. Calderon's concurrence—if he shall concur—will be put into diplomatic crucibles the world over; we have refined our views in advance with this expectation, and cheerfully surrender them to such tests; and we ask only of Mr. Calderon that he take such ground as he can vindicate to all intelligent and reasonable critics.

Farther than this, apply the test of a judge in court. Who has the right to object? Only some one who will suffer. Will Chili suffer? Is it not settled that her utmost right, even of force is limited to a reasonable war indemnity? This is her utmost right as against Peru; and if Peru admits our title, Chili has no right against us.

Yet we are ready to pay or safely secure her proper indemnity, and upon this she is out of court.

Will Peru's creditors suffer? Is not our offer to them incomparably better than any other they have had or are like to have?

Will the citizens of Peru suffer? Is not our coming their sole chance of salvation?

——————— Will the United States Government back us up, and by so doing protect Peru?

Let that question be put directly to Mr. Blaine by Mr. Calderon. It certainly is not for me to speak for the government.

But as a citizen, and one of the people who create governments, I may venture an opinion shared by every stockholder in this company, and backed by the millions we are ready to venture on it, and in that opinion, I fancy, you will readily concur: That no government at Washington could escape the popular damnation which all parties and factions would unite to visit upon an executive that failed to protect, at no matter what cost, so enormous a property as ours against the mere rapine of Chilian marauders—Peru herself standing with us.

For your own satisfaction, I may say, that our staff of counsel, including such representative and various men as * * * are absolutely agreed upon this as upon every other point material to the pending issues; and the most radical suggestions of policy as yet suggested, have the hearty autograph approval of * * * who is now one of us. The significance of all this you need no aid from me to estimate.

It occurs to me to quote your recent correspondence. The moment we heard here of the decree of September 28, I wrote to * * * the intermediary between * * * and myself, when I am away from Washington.

"Since I wrote you last we have fresh and stirring news from Lima. Hurlbut's letter to Lynch deserves no stinted praise; it is a bull's eye, and no man's hat shall go higher than mine for him.

"The attempt of Chili to wipe out Calderon may be covered with any number of specious pretexts, but its real motive unquestionably is to lock horns with Mr. Blaine on the supreme issue of a cession of territory. Hurlbut spoke and the Chilian minister at Washington (* * * told me) appeared at the Department to demand explanations. How he was answered sufficiently appeared from what followed. He certainly became satisfied that the United States would not sit by and see Chili dig out the very vitals of its victim. Between the 25th of August, when Hurlbut wrote, and the 28th of September, when Calderon was suppressed, there was just time to hear fully from Washington.

"It does seem to me that the time has now come for Mr. Blaine to speak the one word that will cut this knot forever. Chili defies him and puts the last twist on her tortured and helpless victim. Calderon, although originally set up by the Chilians, resigned his provisional office to the constitutional Congress, and was at once unanimously elected provisional president by it. Now, when Chili finds that he will not, and cannot—for his Congress forbade him—cede the coveted territory, she forbids him to exercise his functions at all.

"What next?

"Chilian military rule and pure anarchy. * * * Chili will never permit a free election. She will either set up another provisional stick, or she will never allow another government to be organized. Meanwhile, all advices are that the country is settling into a condition of permanent horribleness; rapine is now the habit and the rule.

"Has not the time fully come for the only power that can stay this awful flood, to stay it?

"Hurlbut's manifesto to Lynch is perfect. Now, if his chief cables him to continue to recognize Calderon and to assure Calderon that, until another government is fully set up by Peru, the United States will insist upon his right to speak for Peru under the sanction received from his constitutional Congress, the issue will be forced, and the situation saved.

"If Chili may abolish Calderon, she may abolish Peru; if the United States falters now she may never retrieve the lost opportunity.

"The bearing of all this upon our great interests, Chili sees as clearly as I. If there is no Peruvian Government, there is no government to admit our rights, and so to establish them. The continuance of Calderon for the time being is vital, you see, to all we have at stake, and such interests as ours should easily decide, * * * if aside from them he hesitates."

——— Has Peru any representative here to make a heartier plea for her than that?

I will read to you now from the answer that came swiftly back:

"I can only now assure you that the United States will utter her voice in a manner which will mark an era in American diplomacy. The matter is being prepared, and within a week or two you will know what is done. You should act at once as though the American ships of war were on their way to the Pacific coast. ------ Perfect your plans. Everything here has been just as you have wanted it all the time. The policy of the government has been exactly right, and is now. Any man who proposes to take part in your project should now take hold in earnest. -------- Chili will not set up another president, I fear, who will be strong enough to treat with us. We had better treat with Calderon, whom I hope our government will continue to recognize."

* * * in continuing deplores the circumstances which prevented my original purpose of putting you in possession of facts before your departure, which would have enabled you to have pointed Mr. Calderon to this only and complete way of escape immediately on your arrival at Lima.

But let that pass. It is not yet too late. So great a project as this, glacier-like, makes slow progress at best; it would be perilous indeed if it could move faster. You are now so situated as to place all the material facts clearly before Mr. Calderon. All the papers printed and cited by me—except only Gelacio Cochet's deed, which we have here and will of course produce in due course, together with the attested will—are part of the official records of the Peruvian Government—congressional or municipal—and presumably within the reach of the Peruvian executive. I am advised that undoubtedly Mr. Calderon can reach all the originals that are material. If not, we can supply deficiencies, upon request, from copies in the Department at Washington or elsewhere. Certainly I shall be at no pains to collect such copies until, upon the prima facie case, Mr. Calderon plainly assures me what he proposes to do. I am doing far more for Peru than she is to do for me, and shall not do more than my part.

In yours of September 12, you said that you had received no such dispatches as * * * assured me had been sent. The next time I was at the * * * * * * placed in my hands all the dispatches * * * had sent you, and I read for myself. The phrasing is his own, but the effect is exactly what I described. All I wanted was a stay pending negotiation, and I expressly asked him to put the Landreau claim forward, and to say only of ours that it had not yet been examined finally in the Department. He did precisely what I asked. I ask no opinion yet of any one on the merits of the Cochet claim till I have Peru's response to my demand. If that is affirmative, all the issues become finally res adjudicata, and will be so treated by the United States Government. If Peru's answer is a negative, then it will be time enough to consider the next step to be taken.

Until that answer comes, it seems hardly worth while for us to send commissioners to Lima. Cui bono? The case is as clear as the sun at noonday, and Mr. Calderon is said to be the first lawyer in Peru. I certainly don't propose to argue, nor to solicit, nor to persuade him, nor anybody else. To him, as to a drowning man sinking for the last time, I throw a rope. I am not sinking, nor am I going to sink. I control an interest large enough and strong enough to ride all seas in all weathers. If Mr. Calderon wishes to grasp the rope, that is for him to do. When he has done so, I will land him safe and sound. Until he lays hold of it, why should I further trouble myself?

If I need a commissioner, I am content with the American minister, for the time being. I need nothing from him that his official duty ex virtute officii does not require of him, to wit, that he shall do always what he can for the interest of the United States, and as a friend also for the country to which he is accredited. If he does this, he must to the uttermost promote the international plans of this company, and no man I can send can do this so well as he. I do not for a moment distrust him, if once he will set out to utilize in a large way the mere facts as they stand. He cannot go amiss, and he will find in this office during his ministry, and as long as he lives, the surest appreciation and the most helpful friendship.

If Mr. Calderon is wise, he will make Mr. Tracy (the present consul here, and formerly chargé d'affaires) his minister plenipotentiary, to co-operate with * * * and myself here as you are working with him in Lima, and no other commissioners are needed. Mr. Tracy is ideal in his Peruvian loyalty—son of an American father at Lima, and a Peruvian mother—is thoroughly and exceptionally intelligent, commands and deserves the highest respect, and is honest and honorable, as few men are. He has from the first been aware of our plans, but has never had and will never have any interest with us. He does not want to be minister, and would make great sacrifices if he accepted the post—would only accept it, if at all, long enough to carry through the peace negotiations, for which * * * is most sadly incompetent. I should add that this suggestion is not only made without Mr. Tracy's knowledge, but despite his repeated refusal to consent to any suggestion of the kind; I only make it in your ear in Mr. Calderon's interest, and leave it wholly to your discretion whether it shall be brought to his notice. Of the utter incompetence of * * * there can be no question, and the recommendation I have made is based upon an intimate acquaintance with Mr. Tracy for the last six months. No other man, I think, could, at this juncture, do Peru so great a service as he, if he would accept the appointment, and I think he would not refuse the necessary sacrifice if the President should ask it.

———— It has been suggested by one of our share-holders that, as the Chilians say Mr. Calderon may exercise his functions anywhere save under the Chilian flag, that he might, without delay, carry on all the negotiations necessary to our views under the American flag in your own office. The suggestion will not be new to you, and there may be some difficulty in the way unknown to us. I mention it to indicate our readiness to recognize his official acts. We care no more for Chili's decrees in Peru than for the breath of any other aliens.

——— I thank you heartily for the news of the proposed sale of an interest in the Landreau claim to the Chilians. The same interest was offered us during the summer and declined.

If our claim is good at all it takes, practically, everything, and Landreau owners must make terms with us as best they can. We have not only a valid first lien (p. 45, Prospectus), but the mere magnitude of our interest must dominate all others in any event.

I am quite content the Chilians should buy it if they think there is any money in it; but I doubt if they will, because if Peru admits our title Chili would be only buying a kneeling place at our foot-stool, and if Peru denies our title, Chili can buy that, and adjudicating it for herself foreclose on Peru with a process that neither the United States nor any other foreign power will for a moment question.

Having delayed this intimation until now, I may add that it is no new idea with this company. When we first bought this title we saw three markets for it, and of these three Chili was not the least promising. Of the merits of the original quarrel we know nothing and care nothing. Peru is the under dog, and our sympathies lie with her. There are strong reasons why we should prefer to deal with her, otherwise we should not make her the first offer. But certainly we have not bought this great interest to lay it at the feet of Peru, to use or to refuse as she may choose. We have rights as well as she, and we have abundant alternatives if Peru wishes to challenge us to use them. Of these the Chilian is only one, and is only suggested to make clear the general fact that we have at least one alternative. I need not dwell on this point, Mr. Calderon can follow it out for himself.

Nor are we dependent on Mr. Calderon's government. We can wait; all methods are open to us, all delays make in our favor and not against us. It is not for us to hasten, but only to strike when the hour strikes.

If Mr. Calderon wishes speed he can have it; we are ripely ready whenever he is ready. The moment he cables me the proper assurances he will find me responding like an echo; till then I wait.

My telegraphic address (cables) is Jacket (JACKET), New York.

It might be better still for you to cable * * * in cipher.

——— If now, my dear sir, you see your way clear to work with us I will bury all the past and you shall find in me a true partner. Certainly, I ask nothing of you but that you serve the interests of the whole United States and of Peru at the SAME MOMENT.

With great respect, your obedient servant,

JACOB R. SHIPHERD,
President.

No. 377.

Mr. Hurlbut to Mr. Blaine.

No. 29.] LEGATION OF THE UNITED STATES,
Lima, Peru, November 23, 1881. (Received December 21.)

SIR: The evidences of an intention to occupy Peru for an indefinite time are multiplying.

The Chilian authorities are preparing a full system of internal government, including judicial functionaries. They are carefully examining all sources of internal revenue heretofore belonging to Peruvian authorities, and announce the intention to collect all these by their own officials.

It is stated that this new order of things will go into effect on the first of December. The effect of such a declaration will be disastrous to all foreign interests in this country and will at once revive war in its worst form.

The custom-houses now yield to Chili from nine to ten millions per annum. Add to this the internal revenues, and it is evident, that so far as the Chilian Government is concerned, they will make money by the occupation. But the occupation, to be effective, must be in military force much greater than now, and the weakness of Chili consists in its small population. The steady drain of effective men is beginning to be felt severely by that class who furnish the rank and file, and the complaints are already serious. And if this be the case now, when half or more of Peru is anxious for peace, and takes no active part in the war, how much more serious will it be when the whole effective population of Peru perceives that nothing is left them but war if they desire any portion of independence.

The military occupation of Peru declared as a definite policy, will compel an outer line of armed Peruvians, and effectually close all access to the interior.

Thus commerce will either be prevented or double duties, Chilian and Peruvian, collected, and the coast cities which live upon the commerce of the interior will rapidly decline. Our interest in the general commerce of Peru is not as large as that of England or France, but it is worth protection. Our internal interests are very large, for the three great railways of Peru are owned and controlled by Americans, and are even now paralyzed.

The establishment of this policy by Chili means absolute ruin to these interests, involving many millions of dollars.

Irregular warfare, thoroughly possessing itself of the interior, will breed rapine, violence, and all possible evil.

The only thing outside of foreign interference which I see to hinder Chili from inaugurating these evil days, is her want of population. I see, on inspection of the new troops, that they are largely composed of boys. I learn that labor is very scarce in Chili; that as high as seven soles a day has been offered for ordinary laborers on railways; that recruiting, even with heavy bounties, is a failure.

These facts, which I believe to be well founded, may incline the rulers of Chili to peace, otherwise we must look for military occupation. To-day (the 23d November) I received an official letter from Vice-President Montero, dated at Cajamarca, a translation of which is inclosed. I am also in receipt of reliable information that Cacères has forbidden Piérola to come within his command, and that a battalion sent by Piérola from Ayacucho to put down the movement in Cuzco, has joined the constitutionalists, and that a force, both from Cuzco and Arequipa, is in motion upon Ayacucho. I sincerely wish that Mr. Calderon could be restored to the country, as he is undoubtedly the man of most brains and education. No dispatches came to me by the last mail, and as the one to arrive on Saturday makes no connection with the United States, I do not expect anything.

I received a telegram from you, dated the 16th November, which I answered on the 17th. I had acknowledged the receipt of the telegram which you date as of 31st of October, but which came to me with date of 2d November on the 3d, but made no other answer until called for by your telegram of 15th November.

I am, sir, &c.,

S. A. HURLBUT.

[Inclosure in No. 29.—Translation.]

Mr. Montero to Mr. Hurlbut.

CAJAMARCA, November 11, 1881.

SIR: Faithful to the indication given to your excellency in my letter of the 23d of the past month, that I would direct my conduct in the sense of uniting the country under the constitution of 1860, I called a popular meeting for that purpose, and, as you will see by the proceedings published in the newspaper La Realidad, which I have the honor to inclose, this department and the army of the north have proclaimed for constitutional order, recognizing the authority of His Excellency Señor Don F. Garcia Calderon, and passing a vote of thanks to the Government of the American Union, which you so worthily represent, for its elevated and philanthropic conduct in reference to the questions between my country and the Republic of Chili.

In giving you this information, it is a pleasure for me to assure you that, seconded, as in a short time it will be, by all the other departments of the north, the National Union will soon be an accomplished fact, with which valuable aid, and with the noble intentions which animate your government, it should be easy to obtain a satisfactory solution of the terms of peace hereafter to be celebrated.

I avail myself of this opportunity to reiterate to your excellency the sentiments of my high esteem and respectful consideration, asking, at the same time, that you will please inform your government of the facts above stated.

God guard you.

L. MONTERO.

No. 378.

Mr. Blaine to Mr. Hurlbut.

[Telegram.]

WASHINGTON, November 26, 1881.

HURLBUT, Minister, Lima:

Special envoy extraordinary leaves Washington for Peru immediately. Continue recognition of Calderon government.

BLAINE.

No. 379.

Mr. Blaine to Mr. Elmore.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, November 26, 1881.

SIR: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your note of the 18th instant in relation to the telegram informing you of the adhesion of the Peruvian Admiral Montero to Señor Calderon's government, and of measures taken by the authorities of Chili against that government.

Accept, sir, &c.,

JAMES G. BLAINE.

No. 380.

Mr. Blaine to Mr. Hurlbut.

No. 21.] DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, November 30, 1881.

SIR: You have already been made acquainted, by my No. 19, of the 22d instant, with the determination of this government to send a special mission to South America for the purpose of adjusting whatever questions, growing out of the contest between Chili and Peru and Bolivia, may affect the relation of the United States to the three belligerent powers, or conduce to the restoration of good understanding among them.

I have now to inform you that William Henry Trescot, esq., of South Carolina, has been commissioned as Spanish envoy, with the rank of minister plenipotentiary, to the Republics of Chili, Peru, and Bolivia, and will forthwith set out upon his mission.

The commission which Mr. Trescot receives will not supersede the ordinary duties of yourself and your colleagues at Santiago and La Paz; but all communications and negotiations connected with the settlement of the pending difficulties between Chili, Peru, and Bolivia, so far as this government may deem it judicious to take action, will be transferred to Mr. Trescot's charge.

Under the instructions which have been given to Mr. Trescot, he will place himself in direct communication with the several governments to which he is thus specially accredited. It is, however, expected that he will learn from you and your colleagues the exact condition of existing political relations, and receive such suggestions as your recent experience may enable you to submit for his consideration. The action he may take, however, must be decided upon his own responsibility and in the exercise of his independent authority.

Mr. Trescot will be accompanied on this important mission by the Third Assistant Secretary of State. As it may be necessary to consult the representatives of the United States in Chili, Peru, and Bolivia at the same time, or to conduct a simultaneous negotiation with those governments, Mr. Trescot is empowered by the President of United States to authorize Mr. Walker Blaine to represent the United States at any point where this necessity may occur.

I am, sir, &c.,

JAMES G. BLAINE.

No. 381.

Mr. Hurlbut to Mr. Blaine.

No. 30.] LEGATION OF THE UNITED STATES,
Lima, Peru, November 30, 1881. (Received December 21.)

SIR: Since my last no event of any importance has occurred in Lima. On the 28th November, I received a telegram from you, announcing the speedy departure from the United States of a special envoy, and also directing me to continue to recognize the Calderon government.

On the same day I received letters from Mr. Rafael Villanueva, Secretary-General of the Vice-President, giving notice of his acceptance of the office to fill the vacancy occasioned by the seizure of President Calderon, copies of which papers, in translation, I forward as inclosures.

I have answered these by a formal communication acknowledging Admiral Montero as the lawful head of the Constitutional Government of Peru, which will go forward to him to-morrow.

I shall take no further steps until the arrival of the special envoy.

I am, sir, &c.,

S. A. HURLBUT.

[Inclosure 1 in No. 30.—Translation.]

Copy of law, October 4, 1881.

FRANCISCO GARCIA CALDERON, Provisional President of the Republic.

Inasmuch as Congress has passed the following law:

The Congress of the Republic of Peru, considering that, for the preservation and security of the constitutional order, it is indispensable to name the person who shall replace the President of the republic when from any cause he shall be precluded from exercising supreme authority, has passed the following law:

ARTICLE 1. In case that by reason of any impediment the actual Provisional President shall be unable to exercise the supreme authority, Rear-Admiral Lizardo Montero shall take his place, and shall in such case take charge as chief of the executive power, with the character of first vice-president of the republic during the existence of the state of war with Chili, and until treaties of peace shall be ratified, the republic return to peace, and the people in accordance with the constitution shall designate the officers who shall exercise the executive functions.

ART. 2. Rear-Admiral Lizardo Montero, upon entering upon the duties of said office, shall take an oath before any court of judicial authority in the republic.

Let this be communicated to the executive for such action as may be required to enforce it.

Given in the hall of session at Lima, this 29th of September, 1881.

T. T. ELGUERA,
President of Congress.
L. GARCIA,
Secretary of Congress.
ISAAC ABRAMORA,
Secretary of Congress.

Therefore it is my order that the same be printed, published, and circulated, and the terms of the same fulfilled.

Lima, 4 October, 1881.

F. GARCIA CALDERON.
M. VELARTO.

[Inclosure 2 in No. 30.—Translation.]

Diplomatic circular.

CAJAMARCA, November 15, 1881.

SECRETARY-GENERAL OF STATE:

SIR: On account of the act committed by the enemy of Peru, by imprisoning and carrying beyond the Peruvian territory his excellency Francisco Garcia Calderon, Provisional President of the Republic and the minister of foreign affairs, Manuel Maria Galvez, his excellency the first vice-president, Rear-Admiral Lizardo Montero, has to-day assumed supreme power, having first taken the prescribed oath of office before the superior tribunal of justice in this district, in fulfillment of the law of the 4th October last, a copy of which is herewith transmitted.

The government is therefore established for the present at this city while the necessities of the nation demand it; and it becomes my duty to inform you that by supreme decree of this date, I have been charged, until a cabinet is formed, with the service of the different branches of public administration, which appointment offers me the satisfactory occasion of offering to your excellency the facilities necessary for any matters of state which require diplomatic intervention.

His excellency deplores profoundly the events which I have mentioned in the beginning of this dispatch, not only on account of their import in themselves, but because they sharpen the points of difference between the belligerents, and for the effect upon the country of the seizure of its chief magistrate.

Availing myself of this opportunity, I have the honor to assure your excellency of the sincere purpose which animates my government to draw closer the relations of sincere friendship which fortunately unite Peru with the United States of America, to the end that they may reciprocally furnish the means which may be necessary for that future greatness to which both countries have the right to aspire. With sentiments of the most profound esteem, I have the honor to subscribe myself.

Your excellency's faithful and obedient servant,

RAFAEL VILLANUEVA.

His Excellency S. A. HURLBUT,
Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary, United States of America.

[Inclosure 3 in No. 30.—Translation.]

Mr. Villanueva to Mr. Hurlbut.

CAJAMARCA, November 18, 1881.

SIR: I am charged by his excellency the first vice president of the republic with the duty of answering your letter of the 8th November instant.

His excellency properly appreciates the declarations made by you, and, as you will see by the circular which, on the 15th of this month, I forwarded to the diplomatic body residing in Lima, all the prescriptions of law have been complied with, and after taking the proper oath of office the first vice-president, Rear-Admiral Lizardo Montero, has assumed the duties of the supreme executive. His excellency, who duly esteems and recognizes the noble efforts which in your character of representative of the government at Washington, near the Constitutional Government of Peru, you have made toward the adjustment of honorable peace with Chili, has the hope that your excellency will continue to give to his government the same important aid which has been given to that of his predecessor, his excellency F. Garcia Calderon.

I avail myself, &c.,

RAFAEL VILLANUEVA.

No. 382.

Mr. Blaine to Mr. Hurlbut.

No. 25.] DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, December 3, 1881.

SIR: Since sending my instruction No. 19, of the 22d ultimo, to you, upon a more careful examination of the protocol transmitted in your dispatch of the 5th of October, signed by yourself on behalf of the United States, and Señor Galvez, minister of foreign affairs, on behalf of Peru, for the cession of a naval and coaling station to the United States at Chimbote, I find it difficult to discover what substantial advantages would be gained by this government in the event of its acceptance of the proposed agreement.

I have already had occasion to remark that the time was not opportune for any negotiation for a concession from a power reduced to such extremity as that in which Peru stands to-day, and to call your attention to other grave considerations which should outweigh any apparent temptation to our sense of immediate self-interest in asking or accepting the concession of special privileges in that country.

But the advantages offered by this protocol grow more shadowy as its provisions are more closely examined. The first article concedes to the United States the right to establish a coaling station at Chimbote, and the second immediately adds that this shall not be exclusive; that Peru reserves the right to concede the same facilities to any other friendly power which may solicit them. The third subjects to Peruvian law whatever land might be acquired by the United States for the purposes of a coaling station; and by the fourth article Peru has the right to withdraw all that is conceded by the agreement whenever she sees fit, upon one year's notice.

A naval and coaling station on the South Pacific coast, carefully chosen, with the aid of the professional knowledge of those specially qualified to determine its capacity to answer the wants of our national ships, and over which we might exercise proper and necessary jurisdiction, with a secure tenure, would be of undoubted value, and this government, at a fitting time, may be willing to negotiate upon fair terms for such a privilege. In the protocol presented I observe that you have, with perfect justice, offered no consideration to Peru for this amiable concession, which would only enable us to enjoy on her shores the same privileges which we substantially possess to-day, and which she is ready to extend to every other power with which she is not in actual war. It has the merit at least of innocent diplomacy; nothing was given and nothing was taken.

While your negotiation of this protocol may be regarded as an error of judgment, involving no serious or lasting consequences, I regret that another proceeding which you report in the same dispatch is of a graver nature, and I cannot pass it by without the most decided expression of disapprobation.

You have commenced an extraordinary negotiation with President Calderon in regard to a railroad company of which you, while American minister, propose to become the trustee or intermediary, the road to be ultimately turned over to an American company, an unfinished road which you say has already cost nine millions of dollars.

The principal terms of the arrangement will be the payment to the Peruvian Government of one million of dollars in money, and the same in paid-up stock, to clear up all existing incumbrances, for which sums they concede the right to construct and operate the road for twenty-five years after it is finished. You consider the grant very valuable and the possibilities of the company very large. The special advantage which the United States may derive from these possibilities is that the price to be charged for coal carried over the road may be limited, as the railroad runs to Chimbote and the railroad arrangement is a sequel to and part of the plan for a coaling station there.

I have learned of this negotiation with profound astonishment and regret.

It is hardly conceivable that under any circumstances whatever your government would consent that its minister should accept such a position, but for the minister himself, without instruction and without permission, to assume the charge of an extensive financial scheme for the purchase, completion, and transfer of a railroad is an utter disregard of every rule of prudence and propriety that should govern the conduct of a representative of the country. At a time like the present, when the ruin of Peruvian interests and the embarrassment of that government in its almost hopeless attempts to contrive a method of raising money have given birth to so many speculative schemes, and filled the press with accounts of contending companies and their enticing proposals, the direct participation of the American minister in a plan for the reorganization of a railway wreck cannot fail to lead to misapprehensions on the part of other governments and distrust of the United States and its minister, whose motives and proceedings would be viewed in the most unfavorable light.

Whether the grant be very valuable or the possibilities of the railroad very large, or the profit of the speculation great or not, are questions of little moment compared to those higher considerations of national interest and dignity which should govern every act and every word in the intercourse and dealings of this nation with others, as conducted by a representative clothed with its power and charged with its interests and its honor. The construction of a railroad and the cheapening of coal may be laudable enterprises in themselves, but this government does not send its envoys abroad to undertake them. It is inconsistent with the first duty of a diplomatic agent to assume such functions; and however disinterested or innocent might be his design, it would inevitably awaken surmises prejudicial to his standing and would impair, if not destroy, his influence with his colleagues and with the people of the country to which he was accredited.

With some relief I note that this negotiation was not wholly completed at the time of writing your dispatch. I presume it was broken off by the arrest of President Calderon; but I would be better pleased to learn that upon mature reflection the impropriety of engaging in such a project and undertaking functions so incompatible with your representative character had occurred to your own mind, and that you had abandoned it altogether.

If, on the contrary, you have actually endeavored to carry it out by any compact or convention with the Peruvian Government you will at once notify it that the project is disapproved, and will not be ratified; and you will abstain from taking any further steps in the name of the United States tending to the acquisition or control of the railroad or the interference in any way whatever in that enterprise so long as you are minister from the United States.

I am, &c.,

JAMES G. BLAINE.

No. 383.

Mr. Blaine to Mr. Hurlbut.

No. 26.] DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, December 5, 1881.

SIR: Your No. 25 of the 2d ultimo, in relation to the Cochet claim, has been lately received. I have pleasure in expressing my appreciation of your course, as detailed therein, with regard to Mr. Shipherd's advocacy of that claim, and especially your action in sending hither the correspondence in the case.

The inclosed copy of a letter which I have addressed to Mr. Shipherd shows that I entertain a no less decided opinion than you have held as to the indecency and dishonor of his attempts to influence diplomatic consideration of this claim. Perhaps I should mitigate somewhat the severity of my language in view of the possible fact, pertinently suggested by you, that Mr. Shipherd is not wholly in his right mind.

In a late instruction I referred to the Peruvian Company as composed of reputable gentlemen in New York. I am led now to believe that the eminent New York gentlemen, claimed to be associated in the company, are as ignorant of the use of their names as I have been of the remarkable and absurd statements which Mr. Shipherd attributes to me in his letters to you.

Yours, &c.,

JAMES G. BLAINE.

No. 384.

Mr. Hurlbut to Mr. Blaine.

No. 32.] LEGATION OF THE UNITED STATES,
Lima, Peru, December 7, 1881. (Received January 4, 1882.)

SIR: On the 28th of November, 1881, at the city of Tarm a, Mr. Pié rola issued a formal decree abandoning his position as President, and turning over all his troops and other means to General Carceres. He also published a short proclamation. Both of these documents I inclose in translation.

Having been furnished by the Chilian authorities with passports and safe conduct, he is now in this city. He has said that he will leave by steamer to-morrow. I do not believe it.

I find that preparations are being made for a public meeting for next Sunday, to insist upon his retaining office. Such meeting can only be had with the consent and by the connivance of the Chilian authorities, and would in any event be worthless as an expression of public opinion.

Sir Spencer St. John, the English minister, is behaving very singularly and indecorously in these affairs. He learned the other day, in a very vague form, something about the Chimbote protocol, and has proceeded to the singular length of writing out the points of a "secret treaty" between the United States and Peru, which he is exhibiting in clubs and other public places, and which he induces people to believe is genuine.

In the same spirit he has induced the Chilian authorities to believe, or to effect to believe, that a "secret treaty" of vast importance has in fact been executed, giving in ownership to the United States the entire bay of Chimbote, and some square miles of territory, and the railroad, with exclusive civil and military jurisdiction and power to erect fortifications, besides many exclusive privileges.

If Mr. St. John had ever said anything to me on the subject I should have probably told him the facts as they were.

The death of General Kilpatrick, which took place on Friday night of last week, was communicated to me by telegraph. I hoisted the legation colors at half-mast.

I hope and believe that the envoy now on his way will be ready and will be ordered to supply his place, and with such full information from the Department that he will be ready to act promptly.

One of the Chilian papers just received contains the following news from Santiago, which I send for what it is worth:

It is said that General Kilpatrick has received a note from his government, disapproving the apprehension of Calderon, and that he is directed to communicate such disapproval to the Chilian Government, waiting for the arrival of the minister to treat directly. It is added that the Chilian Government answered that it would act as best became its duties and its interests.

December 1, 1881.

General Charles Adams arrived here last Saturday on his way to Bolivia. He will leave on Saturday morning (10th) for Mollendo, thence by railway to Puno and La Paz. As instructed by personal letter of the Secretary of November 9, I have given him copies of my instructions, and advised him of what has transpired here.

To-morrow, the 8th, a meeting of the diplomatic corps will take place to consider the letter addressed to them by Montero.

I cannot predict their action, for it is one of the difficulties of this situation that the logic of events seems to have no force, and it is possible that the Chilians may even yet treat with Piérola to foment discord, and will be supported in so doing by the French and English ministers.

I am, sir, &c.,

S. A. HURLBUT.

[Inclosure 1 in No. 32.—Translation.]

DECREE.

NICOLÁS DE PIÉROLA, President of the Republic and Protector of the Native Race.

Considering:

1st. That the desertion accomplished by the commanders-in-chief of the army, Col. José de la Torre and Rear-Admiral Lizardo Montero and Brigadier-General Andres A. Carceres, deprives the government of the means of maintaining the national defense, precisely at the time in which, having accumulated new elements for war, in concert with our ally, the Republic of Bolivia, we had commenced the plan of operations against the enemy.

2d. That notwithstanding the manifest will of the people, and of the majority of the revolted forces, and the attitude of those which remain loyal, it would become necessary to enter into an armed strife within the country, in the presence of the enemy, thereby destroying the elements of national defense, which should be preserved at all hazards.

In conformity with the vote of the ministers of state I resolve:

ARTICLE 1. To discharge myself from the government of the republic, confided to me by its people and confirmed by the national assembly in July last.

ART. 2. The political officers and commanders of forces who have not been deprived of their authority by the rebellion will surrender up such authority to the military officer commanding the garrison of the Quebrada of Huarochiri (this means General Carceres).

The ministers of foreign affairs and of justice, who also have charge of the other portfolios, are charged with the execution of the present decree, and of its publication and circulation.

Given in the city of Tarma this 28th day of November, 1881.

NICOLÁS DE PIÉROLA.

AURELIO GARCÍA Y GARCÍA.
PEDRO A. DEL OLAR.

[Inclosure 2 in No. 32.—Translation.]

PROCLAMATION.

The President of the Republic to the Nation.

FELLOW-CITIZENS: My duty to the country which elevated me to its government in moments of extreme necessity has been fulfilled without hesitation or rest during two years, in spite of all obstacles and at the cost of all sacrifices. I fulfill this same duty now in separating myself from command and from the country, in the fearful situation created in Peru by the bad elements within her bosom. This same duty imposes silence on me. May Providence save the nation from the abyss opened before her by her own sons.

TARMA, November 28, 1881.

No. 385.

Mr. Hurlbut to Mr. Blaine.

No. 33.] LEGATION OF THE UNITED STATES,
Lima, Peru, December 11, 1881. (Received January 4, 1882.)

SIR: In my last (No. 32) I mentioned the extraordinary conduct of Sir Spencer St. John, the British minister. I have learned since that time that the Chilian Government has acted upon this information, and that they have telegraphed to their several diplomatic agents in America and Europe in accordance with the false and exaggerated information furnished them from that source. I am also informed, though I scarcely believe it, that the English, French, and Italian ministers here have given like information to their respective governments.

The purpose of all these communications is to give color to the idea of annexation, or at least protectorate, on the part of the United States.

Stimulated, undoubtedly, by this same information, the Chilian military authorities of this city made a domiciliary visit to the house of Mr. Calderon, occupied by his wife and family, and instituted a severe but ineffectual search for the alleged treaty. They arrested Mr. Velarde, one of Calderon's late ministers, and demanded a literal copy. Mr. Velarde stated that he had no such document in his possession. They then pressed him to ask for a copy from me. He did so, and I answered that if the Chilian commissioners wished anything from me it was their duty to make the request, which, if at all proper, would be at once attended to as coming from the representatives of a friendly nation, but that a copy of public documents could only be had by consent of the government at Washington.

This request they have not yet made.

Having made up my mind that all this came from the indiscreet and indecent action of Sir Spencer St. John, I addressed him an official note, a copy of which is inclosed, dated December 9, 1881. This note was sent to him at 8.30 a. m. of 10th December, and at 10.30 a. m. he came to my house and we had the interview, a statement of which I inclose.

It appears to me that his excuse, as given by him, is frivolous, and a very weak invention, and, if anything, aggravates his fault. If he had believed the trash he gave out there would have been some excuse, but it is apparent that his sole object was to make mischief and create an ill feeling throughout America and in Europe against the United States.

It is needless to add that I do not believe a word of his excuse, for I am advised by many gentlemen of good standing, Americans, Germans, and French, that he deliberately induced the impression on their minds that there was foundation for the story.

It is for you, sir, to determine whether the foreign office in London ought to be informed of this extreme misconduct on the part of this personage.

I am, &c.,

S. A. HURLBUT.

[Inclosure in No. 33.]

Mr. Hurlbut to Sir Spencer St. John.

LEGATION OF THE UNITED STATES,
Lima, Peru, December 9, 1881.

Sir SPENCER ST. JOHN,
Minister Resident, Her Britannic Majesty's Legation, Lima:

MY DEAR SIR: I have been informed by several gentlemen of good standing that for some time past you have exhibited in places of public resort a supposed version of an assumed treaty between Peru and the United States. It is further stated that although not affirmed by you to be a literal copy, the impression is made that it is substantially accurate. The contents as reported to me are extraordinary and absurd. Your position gives a certain weight and importance even to extra-official action.

As you appear to have given publicity to this extravagant version, and as I can easily conceive that such version may, in the present state of affairs, produce complications, I request you to admit the representative of the United States into the confidence you have so liberally bestowed upon the public, and to furnish me a copy of the version alluded to.

I ask this as the representative of my government, so that the information, which it is my duty to forward, may be completely authentic. Personally I attach no sort of importance to the affair, but as there are weak-minded and credulous persons who have been or may be impressed with mistaken notions, I should like the exact truth in place of information at second hand. I trust I need not say to you that the relations between our respective governments, and I hope between ourselves, have been such that any inquiry from you at this legation would have met with satisfactory reply.

I have, &c.,

S. A. HURLBUT.

Memorandum of interview between Mr. Hurlbut and Sir Spencer St. John.

The above letter was delivered at 8.30 a. m. December 10. At 10.30 of the same day Mr. St. John came to my house and stated, that he had just received my letter; that he had shown to several persons a draft of a supposed treaty which he himself had noted down, consisting of six articles; that he had done it as a joke to show the credulity of the Peruvians by embodying in form the rumors current on the streets; that it was never intended to be serious, and that he had so informed every one to whom he had shown it; that the propositions were so absurd that he never supposed any one would believe them; that he had destroyed the paper and consequently could not give me a copy.

I remarked that practical jokes on such questions at the present time and by one in his position were very dangerous, and that I should inform my government fully in the matter, and also correct from his own statement the stories current in the city, and that I regretted that he did not choose to give me his statement in writing.

The above is an accurate statement of the substance of the conversation.

S. A. HURLBUT.

No. 386.

Mr. Hurlbut to Mr. Blaine.

No. 34.] LEGATION OF THE UNITED STATES,
Lima, Peru, December 14, 1881. (Received January 4, 1882.)

SIR: I wrote you in my last (No. 33) by the Italian naval vessel Christopher Columbus specially in regard to the singular conduct of Sir Spencer St. John.

On the 8th of December, at a meeting of the diplomatic corps, an official copy of Piérola's decree of renunciation and proclamation was read. It is the same of which I sent you a translation in my No. 32.

Montero, as vice-president, has been promptly recognized in Arequipa, but as yet Carceres has not come out. I hear from him every week, and he promises faithfully; I feel sure that he will do it.

Montero also sent an official communication to the diplomatic body, asking recognition. As yet no joint action has been taken, and I believe that the English and French ministers will not recognize any one until Chili leads the way.

Piérola is still in the city. On last Sunday there was an attempt to get up a public meeting in his interest, but the attendance was small and disreputable, and the military authorities dispersed it.

On the 9th December the Chilian authorities seized the municipalidad, which is the local government of the city and its surroundings, and have taken full charge.

I do not know their purpose; it may be evidence of permanent occupation or it may be that they want better police.

General Charles Adams went to sea on Saturday on the United States ship Adams (10th December), and after proceeding 100 miles or so the engine broke down and the ship came back under sail. He was quite at a loss what to do, as it will take a week to repair, and consulted with me. I recommended him to wait for repairs and also for the arrival of Messrs. Trescot and Blaine, from whom he could undoubtedly receive very valuable information, which otherwise would be required to be sent by special messenger.

I trust this conduct will be approved, as in fact no time will be lost, and further that Mr. Adams may not suffer pecuniary loss by being unable to complete his voyage in the time limited.

I have just heard from Santiago, from a correspondent who is generally well informed, that before his death General Kilpatrick executed and sealed up a document stating that his note to Valmaseda had been extorted from him, when he scarcely had his senses, and was wholly unfit for the transaction of business.

If this is not true, it is at least probable.

I have the honor to be, sir, &c.,

S. A. HURLBUT.

No. 387.

Mr. Hurlbut to Mr. Blaine.

No. 35.] LEGATION OF THE UNITED STATES,
Lima, Peru, December 15, 1881. (Received January 4, 1882.)

SIR: After closing my regular mail the streets last night were filled with the following extra, which I have only time to translate:

[The Comercio of Callao. Bulletin gratis.]

THE UNITED STATES AND THE WAR OF THE PACIFIC.—THE CONDUCT OF HURLBUT DISAPPROVED BY HIS GOVERNMENT.

To the Minister Altamirano and Novoa:

Our minister in Washington advises:

1st. That Trescot and Blaine, junior, come to Chili and Peru to study the situation, and to harmonize the American minister without any hostility towards Chili.

2d. That the protocol subscribed by Hurlbut and Garcia Calderon, by which Peru cedes to the United States the port of Chimbote for a naval and coal station has been disapproved by the Government of the United States, and communication sent to Hurlbut disavowing his agreement.

3d. That in his message to Congress the President of the United States manifests the attention with which he follows the war of the Pacific.

That his desire for a peace which may check blood and misery, and the fact that the position of the United States is badly understood in America, and his observation that diplomatic questions have been separately and independently treated (alluding to Hurlbut and Kilpatrick), thereby causing misunderstandings, have induced him to send special ministers, who may harmonize friendly relations.

This bulletin has flooded the whole of this city and Callao, and as it is distributed gratis it is undoubtedly the work of the authorities.

Steamers left yesterday evening for the south and to-day for the north.

There is nothing very special in the telegrams when dissected, but I think it a Piérola move.

Yours, &c.,

S. A. HURLBUT.

No. 388.

Mr. Hurlbut to Mr. Blaine.

No. 36.] LEGATION OF THE UNITED STATES,
Lima, Peru, December 17, 1881. (Received January 17, 1882.)

SIR: I forward with this another set of papers from Mr. J. R. Shipherd and my answer. I have tried to stop this gentleman, but in vain.

I request that his letters may be read carefully, as they are very singular and very audacious, and that they be retained in the department for future use, if need be.

I am, &c.,

S. A. HURLBUT.

[Inclosure 1 in No. 36.]

Mr. Hurlbut to Mr. Shipherd.

LIMA, December 17, 1881.

JACOB R. SHIPHERD, Esq., New York:

SIR: I have tried, as far as I could, to make you understand that I cannot have, and ought not to have, anything to do with your company or yourself as its agent, or with any other similar.

Both my general and particular instructions forbid me from taking notice of such matters, unless referred to me by the Department of State. Once more, and for the last time, I repeat this statement.

I shall return your papers to the Secretary of State, as I have done the others, and definitely close all correspondence with you, unless directed by the Department.

Your obedient servant,

S. A. HURLBUT.

[Inclosure 2 in No. 36.]

Mr. Shipherd to Mr. Hurlbut.

THE PERUVIAN CO., 10 SPRUCE ST.,
New York, November 14, 1881.

SIR: It occurs to me to advise you of the important fact apropos of your mention of the proposed sale of Theophile Landreau's interest to the Chilians that it is notoriously charged, and frankly admitted here by all who seem to be well informed in the premises, that both the Landreaus not only long since parted with all their interests in what is known as the Landreau claim, but have ever since unscrupulously continued to offer and to sell to whomsoever would buy additional, and of course purely ideal, shares ad libitum; indeed the sum of my information is that they have in this manner resold the entire claim at least three times.

It is obvious that if the Chilians should pay in good faith a large sum for a bad title, the present complications, which would seem sufficient, must be gravely increased. I am now engaged with persons who think the original title can be reached and disentangled, but this is by no means certain. Of the gross oversale there can be no question; nor can it be doubtful that whatever the title the claim must be subordinated to Cochet's, and can have no value until Cochet's demands shall have first been satisfied.

I may safely place these facts at your command, and rely upon your discreet use of them to prevent needless trouble.

I am, &c.,

JACOB R. SHIPHERD.

[Inclosure 3 in No. 36.]

Mr. Shipherd to Mr. Hurlbut.

THE PERUVIAN CO., 10 SPRUCE ST.,
New York, November 15, 1881.

SIR: * * * writes me, "Hurlbut telegraphs that the Chilians have captured Calderon and carried him to Chili." * * * adds, "There must be trouble now. Have * * * do his duty. American influence in America is at an end if Chili can slap our face as flatly as this."

We heard also by cable of Montero's acceptance.

We appreciate the gravity of the new issues, and the new problem which you must now face. The letters I inclose with this were already written when * * * letter came to hand, and I will not now change them. The need for a protectorate is but increased by all that has happened, and I doubt not Chili will continue to force the issue. Our people hope she will. What we want is our government at the fore, and all winds that blow that way fill our sails.

I reply to * * * "I totally agree with you as to Chili. She must unconditionally return Calderon to executive liberty, or we must all take partners for the dance. I trust Mr. Blaine will plant his flag and his guns right there; and he will, won't he?"

I shall consult * * * to-day, and he and I may go to Washington on Thursday.

We shall do what lies in our power to second all the vigor you have used on the main issue.

I am, &c.,

JACOB R. SHIPHERD.

[Inclosure 4 in No. 36.]

Mr. Shipherd to Mr. Hurlbut.

THE PERUVIAN CO., 10 SPRUCE ST.,
New York, November 15, 1881.

SIR: Since my note by the last steamer the question of a definite protectorate has grown in relative importance, and is now being seriously discussed.

The general sentiment among our people, as among our advisers—and you will not forget that we include representative men and advisers of all factions and parties, and I may say once for all that no suggestions will be found in this correspondence which have not in the precise form here set down first received the concurring approval of all who advise the executive of this company. I say it is now the general sentiment of our people that there should be a protectorate if the Peruvian Government as such is to be saved. Our information is that the national debilities, of which the more vigorous Chilians have so easily taken advantage, are too deeply seated to be already purged by those adverse fortunes which do sometimes purge a people, and that the factional dissensions of the country present separate problems equally unpromising.

Assuming that our plans succeed we must inevitably accept the general responsibility of maintaining order, and to this end we must seasonably determine a controlling policy

We may, no doubt, arrange with the Chilians for aid, but an American protectorate seems to promise more satisfactory results, all things considered.

Upon this general question, however, we shall be glad to receive and carefully to consider your matured advice.

The more immediate purpose of this note is to suggest that if Mr. Calderon desires direct aid from Washington he shall lose no time in asking for it.

That he should ask it, and not merely in his executive capacity but under conditions which will show clearly that the prayer is the prayer of his people, is an obvious prerequisite to any consideration of the question by the President or by Congress.

If I were at liberty to use names I might give that of * * * authorized to speak directly for * * * whose suggestion is that Mr. Calderon accredited a special deputation of, say, three of his ablest men to come at once to Washington to present to the President for transmission to Congress—which will be in session when this reaches you—a formal application for a protectorate; that this deputation have full powers and remain here at the command of Congress until the application shall be finally disposed of.

The sentiment of our people seems to be unanimous upon such points as these.

I. The only ground upon which such an application would receive any favor, and, therefore, the only ground upon which the petition should by its own terms rest is that there are now in Peru very large American interests demanding and being clearly entitled to American protection, and these may be specified generally as—

1. The interests of this company.
2. The interests represented by Mr. W. H. Cilley.
3. The Landreau claim, concerning which you have already been instructed.
4. Lesser interests in the aggregate.

These specifications might well be enforced with reference to the fact that the Monroe doctrine and the more recent and now definitely named "Blaine doctrine" render the intervention of any European power impossible, and there might be a reference in this connection to Captain Eads's American ship-railway project which is to be before Congress this winter, and which * * * tells me he shall now heartily favor and with which I may add we shall probably give hands for future use.

II. No suggestion would be entertained at Washington, or by our people at large, or would be favored by this company, which looked, however indirectly, to the assumption by our government of any pecuniary liability whatever. All the expenses of the protectorate itself must be paid, sooner or later, by Peru, and no proposition for a guarantee of any of Peru's obligations would be considered for a moment; more than this, an application not expressly excluding all possibilities of this kind would probably defeat itself. The strong hand of the United States as a helping hand will probably be extended if this above is asked for.

III. The application will only succeed if actively supported by the now very influential voice of this company, and the deputation should be instructed to present only such an application as this company shall, in advance, entirely approve. Upon this point I will go so far as to say that it is the corner-stone of the whole case.

IV. If any application of this sort is to be attempted you will yourself see that not a moment is to be lost.

So important a question would be debated for months, and unless introduced very early in the session would probably fail for mere want of time.

You should advise me by cable the moment a decision is reached. I could then utilize the weeks intervening the arrival of the commissioners to excellent advantage.

V. It is not now believed that a protectorate if granted need continue more than a few years. The return of peace under a government absolutely stable would rapidly restore normal conditions, and the development of the comprehensive plans of this company would, at no distant day, establish a condition of things under which foreign aid would cease to be useful.

It is advised that the application would be almost certainly granted if made in this view, but no proposition for annexation would be considered, and a permanent protectorate would look like annexation under a thin disguise. In a word, temporary aid under the conditions suggested could hardly be refused; a permanent, or probably permanent, governmental responsibility at so great a distance would probably be declined.

It will occur to you without suggestion that in any event the more modest the prayer in the first instance the more likely it is to be granted, and that if our government does but once undertake to compose the pending difficulties it may be safely set down that she will not stay her hand until the whole work is thoroughly done, no matter what the cost of success may finally turn out to be; here, as elsewhere, it is the first step only that costs, and if it is effectual help that Peru wants her supreme wisdom is to make her prayer effectual in the first instance.

If she will follow strictly the advice I give her, she will be certainly saved.

I shall at all times value such information and advice as you may think it opportune to supply.

I am, &c.,

JACOB R. SHIPHERD.

[Inclosure 5 in No. 36.]

Mr. Shipherd to Mr. Hurlbut.

THE PERUVIAN CO., 10 SPRUCE ST.,
New York, November 15, 1881.

SIR: I decide to say a word to you in exceptional frankness, perhaps, but in a temper which I trust will vindicate the utterance.

I assume that you may, upon all I have already written, and upon the change of administration, not unnaturally query what bearing the course of events is likely to have upon your continuance at Lima. I am, perhaps, better situated than any other individual to throw light upon this question, and deem it perhaps a duty to do so.

I therefore remark:

1. That your failure to call upon me before sailing was most unfortunate.

In the premises our people deem the omission inexplicable upon any admissible grounds.

2. Whether, through any fault of yours or not, the impression has had wide currency at Lima and elsewhere that you had substantially identified yourself with the cause represented by the notorious Suarez—a cause which our government had peremptorily and persistently refused to aid, even before it became a rival of American interests.

3. The notable indifference to our interests and the inexplicable treatment of the inclosures intrusted to you I referred to in my reply to yours of October 1.

These circumstances, taken together, had determined our people to demand your unconditional removal, when your letter of October 1 opportunely arrived. We now, so far as ourselves are concerned, wait further advices. I cannot suppose that you should think it strange that we should view the duty of a minister in your circumstances as we do. But the tide has turned, and you cannot need any announcement to acquaint you with the fact that the new Secretary, who is expected to take office early in December, will be politically in sympathy with those who have the ear of the President, and who have substantial reasons for seeking your removal.

If you shall henceforth support American interests (which alone you are commissioned and paid to promote) as heartily as you have so far supported Peruvian and Calderonian interests, you may be sure that we shall not ask your removal, and on the contrary, as at present advised, we shall definitely favor your continuance; but if you are to champion all other interests before ours we shall certainly call for a change, and we have the most substantial reasons for believing that such a call will be affirmatively answered whenever made.

Upon the whole record what I so frankly say need not be misconstrued. It is pure frankness and nothing else. As I have constantly said we expect only of you the attitude and the services which in our judgment are compelled by the very nature of the office you hold. That attitude and those services will meet not only all our needs, but our utmost wishes. If you stand for us at the front as your chief stands for us at Washington, you will certainly not be liable to criticism for too much zeal, and still you will do all we ever desired you to do.

So far you have fallen infinitely below that level, and if I were less frank in saying so I should be less sincerely your friend.

I am, &c.,

JACOB R. SHIPHERD.

[Inclosure 6 in No. 36.]

Mr. Shipherd to Mr. Hurlbut.

THE PERUVIAN CO., 10 SPRCUE ST.,
New York, November 16, 1881.

SIR: I inclose with this, apropos of a suggestion heretofore made, a copy of * * * brief upon the precedents for a direct treaty between the Government of Peru and the Government of the United States, to cover the essential rights and interests of this company, and as a foundation upon which both Peru and this company may safely ground the proposed agreement between themselves.

* * * concurs in * * * view in a careful memorandum from which I quote:

"I anticipate that the Secretary of State will, without serious debate, admit the following propositions as resting upon constitutional usage from the foundation of the government, viz:

"1. That the President may negotiate treaties through an agent or representative whose designation or appointment has not been submitted to the Senate.

"2. That the government may, in its discretion, make reclamation of other governments in behalf of its own citizens who have suffered injuries, or in any way have been deprived of their rights.

"3. That all treaties, however negotiated, are only valid and binding upon this government when duly ratified by the Senate. The first two of these positions are well established by the authorities cited in the brief, and the third will not be disputed."

* * * also substantially concurs. The suggestion has not been formally submitted to other counsel.

If these views are sound such a treaty might be negotiated at Washington by an accredited minister or commissioner on the part of Peru and such special commissioner as the Secretary of State should designate; or it might be negotiated at Lima by the American minister and such special commissioner as the President of Peru should designate.

It is also apparent that this treaty might conceivably deal with some phases and possibly even with the essence of the suggested protectorate.

I shall be glad to consider such suggestions as occur to you in this connection.

I am, &c.,

JACOB R. SHIPHERD.

In the matter of the claims against Peru owned by the Peruvian Company.

It is agreed that it is very desirable to have a treaty made with Peru without the interference of Chili, for the reason that the latter government would, first, if possible, supplant the present Government of Peru by the "bandit mountaineer," or some other military chieftain, upon condition that he should defeat the treaty; and, second, would seek to stir up other governments; and, third, would appear in our own Senate for such purpose. Can such a treaty be made?

First. By article 2, section 2, of the Constitution, the President has the power, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, to make treaties. Is such consent a prerequisite? Nearly three hundred treaties answer to the contrary, and the Constitution makes it no more a prerequisite as to treaties than as to officers.

In some instances the persons representing the Government have been selected by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, notably as to the treaties made with Great Britain, after the adoption of our Constitution and the war of 1812; two treaties with France, which involved claims, and one with Spain, but an overwhelming preponderance of treaties have been negotiated by persons appointed by the President without any reference to the Senate, until presented for approval. These persons have been sometimes ministers plenipotentiary, sometimes ministers resident, then chargé d'affaires, consuls, and special agents or commissioners, and sometimes by the agent of the plenipotentiary, as in the treaty with Algiers, concluded September 5, 1795, ratified March 2, 1796, and as in the treaty with Tripoli, concluded November 4, 1796.

Second. Is it the duty and has it been the practice of the United States Government to conclude treaties relating to private claims?

The first treaty in regard to private claims was concluded November 19, 1794, ratified October 28, 1795, and was with Great Britain. By article 6 of such treaty compensation is provided for debts due to British creditors; by article 7, for losses "by divers merchants and others, citizens of the United States, by reason of irregular or illegal captures."

The treaty with France, concluded September 30, 1800, ratified July 31, 1801, by its fifth article provides for the payment of debts "by the individuals of one with the individuals of the other" nation.

On the 11th of August, 1802, a treaty was concluded with Spain, ratified January 9, 1804, by the third article of which all claims made by citizens of the United States may be presented to certain commissioners.

Charles Pinkney negotiated this treaty for the United States.

On the 30th of April, 1803, a treaty with France was concluded, by the first article of which certain debts due by France to citizens of the United States were provided for

The representatives of the United States were appointed by and with the advice of the Senate.

On the 22d of February, 1819, a treaty was made with Spain by which Florida was acquired, and the United States assumed to pay five millions of dollars of debts due from Spain to citizens of the United States. (See article 11).

This treaty was ratified February 22, 1821, negotiated for the United States by the Secretary of State.

On November 13, 1826, a treaty was concluded with Great Britain, ratified February 6, 1817, by the first article of which twelve hundred and four thousand nine hundred and sixty dollars is to be paid to the United States for the use of the persons entitled. This treaty was negotiated for the United States by Albert Gallatin.

On the 28th of March, 1830, a treaty was made with Denmark, ratified June 5, 1830, by which that government agreed to pay six hundred and fifty thousand dollars on account of the citizens of the United States. This treaty was negotiated on the part of the United States by Henry Wheaton, chargé d'affaires.

On July 4, 1831, a treaty was made with France, ratified February 2, 1831, by the second article of which twenty-five millions of francs were to be paid to the United States to satisfy claims of its citizens (see article 1). William C. Rives acted for the United States.

On the 14th of October, 1832, a treaty was made with the Two Sicily, by which two millions one hundred and fifteen thousand ducats were to be paid to the United States to be distributed among certain claimants, less seven thousand six hundred and seventy-nine ducats, to be retained by the United States for certain expenses. This treaty was negotiated for the United States by John Nelson, chargé d'affaires, and was ratified June 8, 1833.

On the 17th day of February, 1834, a treaty was made with Spain, ratified August 14, 1834, Cornelius P. Van Ness, envoy extraordinary, acting for the United States, by which twelve millions of reals were paid to the United States in satisfaction of all claims.

On the 11th day of April, 1838, a treaty was made with Texas, ratified July 6, 1838, concluded by the chargé d'affaires of the United States, by which the sum of eleven thousand seven hundred and fifty dollars was to be paid to the United States, to be distributed among certain claimants, American citizens.

On the 11th day of April, 1839, a treaty was made with Mexico, John Forsyth, Secretary of State, acting for the United States, ratified April 7, 1840, by which claims of citizens of the United States were referred to four commissioners, two to be appointed by the United States, two by Mexico; the King of Prussia to act as umpire, for any sum of money found due citizens of the United States. Treasury notes were to be issued.

On the 30th of January, 1843, a further treaty was made on the same subject, ratified March 29, 1843, Waddy Thompson, envoy extraordinary, acting for the United States.

On the 17th of March, 1841, a treaty was made with Peru, James O. Pickett, chargé d'affaires, acting for the United States, by which three hundred thousand dollars were to be paid to the United States for claims of its citizens, proclaimed February 21, 1844.

On the 27th day of January, 1849, a treaty was made with Brazil, David Todd, envoy extraordinary, acting for the United States, ratified January 18, 1850. by which five hundred and thirty thousand milreis were to be paid to the United States for the claims of its citizens. (Articles 1 and 2.)

On the 26th day of February, 1851, a treaty was made with Portugal, ratified June 23, 1851, Daniel Webster, Secretary of State, acting for the United States, by which certain claims presented by the United States on behalf of the officers and crew of a privateer should be referred to some sovereign of a friendly nation.

On the 8th day of February, 1853, a treaty was made with Great Britain, Joseph Reading Bissell, envoy extraordinay, acting for the United States, ratified July 26, 1853, by which it was agreed that all claims on the part of corporations, companies, or private individuals, citizens of the United States, upon the government of Her Britannic Majesty, presented since the treaty of Ghent, should be referred to certain commissioners.

On the 10th of September, 1857, a treaty was made with New Granada, ratified November 8, 1860, Lewis Cass, Secretary of State, acting for the United States; a board of commissioners was organized to adjust the claims of the citizens of the United States against New Granada.

On the 8th day of November, 1858, a treaty was made with China, William B. Reid, envoy extraordinay, acting for the United States, by which five hundred thousand taels were to be paid for the satisfaction of claims of American citizens.

On the 10th of November, 1858, a treaty was made with Chili, ratified October 15, 1859, John Bigler, envoy extraordinary, acting for the United States, by which it was referred to the King of Belgium to arbitrate claims made by citizens of the United States for silver taken in bars by the vice-admiral of the Chilian squadron.

On the 14th of January, 1859, a treaty was made with Venezuela, Edwin A. Turpin, minister resident, acting for the United States, ratified February 26, 1861, by which the former government agreed to pay certain citizens of the United States on account of being evicted from the Aves Island the sum of one hundred and thirty thousand dollars.

On the 4th day of February, 1859, a treaty was made with Paraguay, ratified March 7, 1860, by which the claims of the United States and Paraguay Navigation Company, a company composed of citizens of the United States, were referred to a commissioner, James B. Bowlin, special commissioner, acting for the United States.

On the 2d day of July, 1860, a treaty was made with Costa Rica, ratified November 9, 1861, by which all claims of citizens of the United States for injuries to persons or damages to property were referred to a commissioner, Alexander Dimitry, minister resident, acting for the United States.

On the 25th of November, 1862, a treaty was concluded with Ecuador, ratified July 27, 1864, United States represented by its minister resident, by which "all claims on the part of corporations, companies, or individuals, citizens of the United States, upon the Government of Ecuador," were referred to a commissioner.

On the 20th of December, 1862, a treaty was made with the Government of Peru, ratified April 21, 1863, by which claims of the owners of vessels, citizens of the United States, were referred to a commission, the envoy extraordinary representing the United States.

On the 12th of January, 1863, a treaty was made between the same governments, ratified April 18, 1863, by which "all claims of citizens of the United States against the Government of Peru" were referred to a mixed commission, same envoy acting for the United States.

On the 10th day of January, 1864, a treaty was made with Columbia, ratified August 19, 1865, extending a commission, proclaimed the 8th of November, 1860, the Secretary of State acting for the United States.

On the 22d of October, 1864, a treaty was made with Japan, proclaimed April 9, 1866, by which there was to be paid three millions of dollars to four powers, the United States being one, "to include all claims of whatever nature," the minister resident representing the United States.

On the 25th of April, 1866, a treaty was concluded with Venezuela, ratified April 17, 1867, by which "all claims on the part of corporations, companies, or individuals, citizens of the United States, and the Government of Venezuela," which had been presented, were referred to a mixed commission.

On the 4th of July, 1868, a treaty was made with Mexico, by which claims for injuries to persons and property by "corporations, companies, or private individuals, citizens of the United States and the Government of the Mexican Republic," should be referred to commissioners, two to be selected by each government, providing for an umpire, ratified February 1, 1869, United States acting by its Secretary of State.

On the 4th day of December, 1868, a treaty was made with Peru, ratified June 4, 1869, referring claims of citizens of the United States to commissioners, the same as in the last recited treaty.

On the 12th of February, 1871, a treaty was made with Spain, Daniel E. Sickles, envoy, acting for the United States, by which "the settlement of the claims of citizens of the United States or of their heirs against the Government of Spain," for injuries to persons or property, should be referred to arbitrators and an umpire.

On the 8th of May, 1871, a treaty was made with Great Britain, ratified June 17, 1871, by which the Alabama claims were referred to arbitration. The United States finally waived all government claims and recovered only for claims to be distributed to individuals.

On the 27th of November, 1872 a treaty was made with Mexico, ratified March 17, 1873, by which a commission was continued to consider certain claims of citizens of the United States.

I am not unmindful of the criticism of Senator Sumner on the Clarendon-Johnson treaty, nor of the principles contended for in the discussion on the "Treaty of Washington, relating to the Alabama claims," but a treaty can be framed fully protecting the Peruvian company in harmony with such principles.

* * *

Of Counsel.

OCTOBER 1, 1881.

No. 389.

Mr. Hurlbut to Mr. Blaine.

No. 37.] LEGATION OF THE UNITED STATES,
Lima, Peru, December 22, 1881. (Received January 17, 1882.)

SIR: Your dispatches Nos. 17, 18, and 19, have been received.

My dispatch No. 20 was of the date of October 12, 1881.

I have read the last dispatches, Nos. 17, 18, and 19, with great care, and regret that in the last you have thought proper to disapprove certain portions of my letter to García y García, and the Lynch memorandum.

As to the latter I think that upon reading it again you will find that it does contain the very idea, if not the phrase, to the absence of which you except. It has certainly been so understood by the numerous papers in America and in Europe which have published and commented on it. I am aware that it is exceedingly difficult to bring the peculiarities of this people and the existing condition of affairs fairly before the understanding of the American people, or even of the Department. Permit me briefly to sum up the situation, not at all in the way of argument or of self justification, but as a key to the springs of my action.

The United States had recognized the constitutional government presided over by Calderon.

There was a clear understanding with Chili that they too would aid in the establishment of this form af government. It was weak and powerless, wholly within the Chilian military lines, unpopular because believed to be the creature of Chili.

The Piérola dictatorship, child of crime and bloody revolution, held everything outside of the Chilian lines, and was believed to represent the sentiment of national independence.

I availed myself of the letter to García y García (which was not official) to strike this tyranny a hard blow. I admit that it was an imprudence to use the name of the United States at all in that letter. But that letter demolished the Piérola dynasty and united the rest of the country on Calderon, thus throwing the moral weight of the United States in favor of the orderly régime of constitutional law, and against violent revolutions culminating in despotism.

This effect, so produced, unmasked the Chilian pretenses, and demonstrated their bad faith toward the United States, for the moment the Calderon government became strong, that moment they stamped it out of existence by military force.

The capture of Calderon, under the circumstances, is very nearly an insult offered to the United States. If you choose to look over the whole series of my dispatches from the very first you will find expressed the clear conviction that there is no possibility of peace on any endurable terms by the action of Peru alone.

You will further observe that the United States have forbidden the application for aid to any European power.

Given these two principles of its action, and the result is inevitable, that in its extremity this nation must look to the United States alone. I have also tried to show that the dignity of the United States and its legitimate influence demanded a temperate but firm operation of certain great principles of international law which apply and ought to apply to such cases on this continent, and which have been officially recognized by Chili in the beginning of this war. To the repeated statements, so made by me to the Department, in all of which I asked speedy answer, I have received none until the dispatch No. 19, except telegraphic instructions to continue to support the Calderon government, which instructions I considered tacitly approved.

This, of course, is due in large measure to the lamentable events of the past summer and fall, to the long and desperate illness of President Garfield, and to the changes incident to the succession of President Arthur. My work in this country has been done in absolute good faith, and with the single purpose of advancing and maintaining the influence of the United States. It has been accomplished thoroughly.

The questions now to be handled are not with Peru, but with Chili, and are consequently to be treated by other persons and in a different form.

But the ground is thoroughly prepared for any action which the United States may think proper to take and to any extent they may think proper to go.

In the future I become, in the natural course of events, a very insignificant factor, as it appears to me that I have nothing to do but to keep Peru from splitting again into fragments and parties.

For weeks the Chilian papers in this city, published under official inspection, have been filled with very vile matter against the United States and against me personally, of which I can take no notice.

The leading papers in Chili are now full of articles against the ambition of the United States, their purpose of aggrandizement, and the dangers therefrom to the Spanish American States.

The commission to Chili will not have an easy time by any means, and it will require tact, patience, and above all firmness and nerve to meet the case. I have studied these people closely, and they must be met with perfect decision.

I notice in your No. 19 that you disapprove of a supposed telegram sent by me to Buenos Ayres. The fact is this: I sent to General Kilpatrick a letter inclosing this telegram, to be forwarded to Osborn, our minister:

OSBORN, Minister:

Argentine minister needed here. Inform government.

HURLBUT.

This telegram, the Chilian papers say, was submitted by Kilpatrick to the Chilian ministry before sending it. He himself accompanied it with another, dissuading Osborn from doing so. I felt the need of an Argentine minister, and sent the telegram. I submit to your decision as to the impropriety of the movement. I am informed that Mr. Uruburie, Argentine envoy to Chili and Peru, is hourly expected in Santiago. I should not have written this very long communication except to meet the case of a very probable change in the Department (already announced by Chilian telegrams), and so that the incoming Secretary might find a resumé of my views and actions in a convenient and compact form.

I have, &c.,

S. A. HURLBUT.

No. 390.

Mr. Hurlbut to Mr. Blaine.

No. 38.] LEGATION OF THE UNITED STATES,
Lima, Peru, December 22, 1881. (Received January 17, 1882.)

SIR: Vice-President Montero has appointed two gentlemen in Lima, Mr. Elias and Mr. Candamo, as his special confidential representatives to the diplomatic corps, which fact renders intercourse more easy, while Montero is still in the interior, and this legation at Lima.

I am sir, &c.,

S. A. HURLBUT.

No. 391.

Mr. Hurlbut to Mr Blaine.

No. 39.] LEGATION OF THE UNITED STATES,
Lima, Peru, December 28, 1881. (Received January 17, 1882.)

SIR: Messrs. Trescot and Blaine arrived at Callao on the 22d instant, came to Lima on the 23d, and left for Chili on the 25th.

They saw many people here. I had the honor of a brief conference with Mr. Trescot; I informed him that, in my opinion, the immediate release of Garcia Calderon should be demanded, and I have the honor to repeat that opinion to you.

There is no decent justification for the act, and it was meant more as a blow at the United States than for Peru. If I were charged with the question, I should make it a peremptory condition; as I am not, I can only give my views of what is due to the honor of my country.

I send to the Department three communications lately received from Mr. J. R. Shipherd, which will bear reading. I also send the envelopes, from which the Chilians easily see that this person is in correspondence with this legation.

This man is doing infinite mischief. His prospectus and other papers now fill the papers in Chili and are followed by editorials extremely abusive, not only of Mr. Calderon and the United States minister in Lima, who are falsely charged to be in conspiracy in this affair, but also as to the United States. A very distinct official notice of the true attitude of this legation and of the Department ought at once to be given to Chili.

I also forward with this, a letter which I am informed is an autograph communication from Vice-President Montero.

I have, &c.,

S. A. HURLBUT.

[Inclosure 1 in No. 39.]

Mr. Shipherd to Mr. Hurlbut.

[The Peruvian Company, 10 Spruce street, New York. Post-office box 3448.]

NOVEMBER 26, 1881.

SIR: Yours of October 26 is at hand, and your suggestions have attention.

The capture and extradition of Calderon and his minister since you wrote have changed the apparent issues greatly, and for the moment we wait further developments.

The drift of events as a whole tend, as I now think, toward a change of the base of negotiations from Lima to Washington. Thus:

1. Peru's only hope lies in the United States and in this company.

2. If the United States and this company undertake to help her, they will dictate the terms of settlement alike to Peru and to Chili, and this they can better do at Washington than at Lima.

3. These terms will probably imply a protectorate, and a protectorate can only be created by the Senate, through a treaty, or by Congress, or by both. As I have already written you, this protectorate should be instantly asked for by accredited deputies sent from Lima to Washington.

4. Within the last thirty days a Chilian functionary of the highest rank made this declaration:

"By far the most dangerous element in the whole situation is the claim of the Peruvian Company. I have carefully and repeatedly examined their papers, and I don't for the life of me see how we are going to get round that claim. It gives me more anxiety than any possible action of the United States Government apart from it. The Peruvians will of course admit the claim, and then the United States Executive is bound to back it up, and what answer can we make? It troubles me more than I can describe."

5. I know that the Chilian minister at Washington has practically determined to seek a conference with me at an early date; on my part I am about to take a step which will make it easy for him to do so; the moment he and I arrive at an understanding all the rest will be easy. Be assured I shall assume Peru's concurrence at the outset, but only until she has a fair opportunity to speak for herself. The first moment she can speak, she must speak, or I shall drop her out of the account.

6. I am semi-officially advised that the Chilians have demanded your removal, and have been denied; and I know that by the next steamer Señor Martinez will (unless he changes his present determination) ask for power to treat with Mr. Blaine and the president of the Peruvian Company direct.

7. Mr. Martinez is working night and day to secure utterances of the press here favorable to the Chilian course, and not without some success; he regards this the battle-ground yet to be won.

I cannot too strongly assure you that the interests of Peru at Washington are in wretchedly incompetent hands, and such an appointment as I suggested (Mr. Tracey) or far better a direct deputation asking a protectorate, is of the utmost importance. In any event * * * and * * * who think of nothing but the impossible société contract, cannot too soon be abolished altogether. I say this only in the interest of Peru; this company has not the slightest ill-will toward either; indeed, it will gladly show them any personal courtesy or kindness in its power. I told * * * months ago, also, that our plans were liberal enough to take in the société itself on a fair basis, our motto being, "Live and let live" on all sides; but he makes no response.

As soon as your letter came I sent a copy to * * * through * * * No expense will embarrass us; no problem will discourage us. You are very safe in your assumption on this point; but we have, for fundamental reasons, asked little direct aid from the government as yet.

After Mr. Blaine had formally advised me of the filing of our demands and the proofs of their service, I did suggest that he might forward copies to the minister at Lima and at Santiago, to be presented by the minister with the remark that the company was known to the Department to be composed of reputable gentlemen whose representations were entitled to entire respect; but he seemed to think such an instruction unnecessary, remarking that it was, of course, the business of ministers to afford always their unofficial good offices, &c. I frankly think the instruction should be sent, but relying as I now do upon your entire good-will, and expecting nothing from Santiago, I do not press the point.

Not a little criticism of your course has appeared in print, but the unfortunate letter to Piérola's secretary is chiefly chargeable with it. That letter, however true, was unnecessary and impolitic. We are all compelled to admit so much. But your memorandum to Admiral Lynch, the secretary and I stoutly defend, and will defend, and I shall take the necessary measures to antidote Mr. Martinez's negotiations with the press.

I was in Washington again last week, and had a full talk with * * * at * * * suggestion, and upon his introduction. My chief point was that the Executive might avoid a discussion of the abstract question of intervention by substituting the not-debatable question whether it is not bound to take such charge of the situation as may be necessary to the protection of American property interests in Peru. Mr. Cilley was with me. We have practically united interests, and we two stood at the interview for $1,500,000,000 of American property. While properly reticent, * * * was evidently impressed with the suggestion, and * * * and others who have his ear, will follow it up.

The situation at the moment of this writing seems to be this:

1. The United States must see to it that Peru has an authorized executive, and that he is left perfectly free to treat with the United States and with this company.

2. Such executive, if he is wise, will use his first moment of liberty in admitting our claim unconditionally, and his next in basing on it and on Mr. Cilley's large interests direct application for an American protectorate. Leave the rest to this company, and you will not be disappointed.

I am, sir, your obedient servant,

JACOB R. SHIPHERD.

Hon. S. A. HURLBUT, Lima.

[Inclosure 2 in No. 39.]

Mr. Shipherd to Mr. Hurlbut.

[The Peruvian Company, 10 Spruce street, New York. Post-office box 3448.]

NOVEMBER 29, 1881.

MY DEAR SIR: Yesterday I heard through a mutual friend from * * * He assures us in gratifying terms of your fidelity to Peru and of your readiness to promote our places, so far as they shall be found well founded and practicable, but gives as a first impression the opinion that neither Landreau nor Cochet has any rights.

His correspondent, who thoroughly knows Peru and the Peruvians, expresses no surprise and abates nothing from his confident original opinion, either as to merits or as to the outcome. If the Peruvians ever had a moral sense it must have been in a preexistent state; they have never known it in Peru. As I have heretofore suggested, we have never expected them to be just; we expect them now only to look out for themselves. Certainly the facts are ample to warrant the executive in so construing them as to make a way out for Peru; it contents us that he should discuss it in no other light.

If in such premises even there is not mind enough left to perceive either what is due to equity or wise in the emergency, then indeed are the Chilians wholly right. Peru is rotten to the core and has a right only to sepulture.

I trust by the time this reaches you Calderon will be near you again; if not, then Montero must take the helm. The press is now saying a great deal and largely on the Chilian side. Even the Tribune denounces intervention; in the abstract only these American rights can give the necessary reason to satisfy our public, and it would seem indeed incredible that Peru should miss such an opportunity.

We can easily deal with Chili, and you may assure Peru that we shall not wait on her long.

So long as you stand with us we will stand faithfully for you. You have deserved and have won Peruvian confidence; you have made Chili an enemy; we deal only with the facts; you may rely on our whereabouts with mathematical certainty.

Very truly, yours,

JACOB R. SHIPHERD.

No. 392.

Mr. Elmore to Mr Frelinghuysen.

LEGATION OF PERU,
Washington, January 23, 1882. (Received January 23.)

SIR: Most of the public prints of the 18th instant, published a cable dispatch from Buenos Ayres, dated 17th January, announcing the conclusion of a treaty of peace between Bolivia and Chili, "the conditions, being that Bolivia shall surrender her territory along the coast and break off her relations with Peru."

When I read the news, I firmly believed the report false, although it is known that from the beginning of the war, Chili has been trying to obtain that result, it being Señor Santa Maria himself (now President of Chili), who, early in 1879, made his best efforts, unsuccessfully, to persuade President Daza, of Bolivia, to break off her alliance with Peru, offering Bolivia a piece of the Peruvian coast in exchange for betraying her ally.

Wishing to know the truth in regard to so grave a report, I at once telegraphed to Señor Rosas, the Peruvian minister in Paris to make the proper inquiries by cable on the subject, and on Saturday night, the 21st instant, he communicated to me the reply, dated Lima, 19th January, stating that the alliance between Peru and Bolivia continues.

I had also previously received mail advices from Peru, informing me that the Government of Bolivia (as also that of Ecuador) had recognized the constitutional government of Señor Calderon, now represented by the Vice-President Montero, who was appointed by Congress, and who is now acting President.

I have the honor to communicate the above facts to your excellency, and to renew, &c.,

J. F. ELMORE.

4.—FRANCE.

No. 393.

Mr. Morton to Mr. Blaine.

No. 6.] LEGATION OF THE UNITED STATES,
Paris, August 11, 1881. (Received August 24.)

SIR: The attitude and correspondent relations of France, England, and the United States, with the South American States, Chili and Peru, since the late termination of hostilities was the subject of a private interview which I had the honor to have yesterday afternoon, at the palace of the Elysées, with President Grévy. The meeting was unofficial and sought by his excellency for a mutual exchange of thoughts on a subject which appeared to have received his careful study. In the conversation which ensued, his excellency alluded to the two abortive attempts on the part of the governments of France and England towards affecting some practical agreement between these two South American states. He referred in a general way to the desirability of establishing between our respective governments the basis of a mutual understanding in regard to the policy which might be jointly adopted by us both towards securing an early return of order and stability in the affairs of Chili and Peru, as far as comports with our national traditions and usages in the management of public affairs with foreign states. He spoke of the many unsatisfied claims of French subjects on the Peruvian Government, and expressed his strong disapproval of the extravagant demands made by the Chilian Government and conditions of peace which, if literally enforced, he apprehended would achieve the permanent enfeeblement, perhaps annihilation of the Peruvian states. In using this language, his excellency indeed acknowledged the right of Chili as a conquering power, to certain indemnities and privileges to be embodied in the final treaty of peace, &c., but which he thought required particular modification, and he was of the opinion that another attempt at mediation, on the part of foreign governments, and especially of the United States, was requisite for the purpose of reaching a satisfactory solution of the present state of chaos and disorder, which now there obtains.

In my reply I said I had received from my government, as yet, no instructions or intimation in regard to the course it might pursue towards these South American states. I felt, however, his own views, as expressed to me, would, if presented, receive the most favorable consideration. I continued to say, my government, I believed, had already striven, but without success, to interpose, as the equal friend between Chili and Peru, with a view to a reconciliation, and I had no doubt that, as suggested by President Grévy, a third attempt at mediation on our part would be ventured. And I concurred with his excellency in the hope the heavy demands of Chili might possibly be modified, as I also felt that, if executed, they must limit, if not extinguish, in that State, the future development of private enterprise, as well as the employment of foreign capital, by which alone its natural resources could receive extension. At the close of this interview his excellency requested the informal transmission to you of the substance of his remarks, which I have the honor herewith to do, and I take pleasure to add that I regard this meeting with President Grévy as a renewed instance of the cordial relations now so happily existing between our two republican governments.

I have the honor, &c.,

L. P. MORTON.

No. 394.

Mr. Blaine to Mr. Morton.

No. 30.] DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, September 5, 1881.

SIR: I have to acknowledge the reception of your dispatch, No. 6, of date August 11, 1881, giving an account of your interview on the day previous with the President of the republic in regard to the attitude and correspondent relations of France, Great Britain, and the United States with the South American states, Chili and Peru.

The remarks made and the suggestions offered by President Grévy concerning the situation of affairs in Peru have received that careful and respectful consideration due to the utterances of so eminent a statesman and the Chief Magistrate of France. I hasten to say that this government agrees with him in profoundly deploring the disorders and sufferings that have already fallen upon, and the others that continue to impend over the people of Peru, and fully shares the humane and enlightened sentiments which have inspired in him a personal interest in that unfortunate struggle, and have induced him to suggest a concerted effort by France, Great Britain, and the United States to bring the conflict to an end.

Such interventions are frequent in European diplomatic history, and have been sometimes followed by beneficial results in preserving the equilibrium of the powers. But the United States has not belonged to that system of states, of which France and Great Britain are such important members, and has never participated in the adjustment of their contentions. Neither interest nor inclination leads this country to wish to have a voice in the discussion of those questions; but our relations to the states of the American continent are widely different, and the situation is so nearly reversed, that this government, while appreciating the high and disinterested motive that inspired the suggestion, is constrained to gravely doubt the expediency of uniting with European powers to intervene, either by material pressure or by moral or political influence, in the affairs of American states. These republics are younger sisters of this government. Their proximity of situation, similarity in origin and frame of government, unity of political interest on all questions of foreign intercourse, and their geographical remoteness from Europe have naturally given to American states close and especial relations to each other, and in the course of time removed them further from the European system.

The interests, commercial and political, of the United States, on this continent, transcend in extent and importance those of any other power, and where these immense interests are deeply involved this government must preserve a position where its influence will be most independent and efficient. In the contest between Peru and Chili, the United States has watched the progress of the struggle with painful interest, and endeavored, as opportunity offered, to arrange terms of peace; and you will say to the French Government that, while the interest which President Grévy has manifested for the cause of peace, and his sympathy with the unhappy victims of this war, find an earnest response here, both from the government and the people, the United States declines to enter into negotiations with European powers for a joint intervention in the affairs of Chili and Peru.

I have, &c.,

JAMES G. BLAINE.

No. 395.

Mr. Morton to Mr. Blaine.

No. 58.] LEGATION OF THE UNITED STATES,
Paris, October 20, 1881. (Received November 3.)

SIR: A few days since I had the honor of a personal interview with President Grévy, to whom I communicated the subject of your dispatch No. 30, with reference to the affairs of Chili and Peru.

The President expressed himself as in entire accord witht he position taken by the Government of the United States, as indicated in your dispatch and the letter addressed by General Hurlbut to the Chilian admiral—copies of the latter of which having been furnished to the President and myself by Mr. Rosas, the minister of Peru, appointed by the Calderon government.

He added that annexation by a victorious nation of the whole or a large part of the territory of the subdued nation, or even the exaction of an undue indemnity of war, was contrary to the now admitted rights of nations as well as to the interests of neutrals. That a victorious nation had the right to secure the fruits of its victories, there was no doubt, but it had not the right to impose upon its powerless enemy burdens amounting to annihilation.

In reply to my reference to the sentiment and traditions which had so long existed in the United States in regard to what might be termed joint action with European powers, he replied that he was fully aware of the existence of such feeling, and that he could well understand its force and legitimate foundation.

As to the negotiations between Peru and Chili, he said that he had made known his views to me, but with no definite intentions of doing more than extending the good offices of France, if they were needed.

The United States, he further remarked, was fully competent to deal with the matter, and he was glad to see that it had realized the situation, and was ready to meet the circumstances of the case, and France gave a most cordial approval to the action which had been taken by the United States.

I remarked that the United States and many other countries had already recognized the Calderon government, to which he replied that France had not yet done so, because it seemed to her that the Calderon government had rather the support of the Chilian Government than of the people of Peru; but that as soon as it appeared evident that it was national in its character, France would recognize it with pleasure.

Before leaving, the President remarked to me that although our conversation was unofficial in the sense that he could do nothing in the matter without consultation with the minister of foreign affairs, the views and opinions he had expressed were those of the French Government. This statement he emphatically authorized me to make to my government.

In another conversation which I have had since the interview with Mr. Grévy referred to, on the same subject, he reiterated his expression of the foregoing sentiments. I summed up the position taken by France by declaring very explicitly that it was willing to act with or in the same direction as the United States, if the latter so desired, or to leave the Government of the United States to proceed alone, if it preferred the latter course.

I have, &c.,

L. P. MORTON.

No. 396.

Mr. Blaine to Mr. Morton.

[Telegram.]

WASHINGTON, November 14, 1881.

The Secretary of State telegraphed Mr. Morton, United States minister at Paris, for the particulars of any interviews he had held of late date with the French Government on the subject of Chilian and Peruvian affairs, and more particularly touching the recognition of the Peruvian minister.

No. 397.

Mr. Morton to Mr. Blaine.

[Telegram.]

UNITED STATES LEGATION,
Paris, November 15, 1881.

Mr. Morton telegraphs the Secretary of State that he has not interviewed the President since his two visits mentioned in dispatch No. 58. Can add nothing except that in his second interview the President disapproved the statement of Mr. Rosas, the Peruvian minister, who understood that he said that in the first interview Mr. Morton had announced that the United States Government was not desirous of European aid. This produced the explicit declaration contained in the dispatch. The indications of recognition of the Calderon government seem less favorable.

5.—MISCELLANEOUS.

No. 398.

Mr. Pettis to Mr. Evarts.

MEADVILLE, PA.,
March 29, 1880. (Received April 3.)

SIR: I am in receipt of information from Mr. Otto Richter, of La Paz, Bolivia, under date of the 15th ultimo, the gentleman nominated by me while in Bolivia as vice-consul-general, and who I left in charge of the legation and archives, that in consequence of President Daza's from Camorones, near Arica, was followed by the substitution of Col. Gliodoror Camacho as commander-in-chief of the troops, and General Campero as temporary President of Bolivia, and thus the whole revolution was effected in a most peaceable way, and the public security has never been disturbed in the least degree. General Campero was expected at La Paz in a few days, and it was reported had convened Congress, to meet at Oruro on the 25th day of next month, for the purpose of electing a new head of the state.

I also inclose a newspaper (Spanish) printed at Arequipa, Peru.

Mr. Richter concludes his letter with the assurance that the business of the consulate has had and will receive his every attention.

I have the honor to be, yours faithfully,

S. NEWTON PETTIS.

Upon reflection I have concluded to forward the letter of Mr. Richter to me.—P.

Mr. Richter to Mr. Pettis.

LA PAZ (BOLIVIA), February 13, 1880.

SIR: Favored by your esteemed letters, dated from Callao and Panama and trusting you arrived meanwhile safely in your native country by the present, I beg to inform you of the great changes in political affairs which have happened in Bolivia since your departure.

The retreat of General Daza from Camarones, near Arica, which produced such great an excitement and which remains unexplained till this day, proved to be his misfortune.

Simultaneous manifestations, made at Tacna by the Bolivian army and in all parts of our republic by the people have substituted for him Col. Gliodoro Camacho as commander-in-chief of the troops and General Campero as temporary President of Bolivia.

On his retirement General Daza has taken up his residence at Arequipa. The whole revolution has been effected in a most peaceable way and the public security has never been disturbed in the least degree.

General Campero is expected to arrive here in a few days, and, it is said, has convened Congress to meet at Oruro, on the 25th of April next, for the purpose of electing a new head of the state.

In order to keep you acquainted with the progress of matters here I have already sent you and will continue to send you newspapers from here which I hope have reached you safely. Should any further changes of importance take place, I will not fail to advise you thereof.

The business of the consulate has had my entire attention since your leaving and will continue to command the same in future.

I have the honor to remain, sir, your obedient servant,

OTTO RICHTER.

Hon. S. NEWTON PETTIS,
Minister Resident of the United States for Bolivia, &c., &c.

No. 399.

Mr. Evarts to Mr. Fisher.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, June 6, 1879.

SIR: Availing myself of the obliging offer recently made by you upon announcing your intention of proceeding to South America, I send herewith a package containing official dispatches for the ministers and consuls of the United States in Peru and Chili, which, in view of the hostilities existing between those countries, it is believed might encounter some delay if consigned to the ordinary channels of communication.

In accordance with your request I also inclose a special passport for your use, and have directed to be sent to your address a copy of the United States treaties, with supplement, and the latest edition of the United States Consular Regulations.

I am, sir, your obedient servant,

WM. M. EVARTS.

No. 400.

Mr. Fisher to Mr. Seward.

CONSULATE OF CHILI,
Boston, June 7, 1879. (Received June 9.)

SIR: In compliance with your request at our interview in Washington on the 4th of June, I take pleasure in forwarding by to-day's mail for the information of the honorable Secretary of State and of yourself, two official pamphlets recently received from the minister of foreign relations of Chili in regard to the present war between that country and Peru and Bolivia, namely:

I. Cuestion Chileno-Boliviano.—Exposition del ministro de relaciones esteriores de Chilé sobre los motivos que justifican la reivindicacion del territorio comprehendido entre los paralelos 23 y 24 latitud sur.

II. Manifesto que el Gobierno de Chilé dirije a las potencias amigas con motivo del estado de guerra con el Gobierno del Peru.

In regard to the papers and data relative to Chili and Spanish America, referring chiefly to commerce, which you desire for reference, I shall take pleasure in forwarding copies early next week, as soon as I can collect them, and have the honor, &c.,

HORACE N. FISHER,
Consul of Chili.

No. 401.

Mr. Fisher to Mr. Evarts.

CONSULATE OF CHILI,
Boston, June 10, 1879. (Received June 12.)

SIR: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your favor of 6th June, informing me that you had forwarded to me a package of dispatches for the United States ministers and consuls in Chili and Peru; also a special passport for my use as United States bearer of dispatches; also that you had directed a copy of the United States treaties and consular regulations to be sent to my address.

Your letter was received on the 8th, the packages named on the 9th instant, all of which I now acknowledge.

My purpose is to leave for Chili, by the steamer leaving New York on 20th June, unless unexpectedly delayed; in which event I will notify you through the minister of Chili, who, I understand, has arrived in the United States since I had the honor of an interview with you.

I am, &c.,

HORACE N. FISHER,
Consul of Chili.

No. 402.

Mr. Fisher to Mr. Evarts.

VALPARAISO, CHILI, July 30, 1879.
(Received September 16.)

SIR: I have the honor to report as follows in regard to the official dispatches intrusted to me as per your letter of 6th June.

June 30.—I sailed from New York for Aspinwall, arriving there July 8, at 4 p. m.; the following day I crossed the Isthmus and embarked on the steamer for Valparaiso, via Callao, which was advertised to leave Panama at 6 p. m. July 9, although from delay on account of torpedo launch for Peru the steamer did not sail until noon July 10.

July 17.—I reached Eten, the port of Lambayeque, Peru; the dispatch for the United States consul at Lambayeque was forwarded through the agent of the Pacific Steam Navigation Company at Eten, who takes charge of the consular mail and copy of whose receipt and copy of my letter to said consul are annexed hereto (A, B).

July 19.—Upon arriving at Callao, I delivered in person the two dispatches for Minister Christiancy and the dispatch for the United States consul at Callao. On the evening of the same day I left Callao for Valparaiso by the connecting steamer.

July 24.—As the port of Iquique was blockaded by the Chilian fleet, the steamer did not enter that port; but I delivered the dispatch for the United States consul at Iquique, Peru, to Captain Salamanca, flag officer of the admiral of the Chilian fleet (who boarded the steamer off Iquique), who agreed to deliver the same by flag of truce.

July 28.—At Coquimbo, Chili, I delivered the dispatch for the United States consul at Coquimbo to the vice-consul at the consulate.

July 29.—Upon arrival at Valparaiso, I delivered, in person, the dispatch for the United States consul at Valparaiso, who also received and agreed to forward the dispatch for the United States consul at Talcahuano, Chili. As Minister Osborn was at Valparaiso when I arrived, I also delivered the two dispatches addressed to him.

As it seems to be a custom or regulation to examine letters at the post-office in Peru at the present time, at least such is my information from disinterested sources, I deemed it advisable to deliver dispatches for the United States consuls at Lambayeque and Iquique, by means of responsible parties rather than through the mail, as it was not possible for me to deliver the same in person. There is no examination of letters in Chili.

Although it is not within the scope of my duty as bearer of dispatches, I take the liberty of stating that the general feeling seems to be that if any occasion for arbitration or mediation in the present conflict on the west coast of South America should arise, the good offices of the United States would be preferred to those of any other country in America or Europe.

I am, &c.,

HORACE N. FISHER,
Bearer of Dispatches.

MEMORANDUM.

Dispatches of United States State Department received and delivered.

		Delivered.
1	Dispatch for United States consul at Lambayeque, Peru	July 17, 1879*
2	Dispatch for United States minister to Peru	July 19, 1879
1	Dispatch for United States consul at Callao, Peru	July 19, 1879
1	Dispatch for United States consul at Iquique, Peru	July 24, 1879†
1	Dispatch for United States consul at Coquimbo, Chili	July 28, 1879
2	Dispatch for United States minister to Chili	July 29, 1879
1	Dispatch for United States consul at Valparaiso, Chili	July 29, 1879
1	Dispatch for United States consul at Talcahuano, Chili	July 29, 1879‡
10

* Through agent of Pacific Steam Navigation Company at Eten, Peru.
† Through captain, Salamanca, flag-officer of admiral of the Chilian fleet blockading Iquique.
‡ Through United States consul at Valparaiso.

INCLOSURES.

A.—Receipt (copy) of agent of Pacific Steam Navigation Company at Eten for dispatch to United States consul at Lambayeque, Peru.

B.—Letter (copy) to United States consul at Lambayeque, Peru, of July 17, 1879, in regard to dispatch for him.
C.—Letter (copy) to admiral of Chilian fleet, blockading Iquique, of July 24, 1879.

[Inclosures.]

Report dated Valparaiso, July 30, 1879.

A.

Received of Col. Horace N. Fisher, bearer of dispatches of the United States Government, one sealed letter from Department of State, United States of America, to the consul of the United States at Lambayeque, Peru, which I will deliver to him.
Eten, Peru, July 17, 1879.

M. GUERRERO,
Dependiente de la Agencia de la Compañia Inglesa de Valparaiso.

B.

STEAMSHIP LIMA, Eten, Peru, July 17, 1879.

SIR: I have the honor to inform you that not being able to proceed to Lambayeque to present in person the letter from the State Department, United States of America, I have delivered the same to the representative of the Pacific Steam Navigation Company at this port, who has agreed to deliver the same to you. Therefore, will you do me the favor to acknowledge the receipt thereof to the United States minister (Mr. Christiancy) at Lima in due course.
I am, &c.,

HORACE N. FISHER,
Bearer of Dispatches.

To the CONSUL OF THE UNITED STATES AT LAMBAYEQUE, PERU.

(MEMORANDUM.—Annexed is a copy of the receipt received from the agent of the Pacific Steam Navigation Company.)

C.

STEAMSHIP ILO,
Off Iquique, Peru, July 24, 1879.

SIR: I have the honor to be bearer of dispatches from the State Department of the United States to the ministers and consuls of the United States in Peru and Chili.
The blockade of the port of Iquique prevents me from delivering my dispatch to the United States consul at Iquique, Peru. Will you, therefore, have the goodness to deliver the inclosed dispatch to the said consul by the first flag of truce, and oblige,
Your obedient servant,

HORACE N. FISHER,
Bearer of Dispatches for the United States Government.

To the OFFICER in command of the Chilian Squadron blockading Iquique, Peru:

(MEMORANDUM.—Delivered July 24 at 8 p. m. to Captain Salamanca, chief of staff of Admiral Williams, who agreed to forward said letter by flag of truce, which would be sent by Captain Robinson, of Her Britannic Majesty's ship Turquoise, with letters to Her Britannic Majesty's consul.)

No. 403.

Mr. Fisher to Mr. Seward.

No. 3. Personal.] SANTIAGO, CHILI,
July 31, 1879. (Received September 16.)

DEAR SIR: Referring to my former letters (1 and 2), mailed at Guayaquil July 14, and corroborating the statements and suggestions therein made, I will continue some account of my observations since leaving Guayaquil.

I arrived at Callao in the morning of July 19, and there met at our consulate Minister Christiancy and Admiral Rogers. From what they said, I inferred that they were disappointed in not receiving some positive instructions from our government. I at once opened business with Minister Christiancy, informing him of the views you expressed in regard to the willingness of United States Government to use its friendly offices to harmonize the dissensions between Peru, Bolivia, and Chili, provided either or all of the belligerent republics should request such good offices through the proper channel. Mr. Christiancy informed me, as I presume he has officially reported, that Peru and Bolivia were favorable to action of that nature on our part, but he stated that he was satisfied that both Peru and Bolivia would insist, as a preliminary, that Chili should restore to Bolivia the territory taken possession of by her army; in a word, that the ante bellum status would be a sine qua non preliminary to any negotiation. I understand from a gentleman officially conversant with the views expressed by the Bolivian Government that such is the condition demanded by that government.

My own view of this question was at that time, and I have seen no reason to change, that the most that would be conceded by Chili would be the status quo. This opinion was based upon the usage of nations in time of war, namely, that a truce or suspension of hostilities always presupposed the status quo during negotiations for peace. It is not necessary for me to call your attention to particular cases, although the fact of the status quo during the Franco-German war negotiations and those at the close of the Russo-Turkish war are so excellent and recent examples as to leave no doubt as to the usage. Moreover, the facts that Bolivia and Peru are in a chronic state of revolution so general that it may be assumed that such is their normal condition; that however much the existing government of these countries may intend to act in good faith, no man can guarantee that the President of either of those countries will complete his term of office as the executive authority; that the original cause of the war was a deliberate violation by Bolivia of a formal treaty, duly made five years ago, under which a large amount of foreign capital was invested; that the conduct of Peru is open to a charge of gross bad faith, as an accessory before the fact, in that its government formally engaged to support Bolivia, by a secret treaty to that effect, in practically confiscating the property of foreign nitrate producers in Bolivia, as had already been done in Peru. In view of these facts and others of a similar character, it could hardly be expected that Chili would consent to any truce the preliminary condition of which involved a surrender of military posts almost impregnable to the troops of a government whose conduct heretofore might be assumed to presuppose a refusal to acquiesce in a decision unfavorable to its claims.

For these general and special reasons I could not believe that Chili, in actual possession of the disputed terrritory, and apparently able to hold it indefinitely against any force available to Peru-Bolivia, and protected by nature, and by a desert through which an attacking army must carry not only food but water for its troops and animals, would consent to any truce for negotiation or arbitration, except upon the status quo basis.

At Antofagasta, the headquarters of the Chilian army in the field, I met Señor Santa Maria, the minister of foreign affairs of Chili, who is also vested with the full power to manage the civil and military affairs in the disputed territory, and had a long interview with him. He expressed himself greatly pleased to learn the willingness of the United States Government to use its good offices in bringing about a settlement of the dispute and war, but he frankly stated that the Chilian Government would entertain no such proposition unless upon the basis of the status quo during negotiation and arbitration. Since arriving at Valparaiso I have availed of my personal friends, of both the administration and opposition parties, and am satisfied that no ministry could remain in office who should consent to any negotiation upon the preliminary condition of the ante bellum status during negotiation.

There is a fact, of which you are probably informed, which gives force to the latter statement, namely, that in Chili the ministry holds a position analogous to that of the British ministry; that the cabinet officers have seats in Congress and are obliged to answer questions and defend the policy of the government on the floor; that a refusal to support the government in its measures, as ascertained by the vote of Congress, is followed by a change of ministry. Consequently the ministry, being responsible to Congress, cannot ignore the voice of Congress, as in the United States.

The indecisive character of the war, as it is deemed by many whose experience has not prepared them to appreciate the difficulties of nature and of converting new levies into reliable troops, when added to other alleged complaints, has so weakened the present ministry that any considerable misfortune would lead apparently to a new ministry, the third since this present year has commenced. It is reported and apparently confirmed that the steamer Rimac—carrying troops, horses, and supplies to the Chilian army at Antofagasta—has been captured by the Peruvians. The government guaranteed the owners against loss of the steamer on basis of £60,000 sterling, which it will have to pay; while loss of property and cash for payment of troops will probably swell the damage and loss to $500,000, and the loss of a battalion of troops—all caused as alleged by neglect to send a convoy—have caused great excitement and led to a secret session of Congress commencing yesterday, at which only fifteen representatives and two senators were absent yesterday. I was told by a friend of the present ministry (at Antofagasta, July 26) that the loss of the Rimac, which was even then apprehended from her being overdue, would be likely to overthrow the ministry. The overthrow of the present ministry possesses this importance to the United States, that it might also involve a more peaceful policy, as their successors would not be compromised on the war question, although there seems to be but one mind on that point now, whatever may have orginally been the difference of opinion about declaring war in the beginning.

It may be some days before I form a clear idea of the position, and therefore write by this steamer, which sails August 2, in order that you may know that, while arbitration of the United States would be desired by all parties belligerent, there seems to be a wide difference as to the preliminary condition between Chili and Peru-Bolivia. From what Minister Christiancy informed me, it would seem that Peru-Bolivia are determined to insist upon the ante-bellum status, and I am satisfied that Chili will not consent to such a preliminary condition.

So far as the material resources and financial strength of the belligerents are concerned, I think that Chili is in much the best condition. I am informed that Chili promptly pays the interest on the public debt, although by arrangement mutually satisfactory to the government and the holders of Chilian bonds the payment into the sinking fund has been suspended for five years. As you know, the commercial depression, arising from three consecutive years of short crops and the unprecedented decline in the price of copper, has been productive of a great commercial crisis and induced the government to suspend specie payments. The paper authorized to be issued by the banks is secured by a deposit of government bonds, but there is a difference of about 30 per cent. between specie and bank notes. As I understand the case, the government does not issue legal-tender notes in Chili; while in Peru and Bolivia I think the paper money in circulation is issued by the government. However that may be, the paper dollar in Peru is worth about 25 per cent. of its face value, which indicates a financial condition much worse than in Chili. So far as the public credit of Peru or Bolivia is concerned, I am informed that Peru has not paid the interest on her public debt for several years, and that capitalists are not willing to lend any money to Bolivia upon any terms. In Chili the troops I have seen seem well armed, equipped, clad, and fed, and, I understand, receive their pay regularly and promptly; while, though the troops of Peru and Bolivia are said to be well supplied, their pay is irregular and largely in arrears. The use of troops by both sides has thus far been chiefly in garrisoning and fortifying military posts, and I am of the opinion that neither army possesses the transportation or supplies necessary for active operations in the field. As to supplies, Chili, being a large exporter of wheat and cattle, would have less difficulty than her opponents in feeding her troops; while Perú-Bolivia, not being able to obtain the usual supply of cereals from Chili, are likely to find difficulty in feeding their troops. Thus far the war has been principally confined to naval operations. In the contests on the sea thus far the Chilians have acted with conspicuous gallantry, and have become masters of the situation, so far as is possible with the small naval forces on either side. At present the Peruvian navy is obliged to act simply as raiders upon small ports and transports.

I have endeavored to state clearly the result of my observation and inquiry as to the condition and financial strength of both belligerents; also the views, not only expressed, but, I think, entertained by each on the subject of mediation. If you consider it advisable, I authorize you to read this, or the two letters (1 and 2) from Guayaquil to the honorable Secretary, for the information of our government; otherwise, you will please to consider it personal. The facts and opinions given herein have been carefully gathered and formed, and you can rely upon them as substantially correct. The part relating to Chili I have read to a Chilian senator, who is an old and valued and discreet friend, and he says that I have stated the position correctly.

Very truly, your friend,

HORACE N. FISHER.

Hon. FREDERICK W. SEWARD,
State Department, Washington, D. C.

No. 404.

Mr. Fisher to Mr. Seward.

No. 4. Personal.] HACIENDA DE PULLALLI, CHILI,
August 14, 1879. (Received September 21.)

DEAR SIR: In my letter (No. 1) of July 13 I raised the question whether the shipment of torpedo boats from the United States to either of the belligerents in the present war was not a violation of our neutrality, and liable to furnish a tenable claim for damages. I also stated the action of the British consul at Panama, which caused the British steamer at Panama to refuse a torpedo boat for Callao. Referring you to the reasons offered for making a distinction between contraband of war destined for sea use and that which can duly be used on land, I refer you to the action of the British Government in a similar case, as stated in a recent Santiago paper, El Independiente, of August 6, a translation of which I here annex for your information:

In the last steamer from England a torpedo launch should have come for our government. It appears that the Peruvian agents in Europe made a timely protest against this contraband of war, and that the British Government admitted the protest by detaining the steamer and compelling it to land the boat.

The exact ground of detaining the steamer is not stated, although the above extract gives a fair ground for inference.

In my last letter (July 31, No. 3), I referred to the "interpellation" of the Chilian ministry in the senate, and the secret session of Congress thereon.

The interpellation was continued for three consecutive days, including one night session. At its close the orders of the day were resumed without any positive action of Congress in the form of a vote of either confidence or censure. Nevertheless, at the second session (August 5), after the close of the interpellation in the Senate, a new interpellation was moved in the House of Deputies in the form of a petition for papers, and an interpellation addressed to the cabinet in regard to the conduct of the war, as stated by the mover—

On account of the uncertain and precarious situation, proved by the capture of the Rimac, the rumor of a new cabinet, the inaction of the fleet and army, and, above all, by the failure in obtaining a practical result by the interpellation discussed in the senate.

On the 12th August the letter of the mover (Señor Alemparte) was read in the House of Deputies, in which he formally withdrew for the present his motion, giving his reasons therefor in the following language:

It is now fortunately announced that the blockade of Iquique has been abandoned, and that our fleet has already commenced active and official operations, which it is hoped will be seconded by our army. At the same time it appears that the danger of a ministerial crisis has been averted. At such a moment the attention of the country and the patriotic anxiety of every Chilian should be concentrated upon the operations of our army and fleet, which are called upon to settle the fate of the republic.

As nearly as I can judge all political parties in Chili favor a prosecution of the war, and are willing to make any necessary sacrifice to secure the victory of the national arms. So general does this sentiment seem that I think that no ministry could continue in power upon any other basis than that of a vigorous prosecution of the war, however great may be the difference of opinion as to the mode adopted.

The abandonment of the blockade of Iquique has released two-thirds of the Chilian fleet and made it available for active operations. Indeed it seems to have been a fair criticism whether Chili could afford to neutralize the greater part of its fleet in blockading a second-rate port like Iquique, the object of the blockade, namely, the crippling of the resources of Peru and its revenue from export duties on guano and nitrate soda, having been already accomplished by the destruction of the launches for loading and other similar facilities. I will here state that at the Peruvian ports, owing to shallow water and heavy surf, all vessels have to be loaded from lighters (launches), often at a distance from the shore, Callao being the sole exception.

There is reason for thinking that the army will be moved by sea from Antofagasta against some Peruvian town, either Arica, Iquique, or Callao, all of which possess strategical importance. At Iquique the Peruvian forces are some 12,000, covering the nitrate district; but as that army is with difficulty maintained, and the military importance of the post is of minor importance in the campaign, I should much doubt any landing there, near the southern frontier of Peru, 600 miles from Callao, and separated from the rest of Peru by a country almost impracticable for marching an army by land. Arica being at the Pacific terminus of the main route for merchandise, partly railroad and partly wagon, from Bolivia, is the point where the Bolivian forces debouch; for which reason a landing at, and the permanent occupation of, Arica would not only close the debouchment of troops, &c., from Bolivia, but also cut the land lines of communication of the army at Iquique, the distance from Arica to Iquique being 109 miles by sea and probably over 200 by land. The only other route from Bolivia to the Pacific (not already occupied by the Chilians) is the railroad from Lake Titicaca to Mollendo, a very steep-grade road, with a small amount of rolling-stock. Mollendo is a town of some 2,000 inhabitants, 135 miles north of Arica by sea; its port an open roadstead, where steamers often have great difficulty in landing merchandise, on account of the surf. The railroad to Lake Titicaca passes for several miles along the sea-side, and naturally exposed to be interfered with by a single man-of-war. As a strategical point, therefore, I think Arica the most important, and that its occupation would be likely to have an important influence upon the result of the war, especially for the following reasons, namely:

1st. The valley from Arica to Arequipa, 60 miles to the Cordellera, is very productive. It exports considerable food, and can support an army of larger numbers than all the forces of the three belligerents now in the field. I think that the Peruvian army at Iquique draws a considerable part of its supplies from the Arica Valley. Its occupation would, therefore, not only prevent the arrival of reinforcements from Bolivia, but break up the lines and base of supplies for the Peruvian main army at Iquique.

2d. The occupation of Arica by the Chilian forces would also make them de facto owners, and, as such, in position to negotiate with Bolivia upon the basis of a transfer of Arica to Bolivia (at the expense of Peru) as compensation for the loss of Bolivian sea-coast further south and adjoining Chili. This fact is, I believe, recognized as one of the factors in this war, namely, that the Peruvian sea-coast south of Arica shuts out the greater part of Bolivia from the Pacific; that in the separation of Bolivia (or Upper Peru) from Peru there was a manifest lack of consideration shown to Bolivia in giving her the short, miserable coast-line on the edge of the Atacama desert, with the single port of Cobija; that, consequently, an exchange of the said short coast, separated by over 200 miles of the desert from the southern part of Bolivia, for the good port of Arica, the natural and actual principal outlet of Bolivia, through a fertile country, would be a temptation hardly safe to trust the Bolivians with; that with such a make-weight negotiations might be successfully carried out on the basis of extending the Chillian frontier northward so as to include Iquique, and of giving Bolivia a sea-coast opposite her central provinces from Arica and Pisagua (70 miles), all which, of course, would be at the expense of Peru, and for the aggrandizement of Chili, as well as advantageous for Bolivia.

For the above two reasons I think that Arica is the most important strategical and military position during the present war on the coast of Peru, as well as a good exchange for Bolivia. Nor do I have any exalted opinion of the moral acuteness of Bolivia which would lead me to believe her likely to throw away so advantageous an opportunity from a just regard for the sacredness of national honor and good faith due to her ally. In fact the presence of the President of Peru at Arica seems quite as likely to have been caused by the presence of the President of Bolivia there in command of the Bolivian contingent as for purely military reasons.

The third position named was Callao. As you know, Callao is only 6 miles from Lima, south of the Bay of Callao, and separated from it by a long, low cape; is a bay having good anchorage near the shore, and a sufficient depth of water for ships of large size. From the head of this bay to Lima is about five miles, the country is level and suitable for the movement of troops. The ports of Chorillos and Anchon are on the south side of this bay and afford facilities for landing troops under the protection of the guns of men-of-war, while beyond the reach of the guns of Callao. In the war of independence the Chilians sent an army to Callao, which subsequently (in conjunction with Peruvian reinforcements) won the decisive battle of Ayacucho.

In 1838 another Chilian army, under General Bulnes, landed at Anchon, and after a battle on the plain of Lima entered that city; thence it marched against General Santa Cruz, the "supreme protector" of Peru-Bolivia, and totally defeated his army at Tungay (January 12, 1839), 250 miles southeast of Lima.

For political reasons the landing of a Chilian army at Anchon or Chorillos would possess a certain importance, and would certainly, if followed by a victory on the plain of Lima, lead to the occupation of the capital of Peru; but whether the victorious army could hold Lima and the surrounding country with the forces available for shipment from Chili and at so great a distance from its base (1,500 miles from Valparaiso) is a serious question; while the attempt would involve military risks of no ordinary kind. As already stated, it seems to me that Arica is a more important military position and more likely to lead to important and permanent results.

There seems reason to anticipate a movement of a picked force of 10,000 Chilian troops from Antofagasta to one of the three points named on the Peruvian coast, for which purpose the co-operation of the Chilian fleet would be needed. I am informed that 10,000 troops can be dispatched from the army at Antofagasta with the transportation available now, and that supplies for such a number are actually ready.

The Chilians are strong and easily diciplined, which, together with their admitted bravery and steadiness under fire in the past, and their supplies on hand, would give them an advantage over the troops of Peru and Bolivia. Their officers would do no discredit to any army, so far as I have seen them, and seem to devote themselves heartily and intelligently to their work; their infantry and artillery arms are of an excellent character, and if they are commanded by a competent general they are likely to render a good account of themselves.

In view of the present general unanimity for the vigorous prosecution of the war and of the apparent preparation for immediate military activity, I do not deem it advisable to press the idea of arbitration, believing it likely that no basis could be agreed upon which would fix the status during negotiations. The idea of arbitration has already been advanced by neutral States of both Europe and South America. As you know, by my former letter (No. 3, of July 31), I stated to Señor Santa Maria, minister of foreign affairs, and apparently the recognized leader of the ministry of Chili, that the good offices of the United States could be relied upon whenever either of the belligerents formally requested them, and that he seemed very much gratified to know it; that I am satisfied that the United States would be preferred as arbitrator, by all three countries, to any other; but that in the present condition of affairs there is so great a difference as to the status during negotiation, Chili insisting upon the status quo and Peru-Bolivia upon the status ante bellum that it seems not advisable to press the subject at present. It is partly to avoid any discussion of the question at present that I am staying with my friend, Mr. Yrariazaval, at his country seat (Bullalli). My only visit to Santiago was for a day and a half, to formally report my arrival at the state department, having already reported in person to the minister of foreign affairs at antofagasta.

I will here state that I frankly informed Mr. Christiancy, our minister to Peru, and subsequently Mr. Pettis, our minister to Bolivia, of the substance of our conversation, so far as it concerned arbitration; Mr. Pettis was my fellow-passenger from Callao to Valparaiso, and has had some interviews with Mr. Osborn, our minister to Chili, and informed me that he stated to Mr. Osborn at Valparaiso (as I requested) what I had told him.

I did not have an opportunity of informing Mr. Osborn in person, as his return to Santiago was delayed until I was on the point of leaving for Pullalli, as I had planned to do.

I have naturally discussed the question with my friend Mr. Yrarrázaval, who takes the same view as I have expressed in this and the previous letter as to pressing the subject at this time; in fact, I stated the subject to him in full in Mr. Pettis's presence at Valparaiso. I presume Mr. Pettis will report to the Department his views in this matter, and therefore you will please to consider that my allusion to having met him is confidential, as I do not wish to forestall him in any way. As Mr. Yrarrázaval is recognized as a leader in Chilian state affairs, I am likely to be well informed of the condition of things, and when the proper time comes I shall use such arguments as will, in my judgment, tend to bring about the desired result.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

HORACE N. FISHER.

P. S.—In future please address letters for me to the "care of Señor D. Manuel J. Yrarrázaval, Santiago, Chili," who receives his Santiago mail and will forward letters to me if not here.

No. 405.

Mr. Fisher to Mr. Seward.

No. 5.] HACIENDA DE PULLALLI,
Ligna, Chili, October 9, 1879. (Received November 24.)

DEAR SIR: Although perhaps it is not necessary, it seems advisable to state some facts for your information inasmuch as I notice that some comment has been made in the New York papers in regard to my visit to Chili, in order that you may know the exact facts in detail.

(1.) I made a memorandum of the points in our conversation at the State Department June 4 in order to avoid all possible misunderstanding and unintentional errors of memory. This memorandum, written out the same day, was placed in a sealed envelope and not opened until

I met Minister Christiancy at the United States consulate in Callao July 19, where I read to him the part relating to arbitration by the United States, which latter fact I reported to you in my letter No. 3, dated Santiago, July 31, 1879. He was the first who saw or knew its contents.

(2.) The only person to whom I communicated any of the points of our conversation before sailing for Chili was Señor I. A. Nuñez, the Chilian commissioner of education, who met me at the steamer in New York with letters from Señor Asta-Buruaga, the Chilian minister, dated Washington, June 28; to him, as the chosen representative of the Chilian minister, I communicated such points of our conversation as seemed of immediate practical advantage for the minister to know, this in official confidence, receiving in return useful suggestions and letters.

(3.) The statement, published in the New York papers are conclusive proof that the precautions taken were ample; inasmuch as the first information of my journey or its objects was stated by them to have been received from a paper published in Callao (South Pacific Times), July 23d, more than six weeks after I had the pleasure of an interview at the State Department.

(4.) As to any intimation by me of the contents of the sealed dispatches confided to me, it not is necessary to remark that they were delivered in good order; as to offering United States arbitration to the Peruvian Government, I was in Lima about three hours and in the company of our minister or his secretary, and left Callao for Valparaiso the evening of the day I arrived at Callao.

(5.) As to communicating the fact in South America before reaching Chili, that the United States Government would be willing to use its good offices to settle the trouble between the belligerent republics if formally requested to do so, of course I did so communicate, but to such persons only as I deemed of sufficient influence and character as to be able and willing to promote that end; in all such communications, however, I was careful to avoid all semblance of official character and to state in a general way that, when in Washington, I met friends conversant with the views of our government and "had good reason to believe" that such request, if formally made, would tend to an honorable settlement by arbitration.

(6.) To only three persons did I speak on the subject, except in the most general way, before arriving at Callao, namely:

(a.) Señor Godoy, minister of Chili, to Ecuador, who enjoys the confidence due to his position and personal character in Ecuador, as well as his own country.

(b.) Señor Pablo Arosemena, the new minister of Colombia to Peru and Chili, who was on his way to Lima to urge a settlement by arbitration, preferring the United States as arbitrator.

(c.) Rev. Kenelm Vaughan, private secretary of Cardinal Manning, who deservedly enjoys an extensive influence thoughout Spanish America, and was then on his way from Mexico to Lima to confer with the leading Catholic clergy of Peru, and possibly of Bolivia.

These three gentlemen, all men of responsibility and unquestionable character and all favorable to the settlement of the war by arbitration, and willing to use their influence in favor of the United States as arbitrator, seemed well worth using for this purpose. I have reason to believe that I did well in informing them that, while the United States Government has always avoided mingling in the quarrels of other states, its good offices in favor of the peaceful solution of the difficulty could be relied upon when they were sought by either belligerent.

It is possible that the fact of my meeting Minister Christiancy and Admiral Rodgers at the United States consulate of Callao, and of my going with them to Lima where I was introduced to Minister Pettis, who happened to be my fellow-passenger from Callao to Valparaiso, may have led to an imaginary importance of my voyage; especially as it was generally understood that Mr. Pettis had the subject of arbitration much at heart and was supposed to know the views of both the Bolivian and Peruvian governments. Moreover the fact of Mr. Pettis's interview with the President of Peru, at Arica, in the morning of 23d July, and of the latter having telegraphed to the President of Bolivia to meet Mr. Pettis at Pisagua, on the following morning, was not unlikely made known by telegraph in Callao the same day, which was the date of the Callao paper; more particularly as I think that, at that time, both Peru and Bolivia favored negotiation either for obtaining mediation or for gaining time. Perhaps these facts may account for the exaggerated report published in Callao, which led to some comment not less exaggerated in the United States and equally without foundation. At all events, of this I am confident, that I have taken extreme precautions to avoid undue inference and premature discussion.

As Minister Pettis was not only the diplomatic agent of the United States, but apparently in the confidence of both President Prado and Daza, I deemed it advisable to state to him before reaching Arica (Prado's headquarters), that, from what I had learned at Washington, there was no doubt but what the United States Government would be willing to use its good offices in favor of a peaceful and honorable settlement, if properly requested through the regular diplomatic channels. I however declined his invitation to accompany him ashore at Arica and Pisagua, on the ground that as I was going to Chili and likely to be brought in contact with the military, as well as the civil officers of Chili, I deemed it advisable to avoid landing at fortified towns like Arica and Pisagua, after hostilities had actually commenced, which might have become the scene of naval or military operations, in order to avoid all appearances of misusing my protection as bearer of dispatches; but that if he should find it desirable on landing, or if either President Prado or Daza requested me to meet them, I would accept an invitation to land and meet them.

At Antofagasta I met Mr. Charles C. Greene of E. Greenwich, R. I., whom I knew in Boston, and who is the agent of the nitrate works and railroad at Antofagasta. I accepted his invitation to meet Señor Santa Maria, the Chilian minister of foreign relations, who was then at his house. As I wrote out a detailed memorandum of the interview, I will here give extracts from the same for your information, merely remarking that Mr. Greene is a grandson of our Revolutionary General Greene and an honorable gentleman.

[Extract from memorandum of interview with Chilian minister of foreign affairs, Señor Santa Maria, at Antofagasta, July, 25, 1879.]

* * * * * * *

He invited Mr. Pettis, Captain Cross, and myself to breakfast with him, and when we refused, he said that Señor Santa Maria was at his house, at which I saw an opportunity at communication if I could get rid of Mr. Pettis, whose discretion I doubted.

By making the most of my acquaintance with Mr. Greene I managed to make Mr. Pettis believe that Greene was an old personal friend, and after some hesitation (put on) I accepted Greene's invitation to call for a moment at his house if the captain of the port was not ready to dispatch the ship. Of course the captain of the port was amenable to reason, and we went to breakfast at Greene's house, which was also headquarters. * * * On the way to Greene's house I told him that I was consul of Chili in Boston, and was United States bearer of dispatches; that I desired that only he and Santa Maria should know that I was consul, or in fact other than as an American passenger. * * *

After breakfast, by invitation, Mr. Greene and I went with Santa Maria to the latter's room, and we proceeded at once to business. I told him that upon receiving the "circular" to the agents of Chili abroad, I proceeded to Washington and had a special interview with President Hayes and at the State Department. That Mr. Hayes expressed himself sorry that war had broken out; that he had formed a favorable idea of Chili from what he knew of it; that Mr. Evarts gave me half an hour's interview, and expressed similar views; that Secretary Seward had a long interview with me, at which I was authorized to say to either of the governments that the Government of the United States would be pleased to use its good offices to settle the quarrel whenever either of the belligerent powers should formally ask for them, but that, until thus requested, the government would preserve neutrality.

To prevent any misunderstanding I then read my memorandum of my interview with Secretary Seward.

[N. B.—So far only as concerned "arbitration by United States."]

I also told him that Minister Christiancy told me at Lima that he was satisfied that Peru and Bolivia were united, and that he was satisfied that they would not accept arbitration except upon the basis of the "ante-bellum status," as preliminary to all negotiation; that Minister Pettis insisted that the "ante-bellum status" was necessary; that I had replied to Mr. Pettis that it seemed to me, personally, that the "statu quo" was the only basis upon which any arrangements could be expected, which seemed only reasonable and in accordance with the custom of nations. This seemed to please Santa Maria, to whom I replied that when I left the United States the condition was so little understood that the question of "status" was not mentioned or considered; that, therefore, I had told Pettis that as my own personal opinion, and I repeated to both Mr. Greene and Señor Santa Maria that the question was not considered at Washington in any interview with the President or at the State Department. Santa Maria said that the Government of Chili would never consent to arbitration on any other basis than the statu quo, "jamas! jamas!" I also told him, substantially, what I wrote Seward in my Guayaquil letter about the British fleet and the torpedo boat at Panama, which made Santa Maria embrace me, saying that Chili had in me not only a live consul, but a friend.

I further told him about Arosemena and his mission; that he favored arbitration by the President of the United States. * * * I told Santa Maria and Greene that, as our government had [a] minister here, all communications in writing should be made to and through them; that, therefore, my communication was verbal, and that I had no written instructions beyond that of bearer of dispatches, for which reason I had received a special State Department passport, which I showed them; also that I had seen Señor Nuñez just before the steamer sailed from New York, and had a long interview; that he brought me letters from Asta-Buruaga, and gave me his card with a note on it for Santa Maria, which card I sent ashore with a note to Mr. Greene for Santa Maria.

* * * * * * *

I will here call your attention to the fact that the above memorandum, while it states quite minutely and exactly the substance of my interview with the Chilian minister, was not intended for any but my own strictly private use. Therefore I will here explain one point which might mislead, to wit, in regard to Mr. Pettis, "whose discretion I doubted." This I do in order that no unjust imputation may be inferred in regard to his conduct. While I think that Mr. Pettis is an honest man, with excellent intentions, and not conscious of any indiscretion, from some circumstances (which, it seems, attracted the attention of several Chilians, who spoke to me on the subject), there seemed reason to believe that he was not quite circumspect, and I therefore took the liberty of speaking frankly with him before landing at Valparaiso, in order that he might avoid the appearance of acting for Bolivian interest; and I will here state that he accepted my suggestion in the same spirit in which it was made, and subsequently told me that Mr. Osborn took the same view that I did. I will further state that I believe that he uniformly and specifically disclaimed any special instructions from the United States Government, and seemed to intend to act as a harmonizer. This fact it is but just to him that our government should know, because his conduct was subjected to criticism in Chili. Feeling that such would be the case, I decided to separate myself from all apparent connection with him, however much I might like him personally. There was one point, which I think he did not sufficiently realize, namely, that the condition of public sentiment was morbidly acute on the subject of mediation, the air was full of rumors about mediation, now by this country and now by that, some indicating the use of overwhelming force. This state of things I noticed in both Peru and Chili; and I understand was actually believed by the cabinet officers of Bolivia.

In fact, the province in which I have unexpectedly, and most assuredly unintentionally, found myself is a fair illustration of the practical result of such a condition of the public mind, though I had no reason to suspect it in my case until within a few days.

Upon arriving at Valparaiso I delivered my dispatches in person to the United States consul at Valparaiso and also to Minister Osborn, who was at the consulate, as I stated in my official report to the honorable Secretary of State, dated July 30. I arrived at Valparaiso the evening of 29th July, where my friend, Señor Yrarrázaval met me the following noon. By appointment I called upon Mr. Pettis with my friend to introduce him to Mr. Pettis and to Minister Osborn, who for some reason, however, was unable to be present. In the presence of Mr. Pettis and Mr. Yrarrázaval I read that part of my "memorandum" of my interview with you which related to arbitration, in order that the exact conditions under which the United States might intervene should be distinctly known to both, and I farther requested Mr. Pettis to communicate the same to Mr. Osborn for his information in case I should not see him before leaving for Santiago, which he subsequently told me he had done. Mr. Pettis apparently felt confident of his ability to convince the Chilian Government of the policy of accepting the views of the Bolivian Government on the subject of arbitration, but he did not state or intimate the nature of his arguments, nor in fact did I desire to know. He also made two requests of me: 1st, that I should allow him to present his arguments to the Chilian Government in his own time and way; 2d, that I should avoid referring to him in my correspondence, as he proposed to report very minutely his doings to the State Department.

To his first-named request I replied that he might rest assured that I should not interfere in any way with his plans at present, as the minister of foreign relations was at Antofagasta, and I should therefore merely stay over a day at Santiago to formally announce my arrival at the state department and then go with my friend to his country-seat. I took this decided course because I desired, first, to entirely separate any negotiation of his from any that I might subsequently attempt; and also in order that Mr. Pettis might have no ground whatever for attributing to me any miscarriage of his negotiations, which I expected would prove futile, for several reasons. As to the second request of Mr. Pettis, I mentioned briefly and in confidence that he was my fellow-passenger to Valparaiso, and that I had informed him in substance of that part of our conversation which related to arbitration; this in my letter (No. 4) to you of August 14, in which I wrote, "I presume that Mr. Pettis will report to the Department his views in this matter, and therefore you will please to consider that my allusion to having met him is confidential, as I do not wish to forestall him in any way." Now, however, since I have recently read in a Lima paper the following statement of its correspondent at Tacna, dated September 2, to wit: "General Daza has been at Arica for several days. They there had a long conference with the North American minister, Mr. Newton Pettis, who has returned from Chili." I think that no doubt can exist as to the fulfillment of my agreement with Mr. Pettis. I do not think, however that the withholding of the detailed statement (which I herewith make) was at all for the disadvantage of the United States, as the results and conclusions were promptly reported to you, and there was little, if anything, to be gained by pushing the subject during this period of delay.

As stated in my last letter to you (No. 4), I am patiently waiting until the proper time comes for advantageous action, when I shall use such arguments as will in my judgment tend to bring about the desired results we discussed in your office in Washington last June. Of course it is well to remember the old adage, "It is easier to lead a horse to water than to make him drink;" but I think, as I stated to you, that the present war has awakened all the South American states to a more complete realization of their relations to each other and other countries, and may afford an opportunity much to be desired, of which I am watching the development apparently in progress.

Long before this letter reaches you, the news of the capture of the sole remaining Peruvian iron-clad, El Huascar, at Mejillones, on yesterday, will have been received. This virtually closes the naval operations of Peru, and lays bare her coast to descents of the army and navy of Chili. It seems to me that the crisis of this war is near at hand, and perhaps may arrive before you receive this letter. I have never doubted that Chili would win the victory, and have been, as you know, inclined to believe that this war would probably result in advancing the civil and political condition of Spanish America. It is possible, therefore, that I may have important points to communicate before many weeks.

Very respectfully, &c.,

HORACE N. FISHER.

P. S.—Address letters for me, as heretofore stated, to "care of Señor Don Manuel J. Rarrázaval, Santiago, Chili."

No. 406.

Mr. Hunter to Mr. Fisher.

Personal.] DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, October 10, 1879.

SIR: I have the pleasure to acknowledge the reception of your letter (No. 4) of the 14th of August last, in relation to the progress of the war in South America, and touching the question of torpedo boats built in neutral countries for the use of the belligerents. It has been read with the same interest as your former letters.

I am, sir, your obedient servant,

W. HUNTER,
Assistant Secretary.

No. 407.

Mr. Fisher to Mr. Hunter.

HACIENDA DE PULLALLI,
Ligua, Chili, December 26, 1879. (Received February 4, 1880.)

SIR: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of October 10, 1879, and am pleased if my letters to Mr. Seward have proved of interest or have given additional information to the Department.

I have to-day the pleasure of forwarding to the State Department, through you, a copy of the official compilation of the law of war, recently published by the Government of Chili for the guidance of its army and navy, and entitled "El Derecho de la Guerra." Copies of this treatise were issued to the officers of the Chilian army which invaded Peru last month, and I am informed that it is obligatory upon officers in the Chilian army and navy to enforce the code thus officially established.

The treatise contains (1), the code of the laws of war adopted at the Brussels International Congress of 1874; (2), the St. Petersburg Convention of 1868 in regard to explosive bullets; (3), the Geneva Conventions of 1864 and 1868 in regard to the treatment of wounded soldiers; and (4), the code of instructions prepared by Dr. Francis Lieber, for the "Government of the Armies of the United States in the Field," which was officially adopted as General Order No. 100, United States War Department, April 24, 1879. The annexed correspondence with the Chilian Government shows the steps taken to secure the adoption of the United States code of the laws of war in the present conflict.

Allow me here to state that, though I do not have the honor to belong to any peace society, it seeemed to me very desirable to mitigate the evils of war by well established rules agreed to by the belligerents, not only upon the general principles of humanity, but upon special reasons in this case; it seemed desirable to do whatever was in my power to promote the adoption of the United States code by the other nations of America, being satisfied that uniformity in such important matters would lead to a common, mutual interest which would naturally extend to closer relations of friendship and intercourse for the mutual advantage, commercial and political, of the several nations with each other.

To this end, therefore, I proposed to Senor Santa Maria, then minister of foreign relations of Chili, at my interview with him at Autofagasta, July 26, 1879, the adoption of the United States General Order No. 100; upon his return to Santiago I presented him with a copy of the same, through the personal services of a friend, and thus carried out my promise, made him at Autofagasta, for which the personal thanks of the minister were sent by my friend and the official acknowledgment of my letter forwarded by his successor, Senor Amunátegui.

Annexed are extracts of the official denial of violations of the laws of war, published in the Diario Oficial of November 19, 1879, in vindication of charges openly made by the Peruvian Government but since repudiated by the Peruvian clergyman [Perez] in charge of the Ambulance (hospital); in these extracts not only is the accusation officially and formally refuted, but special reference is made to the above mentioned code of laws of war.

Respectfully submitting this statement for the information of the government of my country,

I have, &c.

HORACE N. FISHER.

Mr. Fisher to the minister of foreign relations of Chili.

HACIENDA DE PULLALLI, Ligua, August 18, 1879.

SIR: I have the honor to forward herewith by my friend, Don Miguel Yrarrázaval, a copy of General Order No. 100 of the United States War Department, dated April 24, 1863, for the "Government of the Armies of the United States in the Field."

This order is the formal adoption by the Government of the United States, of the code of instructions for the use of armies, prepared by the late Francis Lieber, LL. D., of New York, which represents the established custom of nations and that branch of international law. Four years' experience during the war of the rebellion demonstrated its completeness and practical value.

Deeming that a concise, yet full code of the law of nations, so far as applicable to armies in the field, would be very desirable, both for establishing a uniform system and for mitigating the evils of war, I had the honor to give one copy of the General Order No. 100 to Mr. Christiancy, the minister of the United States to Peru, who agreed to bring it to the personal attention of the Peruvian Government; and now I have the pleasure of presenting my second copy to the Government of Chili, through you, in the hope that it may be approved and adopted.

I have, &c.,

HORACE N. FISHER,
Consul of Chili in Boston.

To the MINISTER OF FOREIGN RELATIONS,
Santiago de Chili.

(Copy.)

Mr. Fisher to General McCook.

HACIENDA DE PULLALLI, Ligua, Chili, October 31, 1879.

MY DEAR GENERAL: I inclose herewith a "memorandum upon the present condition of the South American republics," in which I confine my remarks to a single subject which seems to me of great importance to the government and people of the United States. I, therefore, authorize you to read the "memorandum" to General Garfield and your cousin "Anson;" if they approve it and it also meets the approval of yourself, you could also read the same to your friends, the President and General Sherman, and to the Secretary of State. I think it best not to publish anything regarding it or the writer, at least, not for the present.

For certain reasons I am staying at my friend's country house, where I shall keep headquarters for the present. Any letters addressed to the "care of Señor Manuel J. Yrarrázaval, Santiago, Chili," will reach me in due course of mail.

With kind regards, &c.,

HORACE N. FISHER.

General A. McD. McCOOK,
Headquarters United States Army, Washington, D. C.

Memorandum of present condition of South American republics.

At the time of the revolution Spanish America was divided into three viceroyalties—New Spain, Peru, and the La Plata.

The viceroyalty of New Spain consisted of Mexico, Central America, and the Spanish West Indies. The viceroyalty of Peru consisted of Peru, Ecuador, Colombia, Venezuela, Bolivia, and Chili. The viceroyalty of the La Plata consisted of the Argentine Republic, Paraguay, and Uruguay.

A brief consideration of the orgnization of the two Spanish viceroyalties in South America may, perhaps, explain some points, otherwise obscure, in the political relations of the South American republics.

Previous to 1776 the viceroyalty of Peru also included the Spanish province of Tucuman on the eastern slope of the Andes, now comprising the seven Argentine states of (1) Tucuman, (2) Rioja, (3) Catamarca, (4) Salta, (5) Sujuy, (6) Santiago del Estero, and (7) Cordova; this province had been an integral part of the viceroyalty of Peru from the time of the conquest; it also included the semi-independent captain-generalship of Chili, consisting of the present republic of Chili and the Spanish province of Cuyo adjoining it on the eastern slope of the Andes, which now forms the three Argentine states of (1) Mendoza, (2) San Juan, and (3) San Luis. It further included the semi-independent province of the La Plata, consisting of the present Argentine states of Buenos Ayres, (2) Santa Fé, (3) Entré Rios, and (4) Corrientes, and the republics of Paraguay and Uruguay.

In 1776 the provinces of (1) La Plata, (2) Cuyo, and (3) Tucuman, were united as the viceroyalty of the La Plata, with the city of Buenos Ayres as the seat of government and the port of entry; whereby the province of Buenos Ayres was given an increased political and commercial preponderence at the expense of the interior provinces; the jealousy thus arising has been the cause of civil war in the Argentine Republic on several occasions since the revolution. There is even reason to believe that this arbitrary act of the Spanish Government, whereby the people of the old provinces of Tucuman and Cuyo were transferred against their will from the governments established on the Pacific coast to the then distant government at the mouth of the La Plata, and to the prejudice of their social, political, and commercial interests, hastened the Spanish-American revolution. At all events, the revolution first broke out and obtained a permanent success on the La Plata. In Chili, the revolutionists were at first obliged to seek refuge across the Andes, among their old friends in Cuyo, whence, reinforced by an Argentine army under General San Martin, they recrossed the Andes and won their independence at the decisive battle of Maypu. The allied armies of Chili and the Argentine provinces thence moved by sea against Peru, and there, uniting with the revolutionary troops of the northern provinces, under Bolivar, accomplished the final expulsion of the Spanish authority at the battle of Ayachuco, in Bolivia, in 1820.

Thus the independence of the Spanish colonies in South America was accomplished by their united efforts and, as the political successors of the King of Spain, they owned all of the Spanish possessions in South America. These they divided between the several colonies upon the basis of the boundaries existing in 1810 between the colonies. But so vague were those boundaries, so conflicting the claims based upon contradictory charters ("cedulas"), that there are to this day disputed questions as to boundaries between each and all of the South American States, without exception. From this cause have arisen exhausting wars on several occasions, some of which will here be cited.

The war between Paraguay and the three allied states of Brazil, the Argentine Republic and Uruguay, in 1865, grew out of a disputed boundary. After five years of exhausting war the allies deprived Paraguay of half of its territory. Only very recently has the Government of the United States, mutually chosen as arbitrator between the Argentine Republic and Paraguay, in regard to the ownership of the unsettled territory, known as the "Gran Chaco," rendered its decision adversely to the claim of the Argentine Republic. The war between Brazil and the states of the La Plata, some thirty years ago, arose from a claim to a part of Uruguay, pressed by the Brazilian Government. The long-pending controversy between the Argentine Republic and Chili, in regard to Patagonia, arises from contradictory grants of the Spanish crown, which apparently cover the same territory. As long ago as 1856 a treaty was made providing for the amicable settlement of this disputed boundary, and several additional conventions to the same end have subsequently been negotiated; nevertheless, within a few months, the question assumed a very warlike phase, and may lead to hostilities. The boundary between Chili and Bolivia has been the subject of controversy for many years. In 1866 a treaty was made whereby the territory between the twenty-third and the twenty-fifth degrees of latitude was made a neutral zone, in which the usufruct should be equally divided between Chili and Bolivia. In 1874 a new treaty was made whereby Chilians, resident in that zone, should be exempt from taxation and export duties on the products of their mines; the violation of that treaty is the cause of the present war between Chili and Peru-Bolivia. From the recent news it seems that the boundary question between Venezuela and Colombia is assuming a very hostile aspect, tending to war at some time in the near future. This merely confirms the statement made to me in July, by Don Pablo Arosemena, the new minister from Colombia to Peru and Chili, that Colombia had serious boundary questions with Brazil, Venezuela, Costa Rica, and Ecuador, and that each of those states, as well as Peru and Bolivia, had similar questions with every one of its neighbors. To show how detrimental these disputes are to the commerce and industries of the South American republics, I here quote from recent editorials in leading papers:

[Extract from editorial published in the Diario de Cundinamarca (a Colombian city), republished in the Ferro-Carril, Santiago, October 28, 1879.]

* * * It is certain that the questions of boundary between this republic and all of its neighbors require a settlement with the least possible delay. Costa Rica, Ecuador, Brazil, and Venezuela, all four nations, have territorial pretensions to our territory. These serious questions may lead to a conflict. * * *

[Extract from editorial in the Ferro-Carril, Santiago. October 22, 1879.]

* * * Questions of boundary in which Chili is now involved with its neighbors are no new thing in its national existence, but the natural and inevitable situation of all the American republics. On the other hand, these questions, which in all the other republics has been a perpetual and fruitful cause of aggression from the first days of their independence, thanks to the settled policy of prudence, of concessions, of all kinds of conciliatory and pacific arrangements adopted by Chili, have not, in all these years, produced those frequent outbursts of war, which form the international history of the people of this continent. While it would take much time to enumerate the uninterrupted series of hostilities between all the republics of South America, caused on all sides by boundary questions, it may be said that the present conflict is the first time that Chili has been involved in war of this origin. * * * Chili has neither influenced nor taken any part in the frequent quarrels in the Argentine Republic, Bolivia, Peru, Ecuador, and Paraguay. * * * Our country has lived completely devoted to the carrying out of the works of peace, and if at any time she has intervened in South American conflicts, it has been as a friendly and honored mediator, or as the aider of Peru when her national autonomy has been in danger, or the future of American independence at stake. While all the republics of South America have been invaded frequently by others, either alone or forming allied forces, Chili has only armed twice—in the defense of Peruvian independence and to avert a danger common to all the republics of the Pacific. * * *

—

The picture thus drawn, showing the cause of war in South America, is worthy of a careful examination, and thus may we be prepared to consider whether the United States, as an honored and honorable friend of all the states on the American continent, may not be in a position to pacify these vexed questions, and at the same time to win the position of the mutually recognized leader and friend of Spanish America.

It is well known that in the United States very serious difficulties occurred in Vermont between the colonial authorities of New York and New Hampshire. This was just before our revolution. It is also well known that the complicated nature of the chartered rights of the several colonies to the territory west of the Alleghanies was one of the leading reasons why the Mississippi Valley was, by common consent, made the common property of the nation. Perhaps the statement may even be made that, the desire to permanently settle this class of questions was one of the great moving causes of the permanent union of the original thirteen States as a nation.

It is possible that the very complexity of the territorial claims of the South American republics, so dangerous to the peaceful development of the great natural resources, may lead to a similar union. For this reason the plan of Señor Arosemena, the Colombian minister ad hoc to Peru and Chili, is worthy of the serious consideration of the Government of the United States. That plan, which represents the official desire of the government and people of Colombia is, that a continental congress should meet at Washington, consisting of plenipotentiaries of all the Spanish American republics, under the presidency of the Executive of the United States, with the object of amicably adjusting these complicated questions. The opportunity would thus arise for considering subjects of a more extensive nature, such as a continental system of international relations, a commercial union of all America, under the hegemony of the United States, and I believe that the result would tend to the Union of all the republics in America, without depriving them of their self-government, to the peaceful development of the immense natural resources of a continent, for the mutual advantage of each, and of none more than the United States.

An invitation officially given to each of the South American and Spanish American states by the United States Government, to meet in congress at Washington, at some fixed time in 1880, for the purpose of amicably and honorably adjusting differences inherited from their colonial days—differences happily avoided in the United States by means of their permanent union under the Constitution—would, I think, meet with the joyful response of most, if not all, of the governments and people of South America, who recognize the cause, but of themselves are unable to work the cure, of the wars and their consequences, which retard the peaceful and prosperous development of a whole continent. To be thus the means of so glorious a result would be the most noble national work of the present century.

Thus there now seems again offered to the United States an opportunity to recover the position which was lost by the unfortunate neglect of the United States to take part in the Panama Congress, in 1826, that of the hegemony of all the American republics. In vain did our leading statesmen, Monroe and Adams, Clay and Webster, use their influence to have the United States take a leading part in that congress. But the proposed "consideration of the means to be adopted for the total abolition of the African slave trade" apparently led to the refusal of the United States Congress of that day to support this measure of the administration In the notes to the United States Treaties, by J. C. Bancroft Davis (pp. 970,971), are citations and quotations from which the following extract is here quoted:

"The pacific objects of the congress, the establishment of close and cordial relations of amity, the creation of commercial intercourse, of interchange of political thought, of habits of good understanding between the new republics and the United States and their respective citizens, might perhaps have been attained, had the administration of that day received the united support of the country. Unhappily they were lost; the new states were removed from the sympathetic and protecting influence of our example, and their commerce, which we might then have secured, passed into other hands unfriendly to the United States."

But to-day circumstances have changed, the whole people of the United States would be united in the support of such a measure; the people of the South American and Spanish-American states would welcome such a measure as the means of their salvation. Half a century has taught the United States that a close commercial connection with the other States of the American continent is necessary for her rapidly developing industries, as necessary for them as for us; it has taught the new republics that separate they are weak, involved in domestic troubles, interstate controversies and subject to harsh measures from European powers, that by a union their disputes with each other could be avoided, their domestic peace maintained; but that such a union, under the auspices of the United States, would thereby become permanent.

It is therefore of consideration whether the opportunity, once lost and now apparently again presented, should not be gladly welcomed, and whether the common interests of all the republics of North and South America would not be benefited—permanently established, by the convening of a continential congress at Washington, not only for the settlement of all pending questions between the South American republics, but for the establishment of a uniform and permanent system of closer relations and friendship between all the republics in America.

This seems to me, after a very careful consideration of the subject, covering several years, and made in part during a personal visit in quite a number of the South American states, to be practicable. Such a result would be worthy of the highest statesmanship, and I believe gladly accepted by, and of the greatest interest for, not only the American people but by a continent.

HORACE N. FISHER.

HACIENDA DE PULLALLI.
Ligua, Chili, October 31, 1879.

No. 408.

Mr. Hunter to Mr. Fisher.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, February 6, 1880.

HORACE N. FISHER, Esq.,
Consul of Chili at Boston, Hacienda de Pullalli, Ligna, Chili:

SIR: I have to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 26th December last, and of the "Official Publication of the Law of War," which accompanied the same, and in reply have to express to you the thanks of the Department therefor.

I am, sir, your obedient servant,

W. HUNTER,
Second Assistant Secretary.

No. 409.

Mr. Fisher to Mr. Hunter.

HACIENDA DE PULLALLI,
Ligua, Chili, February 27, 1880. (Received April 12.)

SIR: On the 26th of December last I had the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of October 10, 1879, in which you courteously alluded to my letters to Mr. Seward. In my last letter to him (No. 6), written upon the receipt of an official telegram announcing the victory of the Chilians at Pisagua on the 2d of November, which was received as the mail was about to close, I referred him to my friend, General Alexander McD. McCook, of Washington, to whom I had written by the previous mail, inclosing a memorandum of the "Present condition of the South American Republics," in which I had suggested the propriety of our government inviting the several South American governments to meet in a continental congress at Washington during the present year, not only for the settlement of all pending questions between them, but for the establishment of a uniform system of closer relations and friendship between all the republics of America.

In that memorandum, after briefly stating the historical relations between the South American states, I alluded to the cause—at least a prominent cause—of their past wars with each other. If it will not be presuming too much upon your courtesy, I will submit an extract from that memorandum, as it expresses my views at that time, which I have seen no cause to alter, and which, together with the plan suggested for a continental congress, meet the full approbation of the friend, a well-known statesman and senator of Chili, whose guest I have been since my arrival in Chili.

MEMORANDUM.

The present condition of the South American Republics.

[Extract.]

* * * * * * *

Thus the independence of the Spanish colonies in South America was the result of the union of the several colonies, and as the successors of the King of Spain, they held all the Spanish possessions in South America; these they divided, on the basis of the boundaries existing in 1810, between the colonies. But so vague were those boundaries that there are to this day disputed questions as to boundaries between each and all of the South American states, which have resulted in war on several occasions.

Thus the war between Brazil and the states of the La Plata grew out of a claim of Brazil to a part of Uruguay; the war of 1865, between Paraguay and the allied states of Brazil and the Argentine Republic grew out of a disputed boundary question; only very recently has the United States Government acted as arbitrator (mutually chosen) between the Argentine Republic and Paraguay, in regard to the unsettled territory known as the "Gran Chaco." Within a few days ex-President Sarmiento, the Argentine minister of state, has officially alluded to a disputed territory between Bolivia and the Argentine Republic. In July, 1879, Don Pablo Arosemena, the Colombian minister to Peru and Chili, informed me that Colombia had boundary questions still pending with Brazil, Venezuela, Ecuador, and Central America, and that each of these states, as well as Peru and Bolivia, had similar questions to settle with each of its neighbors.

The long-pending controversy between the Argentine Republic and Chili with regard to Patagonia, arises from contradictory grants from the Spanish Crown, which apparently cover the same territory; as long ago as 1856, provision for the settlement of this question was made by treaty, and several additional conventions have since been made with the same object.

The boundary between Chili and Bolivia has been the subject of controversy for many years; in 1866, a treaty was made by which the territory between the twenty-third and twenty-fifth degrees of south latitude was made a neutral zone; the subsequent convention of August 4, 1874, was made to regulate the rights of their respective citizens in that neutral zone, and to effectually close the controversy; the willful violation of the said convention has resulted in the present war between Chili and Peru-Bolivia.

In 1878 the controversy in regard to Patagonia assumed such a warlike phase that hostilities seemed unavoidable. It is believed that this induced Bolivia to proceed to the flagrant violation of the treaty-rights of Chilians in the neutral zone between 23° and 25°, knowing that Peru was ready to aid her in accordance with the secret treaty of 1873. * * *

Thus the statement of Señor Arosemena to me in July, 1879, seems fully corroborated—namely, that there are disputed boundary questions between every one of the South American states and its neighbors, which have already resulted in war on several occasions and are liable to cause war at any time until they are settled. Therefore he had the plan of having all the South American states meet in a continental congress at Washington, by means of plenipotentiaries duly appointed, the object of which should be a final adjustment of these complicated questions.

It is a well-known fact that in the United States very serious difficulties occurred in Vermont between the colonial authorities of New Hampshire and New York, in regard to their jurisdiction in Vermont; this was just before our revolution; also that the complex nature of the chartered rights of the several colonies to the territory west of the Alleghanies was the principal reason why the Mississippi Valley was made the common property of the nation; there is also reason to believe that the desire to settle this class of questions was one of the causes which led to a permanent union of the original thirteen States as a nation.

Perhaps the very complexity of the claims of the South American Republics, so dangerous to the peaceable development of their great natural resources may lead to a similar union. For which reason the idea of Señor Arosemena—of a continental congress to meet at Washington, consisting of plenipotentiaries from all of the South American Republics, under the presidency of the President of the United States—is worthy of consideration; because whatever the results actually accomplished by the Congress, it will furnish an opportunity for the representative men of each of the South American Republics to know how similar difficulties were settled in the United States, and to behold the results accomplished by a century of peaceful development of natural resources, no greater than those which they possess, by means of a permanent union.

In fact the work of the "Congress of jurisconsults," which, composed of plenipotentiaries of all the South American republics, met at Lima December 9, 1877, to "create a formula of common law for the whole continent of [Spanish] America," as was stated by one of the plenipotentiaries in preparing the treaty of November, 1878, is an earnest of the general desire of Spanish Americans for unification. That treaty, which has been submitted for ratification to the signatory governments, establishes the rights of their respective citizens in other republics of South America upon a basis similar to that provided by our Constitution for the citizens of the United States in the several States of our Union.

In view of the facts (1) that the congress of jurisconsults could agree upon so complicated and important questions as those covered by their "Code of private international law," which was embodied in that treaty in full, as clear and concise as it is harmonious and just to the State and its alien residents, and (2) that the time seems to have arrived when the people of all the South American republics are aroused to an appreciation of the dangerous condition of their mutual insecurity, owing to ancient but unsettled territorial questions, and of the necessity and advantage of closer union; in view of these facts, it seems that there is an opportunity for the United States, as the friend of all, to recover the position which was open to her at the time of the "Panama congress" in 1826, namely, that of the recognized leadership, the hegemony, of all of the American republics.

Presidents Monroe and John Quincy Adams, statesmen like Webster and Clay, exerted their influence to have the United States take a leading part in the congress. But one of the proposed measures, "The consideration of the means to be adopted for the total abolition of the African slave trade," apparently led to the refusal of the United States Congress to be represented at the Panama Congress, as recommended by the President.

The pacific objects of the congress, the establishment of close and cordial relations of amity, the creation of commercial intercourse, of interchange of political thought, of habits of good understanding between the new republics and the United States, and their respective citizens, might perhaps have been attained had the administration of that day received the united support of the country.

Unhappily they were lost; the new States were removed from the sympathy and protecting influence of our example, and their commerce, which we might then have secured, passed into other hands unfriendly to the United States. (See J. C. Bancroft Davis's notes to United States Published Treaties, pp. 970–'71, and references by him cited.)

But to-day circumstances have changed; the lost opportunity is again presented to the United States. Half a century of experience has taught the United States that a close commercial connection with the Spanish American republics is necessary for her rapidly developing industries, as necessary for them as for her; it has taught the new republics that separate they are weak, involved in domestic strife and foreign controversies; that by a union with each other their domestic peace could be maintained.

It is worthy of consideration, therefore, whether this opportunity, once lost, should not be gladly welcomed, and whether the common interests of all of the republics of North and South America would not be benefited by the convening of a continental congress at Washington, not only for the settlement of all pending questions between the South American republics, but for the establishment of a uniform system of closer relations and friendship between all the republics in America.

The memorandum concluded by suggesting that the President should be authorized to invite the South American republics to send plenipotentiaries to a continental congress to meet at Washington, at some time fixed in the present year, for the purposes above specified. I have nothing to add to or take from that suggestion made October 31, 1879, except that I have since met Señor Arosemena, who gives it as his opinion that such a proposition, coming from the President of the United States, would be gladly and respectfully received. Friends of mine in Chili express the same opinion.

Within a short time active operations will be renewed by the Chilian army and navy. From information I have, it seems likely that the information of another expedition having landed in Peru north of Tarapaca will reach you by telegraph sometime before this letter reaches you. The views I have heretofore expressed in my letter of August 14, 1879 (No. 4), are unchanged as to the general object of the war. The landing at Pisagua accomplished the reduction of the Peruvian province of Tarapaca, but not the occupation of Southern Peru, and the capture or dispersion of the allied armies there stationed; nor the dissolution of the Peru-Bolivian alliance, all of which seemed then likely to follow the attack upon Arica.

As, however, this letter has reached a considerable length, and refers to other and more peaceful subjects, I will merely add that in my judgment the next few months will bring about most important questions for all of South America: the change of national boundaries, the establishment of national rights, the opening to civilized industry of parts hitherto neglected or unknown.

These questions must be settled; perhaps none of the South American States is of sufficient preponderance to do this; some friendly neutral power will probably have this work to do. None is more trusted than the United States; none more disinterested and friendly, as history proves. But the great country which successfully carries this work to a conclusion will predominate in all South America for the next century.

Respectfully submitting these suggestions to you and to the State Department through you,

I am, sir, &c.,

HORACE N. FISHER.

No. 410.

Mr. Fisher to Mr. Hunter.

SANTIAGO, CHILI,
October 22, 1880. (Received December 6.)

SIR: In my report to the Department, as bearer of dispatches, dated July 30, 1879, I wrote to the honorable Secretary as follows:

Although it is not within the scope of my duty as bearer of dispatches, I take the liberty of stating that it seems to be the general feeling that, if any occasion for arbitration or mediation in the present war on the west coast should arise, the good offices of the United States would be preferred to those of any other country in America or Europe.

I can now go further, and state with perfect confidence that the only government whose mediation would be accepted by Chili is that of the United States; and I make this statement with the full knowledge of the views of the President and ministry of Chili, and of the views of the leaders of the political parties in the Chilian Congress.

This statement was made in my letter of September 30, 1880, to my friend General Garfield, in which I discussed the questions growing out of Minister Christiancy's recent visit to Chili, and the reasons given why I did not think that the mediation of the United States would prove successful at the present time.

In my letter to your colleague, Mr. Seward (No. 4), dated August 14, 1879, I expressed my opinion at that time as follows:

> In view of the present general unanimity for the vigorous prosecution of the war and of the apparent preparation for immediate military activity, I do not think it advisable to press the idea of arbitration, believing it likely that no basis could be agreed upon which would fix the status of the belligerents during negotiations. The idea of arbitration has already been advanced by neutral states of both Europe and America. * * * I am satisfied that the United States would be preferred as arbitrator by all three of the belligerent countries to any other; but that in the present condition of affairs there is so great a difference as to the status during negotiations—Chili insisting upon the status quo and Peru and Bolivia upon the status ante bellum, that it is not advisable to press the subject at present.

I will here state that, from information I have since received, it would have been feasible for Peru—Bolivia to have made peace at that time by the cession to Chili of the "neutral zone," which would have given Autofagasta (already occupied) to Chili if they had had the wisdom to have accepted the condition-precedent insisted upon by Chili in regard to the status during negotiations.

In a later letter to Mr. Seward (No. 5), dated October 9, 1879, I used the following language in regard to mediation and commercial matters discussed with him in June:

> As stated in my last letter to you, I am patiently waiting until the proper time comes for advantageous action, when I shall use such arguments as will, in my judgment, tend to bring about the desired results we discussed in your office at Washington last June. Of course, it is well to remember the homely adage, "It is easier to bring a horse to water than to make him drink;" but I think, as stated to you, that the present war has awakened all of the South American states to a more complete realization of their relations to each other and to other countries, and that it may afford an opportunity much to be desired, of which I am watching the developments now in progress. * * * I have never doubted that Chili would win, and have, as you know, inclined to believe that this war would probably result in advancing the civil and social condition of Spanish America.

As to the last named opinion, I have no reason to question the correctness of the views expressed a year ago.

As to the statement made in the former part of the extract above quoted, I am happy to be able at last to state that my patience has been rewarded, so far, at least, as the results alluded to refer to the plan for opening the Chilian market to American manufactures.

As consul of Chili, I could suggest measures for the mutual advantage of the United States and Chili which no foreign minister could ask for; and the government has accepted, after a prolonged discussion, my recommendation for the assignment of a part of the National Exposition building at Santiago for the permanent exhibition of samples of standard manufactures of the United States of all kinds not likely to deteriorate. There remain a few details to be arranged, which I expect to conclude within a week.

I have also made the proper preliminary arrangements for a new commercial treaty, on the basis of limited reciprocity, which, however, for certain reasons, cannot be successfully carried through until next year; these reasons I will communicate in person when I report at the Department in Washington, in December.

In addition to the above, I have presented a note to the government, after informal conference, to learn whether it would be well received, in favor of including in the proposed treaty of peace certain commercial provisions, which will, if adopted, make a commercial treaty of reciprocity between the United States and Chili the means not only of vastly benefiting Chili, but of giving the control of the foreign trade of the whole west coast of South America to the United States, a trade which, in 1876, was worth $200,000,000 annually, but of which we only had in that year 3 per cent. I have reason to believe that this suggestion, made in my note of October 19, 1880, has been favorably received by the government and some of the leading statesmen of Chili, and is not unlikely likely to be adopted as a basis of peace negotiations.

Thus, by various means and not a little patience, I have at length attained the principal objects of my present visit to Chili. It has been necessary to wait for the proper opportunities to make the successive steps in this rather complicated affair. But they have been surely taken, and I have no reason for anticipating that there will be serious difficulty in building upon the foundation, thus laid, a comprehensive commercial policy of the United States in regard to South America, whereby the trade of that continent may pass into the hands of the United States for their benefit as well as for ours.

As to mediation, I have already intimated that I have no confidence that the conference at Arica will result in peace at present. I confess that, however much, peace is to be desired, it seems to me doubtful whether the time has quite come to make a peace which will be permanent and allow the belligerents to devote themselves to the development of the great natural resources of their respective countries. Nor do I believe that the interests of other nations will suffer by delay in making peace.

With these views I am forced to believe that the movements in that direction, made by our representatives near the governments of the respective belligerents, have been premature, and that the failure to accomplish the desired results of the mediation of our government, at the Arica conference, is to be apprehended. In fact I took the liberty to express to Minister Osborn, on the morning he left Santiago to attend the Arica conference, that I did not believe that any permanent peace could be negotiated until the Chilian army had arrived in the Bay of Callao, when, in view of the imminent and overwhelming danger to Lima, the Peruvian Government would be entreated by the people of Lima to make any terms of peace necessary to save their city from the dangers incident to a battle fought at its very gates, and that thus the Peruvian dictator would be able to accept the terms of Chili without having his government overthrown. My opinion is that Piérola would be glad to make peace on any terms rather than to continue the war. I give him credit for intelligence enough to understand that the longer the war continues the harder will be the terms granted, and the worse the condition of the country to recover from the effects of the war; that Peru is hopelessly vanquished; that the Peru-Bolivian confederation is impracticable as a permanent thing under existing circumstances, and that sooner or later Peru must sue for peace. But I also think that for Piérola to make peace upon the terms that Chili expects and can enforce, while his army at Lima is intact, and the people are still blinded, as it seems to have been Piérola's policy, to the completeness of their military and naval overthrow, would not only lead to the violent overthrow of his government by revolution at Lima, but would not unlikely cost him his life if he did not escape from the hands of the mob.

For these reasons I believe that it is hardly possible for the present conference of plenipotentiaries at Arica to make a treaty of peace which will be ratified by the Chilian Congress and accepted by the people of Peru and Bolivia. But when a large and well-equipped veteran army has arrived in Callao Bay and is ready to land under the guns of the Chilian fleet and force its way into the streets of Lima, an army superior in numbers, arms, discipline, and fighting qualities to the improvised army of Piérola, I think that then and not until then can the friendly mediation of the United States prove efficient in bringing about peace.

Therefore, I believe that the true time for our mediation to be made will be after the Chilian army has arrived in the Bay of Callao and at the island of San Lorenzo, which forms that bay, and is in full sight of Lima. A conference at San Lorenzo would probably, at that time, bring good fruit, which I doubt very much from the conference at Arica.

Meanwhile the military preparations for the march to Lima are rapidly progressing, as the Chilian Government announced in accepting the invitation to take part in the Arica conference, and Peru—Bolivia will not gain time by peace negotiations.

The Turks thus recently saved Constantinople from assault by making peace when the Russian troops came in sight of the dome of San Sophia; yet the Turks are better soldiers than the Peruvians, and had had the satisfaction of having well and stubbornly resisted their conquerors. So I think there is good prospect for successfully carrying out the benevolent intentions of our government as a mediator and a friend—trusted by all the belligerents—by renewing the, offer of mediation after the Chilian army has reached Callao Bay and before it lands. Then—if the Peruvians are still determined to deceive themselves and trust to defend Lima by force of arms, and mines of dynamite, and similar experiments of doubtful utility, rather than make the best terms they can—I see nothing for it but for our government and our ministers to remain strictly neutral in regard to the sad results which must inevitably ensue.

As Hamilton said, "A country without a government is an awful spectacle," it may also be said that a city taken by assault terrifies the imagination. Both of these spectacles are likely to be presented to the world if no peaceful submission is arranged at San Lorenzo; for it must be remembered that for years Chilian laborers in Peru have been treated worse than dogs; that when war broke out all the Chilians in Peru were ordered to leave the country at a few hours' notice; that at Iquique only six hours' time was allowed them, and there was no ship to take them to Chili, so that some thousand of men, women, and children were forced to cross the desert to Autofagasta, fully half of whom are said to have died of thirst on the way; that Chilian merchants, long resident in Peru, and married to Peruvian women, were ordered away by the first steamer, and allowed to take no more than a pittance of specie with them. I met one of these victims on the steamer from Panama to Valparaiso; he was far gone in consumption; his passage home had been given him out of compassion by the steamer's company. He was not allowed to land at Callao, and his wife and daughters bade him an eternal adieu in his stateroom. He seemed to be a very inof-fensive gentleman. Ladies, whose only offense was their being Chilian by birth, although married to Peruvians, were in like manner summarily deported by the first steamer, although it took them away from instead of towards the place they wished to reach. The sufferings of unfortunate Chilian women of humble station became so outrageous that men were sent ashore from the neutral men of-war at Callao to protect them from the violence of the mob. Now, then, when it is remembered that thousands of officers and soldiers in the Chilian army have personal grievances to avenge, aggrieved either in their own persons or of those near and dear to them, it is much to be feared that if Lima should be taken by assault terrible vengeance will be exacted upon the conquered. In prevision of such event I here state the mitigating causes, in order that you may not form too hasty a judgment, and, further, that our government may not, from any disappointment as to the result of its well-intended mediation at the Arica conference, be indisposed to renew its beneficent efforts at a more convenient opportunity to prevent bloodshed and bring about peace.

These opinions I take the liberty to express for the information of our government; they have been formed after a careful study of the questions growing out of the war and anterior to the war, and have been made after observations under exceptionally favorable circumstances during the fifteen months since my arrival in Chili. As nearly as I can judge, Chili will insist upon the following bases of peace:

(1.) Measures which will prevent Peru from resuming the offensive—renewing hostilities—for a term of years;

(2.) Cession of Tarapacá and possibly of Arica, on account of Peru's inability to pay a money indemnity adequate to the cost and damage of the war to Chili;

(3.) Cession of the Bolivian Litoral, between Tarapaca and the former Chilian frontier, for same reason;

(4.) Commercial advantages, allowing Chilian products, &c., to enter Peru and Bolivia free of duty for a fixed time; and I hope to include the nationalized products of Chili.

(5.) Payment of private claims of Chilians for confiscated property.

I expect to conclude the negotiations, which I came here to make so as to be able to leave Valparaiso for the United States, on November 6, and upon my return to have the pleasure of reporting in person at the Department in Washington.

Trusting to find you with your health restored, &c.,

I have, &c.,

HORACE N. FISHER.

No. 411.

Mr. Fisher to Mr. Hunter.

SANTIAGO, CHILI, October 29, 1880.

SIR: On the 22d instant I had the honor to write you in reference to questions affecting the interests of the United States. In regard to mediation, I stated then that I had "no confidence that the conference at Arica will result in peace at this time," and gave my reasons for apprehending its failure. The official announcement of this disappointing ending of our friendly mediation was officially announced by the Government of Chili in the Diario official of Chili yesterday morning.

It is, however, a pleasant thing for me to report that throughout the whole of the public discussions growing out of the mediation of the United States, I have not observed the least harshness of opinion expressed towards the United States either in Congress, in the press, at the clubs, nor in private. On the contrary, the unanimous opinion in Chili has been, so far as I can judge, that the United States Government has been actuated by the most friendly sentiments, and its good offices have been accepted, by Chili at least, in the same generous spirit and from a desire to avoid unnecessary bloodshed, reserving, however, its freedom to enforce a peace which shall prevent a repetition of the danger which has menaced Chili.

I am satisfied that no other country but our own could have passed through the crucial ordeal of probably the bitterest debate ever had in the Chilian Congress, to which Mr. Christiancy's visit to Chili gave rise, with such unqualified proofs of respect; and therefore believe that our government has gained rather than lost influence, in spite of the failure of the Arica conference held under its auspices.

There seems no reasons for modifying my opinions, expressed in my letter of October 22, that the movements of the representative of our government were premature, and (2) that the friendly mediation of the United States may be renewed under circumstances indicated in that letter, when they will be gladly received by all of the belligerents and will, if judiciously managed, not only solve one of the most delicate problems of interstate differences, but prove for the permanent advantage of the United States both from a political and commercial standpoint.

Although the result of the Arica conference is naturally a disappointment, and may even prove an embarrassment to our own government in many respects, still I hold to the opinion expressed in my last letter, that "however much peace is to be desired, it seems to me doubtful whether the time has come to make a peace which will be permanent and allow the belligerents to devote themselves to the development of the great natural resources of their respective countries." This opinion is not suddenly formed, but is the result of a careful study of the relations heretofore and still existing between not only the belligerent states but between all of the states of South America.

In a memorandum upon the relations of the different states of South America, which I forwarded to you early in the present year, I briefly reviewed the peculiar relations which each state of South America had with every one of its neighbors growing out of their conflicting title to unoccupied lands or lands until recently of but a nominal importance. The present war is one of the results of that unfortunate condition of things. This conflict of claims has proved a factor for evil in the history of South America for more than half a century. Until some proper and definite settlement can be reached similar results are to be expected from time to time in the future. I cannot but think that unless the present war is carried to its logical conclusion, the acknowledgment by one of the belligerents of its complete overthrow in the war, and its unconditional submission to the fate of war, when generosity can safely and consistently be shown by the victor, the result will be adverse to the general and permanent peace of South America; that therefore the interests of humanity and of every foreign nation, as well as of the three belligerent states, will be best served by as rapid a campaign as may be possible to bring Peru-Bolivia to terms of unconditional surrender. No surgeon would be justified to stop his knife in the midst of a capital operation, which must be completed to save the patient's life, simply because the patient or the by-standers suffer pain, or from sympathy.

In our rebellion how barren the strife, how useless the cost of blood and treasure, if the war had stopped midway! Neither party victorious; each representing views incompatible with a permanent peace with each other; the great permanent results of the war would have been surrendered for the sake of a temporary peace. Similar would be the case with the belligerent states who accepted our mediation if the Arica conference had not failed. An armed peace—nothing less—would have been forced upon not only the belligerents but upon their neighbors. The manifest evils of such a peace should make us so grateful that even our disappointment should give way to joy that so great an evil has been escaped; an evil not intended when the Government of the United States offered to befriend those sister republics which trusted in our friendship, and may become most useful neighbors.

* * * * * * *

Respectfully, your obedient servant,

HORACE N. FISHER.

P. S.—I may be delayed leaving until November 13 by business alluded to in former letter.

H. N. F.

No. 412.

Mr. Shipherd to Mr. Walker Blaine.

Personal.] NEW YORK, July 27, 1881. (Received July 28.)

DEAR SIR: On leaving the residence of the Secretary of State yesterday morning, I learned from Senator Blair that the gentleman who had shared the latter part of our interview was the Assistant Secretary of State.

Will you allow me to annex this note to that conversation?

Can you, then, give me the present address of Suarez? and can you suggest a method of awakening in him a desire to confer with me? I would like to meet him at once, but he should properly seek me, and would soon do so if the real facts were hinted to him.

In connection with the examination of the Cochet claim, which the Secretary was good enough to say should be at once entered upon, I shall be glad to be called on from time to time for any explanation or further data which the examiner may desire. Of course, as the papers stand, there are links only outlined and data summarized in some places; I used such data as were placed in my hands in the first instance; these seemed to make a prima-facie case; every allegation will be fully supported in detail in due course.

Meanwhile I will prepare and print for the use of the Secretary a brief of the law covering especially the doctrine of choses and their international assignability; this I hope to be able to forward, say by the 15th proximo.

If consistent with all the proprieties of the premises, I would be aided if I knew precisely what the crédit industriale desires to do in Peru, and what co-operation on the part of the United States its agents have asked.

Also, if I might have an authentic abstract of the special instructions cabled or posted to Minister Hurlbut concerning the premises discussed with the Secretary on Monday evening and Tuesday morning, I should be able to act with more precise intelligence, and there might be annexed to this any restriction concerning its use which the Secretary should think it proper to direct. I am the sole executive head of both the Landreau and the Cochet claims at present, and shall so continue until the final organization is perfected; and while I do need full and authentic information for my own guidance, I do not need to share it.

Very respectfully,

JACOB R. SHIPHERD.

Hon. WALKER BLAINE,
Assistant Secretary of State.

No. 413.

Mr. Shipherd to Mr. Blaine.

LAW OFFICE OF JACOB R. SHIPHERD,
10 Spruce street, New York, July 28, 1881. (Received July 29.)

SIR: In a note to the Third Assistant Secretary of State yesterday I promised to prepare and print at once a brief of the legal questions discussed at our recent conferences. Pending this it occurs to me to forward to the Department, for use in the examination, a duplicate set of all the papers as yet printed, and to add duplicate originals of two affidavits by Mr. Hevner, touching all the material allegations so printed. By the end of August I am to receive from Paris certified original proofs of the death, intestacy, &c., of Alex. Cochet. All other original proofs will be supplied in due course.

While I am writing, it occurs to me to phrase a little more broadly than I did in conversation the suggestion which the Secretary of State was so good as to allow me to make. Our thought and our scheme are in fact as broad as this:

The Landreau and Cochet claims are but subordinate factors in our programme. Equally in the interest of the European holders of $300,000,000 of now worthless Peruvian bonds, and of Chili herself, as an admitted creditor, we appear to call a conference of the creditors of the insolvent, to demand a proper receiver and a marshalling of the assets, to the end that equal justice shall be done to all. Neither now nor hereafter shall we demand any more. Equally with all other creditors we are prepared to prove both our claims by incontestable proofs, and to take only our proper place in the settlement.

We appeal to the United States to take such measures only at present as shall effectually forbid Chili, who is only one creditor, to administer alone upon this estate.

We point out that we are the owners in identity of every ounce of guano remaining, with large amounts still due.

To allow Chili to touch any guano is impossible; to allow her to annex Tarapacá, with $2,000,000,000 of nitrate for her petty war indemnity, would be monstrous.

"If the court please," we ask an unconditional injunction pending a meeting of creditors, and we ask no more at present.

Very respectfully,

J. R. SHIPHERD.

[Inclosure.]

Deposition of Peter Hevner.

CITY AND COUNTY OF NEW YORK, ss:

Peter Hevner, being duly sworn, says:

I was born in Corbin County, Pennsylvania, in 1819. Brought up to general building and contracting.

First went to Peru in 1853; went into general contracting; built railroad from Lima to Chorillos, in 1854, for Don Pedro Coredama. Road was over nine miles; staid about six years; built the powder-works, penitentiary, and a great deal other government work. In 1860 I went into mercantile business in Lima, Callao, Arequipa, and Trugillo; had a house in each place—Hevner, Dockendorff & Co. In 1865 and 1866 I took a contract of the government under which I remodeled the monitor Loa, and rifled the Peruvian cannon which defended the harbor of Callao against Spain.

Then I had government contracts during nearly all my stay in Peru until 1866.

I sold out my commercial interest in 1866, and came to the United States. Went back to Peru in 1872; got the Salaverey and Trogillo Railroad—contract to build it—in company with Larsaga. In 1874 I got the government contract to build a bridge over the Upper Remack; all the materials for which have been destroyed—so says the report—in the port of Molva; these I had shipped from the United States.

First heard of the Landreau claim thirteen years ago; knew J. T. Landreau; began loaning him money about that time. In 1874 I purchased an interest in the claim from Landreau. I soon after advanced him money to bring him to the United States and to bring his brother from New Orleans to meet him in Washington to arrange with the United States Government. When we came to the United States and made our claim before the government, Mr. Thomas was then sent out as minister, and I went back immediately after, and I thereafter got the official information from Mr. Thomas on which I kept on advancing the Landreaus money whenever they wanted it, and I assisted Mr. Thomas in obtaining the material proofs to support the Landreau claim, and I have been pushing this claim ever since. I still own my interest in the claim, and I have a general power of attorney from J. C. Landreau authorizing me to sell out the whole of his interest at my discretion.

On my return to Peru, in 1879, after the return of J. T. Landreau from France, in the same year, I heard from him the principal particulars of the Cochet claim. I had heard generally of Cochet, and that he was recognized by the government and the people of Peru as the true discoverer and utilizer of guano ever since my first arrival in Peru; this was universally known by all well-informed business men in Peru, and I never heard his claim to be the true discoverer questioned by anybody.

Cochet was always recognized to be the true discoverer when the matter was spoken of in my hearing. I can give the names of a number of well-known men who knew this general fact as well as I did; such as Juan Williamson, of Lima; Patrick Dowley, also of Lima, who must now be eighty years of age; J. T. Landreau, General Bustemente, of Lima; James Hinsbey, of Lima, an Englishman, and the great house of Anthony Gibbs & Co., who were at one time very largely in the guano trade. I have other names in my memorandum books which I cannot at the moment recall.

There was also Don Philip Bareda, a brother of M. Bareda, who was formerly minister to the United States. Don Philip and all the others I have named knew Cochet personally and intimately; Cochet in his day was one of the most notable and distinguished men in Pern as a chemist and discoverer.

From Landreau I first learned of the death of Cochet, and of his heir, Gelacio. And on that information I looked up Gelacio, investigated the claim to my own satisfaction, and purchased it. I advanced the money necessary to hunt up the heir's baptismal record and establish his identity and heirship. The necessary steps in these premises I took under advice of Peruvian counsel, who advised me that the papers which I have exhibited to Mr. Shipherd, and which he has printed (in translations), gave full proof under Peruvian law of the rights of Gelacio as sole heir of Alexandre Cochet, and of my title to all such rights by assignment from the heir. I had then no idea of selling these rights, but I demanded and secured all the proofs necessary under advice of counsel to perfect my own title.

As to the Landreau claim in the Senate, Senator Carpenter was the sub-committee who examined the whole case thoroughly, and told me it was the most honest claim that he had ever known to be put before Congress. After his health got bad he sent me to Senator Eaton, and he told me that the Senate would either concur with the House or would throw the whole responsibility on the Executive, as they finally did at my request, and I made that choice under advice of Senator Eaton, who told me that Mr. Blaine was sure to be Secretary of State, and that if the whole responsibility was thrown on the Executive, my case would be better taken care of by Mr. Blaine alone than by both houses of Congress put together.

Mr. Carpenter said to me at a second interview, "Take my compliments to Mr. Eaton, and tell him I have passed that claim favorably, and have done all I can do for it, for I shall not be able to get to the Senate again this session; and as I, as sub-committee, have done all I can do for the claim, Senator Eaton can pass the bill without me."

Then I called upon Mr. Eaton, and it was at that time that he told me that it would be best for me to dispose of the bill as it was disposed of, because Mr. Blaine was sure to be Secretary of State, and he was a progressive man, &c., as I have already stated.

After the bill was passed, Mr. Christy told me that he met Mr. Eaton in the Capitol, and asked him why he had passed the bill in that way, and he replied that he had done the best possible thing for the claim by passing the bill in that way, because Mr. Blaine was sure to be Secretary of State, &c.

As to the measurement of Landreau's deposits, I myself read the official reports published at the time, one by Peruvian officials and the other by English engineers sent over by European bondholders; and the English engineers found a larger amount than the Peruvians. The loan of $200,000,000 was made between 1868 and 1870, in Balta's time. In 1873 Pardo wanted to make another loan. The measurements were made about 1868 and 1869. The loan of $100,000,000 through Dreyfus was made in February, 1880. The Cochet deposits were not exhausted when Landreau's were measured, in fact are not exhausted yet.

I have an original copy in Spanish of the pamphlet which I recently published (in English) for Mr. Shipherd. It cost me nearly $8,000 cash. It was brought from among the papers of the Peruvian Senate. I keep the original pamphlet in Lima, and a copy of it (in Spanish) in Philadelphia. There can be no doubt whatever of the genuineness of the original. I have a copy of another pamphlet written and published by Cochet before 1840. This I received from Gelacio Cochet, as also the photograph of his father, from which the cut I gave Mr. Shipherd was engraved. This photograph I have in Philadelphia.

I first began to observe the guano business particularly in 1860, when I was the preferred man to load guano under contract. I spent ten months there in perfecting my arrangements to take the contract, out of which Calderon (a cousin of the provincial President, to whom the contract was given in my absence) is said to have made $12,000,000. In 1874 I was again the preferred man, but was once more absent when the award was made.

During the last twenty-one years I have watched the business closely in Peru and in this country, and the figures which I gave Mr. Shipherd, and which he has put into his pamphlet, are summaries and averages of official statistics which I have myself read in the official journals, and which I am prepared to verify by original proofs at the proper time. I personally and well knew the house of Anthony, Gibbs & Co., at Lima, as also John T. Ford, ever since he first came to Lima to open the Bank of Mexico, London, and South America, the first bank ever opened in Lima, and Dreytus when he was a retail dry-goods merchant, before he went into guano first.

The account I gave Mr. Shipherd of the manner in which Dreytus got his first guano contract was town talk; it was universally reported, and never questioned as to its accuracy. I intimately knew all the leading guano men of Peru during my residence there, including Schell, Dreyfus's partner—who grew very wealthy; and Don Filipo Baredas, Whitt, Schutt & Co., and Schama Condeya.

I also intimately knew Presidents Pardo, Prado, Piérola, Balta, Castija, and Calderon. For about fifteen years under Castija I had every contract the government gave out; no other man had one.

As to the nitrate business, my attention was called to it by Mr. James Matthews about twenty years ago—say 1860. I never was in it myself, but I noticed that John Gildermeister, Anthony, Gibbs & Co., Schama Condeya, and every one else who was largely in the business made fortunes out of it. Aside from the names above given, the chief operators in nitrate were Chelanos. President Pardo went into it very largely just before he was killed.

The figures I gave Mr. Shipherd and which he published in his pamphlet are based upon the official returns published monthly and quarterly, which I made a habit of reading myself, as they appeared for many years.

The extract printed at the foot of page 43 in Mr. Shipherd's pamphlet is from the pamphlet for which I paid nearly $8,000, as above recited; its accuracy Mr. Williamson and I tested by personal examinations of the original files of the Correo and Comercio therein referred to. These examinations were chiefly made by Mr. Williamson, but in my presence and with my help, in the public library in Lima.

There can be no question as to the substantial accuracy of that extract.

P. HEVNER.

Sworn to before me this 11th day of July, 1881.

CHAS. SPIRO,
Notary Public, New York County.

CITY AND COUNTY OF NEW YORK, ss:

Peter Hevner, being duly sworn, says:

I have read the Prospectus of the Peruvian Company and the reprint of papers executed by Gelacio Cochet, and I hereby state for the guidance and safe reliance of Jacob R. Shipherd and whomsoever else it may concern, that the statements of fact in the said Prospectus are substantially true to my own knowledge, and that the agreement of sale and powers of attorney, as printed and signed by me for identification, are true copies of a true translation of the originals in Spanish, and that the said originals were duly executed and delivered by Gelacio Cochet in my presence for the uses and purposes therein specified.

P. HEVNER.

Sworn to before me this 23d day of May, 1881.

FRED. F. NUGENT,
Notary Public (14) New York County.

[Private. Copy No. 71.]

NOTE.—Only a limited number of copies of this Prospectus is printed, and these are for the strictly private use of the gentlemen in whose hands they are immediately placed. Not only is no offer of stock to be made to the public, but until the organization is finally complete, and its executive policy settled, no information of its existence or plans is intended for the public. The proprietors rely upon the courtesy of those to whom these copies are intrusted, and of those under whose eyes they may fall, to observe the confidence implied in the premises.

PROSPECTUS OF THE PERUVIAN COMPANY.

I.—HISTORICAL SKETCH.

In the year 1833, the Government of Peru, by published decree promised to every discoverer of valuable deposits upon the public domain a premium of one-third of the discovery; this as an incentive to the development of great natural resources vaguely known to exist. The condition of the Peruvian people at this time has been well described by an American capitalist, for more than thirty years resident at Lima, and familiar by personal exploration with the entire country:

"The exhausted condition in which the young republic was left, after the agitated era of emancipation and the civil contentions which followed, brought about a period of inanition which had its crowning point in the general belief that now that the Peruvian people were their own masters, they had nothing to do but enjoy their so-called liberty. Commercial pursuits they left to foreigners; mining and agricultural industry was scarcely thought of; invitations were made to the world at large to come and partake of the wealth which the former offered to the enterprising capitalist, and the latter was consigned almost exclusively to the forced labor of the slave population; both being attended by too great trouble on the part of their natural owners, to care minding about; and an extraordinary stress was laid on the development of the resources of the country by foreigners, which would enable the natives to live at ease without the obligation of putting their hand to work so far inferior to their habits.

"For the first sixteen years this indolent system was indulged in, mingled occasionally with scenes of bloodshed and civil war, in order to acquire a mastery over the expiring elements of former greatness, the only step made toward opening up the resources of the country being confined to the establishment about the year 1830, of the nitrate industry in the province of Tarapaca."

II.—THE DISCOVERER OF GUANO.

The narrative from which we have just quoted continues:

"In the beginning of the year 1830, Alexandre Cochet, a Frenchman, a chemist, and a man of superior information, occupied himself in the laborious work of manufacturing nitrate of soda in a small oficina in the above-named province; and being a man of quick intelligence, and a careful observer, he soon came to understand that the valuable properties contained in the guano—an article only known to the native cultivators of the soil—would be eminently useful as a restorative to the exhausted lands of the old continent. With this idea, he made himself completely master of the mode of application adopted by the Indians and small farmers in the province where he resided; and after a careful investigation of the chemical effects produced on the land by the proper application of this regenerating agent he proceeded in the year 1840 to the capital (Lima) in order to interest some of his friends in this new enterprise.

"Not without great persuasion and much hesitation, he induced his countryman, Mr. Achilles Allier, to take up the hazardous speculation and join with him in his discovery. He succeeded, however, and toward the end of the same year (1840) the firm of Quiroz & Allier obtained a concession for six years from the Government of Peru, for the exportation of all the guano existing on the afterward famous islands of Chinchi, for the sum of sixty thousand dollars.

"In consequence of the refusal of that firm to admit Cochet, the discoverer, to a participation in the profits growing out of this contract, a series of lawsuits resulted, and a paper war ensued in which Cochet was baffled. In vain he called the attention of the government to the nature and value of this discovery; he was told that he was a 'visionary.' In vain he demonstrated that the nation possessed hundreds of millions of dollars in the guano deposits; this only confirmed the opinion of the council of state that he was a madman. In vain he attempted to prove that one cargo of guano was equal to fourteen cargoes of grain; the council of State coolly told him that the guano was an article known to the Spaniards, and of no value; that Commissioner Humbolt had referred to it, and that they could not accept his theory respecting its superior properties, its value, and its probable use in foreign agriculture at a period when no new discovery could be made relative to an article so long and of so evident small value.

"Thus the Peruvian Government, instead of accepting Cochet's calculations actually prolonged the term of the concession given to Quiroz & Allier from that of six years to a period of nine, and even discussed the question of whether they should dispose of the guano at all for foreign consumption, instead of retaining it for the exclusive use of the national agriculture, regarding with perfect indifference the estimated value of the article, represented by Cochet in hundreds of millions of dollars.

"At length a new light began to drawn on the lethargic understanding of the officials in power; and as rumors continued to arrive from Europe confirming the asseverations of Cochet, and announcing the sale of guano at from ninety to a hundred and twenty dollars per ton, a degree of haste was suddenly evinced to secure once more for the public treasury this new and unexampled source of wealth. Proceedings were adopted to annul the concession given to Quiroz & Allier, and at one blow the contract with them was reduced to one year.

"The litigious spirit was again revived, and these men, who were the first to open up the guano enterprise, and who had counted upon the possession of untold millions, were summarily ejected from the deposits, and their claims canceled by the payment of ten thousand tons of guano which Congress decreed them.

"There still remained to be settled the just and acknowledged indebtedness for benefits conferred on the country by Cochet, benefits which could not be denied, as wealth and prosperity rolled in on the government and on the people; but few, if any, troubled themselves about the question, to whom they were indebted for so much good fortune, nor had time to pay particular attention to Cochet's claims.

"As in all great controversies, and in order to debate as much as possible the value of the Quiroz claims, expediency compelled the Peruvian Congress to play off the exalted pretensions of the one against the modest assertion of the other. Congress, therefore, arrived at the conclus on that if Quiroz & Allier were the first to introduce guano into Europe, as an article of commerce, they were only induced to do so by Cochet's disclosure to them of the great value of its chief element—ammonia; a secret of which he alone was the original discoverer; and this suggestion was amply confirmed by the fact that Quiroz & Allier offered it in the European markets as crude ammonia only.

"But as Cochet continued to descant on its value as a wonderful fertilizer, the subject at length engaged the attention of the heads of the mercantile houses established in Lima, and very soon competitors were found to undertake the consignment and sale of the article in England, with the offer of liberal loans to government on condition of securing the consignment. Thus, almost involuntarily, Congress was led to declare Cochet the true discoverer of the value, uses, and application of guano for European agriculture, and a grant of five thousand tons was made in his favor, September 30th, 1849, but was never paid him.

"After passing a period of years in hopeless expectancy, from 1840 to 1851, his impoverished circumstances made it necessary for him to endeavor to procure, through the influence of his own government, that measure of support in favor of his claims which would insure him a competency for his old age.

"He resolved on returning to France, after having spent the best part of his life in the service of a country whose cities had risen from desolation to splendor under the sole magic of his touch; a touch that had in it for Peru all the fabled power of the long-sought 'philosopher's stone.'"

It was this discoverer of guano who also first took quinine from Peruvian bark, and who was among the first to develop the exhaustless wealth of the great nitrate beds. For the discovery of quinine the Government of Bolivia gave him a voluntary testimonial of $10,000; for revealing to Peru $1,500,000,000 worth of guano the large-promising Peruvians have not yet found it convenient to pay to him or to his heirs a single dollar.

In 1853 Cochet returned to France; but he was then already exhausted by enthusiastic explorations in a deadly climate, and never rallied. He lingered in poverty and obscurity for eleven painful years, and died in Paris in an almshouse in 1864, entitled to an estate worth $500,000,000—the richest man in the history of the world—and was buried by the city in the potter's field; his wonderful history well illustrating afresh the fact that truth indeed is stranger than any fiction. The fancies of the Arabian Nights dale before the text of this plain biography.

III.—A SECOND DICOVERER.

About the year 1844, Jean Théophile Landreau, also a French citizen, in partnership with his brother John C. Landreau, a naturalized American citizen, upon the faith of the promised premium of 33⅓ per cent. entered upon a series of extended, systematic, and scientific explorations with a view of ascertaining whether the deposits of guano particularly pointed out by Cochet constituted the entire guano deposits of Peru, and with money furnished by his partner John, Théophile prosecuted his researches with remarkable energy, and with great success, for twelve years, identifying beds not before known to the value of not less than $400,000,000. Well aware, however, of the manner in which his fellow-countryman had been neglected by an unprincipled people, he had the discretion to keep his own counsel, and to extort from the Peruvian authorities an absolute agreement in advance, before he revealed his treasure. This agreement was, indeed, for a royalty of less than one-sixth the amount promised, but the most solemn assurances were given that the lessened amount would be promptly and cheerfully paid; its total would give the brothers each a large fortune, and payments were to begin at once.

The solemn agreement having been concluded and duly certified, the precious deposits having been pointed out and taken possession of by the profligate government, the brothers were at first put off with plausible pretexts of delay, and when these grew monotonous, the government calmly issued a decree recognizing the discoveries, accepting the treasure, and annulling the contract, with a suggestion that a more suitable agreement might be arranged in the future.

An eye-witness writes:

"The now recorded history of Cochet has been repeated, after fifteen years, in the person of Mr. Landreau, to whom the Central and Southern American republics owe something for his interesting information regarding their productions and on the canal question. Landreau has also explored Peru, and has there followed up with success that which was initiated by Cochet. He has pointed out to the Peruvian Government the numerous deposits of huano discovered by him, making an aggregate of value only to be compared with that once contained in the Chincha Islands; by this means he furnished the government with substantial material, which enabled it to raise its sinking credit and realize the financial transactions of 1870, through the contract Dreyffus, and the stupendous loans for the construction of railways. But for these signal benefits, Landreau has, as yet, not received one single cent, notwithstanding the issue of a decree recognizing in his favor six per cent. of the estimated value of his discoveries. It is easy to see that the same recognitions, and the same promises, and those pompous offers made toward Cochet have been lavishly bestowed upon Landreau, to end, probably, in a similar way, even with all his rights and titles and contracts, upon which he grounded his hopes of recompense.

"The following is a summary of his case:

"In the year 1856 Landreau revealed to the Peruvian Government the fact that he had made fresh huano discoveries. Shortly after this a conspiracy was got up against him, he was incarcerated, and his papers instantaneously disappeared from the ministerial chambers. Landreau, nothing daunted, renewed his documentary titles of 1856 in 1859, and was so far fortunate as to secure in November of 1865 an official recognition of the premium of six per cent. on the value of his deposits, by decree and public contract made in his favor, thus baffling all the hostilities raised against him, even on the part of the French legation.

"In the year 1868 the government published a list of all the deposits of huano discovered by him; and by so doing, confidence was restored, the Dreyffus contract was entered into, and loans to the amount of two hundred million of dollars were obtained.

"He could render them no further service to the government, and steps were taken to annul his contract and rid the nation of an importunate creditor. He was waylaid by President Pardo's secret police at the entrance of his house on the night of the 20th February, 1874, maltreated, stabbed, and left for dead. Since that date he has been an invalid; and, last of all, the supreme court of the country has declared itself incompetent to hear or decide his case against the government. This action, if undertaken by their judges in their superior wisdom, would have told more against them than their places on the bench are worth.

"After twenty-three years of patient labor, of listening to inexhaustible propositions, and of vain attempts at a settlement, Landreau has succeeded in tiring out the patience of this government and the courts, who have cast him off with the pleasant decree that he may look for justice in the manner and form in which it may seem most convenient for him. Such is the way they manage these small things in Peru."

The complacency with which the Peruvian judiciary evade an uncomfortable issue, and relieve themselves of a too successful plaintiff will appear best from the official records.

The contract grudgingly made with Landreau to secure his secret contained a clause confining him for all purposes of redress to the Peruvian courts. With this limitation in mind, the professional reader will not fail to enjoy the brief of plaintiff's attorney, and the opinions at nisi prius, general term, and the court of last resort, with the comment of eminent local counsel appended:

Transcripts from the official records in the appeal of Jean Théophile Landreau, partner of John C. Landreau, to the Tribunal Responsibilidad of Peru.

"Manuel Aribe, in the name of Jean Théophile Landreau, appearing before your excellency. with due respect has to state, that conformably with the certified copy of the document which I herewith accompany, it will be seen that on the 2d of November, 1865, the supreme decree of the 24th of October of the same year was duly constituted in an authentic public instrument, by which the supreme government accepted the denunciation which Mr. Landreau made some years before of various deposits of huano, both existing on islands and on the mainland, containing more than five millions of tons. In this decree the conditions of the acceptance of said denunciation were fixed, and these are contained in the six clauses comprehended in said decree, the same being also accepted by the grantee expressly, as was required of him by the sixth clause of the decree, by which means the contract, being then concluded, was transcribed in the legal form of a public authentic document, before Don Claudio José Suarez, notary public. As your excellency will observe, by the first clause, my constituent assumed the obligation to make known to the supreme government and present a list of the deposits of huano he had denounced, delivering up a similar list with that already deposited in the English, French, and United States legations.

"These deposits were not known in Peru as deposits of huano, and this is manifest from the fact that in the course of the examination of the papers an official order was issued to consign in them a list of all the known deposits of huano up to that date, which was done at the request of my constituent in order to avoid future questions.

"Your excellency will also observe that by the 2d clause the premium to be awarded him was as follows: 10 per cent. upon the net product of huano, if this did not exceed a million of tons; 8 per cent. upon that which exceeded one million and did not reach two millions; 4 per cent. upon what exceeded three and did not reach four millions, and 2 per cent. upon all that exceeded four and did not reach five millions, and any quantity in excess of this latter to bear no premium whatever. Hence arises the right of my constituent to 10 per cent. of the net product on the number of tons of huano extracted and sold from the denounced deposits comprehended in the list delivered, and which the supreme government caused to be published in the official journal of the capital. (Peruano 31 dicr. 1868.)

"Your excellency will also observe that by the 3d clause my constituent was obliged to limit proceedings relative to the fulfillment of his contract to the action of the tribunal of Peru; for which reason he comes now before your excellency's court as being the judicial authority constituted to pronounce judgment on the contract celebrated with the supreme government, according to the fourth section of the 18th article of the Tribunal Regulations.

"Your excellency will further observe that by the 4th clause it is prohibited on the part of my constituent or his representatives to interfere directly or indirectly in the contracts of consignment or others which the supreme government may celebrate regarding huano from the said deposits, it being established that his right is limited to demand the part which, according to the respective accounts, appertains to him according to the percentage already indicated.

"In the 5th clause it is stipulated that the working of the deposits rests at the will of the supreme government, and in the 6th and last clause that if it can be clearly proved that there existed in the government or in any other authority any official or private information regarding the deposits thus denounced, that this concession would lose its effect.

"There is not the least doubt therefrom, that my constituent has a perfect right to demand the 10 per cent. of the net product of the deposits he has denounced, and which are consigned in the lists presented to the minister of finance and accepted by the supreme government, ordered to be published, and were published in the Peruano of the 31st of December, 1868, and that the account of sales of huano will serve to ascertain the selling prices agreeably to the stipulation contained in the 4th clause of said contract.

"Well, then, as my constituent desired to avoid any questions whatever, he applied to the supreme government for the exhibition of the account of sales of the huano taken from the deposits of Ballestas and Chanavaya; and as he has been unable to obtain any answer to his representations, he is under the hard but indispensable necessity of appearing before your excellency's court in order to require delivery of such accounts, so as to be able to exact the payment of the 10 per cent. on the net price of huano sold, as he is entitled to upon the first million of tons.

"Since July, of 1870, I have to state, as I am so instructed latterly, that the Islands of Ballestas have been worked, and, as appears from the publication of the Patria newspaper of 20th of October, 1874, that 57 cargoes have been shipped to foreign countries from these islands—57 cargoes with 76,771 tons of huano. Besides this quantity, and according to the official journal El Peruano of the 23d July, 1870, there have been taken from the Ballestas 125,000 tons of huano for the purposes of the national agriculture. Ballestas is one of the deposits denounced by my principal, and is included in his list under the number 15. From Chanavaya there has been taken 137,000 tons of huano, as appears from the reports before the central junta of engineers of this capital, and Chanavaya is included in his list under number 33. I understand also that there are other deposits working which were denounced by my principal. It being a right, according to my principal, to take 10 per cent. of the net proceeds of the huano sold, it appears evident that his action is open to solicit the exhibition or presentation of said account sales on the part of the supreme government, in order that he may make the demand for his 10 per cent. To this end I implore your excellency to admit the certified copy of the power of attorney conferred on me as well as that of the contract made between the supreme government and my constituent, and judging of its merits, especially those of the 4th clause, as well as from the argument adduced, your excellency will order a missible to be passed to the supreme government to the effect that the accounts of sales of huano taken from the deposits called the Ballestas and Chanavaya be remitted, as well as of that taken from the other deposits denounced by my principal, which have been worked. I ask justice.

"MANUEL ARIBE.

"LIMA, 21*st June*, 1875.

"NOTE.—The missible above referred to was passed to the supreme government, was replied to, and all the documents were remitted to the supreme court, admitting and submitting to its jurisdiction.

"Sentence of the first hall judging in the first instance.

"LIMA, 19*th February*, 1876.

"With the opinion of the attorney-general, and seeing that the petition of the procurator of Mr. Jean Théophile Landreau is not comprised in any of the cases designated in the 18th article of the Regulations of the Tribunals, which treat of the special jurisdiction of this supreme court, it is declared out of place what has been solicited in this petition; allowing the petitioner to make use of his right how and where he may see it convenient. Sign manual of the three judges, Cossio, Arenas, Cisneros. Lauer, secretary.

"Sentence of the second hall judging in appellation.

"LIMA, May 23, 1876.

"In view of the process and previous sentence, and taking into consideration that this court ought to abstain from interfering in causes in which it is not competent to judge, and that by the 18th article of the Regulations of the Tribunals (clause 4th) it only can take cognizance of the law pleas which arise out of contracts celebrated by the supreme government, that is to say, as to the interpretation, validity, or nullity of such, to which class that preferred by Jean Théophile Landreau does not correspond, the court confirms the sentence appealed by which this court declares itself incompetent, leaving Landreau his right perfectly free to use it where and how he may see it convenient. They return the process. Signed by Judges Alvarez, Munoz, Vidaurre, and Oviedo.

"Sentence of the tribunal of responsibility judging in the last instance.

"THE ATTORNEY-GENERAL'S REPORT.

"The attorney-general of this high tribunal says that the minister of finances in his exposition at page 233 (anterior process) admits the existence of a contract made, and of a premium agreed to on the part of the supreme government in favor of Mr. Jean Théophile Landreau, indicating at the same time 'that the petition presented by him before the supreme court relative to delivery of accounts, or exhibition of documents, is premature, because other persons dispute this premium, and it is necessary for the government to know who is the person entitled to claim it with a legitimate right.'

"In view of this statement the attorney-general believes that the supreme court ought to decide in this case, whether the petition of Landreau is a legal one or not, treating the question as an incident relative to the contract, and mentioned at page 233, and to which the 4th clause of the 18th article of the Regulations of the Tribunals is applicable, and opines that the supreme sentence registered at page 228 and page 233 of the anterior process is null.

"HEROS.

"LIMA, September 17, 1878.

"SENTENCE.

"With the report of the attorney-general, they declare there is no nullity in the sentences of the supreme court under date of 23d of May, 1876. Confirmatory of that of 19th of February of the same year, in which it is declared to be out of place, the request of Mr. Jean Theophile Landreau in his petition at page 220, and they return the process. Signed, Garcia & Garcia, Pino, Lizarraga, Velarde, Gomez, Sanchoz, Benavidez, Jugunza, Manuel Pation, secretary.

"CONSULTATION OF FOUR JURISCONSULTS.

"Doctors Man'l W. Chipote, M. Arnezaga, Cecilio Corzo, and S. Caceres, state the following in their consultations:

"1st. That conformably with the 4th clause of the 18th article of the regulations of the Tribunals, the supreme court is the only competent tribunal to judge of the disputes which result from contracts made between the government and individuals.

"2d. That being their duty to pronounce judgment on the incidents which rise out of the law pleas and contracts, the supreme court as well as the tribunal of responsibility have committed a grave denial of justice against Landreau declaring themselves incompetent the first and confirming the second, this sentence respecting Landreau's petition in which he asked for the delivery or exhibition of accounts according to the law of the country.

"3d. That the denial of justice appears much more flagrant, inasmuch as the supreme court and the tribunal of responsibilities have delayed their sentence for three years and four months, when the law only allows them a term of forty days to pronounce sentence in the last instance.

"(Article 1748, Civil Code)."

The results of this litigation had the effect of canceling the restriction in the original contract, the courts concurring in "allowing the petitioner to make use of his right how and when he may see it convenient."

He "saw it convenient" next to invoke the aid of his own government—France—but influences which it is unnecessary to define here easily thwarted his application in that quarter.

After that, application was made to the United States legation, and ultimately to Congress, and the history of these negotiations will sufficiently appear from the official documents next following:

I.

[Forty-fifth Congress, third session. House of Representatives, Ex. Doc. No. 35.]

CLAIM OF JOHN C. LANDREAU.

Message from the President of the United States transmitting a communication from the Secretary of State in reference to the claim of John C. Landreau against the Government of Peru.

JANUARY 24, 1879.—Referred to the Committee on Foreign Affairs and ordered to be printed.

To the House of Representatives:

In answer to the resolution of the House of Representatives of the 7th instant, I transmit herewith a report from the Secretary of State, with its accompanying papers.

R. B. HAYES.

WASHINGTON, January 24, 1879.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE, Washington, January 23, 1879.

To the President:

The Secretary of State, to whom was referred the resolution of the House of Representatives, of the 7th instant, requesting the President, if not incompatible with the public interest, to furnish to that House "an abstract of such correspondence and other papers as may be on file in the State Department touching the claim of John C. Landreau against the Government of Peru," has the honor to submit the following report and accompanying papers in answer to the resolution.

This claim originates in alleged extensive discoveries of guano deposits, in localities previously unknown or unworked, made within Peruvian jurisdiction between the years 1844 and 1856, by Jean Théophile Landreau, then and still a French subject. Under the compendium of old Spanish law, known as the "Nueva Recopilacion," which forms the basis of the legislation of Peru, and under specific enactments to that end, it is claimed that the discovery of property belonging to the state is to be rewarded by the payment of one-third of its value to the finder. In 1856 Jean Théophile Landreau, having previously associated with himself in the enterprise his brother, John C. Landreau, an undoubted citizen of the United States, made known his discoveries to the Peruvian Government, and solicited the recompense alleged to be due therefor. Since that time the claim has been pressed with varying fortunes. Successive administrations of Peru have, by correspondence, contract, and decree, recognized from time to time the justice of the claim, in principle, and offered compensation in the form of graduated percentages on the amount of guano actually extracted from the discovered deposits, but the offers have as frequently been postponed or rescinded, and up to the present time Jean Théophile Landreau has received from the Government of Peru no compensation whatever.

The American citizenship of one of the brothers brought the claim at an early stage before this government, which, after a time, recognized the justice of the claim of John C. Landreau to a share in the profits of his brother's enterprise, and instructed the minister of the United States at Lima to use his good offices unofficially in his behalf. The correspondence and papers in the case which have accumulated in the Department during the last fifteen years or more, amount to some hundreds of documents, many of them of considerable length, but which are, for the most part, immaterial as elements of the "abstract" called for by the resolution. Most of the points of interest in determining the American citizenship of John C. Landreau, and his right to participate in the recompense claimed by his brother, are contained in an opinion, submitted on the 16th of June, 1874, to the then Secretary of State, Mr. Fish, by the examiner of claims of the Department of State, Henry O'Connor, esq. A copy of the material part of that opinion is herewith transmitted as coming within the purview of the resolution. A copy of the instruction addressed by the Department, on the 25th of July, 1881, to the United States minister at Lima, Mr. Francis Thomas, in which he was, pursuant to the opinion of the examiner of claims, instructed to use his good offices in the adjustment of the claim, is also transmitted.

At the time of Mr. O'Connor's opinion, the French Government had but imperfectly supported the claims of its own citizen, Jean Théophile Landreau, owing, it is represented, to the unfavorable influence exerted by its representatives in Peru. It is now understood that that government is disposed to take action on the claim, as will appear from a report of Mr. Gibbs, the present minister of the United States at Lima, dated June 20th, 1877, giving a succinct abstract of the history of the case as shown by the files of his legation, and its situation at the time, which report is also appended in compliance with the resolution. The present status of the claim is believed to be practically unchanged, except so far as it may be strengthened by the presentation of additional proof of the joint interest of John C. Landreau in his brother's scheme.

All of which is respectfully submitted,

WM. M. EVARTS.

List of papers.

1. Opinion of the examiner of claims. June 16th, 1874. [Extract.]
2. Mr. Fish to Mr. Thomas. No. 92. July 25th, 1874.
3. Mr. Gibbs to Mr. Evarts. No. 169. Lima, June 20th, 1877.

No. 1.

BUREAU OF CLAIMS, June 16, 1874.

SUBJECT.—Claim of the brothers J. Théophile Landreau and John C. Landreau, against the Government of Peru, on account of guano discoveries made by Landreau (J. T.), in accordance with a public authorization of the government.

* * * * * * *

The Landreaus were both originally French citizens. J. Théophile Landreau, who is the active man in these Peruvian transactions, the man who made the alleged discoveries, and who dealt directly with the Peruvian authorities, is still a French citizen, never having changed his nationality. John C., his brother, an alleged partner in the Peruvian transactions, is a citizen of the United States. His certificate of naturalization, a copy of which is submitted with the papers now before me, shows that he came to the United States in 1857, being then a minor under the age of 18 years; that he was admitted to citizenship in the sixth district court of Louisiana, at New Orleans, on the 3d of June, 1867; and it further appears that he has been a resident of Hermitage, Louisiana, ever since 1857.

As it is only in virtue of this citizenship of John C. Landreau that the aid of this government may be invoked in behalf of the claim, the first important question to be established is that of John C.'s interest in the transaction, and, assuming that he has such interest, at what date he acquired it.

Upon this question Mr. Brent had submitted no papers. Among the inclosures to Mr. Thomas's present dispatch is a copy of a correspondence between the brothers Landreau, running from December, 1858, to February, 1870 (Inclosure B). The partnership of John C. with his brother Théophile in the Peruvian business forms the topic of all these letters, sixteen in number.

In letter No. 1, December 22d, 1858, Théophile advises John of his success in making rich discoveries of guano in that country, all of which he says belongs to Peru.

In No. 2, dated July 15th, 1859, Théophile says:

"For my part, I accept you as my partner in this business, as well as the advice you give regarding it, and at the same time wait with great impatience the receipt of the five thousand dollars which you say shall be sent to me."

In No. 3, January 2d, 1860, Théophile acknowledged receipt of John's letter of the 15th of October previous, handed to him by a Mr. Charles Johnson, together with a package containing 125 double American gold eagles, of $20 each, and 250 gold American eagles of $10 each, in all $6,250.

In No. 4, March 1, 1860, Théophile writing to John, refers to the opinion of a high Peruvian authority that for the discoveries made by Landreau the government ought justly to pay them a royalty of 33 per cent.

These letters, which number sixteen in all, continue on the same subject, giving a detailed account of the discoveries made, and also of the efforts to have the claim recognized and adjusted by the Peruvian Government.

These letters were not among the papers inclosed by Mr. Brent. They were evidently not taken into consideratson by him in making up his opinion on the merits of the claim. The evidence furnished by the letters in question tends to establish two material facts:

1st. That John C. Landreau had an interest in the discoveries; and,

2d. That such interest existed long anterior to the date of the concession made by the government in November, 1865.

That these two propositions were not established by proof was one of the reasons assigned by Mr. Brent for pronouncing against the claim.

3d. The most material question to be considered is the nature of the obligation of the Peruvian Government to the parties making the discoveries. It cannot, in my opinion, be viewed in the nature of a private contract. It is deducible from the public acts of Peru. Among the inclosures to this dispatch (Thomas, 61) are copies of several decrees on the subject.

No. 1, dated April 17th, 1847, reciting several laws of the republic and the further fact that many natural productions exist, etc., which do not produce any benefit to the treasury, it is enjoined upon the attorneys of the government to give notice to the discoverers, giving to them one-third part of the value of such discoveries.

No. 2, dated December 30th, 1859, is an extract from the opinion of the attorney-general, advising the minister of the treasury that he can accept the discoveries of Landreau, giving to him one-third part of the value of guano discovered, according to what is ordered in paragraph 6 of the vote of the Congress of the government, 13th February, 1833.

No. 3, October 24th, 1865, authorizes a contract with Landreau, and fixes the terms: 10 per cent. on the first million tons; 8 per cent. on the second million; 6 per cent. on the third million; 4 per cent. on the fourth million, and 2 per cent. on the fifth million; all above five millions belongs to the government, free of royalty. Neither Landreau nor any person can commence any legal proceedings before any other tribunals or authorities than those of the republic, and according to the laws of the country, renouncing expressly all diplomatic intervention.

Next follows a schedule of the discoveries made by Landreau. They appear to be extensive and of great value.

No. 5, December 12th, 1868, is a decree declaring the contract with Landreau null and void, alleging as a reason that the premium stipulated to be given him by the government is of such great amount that it can never be paid, and providing for a commissioner to examine the quality of the deposits, etc., with a view to a new contract.

The above comprises all the new facts furnished by Mr. Thomas which can be deemed material. The remaining inclosures relate to the personal issue with Brent.

Conclusion. It appears to be established :

1st. That Landreau made extensive discoveries of guano; that they were of great value, and that the benefits inured to the Government of Peru.

2d. That the explorations were undertaken by him on the faith of the decrees of the government, holding out the promise of a royalty of 33 per cent. to discoverers; expressly declaring that it was open to foreigners and citizens of the republic alike.

3d. That the discoveries made by Landreau were the result of great labor, research, and skill on his part, continued through several years.

4th. That large sums of money were expended by the Landreaus in making these discoveries, and that much of this money was furnished by John C. Landreau, a citizen of the United States, and that the money was transmitted by the latter from the United States to his brother in Peru.

5th. That the action of the Peruvian Government, as evinced by its decree of the 12th of December, 1868, declaring the previous concessions to Landreau null and void, is in effect a denial of justice and a violation of the terms of the concession.

In view of the foregoing premises, I am of the opinion that John C. Landreau should have an opportunity of asserting his claim before the tribunals of Peru, according to the terms of the decree of the 24th of October, 1865. As this remedy, however, seems to be foreclosed to him by the subsequent decree of the 12th of December, 1868, justice and equity alike demand that the Peruvian Government should agree to have the question submitted to some other tribunal, that its merits may be fully and fairly investigated, and the rights of the claimants determined, without any expression of opinion by the Department on the merits of the claim itself. It appears to me that the circumstances of the case justify its interposition on Mr. John C. Landreau's behalf, to the extent of demanding such an investigation. A reference to arbitration might be the best mode of securing an impartial hearing to both parties.

Respectfully submitted.

HENRY O'CONNOR.

No. 2.

Mr. Fish to Mr. Thomas.

No. 92.] DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, July 25, 1874.

SIR: Referring to your dispatch No. 61, of the 16th of July, 1873, and the Department's instruction No. 37, of the 18th of March previous, in relation to the claim of Mr. J. C. Landreau against the Government of Peru, I have now to inform you that in a letter recently received from Mr. Landreau, that gentleman again invokes the interposition of this government, with a view of securing for him a recognition and settlement of his claim by the Government of Peru.

You are already in possession of the facts in relation to this claim, and the documents and proofs presented by Mr. Landreau in support of it are accessible to you from the files of your legation. The claim in question being one growing out of a contract which appears to have been voluntarily entered into by Mr. Landreau's brother with the Peruvian Government, belongs to that class of claims regarding the settlement of which it is the settled practice of this government not to interfere beyond the exercise of its good offices; and even this latter action is confined to cases in which some special features of an equitable character are found to exist. Upon a recent examination of this case by the Department it has reached the conclusion that the claim of Mr. Landreau is entitled to some consideration on these grounds. You are consequently authorized to make use of your good offices, unofficially, with the Peruvian authorities in behalf of Mr. J. C. Landreau, with a view of securing for him from that government a speedy investigation and adjustment of his claim. It is also desired that you will keep the Department advised of your action in relation to the matter, and of any results that may accrue therefrom.

I am, sir, your obedient servant,

HAMILTON FISH.

FRANCIS THOMAS, Esq., etc.

No. 3.

Mr. Gibbs to Mr. Evarts.

No. 169.] LEGATION OF THE UNITED STATES,
Lima, Peru, June 20, 1877.

SIR: In answer to your dispatch, No. 62, of the 15th ultimo, referring to the Landreau claim, I have examined all the correspondence that I can find in the archives of this legation in relation to the affair, and will give you a sketch of it, so that you may judge how the case stands at present.

I find Mr. Fish wrote to Mr. Brent, the then chargé d'affaires at this legation, March 9, 1871, No. 15, inclosing a copy of a letter from J. C. Landreau, at Louisiana, dated February 23, 1871, directed to the Department, complaining of contract which he alleges that the Peruvian Government had made with him.

On the 1st of May, 1871, Mr. Brent answers in dispatch No. 256, in which he gives his ideas relative to the claim, doubting the right of the United States to use its influence in the affair. The principal reason is, in the primary agreement with Landreau, the government stipulates that no diplomatic intervention shall take place.

June 23, 1871, No. 79. Mr. Fish writes Mr. Little, then minister, saying that Mr. Brent's conclusions were approved.

January 11, 1872, No. 25. Mr. Fish writes Mr. Brent, informing him that Mr. J. C. Landreau, under date of 28th of November, 1871, from Louisiana, had written to the Department, making grave charges relative to his alleged conduct in the connection with this claim. The charges were in a letter inclosed with the dispatch, which also inclosed a copy of a letter from Mr. Brent dated at Lima, January 13, 1871, to Mr. J. Théophile Landreau, speaking favorably of the claim, and urging Mr. Landreau to return to Washington to lay the case before Mr. Fish.

February 20, 1872, No. 27. Mr. Brent to Mr. Fish, in answer to No. 25, of January 11, with explanations and denial of the charges, and also referring to various documents of which no copies exist in this legation.

April 2, 1872, No, 34. Mr. Brent informs Mr. Fish that the French Government had ordered its minister to hold no further communication with Mr. J. Théophile Landreau.

May 1, 1872, No. 31. Mr. Fish to Mr. Brent, answering No. 27, and requesting that Mr. Brent would not take any further steps in the matter.

October 28, 1872, Mr. Thomas, my predecessor, wrote to Mr. Landreau to call at the legation, as he was prepared to assist him to investigate the claim.

July 11, 1873, No. 61. A lengthy communication dated at Cumberland, Maryland, from Mr. Thomas to Mr. Fish, with a detailed account of the Landreau claim, referring to various inclosures.

May 28, 1874, No. 75. Mr. Thomas to the minister of foreign affairs. This is the first document I find where the United States take any part in the claim with the Peruvian Government. Mr. Thomas states that, at the request of Mr. Landreau, he incloses from Mr. Landreau to the minister of the treasury protesting against a decree referred to of April 21, 1874, published in the official paper about the guano deposits. Mr. Thomas states that he makes the communication to protect the interests of J. C. Landreau, an American citizen, brother of J. Théophile Landreau, the discoverer of the guano, and who had purchased in 1859 a half interest in the discoveries. Mr. Landreau, in his letter to the minister of the treasury, in his own name and of his brother, protests against the decree of April 21, and shows that the discoveries referred to were made by him, and mentioned in his lists sent in to the government in 1856 and 1859, the 2d of November, 1865, and in 1868, which were accepted by the government, December 12th of that year, as published in a supreme decree, on the 31st December, in the official paper of Lima.

May 29, 1874, No. 15. The minister of foreign affairs acknowledges the receipt of this note.

July 28, 1874, No. 92. Mr. Fish to Mr. Thomas, referring to dispatch from Mr. Thomas of July 16, 1873, says that it is one of the class of claims of which it is the settled practice of the United States Government not to interfere beyond the exercise of its good offices; but on examination the Department has reached the conclusion that the claim of Landreau is entitled to some consideration, and therefore Mr. Thomas is authorized to make use of his good offices unofficially with the Peruvian authorities on behalf of Landreau to secure a speedy invesgation and adjustment of the claim, also to keep the Department advised.

August 5, 1874. Mr. Thomas to the minister of foreign affairs, No. 87, inclosing a protest of Landreau to the minister of the treasury, that in so doing, Mr. Thomas states that he is not acting under instructions from his government, nor prepared to make a demand for the claim.

August 8, 1874, No. 121. Mr. Thomas to Mr. Fish, referring to note of 28th May to minister of foreign affairs, inclosing copy of paper filed by Landreau, showing geographical position of deposits.

September 3, 1874, No. 33. The minister of foreign affairs answers Mr. Thomas note of August 5, with Landreau's protest, taking note of the disclaimer made by Mr. Thomas of not proceeding in the name of the United States Government to prefer a claim.

September 8, 1874. Mr. Thomas to the minister of foreign affairs, claiming some sixteen letters in power of a Mr. Deboy. These letters are in the French language, addressed by Mr. J. Théophile Landreau to J. C. Landreau, the American citizen, and are evidence of his claim against his brother, or of the assistance given by him to his brother to enable him to make the discoveries of the guano-beds. Mr. Thomas claims them so as to be able to file them in this legation in proof of Mr. J. C. Landreau's right.

September 18, No. 36 The minister of foreign affairs to Mr. Thomas, acknowledging the receipt of note of September 8, and promising to notify the minister of justice of the claim.

October 13, No. 183. Mr. Thomas to Mr. Fish, inclosing copies of six letters and translations in support of Mr. Landreau's claim.

Mr. Fish to Mr. Thomas, No. 108, November 5, acknowleding receipt of No. 133, of October 13, remarks on the character of the claim, it being merely an implied contract, and that the Department did not regard such questions as of an international character, and informing Mr. Thomas that his course must be limited to unofficial good offices.

Mr. Thomas writes February 2, 1875, No. 155, informing the Department that he had received the sixteen letters that establish the right of J. C. Landreau to one-half of the profits of the guano claim.

March 12, 1875, No. 112. Mr. Thomas incloses to the minister of foreign affairs copies of the letters referred to above, stating that they are relied upon by Mr. J. C. Landreau, as proof of the right of Mr. J. C. Landreau, an American citizen, to the claim against the Peruvian Government.

May 28, No. 2. Mr. Fish, in his instructions to me on my departure from the United States to this post, says that I can proceed unofficially to use my good offices on the claim.

September 4, 1875, No. 24.—I informed the Department that I had called on the lately-appointed French minister relative to the claim. He informed me that he had instructions from his government to investigate the affair, and had received a history of the claim from Landreau which he had forwarded to his government.

This is the history of the case as it stands in the archives of this legation.

Mr. J. C. Landreau is in Paris prosecuting his claim before the French Government. The case is now before the final court here, "responsibilidad," equal to "cassation" in France, which meets seldom.

I called on the French chargé d'affaires to-day in reference to the matter. He informed me that the Duc Decazes, minister of foreign affairs in France, had written asking for the decrees given in the lower courts in 1876. This was answered January, 20, 1877. Since then nothing further had been heard from the minister. He also stated that he had written to the department of foreign affairs that he had consulted Mr. Jaquet, the attorney of Landreau, to compromise with the Peruvian Government by taking a certain sum for the claim, and that he believed it would have effect. He informed me that he understood that negotiations were under way to that end.

From my dispatch on the financial affairs of this country you may judge of the ability or probability of Peru ever being able to pay the claim, even if made good.

I am., &c.,

RICHARD GIBBS.

IV.—REPORT OF THE COMMITTEE ON FOREIGN AFFAIRS.

The Committee on Foreign Affairs, to whom was referred the petition of John C. Landreau, a naturalized citizen of the United States, who seeks the aid of the Government of the United States in furtherance of his claim against the Government of Peru, having had the same under consideration, submit the following report:

The claim of the petitioner, John C. Landreau, is set forth in his petition to Congress, and is as follows:

No. 1.

To the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled:

Your petitioner, John C. Landreau, respectfully represents:

That he is a naturalized citizen of the United States, and has resided in the State of Louisiana since the year 1857; that his brother, J. Théophile Landreau, is a citizen of France; that your petitioner and his said brother are creditors of the Government of Peru in the amount hereinafter stated; that the said amount is due to them as copartners; that their claim is founded upon and grows out of a published decree and proclamation of the said Government of Peru; that their said claim has long since been due and payable; that it has repeatedly been recognized and admitted as just and valid by different administrations of said Government of Peru; that relying upon said decree and proclamation, the said Théophile being possessed of great experience and extensive scientific knowledge, devoted years of toil and self-denial to, and expended large sums of money in the development of the theretofore hidden and unknown resources of said government; and that during this time your petitioner furnished and supplied large sums of money to the said Théophile, which were used and applied by him to the advancement of his labors aforesaid, or to satisfy indebtedness by him contracted in prosecuting said enterprise.

That the labors of said Théophile were finally crowned with success, and resulted in great material advantage to said government.

That the fruits of the discoveries made by said Théophile have been wholly appropriated by the said government, without any compensation whatever being made to him therefor; and this, notwithstanding that thereby the said government has been able to restore and sustain its credit in the financial markets of the world, and notwithstanding the wealth and prosperity of said government have been greatly increased and advanced thereby; that said claim was not paid or satisfied in the first instance, because as was alleged by said government, the sum due said Théophile by the fair and reasonable construction of the terms of said proclamation and decree was so large, as to make it beyond the ability of said government to pay or satisfy; that thereupon and thereafter, said government entered into negotiations with the said Théophile looking to the reduction of said claim to an amount within the financial ability of said government to pay and satisfy; that the said Théophile and your petitioner, impelled by equitable considerations, waived their strict and legal rights, and made concessions in the premises.

Whereupon said government on, to wit, the 24th day of October, A. D. 1865, submitted a basis of settlement which was subsequently accepted by said Théophile and your petitioner. That notwithstanding the premises, the said government thereafter refused to carry out the agreement aforesaid, but wholly disregarded the same and every part thereof, and this in violation and disregard of right and justice and of its solemn agreements and covenants. That the said Théophile and your petitioner have been at all times and are now willing to give great indulgence to the said government as to the time and manner of payment of said claim; and if said government is unable to pay said claim in cash, are willing to accept the bonds of said government bearing a moderate rate of interest and payable at some reasonable time in the future. That said claim cannot be sued upon or enforced in the judicial tribunals of said government. That the Department of State of this government, though admitting the justice and equity thereof, declines to enter into diplomatic correspondence with reference to the said claim, solely upon the ground that it arises ex contractu and not ex delicto. That your petitioner is wholly remediless in the premises, unless through the intervention in his behalf of your honorable bodies. That the principle as to the duty and right of your honorable bodies to interfere on behalf of its citizens in such cases, has been, after full consideration and inquiry, heretofore settled and determined.

And your petitioner craves leave to refer to the act of Congress, approved March 3, A. D. 1875, entitled "An act for the relief of Joseph H. Colton" (United States Statutes at Large, vol. 18, part 3, p. 661), in support of this averment. That the extent, origin, and nature of the interest of your petitioner in said claim has been fully communicated to the said Government of Peru by documents duly authenticated, and now on file with the proper department thereof.

Your petitioner submits herewith a history of the said claim, marked Exhibit J. C. L., No. 1.

Whereupon he prays that this his petition may be received and duly considered, and that he may have such relief in the premises as may be just and right.

JOHN C. LANDREAU.

The claim of the petitioner and the facts set forth therein were made the subject of an examination by Mr. Henry O'Connor, examiner of claims in the State Department, with an elaborate opinion in relation thereto, submitted to Hon. Hamilton Fish, then Secretary of State, and is herewith embraced in this report.

(Printed above.)

The official correspondence of the State Department in relation to the claim is also submitted.

(Printed above.)

From a careful perusal of the foregoing official correspondence and a consideration of the facts therein disclosed, your committee are of the opinion that the claim of John C. Landreau is entitled to and ought to receive the favorable action of Congress.

FINDING OF FACT.

The following facts appear to be true and fully established by the testimony and documents submitted:

1. That the claimant, John C. Landreau, is a lawfully naturalized citizen of the United States.

2. That he derives his interest in said claim through his brother Jean Théophile Landreau, a citizen of France.

3. That said claim is founded upon the discovery of large and valuable deposits of guano, and that said deposits were converted by the Government of Peru to its own use, without making to the Landreau brothers any compensation whatever therefor.

4. That before Jean Théophile Landreau entered upon his laborious and expensive explorations, and before the said John C. Landreau advanced the large sums of money mentioned in said official documents to his said brother, the said Government of Peru had, by published decrees and proclamations, explicitly pledged itself to reward all persons, citizens or foreigners, discovering property theretofore unknown and belonging to said Government of Peru, with one-third of the value of such property.

5. That the discoveries of the deposits of guano resulted in great material advantages to said Government of Peru.

6. That the Landreau brothers have conducted themselves toward the said Government of Peru in endeavoring to obtain an adjustment and payment of their said claim, long since due and payable, in a fair and liberal manner, and have offered to make great concessions.

7. That the said Government of Peru has repeatedly recognized the validity and justness of said claim, and its legal obligations to pay the same, but has as frequently neglected to pay the same.

8. That the legislative branch of said government has declined to intervene on behalf of said claimants, or either of them, upon the alleged ground of want of jurisdiction over the subject-matter.

9. That the judicial branch of said government has likewise refused to render any aid or assistance to said claimants, or either of them, as against said Government of Peru.

10. That the executive branch of said Government of Peru has declined to render any account to the said claimants, or either of them, of the amount or value of the said property of said claimants taken by said government and converted to its own use, or to permit said claimants, or either of them, to examine the official records of said government touching said property so used and converted as aforesaid.

11. That the said Government of Peru has denied justice to said claimants and each of them in respect to their said claim.

12. That said claim still subsists in its entirety, unpaid and unsatisfied.

13. That all attempts of the said claimants to obtain relief through amicable negotiations have wholly failed of success.

14. That the unofficial efforts of the State Department of the United States, by correspondence and by the personal efforts of the duly accredited ministers of the United States to said Government of Peru, have likewise wholly failed of success.

CONCLUSIONS OF LAW.

As to the law of the case, your subcommittee submits the following conclusions at which he has arrived, for the consideration of the committee:

1. Congress established the principle of intervention on behalf of a citizen of the United States, having a bona-fide claim against a foreign government, the payment of which was unreasonably delayed by the act of March 3d, 1875, entitled "An act for the relief of Joseph H. Colton."

REMARK.—The principle involved in this act for the relief of said Joseph H. Colton, in respect to his claim against Bolivia, is certainly broad enough to cover perfectly the case under discussion.

If there be any distinction, the claim of the Landreaus is entitled to greater consideration. The amount involved is immeasurably greater, and the delay of payment longer.

The United States and Bolivia had public treaties providing for the reference of claims to a mixed commission for adjustment at and before the passage of said act as it now has with the Government of Peru.

But no proviso of any treaty that would prevent such mixed commission to take jurisdiction of a copartnership claim, which copartnership was composed of persons of different citizenships, exists. The committee of the other house of Congress, in stating the principle that should control in such cases, say, "They entertain no doubt that whenever a foreign government clearly owes an obligation to a citizen of the United States, this government should notice the obligation and should not hesitate to assert it. So much, it is apprehended, the government may do in every such case."

2. That it has been the invariable usage of all nations from the beginning of organized societies to demand reparation of the offending nation that has committed a tortious act to the damage of one of its citizens, and to enforce such demand by reprisal, or war, if need be.

REMARK.—As soon as the deposits of guano were discovered the interests of the Landreaus attached thereto, and the conversion of the entire property to its own use by the Government of Peru, without making compensation to the discoverers, was an undoubted tort. I am unable to see any difference on principle in this case from the case of an alien mining for precious metals within the territorial limits of the Government of Peru, with the permission of that government, subject to a general law entitling the government to a royalty upon the ores that might be taken from the mines. Would it be contended for one moment that in the latter case the sovereign of the alien would not be bound by every principle of justice and international law to intervene if the foreign government, under pretense of securing the royalty, should seize and convert to its own use the entire body of the precious ore?

3. That the following are likewise well-settled principles of international law in respect to the duty of every sovereignty to enforce the claims of its citizens growing out of contracts with foreign nations:

"The promises, the conventions, all the private contracts of the sovereign are naturally subject to the same rules as those of private persons."—Vattel, § 213.

"The conventions and contracts which the sovereign, in his sovereign character, and in the name of the state, forms with private individuals of a foreign nation, fall under the rules we have laid down with respect to public treaties."—§ 214, Idem.

"When a lawful power contracts in the name of the state, it lays an obligation on the nation itself, and consequently on all the future rulers of the society."—§ 215, Idem.

"Reprisals are negative (as opposed to positive) when a state refuses to fulfill a perfect obligation which it has contracted.—Wheaton Lawrence, p. 506.

"The reclamation made on Mexico by England, France, and Spain, in 1861, seemed to pass beyond the ordinary case of reprisals for tortious spoliations and violated contracts."—Idem, p. 509.

OPINION OF MR. FIELD.

David Dudley Field, in an opinion in the Colton case referred to above, says:

"Every nation owes to its members maintenance of their rights; so long as it exacts allegiance and obedience, so long is it bound by the corresponding obligation to protect.

"This results from the relations between the citizens and the state. Commerce in its double signification of intercourse and traffic, may be lawfully carried on between one nation and its members and the other nation and its members. From this arises an obligation on the part of every nation to protect the members of other nations coming to it in their lawful commerce, and to enforce engagements made with them. The obligation of a nation can be enforced only by other nations. This results from the fact that a member of a nation cannot do it, both because he is forbidden and because he is too weak. He is forbidden by his own nation to assert his rights by violence, or to do anything for himself in respect to a foreign nation, except to resort to its tribunals and to ask of its government. Hence arise two obligations, that of Bolivia to Mr. Colton, a foreigner, to pay him the debt contracted, and that of the United States to Mr. Colton, their citizen, to enforce the obligation of Bolivia."

OPINION OF MR. EVARTS.

The present honorable Secretary of State uses language in regard to the case of Colton well worthy of the attention of the committee, not only on account of his distinguished rank as a jurist, but because of his position in the present administration:

"In the absence of any plea of inability to pay this admitted debt of the Republic of Bolivia, made in good faith and accepted as true by our own government, it seems the manifest duty of the latter to compel the payment of the money due Mr. Colton by the ordinary coercive processes known among nations and justified by international law."

President Andrew Jackson, with that high courage guided by a conscientiousness always placing him upon the highest plane of principle and justice, declared the true attitude of this government toward its citizens receiving injuries from foreign nations.

In the matter of French spoliations, he says, in his message to Congress, December, 1834:

"It is a well-settled principle of the international code that where one nation owes another a liquidated debt, which it refuses or neglects to pay, the aggrieved party may seize on the property belonging to the other, its citizens or subjects, sufficient to pay the debt, without giving just cause of war."

Wildman, in his Institutes of International Law, vol. 1, pp. 187 and 188:

"When a state refuses to repair an injury or to pay a debt, or to redress any wrong, the state that is injured may seize anything that belongs to the offending state, and detain or confiscate it in satisfaction of such wrong. For this purpose the property of all private persons forms part of the state whereof they are members, whether as native-born citizens or as persons domiciled therein. * * * As every state considers an injury to any one of its citizens as an injury to itself, it is not unjust that they should be liable for the obligation of the state, which is bound to indemnify them for any losses which may ensue."

In his great work on International Law, volume ii, page 8, Phillimore says:

The right of interference on the part of a state, for the purpose of enforcing the performance of justice to its citizens from a foreign state, stands upon an unquestionable foundation, when the foreign state has become itself the debtor of these citizens. It must of course be assumed that such state has, through the medium of its proper and legitimate organs, contracted such debt; whether that organ be the sovereign alone, according to the constitution of Russia, or the sovereign and parliament, according to the constitution of England, the debt is contracted with foreign citizens, whether in an individual or corporate capacity, constitutes an obligation of which the country of the lenders has a right to require and enforce the fulfillment."

Again, in volume ii, page 12, Phillimore says:

"The obligation of the state debtor is, if possible, yet stronger when the debt has been guaranteed by treaty; for in that case the foreign may be entitled to a preference over the domestic creditor."

Again, in volume iii, page 34, Phillimore says:

"One of the grounds of the war between the United States and Mexico was the non-payment of debts due from the government of that country to citizens of the United States."

As to obligations of governments, Vattel in his Law of Nations, page 161, says:

"We have the right to obtain justice by force, if we cannot obtain it otherwise, or to pursue our rights by force of arms." * * *

In the case of Marbury v. Madison, Chief-Justice Marshall, one of the ablest and purest jurisconsults of any age or country, said:

"The very essence of civil liberty consists in the right of every individual to claim the protection of the laws whenever he receives an injury. One of the first duties of government is to afford that protection. In Great Britain the King himself is sued in the respectful form of a petition, and he never fails to comply with the judgment of his court."

Again, in the case of Ogden v. Saunders, Judge Marshall said:

"It is no objection to the principle that the injured party may be the weaker. * * * Every man retains the right to acquire property, to dispose of that property according to his own judgment, and to pledge himself for a future act.

"These rights are not given by society, but are brought into it. The right of coercion is necessarily surrendered to government, and this surrender imposes on government the correlative duty of furnishing a remedy."

Every attentive reader of history and observer of current events knows that a great advance has been made within the last five years by all civilized nations in the direction of extending protection or furnishing redress toward its citizens wherever they may have been induced to go for the purpose of carrying on commerce or transacting business; that for these reason, armies have been collected and fleets equipped at great expense; that to-day the financial administrations of the Sultan of Turkey and Khedive of Egypt are in the hands of the representatives of certain of the great European powers and being conducted in a manner to afford the greatest benefit to their creditor citizens and the largest security for their claims.

RESOLUTION.

The committee therefore recommend the adoption of the following resolution:

Resolved by the Senate and the House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the petition of John C. Landreau, the report made thereon by the Committee of Foreign Affairs, and the accompanying papers, be transmitted to the Executive Department, with the request that the President take such steps as in his opinion may be proper, and in accordance with international law, to secure to the said John C. Landreau a final settlement and adjustment of his claim against the Government of Peru; and that, if in his opinion it is proper to do so, the President invite the Government of France to co-operate with the United States in his behalf.

V.—ACTION OF THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

FEBRUARY 21, 1880.

Mr. HILL. The Committee on Foreign Affairs, to whom was referred the petition of John C. Landreau, a naturalized citizen of the United States, for the aid of the Government of the United States in the furtherance of his claim against the Government of Peru, have directed me to submit a report, accompanied by a joint resolution, which I hope may be put on its passage now. It does not involve the expenditure of a single dollar, but simply grants in behalf of a citizen of the United States the good offices of the President and Secretary of State in the settlement of a claim against a foreign government. I hope there will be no objection to the passage of this joint resolution.

The joint resolution (H. R., No. 219) was read a first and second time, was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

MR. HILL moved to reconsider the vote by which the joint resolution was passed; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.—Congressional Record, February 21*st*, 1880, p. 15.

VI.—ACTION OF THE SENATE.

FEBRUARY 24, 1880.

Mr. EATON. I am instructed by the Committee on Foreign Relations, to whom was referred the joint resolution (S. R. No. 14) for the relief of John C. Landreau, to ask to be discharged from the further consideration of this matter. It relates to a contract between a citizen of the United States and the Peruvian Government, and it is the opinion of the committee that it is a matter entirely within the power of the Executive Department.

Mr. VOORHEES. I ask that it be placed on the Calendar with the adverse report.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair hears no objection to that request, and that order will be entered.—Congressional Record, February 24, 1881, p. 38.

VII.—THE GUANO DEPOSITS.

There are no guano deposits of importance in the world, except the Peruvian, and all the Peruvian deposits were discovered and placed at the government disposal by Cochet and Landreau.

The discoveries of Cochet were officially enumerated in the following decree:

Supreme Decree, declaring the Guano Deposits known to the Government, May 7, 1852.

José Rufino Echenique, President of the Republic:

Considering

That it is necessary to exercise the greatest vigilance over the guano deposits, the property of the government, in order to prevent smuggling, or the fraudulent shipping of guano, which forms to-day one of the greatest resources of the government;

That notwithstanding the repeated orders which have been given, that the birds which breed on said islands should not be molested by fishermen, or others, who may come near said islands, and in this manner disobeying said regulations, to the prejudice of these deposits of guano and their preservation;

That the above-mentioned abuses render it indispensable that the government should designate the authorities who should carry out the orders of the government in relation to the guano deposits on said islands;

That the said deposits of guano being at great distance, one from the other, they cannot be placed under the control of one agent, and it appears most natural that they should belong to the districts on the coast to which they are nearest; it is decreed:

ARTICLE 1. The guano deposits belonging to the republic will form part of the districts or provinces as follows:

The Lobos Islands, near the point of same name, situated in 5 degrees 13 minutes south latitude, shall belong to the district of Paita and province of Piura.

The small islands of Lobos de Tierra, and its adjacent deposits, situated in 6 degrees 27 minutes south latitude, shall belong to the district of Lambayeque and province of Lambayeque.

The islands of Lobos de Fuera, situated in 6 degrees 57 minutes south latitude, shall belong to the district of Eten and province of Chiclayo

The Malabrigo Islands, situated in 7 degrees 49 minutes 11 seconds south latitude, shall belong to the district of Paijan and province of Trujillo.

The islands of Santa and the Terror Islands, situated between 9 degrees 11 minutes and 9 degrees 17 minutes 11 seconds south latitude, shall belong to the district of Santa and province of Santa.

The islands of Don Martin de Mazorques and Pelado, situated between 11 degrees 4 minutes and 11 degrees 25 minutes 11 seconds, shall belong to the district of Huacho, province of Chancay.

The islands of Pescadores and Ancon, situated in 11 degrees 46 minutes, shall belong to the district of Carabayllo, province of Lima.

The island of Hormigas, situated in 11 degrees 56 minutes, shall belong to the province of Callao.

The three Chincha Islands, situated in 13 degrees 32 minutes 11 seconds south latitude, shall form a separate district, and will be under a governor to be appointed.

ARTICLE 2. For the care and custody of the above islands there shall be employed a sufficient number of guards, to be changed for others as may be deemed necessary.

ARTICLE 3. On the principal and best situated of these islands there shall be constructed houses, which are comfortable, for the guards to live in, and there shall be also stationary boats or launches which may be necessary to keep up a communication between these islands and the coast.

ARTICLE 4. A vessel of war shall be employed specially to cruise between said guano islands, and make periodical visits, carrying monthly provisions and water sufficient to furnish all the guards who may reside thereon.

ARTICLE 5. The prefects and governors of said provinces are charged with the execution of the said regulations, and the strict observance of them by those concerned, and shall render a careful account of what may happen at the islands under their charge, and cause to be observed all of the foregoing resolutions given in reference to said islands.

Communicate and publish.

Lima, May 7th, 1852.

JOSÉ RUFINO ECHENIQUE.

The discoveries of Landreau are next enumerated:

List and geographical description of the guano deposits discovered and made known by M. Théophile Landreau, in the years 1856 and 1859, which were enumerated in his petition to the supreme government on the third day of November, 1865, and are contained in the lists that, since 1866, have been deposited at the legations of France, England, and the United States of America.

DEPOSITS TO THE NORTH OF LIMA.

1. A point called Los Chinos, in 9 degrees 13 minutes south latitude. In this place there exists a deposit of some magnitude.
2. The port of Bay Samaco, in 9 degrees 15 minutes south latitude. A short distance to the south, and in front of the open coast, there is a space of ground more than 500 yards long by more than 100 yards broad covered with guano.
3. The small Bay of Chimbote, in 9 degrees 6 minutes south latitude. A large deposit of guano, principally on the same site occupied by the huts of the fishermen.
4. In the plain which extends between Nepeña and Santa there is a space of more than a league in length, La Cruz del Medio, where guano is found.
5. The islands of Cornegos, in 9 degrees 53 minutes south latitude.
6. The islands of Viuda, in 9 degrees 23 minutes south latitude.
7. The islands of Tortuga, in 9 degrees 21 minutes south latitude.
8. The islands of Coesco, in 9 degrees 14 minutes south latitude.
9. The islands of Blanca, in 9 degrees 5 minutes south latitude.
10. The islands of Corcobado, in 8 degrees 57 minutes south latitude.
11. The islands of La Viuda, in 8 degrees 54 minutes south latitude.
12. The islands of Decheo and cape of the same name, in 8 degrees 46 minutes south latitute.
13. Between the fortress of Pativilca and the port of Huarmey, and between Huancha and Callao, are a few deposits of guano of inferior quality, which do not deserve attention.

DEPOSITS TO THE SOUTH OF LIMA.

14. The little island of Asaia, in 12 degrees 48 minutes south latitude.
15. The islands Blanca and Ballestas, in 13 degrees 44 minutes south latitude.
16. The islands San Gayan, in 13 degrees 50 minutes south latitude.
17. The islands of Zaráte, in 13 degrees 59 minutes south latitude.
18. Morros de Carretas, in 14 degrees 10 minutes south latitude.
19. Island and Morras de Viejas, 14 degrees 16 minutes south latitude.
20. Small island and bay of San Nicolás, 15 degrees 15 minutes south latitude.
21. Port of Lomas, in 15 degrees 32 minutes south latitude.
22. Puntas de Lobos, in 16 degrees 9 minutes south latitude.
23. Point and small island of Atico, in 16 degrees 4 minutes south latitude.
24. Point and small island of Pescadores, 16 degrees 24 minutes south latitude.
25. Islands and coast of Acoña, in 16 degrees 30 minutes south latitude.
26. On all the coasts from the point of Cornejos to Islay there are small quantities of guano at short intervals, the same as from the point of Mejia to the coast of Cocotea.
27. From the point called Capilla to the Cabo de Lobos inclusive; guano is found likewise in the neighborhood of the brook de Camarones toward 19 degrees 13 minutes south latitude.

28. In Pisagua, a small bay to the north of Inique, there is a deposit of guano, with sand in some parts, but in sufficient abundance.

29. At the point and island of Mejillones, situated in 19 degrees 51 minutes south latitude, there is also guano in considerable quantity.

30. The islands of Coluine, Pajaros, and others to the south of Iquique contain small quantities of white guano, which might serve as a manure for the agriculture of the country.

31. At the plain called Cochapampa, situated at the foot of the town of Iquique, and which extends from the sea to the brook of Huancata, and the hill Parada, extending toward Huan-Tajaya, are various places where great deposits of guano are found mingled with carbonates, nitrates, and chlorides of soda and potash.

32. From the cañon of Chursmara, or Chuquniata, up to Punta-Gruesa inclusive, many ravines full of excellent guano are found; among others we may cite those of Lobo Culata, Sacramento, Aminas, Morello, Guajes, Colorado, etc.—ravines that are 500 or 600 yards long by 100 or 150 yards wide. All these deposits are covered by a crust and thick coating of sand.

33. Between the coves of Chucumata, in 20 degrees 31 minutes south latitude, and the Pabellon de Pica, known to the state, exist large deposits of guano, especially on a kind of low peninsula situated in 20 degrees 56 minutes, more or less, south latitude, on the slope of which is found an eminence which is all guano.

34. From the ravine of Pico to the point Chomoche inclusive, are found more than 30 ravines and deep breaks of 400 or 600 yards in length each, by 150 yards in breadth and 20 or 30 yards in depth, all pure guano of the best quality.

AMOUNT OF GUANO IN THE LANDREAU DISCOVERIES.

The La Patria of October 20th, 1874, says that the guano exported to Europe from the island of Ballestas up to that date was 76,771 tons, taken by 57 ships.

According to the report of the Junta Central of Engineers, a copy of which has been distributed by the Peruvian Government, 137,500 tons of guano had been exported from the beds at Chananaga (No. 33 of Landreau's list).

It is a well-known fact that at this date there are over 20 ships loading at the Vieja Islands. This island, No. 19 of Landreau's list, contains upward of 400,000 tons of guano.

According to the Nacional of June 1st, 1875, it appears that the Government of Peru had opened to the agriculture of the country the following guano beds:

1. All those to the south of Arequipa (except Pabellon de la Pica, which belonged to the government), comprised under Nos. 27 and 25 in Landreau's list, containing upward of 800,000 tons of guano.

2. One of the small islands situated to the north of Huarmey, No. 5 of Landreau's list, containing about 10,000 tons.

3. Two of the deposits in the vicinity of Port Lomas, containing at least 20,000 tons each, and marked Nos. 21, 22 and 7 in Landreau's list.

4. One of each of the deposits of Mala and Asaia, numbered respectively 14 and 4, containing no less than 800,000 tons.

VIII.—PERUVIAN TACTICS.

A summary outline of Landreau's negotiations with the faithless executive of a faithless people, prior to the execution of the contract which was only held out as a bait to conceal the hook which should be his ruin, will throw valuable light upon the future as well as upon the past.

For nearly twelve years this patient scientist pursued his explorations, braving dangers and innumerable privations, till his labors were crowned with a large success, and he not only discovered but surveyed and located a large number of valuable guano deposits of vast extent hitherto wholly unknown, probably from the fact that they existed in regions previously deemed inaccessible, and thus without the pale of civilization.

At once upon his return in 1856, he informed the government of his discoveries, and upon the 29th of July in that year presented himself in person at the treasury and filed a written declaration to that effect.

On the 30th of December, 1859, after a prolonged absence, he renewed his application and filed a petition which was admitted January 5th, 1860.

"To the Minister of Finance:

"YOUR EXCELLENCY: Jean Théophile Landreau, a native of France and a resident of this city, with due respect presents himself before your excellency, and states that he has discovered certain guano deposits on the coast of Peru, and is ready to point out the locations and bring samples of the guano immediately the government informs him what his recompense will be, soliciting at the same time a list of the deposi's known to the government up to this date.

"J. T. LANDREAU.

"LIMA, December 30*th*, 1859."

The minister of finance indorsed the petition as follows: "Let the director-general of finance report."

The report of the director-general of finance, to whom the petition was thus referred, states the necessity of proving that the deposits of guano mentioned in the petition were bona fide new discoveries.

It is further stated in the report that the government was aware that the coast district of Peru abounded in deposits of guano, and that all belonged to the state; but in case Landreau's petition referred to deposits that were new, then it would be but fair to agree to his receiving a share as the discoverer.

The petition was next sent to the attorney-general, who reported as follows:

"The attorney-general is of the same opinion as the director-general of finance, as to the fact of verifying whether the deposits of guano declared by Jean Théophile Landreau have or not been known up to this day; it is therefore necessary to make such a search, and in consequence this office is of the opinion that if, after having made the verification by means of the certificates and reports of the state department, it should happen that the said deposits are unknown, your excellency will then be able to accept the declarations of Landreau, and notify him, as a reward, of the allowance of a third part of the guano discovered, conformably to the 6th paragraph of the decision of the council of state of February 13th, 1833, vol. iv. of the collection of laws by Quiroz, and which besides is the general law applicable to this matter. Your excellency can therefore order a suitable verification to be made, and decide, according to the contents of this report, or as your excellency will deem advisable.

"VILLARAN.

"LIMA, January 18*th*, 1860."

Finally the petition was returned by the department of national credit upon the 25th of February, 1860, when Landreau's request for a list of the deposits known to the government was declined upon the plea that such a list did not exist in that office; but the demand being firmly persisted in, a list was opportunely discovered, and in November, 1862, the government published a list of all the known deposits of guano at that date.

Landreau having learned that other persons were claiming his discoveries, renewed his application on the 2d of December, 1862, and demanded a copy of his former petition to the government.

On the 20th of December, 1862, the government furnished a further list of guano deposits then known to exist, and Landreau then drew the attention of the government to the fact that the deposits discovered by him were not mentioned in either of these government lists, and that he was therefore clearly entitled to the one-third share promised to original discoverers.

On the 24th of May, 1864, Landreau, hearing that his original petition and other documents relating to it were lost, obtained a certified copy from the French legation, and handed it to the government, with a view of having all subsequent judgments and reports appended to it.

Among the documents thus handed in there appeared a list of the deposits known to the government, and Landreau again drew the attention of the government to the fact that the deposits discovered by him were not mentioned in the government list. And convinced that his case was good in law, and supported by the opinion of the attorney-general and other authorities, he hesitated no longer in indicating the exact position of his newly discovered deposits, and requested the government to have them surveyed and his claim estimated.

At length on the 24th of October, 1865, his claim was in effect accepted by the government, and confirmed by a decree granting him a recompense upon the following terms:

Upon the first million tons of guano, 10 per cent.; upon the second million, 8 per cent.; upon the third million, 6 per cent.; upon the fourth million, 4 per cent.; upon the fifth million, 2 per cent.

It was understood that the remuneration offered to Landreau should not extend beyond the above terms.

The terms and conditions mentioned in the last section were accepted by Landreau, and in consequence a contract was drawn up between the Peruvian Government and Landreau, and signed in the presence of Notary Claudius José Suaroz, of Lima.

Upon the following day the sealed envelope containing the lists of deposits discovered by Landreau (which had been given to the ministry December 30th, 1859) was opened by the minister of finance, who retained possession of it by virtue of the clause in the contract to that effect.

IX.—PERUVIAN REPUDIATION.

Shortly after the signing of this contract the revolution of Pardo took place, followed by a series of political convulsions, which caused this question to remain in statu quo, until Jos. Balta became president of the republic.

At this time the treasury being exhausted and the government in great financial straits, it was found necessary to devise some means to meet the approaching obligations and relieve the financial pressure.

At this juncture President Balta sent for Landreau and informed him that during the revolution the list of newly discovered deposits had been lost, and requested him to furnish it another copy, frankly explaining that he relied upon these deposits to save the credit of the republic, and to tide over the financial trouble; the press of England complaining that the deposits of guano in Peru were exhausted, and demanding new security for present and prospective bondholders. The times were critical, and President Balta promised to pay Landreau not only the terms stipulated in the signed contract but offered to add the rate of 60 per cent. upon all deposits in excess of five millions of tons.

This promise was solemnly made in the presence of Messrs. Garcia Calderon, Pedro Galvez, and La Rosa, the ministers of finance, state, and justice.

Upon the day following—that is, upon December 9th, 1868—confiding in this solemn executive assurance, Landreau handed to the minister of finance a new copy of the list.

How much a Peruvian pledge is worth the confiding foreigner better knew when, just three days later, Balta and Calderon published a fresh decree accepting the new discoveries and annulling the discoverer's contract.

The decree of annulment was published on the 31st December, 1868, in the official gazette, El Peruano. This decree bore date December 12th, 1868, and included a list of the deposits discovered by Landreau, in which the fact that he was the discoverer was expressly recognized.

Further action was taken on the 2d of January, 1869, when the minister of finance named the commission to survey Landreau's deposits and to take possession.

Before the commission could effect its object, however, Mr. Calderon retired from the ministry of finance and was replaced by Mr. Pierola, who not only repudiated the contract of 1865, but also the supreme decree, and stopped the commission from setting out. Finally he opened for exportation the islands of Ballestas, they being No. 15 in Landreau's list, and sent to England, France, and Germany copies of the Peruano, dated 31st of December, 1868, containing the decree of the 12th of the same month, and the list of deposits discovered by Landreau.

This decree and list was reproduced in the London Times and other important journals in Europe, and produced the desired effect of resuscitating the credit of the Peruvian Government and disposing European capitalists to entertain the financial projects about to be submitted to them.

It further appears that later, according to the El Comercio of the 3d of December, 1873, the list of Landreau's deposits was again, by order of the government of Mr. Pardo, reprinted in the London Times of October 25th, 1873, when increased improvement in the Peruvian bonds was manifested.

The decree of repudiation contained an intimation that a new contract might be made with Landrean after a resurvey of his discoveries, and in the journal El Nacional of December 12th, 1873, we find that upon the 5th of that month the government issued a decree ordering a commission of engineers to examine the islands and coast of Peru, to measure and value such deposits of guano as they might find.

This commission set forth without Landreau, and that fact coming to the knowledge of Count de Bellonet, the French representative, he called upon a member of the government and verbally demanded an explanation.

He was answered by M. Riveaguero, minister of foreign relations, that the government had not considered it necessary that Landreau should accompany the commission, because it was believed that the deposits in question were of little value. He added, however, that if the commission should find that they were of any considerable value Landreau would be largely recompensed.

A SUGGESTIVE OFFER.

The next output of this model executive was a published offer of a premium of five per cent. to any adventurer who would establish a claim adverse to Landreau's.

Upon the sole credit of these new deposits, which, but for the twelve years' toil and large expense of the Landreau brothers would still be unknown, the Peruvians not only escaped imminent bankruptcy, but even obtained fresh loans aggregating not less than $200,000,000. These loans were based upon official surveys of European engineers, who reported the deposits to contain at least 10,000,000 tons of guano, worth at least $380,000,000. Landrean's one-third—for the repudiation of the special contract restored to him his original right to one-third—is worth, upon this basis, not less than $125,000,000.

X.—PERUVIAN LOGIC.

Three years after the opinion of Attorney-General Villaran, recognizing as a matter of course Landreau's right to the statutory one-third of his discoveries, his successor in office deems it opportune to enter upon an original disquisition, which should not be left in relative obscurity. But we have only room for abstracts and extracts. This eminent logician recites that:

"Landreau, having asked what recompense would reward his discoveries, was answered by Dr. Villaran on the 18th of January, 1860, that, according to his opinion, he was entitled to one-third part of the value of the property discovered, this being the general practice and in accordance with the 6th paragraph of the vote of the council of state, February 13th, 1833; but it must be borne in mind that said premium is only meant for those who should discover national property which is unlawfully possessed, for as soon as it becomes the domain of private right, there is a possibility of having to run the risk of seeing said usurpation legitimized by a transfer to a second person, who, receiving it in good faith, might, after a certain number of years, consider it as prescribed property. Furthermore, the risk run by the nation of losing said property is only too evident should it not be discovered in due time, and in consequence the necessity of stimulating discoverers with a heavy premium. Again, such property as deposits of guano is not exposed to individual appropriation, for it is held as national property, though it be unknown for years, and this fact destroys the cause for the allowance of the one-third in question; besides which there is no reason for holding out a premium whereby the nation loses a great share of its own property, the integrity of which is preserved under all circumstances, while the use of the same is not imperative at present, for the sale of guano is limited to the demands of the home consumption, and for this reason there are as yet deposits that have not been worked.

"If by the above reasons we come to the conclusion that the one-third premium cannot be applied in such an absolute manner, it cannot, however, be denied that a just recompense is due to the person who discovers property the intrinsic value of which swells the wealth of the nation. Among the legal principles that might with less impropriety be cited to cover the present case, though not pointing to an exact analogy, is the article 520 of the Civil Code, whereby the premium of 15 per cent. is allotted to any person who finds property not his own in case of jettison or shipwreck. In this there is no usurpation. A true owner exists, and yet there is a discovery, although the cause that led to the placing of the property on the beach is different to that of placing the unknown deposits said to have been discovered by Landreau.

"Now, then, if notwithstanding the possibility of private appropriation in the case of jettison or shipwreck, the premium does not exceed 15 per cent., how much less it must be when the risk of such malappropriation does not exist."

The attorney-general concludes: "That the third part cannot be granted to Landreau, nor even 15 per cent., and the only manner of bringing the point at issue to a conclusion is to come to a private understanding with Landreau, who, convinced by the above reasons, will no doubt enter into a prudent arrangement which will always prove beneficial to him if the discovery is of the magnitude he describes, and for the preservation of which he has used neither efforts nor capital.

"It is necessary to say that this affair, the importance of which will gradually develop itself, may give rise to questions of grave character, especially as to settling whether the deposits had been previously known or not, and that it is convenient to establish beforehand general rules in order to avert complications in the future." These rules, according to the attorney-general, are:

"1. That although Landreau's deposits are not enumerated in this report, they will be counted as known if it can be proved that the guano has been used for agricultural purposes, or that they have been known by any of the local or general authorities.

"2. That any question arising out of Landreau's responsibilities as the discoverer, or the State as owner, will be ventilated before the tribunals of the republic, and in accordance with the civil laws of the land, no other intervention being allowed.

"URETA.

"LIMA, 31*st October*, 1863."

SUPREME DECREE.

"LIMA, October 24, 1865.

"This petition, having been examined by the council of ministers, and taking into consideration that the deposits of guano to be found in the different localities of the territory of the republic, constitute the principal part of the national wealth, and that the discovery of new beds will enhance the same as well as the financial credit of the nation; that Jean Théophile Landreau, represented to-day by Thomas Carlos Wright, says that there are deposits of guano entirely unknown, and offers to make the same known to the government, demanding for this service a proportionate recompense; that it is strictly just to accede to said recompense in case the deposits are altogether new, in accordance with the unanimous vote of the council, and with the report of the attorney-general of the supreme court. The petition of the said Landreau is GRANTED under the following conditions:

"1st. Landreau, immediately after accepting this decree, and a public contract of the same having been drawn up, will designate the deposits of which he calls himself discoverer, said designation being made with the greatest possible minuteness, it being well understood that no deposits known up to date shall be named in the same.

"2d. The premium accorded to the discoverer is 10 per cent. on the net proceeds of the guano discovered if the number of tons is one million or less; 8 per cent. on the tons exceeding one million and not reaching two millions; 6 per cent. on the tons exceeding two millions and not reaching three millions; 4 per cent. on the excess of three millions and not reaching four; and 2 per cent. on the excess of four millions of tons and not reaching five; it being well understood that for any number of tons above five millions there will be no recompense, the excess belonging exclusively to the nation.

"3d. Neither Landreau nor any other person or persons representing him, shall ever agitate any question growing out of the concession established in this decree before any other authorities or tribunals than those of the republic, and in accordance with the laws of the same, renouncing expressly all diplomatic intervention; it being an expressed condition that should he ever employ such means that sole fact will destroy the effect of this resolution, and he will be unable to claim any premium whatsoever.

"4th. The discoverer or his attorneys are forbidden, directly or indirectly, to interfere in the contracts of sale or any other contract that the government may be pleased to make regarding the guanos of the new deposits, for his right will be limited to asking the share which, according to the percentage already mentioned, may fall to him.

"5th. The government will begin operations on the new guano deposits as soon as it will deem it convenient, the discoverer or his attorneys not having the option to demand when a start shall be made.

"6th. This concession will be void in case the government or any authority can plainly prove that they had official or private report of the deposits said to have been discovered by Landreau."

CONTRACT.

"LIMA, 28*th October*, 1865.

"The administrator signing at the foot in the name and as the representative of the state, making use of the authority vested in him for this purpose, affirms by these presents that this concession guarantees Jean Théophile Landreau the terms named in the six conditions mentioned in the supreme decree of 24th of October, A. D. 1865, which said statement forms the true essence of this instrument, against which at no future time can there be any reclamation in any manner whatsoever, unless the grantee or his attorney should not either wholly or in part comply with the supreme resolution approving the discovery made of the guano belonging to the nation; and if such be the case the compliance with the stipulations of the sixth article of the supreme resolution aforesaid will be faithfully carried out; and if Landreau or his attorneys do faithfully fulfill every act demanded of him, the same faithfulness will be used toward him in carrying out the six principal conditions forming the basis of this contract.

"JOSÉ FELIX GARCIA.
"THOMAS CARLOS WRIGHT.

"Witnesses:
"ESTANISLAO ENRIQUEZ.
"MANUEL ANTONIO LA TORRE.
"JOSÉ DE LA FUENTE.
"Notary:
"CLAUDIO JOSÉ SUAREZ."

DECREE OF REPUDIATION.

"MINISTRY OF COMMERCE AND FINANCE,
"LIMA, December 12, 1868.

"In virtue of the demand made by Jean Théophile Landreau, claiming his right arising out of the contract entered into between him and the government, and the full fillment of said contracts, he making known to the Government of Peru the names of the different places where the deposits of guano are situated, and putting them all at their disposal; the government taking into consideration that the said contract can never be accepted, on account of several defects which render it null; that the premium stipulated to be accorded to him is of such a great amount that it can never be given by the government: that it is convenient to examine the guano deposits discovered, so as to see if the same be of good quality and of any advantage to the national interests. In virtue of these reasons it is hereby declared that the contract signed between the government and Landreau, 2d November, A. D. 1865, is null and void, whilst the discovering of the deposits and the information of the same made by him are accepted; and it is hereby decreed that as a basis for a new contract said new guano deposits shall be examined by a special commission appointed for that purpose.

"This commission is to proceed, in company of the discoverer, Mr. Landreau, to the different places indicated by him, and to measure the deposits of guano referred to in his declaration, taking from each a sample in order to have the necessary analysis made in view of testing the quality and value of the same.

"Let Landreau be made acquainted with this resolution, that he may name the recompense he asks for in the aforesaid declaration.

"BALTA.
"CALBERON."

XI.—COCHET AGAIN.

The original benefactor of these graceless people, as we have already seen, never litigated his claim.

The history of Landreau's patient meekness shows how much wiser was Cochet than his disciple, and the present proprietors of Cochet's claim will waste neither time nor money in diplomatic parley.

It suffices the present purpose to conclude the proofs of Cochet's title and its due assignment, and to indicate the immedite executive measures resolved upon.

As we have already seen, this model government, first despising the chemist's offered revelations, gave to his friend and that friend's partner a six years' concession for a song, and in spite of Cochet's warning extended it three years more; then suddenly observing that Europe was really buying guano, and that Allier and Quiroz were making scores of millions, as suddenly set matters right by repudiating the concession altogether, and when pushed, compromising it by a bonus of 10,000 tons for a release of Allier's claims. And in this connection, the better to justify their violence to Allier, they plead, and so admit and forever estop themselves from afterward denying, that Cochet was the true and sole original discoverer.

The following extract is a literal translation from the pamphlet and congressional report of Peru on the Cochet claim in 1851:

"Under the conviction of all these truths, based on positive facts and on veridical documents, the congress of 1847 declared Cochet to be the true discoverer and utilizer of guano; and the commission encharged to understand in the reclamations of Allier, deciding in favor of the pretensions of this gentleman, affirm that not as the discoverer the premium awarded him is given, because this premium belongs to Cochet, to whom it ought to be assigned. (See the Correo Peruano, Nos. 921, 925, and the Comercio, No. 2552 Sessions of 22d to 28th December. Speeches of Messrs. Roman, Gonzales, and Polar, members of the commission.)

"Finally, on September 30, 1849, the commission of premiums declared Cochet a creditor for that of five thousand tons of guano for his expenses. This man, according to what has been shown, has well gained and well merited the premium which has been assigned him, and which should have been delivered to him long ago."

And no attempt to recall this irrevocable admission has ever been made.

The text of the original decree of 1833 is next given, and following the text of subsequent decrees amplifying and confirming the original. None of these have ever been repealed.

In volume 4, in the compilation of Quiroz, page 266, will be found the following, to wit (paragraph 6 of the council of state):

"LIMA, PERU, February 13, 1833.

"The council of state is of the opinion that the executive be made acquainted with the following:

"That any one, after the publication of these presents, who shall have discovered property belonging to any suppressed convents, or other property belonging to the state, shall have a right to a third part of said property."

In volume 3, law 6th, book 10, title 22d of the new Spanish compilation, still in force, will be found the following, to wit:

"ARTICLE 7. The case being terminated, the tribunals declare, by a sentence, that all proclaimed property will be applied to the construction and preservation of roads, and it will be distributed as follows: Two-thirds will be applied to the above-mentioned end and the remaining third to the discoverer. The same application will be made with unknown property, and if the thing discovered is less than six thousand maravedis the expenses will be deducted, and the balance will be divided in three parts as mentioned. Then the property will be sold at auction. As to vacant or doubtful property, the same procedure will be followed."

SUPREME DECREE OF 1847.

"Agreeably to the papers and the report of the superior tribunal of accounts, and also that of the attorney general of the supreme court, and considering that according to information received by the government it is probable that there is much municipal and government property which produces nothing, because the state officers lack information and necessary knowledge on that subject:

"It is hereby declared that the revenue officers seek and discover said property, in order to form the matriculation books; for those discoveries being considered as declarations, the said functionaries or any one else will be allowed one-third of the capital discovered and interests not discharged, according to the 6th law, title 22d, book 10 of the new compilation, and decree of February 13, 1833. Let this be circulated and published.

"RIO,
"Minister of the Interior."

Rubric of his excellency.
(See El Peruano, April 21, 1847.)

Peruvian laws regarding contracts.—No. 2.—Law upon contracts.

"Citizen Ramon Castilla, constitutional President of the republic, considering that Congress has passed the following law:

"The Congress of the Peruvian Republic, considering:

"1st. That public credit is the true wealth of the country, and that without it nations as wealthy as they may be cannot exist.

"2d. That in consequence of the continuous revolutions which have agitated the country, it becomes daily more difficult to settle satisfactorily the public debt, has passed the following law:

"1st. The executive will faithfully fulfill in all their parts the contracts made with parties, whether they be national citizens or foreigners, whatever may be the time and government under which they have been made.

"2d. In regard to payment, preference will be given to those claims made under constitutional authority, then continuing with those ordered by de facto governments, but in both cases in the priority established by their date of issue.

"Let this be made known to the executive, so that they may do what is necessary for its accomplishment by having it printed, published, and circulated.

"Done at Lima, October 21st, 1845.

"MANUEL SALAZAR,
"President of the Senate.
"MANUEL CUADROS,
"President Chamber of Deputies.
"TADEO CHAVEZ,
"Senator, Secretary.
"A. AVELINO CUETO,
"Member, Secretary.

"Whereby I order this to be printed and communicated to whom it may concern.
(Signed) "RAMON CASTILLA.
"JOSÉ PAZ SOLDAN.

"LIMA, June 18th, 1846." *

XII.—THE NITRATE BEDS.

These lie close to the extreme southern limit of Peru upon the borders of Bolivia, and the veins extend across the borders into Bolivia. They constitute substantially the sole resources of the world of their kind, and are practically inexhaustible, having the exceptional characteristic of self-renewal wherever locally exhausted, every three or four years.

The deposits on the Bolivian side of the boundary line are considerable, but relatively unimportant in comparison with those upon the Peruvian side, the latter covering an area of not less than 100 miles by 400, say 40,000 square miles in all.

* See El Peruano, June 20th, 1846, No. 52.

These vast deposits have never been efficiently developed, having been worked only by stray foreign "squatters," until a short time before the unhappy war now closing, when President Pardo, on behalf of the government, bought out the "squatters'" claims, and took charge of the public domain in government behalf, and had but just inaugurated the new management when the war intervened and substantially stayed all manufacture.

The victorious Chilians now propose to annex to Chili the entire territory both in Bolivia and Peru where niter is found.

The annual product of the Peruvian beds has been heretofore something like $25,000,000 worth; this volume under proper administration would be easily doubled, if the demand should warrant such increase. The capitalized valuation of the Peruvian beds is estimated by well-informed merchants at not less than $2,000,000,000.

XIII.—SILVER, GOLD, AND COPPER.

If Peruvian credit has not been of the best hitherto, it has not been the fault of a generous providence. The country, whose true history has read more like the dreams of romancers than like the sober record of actual life, was never richer than she is to-day. A financial policy which has consisted chiefly of promises to foreign lenders and indulgence to domestic peculators, has gone naturally in company with an administrative policy which aimed above all else at the avoidance of native industry and even of native exploration. The undeveloped mineral resources of Peru in the hands of such men as are now opening up Mexico, would revive what was seen in the days of the Incas. A recent writer says:

"Between 1869 and 1870 some natives of Calama, in company with three Chilians, discovered the famous mines at Caracoles (in Bolivia). The exploration of about 150 square miles disclosed 40,000 veins, and the production is valued at $50,000,000. A small fraction of the working mines reported between 1870 and 1874 a production of $24,000,000 and a net profit of $20,000,000. In 1876–'7 the same party discovered silver deposits equally rich at Inca, only 30 miles from Calama, and work was just commencing in them when Chili took possession of the place. Copper mines are so abundant in that region that they attract little attention, and only a few near the sea are worked. On the coast of Peru, near the niter beds, silver and copper mines are no less abundant, and those of Huantuyaya in Iquique have been celebrated since the last century.

"Gold is also found in great abundance, and particularly on the banks of the River Loa."

XIV.—HISTORICAL AND GENERAL SUMMARY.

1. The special wealth of modern Peru has been her nitrate and her guano.

2. For the practical discovery of these—the discovery of their commercial value—Peru is indebted solely in the first instance to Alexandre Cochet, and this indebtedness as to guano she has published to the world.

3. Under statutes existing at least seven years before his discovery of guano, Cochet became entitled absolutely to one-third of all guano deposits within Peru.

4. If Cochet be not entitled to one-third of the deposits afterward pointed out by Landreau, then unquestionably Landreau is entitled to it.

5. Peru has acknowledged her indebtedness to Landreau also, under circumstances and in terms most extraordinary, and no question remains for discussion or revision as to what is due from Peru—whether to Cochet or to Landreau.

6. The decree concerning the public credit (ante, p. 45) fixes the indebtedness to Cochet as one entitled to payment in full before any claim of later date has even payment in part.

7. This decree having been published in 1845 was notice to the world, and all creditors of a later date are bound by it.

8. The claims of Chili give least concern of all, resting on force alone, and not on equity. Besides she has Bolivia, her original antagonist in the struggle, to satisfy herself upon, and cannot be allowed to make an ally a principal victim to the prejudice of equitable commercial creditors with older claims.

9. No attempt has ever been made by Peru to deny her indebtedness to either Cochet or Landreau. The very decree of repudiation reaffirmed the obligation, and all the courts refused to pronounce against the plaintiff.

10. Not a single dollar has ever been paid to either Cochet or Landreau, or to any heir or assign of either.

11. The legal representatives of Cochet have an unquestionable title now to so much of Peru as when converted into money will satify the debt, with interest and all costs of liquidation and collection, and it is for them alone to elect what property they shall take and how they shall convert it.

12. The representatives of Landreau have a like right to payment after the prior debt shall have been first extinguished.

13. The Chilians must take Peru, like any other estate, subject to all existing indebtedness, and must wait the satisfaction of such indebtedness first. The law of nations is well settled, and cannot be successfully questioned.

14. This claim is perhaps the largest of its kind in the history of the world, and all governments will unite in demanding its proper adjustment as an important precedent.

15. The present proprietors acquired title directly from Cochet, and being all native citizens of the United States will vest the title in the Peruvian Company, a corporation already organized under the laws of one of the United States to receive such title and to collect the claim.

XV.—CONCLUSION.

1. The amount of guano already taken out of the Cochet islands—including the Chinchas—will be shown by the Peruvian custom-house records, and will aggregate, it is said, not far from $1,200,000,000 worth. The discoverer's one-third of this would be $400,000,000, and interest upon this amount at six per cent—say for an equalized average of twenty years—would be $480,000,000 more. The amount remaining in these islands is not positively known, and is probably not more than $200,000,000 worth: and in the Landreau deposits, say $350,000,000 more. The Chilian plenipotentiary has recently announced that his government are about opening very rich deposits on the Lobos Islands—which are included in this group.

It is probably within safe limits to say that, including interest to accrue before the claim can be fully liquidated, its owners will realize not less than $1,200,000,000.

2. Can Peru pay so much without exhaustion?

Easily—and not even suffer. She has chiefly squandered her resources heretofore, and will go on to squander them as long as she manages them.

Squatters have taken substantially all that has been taken from the great niter beds hitherto, and the government's only interference was to pay them upward of $20,000,000 cash for their improvements. The first guano contract, as we have seen, brought the government say, $75,000, and the contractors at least $100,000,000. The $200,000,000 borrowed in Europe went into railroads on terms which left Contractor Meigs $60,000,000 profit, after providing for the army of favorites; and the entire system of roads thus built was then turned over to a French syndicate for a mere song. The £21,000,000 advanced a year ago by the house of Dreyfus was dissipated like snow in April, and was in fact but the bonus which that thrifty firm could well afford to pay for a continuance of its guano contracts. And now, finally, Peru lies at the feet of Chili, and Chili proposes to take all the niter and all the guano.

3. It is not necessary, nor is it proposed, to use any severity in the collection of this claim, nor to impose any hardship upon the debtor country. Neither is it necessary to use any measures such as would result in individual taxation, or such as, in Europe or the United States would necessarily put a pressure upon the masses of the people.

Chili, by mere force of arms proposes to take $3,000,000,000 worth of property to indemnify herself for a war outlay liberally allowed at $100,000,000; and the code of nations requires no neighboring government to prevent her. But commercial creditors have prior rights, and the governments of which those creditors are citizens will fully protect them. The comparatively small claims of the citizens of England, France, Germany, and Italy have already been duly notified and allowed for, and the larger right of the subjects of a not less vigilant government must receive equal consideration.

4. The policy which may be finally adopted by the executive of the Peruvian Company need not be foreshadowed here. It is sufficient for the purposes of the present writing to point out the material facts as they exist, and to leave them with the remark that not the slightest difficulty in shaping a practical policy need be experienced.

The proprietors of this claim will easily enough command any grade of executive and diplomatic talent, and they have no idea of intrusting its management to any grade below the first.

5. Nothing involved with this claim need require any interference in the debatable merits of the war now closing; and the sole interest of this company being commercial, its good offices as a practical mediator may even prove of exceptional value to all governments concerned. Chili's original quarrel is with Bolivia; Peru only came in later to support her nearest neighbor. The niter beds and silver mines of Bolivia are alone sufficient to satisfy all reasonable claims which any code of war recognized by civilized peoples could allow; Chili will not be forbidden any legitimate fruits of her success by this intervention of commercial creditors; on the contrary she will greatly better her standing in the family of nations by moderating her views within reasonable limits. The peoples of the leading governments value generosity above force now, and the people of the United States in especial have recently shown a magnanimity which they will be glad to see imitated by a sister republic.

6. Undoubtedly the Peruvian Company must in the interest of all the creditors of Peru, even if the extraordinary claims of her conqueror should remain unchallenged, and in the interest of Peru herself, take the initiative in the adjustment of her commercial affairs. Peru herself is for the moment in both financial and political insolvency. Not even her flushed conquerors propose to destroy, but only to humble her. Her creditors much less could willingly injure her; but they are bound to protect themselves, and to do so effectually. Leaving to the three governments all political problems, the Peruvian Company will content itself with problems of finance, and will investigate these as one creditor only among others, and will neither ask nor accept any other advantage than such as a mere matter of mathematics and of equity is inseparable from its circumstances. Every minor creditor shall, upon the proper proof of his right, have as effectual protection, so far as the Peruvian Company can afford it, as though he were one of its own shareholders. And toward the unhappy debtor herself a policy will be observed which will convince her people that since Cochet himself, her greatest benefactor, she has never had a friend so true and so helpful as the successor to his rights, the Peruvian Company, which, standing between an excited enemy on the one hand and an ineffective administration of her great wealth on the other, shall pay all her debts for her, without the waste of a single dollar or the loss of a right that ought to be preserved.

The foregoing statement has been prepared primarily for the information of a select number of representative American capitalists, to whom the first issue of stock will be limited, for the sole purpose of securing an organization and executive worthy of the enterprise. A few copies will also be placed in the hands of representatives of the governments interested, as an advance courtesy and an assurance of the purely judicial attitude which the Peruvian Company and its owners will maintain toward all other interests which might, by ill judgment, be brought into collision with ours. Nothing herein is intended for publication or for the public at present, and every copy now given out is to be treated as only loaned for the time being.

The announcements of policy herein made may be relied upon as to all material issues. The executive of the company will, in due course, speak officially and in detail.

Meanwhile the undersigned will receive any overtures which authorized deputies may desire informally to submit, and which may properly be laid before the executive of the company so soon as it shall be finally constituted.

The terms upon which the first issue of stock will be made may also be learned upon application to the undersigned.

JACOB R. SHIPHERD,
Attorney for the Proprietors, 10 Spruce Street, New York.

Dated May 20, 1881.

[Private draft memorandum. Return to Jacob R. Shipherd, 10 Spruce street, New York.]

TRUTH DEMONSTRATED AND CALUMNY DEFEATED.—BRIEF HISTORICAL ABRIDGMENT OF THE FACTS WHICH PROVE THE TITLES OF ALEXANDER COCHET TO OBTAIN THE PRIZE WHICH, AS TRUE DISCOVERER OF THE VALUE OF GUANO, HAS BEEN AWARDED TO HIM BY THE COMMITTEE ON PRIZES OF THE CONGRESS OF 1849.

APPENDED IS THE REIMPRESSION OF THE NEW PROPOSALS PRESENTED TO THE SUPREME GOVERNMENT AND THE NATIONAL REPRESENTATION.

The following is a correct translation.

ADOLPHE PIERRA.

PHILA., May 24th, 1881.

GUANO.

PROOFS THAT COCHET WAS THE FIRST ONE THAT MADE ITS PROPERTIES AS A FERTILIZER KNOWN TO EUROPEAN AGRICULTURISTS, AND THAT, CONSEQUENTLY, TO HIM IS DUE THE ESTIMATION, VALUE, AND APPRECIATION IN WHICH IT HAS BEEN HELD FOR THE LAST TEN YEARS.

In the year 1840 Cochet, in his intercourse with Allier, communicated to him his scientific observations upon the various properties of guano, its application to the arts, or, as manure, to agriculture, in order that, through his management, a contract might be entered into with the government, in which he was to have an interest.

Allier, betraying the trust confided to him by Cochet, procured for Señor Quiros a lease for all the guano islands. Allier did not even mention Cochet, and played to such an extent on his confidence and credulity that he persuaded him that Señor Quiros had negotiated the contract without his consent, and lamented as unfortunate both for him and for Cochet, the circumstance of the latter's not having contracted beforehand for the lease of the aforesaid islands. Cochet discovered to him that much could yet be remedied, since there was also guano on the continent. Allier then hurried to Quiros, and had him add an article to his contract, embracing not only the guano contained on the islands, but also all that might be discovered on the continent, which article was approved by the government, then not aware of the magnitude of the transaction. On finding out such villainous proceedings, Cochet presented himself to the council of state, exposed the fraud and robbery perpetrated on the nation and on himself, and asked for the abrogation of the ominous contract. In order to enlighten the government on the subject, he forthwith published his dissertation on the properties of guano, and its applications either to the arts or to agriculture as a fertilizer. This is briefly the history of what happened. Look now to the respective documents.

On the 10th of November, 1840, signed Quiros the first contract, obligatory for six years, the sum of 60,000 pesos to be paid in the following manner: 38,500 pesos in coin credits, this being the remainder of the robbery made on that famous machine; 1,500 pesos, cash, 10,000 pesos twelve months after; and the balance, 10,000 pesos, two years from date. On the 4th of December of the same year three more years were voluntarily added to the contract. On the 17th of the same month the coast was added to the islands, on the petition of Quiros, who stated in his application that he had just been informed that Punta de Lobos, Pabellon de Pico, and other guano producing places, were really not islands, but peninsulas, forming part of the continent. (See "Los Peruanos," Nos. 40 and 52, and "El Comercio," No. 473.)

Notwithstanding the first remonstrances made by Cochet to the council of state, dated February 15th, 1841, whereby the term of the contract was reduced from nine years to one, they shipped considerable amounts of guano, which was sold at first at 120 pesos per ton, in consequence of the information given by Cochet to Allier, companion of Quiros, although the fact was not then made to appear in order to deceive Cochet. However, Allier could not conceal his evil doings long, and Cochet, on becoming aware of such treachery, resolved to make known his secret.

The wide circulation of the news of those sales having confirmed the truth of what Cochet had announced, public attention was awakened, and the journals commenced to occupy themselves on the subject. But as neither the true value of guano nor its proper application to agriculture was yet known either in Europe or in Peru, the price of guano came down to almost nothing in England as soon as they had extracted therefrom the large quantity of ammoniac, of which Cochet had told Aquiles, and learned that there was an unfailing supply of the article in Peru, as Allier assured.

Every one was speaking and discoursing in the dark, when Cochet published, in 1841, his dissertation on guano and its properties. In that work the author stated that this article was destined to produce a revolution in the arts, and by means of a curious scientifically-formed scale, showed the method to be employed in using that deposit as a manure, and indicated the relative quantities to be used for any kind of plants or crops to be raised, by a simple rule of proportion. By this calculation Cochet proved mathematically that a cargo of guano was equivalent to fourteen cargoes of grain. (This dissertation is in print, and an abstract from it with the agricultural scale can be seen in "El Comercio," No. 3665, Thursday, October 2d, 1841, and it is also attached to the process.) All were moved at the appearance of such a document, and the English minister sent immediately a large number of copies to England.

The true import of guano was known immediately from the memoir of Cochet, and the council of state, which, by virtue of the previous representations, had resolved to annul the contract of Quiros and Allier, had no more knowledge upon the value of guano than that furnished by Cochet, said council being entirely ignorant of the high price at which it had been sold in Europe. This appears from the report presented by Counselor Señor D. Lucas Pellicer, in which it is stated that only after the council had agreed to annul the contract, did he know of the high price at which guano had been sold, and that through the minister of finance (de hacienda). It is therefore evident that if public opinion had been alarmed at the contract of Quiros and Allier, and if the council had rejected it as injurious and onerous, it was not in consequence of the news received from Europe, for such news had not come, according to the declaration of the council, but as a result of the disclosures made by Cochet. So certain is this, that Señor Laso explicitly relied on the merits of that dissertation to defeat the mentioned contract, in the session of the 18th. (See "El Comercio," No. 742, council of state, November 18th, 1841.)

Allier answered, heaping insults on Cochet, but could not confute any of his manifestations, whose convincing arguments brought all the writers of that time to the support of Cochet, through their editorial articles, as can be seen by "La Bolso," Nos. 250, 251, and 255, November, 1841.

Dr. G. J. Antonio Colmenares, in his opinion as fiscal (attorney-general), dated November 26, 1841, was in favor of annulling the contract; and notwithstanding that Allier made strenuous efforts to sustain it, and so discredit Cochet, the latter, by the force of his reasoning, carried his point, and rendered to the nation the inestimable service of acquainting her with the great value of guano, and of enabling her to get rid of a contract pregnant with irremedial injury to her interests.

However, up to that time, nothing was known in England as to the manner of using guano as manure, as the tons sold there at 90 to 120 pesos were utilized for the extraction of ammoniac, and their price fell considerably afterwards. But as soon as the British agriculturists tried it in pursuance of the exact rule given in Cochet's dissertation, and they found out that the results corresponded to what was announced, guano was priced at its true value. This may be inferred from the important circumstance that only after the publication of Cochet's memoir was there a fixed rule for the use of guano as manure; and as there has never appeared any other, no doubt can be entertained that it was the one which was followed. In 1845 D. Manuel Menendez, president of the council, mentioned Cochet to prove that by his work he learned the real value of guano, a fact that brought about the abrogation of the Quiros-Allier contract.

By reason of what has been stated, Cochet, isolated as he was in society, with his single-handed efforts, and shielded by justice and right, succeeded in timely preventing the ratification of that famous contract, which would have been both dishonorable and ruinous to the nation, and to secure which Allier employed with eagerness and activity all the craft of a Rodin, in order to blind the Peruvian Government and Sr. Lemoines, chargé d'affaires, who, being on the point of interfering in the matter, desisted on hearing him; and he also had furnished the government information and reasons more than sufficient to induce him to annul that contract. (See a letter concerning Allier in "El Comercio," No. 144.) Moreover, immediately after the abrogation of that contract, the greater portion of the commercial firms of this capital, desiring to engage in this business, and not being informed on the subject, consulted Cochet. He satisfied them all, destroying any fears they might have entertained. Among them may be mentioned especially Mr. Montane, Mr. Ponmaroux, and Juan Hain, with whom he was in social intercourse. The latter manifested an eager desire to engage in this business, trusting in the reasoning of Cochet's dissertation; but disheartened by a letter he had received from London a few months before, and which he showed to Cochet, announcing that the guano sent by him had been thrown into the Thames as useless, he dare not embark in the enterprise, and requested the undersigned to tell him frankly whether he was certain that he was not mistaken on the properties of guano as applicable to agriculture, and to give him some explanations that should convince him. Cochet willingly complied with Sr. D. Juan Hain's request, giving him all the information he could desire, and furnishing him with so many data that, his fears being vanished, instead of considering it a risky business, he saw in it a safe and brilliant enterprise, and consequently was the first to make to the government a proposal of a new contract, for which there were so many applicants that the government suddenly received 800,000 pesos, at a time when it most needed the money a few days after the unfortunate occurrences of Ingarvi, when the enemy was on the frontier, preparing to invade Peru. The government had then no troops to defend the country, nor money to raise them; but on receiving that sum, improvised a brilliant army which defeated the plans of Bolivia, and caused the nation to be respected. Who can gainsay these facts? Nobody; for all Lima has witnessed them. In regard to D. Juan Hain and Montane and Ponmaroux, the facts have been published in the newspapers of the capital whilst they were here, and they have not denied them. They can also be found in my process.

Convinced of all these truths, which are based on positive facts and documents worthy of faith the Congress of 1847 declared Cochet as the true discoverer of guano, and the committee charged with the claims of Allier, in giving his opinions in favor of the gentleman, affirmed that the prize was awarded to him, not as discoverer, as this title belonged to Cochet, to whom one should be awarded as such. (See "El Carreo Pernano," Nos. 921 and 925, and "El Comercio," No. 2552, sessions of the 22d and 28th December. Discourses of Señores Roman, Gonsalez, and Polar, members of the committee.)

Finally, in 1849, the committee on prizes declared Cochet entitled to the prize of 5,000 tons of guano for his expenses and discoveries, although imposing the condition that he should reveal his other secrets before receiving the recompense. It does not appear just on the part of the nation to require this condition from a man who, as stated, has gained and deserved so well the assigned reward, which should be granted long since.

ANOTHER DISCOVERY ON THE SAME GUANO.

It has been seen already that Alexander Cochet is the real discoverer of the estimation in which guano is now held, and the author of the immense benefits conferred by it on the nation. However, he offers to increase its value from two to threefold provided that the proper rewards are granted to him. For this purpose the most natural proceeding is to authorize the Executive to make arrangements with Cochet, who has made himself deserving of the public confidence by the authentic proofs he has given to the supreme government in laying before the public the reality of his discovery, for the last ten years relegated to oblivion as visionary, with his proposals and offerings upon

NITRATE OF POTASH.

This important secret, which consists in the method of changing the bases of nitrate of soda into nitrate of potash at a nominal price, and to facilitate a largely increased production of gunpowder, is deserving of particular attention. Cochet has offered to furnish the government with nitrate of potash for half the price paid abroad, and promises to reveal an unfailing source of materials for its production peculiar to Peru, by which the saltpeter of Tarapaca, which has always been sold for exportation at the rate of twelve reales to two pesos a quintal (100 pounds), shall reach the price of twenty to twenty-two pesos, which is the cost to the government for that of the third decoction stored up for its powder factory. "Fool, charlatan, visionary"—such were the epithets applied to him on making this proposition; letters were referred to; exigencies were made; they sent to Europe for information; a note from a respectable person which appeared to confute the assertion of Cochet was shown to him. Such an accumulation of obstacles and contradictions had been directed against the truth of the facts; but Cochet can triumphantly say to his enemies: "Shame on you, for the mean contrivance of your iniquitous plot which has only helped to render more complete my triumph. You have always wished to close on me the doors to glory. Behold how at last they are opened wide, and, with my glory, a brilliant future for Peru, which will now know that Cochet never promises what he cannot perform." Effectively, the assays made by order of the supreme government have ever resulted most satisfactorily. This nitrate, on being examined and analyzed, has turned out to be superior to the best European article, and the gunpowder manufactured from it has greatly surpassed in quality the best made in this country, although this is superior to the European powder. There is nothing else to be desired, and the only thing left to be done is to empower the Executive to arrange with Cochet about the reward to be bestowed upon him for such a valuable discovery, considering the great wealth it can confer upon the nation. It may make Peru the gunpowder mart of the world. The American nation will come here for her supplies in view of the very low prices at which it it may be sold, and its unsurpassed good quality. Moreover, if the necessity of this article is considered, whether for supplying the ordinary demands, for the leveling of mountains, for the working of new mines, or for the opening of canals and roads, it will be easy to form an accurate idea of the magnitude of the offer. The manufacture of this article is susceptible of the greatest improvement by following Cochet's instructions, and this will bring to the government a revenue nearly equal to that derived from guano, with the advantage of its being inexhaustible.

Cochet expects that the sovereign Congress will give its attention to all that has been stated, and that the year 1851 will see rewarded the merits of a man whose only aim in life has been to promote the prosperity of Peru

It is doubtless to be feared that the ill-omened man who continually persecutes and annoys me may now, as ever before, try to deceive the deputies, employing the inexhaustible resources he can command in the field of defamation and imposture. It would not be strange if by means of his despicable maneuvers he would seek to obstruct the course of negotiations now pending, and to render doubtful my rights, now crying down my discoveries, now planning impediments or interposing obstacles, with the purpose of making me despair at last, and abandon what has been always the dream of my life; that is to say, the noble pride of being able to attain the glory of being useful to the Peruvian nation, rendering her all the service within my power. However, I trust, and this encourages me, that this time his schemes shall be frustrated, for I have great confidence in the integrity and good sense of the Señores Representantes, who will not be willing to deprive their country of the advantages I offer her, in order to heed the futile suggestions of a man who, for the merit of robbing the nation, succeeded in securing a gift of 10,000 tons of guano; whereas they kept me for ten years bringing forth my claims, without obtaining the prize that I have earned by my researches and efforts. It is not, therefore, to be thought of that the national representation, forgetting its own dignity, may trammel with conditions against a just grant. By such proceeding it would gain little honor, as this would amount to the seizure of a man's property, since the 5,000 tons of guano granted to me have been earned beforehand by my work. If I accepted one of the conditions imposed on me, I was forced to it by the persecutions and taunts to which I was subjected, as I wished to demonstrate in an evident manner that I was not a visionary; and I have victoriously proved this with the evidence of the new discovery, which tests have resulted as satisfactory as they are convincing to the supreme government.

That I may be awarded proportionate prizes separately for my new discoveries, in view of their utility, is an act of justice entirely independent from the subject of guano.

Once again, I hope that the Señores Representantes, taking all my statements into consideration, will show at last that Peru does not forget the service received, nor the benefits made in behalf of his aggrandizement.

ALEJANDRO COCHÉT.

NOTE.—Persons desiring further information may read the numbers of "El Comercio" of Saturday 27th, Monday, 29th of September; Thursday 2d, Wednesday 8th, Thursday 9th, Friday 10th, and Tuesday 14th, of October of the present year, 1851.

LAST PROPOSALS PRESENTED TO THE SUPREME GOVERNMENT AND TO THE NATIONAL REPRESENTATION, BY ALEJANDRO COCHET.

MESSRS. EDITORS: Please publish my last proposals to the nation, with the documents belonging thereto.

I do not send you the whole process for public information on the subject, because it is extensive and voluminous; but if I carry my point, as I expect, from the high wisdom of the men at present at the head of the government, the people shall see that I have never endeavored to deceive them; that I have worked, and worked for their good, and that if I now claim the prize of my wakeful labors, it is only to prevent a repetition of my previous experiences. However, I can affirm that, if I derive any benefits from my discoveries, those which will accrue to Peru from the same shall be a thousand and a millionfold greater, and this being my principal and favorite idea, I shall feel happy if the nation, accepting the fruit of my assiduous labors, will reach the full measure of weal I desire for her.

ALEJANDRO COCHET.

LIMA, September 15th, 1851.

MOST EXCELLENT SIR: I, Alejandro Cochet, a citizen of the French Republic, respectfully appear before your excellence and state, that during the government of your predecessor, General Castilla, I proposed to the Cuerpo legislature some effectual means to increase the public wealth. The opinion of the committee, to be found in the process, a copy of which I accompany, and a member of the chambers, are vouchers of the advantages to accrue to the state without laying any burden on it. The closing of the sessions of Congress prevented then the acceptation of my propositions; consequently I waited for the meeting of the ordinary legislature, in order to bring this business to a close.

Now that the new administration of your excellence has called an extraordinary session of Congress, one of the objects of the convocation being (object 8 of the decree of the 30th of April ultimo), "to consider the public revenues, and, should it be necessary, to devise means to meet entirely the calls on the public treasury for the year," the time has come for my petition to be considered in the extraordinary legislature, since its object is to increase the public funds without any burden on the exchequer. If I do not make evident the reality of the resources I will bring out, I will not only forget the prize of 5,000 tons of guano proposed by the committee, but be also the butt of public censure and contempt and opprobrium, for my failing in substantiating my offers. I am very certain that on accepting my proposition, Peru will have a source of wealth from which she shall draw millions on millions for centuries to come, the prize being too small and not proportionate to the magnitude of the discovery.

May Divine Providence grant that this great work has been reserved for the administration of your excellence; in the same manner as He reserved the discovery of this New World for Ferdinand the Catholic, and to Da. Isabella I. who listened to the demands of Columbus the Genoese, when they had been slighted in other kingdoms.

If your excellence desires to have a more extensive and complete knowledge of the matter, be pleased to look over the two processes, one of which can be found at the minister of war's office, and the other at the secretary of the honorable chamber of deputies, which will throw sufficient light on the subject.

I am ready to give summarily or minutely any proofs that may be required to thoroughly satisfy the government about the reality of my discoveries at my expense. Therefore,

To your excellence I ask and pray that he may deign to have the extraordinary Congress, in accordance with the edict of convocation, take some action about my petition, which I consider to be right and necessary to the prosperity to which the Peruvian nation is destined.

Most excellent sir,

ALEJANDRO COCHET.

LIMA, May 7th, 1851.

COPY OF THE REPORT OF THE COMMITTEE OF THE NATIONAL REPRESENTATION OF THE LAST CONGRESS OF PERU ON THE PETITION OF COCHET.

The committee on prizes, to which was referred the petition of D. Alexandre Cochet, a citizen of the French Republic, has taken into consideration not only the address of this chemist and naturalist, in which he demands the adjudgment to him of the 5,000 tons of guano that the national representation is disposed to grant to the Señores Allier and Quiros, believing them to be the first discoverers of the fruitful properties of this manure, and the first to introduce it into the European markets, but also the number of documents on the subject published through the press since 1840, and for many years previously.

It would be too diffuse to relate all the revelations found in such publications, as they have been circulated in every corner of the republic, and have been seen by the gentlemen composing the chamber; therefore, the committee will confine themselves to a brief review of the merits and scientific learning of the petitioner. This person came to Peru in 1826, as a scientific traveler, with the intention of returning to his country at the close of his explorations. He brought letters of recommendation to the government of that epoch, and invited by it and pressed by Generalissimo Gamarra, who knew his merits, to fix his residence in Peru, he has, to the present time, remained in the land as his adopted country, relying on the distinguished protection which the government tendered to him, as appears from the documents in his possession. From that time he devoted himself to travel over and survey the whole territory of the republic. He frequented the mountains of the Andes, including the Pampas of Sacramento, Canibos, and the palisade of the Portuguese, on the Amazon River. There he observed, speculated, and made interesting discoveries in the vegetable, animal, and mineral kingdoms. He extracted quinine and balsams, made the essence of cinnamon, and recognized many resins, perfumes, and medicinal drugs. He traveled over the greater part of the Cordilleras, so rich in varied and valuable minerals, which he has examined and utilized; and also over the sea-coast and plains of Peru, where he discovered untold riches, especially in the saltpeter deposits of Tarapacá, where he converted the nitrate of soda into nitrate of potash. This discovery, and the information of the method of utilization, up to that time unknown, even in the country, would be a source of immense wealth for the nation, affording at the same time a livelihood for many poor families, and facilitating the manufacture of gunpowder, which, becoming an article of exportation, would give a supremacy over the contiguous states of this continent, and even over Europe, and would bring very large sums into the nation's treasury.

Heretofore it was believed that the guano analyzed by Cochet was only useful as a fertilizer, which would make agriculture progress wonderfully; but this chemist has discovered in this product other properties, which double its value and prove the power of science. This last discovery is still unknown in Europe, and we should take advantage of it when it is offered to us. Since Providence has provided us with rich deposits of guano, we must not neglect the occasion of increasing three and fourfold the value of the national products, convinced, as we are, that the nation would thereby secure new source of wealth.

All civilized nations greatly appreciate the importance of new discoveries, no matter how small they may be, and thus hasten to lavish prizes and rewards on inventors. All flatter, invite, and fondle the learned; and Peru, being ranked as a civilized nation, cannot afford to lose the advantages offered by Cochet, which will accrue to the immense benefit of the country, by refusing him, through a thoughtless and despicable economy, the moderate reward for which he asks. Really, the complete discoveries of the chemical properties of guano, their advantageous applications to industry and the arts, and the knowledge that more profitable substances may be extracted therefrom, persuade us that such is their paramount importance, that they are destined to revolutionize the sciences and the arts.

Besides this, the petition of Cochet is based on the constitution, article 55, paragraph 14. The fundamental law guarantees the liberty of all kinds of industry, and exclusively that of those inventing something new or improving other inventions; but the appellant wants an inducement, a stimulus, a reward proportionate to the magnitude of his discoveries. He could indeed, in view of his petition (like Columbus), enrich another nation with the very products of Peru, which would be unpardonable for us, in the present penurious and distressing circumstances of the republic, overwhelmed as she is under the enormous weight of the public debt, both foreign and interior, from which it is our duty to free, or at least to relieve her.

Upon these remarks, concisely and summarily put forth, the committee proceeds to give a safe opinion, without contingency or risk, in the following terms:

The 5,000 tons of guano demanded by Don Alejandro Cochet, as a compensation for his expenses, and as a reward for his discoveries, are adjudged to him, with the condition that he discover the other properties that raise the value of this article, for which, and for disclosing and teaching the method of converting the nitrate of soda into nitrate of potash, other prizes shall be awarded to him proportionate to the advantages accruing to the nation, this to be guaranteed by the national representation; and in order that the resolution may be punctually and fully carried into effect, let it be transmitted to the executive, empowering it to stipulate with the concerned party upon the prizes to be given him, either in guano or money, or both, the petition being previously required to furnish his proofs personally and privately to the government or its agents, with the purpose of having his experiments taught and published after he has obtained the prizes.

So advises the committee, with full conviction, mutual fidelity, and without involving or risking the interests of the nation. Let it be reported.

ATANANO MACEDO.

COMMITTEE ROOM, LIMA,
September 30th, 1849.

Agustin Ratos, Thomas Ramis, Ambrosio Ortega, Manuel Cordero.

To the National Representation:

SIR: I have endeavored constantly and obstinately for ten consecutive years to transfer to the Peruvian nation several kinds of discoveries that must raise her to an incredible height of wealth, and I have also demanded the reward due to me for the first discovery I made and revealed, viz: To have raised guano to the estimation in which it is held at present. I have failed; my proposals and petitions have remained in the offices of the ministers of the various administrations; some have been long sleeping under their portfolios; others have been eaten by moth in the archives of the government for the last eleven years, without their having ever deigned to take action on any of them, and I have been kept with folded arms, unable to dispose of my own person, not knowing what to do or what to think, until, being out of patience, I was compelled to jump over all the barriers raised before me by the enemies of the country and mine, in order to be finally heard in the last legislature.

The great majority of the senores diputados have most favorably received my petition, and knowing them to be advantageous to the country, they have taken an eager interest in letting it see the accompanying opinion of the committee, which not only does me justice, but also confers great honors on me. These honors I do not deserve, for I am indebted for those discoveries rather to the goodness of God, who had deigned to recompense with them my assiduous labors than to my little scientific knowledge. I have not brought here great science, but I have done more than those who have been and are still boasting that they brought it.

However, the committee impose on me an undue condition on granting the small reward I ask for—a reward which is promised and guaranteed by the constitution, which I have lawfully earned, and which strict justice entitles me to. But that does not cause me to dismay; and although the prize should be granted without the condition of revealing my other discoveries, I willingly accept said condition, if only to show that I am not an imposter or charlatan; this with the proviso that I shall be awarded the other prizes proportionate to the importance of the discoveries, saving my right to service already rendered, and for which the committee has made grants; because a contract does not depend on outside parties, nor has ever bound them, nor should I in human justice, be shackled with so many and so great stipulations, to secure what is lawfully my due.

But as I said before, I accept the sole condition of proving what I promised in my memorial, concerning the transmutation of the nitrate of soda of Tarapacá into nitrate of potash, on the same condition laid down in said memorials, in order that I may be finally granted both prizes, the first of which has been already twice earned, and the second, considering the magnitude of the discovery, for which I only ask a hundred thousand dollars, as will be seen as soon as it is revealed, is not paid in its just price with a million of dollars. Notwithstanding the indisputable merit of having openly and generously published the propositions for my said discoveries, I have been exposed for ten years to have my footsteps followed by captious speculators, covetous of discoveries not belonging to them, in order to take advantage of mine. Indeed, many persons in this capital have hastened to make many an experiment, praying the government not to take any action on this affair, as they were sure to find out my secrets. General Castilla, being convinced that the attempts made here were fruitless, ordered his consuls in France and England to ascertain whether said discovery had been made in London. This has been affirmed by a certain person, well known in the country, with the sole object of annulling my proposals, and, as is customary with him, trying to injure me, to the prejudice of the nation, he having, on the other hand, requested the most famous chemists to try and discover my secret. But all of these attempts have proved unsuccessful, for nothing has been obtained after so many years' experimenting, and Señor Rivera, Chargé d'Affaires in London, about six months since, sent a note to this supreme government, informing it that notwithstanding having consulted all the learned men of France, England, and even Germany, no headway had been made in regard to the investigation of my discovery. This note I have read myself in the minister of war's office. Let them discredit my assertion, let them discredit all those learned men of Europe to which I have referred, who are interested in revealing any useful discovery, for love of glory and for love of mankind, to which they consecrate their labors; but let them believe at least the testimony to be found in the minister of war's office, furnished by said person, also a scientist and a professor of chemistry, and they shall be convinced that I am the sole possessor of the secret. The strict and religious fulfillment of the award of the prizes I have named, on the part of the supreme government, will enable me to reveal other discoveries, perhaps superior to the ones above mentioned, which are to be measured by other prizes proportionate to the advantages accruing to the nation, and one of said discoveries being upon the guano, it will increase its consumption and enhance its value. I pledge my word of honor that, immediately after the conclusion of the saltpeter affair, I will give the proofs which shall substantiate my secret, which I can easily do, in a few hours on a small scale, or in a few days on a larger one, to the entire satisfaction of the government. I will proceed forthwith to present to the supreme government a proposal concerning this affair, in order that it be transmitted to Congress, with the government's observations, and that Congress take the proper action in the premises, when I trust I shall have the glory and the satisfaction of proving the success of this my last discovery. But if, unfortunately, I do not succeed in raising three or fourfold the value of guano, of which I am almost certain, I am completely sure to increase its price, and that the rise and estimation I shall give it will be remarkable enough to deserve a proportionate recompense.

If any of the señores diputados should doubt that I will keep my word in regard to enchancing the estimation of guano, I agree to leave in deposit half the amount of the prize in guano, 2,500 tons of entry out of the 5,000, twice earned, as a guarantee for the performance of this last proposal, the same to be forfeited in case of failure; but if I succeed I shall have earned said prize three times, and with three times more merit than had Jacob to obtain the hand of his beloved Rachel for carrying on his shoulders the blear-eyed Leah.

Let it be understood that this third discovery has no connection nor contingency with the other two prizes, bound in fact by the voluntary judgment of the commission, which I have accepted, so that my proposals are three instead of one. It will be also stipulated an amount equal to that to be forfeited in case of failure in raising the price of guano, shall be ultimately earned; or vice versa, on obtaining the success, said amount shall be added to the award that shall belong to me for enhancing the estimation of said guano. This shall be stipulated after the payment of the first two prizes gained, and before I will proceed to furnish the proofs of this third discovery. If I made the sacrifice of revealing and giving away this secret, which worked by myself in Europe would bring me an exorbitant fortune, as I could utilize it under the veil of mystery by disguising the substances without altering their effects, it is nothing but justice that the Peruvian nation shall assign and secure to me a proportionate share in the source of wealth which I present to her.

Moreover, if no agreement is arrived at upon these conditions, there shall be no betting, and consequently the amount left in deposit shall be delivered to me. Perhaps I will be charged with selfishness for asking many prizes. I will say to this that I consider myself in the same category as miners, who fix a stake on each vein they discover, the same being granted to them by the wise laws on the subject, for the more riches that are discovered the more is society benefited, and it is both an act of justice and a stimulus to progress to secure to discoverers a part of the wealth they bring out. If I aspire to a fortune, it is not for the purpose of hoarding it up, but of using it in the prosecution of the task I have imposed on myself of studying the natural productions of a country yet unexplored, or in enterprises of general utility, under the impulse of modern ideas of the habits of this profession.

Notwithstanding that my proposals have been heretofore looked upon with indifference, I do not believe this to have been the fault of preceding forms of government; I think that it has depended more on the individuals in power, although otherwise competent, for on other occasions they have expedited briefly and advantageously some business that seemed to be more arduous. The advantages of my proposals are dear and highly important for the good of the nation, as well as of every one of its citizens and inhabitants, and of society in general. If my proposals have not been looked at in this light, it is because a cloud has been interposed or the matter has been seen through a false prism, because it is mine, although it is more the nation's interest than mine.

My memorial on guano was pending in the last Congress at the close of its sessions, and ordered to be acted upon, with the report of the committee, embracing both proposals, separately, but united in said report, though each one of them referred to different subjects, as will be seen.

One thing is the first discovery of the properties of guano, recognized at present in all the markets of the world, and its increased demand in proportion to its enhanced advantages; and another the discovery, now offered, of the process of converting the nitrate of soda into nitrate of potash. Which one of them is more advantageous to Peru I dare not dogmatically decide, because either of them is susceptible of an indefinite development, the one, seemingly the less important, being destined to make Peru, by her inland products, the great gunpowder mart among foreign nations—a fact which I will delay in proving only as long as the government will in demanding it. I lay aside the consideration that this article is of paramount necessity for the safety and dignity of the Peruvian nation, as well as for the opening of roads and canals, and for developing the working of mines in order to bring out those masses of precious metals so abundantly found in the bosom of those proud mountains of Cordillera—a fact which is plainly announced by their outward appearance.

The proof of my good faith appears in the revelation of the advantages of guano, and this has been followed by an ominous silence, paralyzing the efforts of a foreigner who proposes to discover national riches which are hidden from the eyes of the inhabitants of the country. I have often, though vainly, tried to recover the memorial on guano which remains in the minister of war's office, in order to make use of it. Congress will be pleased to ask for it, with the corresponding report and the note of urgency, in order that, as on the preceding instance, it may take some action on my aforesaid proposals.

Sir, I have traveled for more than fourteen years over this country, not without deriving some advantages for the industry, as is the case with many who travel at the expense of governments and societies, devoted to the higher sciences, and with the purpose of gathering specimens of natural curiosities for the collections of natural history, but carrying with me, at my own expense, the necessary implements wherewith to examine and recognize the different kinds of natural products, and to ascertain whether they could be useful to the arts and to commerce. In order to prove what I say, as well as my devotion to the natural sciences, I will take the liberty of referring to one of the many persons who closely have seen me at my explorations in the interior of the country. Such is Señor D. Pedro de la Quintana, a member of the chamber, whom I believe to be here at present.

In these researches, during my long and laborious travels, I have spent a capital which would have enabled me to live rather comfortably and decently in Europe. In its stead, I have ruined even my health; and, although I have run out of pecuniary resources to carry out thoroughly my observations and my essays, I believe, however, that among the natural products that I have examined, some will become articles of great importance and estimation in the commerce of exportation and in the arts, if I see the day when I shall have sufficient means to devote myself to labors of this nature with the calm and tranquillity which they require. I am not inclined to promise what I cannot substantiate, nor to expose myself to be treated as a visionary or a charlatan. I do not let myself be deluded, for I am always on my guard against a delusion. Notwithstanding that chemistry has exacted rules and processes, I repeat over and over again my operations and my analyses hundreds of times, if necessary, until I feel convinced that my discoveries are not dreams nor castles in the air, as is supposed, but a reality—a gift that Divine Providence gives the little ones—to be transmitted to mankind.

Permit me to speak to you with the freedom and sincerity I am accustomed to: The artificer and the discoverer of useful things should never be oppressed. They should rather be afforded a favorable position, if it is desired that their capabilities be developed, and that they become advantageous to all without injury to them. How many sublime discoveries have been buried with their discoverers, the latter having been unwilling to submit to tyrannical and humiliating conditions.

I should keep you on your guard against the enemies of the country and my own, who have done so much injury to the nation, thwarting my plans and my proposals up to this time.

If you desire to promote the welfare and the wealth of your country; if you wish to receive the blessings of your constituents; if you want to deserve the gratitude and esteem of the whole world; if, finally, you are willing that the Congress of 1851 be made famous, and your names be perpetuated to posterity, give my affair, now pending in your secretary's office, the preference and attention it deserves; not for my sake, but because it is demanded by your constitution; by your oath, and by your loyality to your constituents, who have intrusted you with the nation's prosperity. Taking as your guide the interests of the country, do impartial and equitable justice to him who offers you so many advantages, and is willing to enhance your power; otherwise, everything will be frustrated. If you add conditions to those I accept at present, as tending to your good and mine, you will discourage me. I will forever give up the hope of having the glory of seeing my projects realized, and to receive the indemnity and recompense for my heavy outlay, wakefulness, time, and assiduous labors. I therefore inform you that I will, for the last time, call your attention to the reasons I have stated. My health is broken, and does not permit me to delay or remain in the country, if, finally you do not admit me, for what object could detain me here when I am certain that, carrying my knowledge elsewhere, I shall soon secure a fortune and the satisfaction of seeing my labors justly appreciated.

The administrations of the government have been changed in the course of these years, and I do not believe that the policy of burying my inventions and proposals will be continued by the incumbent now in the presidential chair; and Congress having been partly renewed this year, this circumstance has led me to make this exposition more prolix in order to give a more complete information.

ALEJANDRO COCHET.

REFUTATION OF SEÑOR RIVERA'S NOTE.

MOST EXCELLENT SIR: Don Alejandro Cochet, a French citizen, and a resident here, to your excellence respectfully states as follows: I never believed I should see myself in the necessity of refuting the note of the chargé d'affaires to P. H. B. M. (which was attached to my process), relative to my communications. These had been referred to him in order to ascertain whether my discovery of the process of converting the base of nitrate of soda into nitrate of potash had been made in Europe, as was affirmed in an apochryphal letter, maliciously published in the newspapers of this capital, three years ago, on the eve of concluding the contract for the sale of my secret to the government. I did not believe, I repeat, in the necessity of a refutation, for the note is only a heap of absurdities and contradictions.

I presumed that the contents of my process were more than sufficient to destroy all doubts, and the obstacles they might throw on my projects. On the one hand, I cannot help wondering at the manner in which the note itself appeared at the minister's office, also on the days in which General Castilla had decided again to make the acquisition of my secret; and on the other, I have been informed that this document is producing its injurious effects against my project, for the simple reason that a chargé d'affaires shall be believed more than I, in the absence of chemical knowledge, to judge correctly on the subject; so I see myself in the unpleasant necessity of saying what I would like to withhold. But both my honor and my interests compel me to make the painful sacrifice of my inmost sentiments.

It seems, most excellent sir, either that I have not been understood in regard to the essential objects of my proposal, or that I have not been able to give a clear explanation; I beg leave, above all, to assure you that I find it hard to believe that the note or report attributed to the chargé d'affaires comes from the party whose name it bears—a name which I consider respectable, and which, for this reason, is used by enemies to thwart the enterprise, and bury in its cradle this great discovery.

The note of Señor Rivera says that my secret is known in Europe. In my memorial I do not claim to be the discoverer of the process of changing the base of nitrate of soda, because all chemists know that not only the bases of all the nitrates can be changed, but also those of all other salts, whenever other bases are presented that have more affinity with their acids. I never denied that an operation equal to mine could be made in Europe or elsewhere, either with home or foreign materials, for I know that, since the discovery of nitrate of soda, this transmutation has been obtained both here and in Europe, giving as a result a superior quality of nitrate of potash. There are public and evident facts which, although they appear to be unknown to Señor Rivera, are proved by the report of the subdirector of the powder-factory of this capital, Don Simeon de la Rosa, to which I refer in my memoir on nitrate of potash, filed in the process on the matter. And if my assertion concerning these facts is there justified, not less are verified the ruinous results of the undertaking engaged in by the contractors of the aforesaid factory in order to work out that transmutation. Relying on a method of changing the mentioned base, bought from a German naturalist sent by the court of Spain, they were compelled to abandon their work, as is shown, being convinced, after losing $200,000, that the cost of the operation was exceedingly great. The same has been corroborated by the mentioned subdirector, who, operating by the same method, which he holds, written in the hand of said chemist and naturalist, asserted that the nitrate of potash was obtained from the nitrate of soda of Tarapaca at a cost of 79 pesos 3½ reals per quintal (100 pounds). This was the confession of said Señor La Rosa, in his report of September 11, 1829, to the commandante-general of artillery (it has also been copied in said memoir), giving an account of the results of the experiments which the government resolved to make at that time, being pressed by the scarcity of that article. The same thing has also happened in Europe, where, encountering always the same obstacles, they have likewise given up the fabrication as often as it has been undertaken, not by reason of the bad quality of the nitrate produced, but for want of cheap materials to obtain the same results. This is the great problem solved in two words; this is the difficult point made clear, It is the discovery of suitable materials for said transmutation which has been accomplished by me on this favored land—materials whose existence and application has heretofore been unknown. I repeat, and will repeat it a thousand times, the sole revelation of their existence and their properties is not paid with a million of dollars, considering the incalculable advantages accruing to the nation from their discovery.

Notwithstanding this clear and true statement, who would believe that there is still in this capital a person (easily to be recognized, without being a physiognomist, by the remorse for his depraved acts clearly revealed on his countenance)—a person who has this very day the audacity and the effrontery to carry a book on chemistry under his arm, in order to persuade that the secret of converting the base of the nitrate of soda into nitrate of potash is already known, and that, consequently, I pretend to deceive the government? Wicked man! what matters whether the result is produced, if it is not obtained by the same means which I offer or by others with an equal economy? Is, peradventure, the transmutation the point of the secret? And even it were discovered—an event which shall not take place for centuries—are not the materials the exclusive property of Peru?

What shall the country do with these prime materials which she possesses in inexhaustible quantities, for the manufacture of nitrate of potash, if there is nobody to know them nor how to utilize them for this purpose? It is strange that that wretch, who has been for so many years persecuting me and depriving the nation of this source of wealth by all means at his command—it is strange, I say, that this man, who pretends to be a naturalist, a chemist, and a great general of the empire, does not present the same materials and the same advantages I offer, but only in its stead the base and villainous maneuvers which he has employed heretofore in order to surprise the good faith and credulity of his hearers. Here is the point of the difficulty, and as long as he does not overcome it—a result he has not been able to accomplish up to this time, notwithstanding that since the announcement of my discovery he is endeavoring to do it, both here and in Europe in order to indemnify himself for the abrogation of the famous guano contract—as long, I repeat, as he does not overcome this obstacle, the supreme government should look with contempt upon his machinations, and should not prolong the long period in which he has succeeded, thereby to deprive the nation of so immense and easily-to-be-got resources.

Your excellence will excuse this passionate digression to which I have been involuntary driven by the acrimony engendered by the gratuitous persecutions of a man upon whom I was once willing to bestow great benefits. Believe me, your excellence, he, and nobody else, has been the principal cause of this failure on the part of your predecessors to hear or heed me; and, although he perseveres yet in his headlong purpose, I have this time a presentment that your excellence, penetrating into his plots, will know how to defeat his plans. All my hopes rest now on the eminent character of your excellence. I consider it as the key which will open to the Peruvian nation the gates to that and other sources of wealth that your predecessors declined to touch. I entertain no doubt that to your excellence has been reserved the glory of raising Peru to the highest plane of opulence to be desired by any nation.

Continuing my exposition, I hereby insist that my aim has been to secure two advantages: The one is not to be dependent on any foreign materials, for Peru has them in her sod in unfailing abundance; the other, to bring down to the lowest point the cost of producing a nitrate equal to the best heretofore known in the world; adding at the same time that no nation shall be able to produce it more economically, not excepting even North America and Russia, which are the principal markets for potash.

It remains yet for me to say, in reply to Señor Rivera (if the report is his, for I rather think it comes from one of his amanuenses), that as regards the assertion that potash is extracted from marine substances, it is a gross error, as only soda can be extracted from said materials. As regards the impossibility, contrary to my assertion, of completely separating the soda and the nitrate of soda from the nitrate of potash, this is a grosser error yet; for these substances being, as he says, liquescent, the rest of them can be easily separated by the simple process of crystallization; since the nitrate of potash is less soluble and the others can only subsist on the surface. This method was adopted in France to refine it more than sixty years ago.

The report affirmed, moreover, that said liquescent salts are inseparable from the nitrate of potash, and that therefore the gunpowder manufactured with it must be used the same day, by reason of its affinity with atmospheric humidity, which renders it unfit for later use. But if I present the nitrate manufactured by my method with materials different from those he mentions, and as pure as the most transparent crystal or the finest gold and silver, and consequently free of the liquescent salts he named, or any other extraneous matter, it is evident that besides destroying his assertion with an incontestable fact, it can be clearly inferred from its own report that my discovery was not known in Europe, and that my saltpeter, already in this state, must equal in quality the best produced by any other method. I can therefore assure that the gunpowder made with it shall be of unsurpassable quality, and with this conviction I have offered in my memorial to send myself (suggesting that the government should do the same) to the Institute of London and of Paris a quantity of my nitrate for the purpose of having their learned members judge of its merits, and decide this matter. The same action can also be taken with the same purpose in the Exhibition of Prizes.

The same reports assert, finally, that besides the fact that the nitrate of potash obtained by the transmutation is of inferior quality, it should be called artificial. Alas! most excellent sir, I call your excellencie's attention to the point, in order that you may see and be convinced that such a report has been got up with evident intention of defeating my discovery, making my nitrate appear, according to the vulgar saying, as "bewitchment" (hechizo), in order to cast upon it suspicion and contempt.

It is plain that in expressing himself in this manner, the author of the document has committed a gross and unpardonable error as a chemist, or else he has been prompted by the malign purpose of doing an injury. This is the more scandalous that nobody, however short-sighted, will dare to deny that the nitrate of soda of Tarapaca is a natural nitrate, and if this is natural, mine must necessarily be also the same.

The nitrification of that one is the work of nature, and the operation of utilizing it being reduced only to the changing of its base, it is inconceivable that a chemist may ignore this fact or pretend to rest on it to qualify said nitrate as an artificial product. Well, then, if the author of said note gives the name of artificial to the nitrate obtained by transmutation, why does he not give the same name to the European nitrate, which, according to its origin, might with great reason be called thus? The greater portion of the nitrate there manufactured is really artificial, if we except that obtained by the demolition of houses; for there is not a European nation that has not her artificial saltpeter works. The person to whom the report is attributed must be aware of this fact, if not from ocular observations, at least from his perusal of chemical works; all of these refer to said saltpeter works, and mention the fact that the only natural nitrate of potash known is a product of India or the coasts of Peru.

My moderation and my respect for the government prompt me to abstain from refuting the rest of the report; it is sufficient to say that the extravagant statements it contains, convince me more and more that its author is not the person to whom it is attributed. I know Señor Rivera, and, if I am not mistaken, I think I know the extent of his knowledge on the matter enough not to insult him with the belief that he is the author of such production. Now, most excellent sir, that the field has been somewhat cleared of difficulties, in case your excellence judge it convenient to commence to take some action on this interesting case, and tear once for all the thick veil with which an evil genius has covered my discovery, I send to your excellence, according to my proposal of contract, two boxes of the nitrate of potash, whose utilization I promise to show, said nitrate having been manufactured by me out of the nitrate of soda of Tarapaca. Your excellence will please keep one of those boxes and have the other delivered to me, sealed with the seals of the state and those of the consulate of my nation. Your excellence will please have the box you may select examined by professional persons, and submitted to all the tests you may think proper. If, after the most rigorous examinations, your excellence is satisfied, I will be ready to enter into the contract, and will proceed to teach my method. If there should unexpectedly arise any doubts as to the sameness between the nitrate of potash I shall have taught to produce and that of the sample, the sealed box shall be opened and the competent persons that may be appointed shall publicly, and in my presence, make a comparative examination. If, after this, some doubt should be yet entertained as to the identity of the two articles, both shall be sent, as suggested before, to the Academy of London and of Paris for the purpose referred to.

If all these proofs, to which I submit spontaneously, should not be sufficient to convince and make evident my discovery and my good faith, it will be stipulated then that the nitrate produced by my method shall be compared with the best produced in Europe, Asia, Africa, America, and Australia, because, as I have said, chemistry only recognizes one nitrate of potash, and this science has rules to determine, by means of essays, its purity and its value, a point which the mentioned academicians shall decide.

It is really incomprehensible that proposals, such as mine, from which the government, far from risking anything, shall derive millions on millions for centuries to come, have not been accepted for such a long time. This leads the most incredulous to admit that this affair has been hostilized by men who have a ready command of the magic arts, or rather of recreative physics, which indeed ceases to be recreative from the moment it is used for their profit and to the prejudice of society. To your excellence belongs now the duty of investigating who are the authors of the opposition I have encountered for the last ten years and of the machinations skillfully employed to defeat my proposals and to thwart the desire the government itself, and even the national representation, had at different times of accepting them. This in order that your excellence may be on your guard against their plots and intrigues, and that the nation may not be defrauded this time of the wealth I offer her.

Lastly, most excellent sir, my object in soliciting that this case may be, as soon as possible, taken into consideration by the chambers, is to take advange of all the time of the extraordinary and ordinary congress in order to present other discoveries of equal magnitude and of no less importance to the goverment and to the nation; therefore,

To your excellence I pray that he be pleased to give his attentive consideration to this petition, requesting that it be filed with my previous application, and upon which your excellence will resolve what he may deem proper.

ALEJANDRO COCHET.

LIMA, May 28, 1851.

[Private. Return to Jacob R. Shipherd, 10 Spruce street, New York.]

THE PERUVIAN COMPANY.

CHAIN OF TITLE.

The sole heir of Cochet—who died instestate—was a natural son of Gelacio (who inherits under Peruvian law), and of him the present owners of this claim made direct purchase; the assignment to the Peruvian Company will be made by these purchasers, and the entire chain of title will include but two links. Detailed and original proofs of all the facts material to the validity, value, and title of the claim are ready for examination at the proper time by such counsel as subscribers to the stock may designate, and no room for doubt as to any question of fact will be left.

The formal parts of the conveyance by the heir are next given:

The undersigned, Don ——— ———, a native of the United States of North America, on the one part, and Don Gelacio Cochet, native of Peru, on the other, both of them residing in this city, have made an agreement, which is hereafter expressed.

"1st. That having understood that Señor Gelacio Cochet could prove his title to be declared judicially the natural son of the deceased Don Alexandro Cochet, and as such to be acknowledged by the tribunals of Peru as having right to the premiums which may have been awarded or may in future be awarded in favor of the said deceased and of his legal heirs; that these premiums result from the important discoveries made by the said Mr. Cochet's father relative to the use and application of the guano as manure for agriculture in foreign countries.

"2d. That seeing Mr. ——— ——— ready to practice all the needed measures to prove these rights, which will cause great outlays of money, as also an indefinite length of time before the matter is cleared, both parties, led by a mutual interest, have agreed, the one to sell, the other to buy the said rights yet inconclusive, and to be disclosed with the object of forming the demand which will have to be made to the supreme Government of Peru for the value of the premiums on the before-mentioned discoveries of the use and application of guano.

"Therefore, Don Gelacio Cochet, in consideration of the sum which will be mentioned further, sells and makes over unto Don ——— ———, in perpetuity the title and rights which he may acquire as the legal heir of Don Alexandro Cochet to the premiums which the Government of Peru may assign to the said Cochet in conformity with article the first of this agreement, Gelacio Cochet binding himself to prove by means of the corresponding judiciary inscriptive of affiliation to be the true natural son of Mr. Alexandro Cochet, discoverer of the properties and applications of the guano, which is not a hindrance to the ends of the present agreement for Mr. ——— ———, to recognize him as such, in order to proceed to establish the claim which will give him a legal character. Moreover, Mr. Cochet binds himself to confer on Mr. ——— ———, if necessary, a power of attorney in full legal form, so he can make his claims and demand of the case before the corresponding authorities, and also not to give a power to any other person in representative declaring the right of succession to the will of Mr. Alexandro Cochet, free of all compromise, donation, mortgage, or any other charge whatever on its part.

"Don ——— ——— on his part binds himself to pay all the expenses, and perform all the demands which may give for result the declaratory of Don Gelacio Cochet as natural acknowledged son of the deceased Don Alexandro, and to establish all the necessary reclamations to obtain the payment of the premiums that the supreme government may have assigned, or hereafter may assign, to the heirs of Don Alexandro Cochet, as discoverer of the uses and application of the Peruvian guano; and, moreover, he binds himself to give the said Cochet, in payment of the purchase he now makes of the inconclusive rights, the sum of ———, in current coin, be what it may the amount of premium which he might be indemnified with by the Peruvian Government, said sum to be delivered to Cochet at the same moment that he may receive it from the said government, whether it be by means of a compromise, a transaction with it, or by means of a diplomatic reclamation established to the purpose. And if the sum exceeds ——— soles Mr. ——— ——— binds himself to increase the amount to ——— soles more, above the said ———, all expenses and charges having to be made until the payment is obtained of the said premiums inherited to be on his Mr. ——— ———'s account.

"It is distinctly declared that for reason of Cochet's legal right to be considered the heir of Don Alexandro Cochet not being perfected it has been agreed in good faith to make this sale and purchase in a provisional manner; meanwhile the steps are taken to install him in the said character. Both parties binding themselves to respect the present as valid and in force, the same as if it had been by a notary public. Binding themselves both to carry the same to a national document as soon as Cochet is admitted to the rights of a natural and recognized son of Don Alexandro Cochet, and they sign the same before the witnesses undersigned, at Lima, on the thirteenth day of July, eighteen hundred and seventy-nine.

"GELACIO COCHET.

"Witnesses:

"JUAN WILLIAMSON.

"J. THÉOPHILE LANDREAU."

Natarial power of Attorney.—Don Gelacio Cochet to Don ——— ———.

"At Lima, on the seventh of August, one thousand eight hundred and seventy-nine (1879).

"Before me the notary and witnesses, appeared Don Gelacio Cochet, a native and a neighbor of this city, of full age, a painter, and intelligent in the Spanish language, whom I know and warrant, and said:

"That he confers to Don ——— ——— a power of attorney referrent to the minutes hereafter expressed.

"Mr. NOTARY PUBLIC: Please order that in your register of public grants, a genera and full power which I, Gelacio Cochet, a native and a neighbor of this capital, of state single, by profession a painter, and of full age, in full mind and capacity do grant. I bequath in favor of Señor Don ——— ———, actually residing in this city and a native of the United States, married and a merchant by profession, so that he, in my name and representative of my person in its rights and actions, take charge and demand on my account and excute the claims that I have to make on the supreme Government of Peru for the value of the premiums awarded to my father, Don Alexandro Cochet for the discovery and revelations made by him relative to the properties, value, utility, and employment of the guano in the agriculture of the European countries, revelations made prior to the negotiations verified by the supreme government in said article, and which service was duly acknowledged by Congress, but not indemnified at the time, and which now belong to me as the only son and legal heir. Therefore, I confer unto Señor ——— ———, the most ample power to the effect and with the character of exclusive and irrevocable, so that he may establish all convenient claims on the supreme Government of Peru and before all courts of justice which he may consider convenient.

"To demand, establish, and terminate suits, to hear and answer all expositions, receive information, demand testimonials, as much of witnesses as of documentary evidence, whether in foreign lands or within the republic.

"To propose and admit transactions, arrangements, and compromises, and in all to act with the ample powers which by this general power I confer unto him, moreover, that of substituting the same in part or in the whole, on the person or persons whom he may think convenient, having to himself all necessary amplitude so that he, 'whether it be for want of any condition, exception, or else,' be not wanting in validity, with resevation of costs in due form. Please insert and aggregate the clauses in style needed, to insure its validity.

"Lima, seventh of August, one thousand eight hundred and seventy-nine (1879).

GELACIO COCHET.

"Under the bases contained in the foregoing minutes, number nine hundred and seventy-eight (978), this power of attorney stands conferred according to the same. And I, the notary public, do assure and certify that I have complied with the articles, seven hundred and thirty-five (735) and following of the judicial code, and the bequeather well instructed of its contents, he ratifies the same and signs together with the witnesses. .

"Don Manuel Haya, Don Marcelo Vallessos y Don Francisco de Meontestrugue, of this city; Gelacio Cochet, Manuel Ma Haya, Marcelo Valleso, Francisco de Montestrugue. Before me,

"FELIX SOTOMAYOR,
Notary Public.

"Presented before me and is registered at folio six hundred and fifty (650) and following of my register. To which I certify and sign this testimony, after it having been corrected according to law, the day of its being granted."

Power of Attorney No. 1482.—Mr. Gelacio Cochet—Mr. ——— ———.

"At Lima, on the 19th of August, eighteen hundred and seventy-nine, before me the notary and witnesses, appeared Mr. Gelacio Cochet, a native and neighbor of this capital, of full age, well instructed in the Spanish language, and whom I declare I know, who says: That under guarantee of Messrs. Mariano de los Rios, José A. Garcia y Mariano Solas of he being a son of A. Cochet, who also know him personally, he confers on Don ——— ———, the 'power of attorney' referred to in the minutes, which, with the certificate of his birth, is as follows:

"'Partida. The undersigned curate, rector, of the parochial of the sagrario of the cathedral, * * * certifies that in my bound common paper book, entries of baptisms in which are made, which begins in eighteen hundred and forty-one (1841), and ends in eighteen hundred and forty-eight (1848), at page 190, there is an entry which says as follows:

"'PARTIDA.

"'In the city of Lima, capital of the Republic of Peru, on the thirtieth of May, eighteen hundred and forty-five (1845), the Presbitero Don Gregoria Balenzo, a lieutenant of the curate, rectors of the sagrario of the cathedral, solemnly baptized and put Oleo and Crisma to Gelacio of one year old, natural son of Alexandro Cochet; Don Mariano Camacho being his godfather.

"'DON JOSÉ PALOMINO.

"'Witnesses:

"'ANDRES LEON.

"'BALTAZAR LUGONES.

"'To which I certify.

"'JUAN DE DROS CARDENAS.'"

[A rubricated sign.]

"It is in conformity with the matriz, to which the undersigned refers if necessary, and delivers the present at the verbal request of the party.

"At Lima, fifth of August, eighteen hundred and seventy-nine (1879).

"Doctor ANDRES TOVAR, Señor Secretario Sirvare:

"MR. SECRETARY: Please to enter in your register of public documents a special power of attorney which I, Gelacio Cochet, of this neighborhood, son of the French citizen, Mr. Alexandro Cochet, confer in favor of Señor Don ——— ———, a native and citizen of the United States of North America, so that in my name and in representation of my person, actions, and rights, may exact from the public authorities of France, and especially of the notaries public of Paris, the titles which contain the last desire and will of my said deceased father, Don Alexandro Cochet, according to information which I have received, and with the rights corresponding to me in virtue of the 'certificate of baptism' which I adjoin and which you will please to insert in the body of the present power of attorney, as more binding proof on granting the same. I wish, moreover, that it may have all necessary amplitude, so that my representative empowered can present himself before the French tribunals, and, if necessary, to make arrangements, settle accounts with debtors and creditors and others interested and connected with the testamentary dispositions of my said deceased father, Don Alexandro Cochet, and so that for want of conditions or expressions may not have the legal force, with, moreover, the power of substituting the person or persons he may judge convenient, with relevation of costs in due form. You will please add the clauses of style which insure its validity.

"Lima, eighteenth of August, eighteen hundred and seventy-nine.

"GELACIO COCHET."

"Under the bases contained in the preceding minutes, number nine hundred and ninety-two (992), this power of attorney is conferred with relevation of charges. And I, the notary public, certify that I have complied with articles 735 and following of the judiciary civil code, and that the grantor on granting the same is well posted in its contents, and ratifies and signs the same with the witnesses, Don Mariano de los Rios, Don José A. Garcia y Don Mariano de Solas, of this neighborhood, whom I also know, Gelacio Cochet, Mariano de los Rios, José A. Garcia, y Mariano de Solas.

"Before me,

"FELIX SOTOMAYOR,
"Notary Public.

"In conformity with the original done before me, which is on the six hundred and sixty-eighth (668) page of my register, to which I refer.

"I certify and sign this testimony after having been corrected according to law. Date of power.

"We, the public notaries who sign, certify that the said companion notary who signs, Don Felix Sotomayor, is in full exercise of his functions, and in order that it may have all its effects, we sign the present.

"FELIX VIVANEO.

"Legalized in the Department of the Prefecture, at Lima, 27th August, 1879."

(French legalization.)

Pursuant to this last power of attorney a deputy was sent to Paris to verify the death, intestacy, and solvency of Alexandre Cochet, which he thoroughly did; paying in full the only indebtednes remaining—a sum of something less than 500 francs—and ascertaining from the surviving companions of Cochet's last years many facts corroborative of all that was otherwise already known material to his discoveries and to the sole heirship of his son, Gelacio.

[Private draft memorandnm. Return to Jacob R. Shipherd, 10 Spruce street, New York.]

THE PERUVIAN COMPANY.

SUGGESTIONS OF POINTS TO BE INCLUDED IN AN AGREEMENT BETWEEN THE GOVERNMENT OF PERU AND THE PERUVIAN COMPANY.

I.—The government to stipulate:

First. That in 1840 Alexandre Cochet discovered guano within the meaning of the decree of February 13, 1833.

Second. That the Congressional and Executive acts and declarations of 1847, 1849, and 1851 mean this.

Third. That this meaning has never been denied or questioned by the government heretofore, and shall not be denied or questioned hereafter.

Fourth. That Cochet's discovery immediately vested in him a complete title to one-third of all the guano in original deposits in Peru, and that such title was a title to one-third of each separate deposit.

Fifth. That the removal of Cochet's one-third of each deposit by the government, or by its agents, was a tortious conversion, for which Peru, as a responsible agent, is bound to make amends to the owner.

Sixth. That the measure of damages in the premises cannot be less than the value of the converted property at the time of its conversion with interest at six per cent.

Seventh. That the agreed total of these damages, including interest to January 1, 1881, is $900,000,000.

Eighth. That this total shall be capitalized as of that day, and shall bear interest at six per cent. until paid.

Ninth. That payments hereafter made shall be applied first to meet accrued interest, and afterward to reduce the principal.

Tenth. That under the law of contracts of 1845 this indebtedness to Cochet is entitled to prirority over any debt contracted by the government after the passage of that law. Also that all contract obligations created against the government after that date, which might antagonize this priority, must be subordinated to it.

Eleventh. That no payment on account of the indebtedness of the government to Cochet has ever been made, although a grant of 5,000 tons guano in his favor on account of his expenses was once authorized.

And that there is, therefore, now due to Cochet and his legal representatives—

1. The sum of $900,000,000 liquidated damages with interest at six per cent. from January 1, 1881, until paid.

2. One-third of all the guano remaining in Peru in original deposits at the date hereof.

3. The value of one-third of all the guano taken from original deposits in Peru between January 1, 1881, and the date hereof, with interest at six per cent. until paid.

Twelfth. That all the rights of Alexandre Cochet in the premises have been duly transferred to, and are now vested in the Peruvian Company, party herein.

Thirteenth. The government, therefore hereby recognizes, and formally acknowledges, its direct indebtedness in the premises to the Peruvian Company—

1. In the sum of $900,000,000 with interest at six per cent. from January 1, 1881, until paid; and this sum is admitted to be due and payable in full before any indebtedness created prior to the passage of the law of contracts of 1845.

2. In the value of one-third of all guano taken from original deposits in Peru, since the first day of January, 1881, with interest at six per cent. until paid.

Fourteenth. The government also acknowledges the Peruvian Company to be the owner absolute, with title complete in Cochet and his legal representatives since 1840, of one-third of all the guano remaining in the original deposits in Peru, with a perpetual easement of approach and right of access thereto, over all lands and waters since 1840 at any time within the territory of Peru, and the free and unhindered right to hold, use, sell, assign, and take the same and every part thereof, away at the company's discretion without let, hindrance, impost, taxation, charge, or condition of any kind.

Fifteenth. And, whereas, the government is now unable to pay or discharge this large indebtedness or any considerable portion thereof, and by the misfortunes of war is otherwise disabled for the time being, the government cannot now refuse its chief creditor any access to the resources of the country, out of which payment might be made under a just administration directed by the creditor.

Sixteenth. Yielding to the just demands of all interests concerned in the premises, and in the hope that the remaining deposits of guano and nitrate may suffice for the discharge of all its indebtedness under proper administration, the government hereby acquiesces in the proposal of its chief creditor, made in its own behalf and in the interest and behalf of all creditors of the government whose express agent it may in due course hereafter become, to take immediate possession of all original deposits of guano and nitrate which were within the territory of Peru January 1, 1881, and to take such possession of all adjacent lands and waters as may be necessary or convenient to the mining and removal of such deposits, such possession of the deposits and use of adjoining lands and waters for the purposes of this agreement and the proper administration of the trust occupation hereby consented to, during the term of such occupation hereby limited, to be that of the lord of the soil; and the integrity of such possession the government hereby guarantees; the term of occupation to expire upon the full payment of the indebtedness herein recognized as already due, or which may hereafter become due to the Peruvian Company or to any other creditor whose agent or assign the company may hereafter become. The term of one year after such full payment to be allowed the company for the liquidation of its affairs and the withdrawal of its agents from the republic.

Seventeenth. In case the deposits of guano and nitrate shall be exhausted, or shall prove insufficient to pay the interest upon the capitalized indebtedness herein recognized, the company shall be at liberty to propose such other measures, amendatory of those herein agreed upon, as it may deem just in the premises.

Eighteenth. The government guarantees the personal liberty and safety of all officers, agents, servants, guards, and guests of the company within the republic, and recognizes in their favor an unqualified right of entry, residence, and departure at pleasure, subject always to the condition of personal good behavior, and the non-abuse of the national hospitality. Offenses against public order may upon demand of the company be adjudged and punished by an agreed tribunal, or in default of such agreement by the company itself.

Nineteenth. The government will never impose any taxation, direct or indirect, upon the company, nor upon its property or business, nor upon any of its officers, agents, guards, servants, or guests, their property or business; but it may require the company as to any individuals so exempted either to consent to such taxation as might otherwise be imposed under general laws, or else to credit to the government the amount thereof in account current as of the date when it would be due under the law. Such requirement must be duly notified to the company year by year, to be effective, and must include full specifications of the taxes required to be consented to or credited for the year then current.

Twentieth. The company may at its discretion maintain at all times such a force as it may deem necessary for the protection of its property and interests, and this force may include detachments from the land and naval forces of the United States of America and of any other government whose citizens are share-holders of the company, or are recognized creditors of Peru.

Twenty-first. The government consents to the transfer to the company by sale or other assignment of any indebtedness now existing or hereafter arising against the government, which has been duly recognized by the government as a valid claim, and to the consolidation for the purposes of collection of any claim so transferred with the principal indebtedness herein recognized. Before the transfer of claims which have not been recognized the government reserves the right to demand their contest before and adjudication by arbitrators, or such other tribunal as may be agreed upon.

Twenty-second. The government necessarily consents to the deduction from the gross revenues arising from the working of the resources hereby placed at the command of its creditors, of all expenses of operation, administration, and defense, and demands that the net remainder of such revenues shall be passed to its credit by the company annually in account.

Twenty-third. The government engages to execute at any time hereafter upon request any further memoranda of recognition and definition necessary or convenient to the effectual fulfillment of this agreement according to its true intent.

II. The company to stipulate—

First. To make no demand for payment so long as this agreement shall be observed in good faith by the government and people of Peru, and the net revenue realized by the company under this agreement shall suffice to pay the interest annually accruing upon the entire indebtedness held by the company.

Second. To offer to all other just creditors of the government the company's certificates of indebtedness, bearing interest at not less than three per cent. for the par value, including accrued interest, of all recognized claims against the government existing on the day of the date hereof, and to provide for the annual retirement of such certificates by a sinking fund created by the reservation to its credit of not less than one-half of the entire annual net revenue of the company in excess of thirty millions of dollars.

Third. To deliver annually to the government a certified transcript of the results of the entire business of the company, clearly itemized, and showing in detail the state of the account current between the company and the government.

Fourth. To maintain toward the government and toward the people of Peru an attitude of sincere friendship and good-will, and to use all means to render its temporary residence within the republic not only inoffensive but useful.

Fifth. To enforce upon all its agents, servants, and representatives due respect to the government and institutions of the republic, and unhesitating obedience to its just laws.

Sixth. To maintain, and to enforce upon all its representatives a strict neutrality toward all political parties and interests, domestic and foreign, except only as the protection of the property interests of the company may otherwise require; and whenever such interests may demand the expression of a preference, such expression shall be made in the company's name, upon competent authorization, frankly and kindly.

Seventh. To co-operate heartily with the government and the people in all measures calculated to promote the early restoration of the prosperities of peace and order, and to forward the commercial and industrial development of the republic.

Eighth. To consolidate with the principal indebtedness herein recognized only such claims against Peru as have been duly certified or recognized by Congress or by executive officers of the government.

Ninth. To unite with the government in the measures necessary to an adjudication by arbitrators or by an agreed tribunal of all claims not so recognized in which the company may become interested.

MUTUAL COVENANTS.

First. That no tribunal shall ever have jurisdiction of this agreement or of any issue arising between the parties hereto, except by the prior express consent of both the parties.

Second. That each party shall maintain a resident representative near the executive of the other, duly accredited to such executive, and that the ordinary intercourse of the parties shall be maintained through these representatives according to diplomatic usage.

[Private draft memorandum. Return to Jacob R. Shipherd. 10 Spruce street, New York.]

THE PERUVIAN COMPANY.

PERUVIAN SINKING FUND SCRIP.

First. All recognized creditors to be invited to surrender their claims to the company (by assignment), and to receive in exchange the company's sinking fund scrip for the par face of the claim, including accrued interest to the date of exchange; this scrip to bear interest at four per cent. until paid.

Second. Scrip to be issued in even amounts of $1,000 and multiples thereof, also in any desired fractional amounts, and to be transferable at the holder's election, either by delivery or by registration, and to be payable at the company's principal treasury, in New York, July 1st, 1883, and annually thereafter.

Third. Chili to be recognized among the creditors of Peru, for such a reasonable amount as may be agreed upon between her and the company, and to accept her allottment of scrip in full of all demands against Peru.

Fourth. The company will prefer its share-holders to the extent of three per cent. upon a fixed capitalization of $1,000,000,000 and will pay annually on the first day of April—beginning with 1883—one-half its net income above such three per cent. to the credit of the commissioners of the sinking fund.

Fifth. On the 1st of April, 1883, and annually thereafter, the commissioners of the sinking fund will notify the governments of the United States, Great Britain, France, Germany, Italy, Chili, and Peru, and also the presidents of the leading stock exchanges in each of these countries, and, by advertisement for not less than one month in at least one leading paper in each of these countries, will notify whom it may concern, and by circular through the post will notify separately every registered holder of scrip, of the amount to their credit for the year applicable to the redemption of the company's scrip, and of the time when, the place where, and the terms upon which proposals for the sale of scrip will be received.

Sixth. Such proposals shall be addressed to the "commissioners of the sinking fund of the Peruvian Company," at the company's principal office, in the city of New York, and shall be accompanied with a guarantee draft on New York bankers for five per cent. of the flat face amount of scrip offered by each bidder, payable to the order of the commissioners, to be returned to the bidder immediately after the adjustment of awards.

Seventh. Each bidder shall state the flat face amount of scrip he is prepared to deliver if his bid shall be accepted, and the fixed per cent. of its gross face value, including interest, he is content to receive in full payment therefor; no bids in excess of 100 per cent. to be considered or accepted at any time.

Eighth. The commissioners shall consider in each year only such bids as conform to these specifications, and are received by them on or before the first day of July in that year. On the second day of July, 1883, and annually thereafter—except when this day shall fall upon a Sunday, and in such year upon the third day of July—at noon, the commissioners shall meet in open session at the company's principal office, in New York, and in the presence of any bidders who may choose to be present in person or by duly accredited attorney, shall open, read, and tabulate the proposals received, and immediately upon the conclusion of such tabulation shall award and declare in favor of the lowest bidders a purchase of so much of the scrip offered as the fund at their disposal will suffice to pay for; and the details of such award shall be officially communicated within ten days thereafter to whom it may concern by circular through the post and by advertisement.

Ninth. Payment for scrip awarded will be made by the company's treasurer only upon the certificate of the commissioners.

Tenth. Guarantee checks of successful bidders will be forfeited unless the scrip offered by them shall be presented for redemption within sixty days after the declaration of award. Neither the company nor the commissioners will guarantee the delivery of the notice of award.

Eleventh. With each lot of scrip presented for redemption the bidder must tender a proper release under seal—upon forms to be supplied by the company—setting forth his acceptance of the amount awarded as payment in full.

Twelfth. Interest upon accepted scrip will cease upon the day of award.

Thirteenth. There shall be five commissioners of the sinking fund, who will be paid by the company out of the sinking fund; of these one at least shall be named by the company, and of the others one may be nominated by the Government of Peru, one by the Government of Chili, one by the Government of Great Britain, and one by the Government of France; such nominations to be made annually to the company, and to be subject to its approval and appointment.

Fourteenth. These conditions to be printed upon and to form part of the company's agreement with the holder of each certificate of scrip.

No. 414.

Personal.] Mr. Walker Blaine to Mr. Shipherd.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, July 28, 1881.

DEAR SIR: I am just in receipt of your pleasant letter of the 27th instant. With reference to the whereabouts of Mr. Suarez, I have to inform you that the Department has learned that Mr. Suarez was at Panama on the 13th of July, and that he intended sailing that day for Peru, and it is supposed did so.

In regard to the other inquiries in your letter I cannot make answer until after consultation with the Secretary.

I will communicate with you further hereafter, and have meanwhile the honor to be, sir,

Very respectfully, &c.,

WALKER BLAINE.

JACOB R. SHIPHERD, Esq.,
New York City.

No. 415.

Mr. Shipherd to Mr. Blaine.

THE PERUVIAN COMPANY, 10 SPRUCE STREET,
New York, October 10, 1881. (Received October 11.)

SIR: I have the honor to inclose herewith—

1. A printed and sealed official copy of a note addressed to the Hon. J. F. Elmore, minister resident of Peru at Washington, bearing date October 1, 1881, and subscribed by the undersigned.

2. A like copy of a note addressed to the Hon. Marcial Martinez, envoy extraordinary and minister plenipotentiary of Chili at Washington, bearing date October 5, 1881, and subscribed by the undersigned.

The originals hereof are to-day delivered to the * * * counsel of this company at Washington, for immediate transmittal to the respective addresses, and I have therefore the honor to ask that these copies may be placed on file in the Department, and that I may be duly advised that they have been so placed.

I have, &c.,

JACOB R. SHIPHERD,
President of the Peruvian Company.

[Inclosure 1 in Mr. Shipherd's letter of October 10, 1881.]

(Official copy.)

SIR: I am charged with the duty of bringing to the official notice of your excellency the fact that one-third of all the guano lying in original deposits within the territory of Peru on the first day of January, 1841, is now, and for some time past has been, the property of the Peruvian Company, a corporation created by one of the United States, and composed exclusively of American citizens, whose title has duly descended from Alexander Cochet, duly adjudged to have been the first and true discoverer of guano in Peru, and in whom the fee absolute to such one-third was duly vested by the republic by operation of law.

I am therefore further charged to demand, as I now do, in behalf of this owner, due recognition by the existing government of all the rights of the Peruvian Company in the premises as such owner, and the formal release in its favor of all custody, control, claim, and assertion adverse to the title herein asserted, so far as the government and people of Peru are or may be concerned.

I am further charged to demand, as I now do, payment in full, with interest from the date of removal, for so much of the property hereby demanded as may not be found in the place of original deposit when the Government of Peru shall attest the release herein above demanded.

And, in view of the temporary embarrassments of Peru, I am further charged to protest, as I now do, against any and all negotiations and acts tending toward the cession, sale, lease, hypothecation, or other incumbrance or disposition of any property held, owned, or controlled by Peru pending the full satisfaction of the demands herein made and intended.

A copy of this notice and demand will be delivered to the honorable the Secretary of State, at Washington, and a duplicate is herewith inclosed for transmission at your official discretion to His Excellency the President of Peru.

I shall be pleased to supply to His Excellency the President of Peru, upon due request, any further information appropriate to the premises, including all necessary evidences of the title herein asserted, and to designate a commissioner duly authorized to represent the owner in the immediate custody and control of the property hereby demanded.

In conclusion, I beg your excellency to receive due assurance of the distinguished consideration with which I have the honor to remain—

Your excellency's obedient servant,

JACOB R. SHIPHERD,
President of the Peruvian Company.

Dated NEW YORK, October 1, 1881.

To His Excellency the Honorable J. F. ELMORE,
Minister of Peru, resident at Washington, D. C.

[Incoslure 2 in Mr. Shipherd's letter of October 10, 1881.]

(Official copy.)

SIR: I have the honor to inclose herewith a copy of a communication heretofore addressed and delivered to his excellency the minister of Peru, resident at Washington. I add also another copy of the inclosure and a copy of this note to be forwarded, at your official discretion, to His Excellency the President of Chili. A further copy of this note will be delivered to the honorable the Secretary of State at Washington.

The immediate and sincerely friendly purpose of this note is to spare the Government of Chili the serious embarrassment which would necessarily follow if the representatives of Chili now in Peru should continue to deal, however inadvertently, with the property of citizens of the United States, as if it were the property of Peru.

And hereupon I am authorized to assure your excellency in no doubtful terms of the readiness of the Peruvian Company to recognize every fact involved in the actual status resulting under the rules of war among civilized nations, from the campaign of Chili now closing, reserving only those indestructible rights of neutrals which even war must recognize and protect.

It is believed that so far from embarrassing or delaying the conclusion of a peace honorable alike to victor and vanquished, and just to all interests to be affected by the adjustment so much desired and as yet so vainly sought, the interests which I have the honor to represent may be so circumstanced as to afford to all parties an immediate and final solution of all urgent problems, and especially may afford the most efficient and substantial guarantees of a long period of peace and prosperity in the immediate future, that peace which tends only to industry and internal content, and indisposes to intrigue and to war.

It may be proper to prevent possible indistinctness that I should specifically point out some of the leading implications of this communication as to the past as well as to the future, and with your excellency's indulgence, I therefore proceed to observe:

First. That this notice of title is unqualified, and may be understood to imply whatever may be implied by an unqualified notice and demand in like premises.

Second. That the Peruvian Company expects Chili to account to it for whatever guano she has removed or suffered to be removed from original deposits in Peru at any time since January 1, 1841.

Third. That the Peruvian Company expects Chili, on and after the day of the delivery of this note and its inclosures to your excellency, to recognize and protect the title herein asserted throughout the territory of Peru so long as the military forces of Chili shall continue therein.

Fourth. That for any failure or refusal hereafter to recognize and to protect the title herein asserted, the Peruvian Company expects to hold Chili directly responsible; and the company will, in such case, rely upon the protection of its own government.

Fifth. It should not be overlooked that so long as the military forces of Chili continue in Peru, the company must require of them directly, and must hold the Government of Chili directly responsible for all the protection, relief, and assistance which but for such occupation it might properly demand of the Government of Peru; and express notice of such requirement is hereby given, together with like notice that for any detention or appropriation of or injury to the property of Peru, the debtor of the Peruvian Company, after the delivery to your excellency of this notice, and pending the full satisfaction of the demands comprised in the memoranda herewith inclosed, the company must and will hold the Government of Chili directly liable in full.

Of course, I am ready to supply to His Excellency the President of Chili, upon due request, all further information appropriate to the premises, including all necessary evidences of the title herein asserted, and to designate a commissioner duly authorized to represent the owners in the immediate custody and control of the property hereby demanded.

Not for a moment doubting the sincere readiness of the government and people of Chili at all times to do justice, and fully confiding in the early and amicable adjustment of all issues herein contemplated, I avail myself of this opportunity to assure your excellency of the distinguished consideration with which I have the honor to remain

Your excellency's obedient servant,

JACOB R. SHIPHERD,
President of the Peruvian Company.

Dated NEW YORK, October 5, 1881.

To His Excellency the Honorable MARCIAL MARTINEZ,
Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary of Chili, at Washington.

No. 416.

Mr. Blaine to Mr. Shipherd.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, October 12, 1881.

SIR: I have to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 10th instant, inclosing printed copies of two notes addressed by you, one to the Hon. J. F. Elmore and the other to the Hon. Marcial Martinez, both of which have been placed upon the files of the Department.

I am, sir, &c.,

JAMES G. BLAINE.

JACOB R. SHIPHERD,
President of the Peruvian Company,
10 Spruce street, New York.

No. 417.

Mr. Shipherd to Mr. Blaine.

[Peruvian Company, 10 Spruce street, New York. Post-office box 3448.]

OCTOBER 18, 1881. (Received October 20.)

SIR: I have the honor to inclose herewith legal proofs of the due service upon the ministers of Peru and Chili respectively of the demands whereof official copies were transmitted for file in the Department of State with my note of the 10th instant. From these proofs it appears that such service was made at Washington by one Ellery C. Bartlett upon the 13th instant.

I have the honor to request that these proofs may be placed on file in the Department, and that I may be duly advised that they have been so placed.

I have the honor also to inclose herewith copies of these demands for transmission to the American ministers at Lima and at Santiago, in case it shall seem to the Secretary proper that such transmission with or without accompanying instructions should be directed.

I avail myself of the opportunity to acknowledge with thanks the due receipt of your advice, dated October 12, 1881, and remain, sir, with great respect, your obedient servant,

JACOB R. SHIPHERD.

CITY OF WASHINGTON,
District of Columbia, ss:

Ellery C. Bartlett, being duly sworn, deposes and says that on the 13th day of October, A. D. 1881, at the city of Washington aforesaid, he personally served upon his Excellency the Hon. Marcial Martinez, envoy extraordinary and minister plenipotentiary of Chili, the original communication subscribed by Jacob R. Shipherd, president of the Peruvian Company, of which an official copy* is herewith annexed, together with the papers therein mentioned as accompanying the same, and that he made such service by delivery of all the said papers to the said Martinez at the residence of the said Martinez, No. 1400 Massachusetts avenue, northwest in the said city of Washington, and leaving the same with him; and that he then and there knew the person to whom he delivered the said papers to be the said Martinez, and further deponent saith not.

ELLERY C. BARTLETT.

Sworn to and subscribed before me this 14th day of October, 1881.
[NOTARIAL SEAL.]

W. F. PEDDRICK,
Notary Public.

CITY OF WASHINGTON,
District of Columbia, ss:

Ellery C. Bartlett, being duly sworn, deposes, and says, that on the 13th day of October, 1881, at the city of Washington aforesaid, he personally served upon his Excellency the Hon. J. F. Elmore, minister of Peru resident at Washington, the original communication subscribed by Jacob R. Shipherd, president of the Peruvian Company, of which an official copy† is herewith annexed, together with the papers therein mentioned as accompanying the same; and that he made such service by delivery of all the said papers to the said Elmore, at the residence of the said Elmore, No. 613 Thirteenth street northwest, in the said city of Washington, and leaving the same with him; and that he then and there knew the person to whom the said papers were delivered, to be the said Elmore; and further deponent saith not.

ELLERY C. BARTLETT.

Sworn to and subscribed before me this 14th day of October, 1881.
[NOTARIAL SEAL.]

W. F. PEDDRICK,
Notary Public.

No. 418.

Mr. Blaine to Mr. Shipherd.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, October 22, 1881.

SIR: I have to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 18th instant, and of the papers to which you allude as legal proofs of the due

---

* For inclosure, see inclosure 1 in Mr. Shipherd's letter of October 10, 1881, Document No. 415.
† For inclosure, see inclosure No. 2, in Mr. Shipherd's letter of October 10, 1881, Document No. 415.

service upon the ministers of Peru and Chili, respectively, of the demands whereof official copiés were transmitted for file in the Department of State, with your note of the 10th instant.

Your letter and inclosures have been filed as you request.

I am, sir, &c.,

JAMES G. BLAINE.

No. 419.

Mr. Hadden to Mr. Hunter.

THE PERUVIAN COMPANY,
10 Spruce street, New York, November 28, 1881.
(Received November 29.)

SIR: President Shipherd directs me to inclose you herewith a copy of a note* forwarded to General Hurlbut by the last steamer; and to say that he caused a set of the printed papers, promised you in a recent conversation, to be forwarded to your address on the 23d instant; which he trusts have already safely reached you.

Very respectfully,

A. HADDEN,
Private Secretary.

No. 420.

Mr. Blaine to Mr. Shipherd.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, December 3, 1881.

SIR: General Stephen A. Hurlbut, our minister to Peru, acting with perfect official propriety, returns to the State Department the letters you have addressed to him in regard to claims against that government in which you profess to have an interest. During the first interview you had with me in August last, I advised you that it was not proper for you to correspond with the American minister in regard to private claims, and that the necessities and courtesies of the situation required a minister to give attention only to such private interests as were submitted to his attention with the sanction and the responsibility of the Department. You indicated your recognition of the fitness of this rule, and your intention of complying with it; and you mentioned the names of several distinguished lawyers, well-known to the country, who would soon proceed to Peru as the representatives of your claims. I promptly gave you the assurance that if any one of the eminent gentlemen named by you should go to Lima on any professional business, he could rely on the courteous attentions and kindly offices of the American minister in his aid. Quoting confidently, as you did, the alleged opinion of my distinguished predecessor, Mr. Evarts, as to the validity and value of the Cochet claim, which you represented, I told you that I would instruct General Hurlbut to examine into its character and make report thereon to me, which duty he faithfully performed. Beyond this you had no right to demand or expect any aid from the State Department, and your holding a private correspondence with General Hurlbut was a gross infraction of every rule of propriety. Nothing could more rapidly tend to destroy the character and influence of an American mission in any foreign country than to have it even suspected that it was entertaining and manipulating private claims against that country, aside from instructions of his government.

*For inclosure, being letter of Mr. Shipherd to Mr. Hurlbut, dated November 15, 1881, see inclosure 4, in document No. 388.

I have thus far spoken only of your violation of the rules of propriety. I wish, for your sake, I could stop there. But in one of your letters you deliberately make an improper and unlawful proposition to General Hurlbut, offering, as you do, to place a large interest in your claim, subject to his control, in effect offering him a bribe with scarcely an attempt at disguise. For this offense, I deem it my duty to advise you that you can no longer appear as an attorney in any case before the State Department. I shall submit your correspondence to the President with the view of determining whether further notice should be taken of your offense by the Attorney-General.

The only palliation or excuse I can find in your correspondence, is in its extravagant and extraordinary tone, from which it would appear that you are actualy unable to take a sensible and rational view of the claim in which you imagine that you possess so many hundreds of millions of dollars. As your correspondence, in almost every line, seems to be that of a man laboring under a delusion, I am inclined to believe that you may not have properly weighed, and therefore, are not morally responsible for the improper proposals you have made.

I am the more disposed to this view from your inexcusable folly in writing lengthy letters to General Hurlbut, informing him of the views of the State Department in regard to your claims. The business of the State Department is to communicate its own views to United States ministers abroad, and your assuming to give any assistance on the subject would have been a piece of presumption even had you written the truth. But under some indefinable hallucination you communicated, as the views of the Department, these extravagant and absurd stories, which, as I have recently learned, you have been talking to every man that would listen.

I find another evidence of your delusion in the list of names you give as being already associated, or about to be associated, with you in the prosecution of these claims. Your list embraces the names of some forty or fifty of the most eminent capitalists of New York, and among your alleged attorneys are some of the most distinguished of the American bar. I shall be surprised to find that any one of these gentlemen ever authorized you to use his name any more than I authorized you to present your claim to General Hurlbut.

I have written at this length in order that you might be made acquainted with the reasons which may induce the government to refrain from prosecuting you for an attempt to bribe a public official, as it might otherwise consider it to be its duty.

I am, &c.,

JAMES G. BLAINE.

No. 421.

Mr. Shipherd to Mr. Hunter.

NEW YORK, December 5, 1881. (Received December 9.)

SIR: I inclose for your information a copy of a letter received by the last steamer. The writer is the alter ego of President Calderon, and a letter by the preceding steamer explained—

1. That the claim and plans of the Peruvian Company had been for several weeks under careful consideration by the Peruvian Executive.
2. That an examination of the archives had verified all the material historical facts upon which our claim rests.
3. That General Hurlbut cordially favored our plan.
4. That the only question seemed to be whether the discoverer of a value had as much equity as the discoverer of a heap.
5. That at the conference fixed for the 6th a final answer to our demand was to have been decided on.

What that final answer was likely to have been, in the judgment of Mr. ———, seems to be intimated in the words I have underscored near the close of his letter. As soon as we are definitely advised of the tenor of the dispatches sent out on Saturday, we shall see our way clear to another step.

I am, &c.,

JACOB R. SHIPHERD.

[Inclosure in Mr. Shipherd's letter of December 5.]

*Mr. * * * to Mr. Shipherd.*

LIMA, November 9, 1881.

ESTEEMED SIR: By the last mail from Panama I received your letter which, by advice of your friends, you have addressed to me under date 5th of October last, developing the vast financial plan which the Peruvian Company proposes to realize.

I regret to state to you in reply that having placed myself in accord with his excellency, the Provisional President of the Republic, for a conference which was to have taken place at 12 o'clock noon of Sunday, the 6th instant, with the object of showing to him as well your opinion as the documents and other papers which accompany it, a new outrage upon Peru, doubtless the greatest of the Chilian domination among the episodes of the state of war in these latter times, absolutely frustrated the conference agreed upon.

The telegraph and later the correspondence which the mail will carry from this country to the United States will inform you of the unheard of act carried out with surprise and daring.

The Chilians having taken possession, in the morning of Sunday, the 6th instant, of the person of the President of Peru, conveying him at once and in an express train to Callao, and afterwards depositing the prisoner on board the iron-clad Lord Cochran, which sailed twenty-four hours later, for unknown parts.

I omit all commentary upon the enormity of the abuse committed by the implacable conqueror upon the chief of a government of order established by the nation precisely for the purpose of celebrating and cementing peace with Chili upon just bases, and who had just been recognized and proclaimed by the great territorial sections of the north and south of the Republic, and by the armies garrisoning the same.

Chili does not consent to the consoliation of any serious and stable government in Peru. She wishes to divide her and anarchize her more and more each day, in order to carry out with impunity the public and private international robbery, which she has undertaken, and which Christian and cultivated nations tolerate with impassibility, without remembering that transgressions committed upon the laws of nations constitute teachings and precedents to be cited as authority whenever the abuse of the strong desire to oppress and disunite to-day one nation, to-morrow another, in continual rotation upon all weak people, or those who may arrive to be weak in any occasion or circumstance.

The fact is that the deed carried out has rendered impossible the conferences to which I above alluded, and renders the action with which you have charged me in your letter inopportune until public affairs are placed back again in the path which in my opinion only the Government of the American Union can enable us to reach by hastening events and thus vindicating their traditional policy.

For this there is an opportunity offered by the continuation of the constitutional regimen of the Vice-President elected by the National Congress in last August, Rear-Admiral Don Lizardo Montero.

The latter will assume the command the moment the news of this infamous outrage shall reach him, and it is evident that by lending to him a strong hand on the part of the Government of the United States we may arrive at the desired solution of all the questions of the war and at the restoration of internal order.

Whatever you and your friends may do in this sense will be a benefit to Peru and the victory of your own plans.

I trust that you will let me know opportunely what action in this direction may be expected.

I have, &c.,

* * *

No. 422.

Messrs. Montferrand and Suarez to Mr. Evarts.

WILLARD'S HOTEL,
Washington, January 17, 1881.

SIR: We have the honor to inclose you our letters of credence from the "Société Générale de Crédit Industriel et Commercial," and, at the same time, a letter of introduction from Ed. Noetzlin, esq., one of the directors of the Banque Franco Egyptienne.

Waiting your pleasure as to an interview, we take the occasion to subscribe ourselves, with the most respectful consideration, your obedient servants,

CH. DE MONTFERRAND.
FRANC'O. DE P. SUAREZ.

Mr. Durrien to Mr. Evarts.

[Translation.]

[General Society of Industrial and Commercial Credit, 66 rue de la Chanssée d'Artin and 72 rue de la Victoire.]

PARIS, December 29, 1880.

SIR: We have the honor hereby to accredit to you the Count de Montferrand and Mr. F. de P. Suarez, whom we have instructed to go to Washington for the purpose of coming to an understanding with you in relation to the part to be taken by us in the financial or commercial arrangements which may be the consequence of the mediation of the United States Government between Peru and Chili.

Be pleased to accept, Mr. Secretary of State, the assurance of our highest consideration.

H. DURRIEN, President.

Mr. EVARTS,
Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, Washington.

No. 423.

Count de Montferrand and Mr. Suarez to Mr. Evarts.

WASHINGTON, D. C., January 20, 1881. (Received January 21.)

SIR: The undersigned, representatives appointed by the Société Générale de Crédit Industriel et Commercial to the Government of the United States to offer certain financial propositions in order to facilitate the restoration of peace between the republics of Bolivia, Chili, and Peru, and at the same time to protect the financial interests of the last-named republic and of her creditors, most respectfully submit the following for your consideration:

That the United States should again tender her friendly mediation to the above republics as she has done on two previous occasions, actuated by the desire to protect her sister republics in South America, in the cause of humanity, to prevent bloodshed, and to promote the commercial interests of the southern continent. In doing so, we cannot more aptly express our views, than to quote the words of one of the representatives of your government at the late conference (Minister Osborn), who stated at the opening of the conference:

> That the Government of the United States feel a deep interest in the welfare of the three belligerent nations; and it could not be otherwise, since the United States inaugurated in America the republican system, being, therefore, responsible for the existence of republican institutions. It was the first to recognize the independence of these republics, and it has watched with great solicitude from that day to the present the efforts made by them to maintain themselves up to the level of the progress of civilization, rejoicing with them at their advancement and their prosperity. We know, to-day, republican institutions are put to a test before the whole world, and the nations here represented have an equal interest with us in maintaining these institutions and making them a success. The United States naturally deeply deplore the existence of this fratricidal war, and wish a prompt termination of the same. Such is the feeling which has inspired the attitude assumed by the Government of the United States, and it entertains the sincere hope that before this conference will close there will be secured an honorable and everlasting peace between your governments.

We beg to state what we understand to be the conditions existing between these countries in consequence of treaties heretofore existing between Chili and Bolivia as to the right of Chilians to carry on their manufacturing pursuits within the Republic of Bolivia, and to be free from internal taxes, fines, and imposts on the part of Bolivia. The Republic of Bolivia denied that her treaty obligations made any such exemptions from such taxes. This was followed by an appeal of Bolivia to Peru for protection under an existing treaty between the last two named governments. Thus these three republics without calm deliberation became entangled in what may be termed a fratricidal war, which, like all fratricidal wars, has gone beyond the limits of humanity and civilization; hence a strong appeal is made to your government for interference. We find that women and children are outraged and murdered, while the men are massacred even when they are prisoners. Under these circumstances we make a positive appeal to you to interfere, and to require a cessation of these hostilities, the more especially as this can be done with self-respect to all the parties, and on such terms as we believe we are able to submit for your consideration.

The European world has, in this particular instance, with surprising unanimity, recognized the Monroe doctrine, and not only looks to the United States to interfere, but has on every occasion, when the matter has been submitted for its consideration, urged that your government should act; and it will always be a proud page in your government's history that it has on two previous occasions tendered the olive branch. Again the appeal comes, and we beg that you will show your wonted sympathy for the weak and protection to all, and to tender, nay, more, to insist, so far as it is becoming, that the mediation of the United States shall be accepted.

As above stated, we are here to offer, under your sanction and protection, that necessary financial aid which the conqueror and the conquered will demand and require. These republics have undoubtedly crippled all their financial resources, and Chili to-day is compelled to look to the territory of Peru, which she forcibly holds, to remunerate her for her expenditures and losses. Within the last few months she has undertaken to reimburse herself by a financial contract entered into with an English company, entitled "The South Pacific Guano Company," limited, of London, by which contract the said company agrees to pay to Chili a royalty of £1 and 10 shillings per ton for the guano that it may obtain from the territory of Peru forcibly held by Chili. The demand for guano in the civilized world does not average four hundred thousand tons per annum. Assuming, under this contract, that Chili would be able to supply fifty per cent. of the market through the said company, her revenue would amount to about £300,000 annually, while, on the other hand, Peru would to the same extent be deprived of this revenue. The terms which we propose would almost double the amount that Chili would receive by holding the territory in question; while, on the other hand, Peru would receive an equal amount to meet her national expenses and further to compensate her for the extraordinary drain that has been made upon her resources in consequence of the pending war.

The proposition which the Crédit Industriel makes has been submitted to you by Mr. Robert E. Randall, together with the correspondence which has passed between that gentleman and Mr. Guillaume, the chairman of the Peruvian bondholders' committee, and we request that the same be attached hereto as a part of this communication.

The Crédit Industriel, you will observe, agrees to pay Chili and Peru, respectively, according to the proposition herein referred to, £550,000 per annum for a term of years to be agreed upon. This will justify a loan sufficient to cover the war indemnity demanded by Chili of £4,000,000 sterling, and leave to these respective countries, sufficient to meet all legitimate national obligations. The Crédit Industriel agrees to obligate itself at the same time to arrange with the Peruvian bondholders the indebtedness held by them, amounting, principal and interest, to upwards of £45,000,000 sterling, without they being compelled to look to Peru, and in return, the Crédit Industriel simply requires that Chili shall surrender the conquered territory of Peru to Peru, subject to a protectorate of the United States, guaranteeing to the Crédit Industriel the free and unobstructed shipment of the deposits of the said territory, to wit, the guano and nitrates, for the same term of years. The Crédit Industriel will further agree to pay annually to the American Cable Company, between Panama and Lima, an annual appropriation of £60,000 sterling.

The above is our object and our understanding of the financial interests of the said republics, and the execution of the proposed scheme, presented as it is by the Crédit Industriel, will afford a sure guarantee for the maintenance of the peace, as it will create between these republics a common interest, by placing their great source of common wealth under the management of an institution of high standing and repute throughout the world.

We were advised by the Crédit Industriel that she has used her best efforts to ascertain the views of the governments of Europe as to the present proposition, and we believe that we are not going beyond the bounds of propriety when we state that the mediation of the United States will be acceptable to and supported by the Governments of Holland, Belgium, Italy, France, and Great Britain. With the exception of Italy, the subjects of the above governments are, with the citizens of the United States, to a limited extent, the holders of the entire Peruvian debt, and, therefore, are directly interested in the favorable action by your government on the proposition which we now have the honor to submit to you. We ask that you will exercise that same inherent right claimed by this government since the time of President Monroe, that, while the United States will not permit the interference of any European power on the American continent, she would at the same time exercise, if necessary, a protectorate over all governments and countries on this continent.

The subjects of Holland, Belgium, and France represent over one-half of the bondholders of Peru, and are the customers of two-thirds of the guano and nitrate shipped to Europe, France using herself quite fifty per cent.; the balance of the bonds are held in Great Britain. The retention of the guano and nitrate deposits of Peru by Chili would render those bonds valueless, since Chili has already given notice that she is not responsible for the engagements of Peru, and that the same must be the subject of consideration after the termination of the war. The European governments could not then interfere, the subject-matter being a commercial transaction unsupported by treaty obligations. It is clear that the above governments would rejoice and second, if necessary, the intervention of the United States, and we are informed that Great Britain has so advised your government. The terms of peace submitted by the Chilian commissioners at the Arica conference demonstrated that the intention of Chili was a desire to destroy the political equilibrium of the South American states and destructive to Republican institutions. The retention by Chili by force of arms of the territory of Peru cannot insure peace, nor will it aid the cause of civil progress in those countries. The contrary would result; it would bring about continuous troubles and bloodshed between these republics, that must ultimately compel a European intervention similar to the one in Mexico, and probably complicate your government. European powers could not remain indifferent to the sufferings and ruin of their subjects and the paralyzation of industry and commerce.

We beg to call your attention that when Spain attempted, in 1865, to reclaim her former authority over the territory of Peru, the United States promptly and firmly declared that she would not consent to the dismemberment of Peru. One of the reasons given at that time by the United States against the occupation of the guano Islands by the Spanish forces was that the guano was pledged to the payment of the national debt of Peru, and the same question is now presented. Chili claims a right to hold the guano and nitrate territories of Peru, which are pledged to the payment, principal and interest, of said debt.

We desire further to call your attention to the fact that even previously the United States interfered to re-establish peace between Spain and her ancient South American colonies before and after the bombardment of Valparaiso and Callao, and brought about the convention signed at Washington by the belligerents. These results were obtained under the auspices and friendly exertions of the United States. We must now be permitted to express the hope that, in your judgment, this is a fit occasion for a similar interference on the part of your government, which is the natural protector of liberty and promoter of civilization in the New World.

The Crédit Industriel entered into a contract with Peru, executed at Paris on the 7th of January, 1880, under which contract it undertook to manage and work the guano and nitrate deposits on behalf of the Peruvian creditors. That contract is to-day binding. On this point we submit the opinions of Messieurs E. M. Underdown, John Holker, E. Macnagthen, P. Jozon, H. Dubuit.

The Crédit Industriel is prepared to fulfill her obligations under the protection of the Government of the United States, who will be the international trustee.

The proposition which we submit we deem to be the only practical solution of this South American conflict.

It is the only one which will satisfy the belligerents, protect the interests of their creditors, and secure a lasting peace without injustice or dishonor to any one.

We submit that time has become a vital question.

The Chilian arms surround Lima. Any hour we may hear of a decided battle. If Lima falls or the Chilians should be repulsed the moment will then have arrived for mediation; to be on the spot at that moment becomes imperative. If you should determine to make another effort to secure peace between these sister republics it is essential your representative should proceed without delay to South America. We are prepared, as the authorized representatives of the Crédit Industrial, to accompany the commission and submit its financial propositions.

We remain, sir, with great respect, your most obedient servants,

C'TE DE MONTFERRAND.
FRANC'O DE P. SUAREZ.

Documents annexed to the foregoing communication.

(1.) A letter to the president of the "Société Générale de Crédit Industriel et Commercial," dated the 1st April, 1880, by the presidents of the French, Belgian, and Dutch-Peruvian bondholders' committees.

(2.) The reply to said letter by the president of the "Société Générale de Crédit Industriel et Commercial," dated the 6th April, 1880.

(3, 4, 5.) Legal opinions of Messieurs E. M. Underdown, John Holker, E. Macnaghter, P. Jozon, and H. Dubuit.

(6.) The contract, of the 7th January, 1880, executed at Paris, between Peru, by her authorized representatives, M. M. Juan, M. de Goyeneche, and Don Francisco Rosas, and the Crédit Industriel by M. Henri Durrien, president.

[Inclosure 1 in No. ——.—Translation.]

Mr. President of the Société Généralé de Crédit Industriel and Commercial, Paris.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Replying with pleasure to the initiative of the French committee, your society has been pleased to tender its aid to the project for regulating the Peruvian bonds, and to this end you have entered into negotiations with Messrs. Rosas and de Goyeneche, which have resulted in the contract of the 7th January last.

This contract is the first which assured, in a possible manner, and in a definitive way, service of the Peruvian bonds. That is why all the committees of the continent have adhered to it not only without hesitation, but with the consent of all. Under other circumstances Peru would never have consented to the abandonment of its pledge, above all, irrevocably.

On the other hand this agreement respect all the rights of third parties, and principally those which have been consignees of the guanos of Peru since these last were always complaining of the partiality of the Peruvian courts, hereafter in the settlement of their differences can address themselves to judges of their own countries, and if they have nothing unjust to demand, we cannot understand how they can be suspicious of the courts of their own countries.

Unable to explain, by reasons which are avowed, whether by what took place in the meetings at London, or the scandalous contract signed at Lima by the Dictator Piérola, and an agent of the house Dreyfuss; unable above all to establish that the contract of the Crédit Industriel is not both for the creditors of Peru and Peru, the most honest and the most advantageous which was ever made, the interested adversaries of this agreement propagate doubts as to its validity, pretending that the powers of the commissioners who signed it were revoked or rightfully annulled by the coming into power of a new government.

Undoubtedly the facts, the official documents, and the Peruvian law itself show that these reports are without foundation; but the silence and inaction of the Société of the Crédit Industriel has allowed them to be propagated and to alarm those whose interest we represent.

It is with this view, sir, that we ask you to answer the preceding observations by a letter, which we propose to publish, in order that our shareholders may partake of the confidence which we ourselves have, and which results from our frequent interviews with you.

Please accept, Monsieur le Président, our sincere salutations.

Paris, March 30, 1880.

A. GUILLAUME,
President of the French Committee Peruvian Bondholders.

Antwerp, March 31, 1880.

LOUIS GODDERIS,
President Belgian Committee of Peruvian Bondholders.

Amsterdam, 1st April, 1880.

A. L. VIERFBAIN,
President of the Dutch Committee of Peruvian Bondholders.

[Inclosure 2 in No. —.]

[Société Générale de Crédit, Industriel and Commercial, 66 rue de la Ch'll d'Antin, et 72 rue de la Victoire.]

PARIS, 6*th April*, 1880.

To Messrs. the Presidents of the French, Belgian, and Dutch Committees, for the protection of Peruvian creditors now in Paris:

GENTLEMEN: We answer your letter which you did us the honor to write to us on the 30th ultimo.

If the contract, which we signed on the 7th January, 1880, with the commissioners of the Peruvian Government, has not yet been carried into execution, that raises no doubt, on our part, of its validity or of the rights which it confers upon us. The circumstances under which this treaty was concluded, and the opinion of gentlemen of the highest authority, both in France and in England, do not permit us to have any doubt on this subject.

But you know the complications of various kinds which have, until the present time, paralyzed our efforts.

Under these circumstances we can only reaffirm our intention to maintain our contract in the conditions in which it was concluded.

Furthermore, we do not doubt that, enlightened by the events which are taking place, as well in Chili as in Peru, the creditors of the latter state, to whatever nationality they belong, will soon rally to you, which will facilitate the accomplishment of the work which we have undertaken.

Accept, gentlemen, the assurances of our distinguished consideration.

Société Générale de Crédit Industriel and Commercial.

Le President:

H. DURRIEN.

Inclosures Nos. 3, 4, and 5 are legal opinions of English and French lawyers as to the reliability of the contract which, in view of the extent and magnitude of these papers are not forwarded. It is not supposed in the Department that they are important; but if desired they can be copied and sent at a later day.

Inclosure 6 is the contract between the Government of Peru and the Société Générale de Crédit Industriel et Commercial, dated January 7, 1880, and the annexes thereto. The documents are long and in the Spanish language, and to print them in full would delay their presentation. If it is desired to have them in full there is no objection to their publication. The substance of the documents is as follows:

Contract concluded at Paris, January 7, 1880, between the supreme government of Peru and the Société Générale de Crédit Industriel et Commercial, for the definite adjustment of the Peruvian foreign loans of 1870 (6 per cent.) and 1872 (5 per cent.).

The preamble shows that—

1st. A contract signed at Paris, May 12, 1870, with Dreyfus Brothers & Co., floated a loan of 280,000,000 francs, guaranteed by guano sales.

2d. A like contract, of Lima, July 7, 1871, created a new loan of £36,800,000, with a like guano-sales guarantee, and also a mortgage on the guano beds themselves and a guarantee of all present and future revenues of the Peruvian Government. This was known as the loan of 1872.

3d. The holders of these two issues of bonds "have the absolute right to exact the effective delivery of those securities, and especially of the guano and nitrate deposits, if the debtor state default."

4th. Various laws and decrees of Peru, of which the dates are cited, recognize these rights.

5th. The loans of 1870 and 1872 have been in default since July 1, 1875.

6th and 7th. Attempts to compromise these debts by a new arrangement have failed.

8th. Peru is anxious to restore her impaired credit.

9th. That the proposal for a new arrangement, made in 1876, is still open, especially as the guano company has failed in its duty to the Peruvian Government by not honoring its drafts.

Therefore, these conclusions are reached:

1st. That the guano and nitrate deposits must be worked to extinguish the debt.

2d. That the present contract is not intended to give the bondholders the right of working the deposits, but simply to fix the conditions of working the same, provided (a) that the State pledges the irrevocability of this contract, and (b) that existing guano and nitrate contracts are not to be modified without the consent of the bondholders.

3d. That the most satisfactory basis of a settlement is the assured participation of the creditors in the results of the working of the deposits.

4th. That as this needs capital, a society for working the beds is to be created as a stock company, to execute this contract.

5th. That this arrangement is conformable to the already expressed wishes of the bondholders.

The first title of the contract regulates the conditions of working the guano beds by the special société to be formed, &c. All deposits discovered or to be discovered in Peruvian territory are comprised in this contract. Eighty per cent. of the net profits of the société to be divided among the bondholders; £2 per ton extracted to be paid to Peru, and not less than 200,000 tons to be extracted annually. Peru is also to receive £2 worth of bonds of 1870 and 1872, for each ton shipped. These are to be monthly payments, estimated on the returns of the previous year; and if exportation is prevented for any cause this payment is not to be made. The société to begin operations at once; choose the beds it will work, and mine and ship by its own agents. The government may inspect the shipments and confirm the correctness of the company's operations, all expenses to be borne by the company. The Peruvian Government to supply proper customs facilities for guano vessels arriving in ballast or with cargo at any selected point of operations. No export tax to be levied. Any loss of cargo by wreck, &c., to be borne by the company; but it may export equal cargoes afterward without paying Peru for them. Sales to natives of Peru to be made by the company; the government, however, to share in all money paid therefor in excess of £12 10*s.* ($62) per ton. The company is to monopolize the European trade in guano, and may also take any other trade not already covered by contract with subjects of non-European States. Any extraction of guano except by the company, to be regarded as robbery, and penally punished on conviction. All questions affecting the execution of the contract and not directly concerning the government to be decided by the courts where they arise; but suits by third parties relative to possession of the active beds, or abandoned beds, can only be heard in European courts (article 23). The Dreyfus contracts are transferred to the société, and the société is to respect all rights thereunder.

The second title of the contract regulates the exportation of nitrates, as follows:

The company to be organized by the Crédit Industriel is to occupy and work all deposits belonging to Peruvian Government, but to respect existing rights specifically guaranteed by the nitrate beds. The conditions of working are essentially as with regard to the guano deposits. The société to pay Peru £2 in cash for each ton sold, and, besides this, one-half of all excess above a selling price of £16 per ton. When existing saltpeter certificates are paid off, the government is to receive an additional £2 in bonds of 1870 and 1872 for each ton sold. The annual production of nitrates not to be less than 100,000 tons. There being private nitrate beds in Peru not embraced in this contract, all private shipments are to endure a gravamen of 1.25 soles (about $1) per quintal (the present export duty), but the société has no export duty to pay. The société is to collect the export duties on private guano, and retain fifty per cent. thereof after deducting five per cent. for expenses. (These conditions are equivalent to a complete prohibition of private exportation, especially as Peru engages—article 41—to procure the enactment of a law raising the export duty to 2 soles (about $1.60) per quintal.)

Title 3.—The contract is to run from its date, January 7, 1880, and to expire when the last bond of 1870 or 1872 is cancelled. Foreign powers to be notified by Peru of the conclusion of this contract. So soon as the special guano and nitrate company provided by this contract is organized, the Société de Crédit Industriel et Commercial is relieved of all responsibility flowing from the contract.

Signed by F. Rosas and Juan M. de Goyeneche, on behalf of Peru, and by H. Durrieu, on behalf of the Société Général de Crédit Industriel, &c.

CONDITIONS.

Appended to the contract are the constitution and by-laws of the special society or company formed under the contract with the Crédit Industriel. Its title is "Société des Guanos et Nitrates du Péron" (Guano and Nitrate Company of Peru), with headquarters at Paris or London. Capital, 100,000 shares of 500 francs each per —, or $10,000,000. In addition it is to issue bonds to the value of $80,000,000, which are to be distributed pro rata among the holders of the existing Peruvian guano or nitrate bonds. A sinking fund is to be provided, and surplus revenue to be annually distributed among the Peruvian Government, the Peruvian bondholders, the stockholders of the company, and the sinking fund, in fixed ratios. The company reserves very general powers in its administration and working the deposits. The Peruvian bondholders are to name a supervisory committee, to examine the books of the company quarterly. The Peruvian Government may also send special agents as inspectors. And, lastly, the rights of Peruvian bondholders, who do not exchange their bonds for the bonds of the company, are to be denied, under the sole responsibility of the Peruvian Government. These by-laws, &c., are dated January 7, 1880.

A supplementary pamphlet, called "Annexes," publishes a number of official documents concerning the action of the Peruvian Government and the institution of the company. These are:

1st. The full power, given by Acting President La Puerta, of Peru, to Francisco Rosas and Juan Mariano de Goyeneche, to conclude the contract, dated Lima, October 13, 1879.

2d. The full text of the Dreyfus contract of May 19, 1870, under which the 6 per cent. loan of 1870, 298,000,000 francs in all, was negotiated.

3d. The text of the general guarantee printed on the bonds of 1870, whereby it was made a preferred obligation, to be met by the products of the guano deposits, and by the capital and revenues of Peruvian railways, and the customs revenues of Peru.

4th. The text of the Dreyfus contract of July 7, 1871, under which the 5 per cent. loan of 1872 was negotiated.

5th. A memorandum, undated, setting forth the resources of Peru to meet the loan of 1872, signed by Meliton Porras.

6th. The text of the general guarantee printed on the bonds of 1872, mortgaging all the guano itself existing in Peru, and all government sales of guano. Dated January 1, 1872.

7th. The Peruvian decree of November 14, 1873, which among other things pledges absolutely all the guano in Peru as a guarantee for the loans of 1870 and 1872, and authorizes the holders of these debts to take possession of them.

8th. Declaration made by the Peruvian Government to the Peruvian legislature in 1874.

9th. Diplomatic circular of January 11, 1876, concerning the Peruvian foreign debt, signed by Juan Ignacio Elguera.

10th. Extract from the nitrate contract of 10th July, 1870, between the Peruvian Government and the La Providencia Bank, prescribing the conditions under which the bank was to control the production, sale, and exportation of nitrates found in the deposits belonging to the State.

[The following is the correspondence between Mr. Guilluame, chairman of the Peruvian bondholders' French committee, and Mr. R. E. Randall, and referred to in this correspondence, and made a part thereof.]

Mr. Guilluame to Mr. Randall.

PARIS, October 27, 1880.

To Mr. ROBERT E. RANDALL, Philadelphia:

SIR: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your dispatch, which reached Paris October 25, 1880, at midnight, as follows:

Mediation accepted. Banque should send authority, official, to offer Guilluame's programme.

"RANDALL."

I confirm the telegraphic reply which I have sent you this day:

"Bank writes to declare officially that it is ready to carry out as far as it is concerned the programme sent to you. Letter follows.

"GUILLUAME SUAREZ."

In conformity with this dispatch, I send you herewith the letter alluded to above. As you will see, this letter is an official and unqualified authorization of the Crédit Industriel, confirming that this company accepts my programme, and is ready to carry it out.

The Government of the United States, to which you will communicate this authorization, will consequently have the certainty that it can proceed in the matter, and that from the start the financial realization of which it will propose is guaranteed by a company of undisputed credit. I go still further. I think that the Government of the United States can do more than to offer this programme. It can compel its acceptance; Chili and Peru, owing to circumstances, being in a false position, and desiring in the eyes of their to appear as if they were subjected to pressure. I do state what precedes lightly. I have had conversations with persons in a position to know the truth on the subject, and I can assure you that the desire for peace in government circles is as strong at Lima as it is at Santiago, but that neither dares to make the first advances on account of the high state of excitement of the masses; whence their equally great desire to see a great power to take the initiative to compel peace upon an acceptable basis.

As to the European governments, there is no doubt that they would see with great satisfaction the settlement of the question of the Peruvian bonds, which interest their people, and the termination of a war the continuation of which would injure their agricultural interests.

On this side there is no cause for fear. There remains a special question, to a former consignee, Mr. Dreyfus.

Some years ago Mr. Dreyfus declared that he was a creditor of Peru for about 100,000,000 francs. General Prado's government refused to recognize this claim, but the following government, that of Mr. Piérola, admitted the above claim to the amount of 50,000,000 francs, and authorized Mr. Dreyfus to export guano to cover himself.

We cannot interfere with this question, as we have neither the data nor the power to decide on the legality of the Dreyfus claim. However, I have reasons for supposing that Mr. Piérola may strongly insist that this claim should be taken into consideration in the final settlement.

In this case, and if it were indispensable, the above claim might perhaps be admitted, but with the condition that its reimbursement should not diminish the portion set apart for the bondholders from the proceeds of the guano. (Statement No. 1 of the programme.)

In this order of ideas it should be stipulated that the Dreyfus claim should be paid out of the totality, or the two-thirds of the part set aside for paying off the Peruvian bonds, £300,000 of the apportionment shown in the statement No. 3 of the programme (say with from £200,000 to £300,000 yearly).

It would require ten years to effect this liquidation, interest included. And this would be equitable, for there is no reason why Mr. Dreyfus should be privileged, instead of being included in the pro rata as all the other creditors. It is already a great deal to admit this debt.

I think I may assert a general acceptance on this basis.

But the absolute principle, which should not be lost sight of, is that the Crédit Industriel shall be recognized and constituted the general liquidator, the worker of the guano and nitrates, the distributer of the proceeds to Chili and Peru, to the bondholders and creditors (all resident in Europe), that the "Crédit Industriel" should be the syndicate, and that the deposits shall be neutralized until the paying off of the accounts, as otherwise there would be competition, and, with it, a depreciation of prices, preventing the fulfilling of the engagements that have been taken.

I beg of you, sir, to receive the assurances of my distinguished consideration.

A. GUILLUAME.

Mr. Guillaume to Mr. Durrier.

PARIS, October 27, 1880.

To Mr. DURRIEN,

President of the Société Général de Crédit Industriel et Commercial," 66 Chausee d'Anteri, Paris :

SIR: I have the honor to lay before you the following facts: Owing to circumstances that it would be too long to explain here, Peru and Chili cannot easily treat of peace without the intervention of a great foreign power, and the Government of the United States is the only one, in fact, whose mediation is acceptable by the two belligerents, and accepted by them.

On the 26th of last September I had, in connection with this subject, an interview with Mr. Robert E. Randall, brother of Mr. Samuel Randall, Speaker of the House of Representatives of the United States, and we reached the following conclusion: That the American Cabinet could not intervene in an urgent and consequently efficacious manner unless it were placed in a condition to submit to the Chilian and Peruvian cabinets a well-defined programme, giving equitable satisfaction to all the interests concerned, local or foreign, and whose realization, in a financial point of view, would be rendered certain by the financial institution (Etablissment de Crédit) of undoubted standing, already in possession of certain rights entitling it to be considered liquidator, and backed, moreover, by a great number of those interested.

The next day, 27th, I gave to Mr. R. E. Randall a programme which he believed would be acceptable by the American Cabinet as a basis of the mediation which this cabinet was to offer or impose in order to put an end to the present war.

You will find herewith a copy of this programme, which, in substance, is nothing more than the almost textual execution of the contract signed by the Crédit Industriel January 7, 1880.

Mr. Rostand was informed October 1 of the negotiation entered upon with Mr. Randall, who had left for Washington.

The declarations and assertions of Mr. Randall were confirmed much sooner than I had hoped for, as I have just received the following cable dispatch:

[Translation.]

(October 25, midnight. Paris, from Philadelphia. 48–16. V. R. B.)

Mediation accepted. "Banque" should send authority official to offer Guilluame's programme.

RANDALL.

I therefore beg you, Mr. President, to place me in a position to answer Mr. Randall, and to give satisfaction to the request of the United States Government, whose mediation, in the conditions presented, will have an importance which you cannot fail to recognize.

Receive, Mr. President, the assurance of my high consideration.

The president of the French committee of Peruvian bondholders.

A. GUILLUAME.

Mr. Durrier to Mr. Guilluame.

[Société général de Crédit Industriel and Commercial, 66 Rue de la Ch'see d'Anteri et 72 Rue de la Victoire.

PARIS, October 27. 1880.

SIR: By your letter of October 27, current, you were kind enough to communicate to us the programme that you had given a few weeks back to Mr. Robert E. Randall, of Philadelphia, which might serve as a basis for the diplomatic intervention or arbitration of the United States of America in the settlement of the difficulties now existing between the Governments of Peru and Chili.

After examination of this programme, we have reached the conclusion that in its spirit, as well in its principal conditions, it is in conformity with the agreement which we signed January 7, 1880, with Mr. Rosas, then president of the Peruvian Senate, and Mr. de Goyeneche, Peruvian minister in France, both acting in virtue of the full powers given them by their government.

Consequently we have no difficulty in acting in conformity to the desire which you made known to us, and we are ready to accept officially the task of settling, or of causing to be settled, by a special company, which we will organize for this purpose, the interests of the Peruvian creditors, in conformity with the said agreement of January 7th, and with your programme, of which it is the reproduction.

Nevertheless, it is well understood that if modifications were to be made during the course of negotiations these modifications should first be submitted to our "société" which signed the agreement of January 7, 1880.

We authorize you to communicate the present to Mr. Robert E. Randall, in reply to the dispatch sent by him to you by the electric cable—dispatch which reached you the 25th instant, and which we authorize you to answer in the following terms:

"Bank writes to declare officially that it is ready to carry out as far as it may be concerned programme sent you. Letter follows."

Please receive, sir, &c.
The president.

Z. DURRIER.

Mr. GUILLUAME,
President of the Committee of the Holders of Peruvian Bonds.

No. 424.

Count de Montferrand and Mr. Suarez to Mr. Evarts.

WASHINGTON, D. C., February 1, 1881.

SIR: In compliance with your wishes on cablegram advices from Robert E. Randall, esq., the attorney and counsel of the Société Général de Crédit Industriel et Commercial, we are here to arrange with you a feasible settlement of the existing war between the Republics of Peru, Bolivia, and Chili.

The documents which we have had the honor to place in your hands accredited us as the representatives of that société to offer the terms and conditions contained in the programme transmitted to you by that society through the above-named gentlemen.

In our judgment that offer is the only one which will permit a practical and immediate solution of the South American difficulties on just and equitable terms to all parties. We see no other mode to secure an honorable and lasting peace.

The right of conquest which Chili claims to exercise can only lead to ever-recurring fratricidal struggles, marked by outrages, reprisals, and bloodshed. Wide-spread anarchy among the South American republics must inevitably ensue.

We learn that the Government of Great Britain has heretofore urged the mediation of the United States between the belligerents, Peru, Bolivia, and Chili; and now we, the representatives of the continental creditors of Peru, follow Great Britain in urging the United States again to enter on a prompt and effective mediation.

Since we had the honor to address you on the 20th of January Lima has been captured. When the details of that gloomy event come to hand we shall no doubt learn of outrages and wanton destruction which will call down upon them the condemnation of the civilized world.

But the capture of Lima will not end the war. Peru will continue to resist. It will not submit to the dishonorable terms Chili would impose, as developed at the Arica conference—the dismemberment and annihilation of two sister republics. We take this occasion to assert that the success of the Chilian policy, instead of insuring peace and prosperity, will retard and endanger the progress of republican institutions on the South American continent, and we submit, with all respect, that your government has now the opportunity to foster and protect these institutions with the consent and approval of Europe.

As you stated in our first interview, we agree the moment has arrived for intervention. "Lima has fallen," and no time could be more propitious for the United States to interfere and secure beneficial results to its trade and commerce.

While on this subject allow us to quote the views expressed by E. L. Baker, consul at Buenos Ayres, in speaking of that republic:

> Our interests in the political prosperity of the South American republics, nearly all whose foreign business associations are now monarchial instead of democratic, should prompt us, if possible, to bind our own to the republics of the River Plate, by the strong bonds of a mutual reciprocal trade. Commerce is the great civilizer and political missionary of the world; and the ideas and methods by which the United States have advanced to their present commanding position among the nations of the earth, if brought into closer contact and communion with this country, could not fail to act and react most favorably upon its commercial, industrial, and political destinies. In no other way could we better spread and propagate the principles and ideas which have built us up as a great nation than by the secret, silent influences of a closer and more intimate intercourse.

All of which is far more pertinent to the west than to the east coast of South America.

We are prepared, as heretofore stated to you, to accompany a commission of the United States to the belligerents to aid in securing the success of your government's intervention in behalf of peace, for we believe, in such event, we will be able to adjust the financial difficulties existing between those hostile governments. We deem it proper and important to declare emphatically that this offer rests on the guarantees of a powerful financial association, whose negotiations are coextensive with the commercial world. The "Société Général de Crédit Industriel and Commercial" is fully able to execute all existing and any possible future contracts between the belligerents themselves or between them and their creditors. The "société" is ready to proceed, and only waits the action of your government.

We therefore respectfully request the proposed mediation of the United States shall receive your prompt attention, and that you will at the earliest practicable moment signify to us in writing your determination, so we may be able to communicate the same to our principal.

We avail ourselves of this occasion to renew to you, sir, the assurance of our most distinguished consideration.

CH. DE MONTFERRAND.
FRANCO. DE P. SUAREZ.

No. 425.

Mr. Suarez to Mr. Evarts.

WILLARD'S HOTEL,
Washington, February 9, 1881.

SIR: I beg leave to address you on the present occasion not so much in my official capacity as delegate of the "Crédit Industriel," but as an American who has at heart the proper influence and supremacy due to the United States among the nations of the New World.

This is the main reason which has led me to advocate the idea embodied in the programme of the "Crédit Industriel," inducing the foreign creditors of Peru voluntarily to place their interests under the guardianship of the Government of the United States.

The Monroe doctrine is recognized as constituting one of the fundamental principles of the American international policy. It follows, therefore, that the Government of the United States is bound to protect foreign interests against the fatal consequences brought forth by the internal convulsions and the unsettled political condition which, unhappily, have ever been the lot of the ancient Spanish colonies. Otherwise the Government of the United States would not be justified in protesting, under certain circumstances, against a direct action of the European powers for the protection of the rights and interests of their own subjects.

You must be aware that much is to be done to secure to the United States that political and commercial control which its position should command in South America. To the present moment European influence has controlled those commercial relations, as well as being an important factor in their State affairs.

No one can appreciate more readily than yourself the accuracy of my views, as the ideas they convey are but a mild expression of your own foreign policy.

These ideas you have had the high satisfaction to enforce by your treaties with China and with Japan.

Yet their success in South America is far more important to the interests of the United States, specially at this moment, when the effort is being made to cut a canal across the American isthmus under European financial control.

I agree with you that the actual state of affairs in South America affords to your government a most brilliant opportunity to inaugurate a most desirable international policy between the United States and its sister republics.

More, you agree with me that the programme submitted to you by the "Crédit Industriel" constitutes a most important element to bring about peace and concord among the belligerents, but you are certainly aware that the financial and commercial aid tendered by the "Crédit Industriel" will be of no avail if it is not properly offered to them under the auspices of a great friendly power, ready to meditate and adjust their mutual claims on just and equitable terms, such as stated in the programme referred to, and if necessary, to assume the high position of international trustee.

The Government of the United States will not assume any serious responsibility, since the responsibility will be confined to a mere guarantee to the interested parties that it will not permit the slightest violation of the programme submitted by the "Crédit Industriel," and to that effect the Government of the United States will have the right to appoint an official comptroller.

The adoption of such course would be most creditable, and would receive the immediate indorsement and cordial support of European powers to the satisfaction of the creditors. The spontaneous appeal of the Peruvian bondholders virtually involves the recognition of the Government of the United States as the natural protector of European interests in the western hemisphere, it involves in fact the full recognition of the Monroe doctrine without passing through the long, unsafe, and tangled channels of diplomacy, and further it will practically aid to put an end to the latent political antagonism existing between monarchical Europe and republican America.

As it has been fully stated in the communications which my colleague (Mr. le Comte de Montferrand) and myself have had the honor to address to you, the present occasion is exceptionally favorable to initiate such a policy; and if time will not allow you to accomplish this patriotical task, no one will dispute with you the glory of having originated and introduced a policy which will surely bring honor, peace, and prosperity to the American republics.

Considering this momentous question from this high point of view, I submit, with all respect, that the hour has arrived for carrying out your ideas of sending instructions to your ministers at Lima, Santiago, and La Paz to renew the offer of mediation and to recommend at the same time to the consideration of the belligerent States the financial programme of the "Crédit Industriel," and further to declare that the Government of the United States is willing to act as international trustee for the benefit of all interested and for the perpetuity of republican institutions.

This course will not create any international difficulties. Quite the contrary; it will give to the United States another opportunity to assume the honorable position of pacificator and promoter of civilization.

Briefly, if you see no objection to it (and the last news received from the seat of war confirms my earnest opinion about the continuance of hostilities as well as in regard to the opportunity of taking such a measure without further delay), I will be happy to learn that you are decided not to leave your high post without making another effort to inaugurate in South America the policy which you have so successfully secured in China and Japan.

In such a case I will, with your permission, send a confidential dispatch to the "Crédit Industriel," and I will promptly communicate to you their reply. In the mean time, I beg leave to say that if you should deem my personal services of any practical use to success, command them, and moreover if you should see no impropriety to intrust to my care such an honorable commission, I will start immediately for Lima with your dispatches to the ministers of the United States in Peru, Bolivia, and Chili.

Waiting for the honor of an answer, please accept, sir, the assurance of my respected consideration.

FRANCO. P. SUAREZ.

No. 426.

Mr. le Comte de Montferrand to Mr. Evarts.

[Translation.]

WASHINGTON, February 14, 1881. (Received ———.)

Mr. SECRETARY OF STATE: Being about to leave Washington, I have the honor hereby to confirm the information previously given that Mr. de Suarez, who has been accredited near you by the Crédit Industriel, is authorized to receive your reply in reference to the Pacific affair, and to transmit it to Paris, in a word to continue the negotiations commenced by us.

Be pleased to accept, &c.,

CH. DE MONTFERRAND.

No. 427.

Confidential note.—Re-Chilo-Peruvian affairs.

Interested parties in the contract between the Government of Peru and the "Société Général de Crédit Industriel et Commercial," dated at Paris the 7th January, 1880, subject to modifications in accordance with the financial and commercial programme submitted to Hon. William M. Evarts, Secretary of State, namely:

English interest is represented by the high-standing house of Matheson & Co., bankers, whose business relations extend over the whole world, most especially to India and Spain. One of the partners is an influential member of the House of Commons.

There is no committee in England officially recognized by the Peruvian bondholders. Actually there are three conflicting committees more or less favorable to Chili.

But we have received assurances from the "foreign bondholders' committee" (the only corporation of the kind existing in Europe and maintaining regular official intercourse with foreign governments in connection with their external debts), tendering to the Crédit Industriel their good offices, and offering their aid and support as soon as we shall commence operations on behalf of the Peruvian creditors.

Belgian interest is represented by Mr. Louis Godderies, president of the Belgian-Peruvian bondholders' committee. Mr. Godderies is a banker himself, and he is supported by first-class banking-houses connected with the guano and nitrate agency.

Dutch interest is represented by Mr. A. L. Vurfbain, president of the Dutch-Peruvian bondholders' committee. Mr. Vurfbain is the president of the Amsterdam stock exchange, and is equally supported by some of the principal bankers in Holland.

German interest is represented by the "Deutsche National Bank" of Bremen, seconded by powerful banking-houses. One of the members of the German group holds a seat in the national Reichstadt, and, I have been told, he disposes of a great influence in political circles.

French interest is represented by Mr. A. Guillaume, president of the French-Peruvian bondholders' committee. He is supported by the "Crédit Industriel," the "Banque Franco-Egyptienne," and many other banking and commercial houses of high standing. Among them, one of the most important, are Messrs. Dreyfus Frères & Co., lately guano agents at Peru, and at the same time one of the largest creditors of Peru.

Spanish interest is represented by some important banking and commercial houses of Barcelona and Valence.

American interest is represented:

1st. By a certain number of American citizens holding Peruvian bonds.

2d. By American citizens having entered into different contracts with the Peruvian Government, and who will not be able to realize their prospects if Chili should be allowed to enforce upon Peru and Bolivia her unjust, exorbitant, and humiliating conditions.

3d. By the agents for the sale of Peruvian guano and nitrate in the United States.

4th. By the American company actually holding a contract from the Government of Peru to lay a cable between Panama and Callao.

It is pertinent to observe, that while Peru and Bolivia have from the beginning of the war turned their eyes towards the United States, Chili, on the contrary, has to the present moment endeavored to fortify her political and commercial links with Europe. She has attempted on different occasions to place the guano and the nitrate deposits under the exclusive control of English houses; but her efforts have proved unsuccessful, owing to the open declaration of the British Government and of the English courts of justice, which will undoubtedly become more emphatic and decisive as soon as it will be known that the United States has decided to mediate with the firm intention of settling the difficulties existing between the three sister republics, and adjusting every claim on equitable grounds to all parties.

WASHINGTON, D. C., February 16, 1881.

No. 428.

Mr. Evarts to Mr. Suarez.

Confidential.] WASHINGTON, February 17, 1881.

MY DEAR SIR: I have to acknowledge the receipt from you of various communications in writing on the subject of the restoration of peace between Chili and Peru, and the submission of practical data on which to base a settlement. In the conference you have had with me, you have still further presented your ideas with reference to the financial aspects of the question, as set forth in a certain "programme for mediation between Peru and Chili," as well as in other papers exhibited to me.

In view of these statements so made by you, I have thought it proper to bring the matter to the knowledge of the United States minister at Lima, by an instruction of to-day's date, in which I communicate to Mr. Christiancy a copy of the programme, and acquaint him with the observations I made to you, on the occasion of our last conference, to the effect that I am always ready to press the mediation of this government towards early and honorable peace between the belligerents; that the financial facility and aid which the private interests you represent can furnish toward a liquidation of the pecuniary obligations that the war may have created, and which may need to be met, are calculated to assist the restoration of peace; that, in this light, they would be laid before the United States representatives in Peru and Chili; and that any future responsibility of this government can only be determined by actual negotiations between the belligerents asking this government to assume them. If, when you reach Peru, you should have occasion to call upon Mr. Christiancy, showing him this letter, you will find him in possession of the subject.

I am, &c.,

WM. M. EVARTS.

No. 429.

[Translation.]

Mr. F. de P. Suarez has the honor to transmit to the Secretary of State this copy exclusively for his personal use.

Strictly personal.] WASHINGTON, February 18, 1881.

To Mr. GUILLAUME,

President of the Committee of French Bondholders:

MY DEAR MR. GUILLAUME: I send you herewith my latest correspondence with Mr. Evarts. You will thereby see that I constantly place myself upon the ground of the Monroe doctrine, which is certainly the firmest one when questions are concerned which are connected with the international policy of the United States.

Mr. Evarts does not think it consistent with the mission of the United States in the New World to enforce its decisions by compulsion, unless this should be necessary for the protection of republican institutions, or for the defense of the political and commercial future of the United States against the attacks of its enemies.

Mr. Evarts does not think that the time has come to use force in support of the mediation of the United States against the will of the republics of the Pacific. He is, however, quite willing to renew his efforts in behalf of the restoration of peace, and, to this effect, he sends a special messenger by the steamer which sails on the 19th instant, with dispatches to the American ministers at Lima, Santiago, and La Paz, and with instructions to seek most earnestly to convince the belligerents of the necessity of terminating a fratricidal war which has already been attended with such terrible consequences, and which must end in the utter exhaustion of all three republics.

Mr. Evarts commends the programme of the Crédit Industriel to the consideration of the ministers. He regards the said combination as a means which may aid considerably in settling the financial difficulties of the situation. Mr. Evarts recommends his agents to utilize, the case arising, the co-operation of the Crédit Industriel. In short, the Government of the United States, while recognizing the importance of our programme, will confine its action to lending its moral support to that programme.

As to the rôle of an international trustee, Mr. Evarts thinks, with justice and reason, that it would be neither fitting nor proper for the United States to seek such a position. Nevertheless the United States would willingly accept it if, in the course of the negotiations for the restoration of peace, the parties interested were to agree upon that point.

As to the rest, you will get a correct idea of the views of the Secretary of State by reading the inclosed copy of a confidential note which I have this moment received.

I must apprise you that, in order to render the grounds for American intervention more evident, and fully to justify the dominant attitude of the United States Government in the Pacific question, I have thought it right and proper verbally to promise Mr. Evarts that the agency for guano and nitrate in the United States should be placed under the patronage of a first-class American house.

Accept, &c.,

FO. DE P. SUAREZ.

No. 430.

Mr. Suarez to Mr. Evarts.

NEW YORK, February 19, 1881. (Received February 23.)

SIR: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your interesting confidential note, dated the 17th instant, contents of which I transmit by to-day's mail to my principals.

I beg also to inclose copy of my cablegram to the "Crédit Industriél" and their reply, signed by Mr. Rostaud, one of the directors.

As soon as I will reach Peru, I will communicate with Mr. Christiancy, and be sure, sir, that I will assist in every way to bring about peace and to secure to the American flag its due supremacy in the political and commercial relations of the South American republics.

Be pleased to accept, sir, my sincere thanks for your courtesy and kindness, and at the same time the assurance of my highest consideration.

FRANCO. DE P. SUAREZ.

[Telegram.]

Private.] WASHINGTON, February 17, 1881.

To TIBARVEL, Paris:

Etienne with fresh instructions to press restoration of peace. Acte will be submitted to their representatives to be useful towards bringing about peace. Paul thinks better wait until negotiations are reopened for parties; ask Pierre, trustee. Authorize me to go south; steamer leaves Saturday. Immediate answer required to notify Paul. Cable funds for trips. Charles absent.

FELIX.

Reply from the "Crédit Industriel."

To FRANCISCO SUAREZ,
Washington:

Partez pour Peron credit cinq cents dollars chez Lavenburg New York un et deux d'accord pour agir ensemble en vue de paix.

ROSTAUD.

Etienne.—Agent of the American Government, going to the Pacific in connection with the mediation affairs.
Paul.—The Secretary of State of the United States.
Pierre.—The Government of the United States.
Charles.—Mr. le Comte de Montferrand.
Felix.—Mr. Suarez.
Acte.—Programme of the "Crédit Industriel."
Tibarvel.—Crédit Industriel.
Un.—English Government.
Deux.—French Government.
Washington, February 18, 1881.

FRANCO DE P. SUAREZ.

No. 431.

Mr. Suarez to Mr. Evarts.

PANAMA, February 28, 1881. (Received April 16.)

Hon. WILLIAM M. EVARTS,
Secretary of State, Washington, D. C.:

SIR: I received so late on Friday, the 18th, the reply from the "Crédit Industriel" to my cablegram of the 17th, that I had no time to have the honor of seeing you before my departure for Peru.

Consequently I was obliged to start off, leaving at New York, in the hands of my colleague, Mr. le Comte de Montferrand, a brief note acknowledging the receipt of your confidential letter dated the 17th, at the same time inclosing copies of my dispatch, of the answer from the "Crédit Industriel" and of a private communication of Mr. A. Guillaume, president of the French-Peruvian bondholders' committee, in order to prove to you that I have nothing hidden from you, and that it is my earnest intention to act, while in compliance with the instructions of the "Crédit Industriel," in perfect accord with your government, in order to facilitate the promptest restoration of peace in the South Pacific.

You may then be assured that I will devote my best efforts to secure success to your policy and lend all possible assistance towards restoring peace and harmony among the sister republics, and to promote, on new and quite solid bases, with the moral aid and support of the United States, the development and prosperity of the South American republics.

It now only remains for me to renew my sincere thanks for the frank hearing you have kindly tendered to me, and for the generous support you have thought just and proper to lend on behalf of the interests I represent.

Be pleased to accept, sir, the renewed assurances of my high esteem and most distinguished consideration.

FRANCO. DE P. SUAREZ.

No. 432.

Mr. Suarez to Mr. Blaine.

PANAMA, March 1, 1881. (Received March 18.)

SIR: I beg leave to call your attention to the papers which I have lately transmitted to the State Department in reference to the appeal addressed to the Government of the United States by the foreign creditors of Peru, and to the financial aid tendered by the "Crédit Industriel" to that republic, on their according with the existing contracts between said "société" and the Peruvian Government.

The attitude assumed by the United States on this occasion may not have been so strong and decisive as that demanded by the paramount interests at stake, but it must be remembered that the administration now yielding up the reins of government to that of President Garfield, could naturally do nothing which might hamper the action of its successor.

But the main question remains still the same, and it is due to the high mission of the United States in the western hemisphere to settle it for the benefit of liberty and civilization.

I do not doubt therefore that your government will readily indorse and further the wise policy initiated by your predecessor, and that you, Mr. Secretary, will endeavor to illustrate the new administration with the indelible glory of putting an end to the unhappy era of civil and fratricidal wars, which, opposing an insuperable barrier to the welfare and advancement of the South American republics, constitute at the same time a permanent danger to republican institutions and a cause of obstructions to universal commerce.

By this laudable course the Government of the United States will perform a twofold benefit; at once aiding the cause of peace and progress and by assisting those whose material interests are at stake, it will also win their applause and sympathies to your government as their natural friend and support; while, on the other hand, by preventing the ruin and dismemberment of two lesser republics, your government will highly prove to the whole world that the dangerous and immoral doctrine, "might makes right," is not recognized on American soil.

I do hereby confirm the offers made by the "Crédit Industriel," and I do also solemnly declare that this "société" is ready to execute all engagements which may be imposed upon it by the desired treaty of peace, so far as they may be consistent with the basis of the financial and commercial programme submitted to the State Department, or with such modifications as the actual situation may render necessary, provided same modifications be consented to by the "Crédit Industriel."

As I have left for Lima to participate in person in the negotiations tending towards the restoration of peace, I beg to inform you that during my absence, my colleague, Mr. le Comte de Montferrand will remain charged with the official representation of the "Crédit Industriel" at Washington, and should this gentleman absent himself, Robert E. Randall, esq, will then act as the authorized medium between the Government of the United States and the "Société Général de Crédit Industriel et Commercial," of Paris, for all negotiations connected with that corporation in the financial or commercial arrangements which may bring about the wished for mediation of the United States between Peru and Chili.

I avail of the occasion to send you, Mr. Secretary, the assurances of the high consideration with which I have the honor to subscribe myself, sir,

Your obedient servant,

FRANCO. DE P. SUAREZ.

No 433.

Mr. Suarez to Mr. Blaine.

PANAMA, March 1, 1881. (Received March 22.)

SIR: Public opinion designates you, for your ability, firmness, and integrity, to take the helm of foreign affairs under the incoming administration.

What I have learned about you, sir, authorizes me to believe that, whether in the high post of Secretary of State or in the private councils of your honorable friend, General Garfield, your voice will always be heard in favor of right and justice.

Devoting myself to-day, at the indication and with the support of the "Société Général de Crédit Industriel et Commercial," to save two lesser republics from ruin and humiliation, I do not hesitate to appeal to you, sir, to lend your valuable assistance in order to secure an honorable and lasting peace between Chili, Peru, and Bolivia.

Even when the actual conflict is over, social, political, and commercial questions of the highest import have to be conciliated on the South Pacific coast, and no opportunity could be more favorable than the present one to settle them to the honor and advantage of American interests.

I could say nothing on this subject that your acknowledged intelligence has not yet carefully studied and mastered.

All naturally presume that you mean to follow in the path traced for all true patriots by the fathers of American Independence, and that, in regard to the foreign policy of the United States, you will stand firm by the principles advocated by Jefferson and Monroe.

Thus, sir, you cannot remain indifferent to this appeal, and it would be productive of the liveliest satisfaction to the very powerful corporation I represent and, of course, to myself, if your influential intervention be employed towards bringing about the mediation of the United States on behalf of Peru and Bolivia, and protecting them against the unjust and tyrannical pretensions of a merciless foe.

Should you require any further and detailed information referring to the above matter Mr. le Comte de Montferrand, my colleague, or, in his absence, Robert E. Randall, esq., will readily afford you the same.

I take the opportunity to assure you, sir, &c.,

FRANCO. DE P. SUAREZ.

No. 434.

Count de Montferrand to Mr. Hitt.

[Translation.]

LEGATION OF FRANCE.

Port-au-Prince, Hayti, April 22, 1881. (Received May 6.)

Mr. ASSISTANT SECRETARY: You were pleased to authorize me to remain in communication with you on the subject of the proposals made by the "Crédit Industriel et Commercial," with a view to facilitating the conclusion of financial arrangements between Chili and Peru.

On the occasion of the interview which you were pleased to procure for me with Mr. Blaine on the 2d instant, I stated that the Industriel Crédit, or the "Société du Pacifique," which is the outcome thereof, was ready to discuss any modification that might be thought proper in the programme originally proposed. In the conferences which I had with you, either before or after the audience with Mr. Blaine, I went so far as to add that the case might arise in which the Pacific Company might be called upon to work, even for the account of Chili, the territories ceded or given as a pledge by the treaty of peace that should be concluded, and that to the greatest advantage of Chili.

This view of the case was cordially shared at Paris, as is shown by the letter herewith inclosed. The managers of the Pacific Company say in that letter (see last paragraph):

> As the interests which we represent are not exclusively those of any of the countries engaged in the war, our desire is to maintain, as far as possible, the most friendly relations with both Peru and Chili. To this end we have sent M. de Lacretelle to represent us near the latter government, and he sailed a few days since for Valparaiso &c.

This letter bears date of March 11. I shall be grateful to you if you will return it to me; nevertheless, should you need to retain it, in order to furnish positive evidence, either to Mr. Blaine or to Mr. Martinez, that the Pacific Company is disposed to lend its co-operation to Chili as well as to Peru, I am willing that you should do so, notwithstanding its personal character.

This must put an end to all apprehensions lest one country may be favored in preference to another by an indorsement of our programme.

I do not insist upon the solidity of the co operation offered by the Pacific Company. That point is beyond discussion. I desire, however, respectfully to inquire whether you do not think it would be well to induce Mr. Blaine to give to the United States minister at Valparaiso instructions similar to those given by Mr. Evarts to Mr. Christiancy.

Be pleased to present my respects to Mr. Blaine, and to accept the assurance of my high consideration and of my gratitude for your very kind courtesy.

CH. DE MONTFERRAND.

[Inclosure—translation.]

[Compagnie Financièré et Commerciale du Pacifique; Société anonyme au capital de 30 millions Siege Social, 66 rue de la Chaussée d'Antire. Bureaux Provisoires, 70 bis rue de la Victoire.]

PARIS, March 11, 1881.

SIR: The president of the General Industrial and Commercial Credit Company has advised us of your speedy departure from New York for Hayti.

We are instructed by the board of the Financial and Commercial Pacific Company to thank you for your intelligent and enlightened co-operation.

We hope that the mission which has been entrusted to you will tend to diminish, to a certain extent, the difficulties with which we have to contend in America.

Since the latest dispatches received by you, arrangements appear to have been made between France, England, and Italy, the governments of which countries are disposed to unite their efforts for the protection of the interests of their subjects engaged in the Chilo-Peruvian question.

Instructions in this sense have been sent by these countries to their representatives in South America. Although Germany has not yet seen fit to take part in this movement, this reserve must be attributed to the ignorance of that government concerning the attitude to be assumed by the United States. That attitude, sir, is better known to you than to any one else. A résumé thereof, is, moreover, contained in the last letter addressed to you by Mr. Evarts, the late Secretary of State, a copy of which you have sent to us. We, therefore, hope that, in view of the favorable disposition which appears to have been manifested by the United States towards the financial programme of the Industrial Credit, Germany will decide to abandon the expectant attitude which she has thus far maintained, and that she will consent to take joint action with the other continental powers.

As the interests which we represent are not exclusively those of any of the countries engaged in the war, our desire is to maintain, as far as possible, the most friendly relations with both Peru and Chili. To this end we have sent M. de Lacretelle to represent us near the latter government, and he sailed a few days since for Valparaiso. We have accredited him to the Messrs. Gautreau, our general agents, who have an establishment at Valparaiso, and one at Lima, and we have advised him of the departure of M. de Suarez for the latter city, so that he may correspond with him, if necessary.

Be pleased to accept, sir, the assurance of our most distinguished regard,

A. AUBRY,
L. Z. AAM,
Managers.

Count DE MONTFERRAND,
Director of the bank, Hayti.

No. 435.

Mr. Suarez to Mr. Blaine.

Confidential.]

WASHINGTON, May 3, 1881. (Received May 11, 1881.)

SIR: I have the honor to communicate that which I deem a most important dispatch, which I received yesterday afternoon. As time is an essential element, and as my principals in Paris request me to make prompt answer as to the views and wishes of your government, will you kindly advise me what answer I shall make? The same will be strictly confidential in regard to the disposition of the United States to have the co-operation of the European powers in order to secure peace on the "programme" I have had the honor to submit to the State Department.

I avail myself, &c.,

FRANC'O DE P. SUAREZ.

[Cablegram, dated Paris, May 2, 1881.—Translation.]

(Confidential.)

To SUAREZ, care French Legation, Washington:

1 (i. e., French Government); 2 (English Government); Italy, probably, and Germany will act in concert if 3 (i. e., American Government) will make overtures to them. Conditions to have regard to financial interests and contracts of 6 (Crédit Industrial). Reply by cable, with address.

GUILLAUME.

[Cablegram, dated Paris, May 2, 1881.]

(Confidential.)

To SUAREZ, soins Legation, France, Washington:

1 (i. e., French Government), 2 (i e., English Government), Italie, probablement Allemagne Marcheront si; 3 (i. e., American Government), leur font des ouvertures. Conditions respecter interêts créanciers et contracts; 6 (i. e., Crédit Industriel). Réponse télégraphique, avec adresse.

GUILLAUME.

No. 436.

Mr. Suarez to Mr. Blaine.

Private.] 503 THIRTEENTH STREET, NORTHWEST,
Washington, D. C., May 28, 1881. (Received May 31, 1881.)

SIR: I have the honor to inclose to you a duplicate of my letters of credence to your predecessor, the Hon. W. M. Evarts.

My colleague, Mr. le comte de Montferrand, having been called abroad to fulfill another mission, I have remained here in sole charge of the commission therein referred to.

I take this occasion most respectfully to call your attention to the confidential letter addressed to me by the Hon. Mr. Evarts, dated on the 17th of last February, relating to the programme submitted to your Department by the Credit Industrial, and expressing his impartial views on the subject.

Circumstances have made its adoption more imperative, and your favorable action will surely meet with the approval and support of all the European powers whose subjects' interests are at stake, and of the belligerents themselves, who are longing for peace, and will heartily welcome it as a blessed boon.

I beg to renew you, sir, the assurances of my highest consideration.

FRANC'O DE P. SUAREZ.

Mr. Durrien to Mr. Evarts.

[Translation.]

SOCIÉTÉ GÉNÉRALE DE CRÊDIT INDUSTRIEL ET COMMERCIAL,
Paris, December 29, 1880.

SIR: We have the honor to accredit to you the Count de Montferrand and Mr. F. de P. Suarez, whom we have directed to repair to Washington to treat with you upon the subject of the part which we are to take in the financial and commercial arrangements which may be consequent upon the mediation of the Government of the United States between Peru and Chili.

Be pleased to accept, &c.

H. DURRIEN,
President.

Mr. Durrien to Count Montferrand and Mr. Suarez.

[Translation.]

[Société Générale de Crédit Industriel et Commercial, 66 rue de la Chaussée d'Antin et 72 rue de la Victoire.]

PARIS, December 29, 1880.

GENTLEMEN: A dispatch which we have just received from the United States requests us "to authorize our delegates to submit to the secretary of state for foreign affairs the financial and commercial programme which is designed to serve as a basis for the mediation of the United States between Peru and Chili."

We thought that the letter addressed to Mr. Randall would be sufficient to make known our views on this subject, and that, at all events, the powers which are in your possession fully authorized you to submit, in our name, to the United States Government the declaration which it seems to desire.

Nevertheless, we now, for the purpose of meeting every emergency, reconfer upon you the powers already given, and authorize you to make, in our name, any official communication to the Government of the United States relative to our intervention as regards the carrying out of the programme of mediation of which we have sent you a copy.

Be pleased to accept, gentlemen, the assurance of our distinguished consideration.

H. DURRIEN,
President.

To COUNT DE MONTFERRAND and Mr. F. DE P. SUAREZ, Washington:

No. 437.

Mr. Hitt to Count Montferrand.

WASHINGTON, June 10, 1881.

DEAR SIR: Your interesting letter of the 22d April, arrived during my absence from the country on a short visit to Paris, and I fear that the delay in responding to it may have created in your mind an impression that your communication had been neglected.

The information you communicate in regard to the disposition and purposes of the Pacific Company, as fully shown in the letter of their administration accompanying your own, agrees with the statements made by you at Washington, and their intention of maintaining friendly relations with both Peru and Chili is manifest. I am so recently arrived that I have not yet had opportunity to discuss the questions which are the subject of your letter with either the Secretary of State or the representatives of those countries. I will, however, take pleasure in calling the attention of Mr. Blaine to the suggestion made at the conclusion of your letter in regard to the advisability of the instruction you indicate for our representative at Valparaiso.

Please accept the assurances of my high considerations &c.,

ROBERT R. HITT,
Assistant Secretary.

P. S.—I inclose to you, in accordance with your request, the letter from the administrators of the Pacific Company to yourself.

No. 438.

Mr. Suarez to Mr. Blaine.

1334, G STREET, NORTHWEST,
Washington, D. C., December 5, 1881. (Received December 16.)

SIR: I beg you, before you leave the Department of Foreign Affairs, to have the kindness from sending to me an answer in writing to the papers I have had the honor to address to your department on the Chiloperuvian question.

On making this request, I beg leave to call your attention to the following facts, namely:

1st. That the company I represent is the only one which has not deserted Peru in her hours of distress.

2d. That said company is the only one, having strong connections with high standing American houses for the management and sale of the Peruvian guano and nitrate in all the markets of the world.

3d. That said company is the only one which has appealed for aid and comfort from the Government of the United States, as the regular and natural protector of European interests in America.

In accordance with these views, a financial programme was respectfully submitted by the company to the State Department since January last, and as I have had the occasion to state to you, such programme justly received the approval of your predecessor, the Hon. W. M. Evarts, who kindly recommended to the consideration of the American ministers at Lima, and at Santiago.

Said company still maintains its programme, and it is ready to execute it, subject, however, to the modifications required by the actual condition of affairs, and as it will be determined in the long-wished for treaty of peace.

It is the only way to conclude a rational adjustment of the difficulties existing existing between Chili and Peru.

It is the only way to bring about an honorable and permanent peace between the belligerent republics.

It is well known to-day that the unhappy conflict risen up between Chili, Peru, and Bolivia has simply been a wild struggle for business, a mere commercial speculation in which many financial societies have gone in as a stock-jobbing enterprise, with the well-defined intention of securing to an Anglo-Chilian association the management and control of the guano and nitrate business to the prejudice of other parties, holding previous claims on the same, by virtue of legal contracts entered into with Peru, and in which, as I have stated, respectable American houses are directly interested.

Finally, said company, earnestly hopes that the Government of the United States will agree to act in this affair as "international trustee" in order to afford to the whole world the security that the engagements taken by the company, and by all the parties to the treaty of peace, will be strictly and faithfully executed.

Your reply, sir, will be on your part an act of justice as well as of benevolence to me, and it will permit me to prove to my principals that I have done my duties, to the best of my ability, toward them and toward Peru.

I take this occasion, sir, to renew to you the assurances of my most distinguished consideration.

FRANC'O DE P. SUAREZ.

No. 439.

Señor Suarez to Mr. Frelinghuysen.

Private.] 1334 G STREET, NORTHWEST,
Washington, January 13, 1882. (Received January 16.)

SIR: I beg leave to call your attention to my private correspondence with your Department on the existing difficulties between Peru and Chili, and, most especially, to the financial programme submitted to the Department of State by the company I have the honor to represent. All the papers concerning the same are on file at the Department of State, and you will easily see by their contents that it is calculated to further an honorable and reasonable adjustment of the pending questions.

It seems unquestionable to me that the earnest desire of your government is to prevent, so far as possible, the violent dismemberment of Peru, and that all its efforts, are directed toward friendly bringing about an honorable and lasting peace between the belligerent republics.

It is equally true, in my humble opinion, that so noble a purpose could never be realized, unless Peru is so properly assisted as to be enabled to meet all her national standing obligations.

In fact, while victory has vested upon the conqueror certain rights which must be respected, without sheer injustice or unnecessary humiliating sacrifices to the conquered, it is not to be forgotten that there are, on the other hand, solemn pending engagements, previous to the present war, contracted by the Peruvian nation toward her foreign creditors.

The re-establishment of constitutional order, and the recognition of Admiral Montero by the whole of Peru as President of the Republic—both being facts of the highest importance, indeed, and both, it is just to say, mainly brought about by the wise, firm, and thoroughly American policy pursued by General Hurlbut—offer to the Government of the United States the most brilliant occasion,

To perform the office of a friend to all the parties in this unhappy conflict; to carry into effect that friendly intervention, by which Peru might be enabled to meet the conditions which would probably be imposed, and to use its influence solely in the interests of an honorable and lasting peace.

To render easier and more practical the solution advocated by the Government of the United States, has been the main object of the financial programme herein referred to.

This programme is not a wild scheme, founded on fabulous litigious or spurious claims, set forth by an unknown syndicate.

The said company has nothing to do with the national politics of any of the belligerent powers, and it is not its intention to monopolize to its own advantage any special trade, in opposition to the rightful interests of universal commerce. Indeed not.

The "Société Générale du Crédit Industriel et Commercial" and their assignees the "Compagnie Financière et Commercial du Pacifique," of Paris, are both respectable and powerful companies, regularly organized. They represent a large majority of the creditors of Peru, and they have at their command all the financial resources required for the faithful fulfillment of any engagements they may undertake under the above-mentioned programme.

Allow me, sir, to complete this statement by adding that the legation of the United States, in France, can forward to your department whatever information you may deem necessary concerning the financial standing of said companies, about the legal character of their well-established rights, as well as in regard to the high honor of their boards of directors, and to the commercial importance of all the banking houses connected with the same.

Briefly, these companies are not looking after monstrous or impracticable contracts. On the contrary, their only aim is to protect the rights of the Peruvian creditors and their legitimate and long-established claims to priority on the guano and nitrate deposits of Peru against any treaty obligations between the belligerent republics tending to impeach those rights and claims, as it seems to be involved in the monstrous pretensions set forward by Chili under the inadmissible principle that "might is right."

Their programme and their honest expectations are founded on valid and solemn contracts, entered into long ago with the Peruvian Government for the management and working of the guano and nitrate deposits belonging to Peru, and regularly and specially pledged to her national creditors.

Moreover, Peru, whose national interests are at stake, has a paramount right to be heard on this momentous question, and should you deem proper to make some inquiries on the subject, the Hon. I. Federico Elmore, minister of Peru at Washington, will readily transmit you all necessary information concerning the legally binding contracts existing between Peru and the "Compagnie Financière et Commerciale du Pacifique," in whose behalf have been duly transferred all the privileges and rights granted by previous contracts entered into with the "Société Générale de Crédit Industriel et Commercial" of Paris, and with the "Peruvian Guano Company, Limited," of London.

To-day this company (Compagnie Financière et Commercial du Pacifique), on the faith of its contracts, and with the expressed consent of Peru and of her creditors, steps forward and declares itself ready to take charge of the payment of the war indemnity due to Chili, subject to the conditions stated in its programme.

This programme has been carefully prepared, and it is intended to provide, in a fair and equitable proportion, for the pecuniary obligations previous to the present war, and for those which would probably be imposed on Peru, as the price to be paid for peace, namely:

1. The payment to Chili of a reasonable war indemnity.
2. A royalty to Peru.
3. The service of the Peruvian foreign loans.
4. The service of the Peruvian nitrate bonds.
5. The payment of Dreyfus's credit.

6. The redemption of any other pending claims duly and legally settled and recognized by the Government of Peru.

Now, then, in order to avoid misunderstandings and abuses of any kind whatever, the "Compagnie Financière et Commercial du Pacifique" proposes to conduct the Peruvian guano and nitrate business under the trusteeship of the Government of the United States, and at the same time under the immediate control of a special committee, whose members shall be appointed by the Governments of Peru and Chili, and by the Peruvian creditors representing the guano and nitrate debts of Peru, and having adhered to the foregoing programme.

This arrangement will impart to the company the character of an international corporation, and afford to all parties the strongest security in regard to the strict and faithful execution of the contracts, which are the legal foundation of said programme.

But, as you will very easily understand, a European company cannot undertake to fulfill so serious engagements unless the immense interests entrusted to their care and management, should be duly protected against all future complications.

Now, then, bearing in mind the official declarations lately made by your government, it will be unwise to expect that protection without the moral guarantee of the United States, under the form determined in my communication, dated December 5, 1881, and more fully stated in the present one.

The adoption of said programme will afford to Peru the means for preserving her territorial integrity, and at the same time it will satisfy Chili in regard to the payment of the war indemnity.

Our combination will secure besides to the Peruvian treasury a sufficient income to provide for the expenses of the national government, and to develop slowly but surely the natural resources of the republic.

Said combination will, furthermore, give full satisfaction to all the Peruvian creditors, as it will undoubtedly constitute the strongest guarantee they could have for the maintenance and protection of their indisputable rights over the guano and nitrate deposits of Peru.

The object of this financial programme being to facilitate the accomplishment of the noble purposes fostered by the Government of the United States I beg leave to renew to you my requests, in order to duly inform my principals on the subject.

The spirit and letter of the official dispatches, dated June 15, 1881, containing the instructions given to the ministers of the United States to Peru and Chili, do not leave the least shadow of a doubt in regard to the nature and tendencies of the friendly efforts of your government toward restoring peace on honorable and just terms between Chili and Peru.

The instructions to General Hurlbut say:

> If you can aid the Government of Peru in securing such a result you will have rendered the service which seems most pressing. Whether it is in the power of the Peruvian Government to make arrangements at home or abroad, singly or with the assistance of friendly powers, which will furnish the necessary indemnity or supply the required guarantee, you will be better able to advise me after you have reached your post.

And further on:

> If, upon full knowledge of the condition of Peru, you can inform this government that Peru can devise and carry into effect a plan by which all the reasonable conditions of Chili can be met without sacrificing the integrity of Peruvian territory, the Government of the United States will be willing to tender its good offices toward the execution of such a project.

While, in his instruction to General Kilpatrick, the honorable Secretary of State, earnestly recommends to the late American minister at Santiago:

In any representation which you may make, you will say that the hope of the United States is that the negotiations for peace shall be conducted, and the final settlement between the two countries determined without either side invoking the aid or intervention of any European power.

Contrary to these declarations, the honorable Secretary of State, in a later dispatch to General Hurlbut, dated 19, 1881, peremptorily asserts:

However trustworthy the Crédit Industriel may be, I did not consider it proper for the Department to have anything whatever to do with it. It is a foreign corporation, responsible to French law, and must seek its patronage and protection from France.

At the same time it is no part of your duty to interfere with its negotiations with the Peruvian Government. If it can be made an effective instrumentality to aid that unhappy country in its prostrate and helpless condition, it would be ungenerous and unjust to obstruct its operations.

This assertion, so widely opposed to the emphatic declarations embodied in the official instructions given to the United States ministers at Lima and Santiago, goes to prove how important it is for the due protection of my principal's rights to know at your earliest convenience, the views of your Department in regard to their programme.

My request is entirely in accordance with the formal declarations of your Department.

To lend its moral support to a programme accepted by Peru and by a large majority of her creditors, and to agree to act as "international trustee" in its faithful execution, cannot be objected to on any ground whatever.

Such course on the part of the United States, far from being considered as an uncalled for interposition, will be most assuredly welcomed and supported by all parties as the only practical means to preserve peace and order, and, therefore, to promote progress and prosperity among the South American republics.

The Government of the United States, having openly declared its intention not to lend its consent "to the aid or intervention of the European powers in the final settlements of American disputes," has assumed ipso facto the imperative duty of protecting European interests against any dangers or risks arising from the yet unsettled political condition of the Spanish American republics.

Otherwise, as I have stated before, it will become a most pressing duty on the part of the European powers to lend to their own national interests all necessary aid and protection, without the Government of the United States having a right to protest against a course which its own action will entirely justify, and which simply aims at the peaceful development of universal commerce without interfering in any way with the political institutions of the New World.

You must bear in mind that the action of the United States represents a very important factor in the solution of all South American questions, and my principals, therefore, having considerable interest at stake, desire to know (so far as you may deem proper) the views of your government, in order to regulate according to them their own course in their financial arrangements with Peru and Chili concerning the payment of the war indemnity and the fulfillment of all other pecuniary obligations specified in the herein-mentioned programme.

I entertain, therefore, the earnest hope that your government will kindly recognize the justice of my request, and, consequently, that it will equally agree with me on the expediency of "tendering its good offices toward the execution of such a project," thus contributing to the early conclusion of a treaty of peace in that spirit of equity, amity, and concord so highly recommended by your government in its official instructions and dispatches to the ministers of the United States to Peru and Chili.

I take this occasion, &c.,

FRANCO. DE P. SUAREZ.

No. 440.

[Translation.]

Note on the Peruvian loans and on the possible solution of past contracts by "The Financial and Commercial Company of the Pacific."

The loans contracted in Europe by Peru amount to:

	Loans.	Interest.	Amortization.
Issue at 6 per cent., 1870, exacted annually	£11, 920, 000	£673, 200	£238, 400
Issue at 5 per cent., 1872, exacted annually	23, 215, 000	1, 160, 750	464, 300
Total	*35, 135, 000	1, 833, 950	702, 700
Nominal value, demanding annually			††2, 536, 650

*878,375,000 francs.
†63,416,250 francs.
‡Loaned Pisco to Pea nominally of £290,000, on which £25,320 is amortized.

From the very text of the title deeds it results incontestably that all the revenues of the republic, created or to be created, and specially the deposits of guano have been hypothecated to form a guarantee of these loans.

A subsequent decree (November 14,'73) not only confirms this hypothecation, but gave it also a practical sanction by granting to the holders of the deeds the right to charge the quantity of guano sufficient for the guarantee of payment of the interest and the amortization of their bonds. And, finally, a diplomatic circular, dated January 11, 1876, added to the guarantee of the guano a special assignment on the products of the nitrates.

The prospectuses of emission declare that there are sold annually at least 500,000 tons of guano in the markets of Europe and the colonies, specially reserved for the subscribers, and, thanks to the monopoly system, the price of each ton was invariably £12 10*s*., which, less the expenses, interest, and commission (about £5 10*s*. per ton), leaves a net annual product of £3,500,000, say, for the service of the debt £2,536,000, assigning to the government for its share the sum of £964,000, say, about £2 per ton, cash.

The success of the guano of Peru did not prevent the existence of an interloping industry, and soon agriculture was solicited by manufacturers of intermediate chemical manures (phospho-guano and others), often, with little scruple, offering their productions at lower prices. These speculators, by a kind of deception of the eye, assimilated their productions to guano, declaring that they contained the same elements as the latter, taking good care to add that guano is so complete in itself that it cannot be artificially composed.

This competition, to which may be added in a large proportion that of the nitrate, resulted in diminishing the sum total of the sales of guano, but not being able at first to modify the price, inasmuch as the elements constituting this manure were really offered to the agriculturist at a lower price than that of the chemical composts. As to the sum of the sales of guano, their decline stopped, and the sum of the sales seemed definitely fixed at about 300,000 tons annually.

With a sum of sales of 300,000 tons instead of 500,000, the Peruvian Government could not keep its engagements, even supposing (which it could not bring itself to for fear of internal complications) it should abandon the personal revenue which it had always reserved from the product of this manure. It proposed then to its creditors to accept a reduction of their interest to 3 per cent., in order to balance the expenses and the receipts, allowing to itself a royalty sufficient for its necessities of £700,000 annually.

On the other hand, it offered them, by an official circular of January 11, 1876, to add to the guarantee of the guano, that of the nitrate.

An arrangement was made on these bases, which was accepted by the bondholders on the 10th of June, 1876, and regulated by a law of Congress of February 3, 1877. It was moreover agreed that the new arrangement should not be taken up until after the 1st of January, 1879, in order to leave Peru time to liquidate other debts already in litigation.

Unhappily, a new fact was to render unrealizable all the promises made, and even to place the guano trade in very unfavorable conditions to the interests of agriculture.

While the sale of guano had been monopolized, the price had been uniformly held at £12 10*s.* per ton, and the seller should, as much to get this price as to maintain his customers, whose patronage was solicited by the counterfeit articles, by exercising a rigid inspection, form a mixture of the different qualities, so as to obtain a uniform standard invariably good and acceptable to the consumer, who, in case of error or deception, would know then to whom to apply for redress.

Comprehending badly this situation, or hoping to sell more by changing the previous system, the Government of Peru destroyed the monopoly, and agreed that the guano should be sold by analysis, as a fabricated chemical composition.

The sales remained stationary, for even badly managed guano could not fall in the estimation of the agriculturist by reason of its unique qualities, but the prices fell from £12 10*s.* to £8 10*s.*

Beside, the mixture, which being no longer made by a single seller, was tampered with by manipulators, who added foreign substances to guano in order to augment their profits; and, thanks to the multiplicity of the new and irresponsible intermediaries, making the sales by three or four hands, the baffled consumer no longer knew who to hold responsible for the adulteration of which he had become the victim.

The result of this state of things was for the agriculturist the disappearance of all guarantee, and for the bondholders the indefinite loss of all revenue.

In view of the constant and well-founded complaints of agriculturists and of her creditors, the Government of Peru was forced to recognize the grave error they had committed in establishing competition upon its own product—a competition which, beside having brought about a decline in prices, had considerably augmented the expense of transportation, warehousing, and other things.

The Congress also voted on the 10th of October, 1879, a law which authorized the liquidation of the last two contracts, in order to reconstitute the monopoly of the sale of guano, for the account and to the profit of the Peruvian bondholders.

On this ground the understanding was so easy that they rapidly reached a solution, and that a contract was concluded January 7, 1880, between the commissioners of Peru and the Crédit Industriel et Commercial, whose moral and financial co-operation had been solicited by the committee of bondholders, and who had agreed to lend it on the same basis of the decree of November 14, 1873.

But a revolution had occurred at Lima. Interpreting ill the intention of the Crédit Industriel et Commercial, as well as of its colaborers, which it considered as being hostile, from the sole fact that they had concluded and defended a past contract with its political enemies, the new chief of the Peruvian Republic suspended the execution of the contract of January 7, 1880, under the pretext that the said contract bore in certain clauses injury to the dignity of the state.

Explanations followed and a reconciliation took place, which settled the questions in litigation (contracts of the 1st and 8th of February, 1881), by constituting the Compagnie Financiére et Commercial du Pacifique, created by the Crédit Industriel, first, trustee of the Peruvian bondholders; second, liquidator of the last consignees; third, exclusive vendor of guano, that is to say, conferring upon it the rights and giving it the means to satisfy the legitimate claims of the creditors and of agriculture, by the reconstruction of the monopoly.

In the interval which passed since the first decisions of the Peruvian Congress there occurred a grave complication, that created by the war between Chili and Peru.

Chili fearing that the negotiations commenced by Peru with the Crédit Industriel, supported by the bondholders, would only result in restoring credit to her enemy, and consequently permitting her to find resources to defend herself, commenced an urgent campaign, in which, announcing the victory, it menaced with reprisals those who should treat with Peru.

The threats being insufficient and to the end of securing public favor, Chili, through means of her minister in Europe, declared that it would do what Peru had never done, that it would respect the pledges of the foreign creditors of that state, and it authorized the said creditors to work the guano, under the sole reservation of paying a simple rent to Chili, varying from £1 to £1 10*s.* according to the price obtained, engaging even to this, that "in any agreement of price that might be signed with Peru the government would endeavor by all means in its power to guarantee the confirmation of this arrangement, its permanency and its extension to all the guano deposits of Peru." (Public declaration of Mr. Blest Gana, minister of Chili in Europe, dated January 30, 1880, articles 1, 4, 6.) This declaration was confirmed by a decree dated February 7, 1880, promulgated the 25th of the same month on the invaded territory.

English public opinion received these declarations and decree with enthusiasm. On the continent they were more reserved and they waited. They did well, for on the 10th of November, 1880, there appeared a diplomatic circular already printed, in a less grand spirit of generosity. It read, in fact, upon the subject of the conferences of Arica, in which the attempt at mediation of the United States failed before the Chilian demands.

The cession of territory should include, on the part of the victorious country, the recognition of all the hypothecated charges given by the Government of Peru in favor of the foreign creditors, and the rights of the bondholders over the guano products should be respected by the reservation of a moderate royalty.

As it may be remarked it is no longer a question of the primitive sum imported of £1 to £1 10*s.* per ton, but by an increase of precaution, and in fine to prepare the mind for still greater pretensions, a new diplomatic circular is issued the 24th of December, 1880, to determine the exact bearing of the above-written phrase from the circular of November 10:

This phrase has given rise to erroneous interpretations. * * * Some persons have thought, without considering the peculiar circumstances, except in one absolute manner and under a form of declaration of principle, the circular of November 10 served to define the rights of the creditors. * * * This phrase is the indication of a fact which should have been presented if the allies had accepted all the conditions of which it made mention (conditions of peace proposed at Arica). * * * Mais it did not constitute the recognition of a right, as some had supposed, * * * The breaking off of the negotiations leaves things in their former state, so that the rights that certain persons could allege, and referring to the territory of Tarapaca, would be regulated according to the rules of international law.

How does Chili interpret international law? Is it conformably to the principles admitted by French, English, or even Peruvian jurisconsults.

The annexing country is held to respect the real rights conceded by the dispossessed state, on the territorial domain of which it becomes proprietor, if those rights have been regularly acquired and maintained according to the existing laws. It finds itself in regard to them in a position analogous to that of a third holder of real estate, hypothecated or burdened with usufruct; the annexor is even obliged to respect the personal rights applicable to territorial domain and relative, for example, to their exploitation by individuals.

Now see the last public declaration of the Chilian minister in Europe concerning the guano deposits:

JANUARY 24, 1881.

My government, as a belligerent, holds the guano deposits situated on the coast of Tarapacá, and in its quality of a sovereign state it has the right to dispose of said guano as it chooses.

On comparing these different documents it appears that the protestations of respect for the rights of Peruvian bondholders made by Chili at the beginning of the war have been but a weapon—a means of ruining the credit of Peru and preventing her from finding resources; but to-day Chili dreams of but one thing, to appropriate exclusively the rich conquered provinces in order to balance her budgets; to redeem the paper money with which she has deluged the country; to reconstruct a treasury of war for furthering her views of ambitious supremacy.

As for the Peruvian creditors, she calculates not to preoccupy herself with them by objecting that she is not their debtor, which is true, but forgetting the formal declaration of January 30, 1880, and the incontestable rules of international law.

If the European powers remain indifferent to these facts and the annexation of Tarapacá, the competition, more bitter than ever, will begin again between the guano deposits of the north, which Peru will sell through the "Compagnie du Pacifique," and the guano deposits of the south, which Chili proposes to sell through some other commission house. Now, we have explained what are and must necessarily be the deplorable results of this competition as much for the Peruvian bondholders as for the agriculturist of the Old World.

The powers of Europe are thus forced to intervene to regulate this question; but have they the right to do so?

The terms above stated, extracted from a conference of two eminent French jurists, demonstrate that this right is formal, since Chili as the annexing state is obliged to respect not only the hypothecations agreed to by dispossessed Peru in favor of foreigners on the guano and nitrate deposits, but also the personal rights of exploitation conferred upon the "Compagnie du Pacifique," with a view of executing the contracts made long before the beginning of the war.

As a first argument worth offering to Chili there are precedents which she cannot ignore.

Spain, being at war with Peru, had seized, as Chili has just done, the guano deposits of that state, but, respecting the rules of international law, she acknowledged and allowed the execution of contracts binding her enemies to foreigners, which gave rise to the following document:

[Decree dated the Chinchos Islands, April 14, 1864.]

The fleet will take possession of all the islands belonging to Peru and all the men-of-war which should attempt to prevent this act. The guano actually found upon the Chinchos Islands will be a guarantee for all sums advanced to the Government of Peru by subjects of foreign nations, under the reservation that the debt has been recognized by the Peruvian Congress at an anterior date, and that the contracts have received official sanction.

The foreign companies actually charged with the transportation of the guano might continue on condition of reporting to the Spanish Government the number of tons exported from the day that the Spanish flag should be raised over the Chinchos Islands.

Admiral PINZON.

It may be objected that intervention has no sanction but war, in case of the refusal of satisfaction of the state toward which intervention is offered.

There is no such thing at least in this present case, as is proved by the following fact which is of public notoriety.

By the terms of the above-cited decree of the 7th of February, 1880, Chili allows several corporations, so called, representative of the creditors of Peru, to export guano from the occupied deposits for sale and distribution of the proceeds to the said creditors.

The so-called representatives of the bondholders have raised such pretensions for their personal remuneration and for the privilege which they wish to exercise to that effect that it is to be feared that the proceeds of the guano, apparently destined for the creditors, will be squandered.

A third person, M. Watson, a Peruvian bondholder, then applied to the supreme court in London, in order to protect his interests and those of other bondholders, by demanding a judicial sequestration (December 10, 1880).

The master of rolls, acquainted doubtless with the precedents of the affair, acceded to the prayer of the plaintiff, and decided that all the guano arrived or to arrive, in virtue of the Chilian decree, should be sold judicially and their proceeds deposited with the court.

The Chilian Government intervenes in the person of its representative in Europe, Mr. Blest Gana, and challenges the jurisdiction of the tribunal in what concerns the acts of a sovereign state.

The master of the rolls dismissed the plea of the Chilian Government and declared that the guano, over and above the royalty of £1 to £1 10*s*., claimed by Chili, belonged to the bondholders; the sentence of sequestration must take its course.

This decision, given by a simple magistrate, established not only the rights of the Peruvian bondholders, it has a much higher bearing; it points out the path to be pursued by the governments themselves, because, to give to their intervention a sanction without being obliged to use force, they have only to allow the action of their tribunals like that of the master of rolls of the supreme court of justice in London.

In fact, upon the deposits guano, like the nitrate, has no value; it cannot be consumed. In order that the state or holder can reap the same advantage, it is indispensable that it should offer them for sale upon the markets of the Old World where the exhausted soil needs it.

Consequently, to oblige Chili to respect the rights of the Peruvian bondholders and the execution of the contracts of the "Compagnie du Pacifique," contracts which partially assure the payment of the loans, and restore to the agriculturist the lost guarantees, it is sufficient for the governments of Europe to declare to Chili that in a state of litigation created by a conflict between two sovereign states, they will permit the sequestration of the guano by their courts from the arrival of these manures upon the markets by confiding the sale to the liquidator named by the debtor state itself; that is to say to the one who can only pretend to really represent the creditors.

Another means not less efficacious offers to the intervening states. These are the difficulties of order, moral, financial, and political, which generates on the markets of Europe the issue and quotation of all loans based upon the embezzlement of pledges assigned to the European creditors.

We comprehend what, in the actual situation of Chili, may be the threats of obstacles brought to the financial operations to which it must necessarily have recourse.

There remains only one question to resolve.

If the governments of Europe have the right and the duty to protect their nationals, if they have the means to render that protection efficacious, they can only decide so to do upon condition of respecting the rights of others.

Now, it is evident that Chili, as the conqueror, has incontestable rights to a war indemnity.

To what sum can this indemnity amount? The examination of the resources of Peru can alone decide; for, whatever may be the expenses of Chili and the damages she has sustained, their reparation is equitably due only in a possible measure—this state was at liberty to engage or not in a war which might close without compensation for it.

Besides the revenue from the guano, is Peru able to find solid resources to satisfy the pretensions of Chili?

Assuredly not, for if at full peace the Peruvian Government could not do without a tax upon the guano, at the risk even of bankruptcy, with much greater reason after her military disasters, she could not live—that is to say, maintain the order necessary to commercial transactions which the whole world is interested in maintaining, except on condition of receiving an annual royalty on this same guano, say at least £1 10*s.* per ton.

It is hard to ask the Peruvian bondholders who have realized nothing for five years to reduce their receipts more than 50 per cent., say to below the 3 per cent, promised in 1876.

Finally, there exists one credit in favor of MM. Dreyfus Brothers & Co., of which they have the inalienable right to demand liquidation, towards which they receive only £2 per ton of guano instead of £5, as their contracts assured them.

On the other hand, the holders of Peruvian nitrate certificates may be asked to reduce the interest of their bonds to 5 per cent., originally fixed at 8 per cent., everybody being obliged to make a sacrifice in order to arrive at a general arrangement.

The terms thus settled, and they seem equitable, the indemnity possible to be assigned to Chili is composed of the annual surplus of the proceeds of the guano and nitrate, the charges above-mentioned being paid.

Calculate—

1. The annual proceeds of the guano, with the monopoly restored by the execution of the contracts of the "Compaignie Financière & Commerciale du Pacifique," is—

300,000 tons, at £12 per ton, average		£3,600,000
Deduct cargo expenses and freight, £4 10*s.* per ton	£1,350,000
Royalty to Peru, £1 10*s*	450,000
Credit Dreyfus Bros. & Co., £2	*600,000
		2,409,000
Net		1,200,000

2. Annual proceeds of the nitrate worked by the "Compaignie du Pacifique" by the terms of the contract of January 7, 1880—

200,000 tons, at £14 a ton		£2,800,000
Manufacture, £6 per ton	£1,200,000
Deduct freight and charges, £4 per ton	800,000
Nitrate debt, £4,000,000, at 5 per cent	200,000
		2,200,000
Net		600,000

RECAPITULATION.

Net proceeds of guano	£1,200,000
Net proceeds of nitrate	600,000
		1,800,000
To distribute to Peruvian bondholders, say 3 per cent. of their nominal capital	1,050,000
Remuneration deducted from the proceeds distributed	300,000
		1,350,000
Remainder available for Chili		450,000

This balance of £450,000 corresponds exactly to the maximum sum of royalty (£1 10*s.* per ton of guano) which the Chilian Government had publicly declared herself willing to contract for the present and for the future (Declaration of M. Blest Ganan, Chilian minister, on the 30th of January, 1880).

It is therefore probable that, in fixing that sum, Chili had foreseen that she could not obtain more without exposing herself to legal reclamations, and that by formally limiting itself thereto, the governments would only hold her to what it had itself originally thought reasonable.

But in compensation the intervening governments might declare to Peru and to Chili that they placed under their own direct protection all the deposits of guano and nitrate, as well as their working.

By this means, not only can Chili no longer object that the province of Tarapaca is indispensable as a boundary, since this zone would become neutral and beyond all neighboring attacks; but yet it will find par the security given to the payment of her annual royalty the means to contract, by proxy, a loan of at least £7,000,000 to £7,500,000, at 5 per cent. interest and 1 per cent. redemption, say to constitute for herself a large pecuniary indemnity after having completely redeemed her paper money.

*After the payment of the credit of Dreyfus Bros. & Co. part of the above sum be assigned to the sinking fund for the Peruvian loans.

To sum up:

The Peruvian bondholders have the incontestable right to the guano and nitrates of Peru.

The recognition and exercise of these rights can be profitable, as much for the bondholders as for the agriculturist only on the condition of limiting the demands of Chili to a simple tax on the general proceeds of the deposits neutralized and worked by the "Compagnie du Pacifique," with a monopoly, that is to say in the manner recognized as indispensable to give satisfaction to the different interests which this question has brought into play.

And to arrive at so desirable a result, the European governments need only desire it, for they possess the right and the means.

PARIS, February 18, 1881.

Note on the Chili–Peru–Bolivian question.

It is not for us to investigate the causes of the war between the three republics of Chili, Peru, and Bolivia. Nor does it pertain to us any more to regard the explanations furnished by each of the states in the brochures which they have had published in Europe. But that which is perfectly proper for us to do, is to point out the principles advanced by Peru and Chili. Peru, relying upon international law, has declared that she had a treaty of alliance, offensive and defensive, with Bolivia, and consequently her honor obliged her to execute it; that is to say, to espouse the cause of her ally attacked. Chili, relying upon the law of nations, has declared that Bolivia in imposing an unauthorized tax upon the exportation of products exploited from the region common to the two states, manifestly injured the interests of her national engagements in the nitrates of Antofagasta, and consequently that her duty obliges her to protect the said interests. In effect, at the moment when the two belligerents declare officially that the cause of the present difficulty consists on the one side in respect for engagements undertaken, and on the other in protection of the national interests, they cannot find fault that the same respect and the same protection should be demanded of them for the interests of others.

But it is indisputable that if the present war were prolonged, the fatal result would be the ruin of the European holders of Peruvian bonds, since Peru and Chili will arrive at that point where they will no longer be able to bear their expenses except by appropriating entire the income from their guano and nitrates, to the detriment of their creditors, whose security these products stand for; that is to say, they will violate, so far as Europe is concerned, precisely the principles which the two states in the affair have set forth as the explanation and justification of their differences. It seems, then, useful and perfectly right that a mediation or intervention be made, in the name of the principles adopted by the belligerents, to devise and obtain a solution which will be a safeguard to European interests, by every means possible. And the present note has no other aim than to show what rights are to be protected, what satisfaction can be given them, and what are the means by which the execution of the engagements may be secured.

RIGHTS OF THE HOLDERS OF BONDS OF THE FOREIGN LOAN OF PERU.

To be satisfied of the incontestability of the rights of holders of bonds of the foreign loan of Peru, secured by the deposits of guano and nitrates, the possession of which is to-day become the cause of the prolongation of the war between Chili and Peru, it will be sufficient to read the preamble of the contract signed at Paris, January 7, 1880, between Messieurs Rosas and de Goyeneche and the Industrial and Commercial Credit Society.

From such perusal it is entirely evident, as well as from after official statements annexed to the contract in support thereof, that if a power ought to intervene between the belligerents, it cannot do so equitably, except upon the condition of safeguarding the interests of the holders of the bonds in question by every possible measure.

DIFFICULTIES TO BE SOLVED.

Five principal difficulties may be adduced upon the subject of the settlement of the right of holders of the bonds of the foreign loan of Peru.

1. Who is their official representative?

There are at present four committees of holders of Peruvian bonds distributed among the principal markets of Europe, where the loan was placed, namely: one at London, presided over by Mr. Cave; one at Paris, presided over by Mr. Guillaume; one at Antwerp, presided over by Mr. Gadderis; one at Amsterdam, presided over by Mr. Wurfbain.

The English committee is hostile to those of the continent. Its president, Mr. Cave, appears indissolubly allied with the Peruvian Guano Company. This society, to which General Prado conceded in 1876 the deposit of Peruvian guano, has recently offered to Chili to become her consignee, and has broken with Peru in opposing forcibly the duty which the latter state had imposed upon it in virtue of the contract; accordingly Mr. Cave is gone to Santiago, officially charged to obtain for the Peruvian Guano Company the consignment of the guano deposits at Tarapaca upon weighty conditions for the bondholders. If one believes the revelations made on this subject in the English papers, The Standard, The Financier, and The Money Market Review, Mr. Cave seems to have completely run aground in his mission. The committee which he represents is discredited to that degree that the Times has not hesitated to advise the bondholders to look for other representatives. The three other committees are united under the direction, real or nominal, of Mr. Guillaume. They have furnished the proof of this in giving to him, since 1879, the power to negotiate in their name with Peru, and in adhering publicly to the contract signed by the Crédit Industriél, January 7, 1880, a contract partly owing, they say, to the initiative of Mr. Guillaume.

It is then logical to consider Mr. Guillaume the best authorized representative of the holders of Peruvian bonds.

However, to avoid all discussion in opposition, it is best to attribute this character to the Crédit Industriel. In effect, on the one hand this title was conferred upon it by the debtor, Peru, in the contract of January 7, 1880; and on the other hand this establishment is one of an incontestable integrity; finally, the Crédit Industriel appears to be entirely in accord with the committees of the continent, and further has the support of a very important English house.

2. Upon what basis to regulate the credit of the bondholders.

The contract signed by the Crédit Industriel, January 7, 1880, seems to offer excellent guarantees to the holders of Peruvian bonds, for it is conclusive—that which excludes the idea of future modifications, modifications of which experience has abundantly shown the danger; then it substitutes, first, for the heavy forfeit (adapted to the present, for the expenses, and payable all the same, whether the distribution is made to the creditors or not), a levy upon the net products only, distributed to the creditors; second, for the ground-rent stipulated as payment to Peru, whatever the result of the receipts, a payment pro rata to the amount of tons sold. Upon these bases the profits which the consignee can realize from the contract of January 7 vary from 10*s.* to 13*s.* per ton, if it sells at high prices and distributes the quintuple to the bondholders. This remuneration for trouble, care, and disbursements is not excessive. Above all, when one remembers that the last consignees were able to make £1 to £2, and even more, per ton, without in any way serving the creditors.

However, it is necessary to provide a modification for this contract—modification resulting from the necessity of giving satisfaction to the claims raised by Chili and of which the said contract has taken no account.

In this connection, and to avoid any objection on the part of either Peru or Chili, it appears politic to take for a basis of the royalty assigned to these two states for their needs the very figures which they have publicly demanded. Peru, who had the right by the contract of June 7, 1876, to an annual payment of £700,000, officially renewed it, in the middle of 1879, at £300,000, and will content herself for the future with £400,000, that which corresponds to a payment of £1 10*s.* per ton for guano upon the whole annual income. This proposition ought to be accepted, for it is, they say, the same figure which was accepted in the first place by Mr. Sarez, in the recent negotiations with the Crédit Industriel.

Chili has officially made declaration that she will not demand more than from £1 to £1 10*s.* per ton for guano according to the quality.

In the case of the appropriation of these £3, in order not to diminish the revenue already sufficiently restricted, remaining to the bondholders, the amortization of £1 in coin, per ton, of guano sold, stipulated by the contract of the 7th of January, 1880, would be suppressed, and the amortization, which must be raised year by year to £300,000, would be raised upon the receipts from the nitrates which, thanks to a wise conversion of the present certificates, could still furnish the means of appropriating each year £100,000 to Peru, £100,000 to Chili, and at the same time from £50,000 to £60,000 to the subsidy for a cable between Panama and Lima, the establishment of which cable would be of the greatest service. Thanks to this distribution, conformable to the declarations of the two states in question, Peru far from being short of resources would enjoy a revenue equal, if not superior to that which she has ever regularly received and Chili would find the means of negotiating a loan of from £4,000,000 to £5,000,000 in cash, that is to say, of receiving almost immediately an indemnity for the war.

Other considerations still militate in favor of the adoption of the contract of the Crédit Industriel thus modified as the basis for a settlement. In the first place the validity of the contract, it is true, has been contested by General Piérola; but this is a point more than discussable, since eminent lawyers, both of Europe and Peru, have maintained that this contract, concluded by commissioners acting by virtue of power conferred by a law regularly passed by a regular Congress, will pledge the Peruvian nation, de jure, if not de facto, and the same opinion has been held by the consulting committee of affairs in litigation, at the office of the minister for foreign affairs of France before whom the question was laid.

Not to take account of this contract would be then to expose themselves to legitimate demands, for it would be a failure of equity which a mediator ought to guide.

In the second place to adopt a contract so made, and to which a large party of creditors has already adhered would avoid the delays and difficulties of a new negotiation in which it would still be necessary to make the creditors a party, and this at a moment when it is all but indispensable to guarantee in advance the execution of pledges and means about to be proposed to the belligerents to lead them to conclude peace.

3. What are the measures to be taken to preclude the return of former difficulties, of the present competition, or the failure of engagements undertaken?

The situation, for a long time precarious, which must result from the present war to Chili and Peru, indicates beyond question that the settlement of the question cannot be effective and certain unless the deposits of guano and nitrates, the cause of the past difficulties and present dispute, are placed beyond all future hope on the part of the nations which have possessed them or which occupy them to-day, at least until the liquidation of the debts for the payment of which these deposits are the security.

There is only one way to arrive at the result; i. e., to make Chili as well as Peru admit that the said deposits are neutral territory and protected by a neutral flag, save that each of the two states shall have the right to watch the exportation, with a view to the execution of the engagements undertaken by them respectively.

This neutralization presents a double advantage: First, it guarantees the foreign creditors against new exigencies, and it effects (grants, allows) a solution of a question which to-day appears insoluble. From self love, natural pride, fear of a governmental derangement, or some other motive, Peru will not abandon Tarapaca to Chili, nor will the latter give it back to Peru. If they will make this territory neutral at the same time as the other deposits of the north Chili and Peru would no longer have any reason for insisting upon the point of occupation, and in the eyes of the masses (illegible in the French) the two governments could almost entirely abandon their pretensions, not as though by a retreat, but as by a neutral concession made to the great principle of the rights of the people, a concession having for its aim the revival of their credit and the maintenance of their reputation for honorableness.

4. Do there exist, beside the holders of Peruvian bonds, other important creditors?

Besides the holders of Peruvian bonds, Peru does not appear to have other important creditors in Europe, except her last two consignees, Messieurs Dreyfus Bros. and the Peruvian Guano Company.

The Peruvian Guano Company has at least a stock of guano more than sufficient to cover the debt, especially since its contract expired in June, 1880, and its situation is far from being right as regards Peru, which brought a suit against it in the English courts.

In 1873 Mr. Dreyfus proclaimed himself a creditor of the Peruvian Government in the sum of 100,000,000 francs, and declared that he was going to suspend the payment of interest on the loans in order to reimburse himself.

The government frightened, because at that juncture it had still to place almost the whole of its loan (called the 5 per cent. of 1872) not subscribed, on the 13th of April made a convention with Mr. Dreyfus by the terms of which Mr. Dreyfus was pledged to pay interest on the loans only until the 1st of July, 1875, inclusive, and was authorized to sell afterwards for the exclusive account of his debt, the guano which remained, about 500,000 tons.

The convention of April 13, 1874, was believed to have liquidated this account entirely since Mr. Dreyfus admitted a surplus of 35,000,000 francs, which he himself had advanced to Peru. But not at all; Mr. Dreyfus, in 1879, declared himself anew a creditor in the sum of 100,000,000 francs, and that after having received 300,000 tons in excess of that stipulated in his contract of August, 1869, and in the convention of the 13th of April, 1874.

The government of General Prado refused to admit this new debt upon the judgment of the court of accounts, and in a report given publicly the attorney-general of the Peruvian Republic, Dr. Aronibar, affirmed that far from being its creditor Mr. Dreyfus was its debtor.

One of the first acts of the present dictator, Don Nicolás de Piérola, on coming into power, was to admit the legality of the debt repudiated by the government overthrown.

It is difficult to pronounce absolutely upon the legality or illegality of the Dreyfus debt. Nevertheless, if one considers: 1st. That this debt was denied by the bondholders before the French courts which, while not giving a decision in their favor, did not hesitate to declare upon the question of the accounts of Peru with Mr. Dreyfus that this government had "betrayed its national faith;" 2d. That the attorney-general of the Peruvian Republic has legally contested the basis of this debt. 3d. That Messrs. Dreyfus referred the case to the arbitration of the present dictator without appeal, and accepted a reduction of about 5 per cent., it is permissible to doubt concerning a legal ground.

Nevertheless, in the absence of a knowledge of positive facts, it is impossible to deny the said debt absolutely; it will be indispensable to admit the sum of it, whatever it may be, but pro rata, because there exists no plausible reason for considering Mr. Dreyfus a privileged creditor, especially since this privilege would have as an immediate consequence the reduction either of the payments, which are useful and capable of being appropriated to Peru and Chili, or the amount disposable for the benefit of the bondholders whose debt is as legitimate as it is incontestable.

In this state of affairs it would seem equitable to appropriate to the payment of the Dreyfus debt a portion of the funds reserved for the amortization of the Peruvian bonds, suspending this amortization in part or in whole until the extinction of the debt in question.

5. Who should be charged with the liquidation, and consequently with the exploitation of the deposits of guano and nitrates?

First; two general considerations.

1. Guano and nitrates are two similar products, consequently the more there is sold of the first the less there is sold of the second, unless the prices are lowered. Then it is indispensable to the correct management of the affairs that the sale of guano should not diminish since the yield of this product is greater than that of nitrates, the first requiring from 6*s.* to 10*s.* per ton for all expenses of sale, and the second requiring £6. Whence this combination (should be made) that guano and nitrates should be sold by one and the same person or company.

So long as there was one vendor of guano in the market the prices were maintained at an average of £12 to £12 10*s*. per ton. But from the day when there was competition (1876) the prices were lowered to a point where the average was no more than from £9 to £9 10*s*., being a loss of £3 per ton; £900,000 on the whole, which was originally 300,000 tons.

It is this that explains in part why payment of the interest on the Peruvian loan has been suspended since 1876. Competition alone having effected a loss of 3 per cent. to the bondholders.

Whence this other conclusion that it is useful that there should not be one vendor on account of Peru, and another on account of Chili; but one single vendor of guano and niter on account of all interested.

These points stated, we come to the question of the individual or company.

Public opinion in Europe rejects in a manner as general as it is absolute, the interference anew, as well of Mr. Dreyfus and his partners, to whom is attributed the failure of Peru, as of the Peruvian Guano Company and its partners, to whom is attributed the continuation of that failure. This general repugnance exists equally in Peru and Chili as regards the names above-mentioned. There are several firms which could be addressed, but besides entailing delay this would only give rise to difficulties for the reason and considerations enumerated above.

These reasons and considerations bring us perforce to this conclusion: That it is the Crédit Industriel, which ought to be charged with the liquidation, and, consequently, with the exploitation of the deposits of guano and niter, and the same reasons and considerations lead to the conclusion that it was the contract signed by this establishment on January 7, 1880, which was the best basis of the liquidation and exploitation.

There remains the question as to whether the Crédit Industriel is ready to accept this mission; for a government cannot intervene and offer a base of settlement without being assured in advance that the execution is guaranteed by the third party himself, whose name and programme are proposed for this purpose. There can be no doubt for a single instant that the Crédit Industriel will accept the base of liquidation in view, if that liquidation can take place on the conditions named above, and which, for greater precision may be here recapitulated:

I. Neutralization of the guano and nitre deposits.

II. Monopoly of the sale of the two products in the markets of Europe.

III. Base of exploitation according to the contract signed at Paris, January 7, 1880, with the modifications rendered necessary to bring about peace between Peru and Chili.

IV. Conversion of the nitrate debt and equitable reduction of interest.

At the same time that it is the interest, it is the duty of the Crédit Industriel to accept; for after having signed the contract of January 7, 1880, to refuse to execute it, would be almost a repudiation of its signature, and this establishment is reputed to be too careful of its honor to be done an injury by being doubted.

Public opinion.—As to the holders in Europe of Peruvian bonds, the favor with which they have received the news of the possible intervention of the United States in the Chilian-Peruvian question, testifies that they are ready to place all confidence in an intermediator, and consequently that they will accept the settlement as it is indicated above. This favorable acceptance is all the more certain since the indications which precede are nothing more than a condensed reproduction of ideas set forth by the English journals, and for a long time publicly professed by the representatives of the bondholders on the continent.

On the utility of the contracts of the Crédit Industriel for obtaining a satisfactory adjustment of the Peruvian obligations.

In openly manifesting their intention to offer their mediation between Peru and Chili, the Governments of France, England, and Italy have shown that the interests of their citizens were seriously menaced by a continuance of the war devastating the Pacific, and that it had become absolutely necessary to regulate definitively the Peruvian foreign obligations.

But would a mere offer of mediation be sufficient to secure a satisfactory adjustment?

As far as Peru is in question there is no doubt of it. That state is bound by contracts as explicit and formal as they are of recent date; her present situation is such that she could not refuse any satisfaction, and, further, it is only by means of an equitable regulation with her creditors that the country can hope to be restored.

On the other hand, from Chili there are many serious difficulties to be apprehended, which very certainly will not be removed by a mere offer of mediation, for they arise for most part from immediate necessities, so urgent and of such lofty ambition that they can only be satisfied by the almost entire seizure of the only convertible resources of Peru, namely, the guano and nitrate beds.

In order to be convinced of the difficulties which Chili will suscitate it is only necessary to recall the inanity of the peace conferences held at Arica under the patronage of the United States, that is to say, under the patronage of a very powerful government, and, what is still more to the point, of a government that is in close neighborhood. It will suffice to cast a glance over the articles of the Chilian press to see that after having called for the annexation of Tarapaca, with the expressed reservation in regard to the Peruvian obligations, now insist upon a complete Chilian protectorate all over Peru, and declare that the Peruvian obligations should only be accepted at one-tenth of their face value, that is to say at a reduction of 90 per cent.

From these facts, constituting a moral presumption of bad faith on the part of Chili, in regard to a mediation being necessary to limit her pretensions, and if the material acts be added thereto, such as the prohibition to load and export guano, in execution of regular contracts, dated anterior to the war (1869–1876), the conclusion is positive that Chili will not yield to mere friendly remonstrances, and consequently the European powers can scarcely hesitate about adopting a more energetic attitude.

Such hesitation would only result in promptly complicating still further the situation, for it would lead Chili, already too much exalted by her success, into the belief that she could with impunity violate all rights of Europeans, and it would only be justifiable were any doubt to exist on the right of the powers to intervene, or as to the limit within which said intervention should be exercised, or, still further, even as to the possibility of a dissension between the governments interested more or less in the settlement of the Peruvian-Chilian difficulty, either in view of the protection of their citizens or in view of their politics in general.

But it is easy to prove that no such doubt could, or does, exist.

THE RIGHT OF THE GOVERNMENTS TO INTERVENE.

All legists agree in declaring that governments have the right to intervene to insure protection for the interests of its citizens when said interests are manifestly injured by a foreign government.

Indeed, many authorities go still farther, and declare that said intervention is not only a right, but is in itself a strict obligation.

Protective intervention in this respect is not optional. It is obligatory!

In return for the sacrifices imposed upon citizens, the governments are bound not only to protect them in person and property at home, but also owe to them at least an equal security against any attacks to which they may be subjected abroad. (McDufaure, consultation of March 13, 1875.)

If this intervention be considered obligatory for the protection of individual interests, how much more so must it be when there is in question, as in the present case, an entire people, possessed of the most incontestable rights, and powerless for defense, as its only means, namely, coercion, is interdicted.

Still further, in intervening to claim the possession of the deposits of nitrate and guano in the interest of their citizens, creditors of Peru, the governments can meet with no serious objection from Chili, since in such action they merely apply to that power the principles which she herself publicly and officially declared in claiming in the interest of the Chilian citizens the possession of the intermediate zone between Chili and Bolivia, wherein are situate the nitrates of Antofagasta and the silver mines of Caracolles.

CONDITIONS OF INTERVENTION.

The question of the terms and limit of intervention were decided judicially as follows:

The Government of Chili cannot, either in politics or in international right, confiscate the guanos and nitrates without making them subject within such limits and conditions as the Peruvian Government would have done, to the payment of the indebtedness of this latter state. In failing to act thus, the Chilian Government ignores not only the rules of international right, but exposes itself to answer to a diplomatic intervention, or even to an armed intervention of the powers holding the Peruvian obligations.

This right of armed intervention becomes incontestable when there is question, as in this instance, of certain creditors to whom certain goods were especially appropriated. On the other hand is to be found a government with whom said creditors had not negotiated, in whom they had not confided, and with whom they had no connection save that said government had seized by force the property which constituted to them their security. (McJozon, consultation of May 15, 1881.)

Thus the satisfaction which the European governments have the right to exact from Chili in the name of their citizens can be no other legally than that same which Peru would have granted to her creditors.

In order to maintain position of absolute right in the premises, it would be useful, indeed indispensable, to produce an act showing clearly and positively the amount and the conditions wherein Peru owes said satisfaction.

Is there such an act existing?

Such act does exist. It is the contract concluded at Paris, January 7, 1880, between the Crédit Industriel and Messrs. Rosas and de Goyenêche, mandatories of the Peruvian nation, by virtue of a special law, regularly and constitutionally voted by Congress October 10, 1879.

This contract stipulates that under condition of a rent or duty per ton for all guano and nitrate exported in favor of Peru (articles 4 and 29), and under the sole reservation of duties arising from anterior contracts (1869–1876) for guano; 1875 and 1878, for nitrates (articles 24 and 33), all deposits of guano and nitrate are definitively placed in the possession of a society, which binds itself to work the same and to devote the net product thereof to the complete extinction of the Peruvian loans; these two manures to be held as security.

Supported by this contract the governments, having right of intervention are judicially founded in requiring from Chili the restitution of the deposits of guano and nitrate under the conditions stipulated in the contract of January 7, 1880. But this contract was merely the formal and material consecration of rights which had been already formally conceded.

The only claim that Chili can set up legitimately would be to demand as war indemnity either all or part of the duties claimed by Peru.

ACCORD OF THE VARIOUS POWERS.

In order that the working of the deposits of guano and nitrate, under the aforesaid conditions, be protected against any ulterior difficulty and against all eventualities, it is indispensable that the working be placed under the direct protectorate of the powers ruling the creditors of Peru. It cannot be seen how either the Governments of France, England, or Italy, taking the initiative in mediation, can suscitate any objection to the intervention and protectorate hereinbefore mentioned.

It would be difficult to explain why any one amongst them should criticise the proposed ruling, inasmuch that this ruling in substance as well as in form is identical with that which said powers imposed on Tunis. This is easy to establish.

RULINGS ON THE FOREIGN TUNISIAN LOAN.

(A decree of July 14, 1869, prepared at Paris, constitutes:)

An executive committee, composed of two Tunisian functionaries and of an inspector-general of finances; a supervising committee, composed of six members—two English, two French, and two Italian—elected by vote of the parties interested; a financial commission, composed of the two united committees.

An arrangement proposed by the financial commission and concluded March 23, 1870, stipulates:

1st. The fusion of the different claims.

2d. The actual surrender of the securities to the representatives of the creditors under the collective protection of England, France, and Italy.

3d. The management of the revenues surrendered by a council of administration acting in the interest and for account of the creditors, and under the supervision of the committee up to the extinction of the loans.

REGULATION OF THE FOREIGN PERUVIAN LOAN.

The contracts of Crédit Industriel stipulate, according to the arrangement of March 23, 1870:

1st. The fusion of the different loans. (Article 8 of the conditions and article 33 of the contract.)

2d. The actual surrender of the securities to the creditors. (Articles 2 and 27 of the contract.)

3d. The management of the revenues surrendered up to the extinction of the loans by a society acting in the interest and for account of the creditors (articles 1 and 27 of the contract), under the control of committees elected by the French, English, Belgian, and Dutch creditors (articles 16 of the conditions), and of the officials of the State interested, (article 18 of the contract).

In order that the identity should be perfect there will only have to be added in the general interest the direct protection of the European powers ruling the Peruvian creditors.

If France, England, and Italy, who have manifested the desire to protect their citizens in their interests on the Pacific, really mean action, they are morally bound to insist upon the execution of the contracts of the Crédit Industriel, inasmuch that these contracts are the only ones which furnish judicially the measure and the conditions that should be imposed, and also that they are in themselves the reproduction, almost word by word, of a regulation which these same had already agreed upon to impose collectively on the Tunisian Government.

In Europe, outside of these three states, there are only Holland and Belgium who possess an interest in this arrangement, as their citizens have subscribed largely to the Peruvian loans. Holland has already declared herself ready to follow the initiative of the first three governments, and Belgium is declared to be in the same disposition.

Out of Europe there remains the United States, who may entertain a certain repugnance at seeing any European influence implanted or developed consequent upon a protectorate over the guano and nitrate deposits on the Pacific coast.

This difficulty, however, may be solved, for there exist reasons to believe that the United States would dislike much more the aggrandizement of Chili by the annexation of Peru, and thereby upsetting the equilibrium of the South American states, than a mere local European influence. The United States would, on the contrary, be well pleased to see the guano and nitrate deposits withdrawn from Chili, for by such withdrawal Chili would be deprived of her only means of dominating the other republics neighboring, and thus forming a Spanish confederation in the south which would be sufficiently powerful to cause ulterior fears or embarrassments in the north.

To sum up: Everything goes to prove that the interests of the European creditors of Peru are menaced by Chili, and that they can only be protected by the assumption of an extremely energetic stand.

The best, indeed the only, basis for such stand is furnished by the contracts of the Crédit Industriel, for they show precisely in what measure and under what conditions an adjustment can be claimed and exacted from Chili.

There is still less reason for hesitation in energetically insisting upon the execution of the contracts of the Crédit Industriel, both with regard to Chili as to Peru, in this, that said contracts must be regarded favorably by the powers interested either directly or indirectly in the adjustment of the Peruvian-Chilian difficulty, for these contracts are an assurance of the renewal of the service of Peruvian loans; are, further, in harmonious conformity with a financial precedent established by the European powers, and answer satisfactorily to certain political views of the United States.

PARIS, June 1, 1881.

[Translation.]

Programme of mediation between Peru and Chili.

PARIS, July, 1881.

1st. Neutralization of the deposits of guano and nitrate.

In order to spare the two states the irritation consequent upon a cession of territory, and to guarantee the creditors, whose security these deposits are, against further difficulties.

2d. Management of neutralized deposits confided to a credit establishment of undoubted standing and respectability.

In order to give confidence to all the parties interested in the engagements entered into.

3d. Basis of the management.

The contract of the Crédit Industriel, signed at Paris, January 7, 1880, and altered in a manner to satisfy all interests, guarantees:

1st. To Chili: The payment which it has demanded of £1 10*s*. per ton, or £450,000 per year, which would render it possible to make a loan to that state or to pay a reasonable war indemnity.

2d. To Peru: The amount that it has declared indispensable to its needs, £400,000 per year.

3d. To the bondholders: The remainder, which represents 3 per cent. of the nominal actual capital of the debt.

4th. Conversion of the nitrate debt;

In order to permit the redemption of the Peruvian guano debt and likewise to increase, if necessary, the payments promised to Peru and Chili (Article III).

5th. Establishment of a cable from Panama to Peru;

To aid in the development of the relations between this latter country and Europe, and in the re-establishment of its credit, a subsidy, which could be drawn from the conversion of the nitrate debt, might be appropriated to the benefit of this cable.

It can be affirmed that this programme, if proposed by the United States, would be supported by the principal states of Europe, whose citizens are creditors of Peru, especially by England, Belgium, and Holland.

DEDUCTION.

No. 1. The guano manipulation and mixtures, taken together, can produce per year, with a sale of 300,000 tons at £12		£3,600,000
From which must be deducted:
I. Freight and expenses, at £4 per ton	£1,200,000
II. Rent to Chili, at £1 10*s*. per ton	450,000
III. Rent to Peru, at £1 per ton	300,000
IV. Rent to Dreyfus, at £1 per ton	300,000
		2,250,000
Balance		1,350,000
Remuneration to the managing company		270,000
Balance to be distributed annually to the bondholders		1,080,000
Or 3 per cent. of the nominal capital of the debt.
No. 2. The working of monopolized nitrate can produce per year, at the rate of 200,000 tons, sold at £14		£2,800,000
I. Manufacture and transportation to the coast, £6 per ton	£1,200,000
II. Freight and expenses, £4 per ton	800,000
III. Payment to Chili, 10 per cent. per ton	100,000
IV. Payment to Peru, 10 per cent. per ton	100,000
		2,200,000
Balance		600,000
Remuneration to the company of management		120,000
Balance to be distributed per year		480,000

Of which the division might take place:

I. For the payment of interest, and for the amortization of the debt of the proprietors of the nitrate works, which now requires 8 per cent. interest and 2 per cent. amortization per year, or £400,000 per year, and which might be reduced to, say, an interest of 5 per cent. and 1 per cent. amortization, and converted into transferable bonds, which, being negotiable in Europe, would pay to the holders more than they would lose at the rate of exchange, say	240,000
II. Subsidy to a cable between Peru and Panama	60,000
III. Amount assigned to an early redemption of the foreign Peruvian debt until the Dreyfus debt has been extinguished, and until it can act by means of the amount now assigned to Messrs. Dreyfus & Co	180,000
	480,000

The combination then renders it possible to assign each year:

I. To Chili £550,000, say, on guano	450,000
And on nitrate	100,000
	550,000
That is to say, an annual payment more than sufficient to be able to secure a loan in Europe of more than	5,000,000
II. To Peru £400,000, say, on guano	300,000
And on nitrate	100,000
	400,000
That is to say a sufficient amount to meet its legitimate needs.
III. To foreign bondholders £1,260,000
Or as interest	1,080,000
And as amortization	180,000
	1,260,000

That is to say an inferior revenue to that of £2,600,000, but perfectly sure; besides being protected from every contingency by neutralization.

It is sufficient to read the above programme and the figures which follow from it to recognize—

a. That the combination is acceptable to the two states, since it permits peace to be made without irritation to their amour propre, at the same time assuring to each of them a large pecuniary compensation.

b. That the combination is acceptable to the creditors of Peru, since, in return for the abandonment of a portion of their interests, it gives them a security that they have never had before.

c. That the combination is presentable by a mediator, since it sacrifices no one, and allows the two states to recover their credit, the ruin of which would produce embarrassment in the commercial world.

NOTE.

The notes and information relative to the settling of the pending question between Peru and Chili have been constantly presented by the "Compagnie Financière et Commerciale du Pacifique," in the following points of view:

1°. The political and territorial preservation of Peru.

2°. Monopolized sale of the two only products that could afford, in a certain measure, the means of satisfying the interests of the exterior creditors of Peru, whoever they may be.

3°. The apportionment, under the care of the "Compagnie Financière et Commerciale du Pacifique," of the product of the monopolized nitrates and guanos, to the several parties concerned, and according to the basis adopted at the moment of the conclusion of peace.

1°. The political and territorial preservation of Peru.

All national or political consideration is foreign to the opinion expressed on this subject.

But victorious Chili, the real possessor to-day of a considerable part of the Peruvian territory, does not seem to be able to extricate herself from the following dilemma:

The right of nations, the elementary principles of international right, oblige a state who annexes unto itself a territory to assume the liabilities that burden that territory in favor of third parties. (See the consultation herein annexed.)

In the particular case now in point, the European States have had, in 1865, the opportunity of formally expressing that opinion, when the Chinchas Islands, on which the principal deposits of guano were situated, were momentarily occupied by the Spanish fleet, under the orders of Admiral Pinson.

If Chili occupied the whole of the Peruvian territory, if she enjoyed the totality of the products of that territory, she would be unquestionably responsible for the totality of the exterior debts of that country.

If, instead of withholding the totality of the territory, Chili were to retain only a part of it, the province of Tarapaca, for instance, she would evidently have only to support the liabilities resulting from exterior debts in a determined measure, proportionately to the value or the product of the territory annexed to its states.

But Chili cannot leave on Peru the whole burden of her exterior debts, and appropriate the revenues intended for the payment of those debts. She must, in one word, shoulder the assets and the debts of the territorial power to whom she succeeds.

The claim expressed on this subject by Chili, to obey no other but her own will and the law of her interests, to dispose of the resources of the vanquished without regard to the mortgages with which they are burdened, appears excessive and contrary to all the recognized principles in similar cases.

If, therefore, the total or partial conquest of Peruvian territory is rendered impossible by the charges imposed on the conqueror, any reasonable mind must come to this conclusion:

That in her own interest Chili must end by respecting the Peruvian territory, either in its integrality or in the greater part of its extent.

But if Peru subsists as a state, the necessary consequence of this fact is the maintenance of a budget that will allow to meet the necessary expenses of both government and administration.

It is owing to this order of ideas, the application of which will force itself at the moment of the conclusion of the peace, that we have taken into consideration the imperious necessities of Peru, and the urgency of satisfying them in a certain measure.

2°. Monopolized sale of the two only products that could afford, in a certain measure, the means of satisfying the interests of the exterior creditors of Peru, whoever they be.

The creation of the "Compagnie du Pacifique," in consequence of the treaty of January 7, 1880, is the practical realization of the idea of the re-establishment of the monopoly of sale.

Without this monopoly, that is under the present law of competition, the gross price of guano cannot rise much beyond the actual market price of £8; that is, £2,400,000 for 300,000 tons gross weight.

With this monopoly there is reason to hope that, without greatly curtailing the sum total of the sales in Europe, the old price of £12 could be obtained; that is, $3,600,000 for 300,000 tons gross weight.

Moreover, competition increases the price of freight, of expenses, &c., which will also affect the net total of the sum to be divided.

Now, therefore, the monopoly can only be reconstituted through the agency of the "Compagnie Financière et Commerciale du Pacifique," because this latter has become, or is going to become, after long and difficult negotiations, the comptroller of the totality of the stock of guano (about 600,000 tons) existing at this present moment in Europe.

We have explained in a special note the reasons that advised the submitting of the nitrates of soda to the same rule of monopoly as the guanos.

Without re-entering upon the details furnished on this subject, we will recall that the principal of these reasons are:

1°. The necessity of regulating the importations of guano and nitrate to Europe, these two products, though chemically constituted in a different way, competing with each other in a certain measure.

2°. The study of the means to satisfy with the greatest facility the ancient owners of the niter beds of Peru, dispossessed by the government of that country.

3°. The necessity of regulating in a profitable manner for all parties the movement of a trade that interests Bolivia as well as Peru.

4°. The means of finding in the sale of nitrate, rendered as profitable as possible, a supplementary resource enabling the settlement of the very difficult financial questions involved in the conclusion of peace.

Chili seems only to oppose to the establishment of the monopoly of the sale of nitrate, theories of political economy, inspired by private interests, which are very little in harmony with the imperious necessity created by circumstances.

III°. The apportionment, under the care of the "Compagnie Financière et Commerciale du Pacifique," of the product of the monopolized guanos and nitrates to the several parties concerned, and according to the basis adopted at the moment of the conclusion of the peace.

Several calculations have been submitted on the subject. They all start, as regards the guano, from this very probable fact, viz, that the real expenses necessitated by the importation and sale of guano will not exceed, under the rule of monopoly, £4 plus 10*s*. the carguio per tonne.

It is therefore the surplus that is to be assigned on bases that can be slightly modified in one sense or the other.

The question is, consequently, to fix: 1°. The order in which the apportionment of the net product is to be made. 2°. The proportion in which each of the parties concerned is to participate in it.

These parties are:

1°. The firm of Dreyfus, acknowledged creditor of the Peruvian Government for an important sum.

2°. The holders of Peruvian loans, 1870 and 1872.

3°. The holders of certificates delivered by the Peruvian Government, in exchange of the value of the appropriated niter-beds.

4°. Peru, if that state subsists either totally or partially.

5°. The Chilian Government.

We have followed in this statement, as regards the three first classes of claims, what is supposed to be the chronological order of pre-existing rights.

But this order can be modified so far in the conclusion of a treaty of peace as to give to Chili the first rank in the division of the product, that is, so far as to give her the certainty that the annual sum which will be her share will be paid her after the campagnie, as vendor, will have been reimbursed for the expenses incurred in the operation.

The bondholders that have been sacrificed up to this moment have every right to be protected; and even if they are only called upon to receive what will remain after all other interested parties have taken their share, it is necessary, at least, that this portion should be reasonable, and should not render the promises made to the exterior creditors of Peru either ridiculous or vain.

That this should be, it is necessary, in any case, that guano sold under monopoly should be assessed more than £8 per ton, thus: £4 for freight, storage, and expenses inherent to the product; 10*s.* the carguio; £3 10*s.* to be divided between Chili, Peru, and the firm of Dreyfus, in the order and in the proportion which will be adopted.

What will remain, after deducting the above-mentioned assessments, will constitute the share of the bondholders and of the compagnie, at the rate of 80 per cent. for the former, and of 20 per cent. for the latter Supplementary observation of the means of converting into cash the sum assigned to one or the other of the belligerents.

If Chili is called upon to receive the product of the guano and nitrate, after the reimbursement of the expenses, and if the neutralty of the deposits of these two products is guaranteed by the Government of the United States, the "Compagnie du Pacifique" might well bind itself to pay to Chili, at fixed annual periods, the sum amounting to the duty assigned in her favor by the treaty of peace.

But this engagement cannot be absolute. It is evidently subordinate to the existence of a stock of guano sufficient to enable the exportation of this product to be made in the foreseen amount. It is equally subordinate to uncontrollable circumstances which might for a moment render the sale of guanos impossible on those markets where it is at present demanded.

The "Compagnie du Pacifique" is not constituted with a view of taking the place of the belligerent states, and of being a guarantee, in any case, of one with respect to the other. Its statutes force it to remain within the limits of its mandate, which is the one of a loyal trustee intrusted to sell a product on the best terms possible, and to faithfully divide its price.

Therefore it is impossible, if there is a loan to be contracted, that the compagnie should assume towards the public the absolute engagement to pay, which cannot be the work of a financial establishment, and that she should take in that respect a responsibility that can only be usefully assumed by a state.

If the annuity assigned to Chili by the treaty of peace is to be immediately converted in a sum necessary to the financial wants of that state, that operation can only take place by the direct intervention, with respect to the creditors of one or the other of the nations concerned.

Peru has nothing to hope from European capital, having been deprived of all reputation for solvency even before the present crisis.

But Chili can convert the annual sum that the treaty of peace will assign her, in a sum proportionate to her wants. She can do it all the more easily, as her credit on the European markets, consolidated by a great punctuality in meeting her engagements, has never been assailed.

This solution is imperious, for there exists no other, whatever may be the desire to pay in cash the ransom of Peru, and thus to simplify the conclusion of a treaty of peace.

Chili may easily obtain more than £6,000,000 to £7,000,000 net from a loan based upon the dues that the guanos and nitrates will secure her.

The safety of the security on which this loan will rest will be increased by the intervention of the United States, and Chili will obtain, on that score, all it can expect from a vanquished enemy, who gives her all it can offer.

The "Compagnie du Pacifique" has informed the Chilian Government, that, in connection with other large financial establishments, it was quite ready to negotiate an operation of the nature of the one in discussion.

It is ready to undertake the active pursuit of such negotiations as soon as circumstances will render them opportune.

PARIS, July 25, 1881.

Memorandum in regard to the double programme to be followed by the Pacific Company.

DECEMBER 8, 1881.

The attitude of the United States Government is now perfectly well defined. It has decided to interfere for the purpose of putting an end to the conflict between the two southern republics, and of enforcing a peace, having for its basis the principles of the memorandum addressed by Mr. Hurlbut to General Lynch on the fourth day of August, 1881, that is to say, "without any cession of territory on the part of Peru, but with the payment of a reasonable war indemnity to Chili."

In the anticipation of this contingency, Mr. Guillaume proposed to the United States, on the 27th day of September, 1880, through Mr. R. Randall, a programme whose execution was guaranteed, at the request of the minister of state, by the Crédit Industriel, and which is now guaranteed by the Financial and Commercial Company of the Pacific, acting in its stead. (See letter of October, 1880.)

This programme, which was somewhat defective, owing to the fact that certain rights of third parties were to be protected, was somewhat modified and corrected in July, 1881, and has been finally prepared in a permanent form as follows:

It is upon this programme, whose execution has been formally guaranteed, that the following authorities have based their action:

On the one hand the Washington Cabinet, in order to offer a war indemnity to Chili; on the other hand, President Garcia Calderon, in order to affirm and declare, over his own signature, that he was prepared to pay said indemnity.

Consequently the Pacific Company must be able to fulfill its engagements as soon as it shall receive notice to do so, since present events concern, in a manner, it alone.

It is evident that if everything went on according to the wishes of the Pacific Company, that is to say, if Chili should accept either, purely and simply, the contingent amount for which provision is made in the programme, or should be willing to give her signature to a loan which, on the basis of an annual payment of £550,000, may be raised to £8,000,000 net against the assignment of the said payment, nothing would be easier, because, in the first case, the amount yielded by guano and nitrate exceed the sums to be guaranteed nearly fourfold; and because, in the second case, a loan issued with the signature of Chili would be taken up so rapidly that the issuing syndicate would do well to consider whether it would not be to its own interest to take the whole amount of said loan, and to dispose of it afterwards at the stock exchange.

Political events, however, often deceive all foresight, and particularly in the present case must we make allowance for mistakes in calculation.

Everybody knows, for it has been superabundantly demonstrated by facts, that Chili ardently desires to annex the province of Tarapaca.

If that state is forced to conclude a peace without being permitted to annex any territory, it is to be expected that it will raise all imaginable difficulties, among others that it will require the promised payment of a war indemnity, while refusing its signature to a loan, since such a refusal, as Chili is probably aware, may be of a nature to cause the failure of the whole combination.

Chili may be told that if she had kept Tarapaca, she would have been obliged to lend her signature, if she had desired to negotiate a loan, that is to say, to discount the amount imposed by her upon the guano and nitrate deposits; that consequently nothing abnormal is asked of her; that, in fact, if guano and nitrate are to serve for the payment of the war indemnity, which she claims, she cannot require such payment, except on condition of pledging herself by signing bonds for the payment of principal and interest, in case that which has served as security should disappear or become no longer available.

Chili can with difficulty refute this argument, but she may easily answer that; if she had kept Tarapaca, her intention was not to negotiate any loan for the sake of not increasing her liabilities in case of the exhaustion or unavailability of the guano and nitrate.

The Pacific Company may therefore content itself with an annual payment.

Here too, however, Chili may raise a new difficulty by demanding, as will be just, to occupy and work the deposits herself by way of a guarantee. This will create a new difficulty, for occupation on such conditions will be equivalent to annexation, not to mention the fact that Chili will wish to intrust the working of the deposits to a house of her own choice.

There is but one means to overcome this obstacle, and that is to offer and guarantee the payment of the war indemnity in a number of reliable and fixed annuities, in case of Chili's refusal to lend her signature to a loan.

And as Chili will not be contented with exacting for herself, but will also wish to exact for the bondholders, in order to increase the difficulty, owing to her anger at being expelled from Tarapaca, the annuities to be guaranteed will have, at the same time, to comprise the indemnity to Chili, the payment of the Peruvian loans, and the amount due to Dreyfus, together with a payment to Peru, since the latter state will well understand that if it stipulate for nothing for itself, it will be running the risk of getting nothing.

The conclusion is that the Pacific Company must provide for the case of being obliged to propose the purchase of a large quantity of guano and nitrate, for it does not seem to be able, consistently with a due regard to the interest of its stockholders, to think for a single instant of abandoning the favorable situation which is apparently created for it by the course of events.

Let us therefore examine what may be the quantity to be purchased, the price to be offered, and the risks attending the operation.

PURCHASE SUBSTITUTED FOR CONSIGNMENT.

1st. Quantity.—In the programme an annual payment has been planned of £550,000 in favor of Chili.

This sum capitalized at 5 per cent. interest, and one per cent. amortization, represents, at the rate of 82 per cent. (including commission and expense of emission), the net amount of £8,000,000 in round numbers.

This amount has been fixed upon on the hypothesis of a loan bearing the Chilian or Chilio-Peruvian stamp, and estimating—1st. That that amount could not be exceeded without sacrificing the Peruvian creditors. 2d. That inasmuch as the war can hardly have cost the Chilian treasury more than six million pounds sterling (which may easily be verified), the sum of £2,000,000 offered a very reasonable indemnity, especially if we consider the sums which have already been paid by the Peruvians as war contributions, or by the custom-houses.

As it is hardly probable that Chili will accept less than £8,000,000, it is this amount which, being divided by the annuity provided for in the programme (£550,000), will determine the number of fixed annuities to be paid to Chili in the case above provided for in which that state, refusing to lend its signature to a loan, should require the purchase of the guano.

Fifteen annuities will, therefore, be required in order to pay £8,000,000. This gives, as the quantity of guano and nitrate to be purchased, at the rate of £300,000 per annum of the former, and £200,000 of the latter: 4,500,000 tons guano; 3,000,000 tons nitrate—total, 7,500,000 tons.

2d. Purchase price.—In 1869 Mr. Dreyfus purchased of the Peruvian Government 2,000,000 tons of guano, at the rate of 36 sols each (round numbers), or at the fixed rate of exchange of 45 pence per sol, one hundred and sixty-two francs and fifty centimes, or six pounds ten shillings per ton.

In 1876 the Peruvian Company took the consignment of 1,900,000 tons of guano at the rate of a forfeit for expenses of four pounds fifteen shillings, plus ten shillings for expenses of * * * [illegible]. The average selling prices, with competition, and without considering the qualities, amounting to £9 10*s.* The net amount yielded by each ton was therefore £4 5*s.*

In 1880 Mr. Dreyfus accepted, with undisguised joy, a settlement of his claim against Peru in guano at £5 per ton. Knowing, first, that Mr. Dreyfus realized, with his monopoly, at least £2 profit on each ton purchased by him at £6 10*s.*

2. That the Peruvian Guano Company realized at least, with competition, £1 profit on each ton, yielding net £4 5*s.*

3d. That Mr. Dreyfus expected to realize at least £2, with competition, on each ton accepted by him, at the rate of £5—£15 15.

It may be confidently asserted that the average yielded by these three amounts (£5 5) represents the price at which all the guano in Peru may be purchased, not only without risk, but with a profit of more than £2 per ton, it being understood that that price is for a standard of 7 per cent. of azote and 14 per cent. phosphoric acid, and that a monopoly in selling is to be enjoyed.

As to nitrate, its selling price has always been proportioned to that of guano; that is to say, between £16 and £14, the highest price having been £16, which was during the time of the monopoly of guano under Mr. Dreyfus, and the lowest having been £14, at the time when there was competition.

If we may take as an average selling price, knowing that nitrate costs about £10 for manufacturing, transportation, and sale, we may confidently fix the purchase price at £8, with the certainty of £2 profit per ton, providing always that the article be of uniformly good quality.

3d. Risks.—The trade in guano and nitrate being a cash one, presents no risks in itself. The only drawbacks to be expected in the case of a very large operation, at long time, are those offered by the competition of fertilizers in consequence of improvements in chemistry, or by the increase of necessary expenditures owing to high freights. There have been no others, for European agriculture (and this will soon be the case with that of America) cannot do without fertilizing material, and calls for increased quantities every year. The price paid, moreover, is in proportion to the quality.

POSSIBLE COMPETITION.

In addition to the barn-yard, the pigeon-house, and the privy, the manure yielded by which is necessarily limited in amount, all other fertilizers need, in order to be rendered serviceable, to be artificially enriched with azote and phosphoric acid, or else with substances taken from guano itself, or with chemical productions.

It is, however, to be remarked that azote and phosphoric acid cost, when manufactured and added to poor fertilizers, almost as much as the same elements do when sold in nitrate and guano, not to mention the fact that it has been proved, not once, but a thousand times, that azote and phosphoric acid, when artificially added to fertilizers, are far from having the same fertilizing properties that they do when naturally contained in guano and nitrate.

Consequently before the competition of the rivals of guano and nitrate can become at all formidable, two conditions must be fulfilled, which are now admitted to be impossible: First, the manufacture at an extremely low price, and in enormous quantities, of azote and phosphoric acid; second, the artificial addition of these two elements, equaling their natural formation and combination in guano.

More than fifteen years will certainly be required before such a result can be reached, and in order to convince oneself of this fact, it is sufficient to call to mind the great number of efforts which have been made for this purpose, and their constant failure.

High freights.—An increase in the rate of freights may seem to be probable, owing to the general tendency to substitute steam-vessels for those propelled by sails.

In the first place, guano and nitrate make a bad cargo for iron-built steam-vessels. Hence, as long as there is any guano and nitrate, it is certain that there will be sailing-vessels to carry these substances, because the cost of construction of a sailing-vessel being relatively small and freights being certain, it will always be to the interest of shipowners to use them.

If the grain of California, cotton, and wool are conveyed by steam more and more every year, this is not owing to any revolution in the merchant marine, but only to speculation, which demands speedy arrivals in consequence of sales in which the goods sold are to be delivered at a fixed time, and of competition; these cases will never arise for guano, which is without a competitor, and with which the markets can readily be stocked a long time beforehand, as prices are fixed and the article does not deteriorate.

Yet, admitting for an instant, that sailing-vessels are to disappear, will the consequence be that freights by steamers will be enhanced? This is very doubtful, because as a steam-vessel can make two trips while a sailing-vessel is making one, the former can put its freights at the same figure, owing to the fact that the crew is paid for two trips while they would be paid for but one on board of a sailing-vessel. Moreover the rates of insurance on board of a steamer are considerably lower than they are on board of a sailing-vessel. The fact, besides, has been already demonstrated by the grain of California, which is conveyed by steamers at the same rates as by sailing-vessels.

In addition to which the substitution of steamers for sailing-vessels will necessarily increase the consumption of coal, and consequently its transportation to the southern seas, which will render very advantageous rates of freight possible.

Finally, in six years a ship-canal will have been built through the Isthmus of Panama. As the distance between Peru and Europe will thereby be considerably diminished, the necessary consequence will be a reduction in the rates of freight between those countries.

Thus all the probabilities are in favor of a reduction in the rates of freight, rather than of an increase of the same, within a period of fifteen years.

To sum up:

The United States and Peru have assumed their present attitude of resistance to the pretensions of Chili, basing their action upon formal engagements of the Crédit Industriel.

The Pacific Company, which has assumed the engagements of the Crédit Industriel, must therefore, from proper regard both for its own standing and its responsibility to the stockholders, who have placed confidence in its promise to secure the working of the guano and nitrate, prepare to carry out the programme of September 27, 1880, either in the form of a consignment with a loan, or of a purchase at a fixed price.

Whatever may be the solution of the question, the experience of the past and the conditions of the future clearly show that there is no risk save that of gaining a little more or a little less, and that it is even possible that more may be gained in the form of a purchase than in that of a consignment.

No. 441.

NOTE.—The following extracts are taken from the Official Registers of the Department, and show that the several communications therein indicated were received in the ordinary course of business, and belong to the files of the Department. A careful search fails to show that they are now in the Department:

Mr. Shipherd to Mr. Blaine, May 21, 1881:

"Peruvian Company organized for the purpose of paying the claims of American citizens against Peru for violation of guano contracts, foreign bondholders, Chilian war indemnity, &c., providing Peru will give it the right to work guano-beds, &c.; prospectus of company with other papers inclosed; requests protection of the United States."

Mr. Shipherd to Mr. Blaine, May 25, 1881:

"Peruvian Company, prospectus of, with other papers inclosed; asks that the documents be presented to Mr. Hurlbut, and that he be granted an interview before Ministers Kilpatrick and Hurlbut go to their posts."

Mr. Shipherd to Mr. Blaine, May 31, 1881:

"Peruvian Company refers to conversation had with the United States minister to Peru, and states that they are ready to advance money to Chili, &c., providing the United States will support them in their legal and equitable rights, &c.; desires a personal discussion with President and Secretary of State relative to."

Mr. Shipherd to Mr. Blaine, June 4, 1881:

"Peruvian Company, transmits letter of 2d instant, addressed to S. A. Hurlbut, United States minister to Peru, giving his observations concerning the plans, intentions, and wishes of the company in their claim to the ownership of the guano deposits discovered by Cochet, &c., and requesting minister's comments thereon."

Mr. Shipherd to Mr. Blaine, June 21, 1881:

"Peruvian Company submits a translated reprint of an old Peruvian pamphlet relative to Cochet guano claim."

Mr. Fisher to Mr. Evarts, July 13, 1879:

"Neutrality of the United States in the Chili and Peru-Bolivian war; torpedo-boat shipped from the United States to Peru was seized by request of Chilian consul at Panama; other shipments of similar nature are expected, suggests that the United States consul at Aspinwall be instructed to examine suspicious-looking packages."

Same to same, July 14, 1879:

"War between Chili and Peru.Bolivia; progress of recent engagements; general review of the position of the belligerents."

Same to same, November 7, 1879:

"War between Chili and Peru-Bolivia; reports progress of."

47TH CONGRESS, 1st Session. } SENATE. { Ex. Doc. 79, Part 2.

MESSAGE

FROM THE

PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES,

TRANSMITTING,

In further response to the Senate resolution of December 13, 1881, a report of the Secretary of State, embodying the purport of a recent telegram from the special envoy of the United States, setting forth the conditions of peace presented by Chili.

JANUARY 27, 1882.—Read and referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations and ordered to be printed.

To the Senate of the United States:

I transmit herewith, in further response to the Senate resolution of the 13th December, 1881, a report of the Secretary of State, embodying the purport of a recent telegram from the special envoy of the United States, setting forth the conditions of peace presented by Chili.

CHESTER A. ARTHUR.

EXECUTIVE MANSION,
Washington, January 27, 1882.

To the PRESIDENT:

In further response to the resolution of the Senate of the 13th ultimo, calling for correspondence touching affairs in and between Chili and Peru, the Secretary of State has the honor to lay before the President the purport of a cipher telegram from the special envoy lately sent out to those countries.

Mr. Trescot, in this telegram, reports that he has had several confidential conferences with the minister for foreign affairs of Chili; that the Chilian Government disclaims any intention of offending the Government of the United States in the arrest of President Calderon and his removal to Chilian territory; that the good offices of the United States will be accepted by Chili; and that the Chilian authorities will facilitate conference between the United States' special envoy and the provisional government of Peru, with the exception of Señor Calderon. The terms of peace presented by Chili embrace the following points: Absolute cession of the Tarapacá district and, in addition thereto, the payment of an indemnity of twenty millions, payable in ten years, during all of which time the positive occupation of Arica by Chili is required, and, should the indemnity be unpaid, Arica is also to be ceded to Chili, and, besides this, Chili is to appropriate the guano deposits of the Lobos Islands. In event of Peru refusing the conditions named, the Chilian Government would decline any further proffer of the friendly interference of the United States.

The remainder of this telegram is obscure, and it is uncertain whether the Department of State is able to translate from the cipher the exact language, or even to obtain the sense of the sender. For this reason, as well as from a wish to avoid disclosing the cipher of the Department, the substance only of the dispatch is sent.

Respectfully submitted.

FRED'K T. FRELINGHUYSEN.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, January 27, 1882.

○

47TH CONGRESS, 1st Session. } SENATE. { Ex. Doc. 79, Part 3.

MESSAGE

FROM THE

PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES,

TRANSMITTING

A report of the Secretary of State and an accompanying paper, in further response to the Senate resolution of December 13, 1881, calling for correspondence touching affairs in or between Peru and Chili.

MARCH 16, 1882.—Read and referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations, and ordered to be printed.

To the Senate of the United States:

I transmit herewith a report of the Secretary of State and an accompanying paper, in further response to the resolution of the Senate of the 13th of December last, calling for correspondence touching affairs in or between Peru and Chili.

CHESTER A. ARTHUR.

EXECUTIVE MANSION,
Washington, March 16, 1882.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, March 15, 1882.

The Secretary of State has the honor to report that, since he laid before the President, on the 24th of January last, all the correspondence found in the Department of State coming under the call of the Senate by its resolution of 13th December, 1881, for correspondence touching affairs in or between Peru and Chili, a further search among the files has resulted in the finding of one the reports of Mr. Horace N. Fisher, mentioned as missing on page 742 of the printed publication of the correspondence heretofore transmitted. A copy of the paper thus found, being Mr. Fisher's letter to Mr. Seward of November 7, 1879, is herewith submitted.

As relating to the same subject, the Secretary of State transmits a copy of a letter of the 8th instant from Mr. Horace N. Fisher, with which he sent hither copies of two of the papers heretofore reported as missing, namely, his letters of July 13 and July 14, 1879, reporting the course of events on the Pacific coast. It will be observed that Mr. Fisher is not able to reproduce his letter of November 7, 1879, having retained no copy thereof, but the original letter having been found, as explained above, the series of Mr. Fisher's letters is now complete.

The Secretary of State also transmits, as coming apparently within the purview of the Senate's resolution, a personal note of the Chilian Minister, Mr. Martinez, to the late Assistant Secretary of State, dated November 23, 1881. This paper seems to have been overlooked by the clerks who collected the correspondence previously submitted. It is now laid before the President for transmission to the Senate, in order that the response of the Department of State to the resolution of December 13 may be as complete as possible.

Renewed and exhaustive examination of the files has failed to show that any other pertinent papers had been received prior to the date of the last transmission, January 24, 1882, or to discover any of the missing papers save the letter of Mr. Fisher of November 7, 1879.

Respectfully submitted.

FRED'K T. FRELINGHUYSEN.

To the PRESIDENT.

LIST OF ACCOMPANYING PAPERS.

1. Mr. Horace N. Fisher to Mr. F. W. Seward, November 7, 1879.
2. Mr. Fisher to Mr. Frelinghuysen, Boston, March 8, 1882, inclosing: A. Copy of his report of July 13, 1879. B. Copy of his report of July 14, 1879.
3. Mr. Martinez to Mr. Hitt, November 23, 1881.

No. 1.

Mr. Horace N. Fisher to Mr. Seward.

LIGUA, CHILI, November 7, 1879.

DEAR SIR: The governor of this province has just shown me the dispatch of Señor Santa Maria, the prime minister of Chili, to him. This dispatch confirms officially the successful landing of the Chilian Army at Pisagua, in Peru, and the operations there.

By last week's mail I wrote to my old general, A. McD. McCook, at Army headquarters, explaining my views and making some important suggestions. I requested him to confer with General Garfield, and then, if they both approved the suggestion, to present the same to his friends, the President and General Sherman, and also to Mr. Secretary Evarts. If you show General McCook this letter and ask him, he will undoubtedly show it to you. The views there given I confirm even more strongly, and had I time before the mail closes I would send you a copy of it for your information.

In my judgment the crisis of the war is close at hand, and the opportunity alluded to in my letter to General McCook should be carefully considered.

My address is the same as usual, "Care of Señor Don Manuel J. Yrarrazaval, Santiago, Chili.

Yours, in haste,

HORACE N. FISHER.

Hon. FREDERICK W. SEWARD,
State Department, Washington, U. S. A.

No. 2.

Mr. Fisher to the Secretary of State.

BOSTON, March 8, 1882. (Received March 10.)

SIR: Understanding from the public press that the Senate Committee on Foreign Relations was desirous of discovering certain documents reported as missing from the files of the State Department in the South American correspondence recently published, and that among said missing documents were three letters of mine to Mr. Frederick W. Seward, dated July 13 and 14, and November 7, 1879, I addressed a letter to Senator Hoar on March 6, inclosing duplicates of said letters of July 13 and 14, and stated the subjects of my letter of November 7, 1879, of which no copy was taken, for reasons indicated below.

In my letter to Senator Hoar, I stated that said duplicates and statement were forwarded for the information of said committee, but I authorized him to use them as he might deem best; I also stated that I would forward similar duplicates and statement to the State Department for the restoration of its files.

Therefore I have the honor to inclose duplicates of my letters to Mr. Seward of July 13 and 14, 1879, and to make the following statement in regard to my letter to him of November 7, 1879:

My letter to Mr. F. W. Seward of November 7, 1879, was quite brief; it was written at the post-office at Ligua, Chili, whither I had ridden from a friend's house to mail my letters for home; the mail for the United States was just closing, when the governor came to the post-office and showed me an official telegram which he had just received, announcing the landing of the Chilian army in the province of Tarapacá (Peru), after a sharp engagement at Pisague. He courteously allowed me to make a translation of said telegram, which I sent to Mr. Seward. As I remember the circumstances, I added a postscript to the effect that, by the previous mail (October 31), I had sent an important letter to my friend General A. McD. McCook, of Washington, with a "memorandum of the present condition of the South American republics," and that General McCook would probably allow him to read it if he desired. I note that a copy of this letter to General McCook seems to have been placed on the files of the department, as it is published on pages 618 to 621 of the official correspondence now before Congress with my other letters to Mr. Seward and Mr. Hunter. Any other information I may have on this subject is at your command.

Respectfully, your obedient servant,

HORACE N. FISHER.

[Inclosure A in No. 2.]

Mr. Fisher to Mr. Seward.

[Personal.] OFF GUAYAQUIL, July 13, 1879.

DEAR SIR: I have some facts which I think ought to be known to the United States Government, and therefore, in accordance with the arrangement made between us when I was in Washington last June, I state them and venture to make some suggestions for your information, which, if they seem to you to be well grounded, I authorize you to read to the honorable Secretary of State.

When I arrived at Aspinwall I noticed some large boxes on the cars, which, from their shape and size, attracted the attention of General Edward M. McCook (my fellow-passenger on the Acapulco) and myself as suspicious. They were about eight feet square and high, one on each platform car, and five in number, all marked the same, "Cargadora de Huano, Callao."

After this steamer [Lima] left Panama en route for Callao, I made the acquaintance of Lieutenant Eden, R. N., on his way to Callao, to join H. B. M. ship Triumph. From him I learned that the captain of the Lima had refused to receive on board five boxes marked as above, because he had heard that they contained a torpedo-boat for the Peruvian navy, although invoiced as a launch for the Guano Company at Callao. The captain (Steele) thereupon informed the British consul, who ordered a board of survey, appointing thereto Lieutenant Eden, who had been at the British torpedo school, and the engineer of the steamer Osprey; objections were made to opening the cases in question on the ground that they contained American goods, and only a guano launch shipped by Grace & Co., of New York, to their house in Callao. But the boxes were opened and found to contain a cigar-shaped torpedo-boat, built by Winans, of Baltimore.

The agent in charge, finding that the fraud was discovered, admitted the facts, and said that six other similar boats were building and would be sent to Peru by way of the Isthmus; and that, if necessary, the Peruvian Government would send a Peruvian steamer for them.

As the boat was fully complete (as I am informed) ready to be put together, with its electrical apparatus and working mechanism, it seems to me to present a grave question whether such shipment is not a violation of neutrality—a case of culpable negligence on the part of our government and its officials in New York. if not of those on the Isthmus, of a nature similar to that of the Shenandoah, which sailed, under the name of the Sea King, from a British port, with her armament in the hold.

If this be a correct view, would not the United States Government be responsible for the damage caused by its use at sea against the ships of a friendly nation? Perhaps the shipment under a fraudulent invoice might be excusable on the ground of ignorance of the nature of the contents of the boxes; but its discovery by the board of survey at Panama and the public boast that six other boats were soon to be forwarded from New York by way of the Isthmus, seem to me to call for such precautions on the part of our government as would prevent any such repetition of the violation of our neutrality, to the end that we may avoid a charge not only affecting (as it seems to me) our good faith, but tending to affect those relations of good correspondence with South American republics which seem to me very necessary for the extension of our South American commerce and for favorable commercial treaties.

It is a notorious fact at Panama that the Peruvian steamer Talesman has recently made two voyages from Panama to Callao fully loaded with arms and munitions of war, reported to include 50,000 breech-loading rifles (and cartridges) from the United States. It may be alleged with some force that it is impracticable to prevent the shipment of small-arms skillfully packed in boxes falsely marked and invoiced. But such large packages as are required for the shipment of torpedo-boats can scarcely be defended on the same ground on account of the unusual size and shape of the boxes.

There is, however, a suggestion which I venture to make, although with some diffidence on account of my imperfect information upon the organization and instructions of the port and Treasury officials of the United States. But it seems to me to present a practical method of preserving neutrality not inconsistent with the probable general character of the instructions and duties of the public officials at our ports and on the Isthmus.

Whatever may be the precautions adopted by the Treasury Department at our seaports, and in addition thereto, our officials of the State and Treasury Departments on the Isthmus may perform efficient service, especially as the ports of Aspinwall and Panama are free ports, and to a certain extent exempt from the jurisdiction of the United States of Colombia, which, in the present disturbed state of their internal affairs, have little or no control over the State of Panama. When we consider that the Panama Railroad is owned and operated by Americans, that Aspinwall is owned by the Pacific Mail Steamship Company, and that the contraband goods are shipped under our flag and practically remain so until transshipped at Panama, the question of responsibility for said contraband of war seems to belong more to the United States than to any other country. Moreover, we have not only consuls at Aspinwall, but Treasury agents and inspectors, whose powers and duties I do not understand, but judge from what I have heard that they have a certain jurisdiction over cargoes arriving by American vessels. If I am right in this supposition, suitable instructions to these Treasury agents, supplemented by the co-operation of our consuls, would present ample means and machinery already existing to effect the object.

For example, our Treasury agent at Aspinwall or Panama has reason to believe that a shipment of contraband of war will soon be received or has already arrived. Let him satisfy himself that the goods have already arrived, and then demand that the consul of the United States should order a board of survey, who could appoint a Treasury agent and such other reliable and skillful men as he may deem advisable. If the examination develops the fact of contraband of war let them (i. e., the board of survey) report in writing to the consul, who should have power, and be instructed to withhold the ships' clearance and papers deposited at the consulate unless the master of the ship (1) either gives a sufficient bond that the goods shall not be delivered until the matter shall have been referred to the government at Washington, with the report of the board of survey and the consul's report of the facts, and its decision has been received, or (2) takes the goods back to the United States.

This or some similar method of preventing shipments of contraband of war across the Isthmus from American ports in American ships, would, it seems to me, effectually preserve our neutrality. The presence of an American man-of-war at Aspinwall would perhaps be desirable for this purpose, but particularly on account of the great amount of American property at present virtually without protection in a country unable to protect American interests.

Before closing this letter there is another subject which I think ought not to be passed in silence. I refer to the apparent imminence of intervention of European states in the contest on the west coast of South America. I learn from Lieutenant Eden that eleven men-of-war (British) have been ordered to concentrate on the coast of Peru, at Callao and Iquique; that two others have recently left England, with orders to steam all the way, to re-enforce them; that war material to the value of £2,000,000 had already been forwarded; in a word, that an imposing British naval force, with supplies of an extraordinary character, is deemed necessary in this emergency by the British Government. Lieutenant Eden has, I am informed, considerable family influence at home, and, having been dispatched with orders to join his ship at once, is perhaps able to form some idea of the plan of operations. At all events, I know that he expects that some energetic action will be taken very soon. The impression he has is that Chili has the right and will succeed in holding the disputed territory and perhaps extend her frontier so as to include the Peruvian territory south of Arica; that, if the British fleet acts at all, it will be on the side of Chili, or rather against Peru.

I also learn that the Peruvians captured a German steamer at sea with arms for Chili and took her into Callao, but have been obliged to restore her; also that several German men-of-war have been ordered to the west coast to protect German interests.

I would further add that we have on board a legation from Colombia to Lima. The minister tells me that he will presently proceed to Santiago de Chili; that his government favors the submission of the dispute to the arbitration of the President of the United States.

This letter will be sent by the steamer which sails on our arrival at Guayaquil.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

HORACE N. FISHER.

Hon. FREDERICK W. SEWARD,
State Department, Washington, D. C.

[Inclosure B in No. 2.]

Mr. Fisher to Mr. Seward.

[Personal] GUAYAQUIL, July 14, 1879.

DEAR SIR: We arrived here early this morning and upon going ashore I learned some additional news received yesterday from Callao which I now give.

There have been no active hostilities on sea or land since the news received in New York the last of June. The position of the forces is as follows:

The Peru-Bolivian Army at Arica (20,000?) with advance on River Loa, and an intermediate force near or at Iquique. The Chilian Army, concentrated at Autofagasta numbers 18,000; their advance is at Calamo, where the River Loa (on frontier of Peru and Bolivia) forces its way through the coast range of the Andes. The Calamo Pass is important strategically, because the only road from Cobija, the principal Bolivian port, passes through it going towards the interior of Bolivia. This pass is said to be strongly fortified and held by the Chilians in force.

It is reported that since the naval conflict in the Bay of Iquique the Chilians are unquestionably superior on the sea and that only one of the Peruvian men-of-war, the iron-clad ram Huascar, dares to put to sea; that the Chilians have a large number of steam transports at Autofagasta, and, it is expected, will send a formidable force (10,000) to land in Peru and cut the communications of the Peru-Bolivia army near either Arica or Iquique; that important news of operations on land may be shortly expected. Arica is the terminus of the railroad leading towards Bolivia.

Through the Chilian consul at Guayaquil I learned these facts, and also that Señor Goday, the late minister of Chili at Lima, and now minister at Quito, had just arrived at his house. As I had formerly known Señor Goday, I sent up my card and had a very pleasant interview. The substance of his information was that the Chilian minister to Bogota had been seized on board the British steamer in the harbor of Callao en route to his destination, and imprisoned in the interior of Peru; and of this fact he was in position to know, as said minister was his own brother.

Señor Goday inquired about the public feeling in the United States in regard to the war. I told him that it was generally believed that Chili was in the right; that the United States Government, I had reason to think, was sorry that the conflict had arisen, and would be pleased to use its good offices as a friend to all to bring about an honorable settlement of the war, provided either of the belligerents intimated a desire for such services; that Señor Arosemena, the minister from Colombia to Peru and Chili, now on board the Lima, had stated to me that, in his judgment, the question would have to be settled by arbitration, and that the United States was the most fitting and would be the most acceptable umpire. Señor Goday seemed much pleased with the idea, and, in answer to an inquiry, told me that he thought that it was not too late to settle the matter by arbitration. This opinion I give, because the opinion hitherto expressed by those acquainted with Bolivia and Peru, is that the quarrel will have to be settled by the sword and fought to the end; and, as my informants have been long resident in Bolivia and Peru, their opinion is worthy of consideration.

My own idea is that a decisive victory on the part of the Chilians will dampen the ardor of the Peru-Bolivians and lead to more moderation, especially as nobody will lend money to Bolivia, and Peru has been unable to negotiate a new war loan. In fact, it is stated that Peru has thus far carried on the war upon a subscription of $15,000,000; but no war can be carried on for any length of time upon subscriptions.

There can be no doubt that the destruction of the launches and loading facilities in the guano and nitrate ports of Peru, estimated by my Bolivian informant at $15,000,000, has seriously crippled Peru, whose revenue has chiefly come from export duties on guano and nitrate.

There may be other information to be forwarded from Callao. At all events I think that this war is likely to prove the most important in the history of South America, unless some amicable and honorable arrangement is made by means of the good offices of the United States.

The presence of large naval forces of European Powers may lead to complications seriously affecting the policy of the United States hitherto adopted since the time of President Monroe, for which reason allow me to suggest that it might be well for our government to consider the course to be pursued in the event of such complications, so as to be ready to act promptly.

Very truly yours,

HORACE N. FISHER.

Hon. FREDERICK W. SEWARD,
State Department, Washington, D. C.

P. S.—My address will be, until further notice, care of Minister of Foreign Relations, Santiago, Chili.

No. 3.

Mr. Martinez to Mr. Hitt.

[Translation.]

LEGATION OF CHILI,
Washington, November 23, 1881.

MY DEAR SIR AND FRIEND: I forgot yesterday to tell you what one of my friends in New York has communicated to me. He tells me that Mr. Adams, the minister of the United States to Bolivia, had given out that he carried instructions of great severity against Chili, and that this pleased him because he hated that country. He added that, in his opinion, Chili should not ask for any other territorial annexation in the desert than as far as the 23d degree, and that it was necessary to have the guano and saltpeter worked by an American company. I tell you what they have told me; but I always find, in the information that reaches me, the specter of the "Peruvian company."

I am your very devoted servant and friend,

M. MARTINEZ.

Mr. ROBERT R. HITT.

47TH CONGRESS, 1st Session. } SENATE. { Ex. Doc. No. 80.

LETTER

FROM

THE SECRETARY OF WAR,

TRANSMITTING

A communication from the Chief of Engineers of the Army, dated January 25, 1882, and accompanying copy of report from Maj. G. L. Gillespie, Corps of Engineers, upon an examination of the waters of New York Bay.

JANUARY 30, 1882.—Referred to the Committee on Commerce and ordered to be printed.

WAR DEPARTMENT,
Washington City, January 27, 1882.

The Secretary of War has the honor to transmit to the United States Senate, for the information of the Committee on Commerce, a communication from the Chief of Engineers of the Army, dated the 25th instant, and the accompanying copy of report from Maj. G. L. Gillespie, Corps of Engineers, upon an examination, made in compliance with requirements in the river and harbor act of March 3, 1881, of the waters of New York Bay, from a point between Ellis Island and the docks of the New Jersey Central Railroad to a point between Robbins' Reef Light and Constable Hook, New Jersey.

ROBERT T. LINCOLN,
Secretary of War.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore
of the United States Senate.

OFFICE OF THE CHIEF OF ENGINEERS,
UNITED STATES ARMY,
Washington, D. C., January 25, 1882.

SIR: I have the honor to submit herewith a copy of a report to this office from Maj. G. L. Gillespie, Corps of Engineers, of the results of an examination made, in compliance with the requirements of the river and harbor act of March 3, 1881, of the waters of New York Bay from a point between Ellis Island and the docks of the New Jersey Central Railroad to a point between Robbins' Reef Light and Constable Hook, New Jersey.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

H. G. WRIGHT,
Chief of Engineers, Brig. and Bvt. Maj. Gen.

Hon. ROBERT T. LINCOLN,
Secretary of War.

SURVEY FROM A POINT BETWEEN ELLIS ISLAND AND THE DOCKS OF NEW JERSEY CENTRAL RAILROAD TO A POINT BETWEEN ROBBINS' REEF LIGHT AND CONSTABLE HOOK, IN WATERS OF NEW YORK BAY, NEW JERSEY.

UNITED STATES ENGINEER OFFICE,
New York, December 28, 1881.

GENERAL: In compliance with section 3, river and harbor act approved March 3, 1881, I have the honor to submit herewith my report on the examination "from a point between Ellis Island and docks of New Jersey Central Railroad to a point between Robbins' Reef Light and Constable Hook, in waters of New York Bay, New Jersey."

This examination was made under the direction of my predecessor, in July and August, 1881, and was conducted personally by Assistant Engineer A. Doerflinger, whose report accompanying this communication gives the outline of the projected improvement and the estimated cost.

The area covered by the examination is locally known as "Jersey Flats," which lie on the west side of the Upper Bay of New York, immediately south of Jersey City, extend to the entrance to Kill van Kull, and comprise 4,886 acres.

The Coast Survey chart of the Upper Bay, prepared in 1855, by comparison with that of 1835 shows that during the intervening twenty years the flats had moved greatly to the eastward, with an accompanying diminution in the depth of water. This shoaling is known to be due in part to the encroachments upon the river front by wharf constructions at Jersey City, and in part to deposits of dredgings taken from the slips in New York City. The shoalings from these sources caused the 20-foot curve between Ellis Island and the canal basin in Jersey City to advance 230 yards, and it has been estimated that the average daily deposit upon the flats was, during the interval stated, 1,500 cubic yards. The bed is composed generally of a deposit of mud, silt, sand, gravel, and bowlders, with an average depth of 6 feet water over it at low stage.

From Oyster Island to Craven's Point, on the Jersey shore, a wide shoal of rock in position underlies the bed; at many points the rock is visible at low-water, but generally lies at an average depth of 12 feet below that grade, with a varying covering of sand and silt, such as is found at other points of the flats. In the immediate vicinity of the small islands which lie adjacent to the main ship channel there are noticed small submerged areas of bowlders.

In 1872 the Coast Survey completed additional surveys to ascertain the extent of the continued shoals on the flats.

To form a comparison with the survey of 1855 a line was drawn from Robbins' Reef Light-House to Bedloe's Island flag-staff, and thence slightly deflected through Ellis Island flag-staff to the New Jersey Central Railroad wharf.

From these datum lines normals were laid off, and by the latter the changes in the 6, 12, 18 and 24 foot curves were noted. It was observed that all the curves had been pushed outwards or eastward, but most conspicuously the 24-foot curve near Ellis Island, which had moved on the average 303 feet, the maximum advance being 825 feet, reducing by so much the width of the main channel for heavy ships and increasing the shoal ground by 129 acres. The 18-foot curve had advanced in the average 211 feet, representing a shoaling of 92 acres, and at Oyster Island the 12-foot curve had advanced over 1,000 feet, due to careless and injudicious dumpings there of city dredgings. It was estimated that the total deposits from 1855 to 1871 upon the border of the main channel, due to natural and artificial causes, reached the high figure of 3,000,000 cubic yards. Since 1871 dumpings of city dredgings upon the Jersey Flats have been prohibited by the Pilot Commissioners, and in consequence the shoalings arising from deposits due to natural causes have been so slight as to be almost inappreciable, except on the outer edge of the flats. Later examinations, including the one to which this report refers, show that the flats, being under the lee of the long wharves at Jersey City, and sheltered from the currents which bring down deposits from the upper river, are not subject to further material shoalings, and that the present average and almost uniform depth of 6 feet over the general surface at low stage will be probably maintained indefinitely.

As the many railroads which concentrate at Jersey City now occupy all the best deep-water front in that city for their ferry slips, and for their own storehouses, elevators, and shipping wharves, the city feels sadly in need of a larger water-front to accommodate the commerce which naturally seeks that side of the harbor, and which now goes elsewhere to overcrowd the wharves in New York City and Brooklyn. To get a relief from this state of things it has been proposed to extend on the south side of Jersey City the exterior line of piers farther across the flats towards deep water, so that the property holders on the west shore line may render their water-fronts available for shipping purposes, and increase, by these improvements, the storage and shipping business of the harbor. The movement was commenced in 1864 by the Riparian Commissioners of the State of New Jersey establishing the exterior line of solid filling shown on the chart, 500 feet beyond which was placed the exterior line of piers. These lines follow generally the curvature of the shore. The promoters of the present examination now desire that the government shall excavate a channel 300 feet wide, bottom measurement, and 21 feet deep at low-water, from the wharves of the Central Railroad of New Jersey in a straight line to the deep waters of Kill van Kull, the axis of the channel so excavated to be 670 feet to the eastward of the established exterior line of piers. Should the government undertake the opening of the communicating channel, the Riparian Commissioners agree to extend the exterior line for piers 500 feet beyond the line now adopted, which will then make the prospective piers and their intervening slips accessible to the deep-water channel, and open a shorter and more sheltered interior channel from the docks in Jersey and New York cities to those on Kill van Kull. Already have some of the property holders on the west shore commenced the excavation of channels across the flats to connect their wharves or slips near the present shore lines with the main channel of the bay. Two are shown upon the map; the first, that of Messrs. Morris & Cumings, starts near Pamrepa, and strikes the 12-foot curve midway between Robbins' Reef Light and Oyster Island. It is 8,400 feet long, 100 feet wide, and has 10 feet water at low stage. The second, in process of excavation, extends from Made Island to deep water, midway between Oyster Island and Bedloe's Island, part of it being excavated through the rocky area shown on the chart. It is probable that other channels, with the same object of utilizing the western shore, will be opened at an early day, but their limited width and depth must restrict their use at high-water to vessels drawing not exceeding 15 feet of water, and they will therefore not be able to afford all the relief that is desired.

The estimate which accompanies this report shows that the opening of the government channel, now so earnestly advocated by the property holders on Bergen Neck, will be a work of great magnitude, and will cost the large sum of $7,134,980. This estimate has been carefully revised, and is approximately correct. Although it is stated that the channel across the flats, opened at the expense of private individuals, has not shoaled since its excavation, it is not at all certain that the government channel once opened will be self-sustaining. The ebb and flood currents set directly across its projected axis, and it is to be expected that a slight degradation of the slopes of the cut in sand and silt will take place, and that a large percentage of the moveable material of the bottom adjacent to the improvement will gradually find its way into the deeper part. For this reason it is almost certain that dredging will be required at intervals to keep the channel free after it has been once opened. The projected channel will surely be of great benefit to any wharves which may be built out to it from the west shore, but it cannot be considered at all a complete, nor even an approximate, solution of the problem which is presented when the future application of the flats is considered. The time will come when this section will be examined with the view to its conversion into wet-basins, and if we heed the rapid growth of the city's commerce and wealth during the past twenty years, we may be impressed with the conviction that this conversion will not be long deferred.

The rapid development and increase of the commercial wealth of London, Liverpool, and other important seaports of the Old World following the establishment of wet-docks to facilitate trade and commerce, furnish prominent examples of what our own largest seaport may develop into when the shipping necessities of the harbor are once appreciated and suitable sums are devoted to the construction of improvements which will extend the field of its commercial greatness by giving not only piers for handling produce entering into immediate consumption, but by giving facilities for housing that designed for exportation.

It is inopportune now to consider the conditions under which this conversion should take place, or to divide by exact lines the water spaces to be reserved; but any adopted plan should be based upon the principle of preserving, as far as possible, the tidal reservoir of the flats which equals 30,000,000 cubic yards approximately. Neglecting at this time, then, all reference to an improvement which contemplates the construction of wet-docks, it will be stated that the immediate effect of opening a channel 300 feet wide from the north to the south end of the flats will be, first, to diminish in a moderate degree the sailing distance between the New York City wharves and the waters of Kill van Kull, and to give a better protected interior channel for the shipping between those points; and, second, to diminish in the average by 3,700 feet the length of piers, or piers and channels, connecting the west shore line with the deep-water channel to enable that portion of the water front to be utilized to an equal extent with other parts of the bay. As the flats are quite shoal, well sheltered from river currents, and have their eastern edge precipitous and bold, it is believed that the building of piers and docks across them will not disadvantageously effect the present currents of the main channel and that these improvements may be made without conflicting with any interest involving the security and preservation of the navigation of the Upper Bay or of any of its approaches.

Jersey Flats are in the collection districts of New York and Newark, N. J., which are the nearest ports of entry. The nearest fort is at the Narrows, and the nearest light-house on Robbins' Reef, Upper Bay, New York Harbor.

The amount of revenue collected at the port of New York, for the year ending June 30, 1881; was $139,579,562.83.

The amount collected for the same period at Newark, N. J., was $9,327.06.

Number of vessels permanently documented at Newark for the coasting trade is 28 sail and 30 steamers, with an aggregate tonnage of 5,402 tons. Vessels entered from foreign ports, 49; vessels cleared for foreign ports, 10.

The proportion of commerce represented by the foregoing figures which will be benefited by the improvement cannot be given approximately. It has been estimated as high as $10,000,000 annually.

I am, general, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

G. L. GILLESPIE,
Major of Engineers, Bvt. Lieut. Col., U. S. A.

Brig. Gen. H. G. WRIGHT,
Chief of Engineers, U. S. A.

REPORT OF MR. A. DOERFLINGER, ASSISTANT ENGINEER.

NEW YORK, December, 12, 1881.

MAJOR: I have respectfully to submit the following report on the examination of New Jersey Flats, made with the view of determining the feasibility and cost of constructing a ship-canal extending "from a point between Ellis Island and the docks of the Central Railroad of New Jersey to a point between Constable Hook and Robbins' Reef Light, New York Harbor."

The field work of the survey was executed between July 10 and August 23, 1881, under instructions from the late Lieut. Col. N. Michler, Corps of Engineers, Brevet Brigadier-General, United States Army, and was confined principally to make borings in order to determine the character and extent of a ledge of rock underlying the flats off Craven's Point.

The soundings on the chart submitted herewith are taken principally from a United States Coast Survey chart, based on resurveys made in 1871, 1872, and 1873. In connection with the borings, however, soundings were also taken in the present examination, and compared with those of the United States Coast Survey; no material difference was found to exist between the present soundings and those of 1871, 1872, and 1873, from which it appears that no marked change in the depth of water over the portion of the flats examined has taken place since the date of the earlier survey.

The total number of borings made is 328, of which only those most characteristic are shown on the map; they were made with a well-pointed iron rod, which could be lengthened at will by the addition of 10-foot sections. This rod was churned down from a platform framed across two row-boats by the united efforts of two men, until rock or other impenetrable strata was reached; the rod was withdrawn by means of a simple windlass arranged for the purpose on the platform. The position of each boring was located by sextant observations. From this investigation it was found that the material composing the upper stratum of the flats is principally mud, soft on top, becoming more or less stiff and harder with depth. A ledge of rock was found to extend out from Craven's Point to the main ship-channel. The higher portions of this ledge come to the surface at several points on a line drawn from Craven's Point to the southerly end of Oyster Island, which latter is one of the summits of the ledge. Outcropings of the rock, which consists of gneiss nearly vertically stratified, the strata running in a northeasterly direction, are also found on the mainland at Craven's Point. Sand, shells, and gravel, and mixtures of the latter, from the more immediate covering of the rock, accumulations of bowlders of various sizes, some of which are dry at low-water, were found at the points where the rock comes to the surface. Immediately north of the ledge, for a distance of about 2,000 feet, soft mud was found to a depth of 22 to 23 feet below low-water; from this point to the docks of the Central Railroad hard sand was found a short distance below the surface. To the south of the ledge mud was generally found to a depth of 18 to 21 feet, below which, in most instances, sand and clay was reached. To determine the velocity and direction of the tidal drift, current observations were made off Craven's Point, and also between Ellis Island and the docks of the Central Railroad. The observations at each station were continued during the greater part of one tide. On the chart the direction and velocity of maximum current only is indicated.

During the period covered by the observations, about 4 hours on each tide, but little change in the direction of the current was observed, with the exception of the flood current at the last-mentioned station, the direction of which during maximum velocity was found to bear 10° further north than during the first and last stages of the tide.

Between Ellis Island and the docks of the Central Railroad maximum ebb current occurs about 4 hours after the preceding high-water, and maximum flood about 4 hours after the preceding low-water.

Off Craven's Point maximum flood current happens about 4 hours after preceding low-water, and maximum ebb 3 hours after preceding high-water.

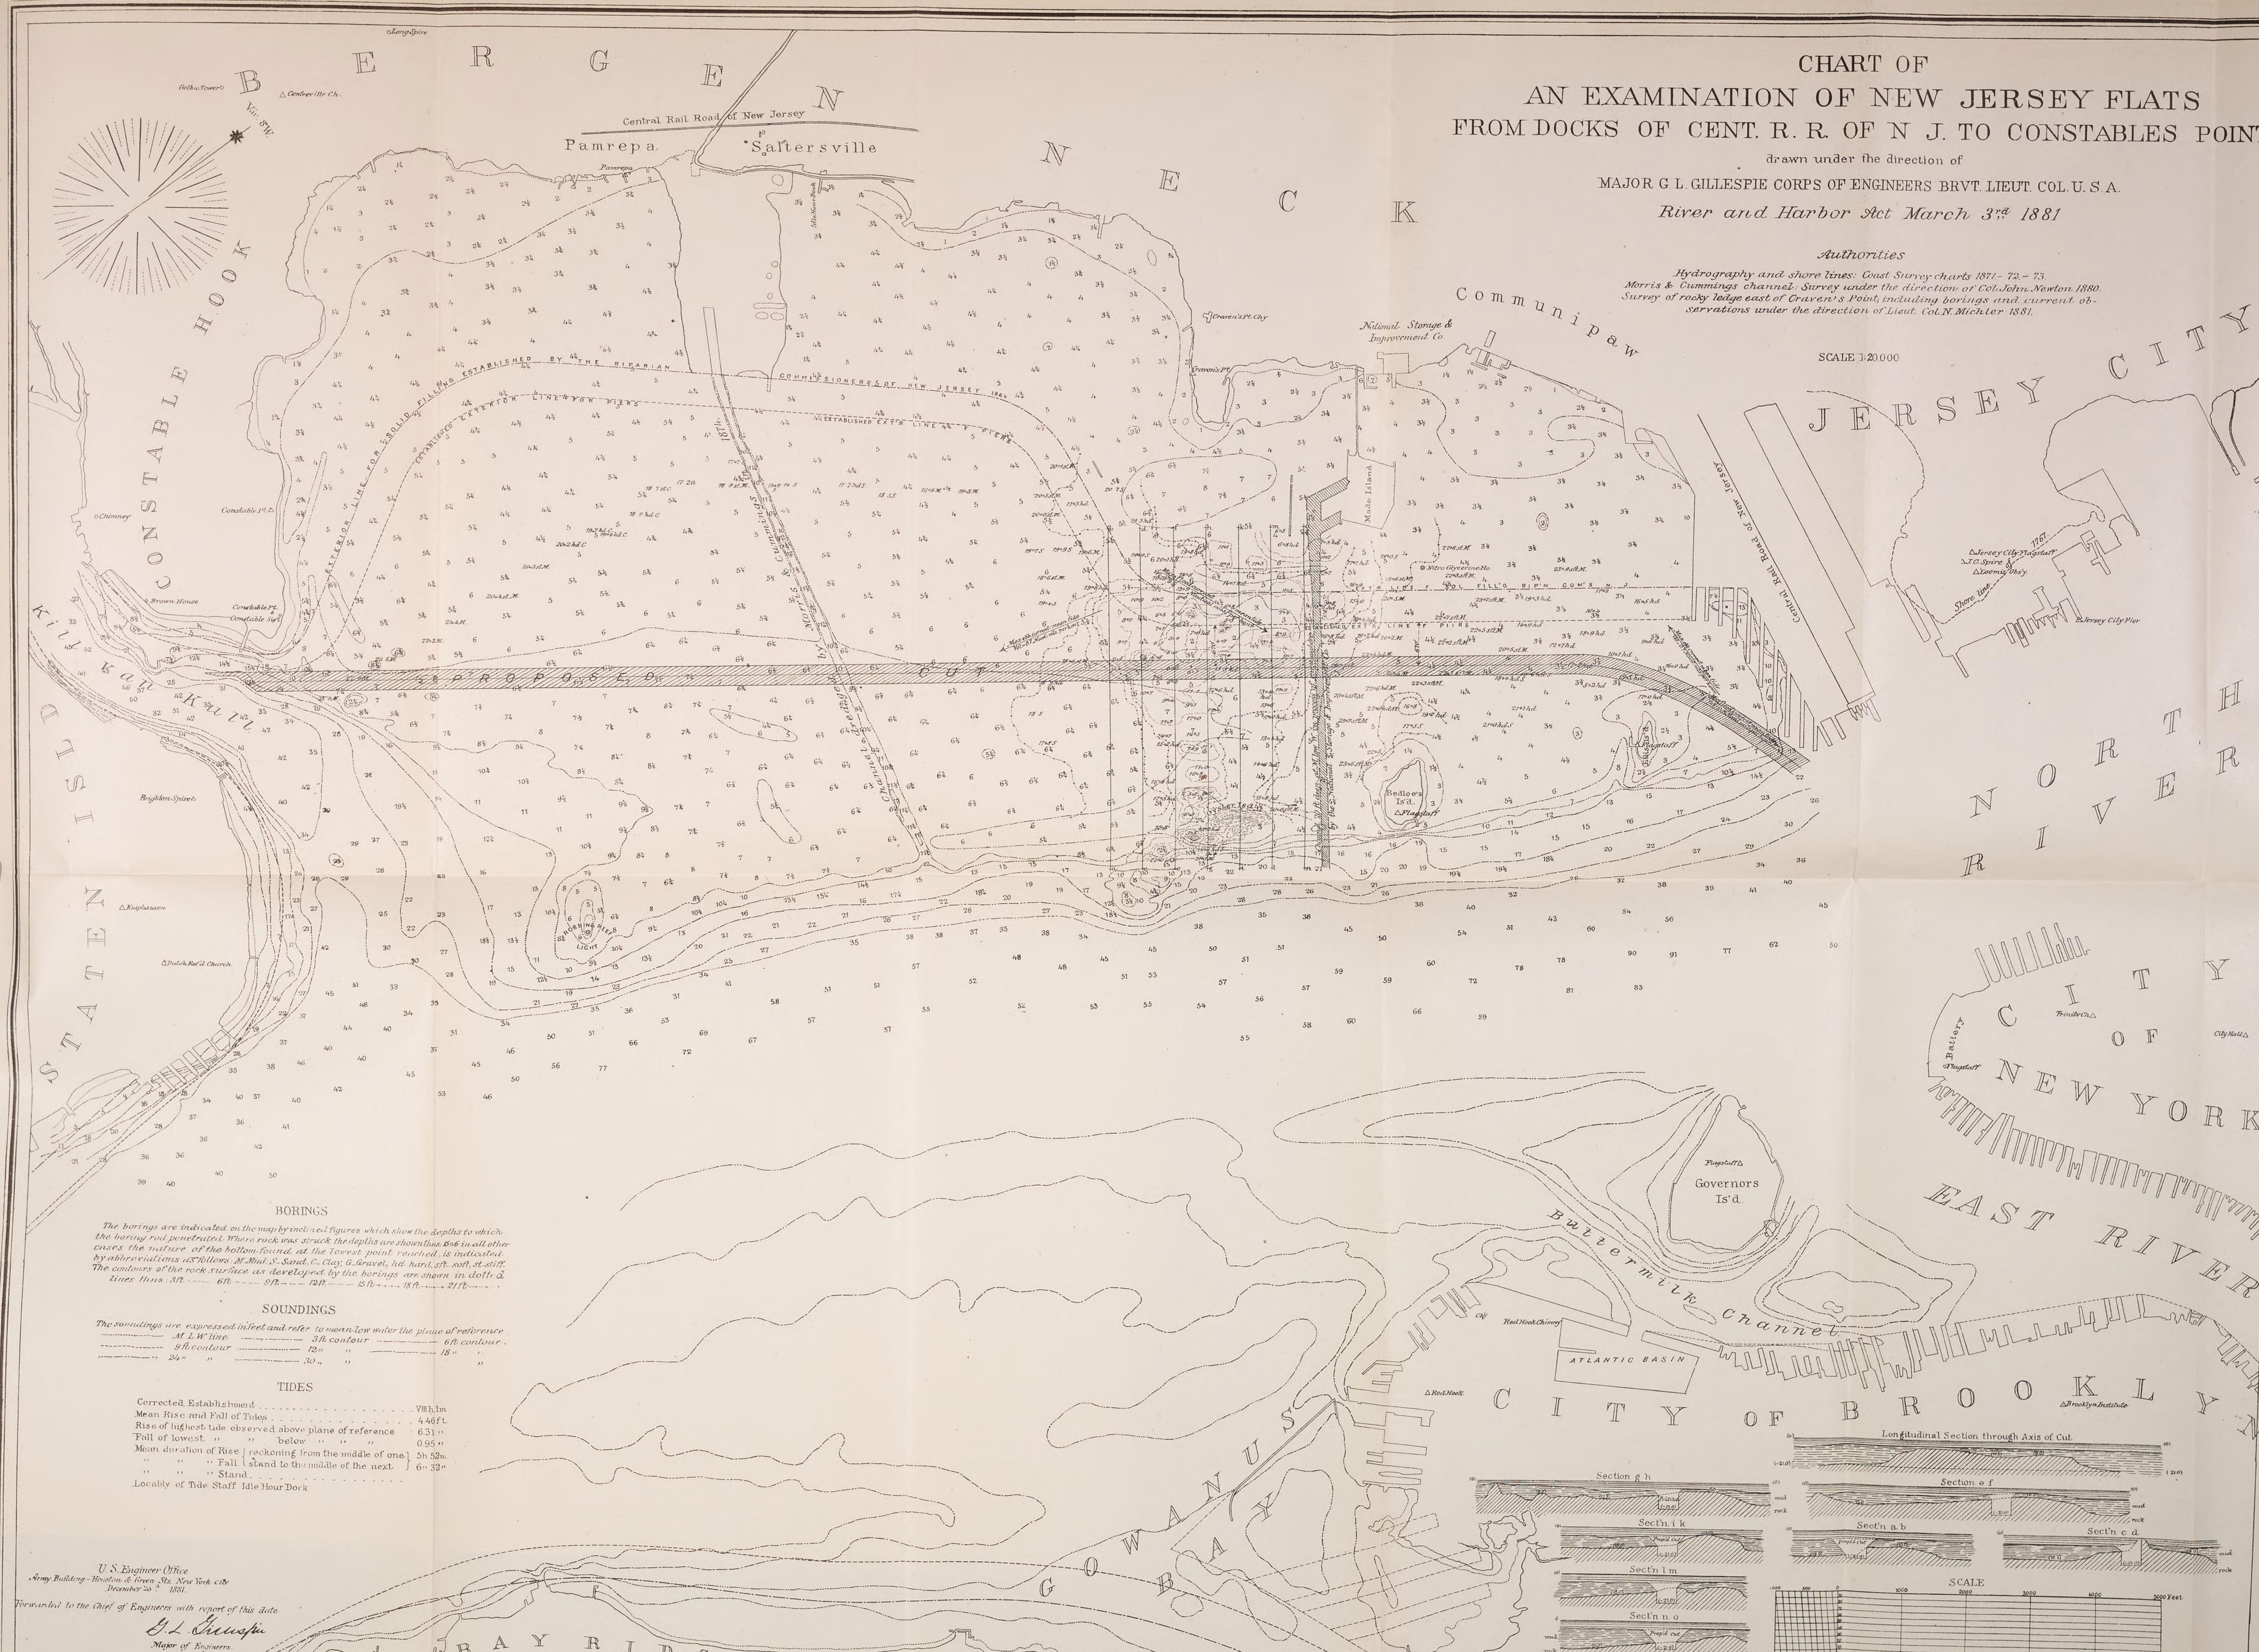
From observations on the currents in the Hudson River, between Bedloe's Island and Castle Point, made under the direction of Col. John Newton, Corps of Engineers, in 1874, it was found that "the occurrence of maximum discharge of the river takes place about 14 hours 19 minutes after moon's transit"; and also that "the swiftest flood currents happen about 8 hours 22 minutes after moon's southing". (Report of the Chief of Engineers, 1875, page 217, part 2.)

At the "Idle Hour" dock the mean interval of high-water after preceding moon's transit is 8 hours 1 minute, and mean duration of fall of tide 6 hours 32 minutes; from which it appears that maximum ebb in the Hudson River happens 6 hours 18 minutes after high-water, or about 2 hours 18 minutes after the occurrence of maximum ebb on the flats near Ellis Island, and 3 hours 18 minutes later than off Craven's Point; and likewise that maximum flood in the Hudson River occurs about 2 hours 28 minutes later than at both current stations on the flats.

To obtain access to the deep water of New York Harbor it is the desire of the owners of the lands bordering on the flats, and of others interested in the utilization of the flats for the purposes of trade and commerce, that a ship-channel be constructed about 500 feet outside of the pier line as at present established from the docks of the Central Railroad to Craven's Point, the channel to continue in a straight line to the deep water of Kill van Kull. The Riparian Commissioners of the State of New Jersey propose, should the construction of the channel be undertaken by the United States Government, to establish a new pier line to coincide with the westerly limits of this channel so that the future pier heads will thus be accessible from the navigable waters of the bay. In addition to affording a means of deep-water communication between future piers that may be built on the flats and the navigable waters of the harbor, the channel would somewhat shorten the distance from points on the Hudson River to points on Kill van Kull, and would afford a more sheltered water-way to the numerous tows now plying between these points, and one more free from strong head currents than the main ship-channel.

The proposed channel is shown on the chart. The depth of the projected cut has been assumed at 21 feet at mean low-water, with a bottom width of 300 feet, and slopes of 1 upon 1 in earth, the sides of the cut through rock to be nearly vertical. The quantity of excavation has been calculated from the soundings and borings. The rock cutting should be regarded as approximate only, since a more detailed survey than it was possible to make with the funds available for the present examination would be necessary to determine this amount with a greater degree of accuracy. It will be seen by an inspection of the chart that both the ebb and flood currents do not run in the direction of the proposed cut, but make an angle of about 22 degrees with the same. It is probable, however, that the effect of the channel, should the same be excavated, would be to somewhat modify the present currents on the flats, so that on the completion of the work the direction of the tidal drift would become more nearly coincident with that of the channel, and the currents, by their scouring action, tend to keep the channel open; especially would this result be likely to follow should piers be built from the main land out to the line of the channel. Still, in all probability, more or less silting up would take place by the washing in of the banks of the cut, at least in those portions where the cutting is through soft mud, as is the case directly north of the ledge of rock, so that redredging would likely become necessary from time to time in order to maintain a depth of 21 feet in the channel.

The estimated cost of the proposed channel is herewith respectfully submitted. The cost of $12 per cubic yard for rock excavation is based on the supposition that the work will be done in the ordinary way of drilling from the surface, breaking the rock up by blasting, and removing the fragments by means of a dredge. It is believed, however, that should appropriations be made sufficiently large to warrant the adoption of a comprehensive plan of operations the greater portion of the rock could be removed at a much less cost by inclosing the area to be operated on with a coffer-dam, and carrying on the excavation in open cut.



ESTIMATE OF COST.

458,333 cubic yards rock excavation, at $12 per yard	$5,499,996
3,945,400 cubic yards dredging, at 25 cents per yard	986,350
Engineering, contingencies, &c	648,634
Total	7,134,980

I am, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

A. DOERFLINGER,
Assistant Engineer,

Maj. G. L. GILLESPIE,
Corps of Engineers, Bvt. Lieut. Col., U. S. A.

CHART OF
AN EXAMINATION OF NEW JERSEY FLATS
FROM DOCKS OF CENT. R. R. OF N. J. TO CONSTABLES POINT drawn under the direction of MAJOR G. L. GILLESPIE CORPS OF ENGINEERS BRVT. LIEUT. COL. U. S. A.
River and Harbor Act March 3rd 1881
Authorities
Hydrography and shore lines: Coast Survey charts 1871.- 72.- 73.
Morris & Cummings channel: Survey under the direction of Col. John Newton 1880.
Survey of rocky ledge east of Craven's Point, including borings and current observations under the direction of Lieut. Col. N. Michler 1881.
SCALE 1:20.000
BERGEN NECK
CONSTABLE HOOK
STATEN ISLD
Kill van Kull
Communipaw JERSEY CITY
NORTH RIVER
CITY OF NEW YORK
EAST RIVER
CITY OF BROOKLYN
Buttermilk Channel
Governors Is'd.
Bedloe's Is'd.
Ellis Is'd.
Oyster Is'd.
ROBBINS REEF LIGHT
ATLANTIC BASIN
GOWANUS BAY
BAY RIDGE
Pamrepa
Saltersville
Central Rail Road of New Jersey
Made Island
National Storage & Improvement Co.
PROPOSED CUT
BORINGS
The borings are indicated on the map by inclined figures which show the depths to which the boring rod penetrated. Where rock was struck the depths are shown thus: 15○6 in all other cases the nature of the bottom found at the lowest point reached, is indicated by abbreviations as follows: M. Mud, S. Sand, C. Clay, G. Gravel, hd. hard, sft. soft, st. stiff. The contours of the rock surface as developed by the borings are shown in dotted lines thus: 3ft. 6ft. 9ft. 12ft. 15ft. 18ft. 21ft.
SOUNDINGS
The soundings are expressed in feet and refer to mean low water the plane of reference
M. L. W. line 3ft. contour 6ft. contour 9ft. contour 12" " 18" " 24" " 30" "
TIDES
Corrected Establishment . . . VIII h. 1m.
Mean Rise and Fall of Tides . . . 4.46 ft.
Rise of highest tide observed above plane of reference 6.31"
Fall of lowest " " below " " " 0.95"
Mean duration of Rise / Fall (reckoning from the middle of one stand to the middle of the next) 5h 52m. / 6" 32"
" " " Stand . . .
Locality of Tide Staff Idle Hour Dock
Longitudinal Section through Axis of Cut
Section g h
Section e f
Sect'n i k
Sect'n a b
Sect'n c d
Sect'n l m
Sect'n n o
Horizontal Scale of Sections 20000
Vertical " " " 1:1000
SCALE
U. S. Engineer Office
Army Building - Houston & Green Sts. New York city
December 20th 1881.
Forwarded to the Chief of Engineers with report of this date
G. L. Gillespie
Major of Engineers.
Bvt. Lieut. Col. U.S.A.

47TH CONGRESS, 1st Session. } SENATE. { Ex. DOC. No. 81.

LETTER

FROM THE

SECRETARY OF THE INTERIOR,

TRANSMITTING,

In compliance with law, the report and opinion of the U. S. surveyor-general of the Territory of Arizona, on private land claim No. 13, known as "Rancho de Otero and House Lot."

JANUARY 30, 1882.—Referred to the Committee on Private Land Claims and ordered to be printed.

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR,
Washington, ——— —, 18—.

SIR: Pursuant to section 8 of the act of July 22, 1854 (10 Stat., 308), as extended by the sundry civil act of July 15, 1870 (16 Stat., 304), I have the honor to transmit herewith the report and opinion of the United States surveyor-general of the Territory of Arizona, on private land claim No. 13, known as "Rancho de Otero and House Lot," heirs of Torrevio de Otero, claimants; also a duly authenticated transcript of the title, papers, and testimony in the case, a plat of preliminary survey of the claim, and the report of the Commissioner of the General Land Office as to the validity of the claim, &c.

Very respectfully,

S. J. KIRKWOOD,
Secretary.

The PRESIDENT OF THE SENATE pro tempore.

[Extract.]

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR, GENERAL LAND OFFICE,
Washington, D. C., January 19, 1882.

SIR: * * * I cannot add anything to what has already been stated in said report concerning the proposed confirmation of said grant, but would suggest, as a general proposition, that in my judgment it would be advisable for Congress, in any acts that may be passed confirming private claims, to omit in such legislation any provision adopting and approving the preliminary surveys thereof, and thus leave all questions affecting the proper location of the boundaries of such claims to this office and the department, as was done in cases of claims confirmed by Congress, where preliminary surveys had not been made.

These surveys form no part of the proceedings had by the surveyor-general of New Mexico under the eighth section of the act of July 22, 1854, which relate to the adjudication of questions of title, but were authorized, out of the appropriation made by the act of March 3, 1877 (19 Stats., p. 348), for the survey of private land claims, and since then Congress has made specific appropriations for them.

They were intended merely for the information of Congress, and have not undergone such examination as to their correctness as would be given to the survey of a confirmed claim before issuing a patent, and some are objected to, and some are evidently incorrect as to the boundaries adopted, and quantity of land included, and the taking of testimony may be necessary to determine correctly the several locations.

* * * * * * *

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

N. C. McFARLAND,
Commissioner.

Hon. S. J. KIRKWOOD,
Secretary of the Interior.

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR, GENERAL LAND OFFICE,
Washington, D. C., January 23, 1882.

SIR: Referring to your letter of the 17th instant returning the papers in certain private land claims in the Territories of New Mexico and Arizona for examination, I have the honor to submit the following in the case of the Rancho de Otero and House Lot.

The papers in this case relate to proceedings had before the surveyor-general of Arizona under the act of July 15, 1870 (16 Stat., p. 304), for the confirmation of said grant, and consist of copies, duly authenticated, of:

1. Petition, in grant to Otero, 1789.
2. Original title same.
3. Translation of same.
4. Petition, in grant to Martinez, 1838.
5. Original title to same.
6. Translation of same.
7. Deed, Martinez to Otero.
8. Testimony.
9. Opinion of Surveyor-General.

I have carefully examined these papers. The translations are substantially correct. In the deed (No. 7) from Martinez to Otero, dated June 29, 1880, I find that the description of the land conveyed does not agree with the description of the same in the original grant of November 12, 1838. In the grant the cords are described as being of 25 varas, while in the deed they are said to contain 50 varas. This, however, is evidently a mere clerical error and has nothing to do with the validity of the grant.

The surveyor-general has made a clear and lucid statement of this case in his report, and I can only add that I see no reason to doubt the validity of the claim.

With regard to the preliminary survey of this claim made by the said surveyor-general, I respectfully refer to my letter to you of the 18th instant in relation to the claim known as Cañon de Chama, in New Mexico, as my expression of opinion in that matter applies equally to the case in point. (See extract inclosed.)

The papers and plat of survey in the case are herewith returned.

I have the honor to be, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

N. A. McFARLAND,
Commissioner.

Hon. S. J. KIRKWOOD,
Secretary of the Interior.

PRIVATE LAND CLAIMS OF RANCHO DE OTERO AND HOUSE LOT, ARIZONA.

DOCKET NO. 13.

(Date of Report, March 1, 1881.)

Transcript of proceedings before the United States surveyor-general for Arizona, in case of Rancho de Otero, claimed by heirs of Torrevio de Otero.

LIST OF PAPERS.

Petition, grant to Otero, 1789.
Original title grant, 1789.
Translation.
Petition, grant to Martinez, 1838.
Original title grant, 1838.

Translation.
Deed, Martinez to Otero.
Testimony in case.
Opinion of surveyor-general.

PETITION.

Before John Wasson, United States surveyor-general of Arizona.

In the matter of the application of Sabino Otero and others for confirmation of Spanish grant near Tubac.

Now come Sabino Otero, Fernando Otero, Teofilo Otero, Gabriela Otero, Elena Castro, and Anna M. Cannen, by their attorneys Lindley and Corella, and show in this petition:

I. That in 1798, Nicolas Erran, commander of the presidio of Tubac, then under the jurisdiction of the king of Spain, and being duly empowered by said king and by the sovereignty of Spain, granted as such commander, to Torivio de Otero, a tract of land situated in the jurisdiction of said Presidio and near what is now known as the town of Tubac in said Territory, as will more fully appear by a true copy of said grant correctly translated into English and which is made part of this petition annexed hereto and marked Exhibit A. A true copy in Spanish is also made a part of this petition and annexed hereto and marked Exhibit B.

II. That said grant was duly recorded in the archives of said presidio, but the said archives were many years ago destroyed, or lost, during the Indian incursions, when the presidio and surrounding country were laid waste.

III. That the petitioners are the lineal descendants of the said Torivio Otero, through Atanacio Otero, the son of Torivio Otero, and Manuel Otero, the son of Atanancio Otero, and father of Sabino, Fernando, Teofila, Gabriela Otero, and Elena Castro, and the grandfather of Anna M. Cannan, and they are the only legal heirs and representatives and heirs at law of said Torivio, and they are the exclusive legal owners of said land. Torivio, Atanacio, and Manuel (ancestors) are deceased.

IV. That the land contained in and claimed under said grant, and the possession given thereunder, consists of about four hundred acres, more or less, and is the same that is now and for a great period has been marked, inclosed, and known as "Otero's Ranch," which includes the old ditch and ruins of the house built by said Torivio, and known as "Casa de Alto," and referred to in the grant. The land lies on both sides of the Santa Cruz, about one mile north of the center of the town of Tubac. The possession of said lands by Torivio and his heirs has been uninterrupted from the date of said grant till the present time, except at short intervals when the hostile Indians overran and laid waste the country, and drove the inhabitants from their lands and houses.

V. That the said Torivio was placed in possession of said tract of land by the said commander at the time of making said grant, and that he and his heirs and descendants have always occupied and cultivated said land, and your petitioners now occupy and cultivate the same. The extent of the possession given to said Torivio, and continued through the generation to your petitioners, is the same as now marked by the inclosure.

VI. That said Torivio occupied said lands for about fifty years, and fully performed all the conditions and requirements contained in said grant, wherefore your petitioners pray that said grant may be confirmed in equal parts to your petitioners as equal heirs, or to the legal heirs and representatives of Torivio Otero, the original grantee.

LINDLEY & CORELLA,
Attorneys for the Petitioners.

Filed December, 1879.

JOHN WASSON,
United States Surveyor-General.

ORIGINAL TITLE.

Dos reales. Sello tercero, dos reales, años de mil setecientos nonenta y ocho, y nonenta y nueve.

[L. S.] Dn. Nicolas de la Erran, The. Comte. de la Compa. de Pimas de Tubac.

Por cuanto, hauendo seme presentado el becino Torrivio de Otero, solar, y tierra para abicindarse en este presidio, y travajar en su aficio de labrador; atendiendo á la vtilidad qe. resulta con la radicacion de vecinos lavorios, como el suplicante qe. cultinen sus tierras, y lo abastescan de ganados, que en diferentes estancias, ha sido preciso solicitar los á largas distancias. Por tanto, vsando de la facultad, que El Rey me tieno concedido, merceno al espresado Torrivio de Otero, y le endono como primer poblador, perpetuamente, para siempre jaras, y por juro de heridad, para si; sus higos, y decendientes, un solar para fabricar su casa, en el lado de habajo de este presidio, á la parte del sur, con el frente al norte, de 20 vs. de canesera, y la labor, como medio cuarto de legua distante del presidio, por solo de ay, pender la poca aqua qe. ba en el rio, y aberecho de por si, la toma de agua, y le merceno igualmente, á nombre de S. M. (Q. D. G.) quatro suertes de tierra, que se comensaron de medir, por la parte del sur, al norte y de oriente á poniente, quatro cientsas varas; cuyo espacio, en circunferencia consiste en 3 mil y cuatro cientas varas, bien entendido qe. el espresado Torrivio de Otero, ha de mantener armas, y cauallos, y estar pronto á defender el pais de los enemigos qe. le ostilisan, y á salir contra ellos, siempre qe. se le mando, que en el espacio de 4 años contando desde esta fha. no prede bender; enagenar; hipotecer, ni ynponer gravamen alguno sobre dho. solar, y tierra avuque sea con motibo piadoso; que en el termino presiso de dos años, á de tener echa su casa, y familia en este presidio, por el termino de quatro años para adquirer verdedero, dominio y propiedad de las tierras; solaras y edificios, que hubien labido en el y que pasado este tiempo tendrá facultad, para poder henderlas, enagenerlas, y hacer de ellas á su boluntad libremente, como de cosa propia; pero, con la condicion, de que, nunca podra venderlas á Yqa.; monasterio; persona eclesiastica; comunidra, ó manos muertas, vajo la misma pena indicada arriba y enterado de todo, y de plantar arboles frutales ú otros, que sean vtiles, slué al espresado Torribio de Otero de la mano al citado solar y tierra, en donde le di posesion vsando de las formalidades acostumtrados, de desboser tirar piedra y arrancar beno, ó racate, y pa. su constancia, le doy la presente de que queda copia en el protocolo del archivo de este presidio, que firmé con testigos de assa. á los diez dia del mes de enero, de mil setecentos ochenta y nueve.

NICOLAS DE ERRAN.

RAMON GUATE. DE ERIENS
Assa.

YGO. BORGH.,
Assa.

[Translation.]

[SEAL.] Third seal, twenty-five cents. Years one thousand seven hundred and ninety-eight and ninety-nine.

{1802 SEAL 1803} Don Nicolas de la Erran, Lieut. Commandant of the Company of Pimas of Tubac.

{1806 SEAL 1807} Whereas, the resident, Torrivio de Otero, has presented himself to me, petitioning for a house lot (solar) on which to establish himself in this presidio, for the purpose of pursuing his calling as an agriculturist, and in consideration of the utility resulting from the establishment of industrious settlers, such as the pettiioner, who will cultivate the soil, thereby furnishing a supply of grain which, in some seasons, has to be brought a long distance, I, therefore, in the exercise of the faculties conferred on me by the king, grant to the said Torrivio de Otero, and donate to him, as a first settler, perpetually, forever, and with right of inheritance to him and his children and descendants, a lot on which to build his house, on the lower side of this presidio, in the direction of the south, with a front to the north of twenty varas; and a tract of land for cultivation, distant from the presidio about one-eighth of a league, since only at that point is found the little water that runs in the river, and he having made there his irrigating ditch; I grant him also, in the name of the king (whom God preserve), four "suertes" (farming lots) of land, the measurement of the same to be made from south to north, and from east to west four hundred varas, which tract is embraced in a circumference of three thousand, four hundred varas; it being well understood that the said Torivio de Otero is required to keep arms and horses, and to be ever ready to defend the country against the enemies thereof, when he is called upon so to do; it being also understood that until the term of four years shall have passed, counting from the present date, the grantee cannot sell, alienate, or mortgage the said land, nor can he impose any incumbrance on the said house, lot, or tract of land, although it should be for pious purposes; that within the precise time of two years he shall have built his house, and that he shall have resided with his family in this presidio, for the term of four years, before he can acquire the full dominion of property in the lands and solar (house lot), and the improvements he may have made thereon; and that when this time shall have passed, he shall have power to sell or alienate said lands and house lot, and to make such use thereof as he may see fit, as of a thing belonging to himself, under the condition that he shall never be permitted to sell the same to the church, or to any monastery, ecclesiastical person or community, nor convey them in mortmain, under the penalty above mentioned, the grantee being also required to plant upon said land fruit trees, or other kinds that may be of some utility. And the said Torrivio de Otero being informed of the foregoing, I took him by the hand and gave him possession of said lands, he, according to custom, scattering earth and stone sand, pulling up herbage.

In testimony of which I give him the present document, which remains, copied, in the protocol of the archives of this presidio, signing the same, with the assisting witnesses, on the tenth day of the month of January, 1789.

NICOLAS DE LA ERRAN.

RAMERO GARA.,
Assistant.
IGO BORGR.,
Assistant.

PETITION, GRANT TO MARTINEZ, 1838.

Before John Wasson, United States surveyor-general for Arizona.

In the matter of the petition of Sabino Otero and others, for the confirmation of a pueblo land grant in the town of Tubac.

Now come Sabino Otero, Fernando Otero, Gabriela Otero, Elena Castro, and Anna M. Cannen, by their attorneys, Lindley & Corella, and show in this petition:

I. That in the year 1838, the town of Tubac, situated in Arizona, was a pueblo under the laws of Mexico, and it continued to exist as an important frontier town at the time possession was taken of New Mexico by the United States, and was in that condition at the date of the act of July 22, 1854.

II. That said pueblo by the laws of Mexico and from the fact of being a pueblo, became vested with nine square leagues of land in which was included the town, and which was held by said pueblo for distribution to the inhabitants thereof.

III. That in the said year of 1838 the said pueblo granted, through its proper officers, a tract of pueblo lands to José M. Martinez, then an inhabitant and head of a famiiy in said pueblo, as more fully appears by the original grant which is presented and filed herewith, as proof and reference in this case.

IV. That a proper petition was made and presented by said Martinez to the proper officers of said pueblo, showing all facts necessary to give such officers jurisdiction to make said grant, and in all things and proceedings touching the making of said grant, the said officers acted regularly and legally and by and within the powers and jurisdiction conferred upon them by law, as will more fully appear by the proceedings recited in said grant.

V. The land included in and claimed under the grant is situated in the then pueblo, now town of Tubac, and is the same that is now occupied by Otero's store. The tract is rectangular, 700 varas long, from north to south, and 175 varas wide, from east to west, and is more fully described in the grant presented herewith. Possession of said tract was duly given and measured to said Martinez by the proper officers of said pueblo. A copy of said grant and a translation thereof are annexed, and marked Exhibits A & B.

VI. That on the 2d day of March, 1859, the said Martinez sold and conveyed said tract of land by written conveyance to Manuel Otero, the father of said Sabino.

VII. That your petitioners being the heirs at law of said Manuel, who died intestate, are now the exclusive owners, by inheritance, of said tract of land.

VIII. That the said Martinez, and after him the said Manuel Otero, now deceased, have been in continuous possession of said tract from the date of the grant to the present time.

Whereupon the petitioners pray that the said grant be confirmed to them in equal parts, or to the legal representatives of Manuel Otero, deceased.

LINDLEY & CORELLA,
Attorneys for Petitioners.

Filed December 1, 1879.

JOHN WASSON,
United States Surveyor-General.

ORIGINAL TITLE GRANT.

PRESIDIO DE TUBAC, AÑO DE 1838.

Testimonio de diligencias practicadas de mensura de tierras de pan llevar á favor del ciudadano José Ma. Martinez desta banda del rio camino real, nombrado las Galeras, por el juez de paz, Dn. Trinidad Yrigoyen..

Sor. Juez de Paz, D. TRINIDAD YRIGOYEN:

José Ma. Martinez, vecino de este presidio, ante V. con la mayor forma de derecho, paresco y digo: que habiendo mercado una suerte de tierra de pan llevar al Co. Trinidad Yrigoyen cuya tierra se me entregó sin ninguna constancia de medidas, por que este Sor. Carcalla de ellas por no haberseles dado el Sor. Comte. D. José Ma. Villavacencia, quien fué él que permitió abitarles, por donde este hasta el dia se balla situado de mercea, y que siendo que en mi poder existan documentos, que acaditan que es mia, suplico á V. se serva, si lo tiene á bien, tome nuebas medidas, como tambien esten derme las pruebas de ella, para su seguridad.

Por tanto suplico á V. aministre la justicia, que V. ante cede, si lo hallase de justicia admitiendome mi solicitad en este pepal pr. la ynopia del ge. corresponde, pagando su ymporte. Juro no ser de malicia de que doy feé.

JOSÉ MA. MARTINEZ.

Por presentado y admitido, procedase por mi, yo el juez de paz de este presidio, y conforme á la solicitud del vecino ciudadano José Ma. Martinez, nombré pa. oficiales medidores acompaniendo estos el interesado y testigos de asistencia, con las colindantes pasa la mensura de dhas. medidas el juez de este puesto militar, ciudadano Trinidad Yrigoyen, asi lo determino, mandó y formó.

TRINIDAD YRIGOYEN.

Nombramiento de officiales medidores.

En el sitado de Tubac, dicho dia, mes y año, siendo presentes los enunciados Pablo Contreras y Franco Usarraga, se les hizé saber abian sidos nombrados de medidores del terreno que se ba de mercenar, quienes aceptaron dho. encargo oficiendo cumplir con sus oficios fiel y legalmente, sin fraude, dolo ni encubierto y para constancia, se paso estas diligencias que firmaron con migo dichos oficiales nombrados y los testigos de mi assistencia á falta de escribano, segun derecho.

TRINIDAD YRIGOYEN.
FRANCISCO USARRAGA.
PABLO CONTRERAS.

Medidas.

En doce dias del mes de novembre de mil ochocientos treinta y ocho, yo el ciudadano Trinidad Yrigoyen, juez de paz de este presidio de Tubac, con arreglo al título 11 del Reglamento particular de presidios, estando de esta banda del rio, rumbo al poniente, camino real, al Tucson, á las inmediaciones del presidio, acompañados de los oficiales medidores, les entregó estas un cordel, bien torcido y estirada y una bara castellana, los cuales se medieron á su satisfaccion, y la del interesado José Ma. Martinez, treinte y cinco baras, y concluidas estas operaciones, amarados á las puntas del citado cordel, dos palos, se comensó las medidas de la cerca de Don Atanacio Otero, desde cuya punta, se fueron mediendo y contando, rumbo al sur, hasta veinte y ocho cordeles que remataron al pie de una mesita frente á un mesquite prieto, el cual quedó por lindero, estando concluida la medida de norte á sur, se bobrió á tender el cordel, y se midieron, de oriente á poniente, siete cordeles por cuyo veinte, esto es (por el onente)* remataron al pie de una loma en donde esta ubicada una casa, ó galera, rumbo al poniente ; por el poniente sirbe de lindero, la oria del rio, resultan que la medida sur á norte sete sientas varas, y de oriente á poniente, siento selenta y cinco varas con cuella medida á quedado conforme el interesado, quedando advertido, que estos linderos le serven por conocimiento y sujesion, y en estos terminos, se concluyeron estas medidas y firmaron con migo el interesado y los dos testigos de mi asistencia á falta de escribano, segun derecho.

TRINIDAD YRIGOYEN.
JOSÉ MA. MARTINEZ.
FRANCO. USARRAGA.
PABLO CONTERAS.

Acto pa. qe. le notifiguen al interesado los condiciones que deve preceder para adquirir dere cho al terreno medido.

En siete dias del mes de novembre de mil ochocientos treinta y ocho, estando concluida la medida del terreno, que soliciten, José Ma. Martinez, notifiquesele, que para que pueda adquirir la propiedad y señoria á nombre de la nacion mejicana, perpetuamente para siempre jamas por juro de beridad, para si, sus hijos y desendentes, deve forsosamante sujetarso á las condiciones siguientes ; que permitiendoselo sus proporciones, á de ser su principal atencion; mantener armas y caballas, para defender el

---

* Words (por el onente) partially obliterated.

pais con teson; es fuerso, fidelidad en los incursiones de los enemigos que la hostilisan y salir contra eyos, siempre que la necesidad lo esija; así como tambien á ser el servicio que por falta de tropa le corresponde, qué precisamente á de mantener su fija residencia y la de su familia en este puesto militar por espacio de cuatro años, que durante este termino no á de poder anagenar, ipotecar, graban alguno al terreno mersenado aunque sea con motivo piadosa; que dentro del preciso termino de dos años, deverá tener cultivadas [en labor la enunciada tierra bajo la pena de perderlas siempre que las abandonose dentre del termino prefijado, pues en este caso sele adjudicará á otro vecino mas aplicada, que cumplidas los espuestos condiciones, y berificada su fija resi. dencia, y la de su familia el tiempo de los cuatro años senalados, adquirá el verdedero dominio de la mencionada tierra, y desde entonces, en adalante tendrá facultad, para poder enagenar y usar de eya, á su boluntad como de cosa propia segun lo espuesto por las leyes de la recapilacion Mejicana; pero, con la restricsion de que, en ningun tiempo á de poder bendorlos á yglesia; monasterio; persona eclesiastica, comunidad ni otros de los que yaman manos muertos como lo disponen las mismas leyes, bajo la pena alque la contravienende perder dha. tierra y finalmente, dentro de tres meses contados desde la ficha tendra precisa obligacion, de tomar posesion de la enunciada tierra, y de plantar todos los linderos de arboles frutales, ú otros que sean utiles al abasto de la poblacion, por cuya medida gosará su distrito de buena y aprobable disposicion, y podrá aprobecharlo de frutos, leña y madera, que produscan para su uso domestico y para los utencilios de labranza que indispensablemente necesitan; y por este auto asi lo probáy y mandé, y firmé con testigos de asistencia á falta de escribano, segun derecho.

TRINIDAD YRIGOYEN.
FRANCISCO USARRAGA.
PABLO CONTRERAS.

Notificacion.

En el mismo puesto militar de Tubac, dicho dia, mes y año á efecto de lo mandado en el auto que autendo comparescó José Ma. Martinez en su persona. Se le notificó y iso saber su contiendo de cuyo espreso enterado dijo: Que conformandose con lo resulto y determinado por el sor. juez, esta pronta á cumplir cuanto se le previene, y para ello y su resguardo pide se le dé el correspondiente testimonio asi respondió y los testigos de mi asistencia, con quienes actuo á falta de escribano, segun derecho.

TRINIDAD YRIGOYEN.
PABLO CONTRERAS.
FRANCISCO USARRAGA.

Auto de conclusion.

En el mismo puesto, dicho dia, mes y año, yo el presente juez dijé que en besta de la conformidad de la parte ynteresada que preceden y mandé que al cholandose estos autos originales, se livre al interesado Martinez el testimonio que solicata el que scriverá de título, y por esto auto basi lo provây, mandé y firmé con los testigos de mi asistencia con quienes actuo en la forma ordinaria á falta de escribano, segun derecho.

TRINIDAD YRIGOYEN.
PABLO CONTRERAS.
FRANCISCO USARRAGA.

Razon.

En dho. dia del mes de abril de 1838 se espedio al interesado al testimonio correspondiente y para constancia, lo firmé, señalada con una rubrica concuenda con su original, que queda en el archibo de mi cargo, á que mi remito ba fiel y legalmente sacado en estos cuatro fojas utiles en papel comun, por no haberlo del sello necesario, pues [several words here obliterated] y se saco á pedimiento del C. José Ma. Martinez, en el puesto militar de Tubac, en dicho dia del mes de novembre, de mil ochocientos treinta y ocho, autorizado y firmado de mi mano, con los testigos de mi asistencia, con quienes actuo yo el primer juez de paz del citado puesto militar, Don Trinidad Yrigoyen, por falta de escribano, que no lo hay.

TRINIDAD YRIGOYEN.

[Translation.]

PRESIDIO OF TUBAC, YEAR 1838.

Testimony of the proceedings in the measurement of the sowing lands of the citizen José Ma. Martinez, on this side of the river on the high road named Los Galeros by the justice of the peace Don Trinidad Yrigoyen.

To the Señor Justice of the Peace, Don Trinidad Yrigoyen:

I, José Ma. Martinez, a resident of this presidio, before your honor, in due form of law, appear and say: That, having purchased a lot of sowing ground from the citizen Trinidad Yrigoyen, which land was delivered to me without any evidence of the measurement of the same, because this gentleman had not the same in his possession, it not having been given him by the Señor Commandante Don José Ma. Villavacencia, who was the officer who gave him permission to inhabit the place he now occupies, and where he has received a grant, and since I have in my possession documents showing that the land belongs to me, I pray your honor to be pleased to measure said lands for me, and to give me the necessary testimony for my security. Wherefore I pray your honor to admit this, my petition, on this paper, since I have none of the corresponding quality, obligating myself to pay the corresponding cost, swearing that I ask this in good faith, &c.

JOSÉ MA. MARTINEZ.

The foregoing petition having been presented and admitted, I, the justice of the peace of this presidio, in compliance with the petition of the citizen José Ma. Martinez, appointed the official measurers, and, accompanied by these, the interested party, the assisting witnesses, together with the colindantes, I, the judge of this military post, the citizen Trinidad Yrigoyen, thus ordered and signed.

TRINIDAD YRIGOYEN.

At the said place of Tubac, on the said day, month, and year, present the citizens Pablo Contreras and Francisco Usarraga, I notified them of their appointment, whereupon they appeared to discharge their official duty legally and faithfully and without fraud or deceit.

In witness whereof they signed with me and the assisting witnesses, in the absence of a notary public.

TRINIDAD YRIGOYEN.
PABLO CONTRERAS.
FRANCISCO USARRAGA.

On the second day of the month of November, 1838, I, the citizen Trinidad Yrigoyen, justice of the peace of this presidio of Tubac, in accordance with title 33 of the special regulations of presidios, being on this side of the river in the direction of the west, on the high road from Tucson in the immediate neighborhood of the presidio, in company with the official measurers, I delivered to them a cord well twisted and stretched and a Castilian vara, with which they measured the cord to the length of twenty-five varas to the satisfaction of the interested party, José Ma. Martinez; the ends of the cord being attached to stakes, the measurement was commenced at the inclosure of Atanasio Otero, from which point there were measured and counted towards the south twenty-five cords, the line terminating at the foot of the little table land (mesita) in front of the black mesquite, which was made a landmark, and the measurement from south to north being concluded, the measurement was made from east to west seven cords, the line in this direction terminating at the foot of a hill (loma) where there is a house or "galera" (house of correction) on the side of the west; in the direction of the east, the river bank serves as a boundary, the tract measured being from north to south seven hundred varas, and from east to west one hundred and seventy-five varas; with which measurement the interested party was satisfied, it being understood that these boundaries shall serve as a notice to all persons; whereupon the said measurements were concluded, the interested party signing with me and the assisting witnesses, in the absence of a notary public, according to law.

TRINIDAD YRIGOYEN.
JOSÉ MA. MARTINEZ.
FRANCISCO USARRAGA.
PABLO CONTRERAS.

On the 7th day of the month of November, 1838, the measurements being concluded of the land petitioned for by Jose Ma. Martinez, he was notified that in order to acquire the ownership and dominion of the land in the name of the Mexican nation, perpetually and forever, and with right of inheritance to himself, his children and descendants, he shall comply with the following conditions: That if his means permit him, he shall keep arms and horses to be used with fidelity in defending the country against hostile incursions, and shall always be ready to march against the enemy when notified so to do, and also to give such military services as may be required of him on account of the scarcity of regular soldiers. He is also to have a fixed residence for himself and family at this military post for the term of four years, and during this time he cannot alienate, mortgage, or incumber, in any manner, the land above mentioned, even for pious purposes; and that within the precise time of two years, he must have the said land in cultivation, under the penalty of losing the same should he abandon the same within said time, in which case it may be given to a more industrious applicant.

The foregoing conditions being complied with, and having established his residence and that of his family, and having continued the same for the term of four years, he shall thereby acquire the true dominion and ownership of the mentioned land; and, from that time forward, he will have power to alienate or use the same at his will, as of a thing belonging to himself, as is explained by the Recapilacion de Indies of the Mexican Republic, but with this restriction: That at no time shall he be able to sell the same to any church, monastery, ecclesiastical person or community, or convey it in mortmain as provided in the same laws, under the penalty of losing said land; and finally, within three months, counting from the present date, he shall be obliged to take possession of said land, and to plant, upon the boundaries thereof, fruit trees or others that may be of use to the settlement and which will promote the prosperity of the district, furnishing fruits, timber and fuel for domestic use, and farming utensils which are so indispensably necessary. Thus I provided, ordered and signed, with the assisting witness, in the absence of a notary public.

TRINIDAD YRIGOYEN.
PABLO CONTRERAS.
FRANCISCO USARRAGA.

At the same military post of Tubac, on the said day, month, and year, in obedience to the foregoing decree, Don José Ma. Martinez personally appeared, whereupon he was made acquainted with the contents thereof, to which he responded that he would comply with what was ordered by the señor judge; that he would comply with said order at once, asking that the corresponding testimony be given to him. Thus he answered, signing with me and the assisting witnesses with whom I act in the absence of a notary public.

TRINIDAD YRIGOYEN.
PABLO CONTRERAS.
FRANCISCO USARRAGA.

At the same place, on the same day, month, and year, I, the present judge, said that in view of the fact that the interested party was satisfied with the foregoing proceedings, let a testimony thereof be given to the interested party, Martinez, for his security. Thus I provided, ordered, and signed with the assisting witnesses with whom I act in the ordinary form according to law.

TRINIDAD YRIGOYEN.
PABLO CONTRERAS.
FRANCISCO USARRAGA.

On the same day of the month of April, 1838, there was issued to the interested party the corresponding testimony.

In witness whereof I sign with a rubrica.

The foregoing agrees with the original which remains in the archives under my charge, with which it has been compared and corrected as found on the four written folios of common paper, there being no stamped paper.

Copied at the request of the citizen José Ma. Martinez, at the military post of Tubac, on the said day of the month of November, 1838. Signing with me and the assisting witnesses with whom I act, I, the first justice of the peace of the said military post, Don Trinidad Yrigoyen, in the absence of a notary public, in the terms as required by law.

TRINIDAD YRIGOYEN.
PABLO CONTRERAS.
FRANCISCO USARRAGA.

DEED, MARTINEZ TO OTERO.

This indenture, made the 29th day of June, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and eighty, between Dario Martinez, of the town of Tubac, county of Pima, Territory of Arizona, party of the first part, and Salimo Otero, of the same place, the party of the second part, witnesseth:

That the said party of the first part, for and in consideration of the sum of five dollars, lawful money of the United States of America to him in hand paid by the said party of the second part, the receipt whereof is hereby acknowledged, has remised, released, and forever quit-claimed, and by these presents does remise, release, and forever quit-claim unto the said party of the second part, and to his heirs and assigns, all that certain lot, piece, or parcel of land, situate, lying, and being in the said county of Pima, Territory of Arizona, and bounded and described as follows, to wit:

Commencing at the enclosure of Atenacio Otero, and running thence towards the south twenty-eight cords of fifty varas, to the foot of a mesita, in front of a "mes-quite prieto," which was made a landmark for the boundary, and the measurement being made from north to south, the measurement was made from east to west, seven cords of fifty varas to the foot of a hill, where is situated a house or galero (granery) on the side of the west; on the east, the boundary being the river of Santa Cruz—said tract of land being situated in the neighborhood of the town of Tubac, and being the same tract of land which on the 12th day of November, 1838, was granted by Trinidad Yrigoyen, justice of the peace, of Tubac, to José Maria Martinez, and of which possession was given.

Together with all and singular the tenements, hereditaments and appurtenances thereunto belonging, or in any wise appertaining, and the reversion and reversions, remainder and remainders, rents, issues, and profits thereof; and also all the estate, right, title, interest, property, possession, claim, and demand whatsoever, as well in law as in equity, of the said party of the first part, of, in, or to the said premises, and every part and parcel thereof, with the appurtenances.

To have and to hold all and singular the said premises, together with the appurtenances, unto the said party of the second part, and to his heirs and assigns forever.

It witness whereof, the said party of the first part has hereunto set his hand and seal, the day and year first above written.

[SEAL.] DARIO MARTINEZ.

Signed, sealed, and delivered in presence of—
SANTIAGO ANISA.

TERRITORY OF ARIZONA,
County of Pima, ss:

On this 29th day of June, A. D. one thousand eight hundred and eighty, before me, Santiago Anisa, a notary public in and for the county of Pima, personally appeared Dario Martinez, whose name is subscribed to the aforesaid instrument as a party thereto, known to me to be the person described in and who executed the said aforesaid instrument as a party thereto, and who duly acknowledged to me that he executed the same freely and voluntarily and for the uses and purposes therein mentioned.

In witness whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and affixed my official seal, the day and year in this certificate first above written.

[SEAL.] SANTIAGO ANISA,
Notary Public.

TESTIMONY IN THE CASE.

JOSÉ MARIA ZOSA being called by the surveyor-general, and by him duly sworn, testified as follows, viz:

1. What is your name, age, occupation, and residence?—Answer. My name is José Maria Zosa; age, 62 years; occupation that of ranchero, and reside in Tucson.

2. Do you know a tract of land situated near the town of Tubac, Pima County, Arizona, known as Otero's rancho, and now occupied by Sabino Otero?—A. I know the said tract or rancho.

3. How long have you known said rancho, and who has had possession thereof during said time?—A. I have known this rancho for more than fifty years. To my certain knowledge the Otero family have occupied the said rancho during the past fifty years.

4. Did you know the grantee, Torrevio de Otero?—A. I did; and when he had possession of said rancho. I also knew all the descendants of the said grantee, Torrevio Otero, down to the present claimant and occupant and petitioner, Sabino Otero, who is a grandson of said original grantee.

5. Do you remember any time when said rancho was unoccupied?—A. It was unoccupied three or four years, about 1842, in consequence of the hostility of the Indians, at which time about nineteen persons were killed by the Indians.

6. Do you know anything of the occupation of a town lot in Tubac by the said Otero family?—A. Yes; and it was occupied during the same time or years as was the rancho, and by the same family.

7. Do you know anything of the presidial records of Tubac?—A. I know there were presidial archives of Tubac in the town before the Indians came and attacked the place, but I do not know whether the Indians destroyed them or not, and I cannot say whether or not they exist.

his
JOSÉ MARIA + ZOSA.
mark.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this day, March 23, 1880, as witness my hand and seal of office.

[SEAL.] JOHN WASSON,
United States Surveyor-General.

Testimony of Nasario Ortiz in the case.

Witness called by the surveyor-general and by him duly sworn.

Questions by the surveyor-general:

1. What is your name, age, occupation, and residence?—Answer. My name is Nasario Ortiz; my age is 64 years; merchant and general business, and my residence is in Tucson.

2. Do you know a tract of land situated near the town of Tubac, Pima County, Arizona, known as the Otero rancho, and now occupied by Sabino Otero?—A. I know said rancho and place, and have known it since 1835.

3. Who has had possession of said rancho during all this time?—A. During all this time, the family of Otero cultivated and possessed this rancho, and lived in Tubac. I knew the grantee, Don Torrevio Otero, when he occupied said rancho, and all his descendants down to the present claimant and occupant, Sabino Otero.

4. Do you know whether there was any abandonment of said rancho, and when, and why?—A. It was abandoned a short time in or about the year 1840, because of the hostility of the Indians.

5. Do you know whether the said rancho was ever abandoned for any other cause than that of hostility of the Indians?—A. Not to my knowledge.

6. Do you know if this same Otero family owned a lot in the town of Tubac during the said time?—A. I cannot say as to the ownership of a lot in town, but the same family lived in a house in the town and saved on the rancho.

his
NASARIO + ORTIZ.
mark.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this 23d day of March, 1880, as witness my hand and seal.

[SEAL.]

JOHN WASSON,
United States Surveyor-General.

Testimony of Santos Aguine in the case.

Witness called by the surveyor-general, and by him duly sworn.

Questions by the surveyor-general:

1. What is your name, occupation, age, and residence?—Answer. My name is Santos Aguine; my occupation is that of farmer; my age is over sixty years, and I reside in Tucson.

2. Do you know anything of a rancho near Tubac now occupied by Sabino Otero, and how long have you known it, and has anybody except the Otero family, which is descended from the original grantee, Torrevio de Otero, ever occupied or claimed possession of the said ranche?—A. I know said rancho and have known it all my life, having been raised from a small boy in Tubac. Since I have known the rancho it has ever been occupied by the Otero family, and by no one else. They living in the town or pueblo and sowing or planting on the rancho. This occupation and possession have been continous except when interrupted by the hostile Apache Indians. I knew Don Torrevio Otero very well, and all the family descended from him down to the present claimant, Sabino Otero.

his
SANTOS + AGUINE.
mark.

Subscribed and sworn to before me, this 23d day of March, 1880, as witness my hand and seal of office.

[SEAL.]

JOHN WASSON,
United States Surveyor-General.

Testimony of Sabino Otero in the case.

Witness called by the surveyor-general.

Witness being duly sworn, testified as follows to questions put by the surveyor-general:

1. What is your name, age, occupation, and residence?—Answer. My name is Sabino Otero; my age 34 years; occupation that of farmer and stock grower, and reside on my rancho near Tubac.

2. How long have you resided on and cultivated your rancho near Tubac?—A. About sixteen years.

3. Is your said rancho the same as that granted by the presidial authorities of Tubac to your grandfather, Terrevio Otero?—A. Yes, sir.

SABINO OTERO.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this 23d day of March 1880, as witness my hand and official seal.

[SEAL.]

JOHN WASSON,
United States Surveyor-General.

Testimony of Juan Elias.

JUAN ELIAS, being first duly sworn, deposed as follows to the questions propounded by the United States surveyor-general:

Question 1. What is your name, age, place of residence, and occupation?—Answer. Juan Elias; 42 years of age: reside in Tucson, and by occupation a farmer.

Q. 2. Did you personally know José Ma. Martinez, the father of Dario Martinez?—A. Yes, sir; I did.

Q. 3. How many children did the said José Ma. Martinez have?—A. Dario Martinez and no other.

Q. 4. Do you know that the said José Ma. Martinez is dead?—A. I do; he died in September, 1862.

JUAN ELIAS.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this 29th day of November, 1880, as witness my hand and official seal.

[SEAL.]

JOHN WASSON,
United States Surveyor-General.

SURVEYOR-GENERAL'S OPINION AND RECOMMENDATION IN THE CASE.

The original title papers filed by claimants in this case show:

1. That on January 10, 1789, Torevio de Otero, ancestor of present claimants, obtained from Nicholas de la Erran, commandant of the presidio of Tubac, a house lot of twenty varas frontage, and four suertes of sowing land, each of 400 varas square, and distant about one-eighth of a league from the presidio; also (2) that on the 7th day of April, 1838, the municipal authorities of Tubac granted José Ma. Martinez a tract of 25 by 7 cords (the cords being 25 varas each), adjoining the land granted to Torevio de Otero in 1789, and then occupied by Atanacio Otero.

All the lands described in the titles just mentioned are now claimed by the heirs of Torevio de Otero; the first, by direct descent from the original grantee; and the second, by purchase by the heirs of said Otero from the grantee Martinez, by informal conveyance in 1858, which has since been perfected by a formal deed executed June 29, 1880, by the sole surviving heir of José Ma. Martinez, to Sabino Otero, one of the heirs of Torevio de Otero, and also one of the present petitioners.

Although separate petitions are presented by claimants for the lands originally granted to Otero and Martinez, it is not regarded necessary to make separate reports, inasmuch as the lands adjoin and are now in undisputed possession of and claimed by the same parties.

The grant of 1789 to Torevio de Otero, although it does not refer thereto, was certainly made under the royal decree for the regulation of presidios to be established on the frontier line of New Spain, issued September 10, 1772, which decree declares: "That for the protection of the settlements and of commerce in the frontier countries, and that the population thereof may be increased, I order that the commandants, captains, officials, and all other persons, shall not under any pretext whatever prevent the settlement of persons of good character and habits in the immediate surroundings of presidios; and when this locality may not be sufficient to contain all the families that may desire to make settlements, that the district for such settlement shall be enlarged on one of the sides. I also order that the captains distribute house lots and lands to such settlers, under the condition that they cultivate the same, and that they keep horses, arms, and ammunition, and be ever ready to use them in defense of the country when required to do so," &c.

This decree was followed by the order of Nava in 1791, authorizing captains of presidios to grant lands to settlers within a tract of four square leagues measured from the plaza of the presidio as a center.

The title papers presented of the grant to Torevio de Otero are manifestly copies of the originals, since they are written on sealed paper of the year 1807, although not certified to be copies. The character of the hand-writing and the paper upon which they are written strongly indicate genuineness. A record of this grant doubtless once existed in the archives of the presidio of Tubac, but these archives have long since been destroyed, as history and the testimony in this case agree in showing; therefore, aside from the title papers presented, there is no existing record of it.

In 1838 the Spanish presidio of Tubac had lost something of its military character, and under the government of Mexico had assumed that of a pueblo governed by municipal officers; hence the grant to Martinez in 1838 was made by municipal officers; however, it was given under the same conditions and restrictions as were those made by captains of presidios under the decrees of 1772 and 1791.

These grants having been made by the officers of the presidio and pueblo of Tubac, no record thereof is found in the archives of the State of Sonora, and for reasons heretofore stated, no archive evidence of them now exists; but I have not the slightest hesitancy in pronouncing the title papers genuine; and aside from the titles given to the original grantees by the Spanish and Mexican governments, their descendants, by long and undisputed possession and actual and useful occupancy, have acquired such a right as ought to be, and doubtless will be, regarded sufficient to vest in the present claimants an absolute title to this property, in part inherited from their ancestors and in part acquired by purchase. The testimony in the case shows that the heirs of the original grantee have held undisputed possession of the premises for the past fifty years, using the house lot as a place of residence and tilling the suertes (sowing grounds) granted for cultivation, and which were situated a short distance therefrom.

On these premises several generations of the Otero family were born and lived and died, and present petitioners continue to reside there, deriving their subsistence from the land granted to their ancestor in 1789 and from that purchased from Martinez. Their possession has been continuous down to this day. This long and useful possession, under the laws of Spain and Mexico, would give them title by prescription alone, at least to the land claimed under the grant of 1789.

The time nesessary to possess a thing in order to acquire title by prescription, under the former governments, is three years in case of personal or movable property, and in case of real estate ten years, if the owner against whom the prescription runs reside in the same province, but if he reside out of the province twenty years are necessary.

Under this law the title to the tract granted to Martinez in 1838 would vest in present claimants, for their useful and undisturbed occupation of it has far exceeded twenty years.

There is no doubt that by competent officers Spain and Mexico granted all the lands claimed by the present petitioners in this case, and therefore such lands were private property prior to the date of the Gadsden treaty. Present petitioners and their ancestors have usefully, indisputably, and uninterruptedly (save during a short time when driven off by hostile Indians) occupied the said lands from long anterior to the date of said treaty down to this day.

"A right of any validity before the cession was equally valid afterwards" (1 Wallace, p. 404).

The Otero claims are quite similar to one of an Indian in California. The claim under this Indian's title reached the United States Supreme Court, and the case is found in 1 Black, p. 267. In 1842 Governor Alvarado directed the alcalde at San Luis Obispo to distribute lands among the Indians about the mission, and one of the distributions under this direction was a parcel to an Indian named Romualdo.

The alcalde placed him in possession, and he and his assigns continuously remained in possession. July 10, 1846, Governor Pico made a grant of the same land to the same Indian. One Wilson, successor in interest, presented a claim under the Pico grant which was made after the date of the treaty of Guadalupe Hidalgo, and therefore the board of land commissioners rejected it; but as there was evidence that the original grantee and his assigns had long, continuously, and usefully occupied the premises, the United States district judge confirmed the claim, and the United States Supreme Court affirmed the confirmation. In doing so, the court say: "He (the alcalde) gave the possession to the Indian accordingly. A record was kept of the distribution of these lands in a book in his office, as well as the orders from the governor; but this book was lost, with all the archives of his office, in 1846, &c. * * * In the present instance the possession and cultivation were of considerable duration; and, according to the testimony of the alcalde, the distribution and assignment of the governor was intended to be permanent as a home to the occupant. The claim appears to be an honest one, unaccompanied with suspicion, and, under the circumstances, we think was properly confirmed."

Another somewhat analogous case is that of the United States vs. De Haro's heirs, found in 22 Howard, pp. 293–298. The board of land commissioners rejected the claim, but the United States district court confirmed it, and in the decision this language occurs:

"It appears that an undisturbed possession of the property claimed has been in the possession of Francisco de Haro and his heirs sixteen years, and it does not appear that any one has claimed or exercised a possession or right of possession over the premises."

On appeal to the United States Supreme Court the judgment of the lower court was was affirmed, and the opinion concludes thus:

"Upon the whole we cannot doubt, from the title papers, and especially from the sixteen years' possession which has been enjoyed by De Haro and his heirs—using the property as their own, claiming it under the grant—that the title should be confirmed; and it is hereby confirmed."

ACTION OF CONGRESS IN SUCH CASES.

Congress does not hesitate to do justice in cases of this kind. March 3, 1871, a subcommittee of the Private Land Claims Committee of the House of Representatives reported to the House on the case of Thomas Dowling's claim to Yerba Buena Island. From that report I quote:

"It is a well settled principle in equitable jurisprudence that contracts for the alienation of land, although not valid as law, may be enforced in equity when substantial justice requires it. The court will always have an eye to the substantial justice of the case. * * * * But it may be said that government cannot, like an individual, be compelled to submit to the equitable powers of the court; and this is true, but it is the highest attribute of government to do right; and this it may do when this right is perceived, through the action of Congress." (Part III, p. 1435, Senate and House reports, by their Private Land Claims Committees.)

Although the presidial records of Tubac have been destroyed, and the titles to the tracts under consideration are not shown to be strictly and technically deraigned to present claimants, yet I have no doubt of their legal right to every vara of land they claim and ask to be confirmed to them in this case. I regard their title genuine; and even without any title papers, their long, useful, and undisturbed occupation would entitle them to confirmation. Congress has already recognized the right of mere occupants of lands in the Santa Cruz Valley, in front of Tucson, to have confirmation therefor. Such occupants were not required to have title papers; they were only required to prove to the satisfaction of the register and receiver of the proper United States land office that they and their ancestors or grantors had been in the actual, bona fide occupancy or possession of such land "for twenty years next preceding the date of the passage of this act," which was February 5, 1875. (I Stat. at L., part 3, p. 305.)

There is even stronger reasons why Congress should confirm the lands under consideration to Otero et al. than in any case contemplated by the act just cited. The Oteros have genuine title papers, and have had useful occupation by themselves and ancestors of the grant of 1789 for nearly one hundred years, and of the one of 1838 for more than twice twenty years.

The boundaries can easily be ascertained, and the quantity is limited by the terms of the title papers.

RECOMMENDATION IN THE CASE.

In view of the foregoing facts, I recommend the confirmation of all the lands petitioned for in this case to Sabino Otero, Teófilo Otero, Gabriela Otero, Elena Castro, and Anna M. Cunnen.

JOHN WASSON,
United States Surveyor-General.

TUCSON, ARIZ., March 1, 1881.

OFFICE OF THE UNITED STATES SURVEYOR-GENERAL
FOR THE TERRITORY OF ARIZONA.

I, John Wasson, United States surveyor-general for the Territory of Arizona, hereby certify that the foregoing is a true and correct transcript of the title-papers in the case of the private land claims of which confirmation is asked by petitioners Sabino Otero, Teófilo Otero, Gabriela Otero, Elena Castro, and Anna M. Cunnen, also of the various papers and exhibits filed and testimony taken in support thereof and in connection therewith, and of the opinion and recommendation of the surveyor-general in the premises.

Given under my hand and official seal, at Tucson, this first day of March, A. D. 1881.

[SEAL.]

JOHN WASSON,
United States Surveyor-General.

C

Rec.d with Surv Gnls letter of July 7th/81.

Paid per Report. 36.163

PLAT

of preliminary survey of a house lot and two tracts of land near Tubac Pima Co.

ARIZONA

Containing in all 185.70 Acres

Confirmation recommended in favor of SABINO OTERO ET. AL.

Survey designated	By whom surv'd	Date of Contract	Am't of surveys M	Chs.	lks.	When surveyed
Exterior Lines	Geo. J. Roskruge	February 28, 81.	3.	10.	72	April 12, 1881.
Connecting "	" " "	" " "		29	02	" " "

Sabino Otero et.al. claimants to a house lot and two tracts of land near Tubac, in Pima County Arizona:

To the United States. Dr.

For cost of preliminary survey of the exterior boundaries of said house lot and two tracts of land near Tubac, Arizona, being 3.134 miles exterior boundaries at $16.00 per mile $50.14 and .363 mile, connecting line at $8.00 per mile 2.90

as per account in favor of U.S. Deputy Surveyor George J. Roskruge, of this date $53.04

This plat of preliminary survey of house lot and two tracts of land situated near Tubac, in Pima County Arizona; is strictly conformable to the field-notes of survey on file in this office, which have been examined and approved.

U.S. Surveyor General's Office.
Tucson, Arizona, July 7, 1881. John Wasson
U.S. Surveyor-General.

M

SEN. EX. DOC. No. 81, 1st SESS., 47th CONG.

47TH CONGRESS, 1st Session. } SENATE. { Ex. Doc. No. 82.

LETTER

FROM

THE SECRETARY OF THE TREASURY,

TRANSMITTING

A copy of a letter from the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, with accompanying statement, in response to Senate resolution of December 14, 1881, calling for statement in relation to the sale of plantations in South Carolina.

FEBRUARY 1, 1882.—Ordered to lie on the table and be printed.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT,
January 31, 1882.

SIR: In compliance with the resolution of the Senate of the 14th ultimo, directing the Secretary of the Treasury to forward to the Senate for its information a statement showing certain particulars in relation to the sale of farms or plantations in the State of South Carolina under the act approved June 7, 1862, entitled "An act for the collection of direct taxes in insurrectionary districts within the United States, and for other purposes," I have the honor to transmit herewith a copy of a letter from the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, with accompanying statement, which it is believed furnishes the required information.

Very respectfully,

CHAS. J. FOLGER,
Secretary.

Hon. DAVID DAVIS,
President pro tempore of the Senate.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT,
OFFICE OF INTERNAL REVENUE,
Washington, January 28, 1882.

SIR: Senate resolution of December 14, 1881, directing the Secretary of the Treasury to forward to the Senate for its information a statement showing—

1st. "The number of farms or plantations, with the number of acres in each, sold in the State of South Carolina under an act entitled 'An act for the collection of direct taxes in insurrectionary districts within the United States, and for other purposes,' approved June 7, 1862, to whom said farms or plantations belonged at the time of said sales, and who were the purchasers thereof at said tax sales."

2d. "The amount for which each of said farms or plantations was assessed for taxation, the amounts collected from each of the same, and the amounts at which each of said farms or plantations were bid off, and by whom."

3d. "What amount of money arising from said sales was covered into the United States Treasury over and above the amount of direct taxes laid and collected against said State under said act, and the cost and expenses of said sales, and what amount is now in said Treasury"—has been referred to this office for the information required.

I herewith inclose a tabulated statement, compiled from the books and records of this office, which show the numbers of the lots and blocks which were sold in the town of Beaufort; the names of the farms or plantations which were sold in South Carolina outside of the town of Beaufort; the number of acres in each farm or plantation which was sold; the valuation of the several lots, blocks, plantations, or farms sold; the tax, penalty, cost, and interest charged against each by the direct-tax commissioners for South Carolina; the amount for which each lot, block, farm, or plantation was sold or struck off; to whom sold or struck off; the names of the original owners, so far as they were reported to this office by the tax commissioners; and the difference between the amount charged against each by the tax commissioners, and the amount for which the same were sold or struck off.

It will be observed that more of the lots, blocks, farms, or plantations were bid in by the tax commissioners for the United States than were sold to individuals at the original sale, but the abstract or tabulated statement is made with the charges and balances carried out as if the amounts were actually paid and covered into the United States Treasury, because the government, by its proper officers, bid in and took the land in lieu of the taxes, and, after having acquired title thereto, rented, resold, and set it apart for school-farms and other public reservations.

I have, therefore, annexed a statement under the heading of "Recapitulation," which shows the amounts received from the original sales and from the sales after the United States had acquired title to the lots and farms bid in by it, as well as the amounts to be deducted on account of taxes, penalties, costs, interest, and the expenses of the board of tax commissioners.

Respectfully,

GREEN B. RAUM,
Commissioner.

Hon. CHARLES G. FOLGER,
Secretary of the Treasury.

Abstract of sales in South Carolina for non-payment of United States direct taxes and of sales of real estate after the United States acquired title thereto.

TOWN OF BEAUFORT.

Block.	Lot.	Valuation.	To whom assessed.	To whom sold or struck off.	Amount struck off at—	Tax.	Penalty.	Costs.	Interest.	Total.	Difference between amount sold for and charges.
1	.....	$500	Not given	United States	$6 67	$4 00	$2 00	$0 30	$0 37	$6 67	.....
2	.....	9,600	....do	....do	250 00	76 80	38 40	5 76	7 13	128 09	$121 91
3	.....	12,000	....do	....do	450 00	96 00	48 00	7 20	8 91	160 11	289 89
4	.....	3,000	....do	....do	50 00	24 00	12 00	1 80	2 22	40 02	9 98
5	.....	8,500	....do	....do	125 00	68 00	34 00	5 10	6 31	113 41	11 59
6	.....	2,000	....do	....do	40 00	16 00	8 00	1 20	1 49	26 69	13 31
7	.....	6,000	....do	....do	100 00	48 00	24 00	3 60	4 45	80 05	19 95
8	A	200	....do	....do	2 66	1 60	80	12	14	2 66	.....
8	B	1,000	....do	Maria Talbird, Dorcas Middleton, and Bristoe Baker.	13 34	8 00	4 00	60	74	13 34	.....
9	A	10,000	....do	United States	150 00	80 00	40 00	6 00	7 42	133 42	16 58
9	B	4,000	....do	....do	65 00	32 00	16 00	2 40	2 97	53 37	11 63
9	C	5,000	....do	....do	75 00	40 00	20 00	3 00	3 71	66 71	8 29
10	A	1,500	....do	....do	30 00	12 00	6 00	90	1 12	20 02	9 98
10	B	2,000	....do	....do	35 00	16 00	8 00	1 20	1 49	26 69	8 31
10	C	1,500	....do	....do	30 00	12 00	6 00	90	1 12	20 02	9 98
11	A	11,000	....do	....do	475 00	88 00	44 00	6 60	8 17	146 77	328 23
11	B	2,000	....do	....do	35 00	16 00	8 00	1 20	1 49	26 69	8 31
12	A	2,000	....do	....do	35 00	16 00	8 00	1 20	1 49	26 69	8 31
12	B	2,500	....do	....do	40 00	20 00	10 00	1 50	1 86	33 36	6 64
13	A	7,000	....do	....do	110 00	56 00	28 00	4 20	5 20	93 40	16 60
13	B	10,000	....do	....do	625 00	80 00	40 00	6 00	7 42	133 42	491 58
14	.....	4,000	....do	....do	65 00	32 00	16 00	2 40	2 97	53 37	11 63
17	.....	1,400	....do	....do	25 00	11 20	5 60	84	1 04	18 68	6 32
18	.....	4,000	....do	....do	65 00	32 00	16 00	2 40	2 97	53 37	11 63
19	.....	2,200	....do	....do	175 00	17 60	8 80	1 32	1 62	29 34	145 66
20	A	3,000	....do	....do	50 00	24 00	12 00	1 80	2 22	40 02	9 98
20	B	4,000	....do	....do	65 00	32 00	16 00	2 40	2 97	53 37	11 63
21	A	200	....do	William Bryan	2 66	1 60	80	12	14	2 66	.....
21	B	400	....do	United States	10 00	3 20	1 60	24	28	5 32	4 68
21	C	5,000	....do	....do	75 00	40 00	20 00	3 00	3 71	66 71	8 29
22	A	3,000	....do	....do	50 00	24 00	12 00	1 80	2 22	40 02	9 98
22	B	1,000	....do	....do	20 00	8 00	4 00	60	74	13 34	6 66
23	A	600	....do	....do	10 00	4 80	2 40	36	44	8 00	2 00
23	B	900	....do	....do	15 00	7 20	3 60	54	65	11 99	3 01
25	A	500	....do	....do	10 00	4 00	2 00	30	37	6 67	3 33
25	B	2,500	....do	....do	40 00	20 00	10 00	1 50	1 86	33 36	6 64
26	A	6,000	....do	....do	200 00	48 00	24 00	3 60	4 45	80 05	119 95
26	B	1,400	....do	....do	26 00	11 20	5 60	84	1 04	18 68	7 32

Abstract of sales in South Carolina for non-payment of United States direct taxes, &c.—Continued.

TOWN OF BEAUFORT—Continued.

Block.	Lot.	Valuation.	To whom assessed.	To whom sold or struck off.	Amount struck off at—	Tax.	Penalty.	Costs.	Interest.	Total.	Difference between amount sold for and charges.
26	C	$1,800	Not given	United States	$40 00	$14 40	$7 20	$1 08	$1 33	$24 01	$15 99
26	D	1,200	do	do	25 00	9 60	4 80	72	88	16 00	9 00
27	A	7,000	do	do	250 00	56 00	28 00	4 20	5 20	93 40	156 60
27	B	600	do	do	10 00	4 80	2 40	36	44	8 00	2 00
27	C	1,800	do	do	30 00	14 40	7 20	1 08	1 33	24 01	5 99
28	A	600	do	do	10 00	4 80	2 40	36	44	8 00	2 00
28	B	6,000	do	do	100 00	48 00	24 00	3 60	4 45	80 05	19 95
28	C	5,000	do	do	75 00	40 00	20 00	3 00	3 71	66 71	8 29
28	D	1,100	do	do	20 00	8 80	4 40	66	81	14 67	5 33
29	------	600	do	do	10 00	4 80	2 40	36	44	8 00	2 00
30	------	3,100	do	do	74 00	24 80	12 40	1 86	2 30	41 36	33 64
31	------	5,000	do	do	125 00	40 00	20 00	3 00	3 71	66 71	58 29
33	A	2,000	do	do	35 00	16 00	8 00	1 20	1 49	26 69	8 31
33	C	1,500	do	do	25 00	12 00	6 00	90	1 12	20 02	4 98
34	B	1,000	do	do	20 00	8 00	4 00	60	74	13 34	6 66
34	C	600	do	do	10 00	4 80	2 40	36	44	8 00	2 00
35	A	50	do	Jacob Robinson	63	40	20	01	02	63	----------
35	B	1,000	do	United States	20 00	8 00	4 00	60	74	13 34	6 66
35	C	700	do	do	15 00	5 60	2 80	42	52	9 34	5 66
35	D	700	do	do	15 00	5 60	2 80	42	52	9 34	5 66
36	A	2,500	do	do	40 00	20 00	10 00	1 50	1 86	33 36	6 64
36	B	1,500	do	do	25 00	12 00	6 00	90	1 12	20 02	4 98
36	C	400	do	do	8 00	3 20	1 60	24	28	5 32	2 68
36	E	400	do	do	8 00	3 20	1 60	24	28	5 32	2 68
37	A	2,500	do	do	60 00	20 00	10 00	1 50	1 86	33 36	26 64
37	B	500	do	do	10 00	4 00	2 00	30	37	6 67	3 33
37	C	200	do	do	5 00	1 60	80	12	14	2 66	2 34
37	D	800	do	do	15 00	6 40	3 20	48	59	10 67	4 33
37	E	600	do	do	10 00	4 80	2 40	36	44	8 00	2 00
38	A	1,000	do	do	20 00	8 00	4 00	60	74	13 34	6 66
38	B	6,000	do	do	150 00	48 00	24 00	3 60	4 45	80 05	69 95
38	C	8,000	do	do	750 00	64 00	32 00	4 80	5 94	106 74	643 26
38	D	9,700	do	do	975 00	77 60	38 80	5 80	7 17	129 37	845 63
39	A	300	do	do	5 00	2 40	1 20	18	21	3 99	1 01
39	B	500	do	do	10 00	4 00	2 00	30	37	6 67	3 33
39	C	500	do	do	10 00	4 00	2 00	30	37	6 67	3 33
40	------	2,500	do	do	45 00	20 00	10 00	1 50	1 86	33 36	11 64
41	A	1,800	do	do	30 00	14 40	7 20	1 08	1 33	24 01	5 99
41	B	800	do	do	15 00	6 40	3 20	48	59	10 67	4 33

42	------	10,000	------do	------do	200 00	80 00	40 00	6 00	7 42	133 42	66 58
43	------	100	------do	------do	5 00	80	40	06	08	1 34	3 66
44	B	2,000	------do	------do	35 00	16 00	8 00	1 20	1 49	26 69	8 31
44	C	1,200	------do	------do	20 00	9 60	4 80	72	88	16 00	4 00
45	------	2,400	------do	------do	40 00	19 20	9 60	1 44	1 76	32 00	8 00
46	A	400	------do	------do	8 00	3 20	1 60	24	28	5 32	2 68
46	B	1,500	------do	------do	25 00	12 00	6 00	90	1 12	20 02	4 98
46	C	300	------do	------do	5 00	2 40	1 20	18	21	3 99	1 01
46	D	1,000	------do	------do	20 00	8 00	4 00	60	74	13 34	6 66
47	A	1,000	------do	------do	20 00	8 00	4 00	60	74	13 34	6 66
47	B	1,000	------do	------do	20 00	8 00	4 00	60	74	13 34	6 66
48	A	1,000	------do	------do	130 00	8 00	4 00	60	74	13 34	116 66
48	B	800	------do	------do	15 00	6 40	3 20	48	59	10 67	4 33
48	C	3,500	------do	------do	300 00	28 00	14 00	2 10	2 60	46 70	253 30
49	A	800	------do	------do	70 00	6 40	3 20	48	59	10 67	59 33
49	B	2,500	------do	------do	100 00	20 00	10 00	1 50	1 86	33 36	66 64
49	C	300	------do	------do	100 00	2 40	1 20	18	21	3 99	96 01
49	D	5,800	------do	------do	90 00	46 40	23 20	3 48	4 33	77 41	12 59
49	E	4,000	------do	------do	60 00	32 00	16 00	2 40	2 98	53 38	6 62
49	F	3,000	------do	------do	80 00	24 00	12 00	1 80	2 22	40 02	39 98
49	G	2,000	------do	------do	50 00	16 00	8 00	1 20	1 49	26 69	23 31
50	A	6,000	------do	------do	175 00	48 00	24 00	3 60	4 45	80 05	94 95
50	B	2,000	------do	------do	35 00	16 00	8 00	1 20	1 49	26 69	8 31
50	C	1,000	------do	------do	20 00	8 00	4 00	60	74	13 34	6 66
50	D	2,000	------do	------do	35 00	16 00	8 00	1 20	1 49	26 69	8 31
50	F	1,500	------do	------do	25 00	12 00	6 00	90	1 12	20 02	4 98
51	------	100	------do	------do	2 00	80	40	06	08	1 34	66
52	------	100	------do	------do	2 00	80	40	06	08	1 34	66
53	A	5,500	------do	------do	90 00	44 00	22 00	3 30	4 09	73 39	16 61
53	B	4,000	------do	------do	65 00	32 00	16 00	2 40	2 98	53 38	11 62
54	------	100	------do	------do	2 00	80	40	06	08	1 34	66
55	A	1,900	------do	------do	35 00	15 20	7 60	1 14	1 42	25 36	9 64
55	C	400	------do	------do	8 00	3 20	1 60	24	28	5 32	2 68
56	A	6,000	------do	------do	100 00	48 00	24 00	3 60	4 45	80 05	19 95
56	B	500	------do	------do	10 00	4 00	2 00	30	37	6 67	3 33
57	A	650	------do	------do	10 00	5 20	2 60	39	49	8 68	1 32
57	C	400	------do	------do	8 00	3 20	1 60	24	28	5 32	2 68
57	D	700	------do	------do	15 00	5 60	2 80	42	52	9 34	5 66
58	A	800	------do	------do	110 00	6 40	3 20	48	59	10 67	99 33
58	B	200	------do	------do	5 00	1 60	80	12	14	2 66	2 34
58	C	600	------do	------do	12 00	4 80	2 40	36	44	8 00	4 00
58	D	700	------do	------do	15 00	5 60	2 80	42	52	9 34	5 66
58	E	1,000	------do	------do	20 00	8 00	4 00	60	74	13 34	6 66
58	F	1,000	------do	------do	20 00	80 0	4 00	60	74	13 34	6 66
59	B	500	------do	------do	10 00	4 00	2 00	30	37	6 67	3 33
59	D	3,500	------do	------do	60 00	28 00	14 00	2 10	2 60	46 70	13 30
59	E	1,200	------do	------do	20 00	9 60	4 80	72	88	16 00	4 00
59	F	200	------do	------do	5 00	1 60	80	12	14	2 66	2 34
59	G	1,000	------do	------do	20 00	8 00	4 00	60	74	13 34	6 66
59	H	900	------do	------do	15 00	7 20	3 60	54	65	11 99	3 01
60	A	500	------do	------do	10 00	4 00	2 00	30	37	6 67	3 33
60	B	3,500	------do	------do	60 00	28 00	14 00	2 10	2 60	46 70	13 30

Abstract of sales in South Carolina for non-payment of United States direct taxes, &c.—Continued.

TOWN OF BEAUFORT—Continued.

Block.	Lot.	Valuation.	To whom assessed.	To whom sold or struck off.	Amount struck off at—	Tax.	Penalty.	Costs.	Interest.	Total.	Difference between amount sold for and charges.
60	C	$7,500	Not given	United States	$400 00	$60 00	$30 00	$4 50	$5 57	$100 07	$299 93
60	D	3,500	do	do	60 00	28 00	14 00	2 10	2 60	46 70	13 30
60	E	1,500	do	do	375 00	12 00	6 00	90	1 12	20 02	354 98
61	A	3,000	do	do	50 00	24 00	12 00	1 80	2 22	40 02	9 98
61	B	3,000	do	do	100 00	24 00	12 00	1 80	2 22	40 02	59 98
61	D	1,000	do	do	20 00	8 00	4 00	60	74	13 34	6 66
61	E	7,000	do	do	125 00	56 00	28 00	4 20	5 20	93 40	31 60
61	F	1,000	do	do	20 00	8 00	4 00	60	74	13 34	6 66
62	.....	100	do	do	15 00	80	40	06	08	1 34	13 66
63	.....	100	do	do	2 00	80	40	06	08	1 34	66
64	.....	100	do	do	2 00	80	40	06	08	1 34	66
65	.....	100	do	do	2 00	80	40	06	08	1 34	66
66	A	4,000	do	do	65 00	32 00	16 00	2 40	2 98	53 38	11 62
66	B	200	do	do	5 00	1 60	80	12	14	2 66	2 34
66	C	4,000	do	do	65 00	32 00	16 00	2 40	2 98	53 38	11 62
67	B	700	do	do	15 00	5 60	2 80	42	52	9 34	5 66
67	C	800	do	do	15 00	6 40	3 20	48	59	10 67	4 33
68	A	1,500	do	do	25 00	12 00	6 00	90	1 12	20 02	4 98
68	B	600	do	do	12 00	4 80	2 40	36	44	8 00	4 00
68	C	400	do	do	8 00	3 20	1 60	24	28	5 32	2 68
68	D	500	do	do	10 00	4 00	2 00	30	37	6 67	3 33
69	A	200	do	Jane Turner	2 66	1 60	80	12	14	2 66	.....
69	B	200	do	United States	5 00	1 60	80	12	14	2 66	2 34
69	C	1,200	do	do	20 00	9 60	4 80	72	88	16 00	4 00
69	D	1,000	do	do	20 00	8 00	4 00	60	74	13 34	6 66
69	E	6,000	do	do	100 00	48 00	24 00	3 60	4 45	80 05	19 95
69	G	1,500	do	do	35 00	12 00	6 00	90	1 12	20 02	14 98
70	E	5,025	do	do	80 00	40 20	20 10	3 01	3 73	67 04	12 96
70	F	4,000	do	do	65 00	32 00	16 00	2 40	2 98	53 38	11 62
70	G	4,000	do	do	65 00	32 00	16 00	2 40	2 98	53 38	11 62
71	A	5,000	do	do	70 00	40 00	20 00	3 00	3 71	66 71	3 29
71	B	3,000	do	do	50 00	24 00	12 00	1 80	2 22	40 02	9 98
71	C	1,300	do	do	25 00	10 40	5 20	78	98	17 36	7 64
71	D	1,500	do	do	25 00	12 00	6 00	90	1 12	20 02	4 98
72	A	1,000	do	do	70 00	8 00	4 00	60	74	13 34	56 66
72	B	1,000	do	do	210 00	8 00	4 00	60	74	13 34	196 66
72	C	1,000	do	do	120 00	8 00	4 00	60	74	13 34	106 66
72	D	3,000	do	do	50 00	24 00	12 00	1 80	2 22	40 02	9 98
72	E	2,000	do	do	200 00	16 00	8 00	1 20	1 49	26 69	173 31

72	F	400	do	do	8 00	3 20	1 60	24	28	5 32	2 68
73		100	do	do	2 00	80	40	06	08	1 34	66
74		100	do	do	2 00	80	40	06	08	1 34	66
75		100	do	do	2 00	80	40	06	08	1 34	66
76	A	100	do	do	2 00	80	40	06	08	1 34	66
76	B	800	do	do	15 00	6 40	3 20	48	59	10 67	4 33
77	B	100	do	do	2 00	80	40	6	08	1 34	66
80	A	2,000	do	do	35 00	16 00	8 00	1 20	1 49	26 69	8 31
80	B	4,000	do	do	65 00	32 00	16 00	2 40	2 98	53 38	11 62
81	A	2,500	do	do	400 00	20 00	10 00	1 50	1 86	33 36	366 64
81	B	9,600	do	do	150 00	76 80	38 40	5 76	7 13	128 09	21 91
81	C	8,000	do	do	125 00	64 00	32 00	4 80	5 94	106 74	18 26
81	D	4,500	do	do	525 00	36 00	18 00	2 70	3 34	60 04	464 96
83		100	do	do	2 00	80	40	06	08	1 34	66
84		100	do	do	1 50	80	40	06	08	1 34	16
85		100	do	do	1 50	80	40	06	08	1 34	16
86		100	do	do	1 50	80	40	06	08	1 34	16
87	A	100	do	do	2 00	80	40	06	08	1 34	66
87	B	1,600	do	do	30 00	12 80	6 40	96	1 19	21 35	8 65
88	A	2,000	do	do	35 00	16 00	8 00	1 20	1 49	26 69	8 31
88	B	100	do	do	2 00	80	40	06	08	1 34	66
90	B	4,000	do	do	65 00	32 00	16 00	2 40	2 98	53 38	11 62
90	C	8,000	do	do	1,500 00	64 00	32 00	4 80	5 94	106 74	1,393 26
91		10,000	do	do	1,100 00	80 00	40 00	6 00	7 42	133 42	966 58
92		100	do	do	2 00	80	40	06	08	1 34	66
93		100	do	do	2 00	80	40	06	08	1 34	66
94		50	do	do	7 00	40	20	03	04	67	6 33
95		25	do	do	50	20	10	02	03	35	15
96		100	do	do	2 00	80	40	06	08	1 34	66
97		2,600	do	do	45 00	20 80	10 40	1 56	1 93	34 69	10 31
98	A	600	do	do	45 00	4 80	2 40	36	44	8 00	37 00
98	B	100	do	do	2 00	80	40	06	08	1 34	66
99	A	7,050	do	do	520 00	56 40	28 20	4 23	5 24	94 07	425 93
99	B	6,000	do	do	120 00	48 00	24 00	3 60	4 45	80 05	39 95
99	C	9,000	do	do	150 00	72 00	36 00	5 40	6 68	120 08	29 92
100		100	do	do	2 00	80	40	06	08	1 34	66
101		100	do	do	2 00	80	40	06	08	1 34	66
102		100	do	do	2 00	80	40	06	08	1 34	66
103		100	do	do	2 00	80	40	06	08	1 34	66
104		100	do	do	2 00	80	40	06	08	1 34	66
105		2,600	do	do	45 00	20 80	10 40	1 56	1 93	34 69	10 31
106		100	do	do	25 00	80	40	06	08	1 34	23 66
107	A	2,500	do	do	45 00	20 00	10 00	1 50	1 86	33 36	11 64
107	B	3,000	do	do	50 00	24 00	12 00	1 80	2 22	40 02	9 98
108		100	do	do	2 00	80	40	06	08	1 34	66
109		100	do	do	2 00	80	40	06	08	1 34	66
110		100	do	do	2 00	80	40	06	08	1 34	66
111		100	do	do	2 00	80	40	06	08	1 34	66
112		100	do	do	2 00	80	40	06	08	1 34	66
113		100	do	do	2 00	80	40	06	08	1 34	66
114		100	do	do	2 00	80	40	06	08	1 34	66
115	A	8,000	do	do	250 00	64 00	32 00	4 80	5 94	106 74	143 26

Abstract of sales in South Carolina for non-payment of United States direct taxes, &c.—Continued.

TOWN OF BEAUFORT—Continued.

Block.	Lot.	Valuation.	To whom assessed.	To whom sold or struck off.	Amount struck off at—	Tax.	Penalty.	Costs.	Interest.	Total.	Difference between amount sold for and charges.
115	B	$5,000	Not given	United States	$80 00	$40 00	$20 00	$3 00	$3 71	$66 71	$13 29
115	C	1,000	do	do	20 00	8 00	4 00	60	74	13 34	6 66
116		100	do	do	2 00	80	40	06	08	1 34	66
117		100	do	do	2 00	80	40	06	08	1 34	66
118		100	do	do	2 00	80	40	06	08	1 34	66
119		100	do	do	2 00	80	40	06	08	1 34	66
120		100	do	do	2 00	80	40	06	08	1 34	66
121		100	do	do	25 00	80	40	06	08	1 34	23 66
122		100	do	do	30 00	80	40	06	08	1 34	28 66
123	A	4,500	do	do	75 00	36 00	18 00	2 70	3 34	60 04	14 96
123	B	4,500	do	do	75 00	36 00	18 00	2 70	3 34	60 04	14 96
126		100	do	do	25 00	80	40	06	08	1 34	23 66
127		100	do	do	2 00	80	40	06	08	1 34	66
128		100	do	do	2 00	80	40	06	08	1 34	66
129		100	do	do	2 00	80	40	06	05	1 34	66
130		100	do	do	3 00	80	40	06	08	1 34	1 66
133		100	do	do	3 00	80	40	06	08	1 34	1 66
134		100	do	do	3 00	80	40	06	08	1 34	1 66
135		100	do	do	2 00	80	40	06	08	1 34	66
136		100	do	do	2 00	80	40	06	08	1 34	66
137		100	do	do	2 00	80	40	06	08	1 34	66

Abstract of sales in South Carolina for non-payment of United States direct taxes, &c.—Continued.

SAINT HELENA PARISH, OUTSIDE OF THE TOWN OF BEAUFORT.

Name of farm or plantation.	Acres.	Valuation.	To whom assessed.	To whom sold.	Amount sold for.	Tax.	Penalty.	Costs.	Interest.	Total.	Difference between amount sold for and amount charged.
The Oaks	500	$2,000 00	Not given	United States	$80 00	$40 00	$20 00	$3 00	$3 71	$66 71	$13 29
The Robert Fuller Place	500	2,000 00	do	Edward S. Philbrick	500 00	40 00	20 00	3 00	3 71	66 71	433 29
Comer Farm	300	1,200 00	do	do	300 00	24 00	12 00	1 80	2 22	40 02	259 98
Oakland	100	400 00	do	United States	15 00	8 00	4 00	60	74	13 84	1 66
Polanana	100	400 00	do	Edward S. Philbrick	100 00	8 00	4 00	60	74	13 34	86 66
Indian Hill	400	1,600 00	do	United States	225 00	32 00	16 00	2 40	2 98	53 38	171 62
Jenkins Neck	147	588 00	do	Edward S. Philbrick	155 00	11 76	5 88	88	1 10	19 62	135 38
The Croft Place	150	600 00	do	Mrs. Jane A. McCrea	150 00	12 00	6 00	90	1 12	20 02	129 98
Eddings Point	694	2,776 00	do	United States	100 00	55 52	27 76	4 16	5 14	92 58	7 42
The Marion Chaplin Place	303	1,212 00	do	do	50 00	24 24	12 12	1 81	2 23	40 40	9 60
Thomas James Fripp Place	614	2,456 00	do	do	110 00	49 12	24 56	3 68	4 58	81 94	28 06
Village Farm	200	800 00	do	N. S. English	100 00	16 00	8 00	1 20	1 49	26 69	73 31
Saint Helenaville Co. Pine Land.	90	360 00	do	United States	50 00	7 20	3 60	54	68	12 02	37 98
Saint Helenaville	60	240 00	do	do	160 00	4 80	2 40	36	44	8 00	152 00
The Daniel Pope Place	448	1,792 00	do	do	120 00	35 84	17 92	2 68	3 34	59 78	60 22
The John Fripp Big House	990	3,960 00	do	Edward S. Philbrick	1,000 00	79 20	39 60	5 94	7 35	132 09	867 91
Cedar Grove	205	820 00	do	United States	210 00	16 40	8 20	1 33	1 54	27 47	182 53
The Hamilton Fripp Place	200	800 00	do	do	30 00	16 00	8 00	1 20	1 49	26 69	3 31
Fripp Point Place	750	3,000 00	do	Edward S. Philbrick	750 00	60 00	30 00	4 50	5 57	100 07	649 93
Pine Grove	750	3,000 00	do	do	870 00	60 00	30 00	4 50	5 57	100 07	769 93
Coffin Point Place	1,438	5,752 00	do	do	1,150 00	115 04	57 52	8 62	10 67	191 85	958 15
The McTurrens Lands	531	2,124 00	do	United States	75 00	42 48	21 24	3 18	3 96	70 86	4 14
Cherry Hill	300	1,200 00	do	Edward S. Philbrick	380 00	24 00	12 00	1 80	2 22	40 02	339 98
Mulberry Hill	500	2,000 00	do	do	500 00	40 00	20 00	3 00	3 71	66 71	433 29
Hope Place	572	2,288 00	do	United States	80 00	45 76	22 88	3 43	4 26	76 33	3 67
Woodstock	610	2,440 00	do	do	90 00	48 80	24 40	3 66	4 53	81 39	8 61
Frogmore	1,060	4,240 00	do	do	170 00	84 80	42 40	6 36	7 85	141 41	28 59
Sea Side	944	3,776 00	do	do	850 00	75 52	37 76	3 66	7 00	123 94	726 06
The Ann Fripp Place	260	1,040 00	do	do	150 00	20 80	10 40	1 56	1 92	34 68	115 32
The Henry McTurren Place	199	796 00	do	Benj. B. Goodman	35 00	15 92	7 96	1 19	1 48	26 55	8 45
The Frank Pritchard Place	230	920 00	do	United States	50 00	18 40	9 20	1 38	1 72	30 70	19 30
Samford	600	2,400 00	do	F. W. Lawrence	600 00	48 00	24 00	3 60	4 45	80 05	519 95
The Jane Pritchard Place	160	640 00	do	United States	50 00	12 80	6 40	96	1 17	21 33	28 67
The Dr. Jenkins Place	615	2,460 00	do	F. W. Lawrence	1,025 00	49 20	24 60	3 69	4 58	82 07	942 93
The Paul Chaplin Place	608	2,432 00	do	George A. Chaplin	605 00	48 64	24 32	3 64	4 52	81 12	523 88
The Thomas B. Chaplin Place	376	1,504 00	do	United States	100 00	30 08	15 04	2 25	2 78	50 15	49 85

Abstract of sales in South Carolina for non-payment of United States direct taxes, &c.—Continued.

SAINT HELENA PARISH, OUTSIDE OF THE TOWN OF BEAUFORT—Continued.

Name of farm or plantation.	Acres.	Valuation.	To whom assessed.	To whom sold.	Amount sold for.	Tax.	Penalty.	Costs.	Interest.	Total.	Difference between amount sold for and amount charged.
Land's End	434	$1,736 00	Not given	United States	$200 00	$34 72	$17 36	$2 60	$3 22	$57 90	$142 10
The Ben Chaplin Place	165	660 00	do	do	125 00	13 20	6 60	99	1 22	22 01	102 99
The Grove	257	1,028 00	do	do	40 00	20 56	10 28	1 54	1 90	34 28	5 72
The Baker Place	328	1,312 00	do	do	50 00	26 24	13 12	1 96	2 42	43 74	6 26
Riverside	326	1,304 00	do	N. S. English	345 00	26 08	13 04	1 95	2 41	43 48	301 52
Bermuda	320	1,280 00	do	do	400 00	25 60	12 80	1 92	2 35	42 67	357 33
Lonesome Hill	150	600 00	do	Chauncey G. Robbins.	210 00	12 00	6 00	90	1 12	20 02	189 98
The Isaac Fripp Place	300	1,200 00	do	Edwin D. Golyer	500 00	24 00	12 00	1 80	2 22	40 02	459 98
The Scott Place	570	2,280 00	do	United States	200 00	45 60	22 80	3 42	4 23	76 05	123 95
Littlewood Point	250	1,000 00	do	do	300 00	20 00	10 00	1 50	1 86	33 36	266 64
The Edward Capers Place	266	1,064 00	do	Chauncey G. Robbins.	265 00	21 28	10 64	1 59	1 98	35 49	229 51
The Gabriel Capers Place	267	1,068 00	do	United States	180 00	21 36	10 68	1 60	1 98	35 62	144 38
The Oliver Fripp Place	232	928 00	do	do	300 00	18 56	9 28	1 39	1 73	30 96	269 04
The Lawrence Fripp Place	221	884 00	do	do	150 00	17 68	8 84	1 32	1 63	29 47	120 53
The Pritchard Place	232	928 00	do	do	160 00	18 56	9 28	1 39	1 73	30 96	129 04
Orange Grove	225	900 00	do	Edward Harwood	225 00	18 00	9 00	1 35	1 67	30 02	194 98
The Perry Place	299	1,196 00	do	United States	200 00	23 92	11 96	1 79	2 22	39 89	160 11
The Wallace Place	475	1,900 00	do	do	300 00	38 00	19 00	2 85	3 53	63 38	236 62
Fenton Place	80	320 00	do	do	100 00	6 40	3 20	48	60	10 68	89 32
Parsonage	121	484 00	do	Cornelia M. Ely	150 00	9 68	4 84	72	90	16 14	133 86
Wassau Island	400	1,600 00	do	United States	350 00	32 00	16 00	2 40	2 98	53 38	296 62
Dathaw Inlet	650	2,600 00	do	do	450 00	52 00	26 00	3 90	4 83	86 73	363 27
Dathaw Point	650	2,600 00	do	do	200 00	52 00	26 00	3 90	4 83	86 73	113 27
Coosaw	800	3,200 00	do	do	150 00	64 00	32 00	4 80	5 94	106 74	43 26
Corn Island	873	3,492 00	do	do	150 00	69 84	34 92	5 23	6 49	116 48	33 52
Morgan Island	255	1,020 00	do	Edward S. Philbrick	255 00	20 40	10 20	1 53	1 90	34 03	220 97
Harbor Island	400	80 00	do	United States	10 00	1 60	80	12	14	2 66	7 34
Hunting Island	4,000	800 00	do	do	2,000 00	16 00	8 00	1 20	1 49	26 69	1,972 31
Fripp's Island	1,000	200 00	do	do	10 00	4 00	2 00	30	37	6 67	3 33
Pritchard's Island	1,941	388 20	do	Edward Pritchard	21 00	7 76$\frac{20}{20}$	3 88$\frac{10}{20}$	58	74	12 97	8 03
Capers' Island	1,000	200 00	do	United States	10 00	4 00	2 00	30	37	6 67	3 33
Philips' Island	5,000	1,000 00	do	do	40 00	20 00	10 00	1 50	1 86	33 36	6 64
Pine Island	95	380 00	do	do	30 00	7 60	3 80	57	73	12 70	17 30
Palmetto Island	393	1,572 00	do	do	400 00	31 44	15 72	2 35	2 91	52 42	347 58
Orange Grove	304	1,216 00	do	do	300 00	24 32	12 16	1 82	2 26	40 56	259 44
The Hazel Farm	500	2,000 00	do	do	400 00	40 00	20 00	3 00	3 71	66 71	333 29
The Inlet	313	1,252 00	do	Edward W. Hooper	305 00	25 04	12 52	1 87	2 34	41 77	263 23

Distant Island	133	532 00	do	R. G. Gardner	245 00	10 64	5 32	79	99	17 74	227 26
Whitehall	300	1,200 00	do	United States	325 00	24 00	12 00	1 80	2 22	40 02	284 98
Fairfield	242	968 00	do	Henry G. Ely	185 00	19 36	9 68	1 45	1 79	32 28	152 72
Bluff Farm	260	1,040 00	do	United States	525 00	20 80	10 40	1 56	1 92	34 68	490 32
Bythewood Pine Land	360	1,440 00	do	do	60 00	28 80	14 40	2 16	2 67	48 03	11 97
The Wigg Place	410	1,640 00	do	do	175 00	32 80	16 40	2 46	3 04	54 70	120 30
The Joe Johnson Place	250	1,000 00	do	do	110 00	20 00	10 00	1 50	1 86	33 36	76 64
The James Chaplin and the Saxby Chaplin Place.	160	640 00	do	do	110 00	12 80	6 40	96	1 17	21 33	88 67
The Porter Place	200	800 00	do	do	125 00	16 00	8 00	1 20	1 49	26 69	98 31
Woodlawn	401	1,604 00	do	do	225 00	32 08	16 04	2 40	2 98	53 50	171 50
Pleasant Point	459	1,836 00	do	do	450 00	36 72	18 36	2 75	3 40	61 23	388 77
Fairlawn	220	880 00	do	do	210 00	17 60	8 80	1 32	1 64	29 36	180 64
Brickyard	570	2,280 00	do	do	350 00	45 60	22 80	3 42	4 24	76 06	273 94
The John Johnson Place	460	1,840 00	do	do	75 00	36 80	18 40	2 76	3 41	61 37	13 63
Saint Quentan	530	2,120 00	do	Joseph S. Reed	505 00	42 40	21 20	3 18	3 96	70 74	434 26
The Edward Cuthbert Place	450	1,800 00	do	do	445 00	36 00	18 00	2 70	3 34	60 04	384 96
Springfield	600	2,400 00	do	United States	100 00	48 00	24 00	3 60	4 45	80 05	19 95
The Pine Land Place	250	1,000 00	do	do	50 00	20 00	10 00	1 50	1 86	33 36	16 64
Laurel Hill	236	944 00	do	do	50 00	18 88	9 44	1 41	1 75	31 48	18 52
Laurel Bay	160	640 00	do	do	30 00	12 80	6 40	96	1 17	21 33	8 67
Lucy Point	196	784 00	do	do	70 00	15 68	7 84	1 17	1 45	26 14	43 86
Bolus Point	180	720 00	do	do	40 00	14 40	7 20	1 08	1 36	24 04	15 96
The Williams Place	163	652 00	do	do	30 00	13 04	6 52	97	1 20	21 73	8 27
Oakland	400	1,600 00	do	Kit Green	400 00	32 00	16 00	2 40	2 98	53 38	346 62
Ashdale	400	1,600 00	do	United States	260 00	32 00	16 00	2 40	2 98	53 38	206 62
The Capers Place	500	2,000 00	do	do	100 00	40 00	20 00	3 00	3 71	66 71	33 29
The Sams Pine Land	200	800 00	do	do	40 00	16 00	8 00	1 20	1 49	26 69	13 31
The Jenkins Pine Land	100	400 00	do	do	20 00	8 00	4 00	60	74	13 34	6 66
The Hermitage	300	1,200 00	do	do	400 00	24 00	12 00	1 80	2 22	40 02	359 98
The Fuller Hermitage	300	1,200 00	do	E. G. Dudley	405 00	24 00	12 00	1 80	2 22	40 02	364 98
The Cottage	250	1,000 00	do	United States	510 00	20 00	10 00	1 50	1 86	33 26	476 64
The Farm	250	1,000 00	do	do	100 00	20 00	10 00	1 50	1 86	33 36	66 64
Cedar Grove	350	1,400 00	do	Mrs. Jane A. McCrea	655 00	28 00	14 00	2 10	2 60	46 70	608 30
The Old Fort	700	2,800 00	do	United States	1,000 00	56 00	28 00	4 20	5 20	93 40	906 60
The Battery	500	2,000 00	do	S. W. Bennett	820 00	40 00	20 00	3 00	3 71	66 71	753 29
The Thompson Place	75	300 00	do	United States	125 00	6 00	3 00	45	55	10 00	115 00
Pigeon Point	80	320 00	do	do	140 00	6 40	3 20	48	59	10 67	129 33
Polly's Grove	64	256 00	do	do	75 00	5 12	2 56	38	48	8 54	66 46
The Bell Place	95	380 00	do	do	190 00	7 60	3 80	57	71	12 68	177 32
The Campbell Place	148	592 00	do	do	200 00	11 84	5 92	88	1 10	19 74	180 26
The Barnwell Place	37	148 00	do	Jonathan M. Andrus	110 00	2 96	1 48	22	27	4 93	105 07
Woodland	75	300 00	do	United States	100 00	6 00	3 00	45	55	10 00	90 00
The Henry Stuart Place	120	480 00	do	do	200 00	9 60	4 80	72	89	16 01	183 99
Club House	417	1,668 00	do	K. & A. W. Hall	415 00	33 36	16 68	2 50	3 09	55 63	359 37
Button Hill	428	1,712 00	do	A. P. Rockwell	465 00	34 24	17 12	2 56	3 18	57 10	407 90
The Swamp Place	500	2,000 00	do	United States	80 00	40 00	20 00	3 00	3 71	66 71	13 29
The Baker Cherry Hill	150	600 00	do	F. Spaulding	150 00	12 00	6 00	90	1 12	20 02	129 98
The Pine Land Tract	1,000	4,000 00	do	United States	200 00	80 00	40 00	6 00	7 42	133 42	66 58
Half-Way House	500	2,000 00	do	do	425 00	40 00	20 00	3 00	3 71	66 71	358 29
Gray Hill	440	1,760 00	do	do	75 00	35 20	17 60	2 64	3 28	58 72	16 28
Spring Hill	400	1,600 00	do	do	225 00	32 00	16 00	2 40	2 98	53 38	171 62

Abstract of sales in South Carolina for non-payment of United States direct taxes, &c.—Continued.

SAINT HELENA PARISH, OUTSIDE OF THE TOWN OF BEAUFORT—Continued.

Name of farm or plantation.	Acres.	Valuation.	To whom assessed.	To whom sold.	Amount sold for.	Tax.	Penalty.	Costs.	Interest.	Total.	Difference between amount sold for and amount charged.
Magnolia	430	$1,720 00	Not given	United States	$100 00	$34 40	$17 20	$2 58	$3 20	$57 38	$42 62
The Middleton Stuart Place	660	2,640 00	do	do	100 00	52 80	26 40	3 96	4 89	88 05	11 95
Otahietee	600	2,400 00	do	do	100 00	48 00	24 00	3 60	4 45	80 05	19 95
The William Perryclear Place	616	2,464 00	do	do	125 00	49 28	24 64	3 69	4 58	82 19	42 81
Orangeburg	150	600 00	do	do	130 00	12 00	6 00	90	1 12	20 02	109 98
Pankie Island and Talbird Place.	130	520 00	do	S. W. Bennett	75 00	10 40	5 20	78	98	17 36	57 64
The Ann Perryclear Place and Jack Island Place.	415	1,660 00	do	United States	400 00	33 20	16 60	2 49	3 08	55 37	344 63
Oak Mulligan	700	2,800 00	do	do	250 00	56 00	28 00	4 20	5 20	93 40	156 60
Red House	510	2,040 00	do	do	220 00	40 80	20 40	3 06	3 78	68 04	151 96
Edgerly	800	3,200 00	do	Solomon Peck	710 00	64 00	32 00	4 80	5 94	106 74	603 26
The John F. Chaplin Place	550	2,200 00	do	United States	550 00	44 00	22 00	3 30	4 09	73 39	476 61
Oakland	500	2,000 00	do	do	80 00	40 00	20 00	3 00	3 71	66 71	13 29
The Henry Fuller Place	140	560 00	do	Henry G. Ely	250 00	11 20	5 60	84	1 04	18 68	231 32
The Pickpocket Tract	290	1.160 00	do	H. G. Judd	200 00	23 20	11 60	1 74	2 16	38 70	161 30
Salem	400	1,600 00	do	J. C. Mayo and F. Spaulding.	300 00	32 00	16 00	2 40	2 98	53 38	246 62
The Lloyd Field	240	960 00	do	United States	75 00	19 20	9 60	1 44	1 78	32 02	42 98
Murkle Bush	450	1,800 00	do	do	250 00	36 00	18 00	2 70	3 34	60 04	189 96
The Retreat	600	2,400 00	do	do	500 00	48 00	24 00	3 60	4 45	80 05	419 95
The Street	510	2,040 00	do	G. C. Fox	240 00	40 80	20 40	3 06	3 78	68 04	171 96
The Ellis Cherry Hill	671	2,684 00	do	United States	175 00	53 68	26 84	4 02	5 02	89 56	85 44
Little Baynard	180	720 00	do	do	200 00	14 40	7 20	1 08	1 36	24 04	175 96
Jericho	185	740 00	do	do	210 00	14 80	7 40	1 11	1 38	24 69	185 31
The Oswald Place	173	692 00	do	do	175 00	13 84	6 92	1 03	1 30	23 09	151 91
Shell Point	330	1,320 00	do	John and Augustus E. Conant.	305 00	26 40	13 20	1 98	2 46	44 04	260 96
The Tom Baynard Place	750	3,000 00	do	United States	475 00	60 00	30 00	4 50	5 57	100 07	374 93
The Ellis Place	66	264 00	do	do	150 00	5 28	2 64	39	48	8 79	141 21
The Sarah Ellis Place	200	800 00	do	R. K. Carleton	330 00	16 00	8 00	1 20	1 49	26 69	303 31
The Robert Ellis Place	80	320 00	do	John C. Graham	145 00	6 40	3 20	48	60	10 68	134 32
The Rhett Place	1,647	6,588 00	do	United States	300 00	131 76	65 88	9 88	12 25	219 77	80 23
The Campbell Pine Land	120	480 00	do	do	25 00	9 60	4 80	72	88	16 00	9 00
The Habersham Place	750	3,000 00	do	do	300 00	60 00	30 00	4 50	5 57	100 07	199 93
Prospect Hill	1,022	4,088 00	do	do	300 00	81 76	40 88	6 13	7 61	136 38	163 62
Grove Hill	560	2,240 00	do	do	160 00	44 80	22 40	3 36	4 14	74 70	85 30
Burlington	400	1,600 00	do	do	1,600 00	32 00	16 00	2 40	2 98	53 38	106 62

Laurel Bay	800	3,200 00	....do	....do	650 00	64 00	32 00	4 80	5 94	106 74	543 26
Woodward	800	3,200 00	....do	....do	350 00	64 00	32 00	4 80	5 94	106 74	243 26
The Capers Place	225	900 00	....do	Shepard D. Gilbert	200 00	18 00	9 00	1 35	1 67	30 02	169 98
Little Island and Cedar Grove Place.	300	1,200 00	....do	E. B. Sawtell and J. R. Dannett.	195 00	24 00	12 00	1 80	2 22	40 02	154 98
Old House	489	1,956 00	....do	Shepard D. Gilbert	265 00	39 12	19 56	2 93	3 64	65 25	199 75
Rice Park	1,160	4,640 00	....do	United States	200 00	92 80	46 40	6 96	8 60	154 76	45 24
The Fuller Place	1,200	4,800 00	....do	....do	200 00	96 00	48 00	7 20	8 91	160 11	39 89
The Elliott Place, No. 1	695	2,780 00	....do	....do	125 00	55 60	27 80	4 17	5 16	92 73	32 27
The Elliott Place, No. 2	304	1,216 00	....do	....do	60 00	24 32	12 16	1 82	2 25	40 55	19 45
The Elliott Place, No. 3	400	1,600 00	....do	....do	75 00	32 00	16 00	2 40	2 98	53 38	21 62
The Means Place	754	3,016 00	....do	....do	140 00	60 32	30 16	4 52	5 59	100 59	39 41

SAINT LUKE'S PARISH, SOUTH CAROLINA.

The Point, including Bob Island.	1,000	$4,000 00	William Elliott, jr	United States	$1,050 00	$80 00	$40 00	$18 00	$17 00	$155 00	$895 00
Pine Lands	1,000	4,000 00	Owner unknown	....do	700 00	80 00	40 00	18 00	17 00	155 00	545 00
Fish Hall	1,300	5,200 00	General Drayton	....do	3,000 00	104 00	52 00	23 40	22 10	201 50	2,798 50
Coggins Point and Springfield	900	3,600 00	William Pope, sr	....do	600 00	72 00	36 00	16 20	15 30	139 50	460 50
Grass Lawn	600	2,400 00	Richard Pope	....do	350 00	48 00	24 00	10 80	10 20	93 00	257 00
Matthews Land, or No. 4	400	1,600 00	Frank Pope	....do	325 00	32 00	16 00	7 20	6 80	62 00	263 00
Cherry Hill	400	1,600 00	Mrs. M. B. Pope	....do	425 00	32 00	16 00	7 20	6 80	62 00	363 00
Marshland and Chaplin	1,000	4,000 00	James Wells	....do	500 00	80 00	40 00	18 00	17 00	155 00	345 00
Gardner	1,000	4,000 00	A. B. Stoney	Benjamin F. Skinner	1,075 00	80 00	40 00	18 00	17 00	155 00	920 00
Lemington	1,100	4,400 00	Joseph Pope, sr	Freeman Dod	1,700 00	88 00	44 00	19 80	18 70	170 50	1,529 50
Hill Place	1,100	4,400 00	Mrs. Samuel G. Lawton	United States	1,100 00	88 00	44 00	19 80	18 70	170 50	929 50
Brickyard	1,100	4,400 00	F. W. Ficklin	John E. White	725 00	88 00	44 00	19 80	18 70	170 50	554 50
Possum Point	1,000	4,000 00	James Wells	United States	1,000 00	80 00	40 00	18 00	17 00	155 00	845 00
Point Comfort	1,000	4,000 00	William Pope, sr	....do	1,000 00	80 00	40 00	18 00	17 00	155 00	845 00
Lawton Place	1,800	7,200 00	Mrs. Samuel G. Lawton	....do	3,000 00	144 00	72 00	32 40	30 60	279 00	2,721 00
Braddock's Point	1,000	4,000 00	William E. Baynard's estate.	....do	1,000 00	80 00	40 00	18 00	17 00	155 00	845 00
Spanish Wells	600	2,400 00	....do	....do	900 00	48 00	24 00	10 80	10 20	93 00	807 00
Muddy Creek Place	700	2,800 00	....do	Richard M. Bell	700 00	56 00	28 00	12 60	11 90	108 50	591 50
Otter Hole	900	3,600 00	Capt. M. Stuart	Low Alford, John S. Littell, and John Caldwell.	1,025 00	72 00	36 00	16 20	15 30	139 50	885 50
Honey Horn	1,000	4,000 00	W. J. Graham	Freeman Dod	2,600 00	80 00	40 00	18 00	17 00	155 00	2,445 00
Jenkins Island, including Hog Island.	300	1,200 00	Frank Pope	United States	1,500 00	24 00	12 00	5 40	5 10	46 50	1,453 50
Fairfield	350	1,400 00	Mrs. S. B. Stoney	....do	900 00	28 00	14 00	6 30	5 95	54 25	845 75
Cotton Hope	400	1,600 00	William Pope, sr	....do	1,000 00	32 00	16 00	7 20	6 80	62 00	938 00
Seabrook	1,500	6,000 00	Seabrook	....do	3,200 00	120 00	60 00	27 00	25 50	232 50	2,967 50
Pinckney Island	2,000	8,000 00	Miss H. Pinckney	....do	2,100 00	160 00	80 00	36 00	34 00	310 00	1,790 00
Dawfuskie Island:
The Hague Point Place	1,100	4,400 00	William Pope, sr., or Stoddard.	....do	170 81	88 00	44 00	14 25	24 56	170 81	.....
The Webb Plantation	300	1,200 00	"Webb"	....do	46 58	24 00	12 00	3 88	6 70	46 58	.....
The Dunn Plantation	700	2,800 00	Webb and Stoddard	....do	250 00	56 00	28 00	9 07	15 62	108 69	141 31

Abstract of sales in South Carolina for non-payment of United States direct taxes, &c.—Continued.

SAINT LUKE'S PARISH, SOUTH CAROLINA—Continued.

Name of farm or plantation.	Acres.	Valuation.	To whom assessed.	To whom sold.	Amount sold for.	Tax.	Penalty.	Costs.	Interest.	Total.	Difference between amount sold for and amount charged.
Bull's Island:
The Col. Seabrook Plantation No. 1.	700	$2,800 00	Col. E. N. Seabrook...	Benjamin F. Wade, Simon Cameron, James R. Doolittle.	$2,700 00	$56 00	$28 00	$9 07	$15 62	$108 69	$2,591 31
The Baynard Plantation..	600	2,400 00	Estate of W. E. Baynard.	United States.....	93 17	48 00	24 00	7 77	13 40	93 17	.....
The Col. Seabrook Plantation No. 2.	200	1,600 00	Col. E. N. Seabrook...	.....do	550 00	32 00	16 00	5 76	8 93	62 69	487 31
Pine Island	80	320 00	J. B. Chaplin.....	.....do	200 00	6 40	3 20	1 03	1 78	12 41	187 59
Page Island	30	120 00	Unknown.....	.....do	110 00	2 40	1 20	38	67	4 65	105 35
Savage Island	70	280 00	Crowell.....	G. W. Atwood and J. G. Dodge.	250 00	5 60	2 80	90	1 56	10 86	239 14
Barataria Island.....	150	600 00	Unknown.....	United States.....	23 29	12 00	6 00	1 94	3 35	23 29	.....
Spring Island	2,450	9,800 00	Estate of George B. Edwards.	.....do	10,500 00	196 00	98 00	31 72	54 71	380 43	10,119 57
Daw Island.....	100	400 00	Stephen Elliott, jr	David H. Rice	300 00	8 00	4 00	1 28	2 23	15 51	284 49
Lemon Island	100	400 00	Dr. M. M. Sams.....	.....do	475 00	8 00	4 00	1 28	2 23	15 51	459 49
Rose Island	100	400 00	Estate George B. Edwards.	.....do	452 00	8 00	4 00	1 28	2 23	15 51	436 49
Total.....	.....	905,842 20	.....	.....	108,494 47	11,911 04	5,955 52	1,220 87	1,432 81	20,520 05	87,974 42

Abstract of sales in South Carolina for non-payment of United States direct taxes, &c.—Cont'd.

RECAPITULATION.

Proceeds from sales to individuals, as shown by the abstract of sales-book	$30,932 29
Deduct amount for which the Col. Seabrook Plantation No. 1 was struck off (not paid for)	2,700 00
Actual proceeds from sales to individuals	28,232 29
Tax, penalty, costs, and interest on lands sold to individuals		$3,424 18
Amount received on sales to individuals at the original tax sales in excess of taxes, penalties, costs, and interest			$24,808 11
After the United States acquired title to the lands stricken off to it, as shown by the abstract, sales were made of certain portions of said real estate, and amounts received, as follows:
From Army and Navy sales	144,460 76
From head of family sales	33,375 46
Proceeds for school-fund under the President's instructions of September 16, 1863	26,797 12
Proceeds for school-fund under the President's instructions of July 16, 1866	56,515 35
Proceeds from sales to loyal citizens	41,768 00
Proceeds from sales made under the act of June 8, 1872	12,761 17
Tax, penalty, costs, and interest on the lands which were bid in by the commissioners for the United States		16,987 18
Amount received from sales of real estate after the United States acquired title to it in excess of the taxes, &c., charged against the lands which were bid in for the United States			298,690 68
Total amount received from the original sales to individuals and from sales after the United States acquired title to the lands sold	343,910 15
Total tax, penalty, costs, and interest on the lands which were sold to individuals and on lands which were bid in, not including the tax on the Col. Seabrook Plantation No. 1		20,411 36
Total proceeds from all sales in excess of the taxes, penalties, costs, and interest charged on all the lands sold to individuals and bid in			323,498 79
The expenses of the board of commissioners are estimated at			150,000 00
Which, deducted from the surplus proceeds from sales, leaves a balance of			173,498 79

.....	.....	.....	.....
.....	.....	.....	.....
.....	.....	.....	.....
.....	.....	.....	.....
.....	.....	.....	.....
.....	.....	.....	.....
.....	.....	.....	.....
.....	.....	.....	.....
.....	.....	.....	.....
.....	.....	.....	.....
.....	.....	.....	.....
.....	.....	.....	.....
.....	.....	.....	.....
.....	.....	.....	.....
.....	.....	.....	.....

47TH CONGRESS, 1st Session. } SENATE. { EX. DOC. No. 83.

LETTER

FROM

THE SECRETARY OF THE TREASURY,

TRANSMITTING,

In compliance with Senate resolution of January 16, 1882, the report of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, with copies of papers containing charges complaints, and reports concerning irregularities in the collection of internal revenue in the sixth district of North Carolina.

FEBRUARY 2, 1882.—Referred to the Committee on Finance and ordered to be printed.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT,
February 1, 1882.

SIR: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of Senate resolution of January 16, 1882, which is in the following words:

Resolved, That the Secretary of the Treasury be directed to furnish the Senate copies of all charges, complaints, reports, or other information concerning irregularities in the collection of internal revenue in the sixth collection district of North Carolina which may be on file in any of the offices of his department; and also copies of any orders by the collector thereof forbidding the arresting of or taking out of process of arrest against offenders against the revenue laws of the United States in said district.

In reply I transmit herewith the report of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue upon the subject, accompanied with copies of papers containing charges, complaints, and reports, and other information now on file in this department, concerning irregularities in the collection of internal revenue in the sixth district of North Carolina.

Very respectfully,

CHAS. J. FOLGER,
Secretary.

HON. DAVID DAVIS,
President pro tempore of the Senate.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT,
OFFICE OF INTERNAL REVENUE,
Washington, January 30, 1882.

SIR: I have the honor to return Senate resolution relative to certain charges, complaints, and reports concerning the collection of internal revenue in the sixth district of North Carolina, with such information on the subject as is contained in this office.

I transmit herewith copies of affidavits made by J. R. Davis, I. T.

McIntosh, W. C. Morrison, P. F. Somers, and J. N. Summers, marked Exhibits A, B, C, D, and E.

I have to inform you that before the passage of the Senate resolution Collector Mott was called upon to reply to the charges contained in the affidavits above referred to. He has filed his answers thereto, copies of which are transmitted, marked Exhibits F, G, H, I, K, and L.

I also inclose a copy of Collector Mott's instructions to his deputies, in regard to making complaints as the basis for the issuing of warrants, together with copies of my letter directing the revocation of said order and the collector's reply thereto, marked, respectively, M, N, and O.

A list of subordinate officers dismissed on charges in the sixth district of North Carolina during Collector Mott's administration is inclosed herewith, marked Exhibit P. The original papers containing the charges are on file in this department subject to inspection.

These papers, with the exhibits herein inclosed, comprise all the information on file in this office relative to irregularities in the collection of the revenue in the sixth district of North Carolina.

It is proper to state, however, that the reports of examining officers on the office and district are not included. These reports do not contain charges. They are the criticisms of the agents on the current work of the office and district, and their suggestions for the improvement of the service.

In the year 1877 vigorous measures were adopted to suppress illicit distilling and the illicit manufacture of tobacco in the sixth district of North Carolina. There were then in that district 48 registered grain distilleries operated under government supervision.

During that year, in the western district of North Carolina, prosecutions for violations of the internal revenue laws were instituted to the number of 113 cases, 64 of which were for illicit distilling, and 49 for other violations. In the following year, 1878, there were 630 prosecutions, 490 of which were for illicit distilling, and 140 for other violations of the internal revenue laws. In 1879 the number of cases was 789; 433 for illicit distilling, and 356 other violations. In 1880, 197 cases were instituted, 125 of which were for illicit distilling and 72 for other violations. In 1881 there were 234 prosecutions, 121 for illicit distilling and 113 for other violations.

During this whole period 1,107 distilleries and 6 tobacco factories were seized. At present the tobacco blockading business has practically ceased.

In proportion as illicit distilling has been suppressed, regular government distilleries have been established, until now the number of registered distilleries has increased from 48 to 359. This satisfactory result has been brought about in the face of every obstacle that could be thrown in the way by the illicit distiller and the tobacco blockader, and the people sympathizing with them in their efforts to defraud the government.

Public sentiment, however, has changed remarkably within the last three years, and to-day the officers of the government have the almost unanimous support of the district in enforcing the laws.

The system of inspections and examinations has brought the office up to the highest standard, and the improvement in the condition of the district is equally gratifying.

The resolution fixes no time from which the report should commence in regard to irregularities. Its terms leave a doubt whether it was intended to apply to every officer connected with the service, or simply to the collector and his office force, and whether the charges referred to are charges that have been passed upon and disposed of, or charges or complaints that are pending.

For the purpose of giving full information upon the subject I have concluded to go back to 1877, when the operations against illicit distillers were systematized.

Matters concerning certain contributions made by officers of the district for the purpose of facilitating the transaction of business have been investigated and passed upon. The amounts contributed for this purpose were about four hundred dollars, and have been fully accounted for. As the result of the investigation into this matter, an additional allowance was made for office expenses, and the collector was informed that the practice of receiving contributions for such a purpose was regarded with disfavor by this office, and it has accordingly been discontinued. The papers in connection with this subject are quite voluminous, but copies will be furnished if desired.

Very respectfully,

GREEN B. RAUM,
Commissioner.

Hon. CHARLES J. FOLGER,
Secretary of the Treasury.

EXHIBIT A.

Affidavit of J. R. Davis.

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA,
West. Dist. of N. C.:

J. R. Davis, a U. S. S. & G. for J. J. Mott, collr. int. rev., 6th dist. of N. C., being by me, A. D. Cowles, D. C. U. S. courts for said dist., duly sworn, deposes and says that from Oct., 1878, to April, 1879, he was on duty as S. & G. at the distillery of T. M. Cooper, in said district. That he promised and agreed and did pay T. M. Cooper, the distiller, $15 per mo. for board. After said deponent was transferred to J. E. Calvert's distillery, said Cooper wrote several letters asking for, and stating a balance of, a/c. Deponent protested against paying anything else, as he owed said Cooper no money, with the exception of a few dollars, not more than $5 store a/c. This additional account was made and stated for $15 per month more than he, the deponent, had agreed to and paid said Cooper, or $30. Deponent refused to pay $15 extra per mo. during the 9 mos. he was on duty; and received from the said Cooper a letter stating that he would in the instance of non-payment file said a/c with the collector, with whom he is on very intimate terms, being himself a very prominent politician and citizen. Deponent, fearing that official force would compel him to pay amount and incur Collr. Mott's displeasure, sent Mr. Cooper at several times different amounts of money in part payment of this account, and finally an a/c was filed in office of Collr. Mott for $45 by said Cooper as a claim for balance, which said amount was demanded of the said J. R. Davis, deponent, by Chief Clerk W. J. Coite, and paid under a protest and explanation of exorbitant charge by said Cooper. While deponent was on duty at the distillery of J. E. Calvert he agreed and paid $10 per mo. for board. After he was transferred from said J. E. Calvert's distillery, said Calvert made out & account for $10 per mo. more, amounting to $130.00, which said a/c was filed in Collr. J. J. Mott's office, and under deponent's protest was paid by money retained by order of Collr. Mott from moneys due deponent for services rendered as S. & G. Deponent had a conversation with Collr. Mott about the matter before payment, and denied then, as he does now, that he owed J. E. Calvert any money whatever. Notwithstanding, the said Collr. Mott ordered the money to be retained, and it was retained to deponent's great loss. Deponent makes this affidavit freely and of his own accord.

J. R. DAVIS.

Subscribed to and sworn before me this 26 day of Nov., A. D. 1881.
[L. S.] A. D. COWLES, D. C.

EXHIBIT B.

Affidavit of J. T. McIntosh.

STATESVILLE, N. C.,
Oct. 11, 1881.

WESTERN DIST. N. C. JUDICIAL,
6th Int. Rev. Dist.:

J. T. McIntosh, U. S. gauger and storekeeper, resident of Taylorsville, Alexander Co., in said dist., deposes and says that on or about the month of March, 1881, he received a letter from J. J. Mott, collector of int. revenue of the 6th dist. N. C., containing a check due him, the said J. T. McIntosh, U. S. gauger and st'k'r aforesaid, for services rendered as such at the distillery of Little & Bro. for the month of February, A. D. 1881, of said county, district aforesaid, of the value of ninety-eight $\frac{00}{100}$ dolls. ($98.00), which said check and amount thereof was already due deponent for actual services rendered. The said collector of int. rev., J. J. Mott, however instructed him to indorse the said check and remit to him at Washington, D. C., care of Ebbitt House, as he was behind on campaign fund of 1881, and had to settle at that time on or about the month of March, 1881, with parties to whom he was indebted for advances. Deponent says further that he answered the said J. J. Mott, collector as aforesaid, that he supposed the campaign debt had been arranged in full, and at that time he did not feel able to contribute the amount asked for; but, if the fund had not been arranged, that he was willing to contribute whatever amount was right. At this time the deponent says the said J. J. Mott, collector as aforesaid, was due him, the said J. T. McIntosh, U. S. st'k'r and g'r, one hundred and four $\frac{00}{100}$ dollars for services rendered as such officer at the distillery of Price & Bro., of Alexander Co., in said district, for the month of June, A. D. 1880, just nine months previous.

Knowing that the appropriations for the fiscal year A. D. 1880 expired on June the 30th of said year, I presumed the cause of non-remittance was due to the complete expenditure of said appropriation of said year, and that I had to wait for a deficiency bill to be passed by Congress for several months (probably 3 or 4). He did communicate with said office on the subject of said check, on or about the —— of ——, A. D. 1881. He, the said deponent, J. T. McIntosh, wrote a letter to W. J. Coite, chief clerk of J. J. Mott, collector aforesaid, asking for a check to be remitted for services rendered as U. S. st'k'r and g'r for the month of June, A. D. 1880, aforesaid. On June 27, 1881, —— —— the deponent received net amount one hundred and four $\frac{00}{100}$ dolls. by registered letter in currency. The deponent knows of his personal knowledge that when a voucher on 107½ is filled and officer is to be paid, a check is made out payable at the Raleigh Nat'l Bank at Raleigh, N. C. The deponent knows that it is the usual custom in said office to pay said officers always by check on said bank, and is confident that said amount was made payable to him in said manner; that he never indorsed any such check, and if the check is produced now on file in said Raleigh Nat'l Bank he will swear that the signature is not his, and that he did not authorize or give a power of attorney to any person whatsoever to endorse said check.

J. T. MCINTOSH.

Subscribed to and sworn before me this 11 day of Oct., A. D. 1881.
[L. S.]
A. D. COWLES, D. C.
U. S. Court, West. Dist. of N. Carolina.

EXHIBIT C.

Affidavit of W. C. Morrison.

STATE OF N. CAROLINA,
Co. of Iredell:

W. C. Morrison, a S. & G. for J. J. Mott, collector int. rev. 6th dist. of N. C., being duly sworn, deposes and says, that the said collector was due him as S. & G. for services rendered during the mo. of July, A. D. 1880, $108.00. That Dep. Coll'r. A. B. Gillespie came to him with a blank check asking him, the said W. C. Morrison, to endorse said check, as the collector wanted some money for campaign fund; he accordingly did as requested, and a few weeks afterwards received a letter from Washington stating that Mr. Jewell had received $25.00 from him, the said Morrison. Deponent says he never sent any money to said Jewell, and only contributed one check of $108.00. The collector evidently retained $83.00 of this check.

Deponent swears he paid at several times 1 % of his salary for incidental expenses of collector's office.

W. C. MORRISON.

Subscribed to and sworn before me this 25th day of Oct., A. D., 1881.
A. D. COWLES, D. C.

EXHIBIT D.

Affidavit of P. F. Somers.

STATE OF N. CAROLINA,
West District:

Personally came before me, P. F. Somers, U. S. S. and gauger of the 6th dist. of N. Carolina, who, being duly sworn, deposes and says, that there was an account for services rendered as above officer for J. J. Mott, collector int. revenue of said dist., and State aforesaid, for the month of January, A. D. 1880, amounting to $56.00, which said amount was by him demanded and never paid. That there was an account filed in J. J. Mott's office for services rendered as S. and G. for said J. J. Mott in said dist. amounting to $44.00 for the month of February, A. D. 1880, and an account similar for the month of March, 1880, amounting to $72.00, neither of which have ever been paid to this deponent. On making demand of cashier in said Mott's office, he told deponent that the collector had the checks. Deponent says that there was also $3.50 of his April, 1880, pay reserved by said J. J. Mott, collector, for what purpose he is equally unable to say. That the collector of int. rev. was due him for services rendered in the month of May, 1880, $46.80, and that he has never received one cent of the foregoing amounts. Deponent positively swears that he owed said J. J. Mott no money, nor did he ever instruct him to appropriate the checks for above amounts of money due him to said deponent. Deponent swears, however, that he was asked by said collector to contribute some funds to campaign fund of 1880, and that he consented to give the value of a month's services, and did, in obedience to demand and promise, give the salary of the month of June, 1880, to said collector for said purpose, amounting to $104.00. The deponent believes the said J. J. Mott appropriated to his own private use the other specified amounts, contrary to law and to deponent's great loss.

P. F. SOMERS.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this 13th day of Oct., A. D 1881.
[L. S.] A. D. COWLES, D. C.

EXHIBIT E.

Affidavit of I. N. Summers.

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA,
Western Dist. of N. C., Statesville, N. C.:

Personally came I. N. Summers, a U. S. storekeeper & gauger of the 6th dist. of N. C., who, being duly sworn, deposes & says that he was a U. S. S. & gr. in March, 1880; that during that month he performed services 27 days at J. Bowles' distillery, and was to receive according to the rate of compensation fixed by the Hon. Commissioner of Int. Rev. $4 per day, amounting to $108, payable by the collector of int. rev., J. J. Mott, collector of the dist. aforesaid. Deponent, after filing account for above services with said collector on or about the 5th of April, 1880, made demand on J. J. Mott, collector as aforesaid, for payment; said collector refused payment, stating that one A. B. Gillespie, a deputy collector of int. revenue for said collector of said district, had his, the said J. J. Mott, collector's check payable to the deponent for said amount. Soon, then, after the deponent met the said deputy collector, A. B. Gillespie, and, acting on information given him by the collector, demanded of him, the said A. B. Gillespie, the said check for the amount for services rendered as above stated. The deputy collector denied the allegation of J. J. Mott, collector, that he had it, asserting that he had nothing to do with his (deponent's) check. Whereupon the deponent soon thereafter made another demand on J. J. Mott, collector, for said check, who told deponent that the election was coming on and he would have to call on the boys to help him a little. Deponent was surprised, after his declaring that his deputy had the check, that he would demand it for this purpose, but was willing if the money would be applied, and it was the general rule of storekeepers & gaugers to contribute over one-twelfth of their year's salary for such purpose; that he would give too. Deponent was not then asked to endorse said check, but on or about the 5th day of July, 1880, three months after the usual time of payment of such officers, the same deputy collector, A. B. Gillespie, approached said deponent with a blank check asking him to endorse his name thereon for services for the month of March, A. D. 1880, as aforesaid. Deponent did so, when Gillespie placed it in his pocket, remarking to deponent, "Summers, don't say nothing about this at all; let it all go; if anybody gets anything we will be the men." Deponent swears that he contributed one per cent. of his salary for months to defray, as he was informed in demand of collector, office expenses; in all he should say $35.00. Deponent understood that there was a letter sent from the commissioner's office to storekeepers and gaugers making inquiry of them as to the fact and the amount contributed. Deponent received a letter from H. X. Dwire, a deputy collector in said J. J. Mott's office at Statesville, telling him that if he should receive such letter from Hon. G. B. Raum, commissioner, to answer him, the said commissioner, to the effect that he had paid only about three or four dollars for said office expenses. Deponent never received a letter of such purport from the hon. commissioner. The deponent makes this deposition of his own accord and believes that all or a great part thereof of the above amounts were applied to said collector, J. J. Mott, private use.

I. N. SUMMERS, S. & G.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this the 19th day of October, A. D. 1881.

A. D. COWLES, D. C.

EXHIBIT F.

Reply to affidavit of J. R. Davis.

UNITED STATES INTERNAL REVENUE
COLLECTOR'S OFFICE, 6TH DIST., N. C.,
Statesville, Jan'y 16, 1882.

Hon. G. B. RAUM,
Comm'r of Int. Revenue, Washington, D. C.:

SIR: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of a copy of an affidavit made November 26, 1881, by J. R. Davis, U. S. storekeeper and gauger, in this dist., in the matter of his pay.

In reply, I respectfully state that an examination of the facts show that the said J. R. Davis was on duty at the distillery operated by Mr. T. N. Cooper; and, while there, Davis boarded with Mr. Cooper, who subsequently filed a complaint that Davis had not paid his board.

It has always been my policy to have all subordinates pay any and all bills contracted by them, while in the line of official duty, believing that a contrary policy would in many instances bring scandal on the public service; but I do not recall having said anything to Davis on this subject. He is mistaken in his allegation that I brought to bear upon him any official influence to force him to pay, other than the general rule in such matters above referred to.

Davis says: "* * * Fearing that official force would compel him to pay amount and incur Coll'r Mott's displeasure, sent Mr. Cooper, at several times, different amounts of money in part payment of this account, and finding an a/c was filed in office of Coll'r Mott for $45.00 by said Cooper, * * * which said amount was demanded * * * and paid under protest * * *." To this I reply, that so far as is shown by the records of this office, the only order paid to Mr. T. N. Cooper on a/c of J. R. Davis, is one for $25.00, as inclosed herewith, and marked D. I would further add (here), that if Davis was not justly indebted to Cooper, what cause would he have to fear any "official force" from any one; and why, if the claim was illegal, did he voluntarily (on his part) send to Cooper, "at several times, different amounts of money in part payment" of the said claim. In this matter Mr. Davis' statement is untrue, and I am satisfied that the amount paid by him, "at several times," was only the just amount due to Mr. Cooper for board, at the rate of $15.00 per month, the payment of which Davis had been endeavoring to avoid.

In that portion of his affidavit which refers to the Colvert debt, I am pleased that I am able to support my statements with accompanying papers that have been on file in my office.

I inclose exhibit marked A, which will be seen to be an account as rendered by Colvert to J. R. Davis for board, accompanied by the note of J. R. Davis for the amount ($130.50), dated April 19, 1880.

Also a letter, marked B, dated July, 12, 1880, wheren Davis makes admission of his indebtedness. It will be seen that he endeavors to evade payment of a portion of his note by presenting an itemized bill to Colvert. You will perceive that every item in his bill bears date previous to April 19, 1880.

Also a letter, marked C, from Colvert to Davis, dated May 24, 1880, stating a/c, &c. on which settlement had been made on compromise, and note for the said amount ($130.50) given, showing that Davis had already obtained credit for his items claimed in his letter dated July 12, 1880.

I also append an affidavit of George H. Brown, deputy collector and cashier in my office, showing that as late as March 21, 1881, J. R. Davis, without "official force" made acknowledgment of his debt to Colvert, and paid thereon $44.34, leaving only $5.00 due for future settlement.

Very respectfully,

JNO. J. MOTT,
Collector.

NOTE: Since writing the above, T. N. Cooper has handed me a letter receieve by him from J. R. Davis, which I herewith append. It will be seen that Davis admits he was mistaken, and that he had requested that it be not used.

J. J. M.

STATESVILLE, Jan. 17, 1882.

Hon. T. N. COOPER:

DEAR SIR: I gave to Mr. A. D. Cowles, dept. U. S. clerk, an affidavit in favor of Mr. H. C. Cowles for collector in the 6th dist., but afterward I found that I was mistaken in some of my figures as to charges and requested him not to use it at all against you, & if it has come on you will please inform your friends of my desire not to use it, as it is incorrect.

Very respectfully, yours, &c.,

J. ROWAN DAVIS,
U. S. Stkr. & Gaug.

A.

J. R. Davis Dr. to R. S. Colvert.

To 14½ months bording, 9 dollars per month, $130, 50 cents, less than half you offered for the last 5½ months as wanted the bill of bording. I think you cannot complain of it, &c. Ps. I hope to here from you in a few days, as I am needing money to pay for stamps; are about out both whiskey and money. As I have waited with you a long time I hope you will settle up in a few days with me, or at the office, and will oblige your fr'end, &c.

R. S. COLVERT.

$130.50.

One day after date I promised to pay R. S. Colvert the some of one hundred and thirty $\frac{50}{100}$ dollars for value received at the leagle rate of inturust. Givin under my hand and seal this 19th day April, 1880.

J. R. DAVIS. [SEAL.]

Rec'd July 17, 1880, eighty-five dollars on the within note. Credit Mch. 21st, 1881, $44.34.

Paid dep'y on Feby. lest 1881 for Jun. 1880	$18 72
License stamps	20 83
		39 55
Cash to J. E. C		4 79
		$44 34

B.

CANA, DAVIS COUNTY, July 12, 1880.

DEAR SIR: Yours received, and in reply will say that I am perfectly willing that you and the Doctor settle my private business, but will only say that I demand a voice in the matter. This note that R. S. Colvert holds on me would have been settled before now had that gentleman received and given me credit on the within note for $40.51½ that I taken the money from my pocket and paid out for his benefit; but he has refused to accept this as part payment, and I refused to pay any part until this account, together with the $5 in cash paid February 22, 1880, be credited on the note. Of course he will go to the Doctor and tell his tale, together with a pack of lies, and cause that gentleman to believe that I am trying to dodge payment; but such, I assure you, is not the case, and I am perfectly willing, and have been all the time, to pay the note, provided my account was accepted, but not before, and I will say that if you pay the note you will first deduct from the note $45.51½, and pay to him the balance, with interest from date. Otherwise, if you pay the full amount, leaving out my claim, I shall hold you responsible. I want the matter settled, and I am anxious, especially with such a man as Colvert, for you know him as well as I do, and I deem an explanation useless. I would write the Doctor concerning the matter, but I have no idea that he would give me any credit at all for my explanation concerning a man who has no credit or character in the court-house, nor at home among his neighbors, for truth and honesty. You will please find inclosed my account with Colvert. I will be over Saturday, 17th instant, and would be glad to see you concerning the matter.

Respectfully, yours,

J. R. DAVIS.

To H. X. DWIRE, esq.,
Deputy Collector.

N. B.—The balance that I am due R. S. Colvert on my note is $84.99½. You can send him this amount from my May check, but if any more it will be on your own responsibility. As to the account, I am ready at any time to swear to it.

J. R. D.

I would like for you to read this letter and account over to the Doctor, just in order to show him that I have never denied the validity of this note, but the account was not accepted is the reason why it has not been paid, as Colvert said that I ought to let that go, and that the storekeeper should pay these deficiencies and keep the distillery in repair, as the tax-payers had enough to pay 90 cents on the gallon to the State before one-half ever reached Washington.

R. S. Colvert, Dr., to J. R. Davis, on account.

1878.
June 7.	To 1 bucket of paint, $2; to 2 brushes, 35 cents	$2 35
June 17.	To cash paid J. Colvert to buy paint	1 00
July 15.	To balance paid on T. P. stamps	25
July 15.	To withdrawal entries, 25 cents, and 1 bottle of Dr. Pott's medicin, 50 cents	75
July 27.	To 2 papers horse and cattle powders, 25 cents each	50
July 27.	To cash on T. P. stamps	25
Oct. 5.	To 2 papers tax and 1 bottle mucilage	25
Nov. 5.	To cash paid for telegraph dispatch to Charlotte	1 00
Nov. 5.	By cash loaned to pay hand	50
Nov. 5.	To cash paid for solder to repair pipes	25
Dec. 7.	To cash on T. P. stamps	1 80
1879.
April 9.	To cash for millet seed, 1½ bushels, $1.25	1 87½
Mar. 9.	To cash paid deficiency to Dept. Matt	10 54
Mar. 9.	By cash loaned J. E. Colvert to pay on horse	10 00
From April, 1878, to July. 1879, to 92 D. W. stamps, at 10 cents		9 20
	Total account	40 51½

Received payment in full, to be credited on his note given to R. S. Colvert for $130.50.

J. R. DAVIS.

C.

[Office of John E. Colvert, manufacturer of and dealer in pure North Carolina whiskies and brandies.]

WILLIAMSBURG, N. C., May 24, 1880.

Mr. J. R. DAVIS:

DEAR SIR: I rec'vd the $5.00 sent me some two weeks ago and have given you credit for the amount. As it has been on hand nearly two years, I have sent your account in full. I want it closed out by money or note by return mail, and oblige. I have paid $6.30 cents deficiency tax, and they are claiming $29. for last June. I want you to attend to it and see what is the cause. I think 90 cents tax is a plenty for any stiller to pay on whisky. Let me here from you right away, and oblige, &c.,

Yours as ever,

R. S. COLVERT.

J. R. Davis dr. to R. S. Colvert.

1878.
April 1.	To 9 months' board, at 9 per month		$81 00
1879.
Apr. 1.	To 5 month's & 12 days, at $20		107 80
	To F. Tomblin, for leather		16 65
Cr.	By sundries of bill	$28 35
1880.
Mar. 2.	Cr. By cash	5 00
		33 35	190 45
			33 35
	Amount due		$157 10

Settled.

I am needing it very much, as bad, are bilding & everything wants money & I cannot get along with credit all the time, &c.

R. S. C.

D.

UNITED STATES INTERNAL REVENUE,
COLLECTOR'S OFFICE, —— DISTRICT, NORTH CAROLINA,
Williamsburg, Dec. 13, 1878.

Dr. J. J. MOTT,
Collector of Int. Rev.

SIR: You will please pay to the order of T. N. Cooper twenty-five dollars from my November check, & oblige,

Very respectfully, yours,

J. R. DAVIS,
U. S. S. & Gauger.

E.

Geo. H. Brown, deputy collector and cashier in the collector's office, 6th dist. N. C., states that on the 21st day of March, 1881, J. R. Davis came into the office and stated me that he desired to pay the balance of his note to R. S. Colvert. Mr. Dwire being away from the office, he asked me if I had the note, I then examined a bundle of papers in the safe and found it, he then stated that he would pay all the balance, with the exception of $5.00 which he had paid Mr. Colvert, for which had rec'd no credit. I then made a calculation of the balance less $5.00 and found it to be $44.34. Mr. Davis then handed me a check for salary as storekeeper and gauger, which I cashed for him, he then paid me the amount found due $44.34. He did not claim that he was entitled to any credits except the $5.00 above mentioned.

GEO. H. BROWN,
Dep. Coll.

Sworn to and subscribed before me January 16, 1882.

WM. J. COITE,
Dep'y Col'er.

EXHIBIT G.

Reply to affidavit of J. T. McIntosh.

COLLECTOR'S OFFICE, 6th DIST., N. C.,
Statesville, Jan. 16*th*, 1882.

Hon. GREEN B. RAUM,
Com'r Inter. Revenue, Washington, D. C.:

SIR: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of a copy of an affidavit of J. T. McIntosh, late storekeeper & gauger in this district.

It seems hardly necessary to make a reply to his statements. He admits receiving every dollar due him, but complains that he was requested to aid the Republican committee, which he declined to do, and that he received a portion of his salary in cash instead of a draft. McIntosh would have it appear that his pay for June, 1880, was withheld. It was not rec'd at this office till April, 1881, after passage of a deficiency bill. A number of the officers, owing to the long delay had given orders to merchants and others for their pay. I had instructed the cashier to retain these checks until personal application or order was made by each officer for his pay. This was done to protect any who had made advances to them. When McIntosh did apply, according to affidavit of Mr. Coite, he requested the cash, and the check was made payable to bearer, the cash rec'd for it, and sent to him in this way for his accommodation.

This is frequently done in the office (checks made payable to bearer and the money remitted instead) for accommodation of those who might find difficulty in getting their drafts cashed where they reside.

Very respectfully,

JNO. J. MOTT,
Collector.

A.

[Slip cut from the Guide of April 1, 1881.]

The long-delayed pay for June, 1880, services, due storekeepers and gaugers, will be forwarded to the parties entitled within the next ten days.

B.

UNITED STATES INTERNAL REVENUE,
COLLECTOR'S OFFICE, 6 DISTRICT, NORTH CAROLINA,
Statesville, June 21st, 1881.

J. T. MCINTOSH, Esq.,
S. and G., Taylorsville, N. C.:

SIR: Your June, 1880, pay has been in this office awaiting your order. Not having called for it, a S. & G. is presumed to have disposed of the claim, & the cash is held until presentation by the holder.

I enclose your salary for June, 1880, as S. and G. as per act. rendered & allowed, being one hundred & four dollars ($104). Please acknowledge receipt.

Respectfully,

J. J. MOTT,
Coll'r.

Per C.

C.

To whom it may concern:

I have examined an affidavit (copy) as made by J. T. McIntosh, late stkr. & gauger in the 6th dist. No. Ca.; and in the matter of the payment to him of the amount due him for services during June, 1880, am able to make the following statement:

For want of appropriation, the payment of all a/c's of stkr. & gaugers for June, 1880, were delayed. The money therefor was not received at this office, and deposited to credit of Coll'r's D. A. until March 28, '81. The checks on it were dated Mar. 30, '81, but were not completed (filled out, signed, &c.) until about April 10, '81.

The delay in the payment of these accounts had tended in many instances to work hardship to the officers to whom it was due, and they (needing their money) had discounted or cashed the claims, and numbers of the orders were filed in this office.

When the cash had been received from Washington a notice (see appended paper marked A) was inserted in the "Guide," an official paper published monthly from this office and sent to every officer in the district.

It was decided imprudent, in view of the many orders, to remit to each S. & gr. without having first heard from him that there was no lien upon the amount originally due him. Though this course was strictly adhered to, the records show that within a few days of the receipt of the money and of the notice in the "Guide," but few of the amounts due (checks) remained on hand; it appears that McIntosh's was one; for on or about June 5, '81, I received from him a letter—addressed to me as dep'y coll'r—requesting me to send him his cash for June, '80. To oblige him, as I then thought, I obtained "cash" for his check, and after ascertaining from him that he had no orders "out" on that pay, I sent him the money in a registered letter, as he had requested. I enclose a copy of said letter, taken from the official copy-book in this office, wherein I at the time copied it (B). I may add that I have never received from Mr. McIntosh any acknowledgment of the receipt of the amount by him.

WM. J. COITE,
Deputy Coll'r.

Signed and sworn to before me this 16th day of January, A. D. 1882.

J. FRANK DAVIS,
Deputy Collector.

B.

Registry receipt.

Post-office at Statesville, N. C. Registered letter No. 883. Rec'd June 21, 1881, of J. J. Mott, addressed to J. T. McIntosh, Taylorsville, N. C.

L. A. SHARPE, P. M.

EXHIBIT H.

Reply to affidavit of W. C. Morrison.

COLLECTOR'S OFFICE, 6TH DIST. N. C.,
Statesville, Jan. 16th, 1882.

Hon. GREEN B. RAUM,
Com'r Inter. Revenue, Washington, D. C.:

SIR: I have the honor to acknowledge receipt of a copy of an affidavit dated Oct. 25, '81, of W. C. Morrison, lately a storekeeper & gauger in this district.

Morrison did contribute to the campaign of 1880. The amount of his contribution was sent to the Republican State ex. committee, except $25, which was sent to the Cong'l or national committee, which I suppose accounts for thereceipt of Mr. Jewell which he mentions.

Morrison did pay $3 to the account for office expenses kept by Mr. H. H. Dwire, and alluded to and explained in my reply to the affidavit of I. N. Summers. Morrison became dissatisfied because I refused to recommend his assignment to storekeeper's duty because of his intemperate (drinking) habits.

Very respectfully,

JNO. J. MOTT,
Collector.

STATE OF N. CAROLINA,
Co. of Iredell:

A. B. Gillespie, being duly sworn, deposes and says, that sometime during the summer of 1880 he requested W. C. Morrison, S. & G. for the 6 dist of N. C., to endorse a check, for what month or for what amount he does not now remember, for campaign purposes, and that at the time of doing so he stated to said Morrison that it was a volentary contribution and no one was requested to contribute except those who would do so willingly and cheerfully. Thereupon said Morrison did, of his own accord, endorse a check for his salery for one month, which check this deponent sent to the State executive committee through J. J. Mott. This deponent further swears that said Morrison, after endorsing said check, showed him a communication from Marshal Jewell, of the national executive committee, calling for a contribution for campaign purposes, and asked what he should contribute, and this deponent told him not to contribute anything, as the State executive comm. would arrange that matter out of the check he (Morrison) had just endorsed.

A. B. GILLESPIE.

Subscribed to & sworn before me this the 20th day of Jan., 1882.

J. FRANK DAVIS,
Deputy Coll.

EXHIBIT I.

Reply to affidavit of P. F. Somers.

COLLECTOR'S OFFICE, 6TH DIST. N. C.,
Statesville, Jan. 16th, 1882.

Hon. GREEN B. RAUM,
Com'r Inter. Revenue, Washington, D. C.:

SIR: I have the honor to acknowledge receipt of an affidavit (copy) made by P. F. Somers, late a storekeeper & gauger in the 6th Dist. N. C., dated Oct. 13, '81.

Somers says he did not get his pay for certain months related in his affidavit. The sworn statement of Coite, deputy collector, in charge of storekeepers' & gaugers' pay, shows to whom he gave these checks. This statement is marked (E), and hereunto appended.

The statement of Brown (affidavit marked F) shows that certain ones of them were paid by the order of Somers on taxes assessed against a distiller upon whose bond (I have since understood) a friend of Somers was surety. The ballance in Brown's hands not applied in settling these taxes was handed to Mrs. Somers, the wife of this man.

C. T. Colyer, in his sworn statement, marked (G), says he was requested by Somers to get his pay at times and hand to his (Somers') wife in Somers' absence. He accounts for the am't delivered to him by Coite.

Somers desired to be assigned to a certain distillery, I think, in July last. This distillery was in operation and another storekeeper on duty there. I spoke harshly to Somers for wanting to interfere with another man. This offended him, I suppose, and when he had some two months later been assigned to a distillery it was brought to my attention that he had been making complaints against me. I ordered the deputy to have him report to this office. He answered by writeing the letter marked (A), to which I refer you, & also refer you to my reply marked (B), which I had no idea of ever having to present in this way. These, together with his reply marked (C) and a letter to the deputy of that division marked (D), and the evidence appended in the shape of affidavits, speak for themselves.

Very respectfully,

JNO. J. MOTT,
Collector.

A.

UNITED STATES INTERNAL REVENUE,
COLLECTOR'S OFFICE, 6 DISTRICT, NORTH CAROLINA,
Dec. 1*st*, 1881.

Dr. J. J. MOTT, Coll'r:

SIR: I am informed that you desire to see me to-day, and as I do not think a personal interview with you would profit me, I would rather postpone it at present. As to your letter of inquiry, I would say that I have not had fair play, and it seemed to me that you have exercised a personal ill-feeling towards me, which left grounds for me to complain. No complaint that I have made will be used against you only by my permission. You have abused me upon the statements of others, when they told you falsehoods, and I think it only justice to myself to appear in my own behalf.

I have made no statements about you which I cannot establish, and I must say that I have some influence and I expect to use it either for or against you, but if you will let the past go I will not desert you in the hour of peril.

Very respectfully,

P. F. SOMERS.

B.

UNITED STATES INTERNAL REVENUE,
COLLECTOR'S OFFICE, SIXTH DISTRICT, NORTH CAROLINA,
Statesville, Dec. 1*st*, 1881.

P. F. SOMERS, Esq.:

SIR: I shall not accept your proposition, because it may be an infamous one. For if you believe that I am guilty of any dishonorable action, your proposition is an infamous one, and no one but a d—d scoundrel would make it, because, you say you are willing to drop the thing if I am. You say you have not been "fairly treated," and that I have listened to falsehoods from others about you, and that you have had cause to complain of my personal treatment of you. What are your "complaints," that is what I want to know? If they are not reflections on my integrity, probably I might be willing to let the "past go" after hearing your explanation of this and some other matters of your past official acts. But if anything you "complain" of is a reflection on my integrity, then, as I said before, your own proposition in your letter to me to-day shows you to be a d—d scoundrel, and I will treat you accordingly. I will be here on Saturday, and will be ready to see you, except under the latter proposition. I do not want to treat any man unfairly. I have never done it if I knew it.

Respectfully,

J. J. MOTT.

C.

UNITED STATES INTERNAL REVENUE,
COLLECTOR'S OFFICE, SIXTH DISTRICT, NORTH CAROLINA,
Dec. 3*d*, 1881.

Dr. J. J. MOTT, Collector.

SIR: In response to your letter of the 1st inst., I would say that the proposition of which you spoke was nothing more than a mere apology; but, however, it seems that you placed upon it a very dangerous construction, and I would here say that under existing circumstances I feel indisposed to make any additional propositions. Your relieving me from duty has led me to the conclusion that you have used your official power to press me to an explanation, and if so I shall hesitate to repeat any statement which I have made.

The statements which you desire me to disclose, or rather repeat, to you, are in the hands of the proper person, and will, by my permission, be used at the proper time. You may place me in the category of a d—d scoundrel, and treat me as such, but that will not kill my influence, nor stop me from making additional statements. You also refer to my past official conduct. As to this, I would say that my record is almost as clean as that of some of your leading officers, outside of your office. You can ostracise me and treat me as you like, but the truth is mighty and must prevail.

If I were to meet you in a private interview I could definitely explain to you any complaint I have made, and I feel satisfied that you would admit that I am right. Aside from the present issue, I will refer you to the case of Henry Setzer, over which you threatened, without any cause, to ask for my dismissal from office. In the same case you permitted my superior in office to seek revenge upon me for an indirect personal matter. I made to Maj. Coite a fair statement of the affair, but you could not listen to it; and, consequently, the matter was ended with unpleasant feelings when it might have been settled satisfactorily.

In conclusion I would say that you have had a chance to give me a better showing, but probably I have not deserved it. I have always been willing to discharge my duty as far as capable, but I have received unjust condemnation. It has always been a mystery to me why some officers could always do as they would please, while others live in servitude as it were. I had lived in hope of getting regular work in the service, but through the treatment already mentioned I have but little to hope for, and I have gradually drifted to a pivotal position. I have given the matter mature consideration, and shall be slow to act aside from my own decision. The present controversy shall not be much further agitated by me, as I deem it needless to dwell in discussion. Lastly, I would add that, outside of this issue, if my future were known to be as unpleasant as the past, I should not sigh for it. It has been my misfortune to be envied by some of your officers, and they have doubtless acted dishonorably toward me, which has probably been one cause of your discriminating against me. I am willing to act fair with every one, but I do not propose to be imposed upon, and I hope you will allow me to plead my cause.

Respectfully,

P. F. SOMERS.

D

UNITED STATES INTERNAL REVENUE,
COLLECTOR'S OFFICE, 6th DISTRICT, NORTH CAROLINA,
Dec. 31*st*. 1881.

A. C. SHARPE, Esq., D. Coll'r:

SIR: I am aware of the fact that a contest will soon open over the collectorship of this district, and I would here say that I have some interest in the matter. I understand that Dr. Mott has charges against me, which I have failed to answer. At the time he called upon me to explain, I was somewhat indisposed to yield. He had personally threatened to dismiss me, and I felt that I had but little chance to meet any leniency from him. I could have answered the charges preferred, but he seemed to monopolize his official power to force me to explain, and I felt indignant about it. I made a very fair proposition to Dr. Mott, but he seemed to think it an unfair one, and abused me over it. I am no one to misrepresent any one, and am not inclined to be forced to do an act of indiscretion. I have made no charges against Dr. Mott, as alleged, but what I can explain to his satisfaction. And to-day, if I had the assurance that I could have his future sympathy, I would use my influence in his behalf. But I have often felt that he had a personal dislike towards me, and that I must look to a different source for favors. I have so often been misrepresented to him that I don't care to contend for myself any longer. I am now at a stand, and I must go with the tide which seems to be the most favorable. I am willing to let all past differences sink into oblivion, to be exhumed no more, provided a promise of protection is extended to me. I can explain to you, if Dr. Mott desires it, any statement that I have made about him. There is no time now to idle away, and all that made me desert Dr. Mott was his personal treatment. If you will cause me to be placed where I was I shall hereafter support you, and will be in sympathy with the present administration. I have some influence, and I expect to use it at no distant day. If you will take immediate action I will hold up for you. I expect to take a hand in the contest, and I leave this suggestion open to you. I leave the question with you.

Respectfully,

P. F. SOMERS.

E.

To whom it may concern:

I hereby state that I have examined the records of this office (the Office of Internal Revenue for the 6th collection district of No. Ca.) in the matter of payments made to P. F. Somers, late a storekeeper and gauger in this district, as referred to in the affidavit made by him, of which a copy has been shown to me, and I find as follows:

Check No. 5069, dated Feb'y 7, '80, for services in Jan'y. 1880 *, for $36, was "held for for pay't of assessment."

---

* *Pay Jan'y, '80. See appended affidavit marked F.

Check No. 5153, dated Mar. 10, '80, for services in Fe'by. 1880 *, for $44, was "held for pay't of assessment."

Check No. 5442, dated April 5, '80, for services in March, 1880 †, for $108, was "held for assessment."

Check No. 5639, dated May 5, '80, for services in April, 1880 ‡, for $104, "delivered to C. T. Colyer."

Check No. 5898, dated June 22, '80, for services in May, 1880 §, for $92, paid to him in person.

WM. J. COITE,
Deputy Collector, 6th Dist., N. C.

Subscribed and sworn to before me, this 16th day of January, A. D. 1882.

GEO. H. BROWN,
Deputy Collector, 6th Dist., N. C.

F.

Geo. H. Brown, being duly sworn, states that for the last six years he has been a deputy collector and cashier in the office of the collector of int. rev. for the 6th dis't, N. C. I further state that the following checks of P. F. Somers, storekeeper and gauger in said district, for salary, were handed me by W. J. Coite, chief deputy collector, to wit: For the month of January, 1880, $36.00; for the month of February, 1880, $44; for the month of M'ch, 1880, $108.00.

It was my understanding at the time that the same were to be applied to payment of assessments against one J. H. Moose, a distiller in the district, at whose distillery said Somers had been under assignment in pursuance of an arrangement made between the said Somers and Moose at the instance of deputy collector Gillespie. The checks were held in my possession until the receipt of the following letter from P. F. Somers, to wit:

STATESVILLE, N. C., April 17, 1880.

Dr. J. J. MOTT,
Coll. Int. Rev.:

SIR: In regard to the deficiencies at Moose's, I would say that rather than to go into litigation so as to involve the sureties on the distiller's bond, I will stand good for that part of the deficiency. You will please forward me at your earliest convenience the deficiency in capacity and the assessments against Moose for same.

Very respectfully,

P. F. SOMERS, S. & G.

The following entry appears in the daily record of collections on lists under date of April 23, 1880:

					LISTS.
						Int. & Penl.	Total.
J. H. Moose, Scott's X Roads,	April,	1879,	Defy.	spirits.....		29.70	4.09	33 79
"	May,	1879,	"	"		79.20	10.28	89 48
"	"	1879,	"	"		1.80	17	1 97
"	June,	1879,	"	"		27.00	3.24	30 24
Total								$155 48

The payment of the above amounts were made from the salary of P. F. Somers, as storekeeper and gauger, for February, 1880.....	$44 00
For March, 1880.....	108 00
Advance by Dep. Coll. Gillespie to close out the lists.....	3 48
	$155 48

On the same day I delivered the check of $36.00 for January, 1880, to Mrs. Kate Somers, wife of said P. F. Somers, who at times came to the office and rec'd her husband's pay. And afterwards, when the April salary became due, the amount of $3.48 advanced was handed me for Dep. Coll. Gillespie by either Somers of, or Mr. C. T. Colyer, who was attending to business for Somers while absent on duty.

I further state that on the 3d day of July, 1880, the said P. F. Somers paid me in cash the sum of $46.80, to be applied on an assessment against said Moose on the July, 1879, list for gallon tax on a package of spirits removed from warehouse, and I gave him a receipt for the same in the name of the distiller. I further state that I

---

* Pay Feb'y, '80. See F.
† Pay Mar., '80. See F.
‡ Pay April, '80. See appended affidavit marked G.
§ Pay May, '80. See F.

never told the said P. F. Somers that his checks were in the possession of Collector Mott, but that I did state to him how they had been applied to the payment of the assessments against Moose, as he had directed.

GEO. H. BROWN.

Sworn to and subscribed before me this 16th day of January, 1882.

WM. J. COITE,
Deputy Collector.

G.

UNITED STATES INTERNAL REVENUE,
COLLECTOR'S OFFICE, 6 DISTRICT, NORTH CAROLINA,
Statesville, Jan'y 16, 1882.

To whom it may concern:

I was deputed by Mr. P. F. Summers on several occasions during the year 1880 to receive his check then due and hand the same to his wife, or get it cashed as requested and hand it to his wife, which was done by me on every occasion when a check was paid to me for him. The reason was that he being from home could not always conveniently come to the office to receive it personally, and his wife was on several occasions sick and unable to go to the office to receive it for him.

C. T. COLYER.

Sworn to and subscribed before me this 16th Jan'y, 1882.

J. FRANK DAVIS,
Dep. Col.

EXHIBIT K.

Reply to affidavit of J. N. Summers.

COLLECTOR'S OFFICE, 6TH DIST., N. C.,
Statesville, Jan. 16*th*, 1882.

HON. GREEN B. RAUM,
Com'r Inter. Rev., Washington, D. C.:

SIR: I have the honor to acknowledge receipt of a copy of an affidavit made October 19th, 1881, by J. N. Summers, late st'k'r & gauger in this district.

Summers made a voluntary contribution toward the expenses of the campaign of 1880. In evidence thereof I append his own statement. It was disposed of in accordance with his instructions to Gillespie, contained in the affidavit of Gillespie, marked A, and hereunto appended. Among his acquaintances Gillespie stands equal with any man for honesty & truthfulness. The affidavit of Gillespie shows that he had no such conversation with him as he (Summers) states in his affidavit.

The statement of Summers that he made a demand on me for this money is totally false. I have never had a word of conversation with him on the subject, or he with me. Summers swears further that he contributed one per cent. of his salary for months for office expenses, about $35; this is no doubt false. The account to which Summers here refers, as I explained to you long ago, was one made to pay a laborer kept in the office to wait upon and assist this class of officers (storekeepers & gaugers) in sending them blanks on which to make their reports, and expenses for printing, and for other expenses for the convenience of these very officers. The clerical force, on account of the rapid increase of distilleries, was inadequate to the work. I did not want to ask for more force before the end of the fiscal year, and each one of these officers were requested to help pay the expenses. The account commenced with Sept., 1879, & closed with June, 1880. If Summers had every month during that period contributed, as he states, one per cent. of his salary, the most he could have given would not exceed $9.

Mr. H. X. Dwire, at that time a deputy in my office, kept this account. I have requested him, by letter, to make a statement to you with regard to it, which he will do in a few days.

The action of Summers, as shown by the affidavit of W. J. Coite, marked C, will give you an idea of the kind of man he is, and what amount of credence his statements are entitled to.

Very respectfully,

JNO. J. MOTT,
Collector.

SWEET HOME, Iredell Co., N. C.

This is to certify that I subscribed to the campaign fund of the Republican State executive committee or North Carolina, during the State and national campaign of 1880, through Dr. J. J. Mott, the sum of $104.00, dollars, the same being a check for my salary as storekeeper and gauger for the month of September, 1880, and that the same was freely and cheerfully given, and would be again under like circumstances.

This 25th day of April, 1881.

Respectfully,

J. N. SUMMERS,
Stk. & Gr.

STATE OF NORTH CAROLINA,
Iredell Co.:

A. B. Gillespie, being duly sworn, deposes and says, that some time during the summer of 1880 he requested J. N. Summers, S. & G. for the 6th dist. of North Carolina, to endorse a check, for what month or for what amount he does not now remember, for campaign purposes, and that at the time of doing so he stated to said Summers that it was a voluntary contribution, and no one was requested to contribute except those who would do so willingly and cheerfully. Thereupon said Summers did of his own accord endorse a check for his salery for one month, which check this deponent sent to the State executive committee through J. J. Mott. This deponent farther swears that he made no such remarks to said Summers as "Don't say nothing about this at all, let it all go, if any body gets anything we will be the men"; that the only conversation between him and Summers was, that the money would be used for campaign purposes, and that all assessments made by the national executive committee would be settled out of the check then endorsed after it had been sent to the State executive committee. All that part of said Summers' affidavit, made on the 19th day of Oct., 1881, before A. D. Cowles, D. C., which states that, "soon thereafter the deponent met the said deputy collector, A. B. Gillespie, and acting on information given him by the collector demanded of him, the said A. B. Gillespie, the said check for the amount for services rendered as above stated, the deputy collector denied the allegation of J. J. Mott, collector, that he had it, asserting that he had nothing to do with his (deponent's) check," is utterly false.

The said Summers has never in his life had any conversation with this deponent in regard to checks supposed to be held by J. J. Mott.

A. B. GILLESPIE.

Sworn to and subscribed before me this 20th January, 1882.

J. FRANK DAVIS,
Dep. Collector.

C.

To whom it may concern:

I hereby certify that in this the 6th int'l revenue district of No. Ca. were commissioned two persons as storekeeper & gaugers, James M. Summers, of Smith Grove, Davie Co., and John N. Summers, of Sweet Home, Iredell Co. They are not related in any way, so far as is known. During the month of February, 1881, James M. Summers was on duty at distillery No. 1703, and John N. Summers at No. 560. Accounts for pay were rendered by James M. for $76, and by John N. for $96.

On March 10, 1881, checks were drawn by the collector for the payment of these accounts, and on that day J. N. Summers received his check for $96 at this office in person, and obtained the cash for it. A day or so thereafter the remainder of the checks were mailed to the persons in whose favor they were drawn. By clerical error, the check for $76 of James M. Summers was addressed to Sweet Home P. O., No. Ca. J. N. Summers received it, endorsed it, obtained the money on it, and used said money; all in face of the fact that he had already received his own pay for that month, and must have been aware at the time that his act was illegal, in fact, a forgery.

About May or June, 1881, James M. Summers, not having received his pay for February, 1881, gave notice thereof to this office. In pursuance of the duty devolving upon me, I made investigation and learned that J. N. Summers had received two checks for that month; I sent for him, and, upon his appearance, questioned him in regard to the matter. He acknowledged the facts as above stated, but could make no excuse. I at once ordered him to return to the cashier the amount of the check which he had illegally had cashed. He did so soon thereafter (I think it was from the proceeds of his own pay for the then current month), and the money was delivered to Mr. Jmaes M. Summers, its rightful owner, with a suitable explanation. I reported the circumstances to J. J. Mott, collector of the district.

WM. J. COITE,
Deputy Collector.

Signed and sworn to before me this 16th day of January, A. D. 1882.

GEO. H. BROWN,
Deputy Collector.

WINSTON, N. C., January 26, 1882.

Dr. J. J. MOTT,
Washington, D. C.:

SIR: In answer to yours, relative to the affidavit of J. N. Summers, I have to say I do not recollect about writing to Mr. Summers, but I think perhaps I did write him, as he had called a time or two at the office to know whether he had paid his assessments to date. I know he offered to pay a time or two, and I told him to hold on, as the account had not been made out and no money was needed at the time; and if I wrote it was to enable him to report correctly in making his statement to Hon. Commissioner. I recollect when I told Mr. Summers the amount he had contributed, he said it was about correct. I do remember that very few paid over ten dollars, and many only two or three dollars, and large number paid nothing at all; in fact, were never notified or requested to pay anything. If Mr. Summers had paid one per cent. for the whole amount he received he could not have paid over; say from $5.00 to $8.00 for time he was employed. If he had paid regularly, why should he have to inquire whether he had paid to date his assessments?

Very respectfully,

H. X. DWIRE.

Subscribed and sworn to before me.

JAMES MARTIN,
Special Deputy Coll'r.

EXHIBIT L.

COLLECTOR'S OFFICE, 6TH DIST., N. C.,
Statesville, Jan. 16th, 1882.

Hon. GREEN B. RAUM,
Com'r Int'l Revenue, Washington, D. C.:

SIR: I have the honor to enclose my replies to affidavits made by P. F. Somers, J. R. Davis, J. N. Summers, J. T. McIntosh, and W. C. Morrison.

I call your attention to the fact that these affidavits refer to matters happening in 1879, 1880, or early in 1881.

The statements are, as you will see on examination, totally untrue, except the two which relate to political contributions, and these are mainly false or convey false impressions.

In respect to all statements concerning contributions for political purposes, I would say that they were all voluntarily made, and that the sums so raised were used in an honorable and legitimate way in conducting the political campaign. That the officers making the contributions were informed, and knew, that it would make no difference in their treatment by the collector or the department at Washington whether they contributed or not, and in point of fact very many of the officers, for one cause or another, contributed nothing. Every single one who did contribute has or will give a statement to this effect, and in accordance with the above.

Very respectfully,

JNO. J. MOTT,
Collector.

EXHIBIT M.

[Private order.]

STATESVILLE, N. C., Novr. 14, 1881.

SIR: For reasons deemed by me sufficient, I have determined that, for the present at least, it is not advisable that any cases of violations of the internal-revenue laws should be carried to prosecution in these courts. You are therefore instructed, until further orders from me, to stop "swearing out warrants" of any kind. You will, however, not suspend your operations against illicit distillers and other violations of the laws, but continue them actively, destroy all illicit stills, and seize all forfeitable property, but swear out no warrants. This order being intended for yourself, officially, you will be pleased to so keep it.

Respectfully,

[L. S.]

JNO. J. MOTT,
Collector.

A true copy.

A. D. COWLES,
D. Clk.

OFFICE UNITED STATES COURTS,
WESTERN DISTRICT OF NORTH CAROLINA,
Statesville, Dec. 24, 1881.

Hon. C. J. FOLGER,
Sec'y Treasury, Washington, D. C.:

SIR: Inclosed find Dr. Mott, collector of internal revenue of this dist., private order issued to all his deputies. While there are a great many individuals who should be prosecuted in our courts for violations of the int. revenue laws, not a warrant is being issued. This letter is intended as a thrust at the judicial department of this district, prompted by malicious and unjustifiable motives of a very low order.

Yours, respectfully,

A. D. COWLES,
Deputy Clerk.

[Indorsement.]

TREASURY DEPARTMENT,
December 29, 1881.

Respectfully referred to the Commissioner of Internal Revenue.

J. T. POWER,
Chief Clerk.

EXHIBIT N.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT,
OFFICE OF INTERNAL REVENUE,
Washington, December 30*th*, 1881.

Dr. J. J. MOTT,
Collector, Statesville, N. C.:

SIR: Referring to our conversation in regard to your order of Nov'r 14th, 1881, to the subordinate officers of your district, directing them not to make complaints as the basis for the issuing of warrants for the arrest of violators of the internal revenue laws, I have to say that I have given the subject due consideration, and have to request that you revoke the order.

I agree with you fully that the officers of the government who are used as witnesses before the U. S. courts should be protected by the court from the unjustifiable abuse of the lawyers for the defense, and if this cannot be done before the district judge, upon proper application, I will request the district attorney to postpone the trial of internal revenue cases until the circuit judge can be present to sit in those cases.

You will please report your action upon this matter.

Very respectfully,

GREEN B. RAUM,
Commissioner.

EXHIBIT O.

UNITED STATES INTERNAL REVENUE,
COLLECTOR'S OFFICE, 6TH DISTRICT, NORTH CAROLINA,
Statesville, Jan'y 2, 1882.

Hon. GREEN B. RAUM,
Comm'r Int'l Revenue, Washington, D. C.:

SIR: I have the honor to acknowledge receipt of your letter of Dec. 30, 1881 (H. C. C.), referring to my order to my subordinate officers directing them not to "swear out" warrants, &c.

You request me to revoke my said order, promising that if my officers (as witnesses before the U. S. courts) are not protected from the abuse of lawyers for the defense, you will request the district attorney to postpone the trial of internal revenue cases until the circuit judge can be present.

I have already, in conversation with you, given my views in this matter. A United States judge should not allow men who stand well in their own neighborhood, and never drink a drop of spirits, to be denounced in his court as "perjured drunken revenue officers" (these are the terms), because they are officers of the government, and are testifying to frauds against the government. Especially should this not be the case in a Southern State, where all sorts of contumely and contempt are heaped upon all officers of the government.

The United States judge who permits such abuse upon honorable men is unworthy of his position; it exerts the worst of influences by bringing his own court into contempt, and, by so prejudicing these Southern jurors against all officers, defeats the ends of justice.

It was for such reasons as these that I issued my order of November 14, 1881. I sincerely regretted the obligation imposed upon me, and as we will, doubtless, by your promised action, secure the honorable treatment in our courts that is only desired, I have revoked my directions to my deputies, and they will hereafter cause warrants to issue in any case of infraction of the internal revenue laws wherein, by personal investigation, they are convinced the case will stand, and that the witnesses (and their testimony) are sufficient and reliable.

Very respectfully,

JNO. J. MOTT,
Collector.

EXHIBIT P.

List of subordinate officers dismissed on charges in the Sixth Dist. North Carolina during Coll. Mott's term of office.

Name.	Office.	Date of dismissal.	Name of person making charges.	Nature of charge.
S. P. Graham.....	St'k'r and g'g'r..	Apr. 25, 1877.	J. J. Mott, collector.	Intemperance.
R. L. Howell.....	....do	June 8, 1877.	.....do	Do.
J. B. Howell.....	....do	June 12, 1878.	..... do	Do.
C. W. Eve.....	....do	July 2, 1878.	.....do	Do.
R. A. Cobb.....	....do	Nov. 1, 1878.	.....do	Malfeasance in office. True bill found by grand jury.
W. A. Mayhew	....do	Apr. 11, 1879.	.....do	Great negligence in discharge of duty.
P. S. Powell	....do	Dec. 3, 1879.	.....do	Intemperance.
F. G. Johnson	....do	Dec. 15, 1879.	Revenue Agt. Kellogg	Purchased unstamped brandy and concealed same in negro cabin on his plantation.
R. J. Williamson...	....do	June 1, 1880.	.....do	Neglect of duty.
Jas. W. Brown	....do	June 23, 1880.	.....do	Absent from duty while distillery was in operation.
W. G. Bogle.....	....do	Nov. 1, 1881.	Rev. Agt. McLeer..	Complicity in frauds.
W. P. A. White ...	St'k'r and g'g'r..	Nov. 1, 1881.	Rev. Agt. McLeer ..	Complicity in frauds.
Wood T. Scott	....do	Nov. 26, '81.	Rev. Agt. Brooks...	Absent from distillery during hours of assignment. Gave whiskey from distillery in exchange for chickens and offered deputy collector fifty dollars and a suit of clothes on condition that he would not report his (Scott's) irregularities.
J. F. McIntosh	....do	Dec. 25, 1881.	Collector Mott.....	Inefficient and inattentive.
Wm. C. Morrison..	....do	Dec. 25, 1881.	.....do	Do.
P. F. Somers.....	....do	Dec. 25, 1881.	.....do	Do.
John N. Summers..	....do	Dec. 25, 1881.	.....do	Do.

47TH CONGRESS, 1st Session. } SENATE. { Ex. DOC. 83, Part 2.

LETTER

FROM

THE SECRETARY OF THE TREASURY,

TRANSMITTING

Supplemental report of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, with accompanying copies of papers, in response to Senate resolution of January 16, 1882, in relation to irregularities in the collection of internal revenue in the sixth collection district of North Carolina.

FEBRUARY 20, 1882.—Referred to the Committee on Finance and ordered to be printed.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT,
February 17, 1882.

SIR: I have the honor to transmit herewith the supplemental report of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, with accompanying copies of complaints, charges, and reports of revenue agents, in response to Senate resolution of January 16, 1882, in relation to irregularities in the collection of internal revenue in the sixth collection district of North Carolina.

Very respectfully,

CHAS. J. FOLGER,
Secretary.

Hon. DAVID DAVIS,
President pro tempore of the Senate.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT,
OFFICE OF INTERNAL REVENUE,
Washington, February 16, 1882.

SIR: I have the honor to transmit herewith, in reply to letter of Hon. Z. B. Vance, United States Senator, a copy of which letter is inclosed, marked Exhibit A, copies of all charges and complaints filed in this office, made by the people of the sixth district of North Carolina, and also copies of all reports in which reference is made to such charges and complaints. These copies are of papers relating, first, to the seizure of the property of Messrs. Latham and Newman, marked Exhibits B, C, D, E, F, G, H, I, K, L, and M; and, second, papers relative to frauds, seizures, &c., in case of the distillery of Q. D. Freeze and W. A. Daniels, marked Exhibits N, O, P, Q, R, S, T, U, V, W, X, Y, Z, AA, BB, and CC.

Very respectfully,

GREEN B. RAUM,
Commissioner.

Hon. CHARLES J. FOLGER,
Secretary of the Treasury.

EXHIBIT A.

UNITED STATES SENATE,
Washington, February 10, 1882.

HON. G. R. RAUM,
Commissioner Internal Revenue:

DEAR SIR: On examining your report in answer to my resolution of the 16th ultimo, I find nothing except as to complaints of the collection officers in regard to their pay, and the collector's orders suspending arrests, &c.

In these I was not interested, and for them the resolution did not call. I wanted the complaints, charges, &c., if any, made by the people in regard to the manner of executing the revenue laws in that district, and especially the reports of special agents Brooks and Kellogg, which I think were fairly included in the resolution under the words "other information."

In accordance with the promise of your letter to me, will you please furnish me copies of those complaints and reports.

Respectfully, yours,

Z. B. VANCE.

EXHIBIT B.

UNITED STATES INTERNAL REVENUE,
DEPUTY COLLECTOR'S OFFICE, SECOND DISTRICT GEORGIA,
Athens, August 1, 1881.

ANDREW CLARK, Collector:

SIR: I am in receipt of yours of 2d inst. for further information relative to the seizure of teams and spirits from Wm. Newman, and all facts upon which I swore out the warrant. I swore out the warrant against Wm. Newman for removing spirits upon which the tax had not been paid—the warrant against Jasper Tathum for aiding and abetting in the removal. The circumstances are as follows: Very early (about 6 o'clock) on the morning of 27th July, Wm. Newman came into Athens on foot, acting in a mysterious manner, carrying a stick in his hand about five feet long; acted so strangely that I made inquiry as to who he was; was informed that he was an idiot, inquiring the way to the Rock College, which is one and a half miles out on the suburbs of the city. I followed him in that direction on foot (and in the mean time communicated the particulars to Deputy Marshal Osborne, who followed me mounted). Mr. Newman stopped at a bar room near the Rock College, kept by M. B. Morton, colored, where he remained a short time. When he left there he took an unfrequented road between two public roads, leading out near the Northeast Railroad depot—a road not generally traveled by parties coming from that direction when on legitimate business. Mr. Osborne followed him some three miles to where his wagon was encamped. I returned to the city to procure a horse, as I was on foot, and believing that he was an illicit whisky hauler, and that he would come in on the Harmony Grove road, I went in that direction some two or three miles, and finding no trace of him I returned and found Mr. Osborne in possession of the team with Wm. Newman and Jasper Tathum. Upon examination of the casks and whisky I found that it did not come up to the inspection marks from 4 to 7 degrees, as has been stated to you, with other irregularities. Newman stated that the whisky had been previously engaged to Mr. Beussee and Morton. I inquired of them. Beussee said that he had engaged some whisky from some man in North Carolina, but did not know this man. Mr. Morton had never seen this man, but said maybe his brother had engaged the whisky in his absence, but that this whisky did not come up to the sample of the whisky left at his place of business by some unknown party representing to be from North Carolina. Also, I had received information of two whisky haulers and teams who were in the vicinity of Maysville, on the Northeast Railroad, who were retailing whisky on the road; had description of the teams, and had been down there in pursuit of them on the 23d July; heard of such teams passing through Harmony Grove, 18 miles from Athens, one of which sold whisky at a blacksmith shop at Harmony Grove, where he had his team shod. I was therefore on the lookout for them, and found the team of Wm. Newman to fill the description of one of the teams of which I had been informed was trafficing illegally in whisky. This, with Newman's appearance, his suspicious actions, his erroneous statements, his whisky differing from that stamped on the casks in quantity and in proofs, the irregularities heretofore mentioned to you in brands and manner of attaching stamps, as is all whisky that comes to this section from P. B. Tatham's distillery, sixth district, North Carolina, led me to seize the property and have the parties arrested. I will be in Atlanta by the 6th August, at which time I hope to make a personal explanation satisfactory to the office.

Very respectfully,

GEORGE W. WARE,
Deputy Collector.

EXHIBIT C.

STATE OF NORTH CAROLINA,
Cherokee County:

Personally appearing P. B. Tatham, and being sworn, deposes and says that he is proprietor of distillery No. 1023, situated at Valley Town, county of Cherokee, sixth collection district of North Carolina. That there was deposited in his said warehouse two certain packages serially numbered 20 and 21, and serial number of warehouse stamp R. 347620, R. 347621. That the same was withdrawn from said warehouse in accordance with regulations in such cases made and provided, and that said spirits was delivered to him on the 16th day of July, A. D. 1880, and remained in his possession until the 21st day of July, 1880, when the same was delivered and put into the possession of William Newman and Jasper Tatham to be delivered to one Busee and Moulton, at Athens, in the State of Georgia, who had theretofore purchased the same from said Tatham at his said distillery, and was put into the possession of Newman and Tatham for delivery. This affiant avers that from the said 16th day of July, 1880, until the 21st day of July, 1880, the time said spirits remained in his possession after being withdrawn as aforesaid remained in like condition as when received from said warehouse, and that the same had not been changed in marks, brands, or proof, with his knowledge, connivance, or procurement, but remained, in fact, as when delivered from said warehouse. Affiant further swears that he is informed and believed that said spirits, together with wagon and team, was seized at Athens, in the State of Georgia, on the 27th day of July, 1880, for irregularities in the branding, marking, or proof thereof. That if such is the fact the affiant avers that he ought not to suffer thereby; that he has acted in good faith without any purpose or intent to defraud the government of its revenue, or to violate any law or regulations made for the collection of revenue or the internal-revenue law.

P. B. TATHAM.

The foregoing affidavit of P. B. Tatham was subscribed and sworn to before me on the 13th day of August, 1880.

F. P. AXLEY,
Deputy Collector.

EXHIBIT D.

UNITED STATES INTERNAL REVENUE,
COLLECTOR'S OFFICE, SIXTH DISTRICT NORTH CAROLINA,
Valley Town, August 13, 1880.

DR. J. J. MOTT,
Collector Sixth District:

SIR: On the 27th of July two packages of whisky sold by P. B. Tatham (together with wagon and team) were seized in Athens, Ga., for alleged irregularities in the stamping and proof. Tatham had sold this whisky at warehouse, and was to be delivered as shown by the accompanying affidavits. I understand that the whisky is now held only upon the grounds that it is under proof. The facts are Moss had not received hydrometer at the time the whisky was warehoused, and the proof was "guessed" at. Whisky was warehoused January 16 and 21, 1880. Hydrometer received last of March or first of April. I am fully satisfied, if there be a mistake, that Tatham, or those delivering the whisky, were not cognizant of it, and that no wrong ought to attach to them. The accompanying affidavits show that the whisky was in no way interfered with after Tatham received it. I therefore earnestly request that application be made to the honorable Commissioner of Internal Revenue for the release of the property, and for that purpose have sent you affidavits. In the mean time please request Collector Clark to suspend further proceeding until these parties can be heard.

Moss sends his statement in explanation of mistake or irregularities. I also send 59ª, showing two packages seized.

Tatham certainly ought not to suffer in the matter, and makes an earnest appeal to you through me for relief.

Respectfully,

F. P. AXLEY,
Deputy Collector.

EXHIBIT E.

UNITED STATES INTERNAL REVENUE,
COLLECTOR'S OFFICE, SECOND DISTRICT GEORGIA,
Atlanta, September 15, 1880.

Hon. GREEN B. RAUM, Commissioner:

SIR: On July 27 ultimo, as per report to your office on Form 117, I seized in possession of P. B. Tatham and William Newman the following described property, to wit: One horse, one mule, one wagon and harness, and two casks containing corn whisky, purporting to have been distilled and tax paid by P. B. Tatham, sixth district of North Carolina. These two casks were numbered 20 and 21, respectively. Package No. 20 is marked and branded to contain 48 gallons, proof 100, and cask No. 21 to contain 46 gallons, proof 100. The first-mentioned was found, upon examination and inspection with the United States standard gauging instruments, to contain but 46 wine gallons, proof 96 per cent., and the second 42½ wine gallons, proof 93.4 per cent., being a discrepancy between stamps, marks, and brands of nearly 4 gallons in package No. 20 and of over 6½ gallons in package No. 21.

In addition to these discrepancies the tax-paid stamps on the casks were clumsily put on over painted heads, with seven instead of eight tacks, and unvarnished, and the heads of the casks did not have thereon the name, in letters of one inch in length, of the particular kind of spirits as known to the trade. These irregularities constitute the grounds of seizure.

The claimants represent that the storekeeper and gauger at the distillery did not have, at the time the spirits was warehoused, a hydrometer, and had therefore no means of ascertaining the true proof of the spirits in the casks. This claim is corroborated by Collector Mott, who informs me that such was the fact. W. A. Morse, the storekeeper and gauger by whom the spirits was inspected and stamped, was at my office, and admits his responsibility for the imperfect manner in which the stamps were affixed, and for the absence of the proper brands, of which regulation he states he had never been advised.

The evidences of good faith upon the part of the distiller are therefore conclusive to my mind, and I have directed the release of the team and wagon to claimants upon payment by them of all expenses attached thereto while the property was in the custody of the United States. But regarding the spirits as clearly subject to forfeiture under section 3299 of the Revised Statutes, it has been sold under section 3460, Revised Statutes.

Storekeeper and Gauger W. A. Morse has, in my judgment, clearly demonstrated his fitness for the position he now occupies under the government.

Respectfully,

ANDREW CLARK,
Collector.

P. S.—A copy of Collector Mott's telegram is herewith inclosed.

EXHIBIT F.

STATESVILLE, N. C.,
September 13, 1880.

To ANDREW CLARK,
Collector, Atlanta, Ga.:

Office records shows want of hydrometers at time stated, instruments sent to storekeeper, via Asheville, latter part same month. He may not have received them until March.

J. J. MOTT,
Collector.

UNITED STATES INTERNAL REVENUE,
COLLECTOR'S OFFICE, SECOND DISTRICT GEORGIA,
Atlanta, September 20, 1880.

Hon. GREEN B. RAUM, Commissioner:

SIR: Referring to your letter W. T. C. of 18th, you are informed that the name of the storekeeper and gauger referred to in my letter of 15th was erroneously given me by my deputy who made the seizure. It is H. A. Moss instead of W. A. Morse as formerly stated.

A copy of Collector Mott's telegram is herewith inclosed.

Respectfully,

ANDREW CLARK,
Collector.

EXHIBIT G.

UNITED STATES INTERNAL REVENUE,
DEPUTY COLLECTOR'S OFFICE, SIXTH DISTRICT NORTH CAROLINA,
January 7, 1881.

Dr. J. J. MOTT,
Collector 6th District:

SIR: I herewith inclose several affidavits bearing upon the sublect-matter of G. W. Hayes' letter of the 1st December, 1880, to Hon. Commissioner of Internal Revenue; also H. A. Moss, storekeeper, statement. I am clearly of the opinion, from the thorough investigation I have made, that Tatham is in no way responsible for the seizure and ought not to bear the loss. Evidently Moss did not do his duty in allowing the whisky to be removed from warehouse without the regulations being strictly complied with, and he alone is responsible for this part of the work. Tatham was very sick at the time and relied upon Moss to have the packages properly stamped and branded, and says that Moss ought not to have turned it out till this was done. While there is no question as to the negligence on the part of Moss, the charge of using whisky to excess cannot be sustained. I have made diligent inquiry in this regard, and particularly of the gentleman with whom Mr. Moss boarded, and he informed me that at no time had he ever seen Moss under the influence of whisky. The general charge that too many of the officers in this part of the district use whisky to excess, I assert most emphatically cannot be sustained. I herewith return Hayes' letter. Please inform me what can be done to relieve Tatham, if anything.

Respectfully,

F. P. AXLEY,
Deputy Collector, 10th Division, 6th District, North Carolina.

VALLEY TOWN, N. C., December 24, 1880.

STATEMENT.

In regard to certain barrels of whisky seized in Athens, Ga., belonging to P. B. Tatham, I entered serial No. of packages 20 and 21, serial No. warehouse stamps R. 347620; R. 347621, contents in gallons 48 and 46, entered January 16 and 21, 1880. When I entered the whisky I had no hydrometer. Proofed the whisky the best I could with a vial.

On the 16th day of July, 1880, I withdrew the same barrels from warehouse by order from J. J. Mott, collector 6th district, N. C. Date of permit, July the 9th, 1880. Serial No. of tax paid stamps, R. 1447816, R. 1447817, with 7 tacks in each stamp. Tax paid stamp unvarnished for the lack of varnish. After the seizure I saw the same barrels in Athens, Ga.; knew them to be the same barrels above stated.

H. A. MOSS,
Storekeeper and Gauger.

TOMATOLA, CHEROKEE COUNTY, N. C., December 1, 1880.

COMMISSIONER OF INTERNAL REVENUE,
Washington, D. C.:

DEAR SIR: I address you in reference to P. B. Tatham, who is running a government distillery in this (Cherokee) county, N. C., 6th district; No. of distillery 1023. On or about the 20th of June last P. B. Tatham sold at his warehouse two casks of whisky to Busee of Athens, Ga., at $1.40 per gallon at the warehouse, and was to deliver it by the 1st of August. According to promise Tatham delivered the said whisky at the specified time, and on delivery was inspected by one George Ware, a special deputy collector. On examination it was found that the storekeeper and gauge had failed to do his duty. Thereupon Ware seized the boys, wagon, team, and whisky. The boys were sent to Atlanta jail, and kept there 20 days. I was employed by Tatham to go and look after them; I had them released without giving bond. The wagon, team, and whisky were kept for 45 days. The wagon and team were then released, and the whisky sold for the tax. One cask was sold for $1.35 per gallon, the other for $1.50 per gallon. There were several causes for seizure. The whisky was not proof. The stamp had but seven tacks in it when the law requires eight, and the stamp was not varnished, and was put on a painted head. The distiller's name was a ¾ brand instead of 1 inch. H. A. Moss, the storekeeper and gauger had no hydrometer to weigh said whisky, therefore had to guess at the proof of the whisky by tasting, and with a vial. He painted the head of the cask himself, and neglected to varnish the stamps and to put in the number of tacks the law required.

Now, I ask you in the name of the law, honor, and justice is P. B. Tatham to suffer on account of H. A. Moss's neglect? Tatham has been confined to a bed of affliction ever since last March; has not been out of his room until a few days ago. His loss has been very heavy for a man as poor as he is. It has been something over $300. Whisky, $141; expenses of horses while in custody $54; expenses to Atlanta, three trips, $75. Other minor expenses, $50. Moss is paid $4 per day to look after the interest of the United States. Is Tatham to be ruined financially for his (Moss's) neglect? If the United States fails to refund to him what he has been out he will be compelled to stop his distillery. I can send you the affidavits of the boys that hauled the whisky, certifying that the whisky was not tampered with after it left the warehouse. With these facts in view, I hope your honor will see to it at once, and if possible, have the money refunded.

Let me hear from you soon.

Yours, very respectfully,

GEO. W. HAYES.

P. S.—I will say, furthermore, that I am well acquainted with most of the United States officials in Western North Carolina; am sorry to say that too many of them use whisky to excess, and am credibly informed that Moss was under the influence of whisky, which was the cause of his neglect.

(Signed) G. W. HAYES.
P. B. TATHAM, Agent.

STATE OF NORTH CAROLINA,
County of Cherokee:

Personally appearing G. W. Hayes, and, being sworn, deposes and says that he resides in Tomatola, in the county of Cherokee, and State aforesaid; that about the 12th or 15th day of August, 1880, at the instance and request of P. B. Tatham, who at the time of making the request was very sick, and had been for a long time before, he visited the town of Athens, in the State of Georgia, for the purpose of looking after two packages of whisky belonging to said Tatham, and which had been seized by an internal revenue officer upon the grounds that the stamps upon said packages were not varnished, and that there was but seven tacks in said stamps; that the letters designating the particular name of the spirits as known to the trade were less than one inch in length, and that the proof of said spirits were not 100 per cent.; that said packages of whisky were in the possession of one Ware, a revenue officer, and were serially No. 20 and 21. That at the time said seizure was made the wagon and team was also seized, and Jasper Tatham and William Newman arrested and imprisoned. That afterwards, to wit, on the 10th of September, 1880, affiant again visited Athens to look after the interest of Tatham in said property, at which time the revenue officer informed affiant that he held said two packages of whisky upon the grounds that it was not proof; other irregularities were waived, and that if the storekeeper and gauger would certify that he might be mistaken in the proof, that he would release the same; that the wagon and team were released and turned over to the owners thereof, and Tatham and Newman discharged without trial. Affiant swears that at the time he visited Athens as aforesaid, he procured samples of said whisky and taken the same to the city of Atlanta, and had the same weighed and tested by an officer in the collector's office of the second district of Georgia, and that one sample shown $96\frac{3}{8}$ and the other $98\frac{7}{8}$. Affiant further swears that he is informed and believes that said two packages of whisky were sold by said officer, one package bringing $1.35 per gallon, the other $1.50 per gallon; that Tatham had engaged said whisky at $1.50 per gallon. Affiant further swears that the expenses for keeping said team at Athens, Ga., while under seizure, amounted to $54.60. That he made three trips to Athens and Atlanta, Ga., at the instance of said Tatham; that the expense of first trip amounted to $48, second trip $17, third trip $16; that his time and trouble was reasonably worth $28.25. That the aggregate amount paid out by said Tatham in and about the matter amounted to $163.85.

(Signed) G. W. HAYES.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this 3d day of January, 1881.

(Signed) F. P. AXLEY,
Deputy Collector Tenth Division, Sixth District, North Carolina.

STATE OF NORTH CAROLINA,
Cherokee County:

Personally appearing William Newman, and, being duly sworn, deposes and says that he resides at Valleytown, county and State aforesaid. That on the 21st of July, 1880, two packages of whisky was put in this affiant's and Jasper Tatham's possession for delivery to Busee and Pink Moulton, at Athens, in the State of Georgia. That one of the horses in the team hauling said whisky belonged to affiant's father; the other, to Daniel Holland; the wagon, to Mr. Tatham. That said whisky, as affiant is informed and believed, had been withdrawn from the distillery warehouse of P. B. Tatham. That said whisky was taken by affiant and Jasper Tatham to Athens, in the State of Georgia, for delivery as aforesaid. That they arrived at Athens, Ga., on the 27th day of July, 1880, when said whisky, wagon, and horses were seized by internal revenue officers for alleged irregularities in the marking and stamping the same, and the insufficiency of the proof thereof.

Affiant further swears that from the 21st day of July, 1880, when said whisky was put in affiant's possession, until the 27th day of July, 1880, when the same was seized, the marks, brands, or stamps, nor the proof thereof had not in any way or manner been changed or interfered with, but was and remained in like condition as when received from P. B. Tatham, on the 21st day of July, 1880. Affiant further swears that he is informed and believes that said two packages of whisky were sold at Athens, Ga., on the of , 1880. That the wagon and team was released and returned to the owners.

(Signed) WILLIAM NEWMAN.

STATE OF NORTH CAROLINA,
Cherokee County:

Personally appearing Jasper Tatham, and, being duly sworn, deposes and says that he has heard read the affidavit of William Newman, and knows the contents thereof, and that the same is true to the best of affiant's knowledge and belief, and that he is personally cognizant of the fact stated in said affidavit. Affiant further swears that the stamps, marks, and brands upon said packages were not altered, changed, or in any manner interfered with, but that the said marks, stamps, brands, and the proof thereof, remained intact as when received from P. B. Tatham.

Affiant further swears that he was not cognizant of any irregularity in the marks, brands, or stamps upon said packages.

(Signed) J. M. TATHAM. X.

NORTH CAROLINA,
Cherokee County:

Personally appearing P. B. Tatham, and, being duly sworn, deposes and says that he is proprieter of distillery No. 1023, situated at Valley Town, county of Cherokee, 6th collection district of North Carolina. That there was deposited in his distillery warehouse two certain packages of corn whisky, serially No. 20 and 21, and serially number of warehouse stamps, R. 347620, R. 347621. That said spirits was warehoused during the month of January, 1880, and withdrawn from same in accordance with regulation in such cases made and provided, and that said spirits was delivered to him on the 16th day of July, A. D. 1880, and remained in his possession until the 21st day of July, 1880, when the same was delivered to and put in the possession of William Newman and Jasper Tatham, to be delivered to one Busee and Moulton, at Athens, in the State of Georgia, who had therebefore purchased the same from his affiant at his said distillery warehouse, and was put in the possession of the said William Newman and Jasper Tatham aforesaid, for delivery. This affiant avers that from the said 16th day of July, 1880, until the 21st day of July, 1880, the time said spirits remained in his possession after being withdrawn as aforesaid, remained in like condition as when received from his said warehouse as aforesaid; that the same had not been changed in marks, brands, or the proof thereof with his knowledge, connivance, or procurement, but remained intact as when withdrawn and delivered from his said warehouse. Affiant further swears that he is informed and believes that said spirits, when warehoused in the month of January aforesaid, was not proofed with hydrometer as required by the laws and regulations, for the reason that the stoorkeeper & gauger in charge of said distillery warehouse had not been furnished with hydrometer, and, therefore, the proof of said spirits had not been determined in the manner required by law. Affiant further swears that he is informed and believes that said two packages of spirits, together with wagon and team, were seized at Athens, in the State of Georgia, on the 27th day of July, 1880, for irregularities in the marks and brands, and that the proof thereof was not 100 per cent. Affiant further swears that he is informed and believes that said two packages of spirits were sold by an internal revenue officer at Athens, Georgia, on the day of , 1880; that said wagon and team were released and delivered to the owners thereof. Affiant further swears that at the time of said seizure and for a long while thereafter, to wit, months, he was prostrated by severe sickness, and wholly unable attend to any business whatever, and in consequence of said sickness he did not give, nor could not, the subject-matter of this affidavit his personal attention. Affiant further avers that in regard to said two packages of spirits, and in all other matters connected with his said distillery, he has acted in good faith, without any intent or purpose to defraud the government of the revenue, or to violate any law or regulation made for the collection of revenue or for the manufacture of distilled spirits.

(Signed) P. B. TATHAM.

NORTH CAROLINA,
Cherokee County:

Personally appearing William Newman, and, being duly sworn, deposes and says that he resides at Valley Town, Cherokee County, North Carolina. That on the 21st day of July, A. D. 1880, two packages of whisky was put into this affiant's and Jasper Tatham's possession, to be delivered to a Mr. Busee and Pink Moulton, at Athens, in the State of Georgia; that one of the horses in the team hauling said whisky belong to this affiant's father, the other to David Holland, the wagon to Mr. Tatham; that said whisky, put into affiant's possession as aforesaid, had been withdrawn from the distillery warehouse of P. B. Tatham, as he is informed and believes; that said whisky was taken by affiant and Jasper Tatham to Athens, Ga., to be delivered as aforesaid; that they arrived at Athens, Ga., on the 27th day of July, 1880, when said whisky, wagon, and horses were seized by internal revenue officers for alleged irregularities in the marking and stamping the same; that affiant further swears that from the said 21st day of July, 1880, until the said whisky was seized that the marks, brands, stamps, or the proof thereof had not in any way or manner been changed or interfered with, but was and remained as delivered to him by P. B. Tatham on the 21st July as aforesaid.

(Signed) WILLIAM NEWMAN.

Sworn and subscribed before me this 13th day of August, 1880.

(Signed) E. P. AXLEY,
Deputy Collector.

NORTH CAROLINA,
Cherokee County:

Personally appearing Jasper Tatham, and, being duly sworn, says that he has heard read the affidavit of William Newman, and knows the contents thereof, and that the same is correct and true in every particular, to the best of affiant's knowledge and belief; and to the best of affiant's knowledge the stamps, marks, or brands, or the proof thereof, were not altered, changed, or in any manner interfered with; and that this affiant and said Newman in whatever they had to do with said whisky acted in good faith, and without any intent to defraud the government or violate the internal-revenue laws.

(Signed) JASPER TATHAM.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this 13th day of August, 1880.

(Signed) F. P. AXLEY,
Deputy Collector.

I send you the affidavits. Please show them to Raum and do all you can.

(Signed) G. W. H.

EXHIBIT H.

UNITED STATES INTERNAL REVENUE,
COLLECTOR'S OFFICE, SIXTH DISTRICT NORTH CAROLINA,
Statesville, January 13, 1881.

SIR: I have the honor to return a letter from G. W. Hayes, "relative to loss incurred by P. B. Tatham, distiller in Cherokee County, through failure of the storekeeper and gauger to affix stamps properly to packages of whisky gauged by him, and through his incorrect gauging of said spirits," together with a report, made by my orders by Deputy Collector Axley, to whom I had referred the matter for investigation, &c.

Very respectfully,

J. J. MOTT,
Collector.

Hon. G. B. RAUM,
Commissioner Internal Revenue, Washington, D. C.

EXHIBIT I.

UNITED STATES INTERNAL REVENUE,
COLLECTOR'S OFFICE, SECOND DISTRICT GEORGIA,
Atlanta, April 11, 1881.

SIR: Your letter of the 9th instant, O. F. D., Ch., W. T. C., and W. J. M., inclosing copy of one from George W. Hayes, agent for P. B. Tatham, of Tomatola, Cherokee County, North Carolina, in relation to certain property seized in this district from Tatham & Newman on July 27, 1880, is duly received.

In reference to Mr. Hayes' letter, you ask if I can state what it is that is wanted, and also whether the parties have any just claim against the government.

If you will pardon me I will state, in answer to your first inquiry, that, judging from the tenor of Mr. Hayes' communication, the thing wanted seems to be money. But I must dissent from his proposition that "justice demands" that which he asks, or which I infer he asks, from the government.

Shortly after the seizure of the property in question, Mr. Hayes came to my office, accompanied by H. A. Morse (or Moss), the storekeeper and gauger at Tatham's distillery warehouse. The results of their joint conference with me were fully reported in my letter to you of September 15, 1880, to which you refer; and Mr. Hayes, as the agent of Tatham, appeared satisfied that under the circumstances the spirits were forfeited, and was content to pay the expenses incident to the seizure of the team and wagon as the condition of their release.

From the various statements of the case made before me, and the circumstances attending the seizure as stated by Deputy Collector Ware in his report of the same (a copy of which is herewith inclosed), I concluded that, while Storekeeper and Gauger Morse appeared to be culpable in the matter of turning spirits out of warehouse, it was quite probable that the packages seized had been tampered with in transitu from North Carolina to Georgia.

But no matter upon whom the responsibility for the condition of the casks and spirits at the time of seizure rests, it was clearly subject to forfeiture. If Mr. Tatham has indeed suffered unjustly, his recourse would seem to be, properly, upon the parties through whose inadvertence or improper conduct he sustained the loss, and not against the government for enforcing a law by the plain terms of which the property was made forfeit.

In view of the facts herein and previously stated in regard to this matter, I conclude that the parties have no just claim against the government.

Very respectfully,

ANDREW CLARK,
Collector.

Hon. GREEN B. RAUM,
Commissioner, Washington, D. C.

EXHIBIT K.

TOMATOLA, CHEROKEE COUNTY, NORTH CAROLINA,
March 31, 1881.

Hon. GREEN B. RAUM,
Commissioner Internal Revenue:

DEAR SIR: I wrote you some time since concerning two casks of whisky, a wagon and team of horses of P. B. Tatham's that were seized in Athens, Ga., in July, 1880. Since I wrote you F. P. Axley, a special deputy collector of the sixth district of North Carolina, has sent up several affidavits concerning the whisky, team, expenses, &c. I stated all of the facts when I wrote you some time ago, and it is useless for me to repeat them.

Tatham is badly in need of his money, as he has been in feeble health for twelve months. Will you write me at once whether or not Tatham's money will be refunded? If it will not be paid, we should like to know it, so that we can look in some other direction for the money.

I do not think we have asked anything more than justice demands.

Trusting to your honor to do justice to Tatham, I close, hoping to hear from you very soon, I am, yours obediently.

GEO. W. HAYES, Agent,
For P. B. TATHAM.

EXHIBIT L.

UNITED STATES INTERNAL REVENUE,
COLLECTOR'S OFFICE, SIXTH DISTRICT, NORTH CAROLINA,
Statesville, July 11, 1881.

Hon. G. B. RAUM,
Commissioner Internal Revenue, Washington, D. C.:

SIR: I have the honor to acknowledge receipt of your letter of 7th instant, W. T. C., Ch., O. F. D., W. J. M.

Upon receipt of your letter of April 22, 1881 (although I had no record of any letter from G. W. Hayes, concerning a seizure of property from P. B. Tatham, as referred to me), I addressed my deputy, in whose division Tatham's distillery is located, on the subject; as I deemed it probable, had such a letter been received at this office, that it would naturally be referred to him for investigation, or reply, as might be necessary.

I have received no reply from said deputy; and to-day I again write to him in the matter.

Very respectfully,

J. J. MOTT,
Collector.

EXHIBIT M.

TOMATOLA, CHEROKEE COUNTY, NORTH CAROLINA,
January 24, 1882.

Hon. R. B. VANCE,
Washington, D. C.:

MY DEAR SIR: I write you in reference to P. B. Tatham, who has been running a government distillery on Valley River. On or about the 15th of July, 1880, sent two casks of whisky to Athens, Ga., serial No. package 20 and 21; gallons of the No. 20, 48; of No. 21, 46; total, 94 gallons; date of warehouse stamp, January 12, 1880; tax-paid stamp, July 9, 1880; number of distillery, 1023, in the sixth district of North Carolina; serial number of warehouse stamp, R. 347620, and R. 347621. The whisky was engaged at the warehouse to be delivered in Athens, Ga., in 30 days. Accordingly it was delivered and was seized by one George Ware, a United States deputy collector, and the drivers sent to Atlanta jail, and remained there 18 days. Cause of seizure, the stamps had but 7 tacks (and the law required 8) and was not varnished as the law required. The stamp was put on a painted head, and was marked 100 proof when it was only 97, which was caused by the stoorkeeper and gauger having no hydrometer to proof the whisky.

The boys that were sent to Atlanta jail were released without a trial. The wagon and team were released after keeping them 54 days and paying the expense of keeping said team. The whisky was sold at $1.50 per gallon, $141.

I went three trips to look after it, which cost, with the expense of the team, $147, besides my own time, which amounted to $35. The whole amount that Tatham lost was $323. Can you pass a bill in Congress for Tatham to get his money? I went to Atlanta with Moss (the storekeeper and gauger). Clark (the collector) said to him if he would acknowledge that he was mistaken about the proof of the whisky that he would release it. Moss would not do it, although he had no hydrometers. To be plain about it, the United States storekeepers, gaugers here, are so drunk most of their time they do not know what they are doing, but of such is the radical party.

I wrote to Raum and you will find some affidavits on file there. They pay officers to protect the government and the distillers, and if they give the places to men who are not competent to fill their places the government should be responsible for all losses.

I want you to do all in your power to get Tatham's money for him. Will you see Raum in person and see if you can do anything with him? If you can do nothing with him, can you get the bill through in favor of Tatham? It is too much for him to lose it all. I will send you affidavits to substantiate all I say if you need them.

Have you done anything with the claim for the three mules I sent you?

If you can do anything with Tatham's matter, and need any more information, I will give you any you may desire.

Many thanks to you for public documents.

I hope to hear from you soon.

I am, yours truly,

GEO. W. HAYES.

EXHIBIT N.

UNITED STATES INTERNAL REVENUE,
Statesville, N. C., October 28, 1881.

Col. A. H. BROOKS,
Revenue Agent, Greensboro', N. C.

SIR: I have the honor to report that on the morning of October 24th, accompanied by R. H. Crawford, I visited the distillery of Q. D. Freeze, No. 1773, sixth district of North Carolina, located near Statesville. This distillery suspended in June last and is still under suspension. At the time of our visit we met Mr. Freeze at the distillery Upon examination we found that he had made one mash, which was found in one of the stills. This, Mr. Freeze at first claimed, was for his hogs, but afterwards admitted that he had made a regular mash of two bushels of corn-meal to which he had added one-half a peck of malt. He said the regular mash was four bushels of corn-meal and one peck of malt. The mash we found, Mr. Freeze said he made on Monday afternoon and put in the still Tuesday morning. I tasted the beer and found it sweet. Mr. Freeze said he intended starting the fires and running it off on Friday. All the tubs were turned bottom up, but when I turned some of them over they showed evidence of recent use. Freeze then pointed out the four tubs that the mash was made in, which we found in the still. Mr. Crawford and I drove at once to Statesville, but Mr. Coite, chief deputy collector in charge, could not be found. We looked through Statesville for him and finally went to his house, where I was told by a lady there that he had gone out hunting with Colonel Allen and would not return until evening. Collector Mott was also absent from town. In the afternoon we again went to the distillery of Q. D. Freeze, this time accompanied by general storekeeper and gauger, G. W. Sharpe, and upon examination found that the plug had been pulled off the discharge-pipe of the still and the beer allowed to run out on the floor and through into the creek. General Storekeeper and Gauger Sharpe upon being asked his opinion, made the remark that if he had found such a state of affairs he would report same to collector's office, and recommend seizure of distillery and belongings. Deputy Collector Coite came to the hotel about 7 o'clock p. m., and Mr. Crawford and I went with him to his office, where I made a verbal report to him of all that had taken place, and he decided to seize the distillery with all spirits in the warehouse in the morning, without delay. The next morning we found it rumored on the street that some parties had visited the distillery of Q. E. Freeze during the night and removed the stills and caps from the distillery and also the whisky in the warehouse. On calling at the collector's office in relation to the matter we found Deputy Collector Coite apparently ignorant of events that were said to have transpired during the night, and on that point we did not enlighten him. He said he was waiting for some one to come in that he could send out to make the seizure; was also waiting for the arrival of a bill of sale that one W. A. Daniels, a distiller near Freeze's distillery claimed he held, duly executed by Q. D. Freeze to him last June, covering all the whisky in the warehouse.

Mr. Daniels seemed to be very much exercised about developments made at Freeze's distillery. Deputy Collector Stockton reported to me that he had held a conversation with Mr. Daniels that morning, during which Mr. Daniels had remarked to the effect that the revenue officers had been to Freeze's distillery, found things wrong, and were going to seize everything, but that we, meaning himself and unknown party or parties, must get the best of them. Deputy Collector Davis, in the office, also reported to me that during Tuesday afternoon, shortly after we left the collector's office, Mr. Daniels came to the office very much excited, and wanted to know what was going to be done about the whisky in Freeze's warehouse, making the statement at the time that it belonged to him. Accompanied by Deputy Collector Stockton we again visited the distillery, supposed to belong to Freeze, to ascertain if the reports we had heard were true. We found the stills and caps removed, leaving the worms in the tubs. On looking through the cracks in the warehouse, we found that the whisky had also been removed. Upon careful examination of the warehouse lock, we found it in the same condition as upon our visit when accompanied by Storekeeper and Gauger Sharpe, showing conclusively that the whisky had been removed by some one who had possession of the warehouse key. Upon further inquiry on our return, we ascertained from Deputy Collector Collyer that the key was in possession of W. G. Bogle, storekeeper and gauger, previous to that day, and that his book showed that said key was delivered to said Bogle about three weeks ago, but was returned by him that morning, October 26. W. G. Bogle was at the date of procuring key, and up to October 26, storekeeper and gauger at distillery of W. A. Daniels, No. 1003. We visited Mr. Bogle at his distillery, and asked him in relation to said key. He at first denied all knowledge of it to me, saying that he had never had it in his possession. Upon asking him it happened that it was returned by him at the office that same morning, he answered at once that he was mistaken in saying he never had had it, but only had it that once, and under the following circumstances: Mr. Daniels came to him that morning, as he was about ready to start to his distillery, and asked him if he was going to the collector's office before going out. Bogle answered he was not, but could if Daniels wished him to. Daniels then said he had the key to Freeze's distillery warehouse, and asked Bogle to return it to the collector's office. Mr. Bogle at once complied with his request.

Upon further questioning, Mr. Bogle further admitted that he had made two withdrawals during the last three weeks from Freeze's warehouse under direction of Mr. Daniels. Mr. Bogle said he asked Mr. Daniels if he had the key; Mr. Daniels said yes. Mr. Daniels unlocked the warehouse for Mr. Bogle, and after withdrawal was made Mr. Daniels locked up the warehouse, retaining key in his possession. I directed Deputy Collector Coite to send for Storekeeper and Gauger Bogle. He at once did so, and sent Storekeeper and Gauger Summers to take his place. I then directed Mr. Bogle to come to the office, there confronted him with Deputy Collector Collyer, in presence of Deputy Collector Coite, chief in charge. I then asked Mr. Collyer who he gave the key to Freeze's warehouse to. He said, Mr. Bogle. I asked him if he was sure of it. He said yes, showing as evidence his book with memorandum that key was delivered to Bogle. Mr. Bogle denied it entire, saying again that he never had the key until it was given him by Daniels that morning, October 26. I asked Bogle who had the key at the time he made the withdrawals for Daniels. He said that Mr. Daniels had it; that Mr. Daniels unlocked the door, and that after withdrawal Mr. Daniels locked the door and retained the key in his possession. I then said to Mr. Collyer, you and Mr. Bogle differ very much in your statement as to who had possession of this warehouse key. Mr. Collyer still insisted that he gave it to Bogle. Deputy Collector Coite then made the following suggestion to Mr. Collyer, saying that "Mr. Collyer, don't you mean that you gave the key to Daniels for Mr. Bogle, thinking they were for Mr. B., as he was present at the time? Did you not give it to Mr. Daniels, thinking he would hand it to Mr. Bogle, and that it would be returned to the office as soon as withdrawal was made? You don't mean to say that you gave it to Mr. Bogle, but that you gave it to Mr. Daniels." Mr. Collyer hesitated somewhat in replying, saying, "Yes, I think that was it; yes, that was it." I then asked Mr. Collyer if it was such a common thing for him to give keys to distillers direct that he was so uncertain in this case. He hesitated somewhat in answering, but said, "No; but what Mr. Coite says about this case must be the way it happened." Mr. Bogle admitted to me that he told me a lie about the key at first, saying he was willing to tell a lie, if not too big a one, to avoid being a witness or otherwise implicated in this case. I then said to them, "Gentlemen, now let me see if I have the sense of your joint meaning, viz: That Mr. Daniels, a distiller, came to this office between two and three weeks ago, and got the key to the warehouse of Q. D. Freeze, and retained it in his possession from that time until this morning; and that in the mean time the stills and all the whisky in Q. D. Freeze's warehouse have been stolen; and that this morning Mr. Daniels handed the key to Mr. Bogle, who returned it to this office; and that it would appear from this that in the first place Mr. Daniels was a messenger from Bogle, and, in the second place, that Bogle was a messenger from Daniels, returning the key; am I to understand you this way, gentlemen?" They all acknowledged that my understanding was correct.

We begun search for the missing stills and whisky at once, first getting out a warrant for arrest of Q. D. Freeze, and a search-warrant for premises of W. A. Daniels, near the distillery of Q. D. Freeze. Deputy Collector Stockton got out the search-warrant at my direction, and accompanied us that afternoon to examine the buildings, but nothing was found that afternoon. As the case seemed to implicate several parties including officers, I thought best you should be present, and accordingly telegraphed you to come to Statesville. The next morning in your company I drove to Freeze's distillery, and found at the distillery one J. C. Barclay, a bondsman of Q. D. Freeze. Upon information obtained of him we returned to Statesville, got out another search warrant, and, accompanied by Mr. Crawford and a storekeeper and gauger by name of T. A. Gill, returned to further examine the buildings and ground of W. A. Daniels. By using iron rods in probing the ground in a freshly plowed field near the house, we were soon rewarded by finding the whisky buried in a gully running through the ot at various depths under ground. We discovered there seventeen packages out of the nineteen that the warehouse books showed were in the warehouse. The seventeen packages contained seven hundred and thirty gallons of spirits. We procured teams and had the seventeen packages removed to Statesville and stored in a cellar used for such purposes under the collector's office. The same day the tax was paid on all of the spirits stored in the two warehouses belonging to the two distilleries that were run in name of W. A. Daniels, viz, Nos. 646 and 1003. Said spirits were removed to Statesville, and stored in the warehouse of Pinkus & Co. Soon after its arrival there, we went in and caused its detention, having reason to believe that Daniels was the real owner of Freeze's distillery, and that Freeze was simply a figure-head. We feared a rescue of the spirits might be attempted, but up to the time of your leaving on the midnight train to return to Greensboro' nothing had been attempted.

The next morning I went to the collector's office and directed Deputy Collector Coite to seize the two distilleries of W. A. Daniels, Nos. 646 and 1003, as well as the nine packages of detained spirits in warehouse of Pinkus & Co., detained by us last night. He at once took steps to do as I requested, and seized the following property: 6 copper stills, caps, piping, and fixtures; 3 barrels spirits (about 60 gallons); 1½ barrels gin; ½ barrel spirits (about 10 gallons). (The 3½ barrels spirits and 1½ barrels gin were found in an outhouse in rear of dwelling-house on Daniels' premises near the distillery.) Ten bushels rye and fifteen bushels of meal in the distilleries; 480 gallons of beer and 60 gallons singlings destroyed. During the forenoon J. C. Barclay, the heretofore-mentioned bondsman of Q. D. Freeze, came to my room and said he knew where Freeze was and could produce him at any time. At my suggestion he went to Freeze and advised him to surrender himself to the commissioner. Freeze did so, and is held in $250 bail for his appearance on the 28th day of November. The date was fixed at November 28 to give me time to work up further evidence against Daniels, and also to suit convenience of district attorney, who I understand will be engaged at Asheville court until about that time. I then proceeded to get out a warrant for the arrest of W. A. Daniels. In examining his house in Statesville for him we found the following property: 4 copper stills and fixtures complete; 2 extra worms; 1 pump and piping; 3 separators.

Two of the above stills are evidently the ones stolen from Freeze's distillery, as one of them was wet inside and had meal sticking to the sides, showing recent use. The above goods were seized by Deputy Collector Coite at my suggestion. Accompanied by the deputy marshal, who had the warrant, we proceeded on our search for W. A. Daniels during the afternoon, but did not succeed in finding him. Upon examining report of appraisal of the 17 packages of spirits found buried on premises of W. A. Daniels, I found value placed at 20 cents per gallon above tax. I thought that too low according to present market value of the goods, and so told Mr. Coite. He insisted that it was a fair valuation and was not inclined to have it changed. I did not argue the matter with him, but gave him to understand that I did not think it a fair valuation. When he furnished me a copy of appraisement at my request I found that appraisement had been changed to 40 cents per gallon above tax instead of 20 cents. The copy of said second appraisement is herein inclosed. After above developments, upon visiting the collector's office we were shown by Deputy Collector Coite a copy of a statement made by W. A. Daniels evidently for the purpose of clearing Storekeeper and Gauger W. G. Bogle from complicity in above matter. Said copy I herein inclose. I have no confidence whatever in W. G. Bogle as storekeeper and gauger, and believe he has been acting as a spy upon our movements in interests of W. A. Daniels, and would respectfully recommend his immediate removal. W. P. A. White, storekeeper and gauger at distillery No. 646 of W. A Daniels, is a brother-in-law of said Daniels. While I have no evidence of his complicity in helping to remove the whisky from Freeze's warehouse, yet from remarks made by him am led to believe that he knew of its removal at the time and also knew of its whereabouts. I would respectfully request also in his case immediate removal from duties as storekeeper and gauger. The witness to statement made by Daniels relating to key of warehouse of Q. D. Freeze herein inclosed is also a brother-in-law of W. A. Daniels.

Throughout above transactions I have received valuable information and aid from Storekeeper and Gauger T. A. Gill, now unassigned to duty. I believe him to be a faithful and efficient officer, and would respectfully recommend his immediate assignment to some distillery now in operation. Mr. Gill's name will again appear in a report I am about to make relating to bargains between the distillers and storekeepers and gaugers of this district.

By to-morrow morning I expect to have evidence upon which I can direct seizure of the teams that were used in removing spirits from Freeze's warehouse if they are to be found.

Very respectfully,

EDWARD McLEER,
Revenue Agent.

EXHIBIT O.

UNITED STATES INTERNAL REVENUE,
Greensboro', N. C., October 28, 1881.

Hon. GREEN B. RAUM,
Commissioner Internal Revenue, Washington, D. C.:

SIR: I have the honor to report that on Monday, the 24th instant, I visited Raleigh, N. C., intending to proceed from there to New Berne for the purpose of attending United States court as a witness. But at Raleigh I ascertained that the district judge was sick and that there would be no court in New Berne this term. So, after assigning Revenue Agent Harrison to duty in the fourth district, I returned to this city

Tuesday night. When about starting for Winston to finish the investigation of the case against Deputy Collector Johnson, I received a telegram from Revenue Agent McLeer, at Statesville, asking me to come there at once on important business. Accordingly, I started, arriving there at 3 a. m. yesterday. I learned from Mr. McLeer that on Tuesday last he and Mr. Crawford, who are on duty in the sixth district, visited the distillery of Z. D. Freeze, No. 1773, two miles from Statesville, sixth district North Carolina, and found Mr. Freeze engaged in making a mash at his distillery, which at the time was under suspension. I would state that Freeze is only a figurehead for W. A. Daniels, who is also the owner of three other distilleries in the vicinity of Freeze's. After making the discovery above alluded to, Revenue Agent McLeer and Mr. Crawford at once proceeded to Statesville to report the facts to Chief Deputy Coite (Collector Mott being absent). They were unable to see Mr. Coite, so no action was taken that day. On Tuesday night the stills were removed from the distillery, the mash run out, the warehouse entered, and nineteen barrels eight hundred and five gallons of spirits stolen. Search was made all day Wednesday for the stolen spirits, but without result. Yesterday morning right after breakfast Revenue Agent McLeer and myself visited Freeze's distillery and made a careful inspection of the premises and warehouse. From wagon and mule tracks, together with what little information we could gather as to the time of the occurrence, we came to the conclusion that the spirits could not have been moved a great distance on the night that it was stolen, and we determined to make another search of premises which had been searched the day previous. We accordingly returned to Statesville, where we procured a search-warrant and two iron rods for sounding the ground, and after dinner returned to the suspected premises, within a quarter of a mile of Freeze's distillery. After searching the barns and outhouses without discovering anything, we commenced the search of a new plowed field, and by the use of the iron rods in less than half an hour after our arrival we found seventeen barrels of the stolen spirits in the middle of this field, there put under ground. We dug it out, and just at dark last night stored it safely in the store-room under Collector Mott's office. The premises on which this stolen spirits was concealed are owned by W. A. Daniels, the distiller, and whom I am prepared to prove was the real owner of Freeze's distillery, and who removed with his own wagons and teams, and concealed on his own premises, the spirits stolen from Freeze's distillery. We made diligent search for the two missing barrels, but were unable to find them, and I have reason to believe that the two packages of spirits were stolen by Daniels previous to the visit of Revenue Agent McLeer and Mr. Crawford. For it now appears that on the 28th of September Daniels went to the collector's office for the purpose of withdrawing one package of spirits from the distillery warehouse of Z. D. Freeze, and at that time the key of Freeze's warehouse was delivered to Daniels, and said key was not returned to the collector's office until Wednesday morning, October 26, after the spirits had been stolen, when Daniels, in front of the collector's office, handed them to Mr. Bogle, a storekeeper at one of his distilleries, who returned them to the office. The warehouse of Freeze had not been broken open, but had been entered by removing the government lock with the use of a key, and after the spirits had been stolen the warehouse door had been closed and locked. Last evening, while we were busy digging up the stolen spirits, I noticed that tax-paid spirits were being taken from one of Daniels's warehouses, and before we had finished loading the last of the stolen spirits on wagons the last of nine barrels of spirits in two of Daniels's warehouses near by had been tax paid and were being loaded on wagons.

Revenue Agent McLeer and myself followed this spirits into Statesville, and failing to find Deputy Collector Coite, we detained the nine packages in possession of Pickers & Co., Statesville, and I instructed Revenue Agent McLeer to request the seizure of these spirits under section 3281 Revised Statutes. It was reported last night at Statesville that Mr. Daniels had run away. A warrant has been issued for the arrest of Freeze, who has left for parts unknown, and a warrant will be issued this morning for the arrest of Daniels. A full and more detailed report will be forwarded you as soon as received from Revenue Agent McLeer.

Very respectfully,

A. H. BROOKS,
Revenue Agent.

P. S.—Since writing the above, I have received a telegram from Revenue Agent McLeer, stating that he has this day searched the residence of W. A. Daniels, distiller, and found in the cellar of his house four stills and caps, six worms, and other materials, and secured evidence identifying one of the stills removed from Freeze's distillery Tuesday night.

Very respectfully,

A. H. BROOKS,
Revenue Agent.

EXHIBIT P.

UNITED STATES INTERNAL REVENUE,
COLLECTOR'S OFFICE, DISTRICT NORTH CAROLINA,
Statesville, N. C., October 27, 1881.

I hereby certify that I had the keys of distillery No. 1773 of Q. D. Freeze, and that when W. G. Bogle tax-paid two barrels of spirits in warehouse of said distillery, I retained said keys and did not hand them to W. G. Bogle until the morning of the 26th of October, 1881, about 8 o'clock a. m.

W. A. DANIELS.

Witness,
W. C. MORRISON.

UNITED STATES INTERNAL REVENUE,
Greensboro', N. C., October 31, 1881.

HON. GREEN B. RAUM,
Commissioner of Internal Revenue, Washington, D. C.:

SIR: Referring to my letter of the 28th instant, reporting frauds discovered in the 6th district of North Carolina, and the recovery of seventeen barrels of spirits stolen from the distillery warehouse of Q. D. Freeze, on Tuesday night, October 25, I have the honor to transmit herewith report of Revenue Agent McLeer, this day received, giving a detailed account of the frauds discovered, and of property seized. I also transmit copy of a certificate filed in the office of the collector of the 6th district, on October 27, 1881, by W. A. Daniels, distiller, certifying that he had the keys of Freeze's distillery warehouse in his possession, at the time said distillery warehouse was robbed of its contents.

Very respectfully,

A. H. BROOKS,
Revenue Agent.

EXHIBIT Q.

MOUNT STERLING, IREDELL COUNTY, November 1.

Mr. PHILLIPS:

MY DEAR SIR: As you were a friend of my father, the late Chief Justice Pearson, I take the liberty of writing to you of an indignity which I have been called upon to suffer at the hands of United States officers. I will prepare what is to follow by saying that as soon as the war was over I felt it best that we should have peace, and I have always defended the general government, and I assure that such conduct on the part of government officials tends to keep alive the feeling which all of us so much deplore. A man named McLeer, from Burkley, and another named Crawford, from Chicago, are in this country as special detectives or agents. Soon after they came they seized a distillery about four miles from where we live. In it were 18 barrels of whisky. A night or two after it was seized the whisky was stolen, and was found, by the report of a man who was on the bond, buried in the ground with wheat sowed over it. Just after it was found the man, whose name is Daniels, ran away. Imagine my astonishment at having McLeer and Crawford, with a deputy marshal, named Ayrs, come to my house and say that they had information that Daniels was concealed on our premises and that they had come to search the house to find him. I told them that Daniels had never been in the house or even in the yard; that I had, four or five years ago, sold him 25 bushels of corn, and that he still owed me $2.50 of the money; that further than this I knew nothing of him, and that they must have been misinformed and were mistaken in the place. They said no; that they knew it was the place. Mr. Davis then came up, after speaking very angrily about it to them, he asked who had sworn out the warrant. McLeer said that he had. I then said let them search. I am very anxious to prosecute them, but have delayed having the papers served to give them an opportunity of apologizing. If they do no not do so I will have such reparation as the courts can give.

Both the commissioners in Statesville say that they issued no warrant to the men, and you will readily see what a high-handed act they have been guilty of; and I will take it as a great favor and an act of justice if you will lay this matter before the Secretary of the Treasury. I feel that the government have only to know of such conduct, and that a speedy dismissal of the men will follow. The idea that my father's daughter should be accused of harboring a thief is a new one in North Carolina, and I feel that I can appeal to you as my father's friend to let the matter be known in official circles. I have been entirely Republican in my views, and Mr. Davis has for several years voted the Republican ticket. I could have borne the insult better if it had been offered by Democrats. I am sorry to have to write you of such an outrage in North Carolina. I never had an interest, directly or indirectly, in whisky or tobacco. Mr. Davis has been for several years a revenue storekeeper, and was, for a short time, at one of Daniels' distilleries, but this was at least three years ago, and can have no connection with the matter. With regrets for having to trespass on your valuable time, and hoping you will attend to this matter for me,

I am, with high respect, yours,

MARY DAVIS.

I have felt that it would be better to write to you than to either of the Senators, and I feel satisfied that the United States Government will not allow such an outrage on an unoffending citizen to go unpunished.

Please let me hear from you at your earliest convenience. My brother, Mr. Pearson, will, I think, write you soon on the subject as soon as I can see him.

EXHIBIT R.

STATESVILLE N. C., November 2.

Hon. GREEN B. RAUM:

MY DEAR SIR: There are in this country at present two United States officers who have treated me with great indignity. I have papers ready to bring suit against them for damages, but have decided to hold the matter for a short time, and, upon proper apologies from them, to withdraw the matter altogether. In the mean time I have decided to lay the matter before you, feeling assured that the United States Government does not wish to oppress any of its citizens. Mr. McLeer and Mr. Crawford seized a distillery about four miles from where I live. In it were eighteen barrels of whisky; a short time after it was seized the whisky was stolen out at night and found by the officers, on information of a man who was on Daniels' bond. Daniels, who is a man of general bad character, ran away. After he went off, of course, they made rigid search for him. Imagine my surprise when they came to my place and said they were searching for Daniels and had information that he was concealed in our house and they had come to search the premises. I told them they must be mistaken, as the man had never been in the house or even in the yard; that four or five years ago I had sold him twenty-five bushels of corn, and that he still owed me $2.50 of the money. They said they were not mistaken and they intended to search the house. I said very well. Just then Mr. Davis came up; he spoke to them very angrily, and said he would like to know who had sworn out the warrant. McLeer said he had. They then made a sham search. If they believed they ought to make the search, they deserve punishment for the kind of search they made. Both the commissioners in the town say that they issued no warrant to them, so they acted upon their own responsibility. Such things as this help to keep up the feeling that is so much to be deplored between the sections, and I make this statement to you feeling assured that you will give no countenance to such high-handed actions. For my position, I am the daughter of the late Chief Justice Pearson, of North Carolina, than whom no man was ever more loyal both to State and general government. I refer you to the Hon. S. F. Phillips, solicitor-general; Hon. Thos. Settle; Hon. R. P. Dick, judge of the circuit court; both the Senators, and all the members from North Carolina; the governor and state officers of North Carolina; the supreme court of North Carolina; in fact, for my character and standing, I can refer you to any prominent man in the State, in either party.

I will be glad to hear from you, and I feel satisfied that the ear of the government can be always reached by the humblest of her citizens. Being sorry to have to transgress upon your time, and trusting that you will give me any redress that may be in your power, I am sir,

Very respectfully, yours,

MARY DAVIS,
Statesville, N. C.

EXHIBIT S.

DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE,
Washington, November 4, 1881.

General RAUM,
Commissioner of Internal Revenue:

MY DEAR SIR: I submit the inclosed note for your inspection. I do not personally know Mrs. Davis. I have known of her, and that she is a lady—a daughter of the late Chief Justice Pearson, of North Carolina, to whom the peace of the country is greatly indebted since 1865. I beg that you will (and have no doubt that you will) look into this matter.

Very sincerely yours,

S. F. PHILLIPS.

EXHIBIT T.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT,
OFFICE OF INTERNAL REVENUE,
Washington, November 4, 1881.

ED. MCLEER, Esq.,
Revenue Ayent, Statesville, N. C.:

SIR: I inclose copy of a letter received from Mrs. Mary Davis, of Statesville, N. C., and of my reply thereto.

Please make a full report in regard to her case; by what authority you entered her premises, and what occurred there.

While it is of importance that the laws shall be enforced, the utmost care must be observed to avoid encroaching on the rights of innocent persons, and, if you have made a mistake in this matter, it will be proper for you to see Mrs. Davis and explain everything to her, and satisfy her that there was no intentional wrong.

Very respectfully,

GREEN B. RAUM,
Commissioner.

EXHIBIT U.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT,
OFFICE OF INTERNAL REVENUE,
Washington, November 4, 1881.

MRS. MARY DAVIS,
Statesville, N. C.:

MY DEAR MADAM: I acknowledge receipt of your letter of the 2d instant, and have given the same personal attention.

Revenue Agent McLeer has been in the internal-revenue service a number of years. I have found him to be a man of good judgment and discretion. I regret to find you expressing an opinion adverse to this. I will call upon Mr. McLeer for a report in regard to his visit to your house, and furnish you with a copy of his statement.

My aim is to have the laws observed and enforced. No officer is authorized to infringe upon the rights of a citizen. If officers violate the law it necessarily will produce dissatisfaction in the minds of citizens.

The frauds of Freeze and Daniels were such as to require prompt punishment. If Mr. McLeer, in his endeavor to enforce the laws against these parties, has overstepped the bounds of propriety in regard to you and your premises, you are entitled to reparation as public as was the encroachment upon your privacy.

Very respectfully,

GREEN B. RAUM,
Commissioner.

Since writing the above your letter to Hon. S. F. Phillips has been shown me.

G. B. R.

EXHIBIT V.

UNITED STATES INTERNAL REVENUE,
Charlotte, N. C., November 6, 1881.

Col. A. H. BROOKS,
Revenue Agent, Greensboro, N. C.:

SIR: I have the honor to report further evidence and transactions as follows, in case of W. A. Daniels and Q. D. Freeze.

Saturday evening Mr. J. M. Sharpe called upon me in relation to the affairs of W. A. Daniels, giving as reason for his interest in said affairs that he and his brother, W. T. Sharpe, were the actual owners of distilleries 646 and 1003 operated by W. A. Daniels, also that Sharpe Bros. owned the stock fed at the two distilleries. He further stated that they owned three distilleries in that locality, two of them as above, the third about half a mile beyond those two. As that corresponds with the position of distillery run in the name of Q. D. Freeze, it was no doubt the one he meant as the third distillery owned by Sharpe Bros., although as soon as he realized what he had said, took the trouble to say that the distillery seized, No. 1773, was not the third one owned by them, and that he knew nothing whatever of 1773. Upon being asked how many distilleries there were in that locality, within a half a mile of each other, he at first said three, but immediately corrected himself and said four, the three owned by Sharpe Bros. and the one operated by Q. D. Freeze. I could find only the three, 1773, 646, and 1003, and am satisfied that Mr. Sharpe said four in order to cover up the blunder made, by admitting that Sharpe Bros. owned all three of the distilleries, 646, 1003, and 1773. I took no apparent notice of his blunder, but continued talking with him about the case in question. He said further that Daniels rented this third distillery from Sharpe Bros., as well as 646 and 1003; that Daniels was operating three distilleries; that Daniels was the man who paid them the last rent for the third distillery; also that the third distillery had been under suspension since last spring.

On Monday morning, October 31, W. A. Daniels came in and surrendered himself before the United States Commissioner, waived examination and gave bond of $500 for his appearance at the next term of court, J. M. Sharpe becoming his bondsman. Before he came in, however, his friends had been to see the Commissioner to learn the amount of bond that would be required. The Commissioner told them $500. I remonstrated with him for taking bond for such a small amount in this case, as, in my opinion, it should have been $2,500 at least, but could not get amount changed as he said amount was large enough to hold him.

We have received much valuable aid and information from Jno. C. Barclay, one of the bondsmen of Q. D. Freeze, also the names of several parties who could give us more. The names of those parties and the facts they are familiar with are as follows:

Cal. Goyle (colored) says he works for Wesley Nicholson, near Statesville. Before day, on the morning of October 26, saw W. A. Daniels, Scott Gay (colored), the two distillers from 646 and 1003, and another person whose name he did not know, working near the house in the lot where the whisky was buried. This information was given Deputy Collector Stockton by Wesley Nicholson, now one of the special force recently appointed in Collector Mott's district. Daniel Coal, who lives about 9 miles from Statesville, on the Charlotte road, was passing by the premises of W. A. Daniels the morning of October 26, before sunrise, saw Adolphus Bolles (regular distiller at 1003), Scott Gay (teamster), and Newton White (son of W. P. A. White, S. & G.), plowing in the field where the whisky was buried. Monday afternoon, October 31, on calling at the house of Jno. C. Barclay we met Q. D. Freeze, who related to us the following facts, with the distinct understanding that any information so given was given of his own free will, uninfluenced by promises of any kind from any quarter. Mr. Freeze said that W. A. Daniels owned and run distillery 1773 under the name of Q. D. Freeze; that he had worked for Mr. Daniels since the distillery was built for $20 per month, boarding himself; that all the interest he had of any description in distillery No. 1773 was the salary of $20 per month; that Daniels bought all the meal and other materials used in the distillery.

That he (Freeze) had nothing to do with the removal of the whisky, and knew nothing about it until after it had taken place. The next day after the whisky was stolen Daniels came to him and made a proposition that both run away. Daniels remarked to him, "if those men can't find the whisky to-day it will be fixed." Mr. Call, a neighbor, and Jno. C. Barclay were present when Daniels remarked to Freeze, "if we can hold this whisky now we can beat them." Considerable evidence of lesser importance, not embodied in either of my reports on these cases, can be produced in court when needed.

Very respectfully,

EDWARD McLEER,
Revenue Agent.

EXHIBIT W.

STATESVILLE, November 7.

General RAUM:

MY DEAR SIR: Your kind letter has just been received, and I assure you it gives me great pleasure to find that the government is all that I have claimed for it, and that it is only necessary to make complaint to have the matter investigated. I had employed two lawyers, and affidavit was made and all was ready for serving the warrant. I shall, through Dr. Mott, notify the men that if they will write an apology and pay the lawyers, &c., in all probably about $25, that I will be satisfied. I will then publish the whole thing including your letter and Mr. Phillips', and I assure you I will feel in a great measure repaid for my trouble, which has been great, if this matter is the means of showing this community that the United States Government not only does not encourage (as many believe) the oppression of its people, but that they have only to complain and the matter will be investigated. I am sorry now that I did not just write to you instead of taking legal steps against them, but I felt that I must have redress. There is no one who condemns more than I do, and have always done, any irregularity, and I have no doubt but that Daniels and the other man are both guilty, but Mr. McLeer in his zeal should be more careful, and at least have some grounds for his suspicions before he accuses a lady of concealing a thief. None regret more than I do all conflicts between the State and general government officials, but if you will take this matter home to yourself, you will see that the insult was very great. Hoping, my dear sir, that this thief and all others who defraud the government may meet with their just deserts, and that all who are imposed upon may have such men as you and Mr. Phillips to apply to,

I am, with respect, very truly yours,

MARY DAVIS.

EXHIBIT X.

UNITED STATES INTERNAL REVENUE,
Greensboro', N. C., January 18, 1882.

Hon. GREEN B. RAUM,
Commissioner Internal Revenue, Washington, D. C.:

SIR: Referring to your letter of the 16th instant, initials O. F. D. Ch. and W. T. C inquiring what has been done in the case of Q. D. Freeze and W. A. Daniels since your letter to me of the 4th instant, I have the honor to report that I have not received the letter referred to. There has been no further action taken since Daniels and Freeze were held for the action of the United States court. We have procured additional evidence against Daniels, and I am satisfied we shall be able to convict him. I have the honor to transmit herewith copy of form (117) on file in the United States attorney's office here, in regard to the seizure of nine packages of spirits, removed October 27, from W. A. Daniels's distillery warehouses while we were engaged in digging up the 17 barrels of spirits stolen from Freeze's warehouse by Daniels, on the night of October 25. The form (117) on file in the United States attorney's office is in Chief Deputy Coite's handwriting. I would especially call your attention to the pains taken to prepare the defense in this case.

Very respectfully,

A. H. BROOKS,
Revenue Agent.

UNITED STATES INTERNAL REVENUE,
Greensboro', N. C., November 11, 1881.

Hon. GREEN B. RAUM,
Commissioner of Internal Revenue, Washington, D. C.:

SIR: Revenue Agent Brooks requested me to come to Greensboro' the latter part of this week to see if any mail had arrived requiring attention during his absence. Among the mail I find two reports of mine relating to matters in the sixth district, North Carolina, which I herein inclose to you, retaining copies for perusal of Revenue Agent Brooks.

Yours, very respectfully,

EDWARD McLEER,
Revenue Agent.

EXHIBIT Y.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, OFFICE OF INTERNAL REVENUE,
Washington, D. C., November 12, 1881.

Mrs. MARY E. DAVIS,
Statesville, N. C.:

MY DEAR MADAM: I have received the report of Revenue Agent McLeer of the circumstances attending his visit to your house with a warrant for the arrest of W. A. Daniels.

It seems that the agent acted upon what he subsequently learned to be misinformation, and that there were some misunderstandings all round. Mr. McLeer assures me that it was not his intention to act in such a manner as to give either you or Mr. Davis cause of offense, and that, finding he has done so, he has tendered you a letter of full apology.

I trust this will be satisfactory, and that you will never again be subjected to similar annoyance. Regretting that the necessity should have arisen for this correspondence,

I remain, madam, yours, respectfully,

GREEN B. RAUM,
Commissioner.

EXHIBIT Z.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, OFFICE OF INTERNAL REVENUE,
Washington, November 16, 1881.

A. H. BROOKS, Esq.,
Revenue Agent, Greensboro', N. C.:

SIR: It seems that in the effort to arrest W. A. Daniels, after the discovery of the fraudulent proceedings at his distillery, Revenue Agent McLeer visited the house of Mrs. Mary Davis, a respectable and well-connected lady near Statesville, and, acting upon misinformation, made some sort of a search in the expectation of finding Daniels concealed on the premises. Mrs. Davis made complaint to me, directly, and also through Solicitor-General Phillips, of the conduct of Mr. McLeer, and I forwarded a copy of her letter to Revenue Agent McLeer requesting his explanation and report. McLeer forwarded me his statement of the facts, together with a copy of a letter of apology, which he said he had already tendered Mrs. Davis and her husband; on receipt of which I wrote to Mrs. Davis expressing a hope that the matter had been satisfactorily adjusted.

Mrs. Davis, however, does not appear to be satisfied, and demands a public apology and the payment of $25 for lawyer's fees. There seems to be some discrepancy between her statements and those of Revenue Agent McLeer as to what actually occurred. I inclose Revenue Agent McLeer's report and Mrs. Davis's last letter to me, and would be glad if you would look into the matter, and give me your report and recommendation on the facts as found by you.

Very respectfully,

GREEN B. RAUM,
Commissioner.

EXHIBIT AA.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, OFFICE OF INTERNAL REVENUE,
Washington, December 6, 1881.

Hon J. J. MOTT,
Collector, Statesville, N. C.:

SIR: Some weeks ago I verbally called your attention to the complaint made by Mrs. Mary Davis, living near Statesville, of the conduct of Revenue Agent McLeer, who went, in company with Deputy Marshal Ayrs, to aid in the arrest of W. A. Daniels, who was supposed to have taken refuge at the house of Mr. E. H. Davis, the husband of Mrs. Mary Davis.

The facts stated to me are that when inquiry was made as to whether Daniels was at the house the question was asked by Mr. Davis as to who had sworn out the warrant, McLeer answering that he had. It seems that Mrs. Davis, supposing that it was a search-warrant, stated to the officers that they were at liberty to search the house for Daniels, and that under this authority they entered her house. It is not claimed that any trespass was committed, either upon the person or property of Mr. or Mrs. Davis, or that any offensive language was used towards them.

Under this state of facts Mrs. Davis insists that I shall condemn the acts of these officers as unlawful, and pay her twenty-five dollars to remunerate her for certain attorney's fees that she claims to have incurred in respect to the case.

I have written Mrs. Davis assuring her that there was no disposition on the part of the office here to have the officers go beyond their strict line of duty.

Revenue Agent McLeer has written her a letter which I consider an ample apology. In my judgment she has no cause of action, and there is no appropriation out of which I could pay her the twenty-five dollars she demands. I think that she is entirely too punctilious in this matter.

Please inform Storekeeper and Gauger E. H. Davis that if he cannot control the action of his wife in this matter, I will deem it my duty to revoke his assignment, and to request the Secretary of the Treasury to revoke his commission.

Very respectfully,

GREEN B. RAUM,
Commissioner.

EXHIBIT BB.

MOUNT STERLING, December 15.

General RAUM:

MY DEAR SIR: I have waited patiently to hear from you, and have concluded to write again, as I wish to have this very unpleasant matter definitely settled before we begin the new year. If I find it necessary to resort to the courts for redress from a most unjustifiable outrage, I shall hand for publication to the papers in the State an account of the whole matter; also the correspondence that has passed. If Mr. McLeer had had a search-warrant for the premises, I should have made no complaint, and I cannot believe that you can consider that the warrant for Daniels gave him any right on my premises, and, as I told Mr. Brooks, "when a man, who I have reason to suppose is in authority and knows what he is doing, comes to my house for any purpose whatever, I will make no resistance," and must depend for redress upon the courts. McLeer's conduct since has proved how entirely unworthy of belief he is, and I must say that I am much disappointed to find that the matter seems to be at a standstill. The points which I make are that McLeer, without a warrant, searched my house for a criminal, and that since the matter he has misrepresented the facts, and that his writing in a letter, which Mr. Brooks showed me, that if I considered myself aggrieved, &c., &c., had added insult to injury, and shows that, besides being a violator of the law in trying to cover up what he has done, his conduct proves that he is not fit to hold any position of trust. Really, it is more like Nihilist Ruina than Leer Anima, and what more fruitful theme could my Democratic friends have than that I should have been so treated in the house of my friends. I cannot tamely submit to such an indignity, but I assure you it will give me pain if I shall have to show that the government will sustain an official in such conduct. The apology must say that without a warrant, and under a misapprehension, they made the search, and the expense paid, or the whole thing will be made public, first in the papers and then in the courts. Tardy justice burns much of its fire, and I feel that I have been very badly treated. McLeer's subterfuge about meaning the warrant for Daniels, when asked who swore out the warrant for them to come here, and he said "I did," is quite in keeping with his other conduct, and shows what he is. Then their threats against my husband, which I heard of after I last wrote you, show what they will resort to to conceal their conduct, as if I do not know that the government does not expect a man to keep a position by submitting to insult. I am quite sorry to have been forced to intrude again upon your time, and I trust that you will write at once and let me know if I am to be forced into the courts for redress. One of my lawyers, Colonel Armfield, is in Washington, a member of the House, and I will be glad for you to see him, as he can tell you how we, in this country, regard such an insult, and also that it is not usual for such indignities to be offered. Hoping to hear soon from you, I am, with high respect,

Truly yours,

MARY DAVIS.

EXHIBIT CC.

GREENSBORO', N. C., February 14, 1882.

Hon. GREEN B. RAUM,
Commissioner Internal Revenue, Washington, D. C.:

SIR: Referring to yours (O. F. D.) of the 17th ultimo, in relation to proceedings against Q. D. Freeze and W. A. Daniels, both of these parties have been arrested and bound to April term, 1882, of the district court at Statesville. As reported by Revenue Agent Brooks, the charges preferred are for violations of sections 3284, 3259, 3268, 3296, and 3327.

The facts furnished by Mr. Brooks, if sustained by the testimony of the witnesses named, are strong enough to support the charges. Daniels has filed claim and bond for the spirits seized, and the collector has transferred the papers to me for libel.

Respectfully,

JAS. E. BOYD,
United States Attorney.

47TH CONGRESS, 1st Session. } SENATE. { EX. DOC. No. 84.

LETTER

FROM

THE SECRETARY OF WAR,

TRANSMITTING

Copies of reports from Maj. J. W. Barlow, Corps of Engineers, upon surveys made of harbor of Madison, Connecticut; harbor of Clinton, Connecticut; Greenport Harbor, New York; harbor of Mamaroneck, New York; for a breakwater and harbor of refuge at Milford, Conn.;

FEBRUARY 2, 1882.—Referred to the Committee on Commerce and ordered to be printed.

WAR DEPARTMENT,
Washington City, February 1, 1882.

The Secretary of War has the honor to transmit to the United States Senate, for the information of the Committee on Commerce, a communication from the Chief of Engineers, dated the 31st ultimo, covering copies of reports from Maj. J. W. Barlow, Corps of Engineers, upon surveys made in compliance with requirements in the river and harbor act of March 3, 1881, as follows:

1. Harbor of Madison, Connecticut.
2. Harbor of Clinton, Connecticut.
3. Greenport Harbor, New York.
4. Harbor of Mamaroneck, New York.
5. For a breakwater and harbor of refuge at Milford, Conn.

ROBERT T. LINCOLN,
Secretary of War.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore
of the United States Senate.

OFFICE OF THE CHIEF OF ENGINEERS,
UNITED STATES ARMY,
Washington, D. C., January 31, 1882.

SIR: I have the honor to submit herewith copies of reports to this office from Maj. J. W. Barlow, Corps of Engineers, of the results of surveys made under his direction to comply with requirements of the river and harbor act of March 3, 1881, at the following localities, viz:

Harbors of Madison and Clinton, Connecticut.
Greenport Harbor, New York.
Harbor of Mamaroneck, New York.
For breakwater and harbor of refuge at Milford, Conn.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

H. G. WRIGHT,
Chief of Engineers, Brig. and Bvt. Maj. Gen.

Hon. ROBERT T. LINCOLN,
Secretary of War.

SURVEY OF MADISON HARBOR, CONNECTICUT.

ENGINEER OFFICE, U. S. ARMY,
New London, Conn., January 17, 1882.

GENERAL: I have the honor to submit the report upon the examination and survey, and estimates of cost of improvements proper to be made at Madison Harbor, Conn., authorized by act of Congress approved March 3, 1881. This work was placed in my charge by letter of the Chief of Engineers, dated March 21, 1881.

The survey was made under my direction by Mr. H. N. Babcock, assistant engineer. His report, together with a map of the locality, is presented herewith.

The improvement desired is the formation of an artificial harbor to afford shelter to one of the landings of the village of Madison, and to serve as a harbor of refuge for general commerce, much stress being laid by those advocating the measure upon the latter consideration.

The location of the works would be about 13 miles west of the mouth of the Connecticut River, and there being but little natural protection, a breakwater covering the position through an arc of nearly 180 degrees will be required.

In locating the lines of breakwater, as shown upon the accompanying map. advantage was taken of the position of several sunken rocks, over which the lines are carried, eliminating these rocks as obstacles to navigation, and somewhat cheapening the cost of the breakwaters.

It is believed that this plan, if carried into effect, will afford all local protection asked for, and serve the needs of such general commerce as may be likely to use it.

In response to inquiries for statistics relating to the commerce of Madison, no information has been obtained.

The total cost of the improvement, the details of which are given in Mr. Babcock's report, is $285,000.

Respectfully submitted.

J. W. BARLOW,
Major of Engineers.

Brig. Gen. H. G. WRIGHT,
Chief of Engineers, U. S. A.

REPORT OF MR. HENRY N. BABCOCK, ASSISTANT ENGINEER.

NEW LONDON, CONN., January 17, 1882.

COLONEL: I have the honor to submit the following report on the survey of the harbor at Madison, Conn.

Between Sachem's Head on the west, and Hammonasset Point on the east, a stretch of 8 miles, the north shore of Long Island Sound curves in and runs about 2 miles back of a line joining the headlands. The village of Madison lies one mile back from the shore, a little east of the middle of this bay, which is all the harbor the town has.

There are two wharves about a mile apart and quite disconnected, the westerly one known as the village wharf, and the easterly as the ship-yard wharf; both localities are protected by the mainland from northerly storms, but are wholly exposed to gales from any southerly quarter. The survey authorized by act of Congress was desired with a view to applying for governmental aid in the construction of a breakwater in front of the ship-yard wharf, which should serve the double purpose of providing a shelter for both local and passing vessels and of covering several rocks which make the approach to that wharf difficult.

The survey was made in July, 1881, and the map of the same is now completed and presented herewith.

The harbor is so wholly exposed to southerly storms that there is no place where vessels can lie at anchor during a severe gale except in the lee of Three-Quarters

Rock or behind Tuxis Island. Both of these anchorage grounds are very small and but poorly sheltered.

There are no difficulties of construction in the building of a suitable harbor of refuge here. The depth is ample to accommodate any vessels likely to make use of it; the holding-ground is good, and there is apparently no danger of filling; owing to the unprotected nature of the harbor, the length of wall required to secure a fairly large sheltered area is unusually great.

Three different lines for the breakwater have been considered—one requiring 10 per cent. more, the other 6 per cent. less, stone than the one outlined on the map, which is preferred to the former on the score of economy, and to the latter on account of the more than proportionately large area sheltered. The one preferred consists of three separate breakwaters: the first, from Flat Rock, crossing Lobster Rock to Southeast Ledge, then following the course of the ledge westward to the end; the second, beginning at the outer end of South Ledge, crossing the ledge and running to a point 250 feet southwest of Three-Quarters Rock; the third, starting from the east end of the "Three-Quarters," crossing it and connecting with Gull Rock. This will give a harbor of 12 feet or greater depth, containing 35 acres of anchorage, protected from southeast storms, and 55 acres protected from south or southwest storms, which is sufficient for local commerce and for all passing vessels which would be apt to seek shelter there. There would be three available entrances to this harbor, one from the east, inside of Flat Rock, having a width of 180 feet and low-water depth of from 6 to 10 feet; one from the southeast between Southeast Ledge and South Ledge, 600 feet wide and 17 feet deep, and one from the west, outside of the "Three-Quarters," 250 feet wide and 16 feet deep; the entrance inside of Gull Rock would be too shoal to be of use to any but small sail-boats.

To withstand the sea liable to be thrown against it, this breakwater should be not less than 6 feet wide on top, with side slope of 1 on 1, and 3 feet above high-water.

The length and amount of stone in the three sections so constructed are as follows:

	Length.	Average depth.	Weight of stone.
	Feet.	Feet.	Tons.
Flat Rock to and along Southeast Ledge	2,120	13.9	75,246
Southwest Ledge towards "Three-Quarters"	1,600	16.2	67,973
"Three-Quarters" to Gull Rock	1,100	10.9	29,977
Total	4,820		173,196

The probable cost of stone delivered here on line of the breakwater will be $1.50 per ton.

173,196 tons riprap granite, at $1.50 per ton	$259,794
Supervision and general expenses	25,206
Total	285,000

The breakwater from the "Three-Quarters" to Gull Rock increases the sheltered area but slightly; it affords more perfect protection against southwest gales, and is inserted as completing the thorough protection of the inclosure. If it be omitted the cost will be as follows:

143,219 tons riprap granite, at $1.50 per ton	$214,828 50
Supervision and general expenses	20,171 50
Total	235,000 00

These amounts cannot be further reduced without giving up more than proportionately the advantages that would arise from the desired harbor; they might be indefinitely increased, but it is believed that the plan above described will meet all demands upon Madison Harbor for many years to come.

The desire of the petitioners for this survey was to secure a safe and convenient anchorage for their local commerce, with such incidental benefit to the general commerce of Long Island Sound as this might afford; this, the above plan secures. Should it ever be desired to make at Madison a harbor of refuge adequate to meet all possible needs of the growing commerce of Long Island Sound, it would have to be done on a much larger scale, and on a wholly different plan; neither this nor any other plan suitable to the comparatively small interests now asking protection would be of advantage as the starting-point to such an undertaking.

Madion is 4 miles west of Clinton; the mean rise and fall of tide at Madison was found by comparing observations at the two places for four days; it was found to be 4.425 feet.

I have been promised several times commercial statistics of the town and harbor of Madison, to accompany this report; they have not yet been received; should they come to hand later they will be presented by themselves.

Respectfully submitted.

HENRY N. BABCOCK,
Assistant Engineer.

Col. J. W. BARLOW,
Major, Corps of Engineers, U. S. A.

REASONS FOR A PROPOSED BREAKWATER AT EAST WHARF, MADISON, CONNECTICUT.

1. No good harbor of refuge now exists between New Haven and New London that is accessible at all stages of the tide.

2. The commerce of Long Island Sound imperatively demands such a harbor of refuge as would be formed by a breakwater, such as is proposed.

3. The part of the Connecticut shore embraced within the breakwater aforesaid lies at a part half-way, or as near as practicable to that point, between the ports of New Haven and New London aforesaid.

4. The commerce of Long Island Sound is of late years, and probably will for years to come, be carried on largely by lines of towing steamers and barges, and this fact makes apparent the fact to all that 52 miles on a watercourse like Long Island Sound is too long a distance for the safety of vessels of this class—too long a distance for them to be obliged to run at all times during the year without a chance to make a harbor—and the same can be said of all other classes of coasting vessels, unless, perhaps, the larger class of steamers be excepted. For all the common carrying trade of the sound, which is at present immense and on the increase, no greater benefit could be conceived than a breakwater at the point named.

5. The oyster trade, or the cultivation of oysters on new grounds taken up for that purpose, is at present an interest involving a very large amount of money and valuable property, and is most certainly a kind of business that must be ever increasing. At present a large portion of the ground to the north of a line drawn from Hammonasset Point and Sachem's Head has been taken up by different parties to be covered with shells on which to grow oysters. That business will be greatly benefited by a harbor of refuge of the kind and at the point before referred to in this paper, and also in a petition sent to Congress during its last session, upon which an appropriation was granted for the survey of the shore at this point and the waters adjacent thereto.

6. A semicircle of sunken reefs of rocks extends from what might form the east end of the proposed breakwater, with sufficient openings between them to the west end of same breakwater, upon which the stone might be laid to advantage in the large diminution of cost of the structure.

7. The bottom of the sea over the portion that would be covered is of the best kind of ground to hold an anchor; no seaweed or eel-grass to foul anchors.

8. Ship-building has been for sixty years a branch of industry for the people of the town. From one to five vessels annually are launched from the ship-yards of the vicinity. A very great advantage to that interest would result from the breakwater proposed, by making a harbor where new vessels could lie after launching, for completion, and repairing vessels could be carried on.

9. The produce of the town would be vastly increased by a good harbor to which vessels could come and be safe to load or discharge their cargoes.

There are raised and taken away yearly 100,000 bushels of potatoes, 100,000 bushels of turnips and onions, 2,000 cords of wood, 500,000 feet of lumber, and 200,000 feet of timber.

All the purposes for which a harbor is used, all the benefits that ever arise from the possession of a harbor to all parties using it, would be served in the most emphatic way and most fully served by the breakwater proposed.

We, the undersigned, loyal citizens of the United States of America, assenting to the foregoing statements and suggestions, do earnestly request and respectfully ask that Congress, now in session at Washington, will grant an order to the proper officers of government for the construction of the breakwater as hereinbefore set forth.

Madison, December 23, 1881.

Signed by

FREDERICK T. DOWD and 37 others.

SURVEY OF CLINTON HARBOR, CONNECTICUT.

ENGINEER OFFICE, U. S. ARMY,
New London, Conn., January 17, 1882.

GENERAL: I have the honor to submit the report upon the examination or survey and estimates of cost of improvements proper to be made at the harbor of Clinton, Conn., authorized by act of Congress approved March 3, 1881. The supervision of this work was assigned to my charge by letter of the Chief of Engineers dated March 21, 1881.

A map of the harbor as surveyed under my direction by Mr. H. N. Babcock, assistant engineer, together with his report, is submitted herewith.

Clinton Harbor, 9 miles west of the Connecticut River, on the north shore of Long Island Sound, is the outlet of Hammonasset River.

It is well sheltered from all storms, lying between the mainland on the north and a narrow strip of sand and marsh running about parallel on the south. The current of the river, together with its ebb and flow, formerly passed to the eastward of this strip of land, and seemed to maintain a depth and width of channel sufficient for the local wants of the village.

A break through this protecting marsh occurred about forty years ago, permitting a large share of the currents to pass through, in consequence of which, it is said, the natural channel has shoaled, the depth at mean low-water having been reduced in some places from 8 to 4 feet.

The improvement desired is the restoration of the original condition of the channel.

To do this, it is manifestly expedient to first close the opening above referred to, which can be done at a moderate cost, the estimate being $3,000.

When this is done it would be well to watch the effect of the increased currents, and should they be found insufficient to secure the desired results, resort should be had to dredging. The sum of $7,200 is sufficient to excavate a channel 100 feet wide and 6 feet deep at mean low-water through the two shoals which now obstruct the channels.

The total cost of the improvement, should the whole estimate for dredging be found necessary, is therefore $10,000.

Inclosed herewith will be found statistics relating to the commerce and navigation.

Respectfully submitted.

J. W. BARLOW,
Major of Engineers.

Brig. Gen. H. G. WRIGHT,
Chief of Engineers, U. S. A.

REPORT OF MR. HENRY N. BABCOCK, ASSISTANT ENGINEER.

NEW LONDON, CONN., January 17, 1882.

COLONEL: I have the honor to submit the following report of the survey Clinton Harbor, Connecticut, accompanied by a map of the same, on a scale of 200 feet to the inch. The survey was made in July, 1881.

The Hammonasset River is a tidal stream lying south of the village of Clinton, and separated from a bay of Long Island Sound by a beach of sand and marsh, at the east end of which the river finds its outlet. Its width at high-water near Clinton is from 800 to 1,800 feet; the greater part of this runs bare at extreme low-water, leaving a channel not over 200 feet wide, kept clear by the tidal scour.

About forty years ago a break was made in the beach half a mile from the east end, which has since been cut out by the current until now it is 280 feet wide and in some parts of considerable depth; at one place, near where the former line of low-water must have been, there is now a hole of 13 feet depth. A large part of the ebb and flow passes through this break, which would otherwise help to keep the main channel open, and there seems no doubt that the first thing to be done for the improvement of this harbor is to close up the break and direct the currents into the channel. This can be done either by a riprap wall of granite blocks, care being taken not to use large ones exclusively, or by a double row of piles filled in with brush and gravel, kept in place by heavy stones on top; the cost of the two plans would be essentially the same: 350 feet of pile and brush dike, at $8 per linear foot, amounting to $2,800, and 1,500 tons of riprap stone, at $2 per ton, $3,000.

To the northeast of Sandy Point (the point at the east end of the beach), the channel is quite shoal, having an available depth of not more than 4.5 feet at mean low-water; it is also very crooked at and below this place. To increase the depth to 6 feet for a channel 100 feet wide would require the removal of 9,200 cubic yards of sand and mud, costing, at 25 cents per yard, $2,300. No satisfactory plan for straightening the channel here can be suggested until the effect of closing the break is ascertained. It is probable that about one-third of the tide-water now enters and escapes through this break, which, if it were diverted back into the channel, would aid considerably in keeping it open, and might relieve the crookedness sufficiently. For the same reason, it would be more economical to postpone deepening the channel northeast of Sandy Point until a year after the closing of the break.

There is a low-water depth of 6 feet or more all the way out from the Clinton wharves, except the shoal above mentioned and a bar formed across the channel where it meets the deep water of Long Island Sound. The available depth there is only 4 feet at low-water; and it is said the depth used to be from 8 to 12 feet. The cost of making a channel 100 feet wide and 6 feet deep through this bar would be $5,000; its permanence cannot be promised with any certainty. The bar appears to be of the kind formed at the mouth of many of the tidal estuaries along this coast, occurring, as it does, just where the current from the inland basin meets deep water, and these bars always tend to reform soon after dredging. The general verdict of the inhabitants is, however, that previous to the break in the beach there was from 8 to 12 feet of water on the bar; this being the case, it is not unlikely that, the break being closed, the tidal current which used to keep open 8 feet depth on being restored to its former force would now keep open a new channel.

The mean rise and fall of tide at Clinton, as determined by consecutive daily observations from July 19 to August 1, 1881, is 3.879 feet.

Respectfully submitted.

HENRY N. BABCOCK,
Assistant Engineer.

Col. J. W. BARLOW,
Major, Corps of Engineers, U. S. A.

COMMERCIAL STATISTICS, &C.

CLINTON, CONN., January 2, 1882.

DEAR SIR: We have at hand your favors of December 6 and 31, last, asking for information and statistics relating to the commerce of Clinton Harbor.

1. Amount of commerce or navigation that will be benefited by the improvement.

We reply that 90 to 100 vessels arrived and departed during the year 1881.

2. The increase in commerce likely to occur.

It cannot be said that large increase in commerce will be likely to occur, but whatever increase there may be and what commerce is already carried on is greatly hindered and obstructed by the condition of the harbor and channel, resulting from the break in the beach which it is proposed to repair.

3. General commercial statistics of the harbor.

There has been shipped from the harbor during the year 1881, as nearly as can be ascertained from parties concerned in the business:

9,800 railroad ties.
1,070 cords wood.
15,000 feet plank and lumber of various kinds.
75,000 slats.
8,000 posts, for fencing and other purposes.
300 tons hay.
200 tons straw.

There has been received at this harbor:

1,200 tons coal.
10,000 bushels oysters.
108,000 feet lumber.
1,000 bushels corn and other grain.

Also bricks, oils, and general merchandise, which cannot be enumerated.

A considerable number of vessels make this harbor their wintering place on account of its security; and some of them are of large size for coasting vessels, and the condition of the channel and harbor frequently causes long delays in coming into and departing from the harbor.

Clinton Harbor receives agricultural products for shipment hence, besides from the town of Clinton, from almost the whole of the town of Killingworth, the easterly part of the town of Madison, and the westerly part of the town of Westbrook, including an area of 30 to 40 square miles, and 4,000 and more of population.

The break in the beach occurred about the years 1836 to 1838, and was started by being plowed through by an owner of the Sandy or Cedar Point lying to the eastward of the break, his object being to prevent persons going by that way to carry off seaweed from his land.

The average depth of water on the outside bar is very much less than before the break; for a long distance, where before was 8 to 12 feet at low tide, there now is not more than 3 to 4 feet.

Around the easterly end of Sandy Point or Cedar Point, where before was a good width of channel, it has become narrow, and is for a long distance not more than half the former width, and much more indirect and crooked than before the break, by reason of the bar being extended to the northward.

We suppose that estimates for work on the bar near the pier need not be large, as it is probable that the whole body of water, returning to its proper and natural course, will in some measure wash out the deposits of mud and sand which have accumulated there in past years.

The undersigned, long residents of Clinton, are of the opinion that the foregoing statistics of commerce at this harbor and the other statements are as nearly as may be correct, and that the proposed improvements are much needed.

Signed by

CHARLES A. ELLIOTT,
And eleven other residents.

To Col. J. W. BARLOW.

SURVEY OF GREENPORT HARBOR, NEW YORK.

ENGINEER OFFICE, U. S. ARMY,
New London, Conn., January 20, 1882.

GENERAL: I have the honor to present herewith the report of examination or survey and estimates of improvements proper to be made at Greenport Harbor, N. Y., as authorized by act of Congress approved March 3, 1881. The work was assigned to my charge by letter of the Chief of Engineers, dated March 21, 1881.

A survey was made under my direction in July by Mr. H. N. Babcock, assistant engineer. His report together with the map is sent herewith. Commercial statistics relating to the importance of this harbor are also presented.

Greenport Harbor is the northern portion of Shelter Island Sound, near the eastern end of Long Island. The improvement desired is the construction of a breakwater off Joshua's Point, upon the shoal of the same name, to cover the anchorage of Greenport Harbor from east and northeast storms, and to prevent the further shoaling of the harbor by the transfer of material from the point and shoal, which has occurred to such a degree as already to have greatly diminished the original area of the harbor.

Three estimates are given of $22,200, $30,000, and $46,000 respectively, for breakwaters similar in design, but of varying lengths, extending to the 12, 15, and 18 foot curves. The shorter of these lines would probably serve the purpose of protecting Joshua's Point from erosion, and of preventing a further shoaling of the harbor, but the longer works would of course afford the better and larger anchorage.

Respectfully submitted.

J. W. BARLOW,
Major of Engineers.

Brig. Gen. H. G. WRIGHT,
Chief of Engineers, U. S. A.

REPORT OF MR. HENRY N. BABCOCK, ASSISTANT ENGINEER.

NEW LONDON, CONN., January 19, 1882.

COLONEL: I have the honor to submit the following report on the survey of Greenport Harbor, N. Y.

The northern part of Shelter Island Sound, which lies opposite the village of Greenport, is known as Greenport Harbor; it is marked by only a small indentation of the shore, yet is well protected by the northern peninsula of Long Island on the north and west, and by Shelter Island on the south and southeast, and is only exposed to storms from the northeast and east, which bring a heavy sea around the north end of Shelter Island.

Greenport Harbor is too far removed from Long Island Sound (about 9 miles by water) to be of any value to general commerce, but it has quite a little shipping of its own, and the greater part of the vessels bound to and from Sag Harbor and Riverhead enter by way of Greenport Harbor.

The survey of this harbor was made in July, 1881, and the map of the same is presented herewith.

The mean rise and fall of tide at Greenport, determined by fourteen daily observations, from July 15 to July 28, inclusive, is 2.43 feet.

Directly east of Greenport village is a small cove, called Stirling Basin, which has been a very good anchorage ground for small boats, though the area of deep water has been too limited to accommodate many vessels over 12 feet draught. This basin was protected by Joshua's Point to the north, and Joshua's Bar, a shoal leading out from the point to the northeast. The tide, whether ebb or flood, sweeps strongly around the point and across the bar, and northeast storms have driven material from these places over into the basin and damaged the anchorage. One of the boundary corners of the village of Greenport lies on Joshua's Point; it was marked by a stone which has been repeatedly moved back as the point wore away; within the past year it has been lost. The object for which the survey was desired was to obtain a plan and estimates for a breakwater which should protect the point from further wear and increase the sheltered area.

The following estimates are for a breakwater starting from the beach 350 feet northeast of Joshua's Point, and following a straight course over the bar as nearly as possible in the line of shoalest water:

	Length.	Weight.	Cost.
	Feet.	Tons.
To the 12-foot curve	1,267	11,510	$22,200
To the 15-foot curve	1,427	15,670	30,000
To the 18-foot curve	1,697	23,970	46,000

The cross-section is: Rise above high-water, 3 feet; allowed for sinkage, 1 foot; side slopes, 1 on 1; top width, 5 feet. The cost of stone delivered is estimated at $1.75 per ton, and 10 per cent. (approximately) is added for supervision and general expenses.

If carried out to the 18-foot curve this breakwater would shelter an area of about 12 acres over 15 feet depth, and 17 acres over 12 feet depth; if carried out to the 15-foot curve, these areas would be respectively reduced to 4 and 9 acres. No dredging inside the breakwater will be desired at present; if it ever be proposed to enlarge the protected area in this way, 18 additional acres of 12 feet depth can be obtained by the removal of 150,000 cubic yards of sand and gravel.

Respectfully submitted.

HENRY N. BABCOCK,
Assistant Engineer.

Col. J. W. BARLOW,
Major, Corps of Engineers, U. S. A.

COMMERCIAL STATISTICS, ETC.

GREENPORT, LONG ISLAND, NEW YORK, December 10, 1881.

DEAR SIR: In answer to your favor of December 6 it may be stated, as the result of inquiries carefully made, that—

1. The number and tonnage registered at the surveyor's office in Greenport, as appears by his last quarterly report, are as follows:

Number of vessels documented, 263; tonnage, 16,271. These figures have been steadily increasing for the past ten years. At Sag Harbor there are some 30 to 40 vessels documented, with a gross tonnage of probably 3,000. Nearly or quite all of these vessels, in passing in or out, do so by way of the north side of Shelter Island, and therefore, so far as the use of Greenport Harbor goes, may be treated as part of the local tonnage.

2. The increase of commerce likely to result from the proposed improvement of Greenport Harbor is necessarily a matter of conjecture rather than of certainty, but it may safely be expected to be important and permanent. With a breakwater, such as is proposed, the safety and accessibility of the harbor in easterly gales or winter storms becomes greatly enhanced; and it may fairly be expected that many vessels bound inward or outward from or to Long Island Sound will, with the knowledge that a secure anchorage can be had a few miles from the outer ocean, avail themselves of the advantage thereby offered to save time and distance. In this connection it ought to be stated that the official report of the keeper of the light-house on Long Beach Bar, at the entrance to the bay, shows that in the fiscal year ended June 30, 1881, there passed that point 10,796 vessels, of which 2,937 were steamers, mainly employed in the menhaden fishery; which, for the nine years and seven months during which the light had been established and the record kept, the aggregate reached the large figures of 106,108. And it should be added that the number of ocean-going vessels in foreign trade leaving and arriving at the port of New York by way of Long Island Sound has of late materially increased and will continue to increase indefinitely as soon as the obstructions at Hell Gate are removed. Moreover, vessels from foreign ports have begun to stop at this harbor and await orders by telegraph as to their destination.

3. The gross amount of business done at this place for the past year, including merchandise received and shipped, material and products of mechanical trades and manufacturing industries, and values of fertilizers and surplus production of agricultural interests will considerably exceed $2,000,000, while an equal or larger sum should be set down for the region of country immediately adjacent to the bay, and whose commercial interests are directly connected with the navigation of that bay, hence would be in greater or lesser degree affected by the proposed improvement.

Respectfully yours,

Signed by

S. P RACKETT,
THOMAS F. PRICE,
C. M. SMITH,
W. Z. KING,
and 45 others.

Maj. J. W. BARLOW.

LETTER OF MESSRS. W. Z. KING AND H. A. REEVES.

GREENPORT, N. Y., January 7, 1882.

* * * * * * *

The water which would be sheltered by the proposed breakwater is in some places deep enough for vessels drawing 20 or more feet; but the chief benefit would result to vessels of 10 or 12 feet draught, and under. No dredging is at present deemed necessary. In the absence of definite knowledge of the place where the village boundary-line stone is, it is impossible to tell just how much the high-water line has moved back on the shore-end of the bar, but it is safe to say several hundred feet. The filling-in that has taken place inside the bar may be measured by acres.

No protection is needed from storms from any other than an easterly or northeasterly direction.

Very truly yours,

W. Z. KING.
H. A. REEVES.

SURVEY OF MAMARONECK HARBOR, NEW YORK.

ENGINEER OFFICE, U. S. ARMY,
New London, Conn., January 18, 1882.

GENERAL: I have the honor to submit herewith the report of examination or survey and estimates of cost of improvements proper to be made at Mamaroneck Harbor, N. Y., as authorized by act of Congress approved March 3, 1881. The work was placed in my charge by letter of the Chief of Engineers, dated March 21, 1881.

A survey was made under my direction by Mr. H. N. Babcock, assistant engineer, in the latter part of July and the beginning of August last. The map and Mr. Babcock's report are transmitted herewith.

A list of wrecks which have occurred at this harbor, and other statistics, also accompany this report.

Mamaroneck Harbor is an arm of the sound, on its north shore, about 5 miles southwest of the eastern boundary of New York. The improvement desired consists, first, in the removal of several sunken rocks which dangerously obstruct the channel; and, second, the excavation of a channel of navigable width at the upper and shoalest part to a depth of 4 to 7 feet at mean low-water.

To complete these improvements in accordance with the most comprehensive plan considered would require—

The entire or partial removal of six rocks to a depth of 7 feet below mean low-water, amounting to 1,218 cubic yards, at $20 per yard	$24,360
The removal by dredging of sand and gravel, 59,300 cubic yards, at 25 cents	14,825
Construction of sand dike to cut off channel east of Grassy Knoll	200
Contingencies of engineering and supervision	3,615
Total	43,000

These improvements could be made progressively, and each successive step would give its proportionate share of benefit. The most essential part of the improvement, and that which should first be attempted, is the removal of Bush Rock and the excavation of the channel to old steamboat wharf, amounting in cost to about one-half of the whole; but to make the harbor reasonably safe and satisfactory, it would be desirable to continue operations by removing the other rocks in the following order; Inner Steamboat Rock, part of Nell's Rock, Outer Steamboat Rock, Little Nanhook and Round Rock, and lastly, dredging the channel to new steamboat wharf.

This harbor presents natural commercial advantages, being the port of a large and prosperous back country, which, it is believed, would derive great benefit from a safe water-route to New York. Such a channel of communication would become established by the completion of the improvements above considered.

Respectfully submitted.

J. W. BARLOW,
Major of Engineers.

Brig. Gen. H. G. WRIGHT,
Chief of Engineers, U. S. A.

REPORT OF MR. HENRY N. BABCOCK, ASSISTANT ENGINEER.

NEW LONDON, CONN., January 18, 1882.

COLONEL: I have the honor to present the following report on the survey of Mamaroneck Harbor, N. Y.:

Mamaroneck Harbor is on the north shore of Long Island Sound, about 5 miles from the Connecticut State line; it is essentially an arm of the sound, receiving fresh water from three streams which are not large enough to materially affect the currents, even in time of freshet. A dam was removed from one of these streams a few years since, which is said to have caused a shoaling of about 1 foot in the upper part of the harbor, due to material brought down by the stream.

There are several rock obstructions in and about the mouth of the harbor, which, although well known and mostly buoyed, have caused the wrecking of numerous vessels during fogs and storms. The object for which the survey was desired was to ascertain the cost of removing these obstructions (at least the worst of them), and of making a channel 7 feet deep to the old steamboat wharf, and secondarily from there to the new steamboat wharf.

The survey was begun in the latter part of July, and finished early in August, 1881; the map of the same is now completed, and is presented with this report.

The harbor of Mamaroneck consists of a narrow channel of nearly a mile in length opening suddenly into a broad bay. The old steamboat wharf is about half way up this channel; it is all removed except the piling, but is to be rebuilt, and probably will be the important wharf of the harbor. The least channel depth in reaching this wharf is 4.6 feet, at a point west of Grassy Knoll, where the width of the channel is also least; this is due to a secondary channel east of Grassy Knoll, which was formerly the main channel, and which now affords an exit to a large part of the tide-water. The new steamboat wharf is at the head of the harbor; the channel below it is narrow and crooked, its least width being 70 feet between low-water lines, and its least depth 0.7 foot at low-water, most of which depth is probably due to the discharge of a fresh-water stream.

The rise and fall of tide, determined as the mean of fourteen consecutive daily observations at the old steamboat wharf, is 8.015 feet.

The principal rock obstructions, in order, going down the harbor, are Round Rock, Nell's Rock, Bush Rock, Inner Steamboat Rock, Little Nanhook, and Outer Steamboat Rock. Round Rock is a small rock lying in the east side of the channel, 500 feet above the old steamboat wharf, in 2½ feet of water. The rock projects 0.8 foot above mean low-water, is 10 feet long by 6 feet wide, and seems to be a bowlder. Its volume above a plane 4 feet below mean low-water is about 7 cubic yards. Nell's Rock and Bush Rock lie directly opposite one another, about 1,400 feet below the old steamboat wharf, with a channel 14 feet deep between them; the 7-foot channel here is but 78 feet wide, and curving, making these rocks the worst obstruction in the harbor; they both run bare at low-water. Nell's Rock projects from the east shore; its complete removal to the shore will not be necessary, and a line is drawn across the rock on the map, which line (A-B) is the northeast limit of all estimates for removal. Bush Rock consists of two rocks, probably joined below the bottom; only the removal of the eastern one is desired; this will give a channel-way of 150 feet width, and nearly straight. Inner Steamboat Rock lies in the middle of the channel, in a depth of 6.2 feet of water; its highest part has a depth of 3.8 feet below low-water. Little Nanhook, with a surrounding depth of 5 feet, rises to 1.1 feet below low-water plane; it is about 130 feet west of the general course of vessels entering the harbor. Outer Steamboat Rock lies in the open harbor, in 9.3 feet of water; its least depth is 3.8 feet, but the channel on either side is 800 feet wide, and the rock is not at all dangerous by daylight. The following table shows the volume of these rocks above the 5, 6, 7, 8, and 9 foot curves, respectively; two of them cannot be estimated with any accuracy below 6 feet, on account of the shallowness of the surrounding bottom.

	Above 5 feet.	Above 6 feet.	Above 7 feet.	Above 8 feet.	Above 9 feet.
	Cub. yds.	Cub. yds.	Cub. yds.	Cub. yds.	Cub. yds.
Nell's Rock	52	100	152	210	280
Bush Rock	457	600	750	913	1,105
Inner Steamboat Rock	10	31	60 (?)	.....	.....
Little Nanbook	54	115	200 (?)	.....	.....
Outer Steamboat Rock	.....	12	49	115	218

At the entrance to the outer harbor there is a large rock, known as Ship Rock, with 6 feet on its shoalest part, in a surrounding depth of 15 feet; it should have a horizontal striped buoy; during the past year it has had none. There are several other rocks in the harbor, which are shown on the map, but whose removal is not at all important.

The material of the bottom in the outer harbor is quite soft; in the upper channel it is a rather firm mixture of sand and mud, but not difficult to dredge. Possibly a bed of gravel, débris from the fresh-water stream, may exist below the surface at the upper end of the harbor.

To make a dredged channel 100 feet wide and 6 feet deep at mean low-water from the deep hole opposite Bush Rock to the old steamboat wharf, a distance of 1,100 feet, with a turning basin 150 feet wide and 200 feet long, would involve the removal of 18,000 cubic yards of sand, costing, at 25 cents per yard, $4,500. Above this point to the new steamboat wharf, a distance of 2,100 feet, a depth of 4 feet would be sufficient.

The channel over this distance, though crooked, will be preserved more readily in its present course than if any attempt at a moderate cost be made to change it. To make this channel four feet deep and 80 feet wide would require the removal of 28,300 cubic yards of sand, with probably some gravel, at a cost of 25 cents per cubic yard, amounting to $7,075.

The closing of the secondary channel east of Grassy Knoll would aid considerably in keeping open the channel below the old steamboat wharf. To build there a rip-rap jetty 500 feet long, of triangular section, 10 feet base and 5 feet height, would require about 1,000 tons of stone, the probable cost of which delivered in place would be $2,400. During the progress of dredging, this result could be obtained more cheaply by making a cut along the proposed line and throwing the material up as a sand pier along the side of the cut. The location is not exposed to storms, nor to freshets, and it is probable such a pier would last until the channel became filled up. The cost ought not to exceed $200.

Two suitable schemes for improving the harbor are suggested, the latter being the more comprehensive and including the former.

First. The removal of Round Rock to 4 feet depth, and of Bush Rock and Inner Steamboat Rock to 7 feet depth, with the excavation of a 6-foot channel 100 feet wide, up to the old steamboat wharf, at an estimated cost as follows:

Round Rock, 7 cubic yards, at $20	$140
Bush Rock, 750 cubic yards, at $20	15,000
Inner Steamboat Rock, 60 cubic yards, at $20	1,200
Excavation of sand, 18,000 cubic yards, at 25 cents	4,500
Building sand pier	200
Supervision and general expenses	2,460
Total	23,500

To make the above channel 7 feet deep would involve the removal of 13,000 cubic yards additional, at a further cost of $3,250, making the total cost $26,750.

Second. The removal of Round Rock to 4 feet depth, and of Bush Rock, part of Nell's Rock, Inner and Outer Steamboat Rocks, and Little Nanhook to 7 feet depth, together with the dredging of a 7-foot channel 100 feet wide to the old steamboat wharf, and continuing it as a channel 4 feet deep and 80 feet wide to the new steamboat wharf, at an estimated cost as follows:

Round Rock, 7 cubic yards, at $20	$140
Bush Rock, 750 cubic yards, at $20	15,000
Nell's Rock, 152 cubic yards, at $20	3,040
Inner Steamboat Rock, 60 cubic yards, at $20	1,200
Outer Steamboat Rock, 49 cubic yards, at $20	980
Little Nanhook, 200 cubic yards, at $20	4,000
Excavation of channel to old steamboat wharf, 31,000 cubic yards, at 25 cents.	7,750
Excavation of channel above old steamboat wharf, 28,300 cubic yards, at 25 cents	7,075
Building sand pier	200
Supervision and general expenses	3,615
	43,000

To make the channel above the old steamboat wharf deeper than 4 feet at mean low-water would require the removal of about 8,400 cubic yards of material for each extra foot of depth; to make the channel 6 feet deep would involve an additional expenditure of about $4,200, making the total cost of the second plan, thus modified, $47,200,

Respectfully submitted.

HENRY N. BABCOCK,
Assistant Engineer.

Col. J. W. BARLOW,
Major, Corps of Engineers, U. S. A.

COMMERCIAL STATISTICS, ETC.

MAMARONECK, December 1, 1881.

DEAR SIR: The excellent survey you have made of this harbor shows conclusively that, with little expense, the harbor can be so improved as to afford all needed facilities for navigation required by this place.

First. Permit us to call your attention to the large area of country to which this port is the point of supply; the towns of Harrison, Scarsdale, Mamaroneck, White Plains, and part of Rye.

Second. To the fact that the Supervisors of these towns unite in requesting that this improvement of Mamaroneck Harbor be made.

Third. To the tonnage now regularly discharging here, in spite of the fact that it is with great difficulty any shippers can be induced to ship a cargo to enter the harbor, by reason of the obstructions at its mouth.

Fourth. To the large number of disasters to vessels by reason of those obstructions. (See list inclosed.)

Fifth. That a daily steamboat to New York City is a necessity here; that one was attempted to be run, but was wrecked on the harbor obstructions; and that citizens are ready at once to run a daily steamboat to New York, if Bush Rock is removed and the channel deepened to Harbor Island dock (the old steamboat wharf).

Sixth. That so important to this place is regarded the removal of these obstructions that a private attempt was made to blow up Bush Rock by the citizens, supervised by Alderman Taylor.

Seventh. That great quantities of freight that come by rail at increased cost would seek water communication if the harbor is improved. Of the amount of this freight no accurate statement can be made, except that freight cars are almost all the time discharging on the side tracks laid for that purpose at this place.

Eighth. This outer harbor lies on the north shore of the sound, at the head of its clear, open, navigation, and just at the entrance to its intricate channel-ways that begin at Sand's Point and Execution Light; that there is no shelter for the large commerce that passes through the sound, in northerly, northeast, and northwest gales, at this head of open sailing, except Mamaroneck Harbor, and every captain that passes through the sound would be glad to have a haven at this point. Even as it is, with the obstructions unmarked, it is a harbor of refuge in the sudden and severe northerly blows that compel shipping to make a harbor.

Ninth. That a large industry in the culture of oysters is hindered and, in great measure, prevented by inability to land oysters at all times of tide in cold and freezing weather. The vast increase in the oyster trade at South Norwalk, Bridgeport, and New Haven, resulting from the improvement of those harbors, is an indication of what would follow improvement in this harbor.

Signed by William Purdy and sixteen others.

Col. J. W. BARLOW.

PARTIAL LIST OF WRECKS ON THE ROCKS OF MAMARONECK HARBOR, NEW YORK.

Schooner Rutan, Capt. George Wright, struck rock near Hen Island, and was a total loss.
Sloop Relief, Capt. William Nichols.
Sloop Gamecock was wrecked, but no particulars.
Sloop Orbit, Nell's Rock.
Mary Willis, hit Bush Rock.
Sloop from Cold Springs, with brick, total loss.
Sloop Amity, struck Nell's Rock.
Sloop Griffen, Thompson, wrecked on Steamboat Rock.
Sloop Maid of the Mill, Captain Bonner, wrecked on Bush Rock.
Sloop General Taylor, loaded with coal, struck west end of Bush Rock and sunk.
Schooner Premium, Capt. Thomas Holman, struck Bush Rock, also Steamboat Rock.
Tug-boat Cattell, lost her wheel on Round Rock, struck and sunk on Nell's Rock.
Canal-boat, Capt. Joseph Morehead, with coal, struck on Nell's Rock.
Steamer Island City, Capt. James Frudenberg, Steamboat Rock.

LETTER FROM THE BOARD OF SUPERVISORS OF WESTCHESTER COUNTY, NEW YORK.

ROOMS OF THE BOARD OF SUPERVISORS, OF WESTCHESTER COUNTY,
White Plains, New York, December 1, 1881.

DEAR SIR: At suggestion of Mr. T. L. Rushmore, I send the accompanying statement with reference to removing obstructions in Mamaroneck Harbor.

The Supervisors of New Rochelle and Harrison are absent from the board to-day, or it would have been signed by them also.

Yours,

M. BANTA.

Col. J. W. BARLOW.

STATEMENT ACCOMPANYING THE FOREGOING LETTER.

As will be seen by reference to the diagram annexed,* and which has been taken from the official survey, the harbor of Mamaroneck is the only one between the harbors of New Rochelleand Portchester, on Long Island Sound, which is or can be used by the inhabitants of the towns of Mamaroneck, Scarsdale, Harrison, White Plains, and a large part of the town of Rye, county of Westchester; upon this harbor the inhabitants of these several towns are now almost solely dependent for market purposes.

* Diagram not printed.

Formerly, and up to about the year 1865, the trade of these places being comparatively small, light-draught vessels could enter the harbor without very great risk, and the delays caused by the obstructions therein were not then of so much consequence, but during the last fifteen years the population of these towns has almost doubled, numbering now nearly 19,000; and the valuation of real estate has increased over $1,000,000, as appears by the official reports now on file; this increase of population and value has brought a very greatly increased demand upon the harbor for the furnishing of supplies of coal, lumber, and all kinds of building materials and other merchandise for the use of the inhabitants and for carrying to market produce of the farms, &c. This increased demand has brought with it the absolute necessity for the employment of a larger and of a greatly increased number of vessels. The use of these vessels has been and is greatly hampered by the obstructions in the harbor, which prevent vessels entering or departing except at almost high-water, and even then the larger vessels are frequently injured by striking the rocks in the channel.

If these obstructions were removed and there should be no further danger of injury or delay to vessels, the cost of freight would be greatly lessened and a larger number of vessels would seek this harbor for business.

M. BANTA,
Supervisor of town of Mamaroneck.
SAML. WM. JOHNSON,
Supervisor of town of Rye.
GEO. J. WILLETS,
Supervisor of town of Scarsdale.

SURVEY FOR BREAKWATER AND HARBOR OF REFUGE AT MILFORD, CONNECTICUT.

ENGINEER OFFICE, U. S. ARMY,
New London, Conn., January 20, 1882.

GENERAL: I have the honor to submit the following report on the examination or survey for breakwater and harbor of refuge at Milford Harbor, Conn., authorized by act of Congress, approved March 3, 1881. This work was assigned to my charge by letter of the Chief of Engineers dated March 21, 1881.

The survey was made under my direction by Mr. H. N. Babcock, assistant engineer, whose map and report are transmitted herewith. Commercial and other statistics are appended to this report.

Milford Harbor is a bay of Long Island Sound on the Connecticut shore, about 9 miles west of New Haven. In 1872, a survey of this harbor was made, and the construction of a breakwater from Welch's Point, the eastern limit of the harbor, was considered. The line chosen then is essentially the same as that given now, and is believed to be the best that can be selected to shelter an anchorage of small extent.

It would be feasible to provide at this place a large and convenient harbor of refuge for general commerce by constructing two long breakwaters to extend obliquely into the sound from Welch's Point and Charles Island respectively. Such a harbor would cost between $400,000 and $500,000.

For the protection of the local commerce of Milford and its vicinity, including the valuable fish-oil works at Welch's Point, the breakwater shown on the accompanying sketch would probably suffice, and would also serve as a refuge for small sailing vessels or barges in tow, if caught in an easterly gale near by. It would, in addition, thoroughly protect the bluffs above Welch's Point from washing, which has heretofore caused a deposit of material at the mouth of the inner harbor, the dredging of which has already been the source of considerable expense.

The breakwater would cover from southeasterly gales an anchorage for vessels drawing 12 to 15 feet, of about 16 acres, and a less area sheltered also from southerly and westerly storms. Its estimated cost is $87,000.

Respectfully submitted.

J. W. BARLOW,
Major of Engineers.

Brig. Gen. H. G. WRIGHT,
Chief of Engineers, U. S. A.

REPORT OF MR. HENRY N. BABCOCK, ASSISTANT ENGINEER.

NEW LONDON, CONN., January 17, 1882.

COLONEL: I have the honor to submit the following report on the survey for a breakwater and harbor of refuge at Milford, Conn. The survey was made in July, 1881, and a map of the same accompanies this report:

Milford Harbor is a bay about a mile broad by nearly a mile long, and facing the southeast. The bay is bounded on the southwest by Charles Island (of about 10 acres area) which is connected with the mainland by a sand bar bare at half tide. This, however, does not afford much shelter from southwest storms, for the seas round Charles Island and roll in from the south with a force not appreciably lessened, and the harbor is practically exposed to storms from any southerly quarter. At the north end of the bay a narrow tidal inlet runs up to the village of Milford. Within the past ten years this has been deepened by the government, and now the dredged channel affords a refuge which is taken advantage of by local vessels, though too far inland and too contracted to be of use as a general harbor of refuge.

A survey of Milford Harbor was made in 1872, the report on which contained an estimate for a breakwater from Welch's Point to provide a refuge for the commerce of Long Island Sound.

The depths in the harbor have not materially changed since that survey, and the line then proposed for the breakwater is the best that can be suggested now; the shelter that general commerce would gain is, however, modified by the presence of a large wharf belonging to the Fish-Oil Works, which occupies a part of the best anchorage ground that the breakwater would afford. By continuing the breakwater 100 feet further to the southwest, then making an arm 400 feet long extending about west-northwest, an area sheltered from southeast storms would be obtained equal to the previous design, and a better protection would be afforded against south and southwest storms, which are frequently quite severe at Milford. In the sheltered area would be several bowlders, which would be more a source of annoyance from catching anchors than of danger. The funds available for this survey were not sufficient to make the kind of examination necessary to determine the cost of their removal; it is placed at $5,000 in the following estimates, which is probably a rude approximation:

The least dimensions that could safely be given this breakwater would be 6 feet width on top, rising 3 feet above mean high-water. The cost on this plan would be—

Welch's Point to bend, 1,040 feet, 31,309 tons granite, at $1.50	$46,963 50
Beyond bend, 400 feet, 18,600 tons granite, at $1.50	27,900 00
Removing bowlders	5,000 00
Supervision and general expenses	7,136 50
Total	87,000 00

If the part beyond the bend were omitted the cost would be reduced to about $57,000, at the expense of shelter from the south and southwest; for the class of vessels likely to frequent this harbor, such shelter would be as much to be desired as that from easterly storms.

If it were desired to construct at Milford a harbor of refuge of great capacity, one breakwater 3,200 feet long from Welch's Point and one from Charles Island of 2,400 feet length would protect an area of about 100 acres of 18 feet depth, and nearly four times that area of 12 feet depth. The cost of such a harbor would be $425,000. Being only 8 miles from the breakwater at New Haven, the need for so extensive a work does not appear urgent.

Appended are all the commercial statistics bearing upon this matter which I have been able to obtain; others have been promised, but have not yet reached me.

Respectfully submitted.

HENRY N. BABCOCK,
Assistant Engineer.

Col. J. W. BARLOW,
Major, Corps of Engineers, U. S. A.

COMMERCIAL STATISTICS.

STRATFORD POINT, December 20, 1881.

SIR: The inclosed is the only file of passing vessels we have; our last book has been returned to headquarters. Owing to the severity of the last winter, the number of passing vessels was much less than the years previous; the average number was over 30,000. We kept no account of barges; we only counted the steamers.

Very respectfully,

THEODORE JUDSON,
Light-House Keeper.

Col. J. W. BARLOW, U. S. A.

NUMBER OF VESSELS PASSING STRATFORD POINT LIGHT-HOUSE, JULY 1, 1880, TO JULY 1, 1881.

Sloops	3,828
Schooners	16,247
Ships, brigs, and barks	311
Steamers	5,938
Total	26,324

EXTRACT FROM A LETTER FROM MR. GEORGE W. MILES, OF MILFORD.

Sometimes there are a great many vessels anchored here for a harbor when the wind is from the south, west, north, or northeast; but as soon as the wind hauls to the east and southeast they are obliged to get under way and seek a harbor elsewhere, just at the time they need one the most, and at times it is necessary to send for tugs to help them away. A breakwater would furnish a safe harbor during easterly storms; these storms are the most dreaded of all.

A small breakwater running from Charles Island northeasterly would protect from southerly storms, and would make this place the best harbor of refuge in all storms and under all circumstances there is or can possibly be made in the sound. The benefit to the people of Milford is as nothing compared to the benefit which would accrue to passing vessels.

Vessels bound up the Housatonic River to Derby, Birmingham, and Shelton, would find this a safe and convenient harbor while being obliged to wait for high-water so as to pass over the outer bar. They almost invariably, unless overloaded, could, at the right time of tide, get under way during an easterly storm and glide into the river with a fair wind and save a fair wind up the river; whereas now they are obliged to make a harbor so far to the westward that they cannot go in while the wind holds east, and when the wind changes they have head winds on the river and are delayed for several days, perhaps weeks.

There are no records kept of the number of passing vessels, or those that would be likely to seek refuge here; but one thing is certain and safe to say: all vessels passing through the sound that meet an easterly storm coming on, and find, after they pass Black Rock and Huntington, that they cannot reach New Haven, instead of running back to the head of the sound would surely make this harbor. The number of these during the year must be thousands.

I send you herewith partial figures on local commerce which have come under my immediate notice, and which make no small item.

These vessels come and go regularly from spring to fall, but are obliged to seek a harbor, both east and west, as best they may. This causes delay and time lost, amounting to thousands and thousands of dollars annually.

NUMBER OF VESSELS ARRIVING AT AND DEPARTING FROM MERWIN'S WHARF, MILFORD, CONN.

1880.
Steamers	27
Sailing vessels	108
1881.
Steamers	42
Sailing vessels	162

Number and tonnage of vessels arriving at and departing from Miles's wharf, Milford, Connecticut.

Year.	Steamers.	Sailing vessels.	Barges.
1871		32
1872		50
1873		48
1874	1	56
1875	2	64
1876	4	96
1877	6	113
1878	6	114
1879	6	115
1880	6	154
1881	6	180	2
Tonnage	525, 696	201, 400	800

Yours, respectfully,

GEO. W. MILES.

PETITION.

To the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States in Congress assembled:

The undersigned respectfully represent that it is of great and vital importance to all the commerce of the United States that passes through Long Island Sound that a breakwater should be constructed at Welch's Point, Milford Harbor, New Haven County, Connecticut, especially for a speedy refuge in time of storms, and they earnestly ask for an appropriation of $40,000 for that purpose, pursuant to the recommendation of Col. J. W. Barlow of the Engineer Corps now on file in the department at Washington.

[The 338 signatures to this paper are omitted.]

47TH CONGRESS, 1st Session. } SENATE. { EX. DOC. No. 85.

LETTER

FROM THE

SECRETARY OF THE INTERIOR,

TRANSMTITING,

In compliance with law, the report and opinion of the Surveyor-General of the Territory of New Mexico on private land claim No. 124, "Ojo de la Cabra," also report of Commissioner of General Land Office.

FEBRUARY 2, 1882.—Referred to the Committee on Private Land Claims and ordered to be printed.

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR,
Washington, February 1, 1882.

SIR: Pursuant to section 8 of the act of July 22, 1854 (10 Stat., 308), I have the honor to transmit herewith the report and opinion of the surveyor-general of the Territory of New Mexico on private land claim No. 124, known as "Ojo de la Cabra," the transcript of the original title papers and testimony in the case, the plat of preliminary survey of the claim, and the report of the Commissioner of the General Land Office concerning the claim.

The Commissioner states that the surveyor-general of New Mexico has recommended the claim for confirmation, and that he himself has no reason to doubt the validity of the validity of the claim.

The attention of Congress is especially invited to the remarks of the Commissioner as to the character of the preliminary survey of the claim.

Very respectfully,

S. J. KIRKWOOD,
Secretary.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore of the Senate.

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR,
GENERAL LAND OFFICE,
Washington, D. C., January 24, 1882.

SIR: Referring to your letter of the 17th instant, returning the papers in certain private land claims in the Territories of New Mexico and Arizona, for examination, I have the honor to submit the following with regard to the case known as Ojo de la Cabra, in New Mexico.

The papers in this case relate to proceedings had before the surveyor-general under the act of July 22, 1854, for the confirmation of said grant, and consist of copies, duly authenticated, of—

1. Claimant's petition.
2. Original title papers.

3. Translation of the same.
4. Testimony.
5. Opinion of surveyor-general.

I have examined these papers, and find that the translations are correct. The surveyor-general has given a clear statement of the case in his opinion, and has recommended the claim for confirmation. I see no reason to doubt the validity of the claim.

With regard to the preliminary survey of this claim made by the surveyor-general, I respectfully refer to my letter to you of the 18th instant, in relation to the claim known as Cañon de Chama, in New Mexico, as my expression of opinion in that case applies equally to the case in question. (See extract inclosed.)

The papers in the case are herewith returned.

I have the honor to be, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

N. C. McFARLAND,
Commissioner.

Hon. S. J. KIRKWOOD,
Secretary of the Interior.

[Extract.]

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR,
GENERAL LAND OFFICE,
Washington, D. C., January 19, 1882.

SIR: * * * I cannot add anything to what has already been stated in said report concerning the proposed confirmation of said grant, but would suggest as a general proposition, that in my judgment it would be advisable for Congress, in any acts that may be passed confirming private land claims, to omit in such legislation any provision adopting and approving the preliminary surveys thereof, and thus leave all questions affecting the proper location of the boundaries of such claims to this office and the department, as was done in cases of claims confirmed by Congress where preliminary surveys had not been made.

These surveys form no part of the proceedings had by the surveyor-general of New Mexico under the 8th section of the act of July 22, 1854, which relate to the adjudication of questions of title, but were authorized out of the appropriation made by the act of March 3, 1877 (19 Stat., p. 348), for the survey of private land claims, and since then Congress has made specific appropriations for them. They were intended merely for the information of Congress, and have not undergone such examination as to their correctness as would be given to the survey of a confirmed claim before issuing patent, and some are objected to, and some are evidently incorrect as to the boundaries adopted and quantity of land included, and the taking of testimony may be necessary to determine correctly the several locations.

* * * * * * *

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

N. C. McFARLAND,
Commissioner.

Hon. S. J. KIRKWOOD,
Secretary of the Interior.

[Transcript.]

GRANT TO JUAN OTERO FOR THE OJO DE LA CABRA TRACT, IN VALENCIA COUNTY, NEW MEXICO, BEING PRIVATE LAND CLAIM REPORTED AS NO. 106.

Date of grant, March 15, 1845. Reported by the United States surveyor-general July 13, 1875.

Hon. JAMES K. PROUDFIT,
Surveyor-General of New Mexico:

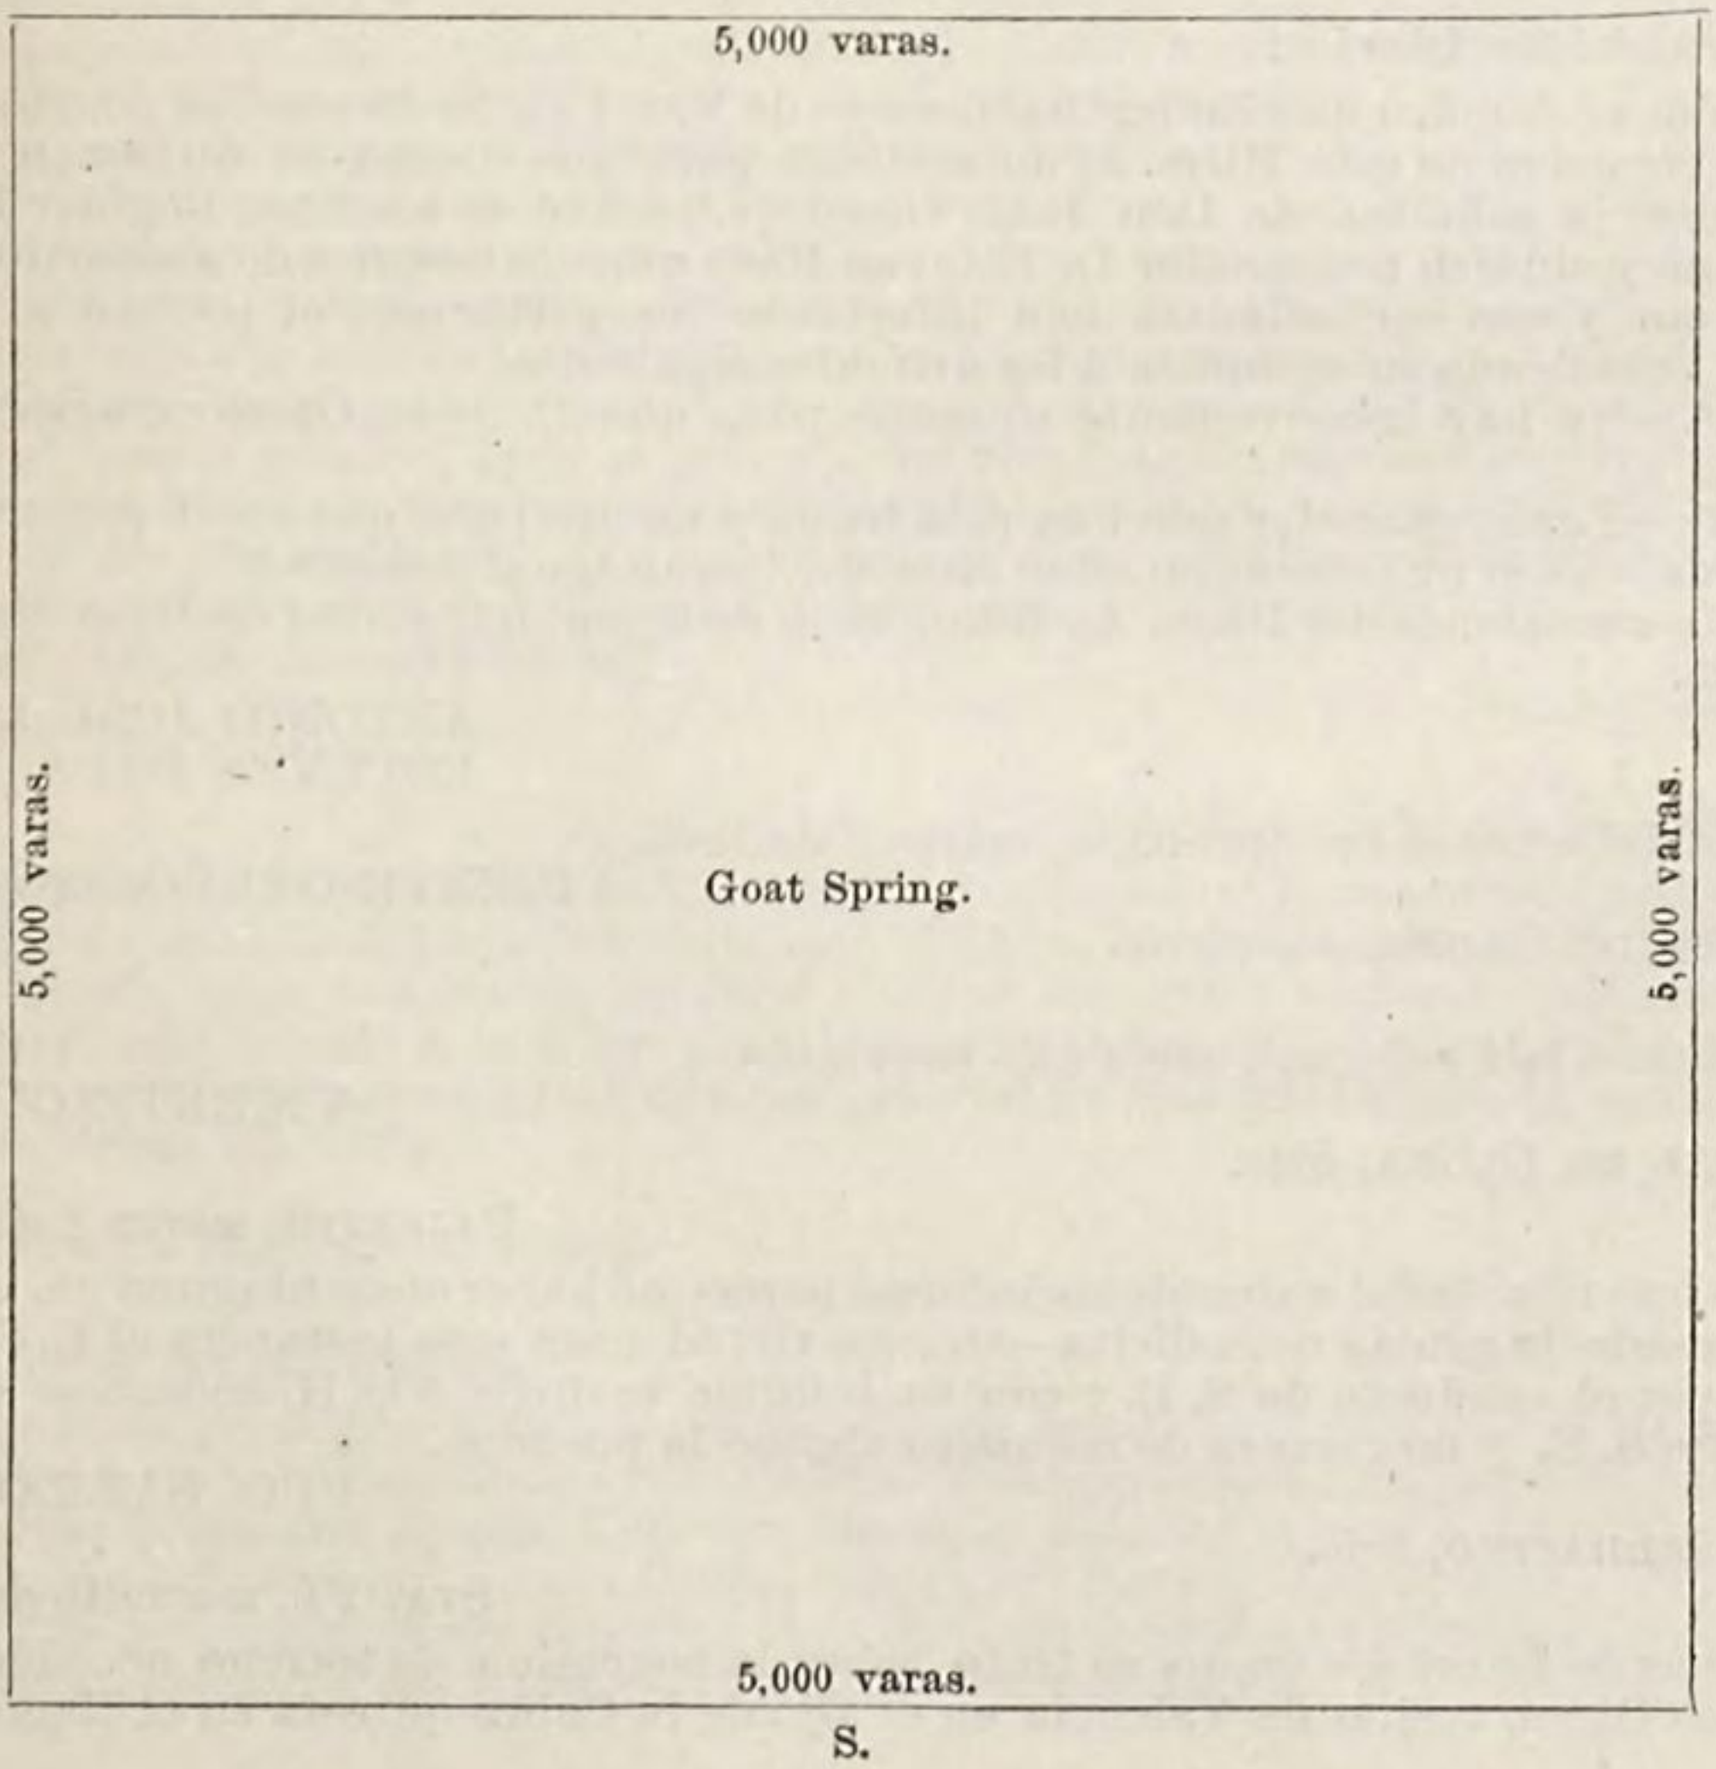
Your petitioners, the heirs and legal representatives of Juan Otero, now deceased, would respectfully represent:

That on the 22d day of January, 1845, the said Juan Otero petitioned the prefect of the third district of New Mexico, then one of territories of the Republic of Mexico, for a certain tract of land in the present county of Valencia, New Mexico, now under your jurisdiction as United States surveyor-general, the tract so petitioned for to be two leagues across in each direction, with the Goat Spring in the center.

That said petition was on the same day referred by said prefect to the local ayuntamiento for investigation as to the expediency of making the grant prayed for; that said ayuntamiento referred the same to a special committee of that body for the same purpose, and on the 2d of March following reported to said prefect, recommending, in pursuance of the report of said special committee, that a grant be made to said petitioner for one league of land at said Goat Spring; that the petition and report were thereupon referred by said prefect to the governor, to be by him laid before the legislative assembly; that the said legislative assembly, on the 15th of said March, made the grant of one square league so recommended, and that thereupon the said prefect ordered formal possession to the land so granted to be given said grantee Otero.

Your petitioners further represent that all the original papers showing these proceedings are now on file in your office, and have been and remain in the possession of the government since the same were had and recorded; the said papers, all embraced in one document, being known in your office as archive file No. 676; and your petitioners pray that said document be taken from among said archives, and, together with the sworn translation thereof and the sketch map of the land claimed thereunder accompanying this petition, be placed with this petition, and be made a part of this the claim of your petitioners for said land.

Your petitioners further represent that the written act of possession, which the said prefect authorized and ordered be executed to said grantee Otero, is now lost or mislaid, so that the same cannot be filed with this claim, but your petitioners deem the presence of the said act of possession not material in the premises of their said claim.



Your petitioners further represent that they are the owners of said granted land, and are now and always have been since the date of said grant in the quiet and undisputed possession of the same, and that they know of no claim thereto adverse to their own.

Your petitioners pray that their said claim be investigated and approved by your honor, under the treaty of Guadalupe Hidalgo, and under the law of the Congress of the United States of July 22, 1854, establishing your office, and that the same be confirmed by Congress under said treaty and said laws.

WALDO & ELLISON,
Attorneys for Petitioners.

Plat of the Goat Spring Grant, Valencia County, New Mexico.

[Area 4,340.27 acres.]

(Sello cuarto ; dos reales.)

Años de mil ochocientos cuarenta y dos y mil ochocientos cuarenta y tres.
"Habilitado para los años de mil ochocientos cuarenta y cuatro y cuarenta y cinco."
[Rubric.] JOSÉ ANTONIO CHAVEZ.
Administrator.

MARIANO MARTINEZ [Rubric.]
Gubernador.

Sor. Prefto. del 3er Distrito.

El ciudadano Juan Otero, vecino residente en la municipalidad de Valencia, ante V. S. en toda forma de dro. y previas las protestas utiles y necesarias parece y dice: Que hallandose con un pequeño chinchorro de ganado mayor y remonta qe. tiene pa. el uso muy necesario de sus intereses, y hallandose sin un terreno suficiente en donde poderlos pastear para poderlos tener en un regular estado de servicio he emprendido abrir una noria in el muy pequeño estiladero de agua qe. comunmente se le dice el Ojo de la Cabra, en el qe. echo algunos costos y el resultado parece ser favorable aun no sgeuro, y viendo qe. pa. lograr el fin qe. me he propuesta se han de hacer algunos costos pa. asegurar el fruto de mi trabajo se ha de servir V. S. en meritos de justicia se me dé por los terminos legales una posesion de terreno en la espresada noria de dos leguas por cada rumbo como un terreno baldio y como un beneficio qe. en este departamto. á todos se les ha concedido desde su conquisto á la fha. en qe. nos hallamos, acogiendomo al amparo de las leyes que impetro: protestando costas y lo necesario, &a.

Plaza de la Peralta, enero 22 de 1845.

JUAN OTERO.

PAJARITO eno. 22 '45.

Pase esta insta. à el sor. alce., juez de 1a. insta. y presidente del Iltre. Ayuntamto. de este disto. para que de acuerdo con ss. informe circunstancia do mte. reconociendo el terreno que se solicita así como bien pertenece á otro dueño y es valdio para en vista del informe resolver lo conveniente como una de las principales atribuciones que le concede á esta prefeta. la ley de 20 de marzo de 1837 en su arto. 77.

SARRACINO.

C'TE SARRACINO, Srio.

S. Prefecto del 3er Distrito:

Para dar el debido cumplimiento al decreto de V. S. fha. 20 de mardzo po. po. se nombró una comision de este Illtre. Ayuntamiento para que dieran su dictamen é informase sobre la solicitud de Don Juan Otero qe. recayó en los Sres. Regidor D. Anto. José Luna y sindico procurador D. Estevan Baca quienes despues de aberse informado del terreno y sus conlindantes han informado no pertenecer el terreno á persona alguna, reduciendo su dictamen á los artículos siguientes.

Art. 1º.—No hay inconveniente ninguno para que D. Juan Otero se agracie como solicita.

Art. 2º.—Puede conceder sele una sola lequa y no dos para que en el demas terreno que queda valdio puedan agraciarse otros qe. hagan igual solicitud.

Sala de comisiones del Illtre. Ayuntamiento de la municipalidad de Balencia, marzo 2 de 1845.

ANTONIO JOSÉ LUNA.
ESTEVAN BACA.

Puesto á discusion fue aprobado, marzo 2 de 1845.

VICENTE OTERO, Presidente.

MIGUEL DE OLONA, Secretario.

Remitase á la Prefectura como estó previnido.

VICENTE OTERO.

MIGUEL DE OLONA, Srio.

PAJARITO, marzo 8 de 1845.

Por lo que resulta del antecedente informe parece no haber obise ninguno pa. conceder al interesado la gracia qe. solicita—en esta virtud pase esta instancia al E. S. Govor. pa. qe. por el conducto de S. E. y con su informe se dirija á la H. Asamblea si á bien lo tuviere S. E. y no carezca de requisito alguno la posesion.

FCO. SARRACINO.

CTE. SARRACINO, Srio.

STA. FÉ, marzo 15 de 1845.

En acuerdo de est dia en qe. se trato sobre la concesion de terreno qe. pide el Sor. Dn. Juan Otero, vecino de Valencia en el Ojo de la Cabra qe. esta en el llano para la sierra de Sandia se ha resuelto con dispensa de tramites y conforme á la facultad qe. le confiere el artículo 134 fraccion 5a. de las Bases Organicas acediendo al pedido que solicito que se le conceda la legua cuadradra á qe. se contrae el informe de la respectable corporacion de Valencia; al mismo tiempo se acordó se pase á V. E. original el pedido e informes para qe. á su continuacion se estiendan las diligencias qe. se practiquen para legalizar la posesion, y que conclnido vuelva el espediente en iguales terminos á la Sria. de esta Asamblea para protocalarse y darse al interesado la copia testimoniada con que comprobar la legitimidad de su posesion obrando en estos pasos el juez mas inmediato del terreno pedida.

J. MANUEL GALLEGOS.

TOMAS ORTIZ, Srio.

PAJARITO, marzo 18 '45.

Cumpliendo con el superior decreto que antecede y oficio de remision del E. S. Gobor. pase esta instancia all sor. juez de 1a. insa. D. Vicente Otero pa. qe. pase á dar la posesion qe. pr. la H. Asamblea se ha concedido á D. Juan Otero nacione. y personalme. en el nominado terreno dandole y concediendole un señorio absoluto á la agua qe. á sus espensas ha echo vertir cuya posesion formalisará dno. juez á nombre de la nacion mejicana (q. D. g.) con todas las solenidades de estilo y sin perjuicio de tercero, y concluido que sea le remitira el espediente á esta Prefra. para darle el curso correspondiente.

FCO. SARRACINO.

CTE. SARRACINO, Srio.

(Seal fourth, two reals.)

Years one thousand eight hundred and forty-two and one thousand eight hundred and forty-three.

Valid for the years one thousand eight hundred and forty-four and forty-five.

JOSÉ ANTONIO CHAVEZ, [RUBRIC.]
Collector of Revenue.

MARIANO MARTINEZ, [RUBRIC.]
Governor.

Hon. Prefect of the 3rd Disirict:

I, citizen Juan Otero, a resident in the municipality of Valencia, appear before your honor in due form of law, protesting all that is requisite and necessary, and state that, finding myself with some small herds of cattle and horses which I have for my necessary uses, and finding myself without sufficient land to pasture them on, in order to keep them in ordinary condition for service, I have engaged in opening a well at the very small spring of water commonly called the "Goat Spring," on which I have made some expenditures, and the result appears favorable, though not certain; and seeing that in order to attain the benefit I have proposed some expenses must be incurred to secure the fruit of my labor, your honor will be pleased, in view of justice, to have given me in legal form a grant of land at said well of two leagues on each course, as public domain and as a benefit, which in this department has been conceded to all since the conquest to the present date. Availing myself of the protection of the laws, which I implore, obligating myself for costs and whatever may be necessary, &c.

Town of Peralta, January 22, 1845.

JUAN OTERO.

PAJARITO, January 22, '45.

Let this petition be forwarded to the alcalde, justice of 1st instance and president of the illustrious ayuntamiento of this district, that he, in conjunction with that body, report in detail, after examining the land applied for, and whether it belongs to any other person, and is public, in order that in view of the report to resolve what may be proper, as one of the principal attributes granted to this prefecture by article 77 of the law of March 20, 1837.

SAVRACINO.

CLEMENTE SAVRACINO, Secretary.

Hon. Prefect of the 3rd District:

In order to duly comply with the decree of your excellency, date 2nd of March last, a committee from the illustrious ayuntamiento was appointed, composed of Alderman Antonio José Luna and Syndic Estevan Baca, to determine and inform themselves relative to the application of Juan Otero; who, after having examined the land and as to the adjoining owners, have reported that the said land does not belong to any person whatever, reducing their report to the following articles:

Article 1st. There is no impediment whatever on Juan Otero being granted as he prays.

Article 2nd. There may be granted him one league only and not two, in order that the remaining public land may be granted to others making similar application.

Committee room of the illustrious ayuntamiento of the municipality of Valencia, March 2nd, 1845.

ANTONIO JOSÉ LUNA.
ESTEVAN BACA.

The same being discussed, it was approved, March 2nd, 1845.

VICENTE OTERO,
President.

MIGUEL DE OLONA, Secretary.

PAJARITO, March 8, 1845.

From the result of the foregoing report, it appears there is no objection whatever to conceding to the party interested the favor he asks; in virtue whereof let this petition be forwarded to his excellency the governor, that through his excellency the same, together with the report, be transmitted to the hon., the assembly, should his excellency be pleased to do so, and that the possession may not lack any requisite.

F. SAVRACINO.

CLEMENTE SAVRACINO, Secretary.

SANTA FÉ, March 15, 1845.

In the action had this day concerning the concession of land applied for by Juan Otero, a resident of Valencia, at the Goat Spring situate in the prairie towards the Sandia Mountain, it was resolved, under a suspension of the rules, and in accordance with the power conferred in article 134, section 5th of the organic acts, that acceding to the petition he requested there be granted to him the square league to which the report of the respectable corporation of Valencia confines itself, and at the same time it was resolved that the original application and report be transmitted to your excellency, that in continuation of the same there be added the proceedings which may be had to legalize the possession, and the same being concluded, the expediente will be returned in similar terms to the secretary's office of this assembly to be filed, and furnish to the interested party a certified copy thereof, wherewith to evidence the legality of his possession, the justice nearest the land applied for officiating in the premises.

J. MANUEL GALLEGOS,
President.

TOMAS ORTIZ, Secretary.

PAJARITO, March 18, '45.

In compliance with the foregoing superior decree and letter of transmittal of his excellency the governor, let this petition be transmitted to the justice of 1st instance, Vicente Otero, that he may proceed to execute the national and personal possession which the hon. sssembly have conceded to Juan Otero, to the aforesaid land, giving and granting to him in fee simple the water, which at his own expense he has caused to flow, which possession shall be executed by said justice in the name of the Mexican nation (may God preserve it), with all the required solemnities, and without injury to any third party; and the same being concluded, he will transmit the proceedings to this prefecture, in order to give it its corresponding course.

FRANCISCO SAVRACINO.

CLEMENTE SAVRACINO, Secretary.

The foregoing translation, made by me from the original in the Spanish language, is correct, to the best of my knowledge and belief.

SAM'L ELLISON.

Sworn to and subscribed before me this 29th day of January, 1875.

JAMES K. PROUDFIT,
Surveyor-General.

SURVEYOR-GENERAL'S OFFICE, TRANSLATOR'S DEPARTMENT,
Santa Fé, New Mexico, January 29, 1875.

The foregoing translation having been by me compared with the original in Spanish and found correct is hereby adopted for the official translation.

DAV. J. MILLER, Translator.

JUAN OTERO.

Ojo de la Cabra (Goat Spring) tract.

AGUSTIN GALLEGO, being by the surveyor-general duly sworn to depose in this private land claim, on his oath, declares:

Question by Samuel Ellison, attorney for claimants. What is your name, age, occupation, and residence?—Answer. My name is Agustin Gallego; my age is about fifty-five years; my occupation is farmer; and my residence is Preralta, in the county of Valencia, New Mexico.

Q. Do you know a place called the Ojo de la Cabra? and, if so, please state where it is situate and by whom owned.—A. I know such a place; situate in the county of Valencia, in the vicinity and east of the town of Peralta. The tract so called was owned by Juan Otero, now deceased, and since his death by his heirs, the same having been occupied and used for pasturing by him till his death, and by them since his death. I was Juan Otero's peon and worked for him upon this tract about three years, in or about the years 1842, '43, and '44. The land at the Ojo de la Cabra was always recognized by the adjoining settlers during the time mentioned and to this time as property of Juan Otero, and since his death as property of his heirs.

Q. Did Juan Otero or his successors make any improvements, and, if so, what improvements, upon this tract?—A. Senor Otero made improvements upon the tract. He built a stone dwelling-house upon it, for his herders residing upon the tract, at the spring and two large corrals, one for his horses and mules and another for his horned cattle, and planted many shade trees. He improved the spring situated upon the tract called the Ojo de la Cabra or Goat Spring, so as to utilize its water for his live stock, consisting of about five hundred head of cattle and two hundred head of horses and mules. The spring prior to his working upon it to utilize its water afforded but a small branch, which frequently dried entirely up, but afterwards it was by him made to flow permanently and furnish enough water for the use of his live stock.

Question by surveyor-general. Have you any interest in this claim, or in the land here claimed?—A. I have none whatever.

his
AGUSTIN × GALLEGO.
mark.

Sworn to and subscribed before me this March 17, 1875.

JAMES K. PROUDFIT,
Surveyor-General.

NEPOMUCENO ZAMORA, being by the surveyor-general sworn, on his oath declares:

Question by Mr. Ellison. What is your name, age, occupation, and residence?—Answer. My name is Nepomuceno Zamora; my age is about sixty years; my occupation is farmer, and my residence is Peralta, in the county of Valencia, in this Territory, where I have always lived. Formerly for many years I was a peon of Juan Otero, now deceased.

Q. Are you acquainted with a place in that county called the Ojo de la Cabra, or Goat Spring? If so, please state where it is situated, by whom owned, and all you know concerning the tract and this claim therefor.—A. I am acquainted with the place mentioned. It lies upon the east side of the Rio Grande, near to and to the east of the town of Peralta. I was a peon of Juan Otero, and worked for him several years at his said place, the Ojo de la Cabra, which was, I cannot say exactly in what years, but it was several years before the American occupation of New Mexico. He considerably improved the spring by causing it to furnish water sufficient for his live stock, consisting of some two hundred head of horses and mules and some five hundred head of horned cattle. The spring, before being improved by Otero, afforded very little water and the branch from it often dried up, but after being improved it wa thereby made to furnish much water and to run a permanent branch. Otero builsthree dams or water reservoirs for collecting for his stock the water from the spring. He built also two large corrals, one for the use of his horses and mules and the other for the use of his cattle. He also erected a house of two rooms for the use of his head herder and other herders.

Question by surveyor-general. Have you any interest in this claim or in the land here claimed?—A. I have no interest in any respect in the matter.

his NEPOMUCENO × ZAMORA.
mark.

Sworn to and subscribed before me this March 17, 1875.

JAMES K. PROUDFIT,
Surveyor-General.

OPINION.

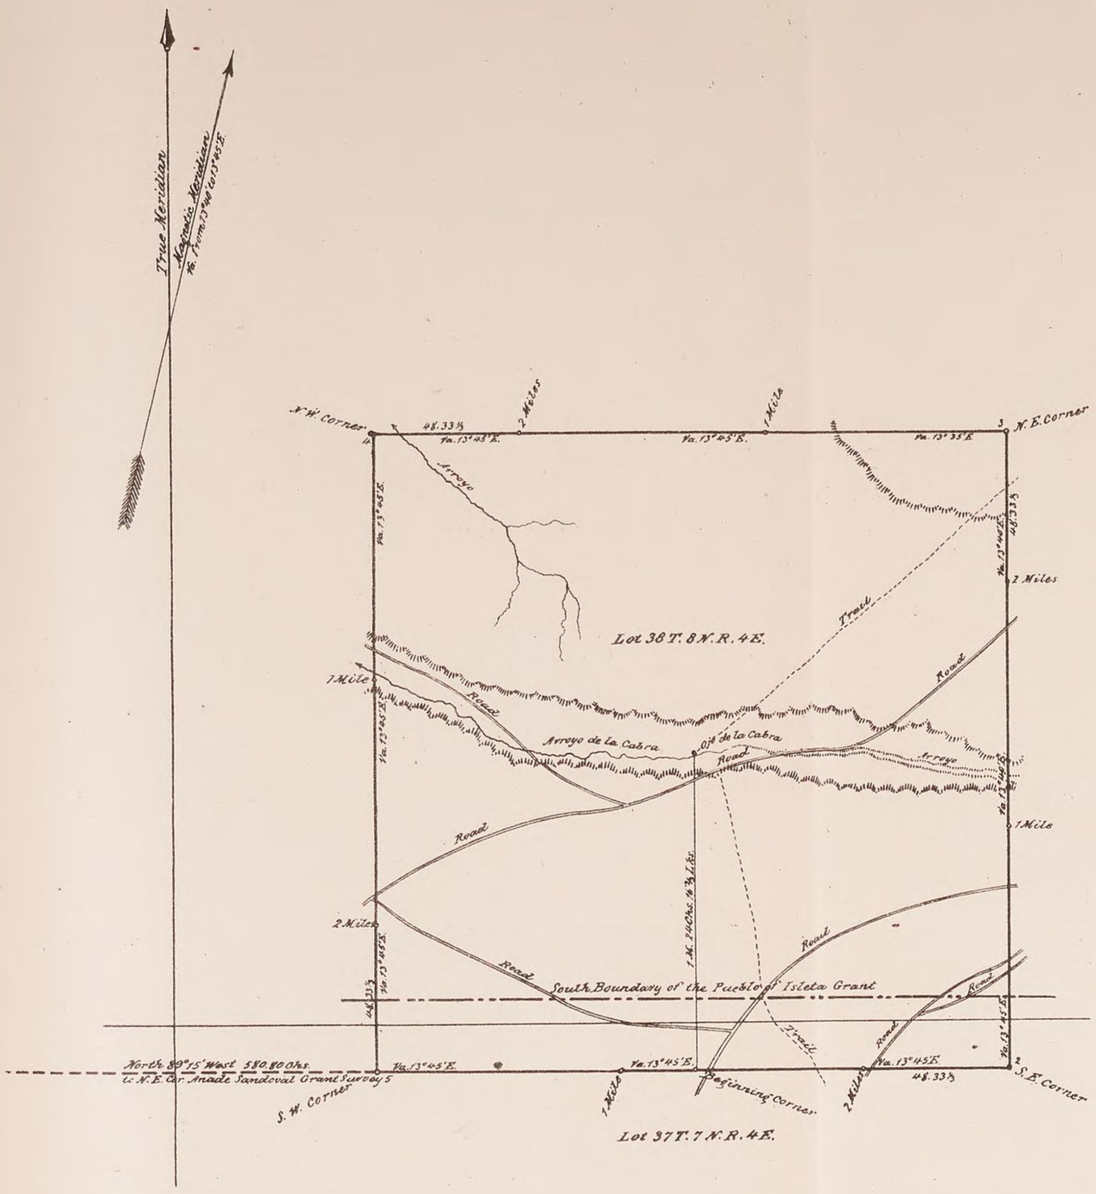
This claim for confirmation of a grant of land is brought before me under the eighth article of the treaty of Guadalupe Hidalgo and the eighth section of the act of Congress approved July 22, 1854, establishing this office.

The original record on file in this office is in the Spanish language and is no doubt authentic. It appears therefrom that on the 22d day of January, 1845, Juan Otero applied to the prefect of the third district of New Mexico, then a territory of the republic of Mexico, for a grant of land at the Goat Spring, to be two leagues square with the spring for a center. The petition was referred on the same day by the prefect to the local ayuntamiento, which body reported March 2, 1845, in favor of making a grant of one league of land. The perfect approved this report; it was forwarded to the governor for the action of the legislative assembly, and that body made the concession on the 15th day of March, 1845. The written act of possession seems to be lost, but the record otherwise appears to be prefect, and the proof submitted by present claimants shows that Otero was in peaceable possession before the American occupation, and that he and his heirs have so remained ever since.

I recommend that one square league of land with the Goat Spring at its center be confirmed by Congress to the legal representatives of Juan Otero, deceased, said land being situated in the county of Valencia, in the Territory of New Mexico.

I transmit the complete record in triplicate.

JAMES K. PROUDFIT,
United States Surveyor-General.



UNITED STATES SURVEYOR-GENERAL'S OFFICE,
Santa Fé, July 13, 1875.

SURVEYOR-GENERAL'S OFFICE,
Santa Fé, N. Mex., December 31, 1878.

The foregoing thirteen pages is a correct transcript of the original papers on file in this office in private land claim reported as No. 106, in the name of Juan Otero.

HENRY M. ATKINSON,
Surveyor-General.

O

PLAT of the
GRANT TO JUAN OTERO for the
OJO DE LA CABRA
TRACT

Surveyed by Robert G. Harmon U.S. Deputy Surveyor

March 1879.

BOUNDARIES
NO.	COURSE	DISTANCE
		MS.	CHS.	LKS.
1	East	1	24	16⅔
2	North	2	48	33⅓
3	West	2	48	33⅓
4	South	2	48	33⅓
5	East	1	24	16⅔
	TOTAL	10	33	33⅓

Connecting Line 7 Ms. 20 Chs. 80 Lks.

Account for Cost

For surveying and platting Private Land Claim No. 106 the Grant to Juan Otero for the Ojo de la Cabra Tract.

Furnished the General Land Office by the Surveyor General of New Mexico, under the Commissioner's Instructions of June 29. 1877.

Cost of Surveying	$ 218. 03
Cost of Platting	24. 73
Total	$ 242. 76

SEN. EX. DOC. No. 85, 1st SESS., 47th CONG.

JUAN OTERO GRANT
NO.	GRANTEE	GRANT DATED	GRANT APPROVED	DESCRIPTION LOT	TOWNSHIP	RANGE	ACRES
106	Juan Otero	March 15, 1845	July 13, 1875	37	7 N.	4 E.	4340.26
				38	8 N.	4 E.

The field notes of the survey of Private Land Claim No 106, the grant to Juan Otero, for the Ojo de la Cabra tract, from which this plat has been made, have been examined and approved, and are on file in this office.

Surveyor General's Office
Santa Fe New Mexico
August 26. 1879.

Henry M. Atkinson
Surveyor General.

47TH CONGRESS, 1st Session. } SENATE. { EX. DOC. No. 86.

MESSAGE

FROM THE

PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES,

TRANSMITTING

A report of the Secretary of State of February 3, 1882, with accompanying papers, in response to Senate resolution of 12th ultimo calling for certain correspondence in the case of claim of Antonio Pelletier against the Government of Hayti.

FEBRUARY 3, 1882.—Read and referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations and ordered to be printed.

To the Senate of the United States:

I transmit herewith a report of the Secretary of State, of this date, with accompanying papers, furnished in obedience to a resolution of the Senate of the 12th ultimo calling for certain correspondence in the case of claim of Antonio Pelletier against the Government of Hayti.

CHESTER A. ARTHUR.

EXECUTIVE MANSION,
Washington, February 3, 1882.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, February 3, 1882.

The Secretary of State, to whom was referred the resolution of the Senate of January 12, 1882, calling upon the President to communicate to that body, "so far as may be compatible with the public interests, a copy of the instructions to the minister of the United States in Hayti, of his notes to that government, and of his dispatches to the Department of State, not heretofore communicated, respecting the claim of Antonio Pelletier, a citizen of the United States, against the Government of Hayti," has the honor, in response thereto, to lay before the President the accompanying papers, embracing all the correspondence between the Government of the United States and the Government of Hayti since the publication of the correspondence submitted by Mr. Secretary Seward on the 3d of April, 1868, which was printed as Executive Document No. 260 of the House of Representatives, Fortieth Congress, second session.

Since that time the claim of Antonio Pelletier has been before Congress at different times in the form of memorials submitted by claimant, upon which action was had in committees. Reference may conveniently be made to Miscellaneous Document No. 57, of the House of Representatives, Forty-second Congress, third session; to the Senate Report No. 425, of June 9, 1874, Forty-third Congress, first session; and to House Report No. 51, of January 11, 1878, Forty-fifth Congress, second session. Between 1868 and 1878 no correspondence on the subject of this claim took place between the two governments. The action of the House of Representatives, on the 11th of January, 1878, in adopting a resolution offered by Mr. Benjamin Wilson, "that the memorial of Antonio Pelletier, asking indemnity from the Republic of Hayti, together with the accompanying documents, be transmitted to the President of the United States, without recommendation," left the matter free for renewed Executive consideration of the claim, as presented to the Secretary of State on the 22d of January, 1878, by the claimant in a letter which is herewith transmitted as affording a convenient starting-point for the present installment of correspondence.

Respectfully submitted.

FRED'K T. FRELINGHUYSEN.

The PRESIDENT.

LIST OF ACCOMPANYING PAPERS.

1. Mr. Pelletier to Mr. Evarts, January 22, 1878, with accompaniment.
2. Mr. Evarts to Mr. Langston, No. 23, April 12, 1878, with accompaniment. (See Ex. Doc. No. 260, H. R., Fortieth Congress, second session.
3. Mr. Langston to Mr. Evarts, No. 64, June 24, 1878.
4. Mr. Evarts to Mr. Langston, No. 50, December 23, 1878.
5. Mr. Langston to Mr. Evarts, No. 130, February 28, 1879.
6. Mr. Evarts to Mr. Langston, No. 61, March 24, 1879.
7. Mr. Langston to Mr. Evarts, No. 155, May 1, 1879, with accompaniment.
8. Same to the same, No. 313, December 26, 1879, with two accompaniments.
9. Mr. Evarts to Mr. Langston, No. 102, March 24, 1880.
10. Mr. Langston to Mr. Evarts, No. 251, April 20, 1880, with three accompaniments.
11. Mr. Evarts to Mr. Langston, No. 112, June 14, 1880.
12. Mr. Langston to Mr. Evarts, No. 295, July 24, 1880, with accompaniment.
13. Same to the same, No. 304, August 9, 1880, with accompaniment.
14. Mr. Hay to Mr. Langston, No. 127, August 17, 1880.
15. Mr. Evarts to Mr. Langston, No. 135, Nov. 3, 1880, with two accompaniments.
16. Mr. Langston to Mr. Evarts, No. 323, December 17, 1880.
17. Same to the same, No. 339, January 29, 1881, with accompaniment.
18. Mr. Evarts to Mr. Langston, No. 145, February 16, 1881.
19. Mr. Langston to Mr. Evarts, No. 350, February 25, 1881, with three accompaniments.
20. Same to the same, No. 356, March 3, 1881.
21. Mr. Langston to Mr. Blaine, No. 360, March 26, 1881, with accompaniment.

CORRESPONDENCE.

No. 1.

Mr. Pelletier to Mr. Evarts.

WASHINGTON, D. C., January 22, 1878.

Hon. WM. M. EVARTS,
Secretary of Department of State:

SIR: I beg leave to call your attention to the action of the House of Representatives on the 11th instant, on the report of the Committee on Foreign Affairs returning joint resolution No. 26, of present Congress, back to the House, with a substitute referring my claim against the republic of Hayti to the President for action, on the ground that under the Constitution the Executive is fully authorized to make the request contemplated by the resolution.

In connection with this action of the House, I desire to refer you to the fact that heretofore I have filed in your Department the evidence and arguments, both for and against my claim contained in Executive Document No. 260, of Fortieth Congress, second session; also Miscellaneous Document No. 57, of Forty-second Congress, third session.

I desire to further call your attention to the able report of the Committee on Foreign Affairs presented by Hon. B. Wilson to the House on the psasage of the substitute above mentioned, herewith filed. I ask your careful consideration of the printed argument of Judge T. J. Cason, in which he reviews the whole case and shows conclusively there should be prompt action by the government, which is herewith presented, and in connection therewith a printed index of the important points mentioned in Documents No. 57 and 260, above mentioned. I also desire to refer you to a letter of Hon. Wm. H. Seward, while Secretary of State, to me, asking that I would give him "a review of my case, showing the grounds upon which I claimed that the proceedings were irregular or illegal under the laws of Hayti for want of jurisdiction or other cause."

The letter bears date about August 1, 1864, and has never been printed in connection with this case. There is other evidence on file not printed, among which is the record of the purchase of the bark William, at Key West, under a sale by a United States marshal, the copy of the register of the ship, and the clearance of the vessel from Mobile, &c.

In a short review of my case, I wish to remind you that I became the owner of my vessel under a decree of a United States court directing its marshal to sell the vessel, purchasing her under full sanction of law, my government being a party and grantor in the sale, and embarked on my voyage of anticipated pleasure and profit in a legitimate manner and under the protection of the United States, as shown by the registry and clearance papers. I most respectfully but earnestly call your attention to the outrages committed by the authorities of Hayti upon my person and property and upon such of my crew as chanced to be American citizens, as established by the evidence, and the total lack of valid excuse therefor.

It must be apparent to the mind of every one who carefully reads the evidence in this remarkable case, that the true motives of the Haytian authorities in their barbarous treatment of myself and American crew arose from personal animosity to myself, occasioned by the difficulty between us at Port-au-Prince, the desire to appropriate my property, coupled with a contempt for our government and a hatred expressed not only by their language, as quoted in Mr. Wilson's report to Congress in this case, but in their acts in discriminating in their persecutions of my crew and in many other ways. The animus displayed by the authorities is well illustrated in the disposition made of my vessel. It was first put up at auction and several thousand dollars bid for it, but, on pretext that the offer was insufficient, the sale was stopped and the vessel withdrawn. Soon afterwards, however, it was put up again for sale, and this time bid in by one Rivers, a partner of and for the use of the President of the republic, for the nominal sum of a few hundred dollars, although she had cost me about the sum of $35,000.

The vessel was afterwards used in the ice trade between Bangor, Me., and the island of Hayti, the President being at the head of a company that had a monopoly of the ice trade for that part of the island belonging to Hayti. The sale of my vessel for the use of the President and his ice company to carry on their monopoly was brought up in the Congress of the republic and severely condemned. I cannot now recollect exact amounts, being in prison at the time of the occurrence, but the offer for my vessel in the first place was several thousand dollars, and it was afterwards sold for only a few hundred; the records of the Congress will, however, show the whole matter. I think it was in the session of the winter of 1861 or 1862. I desire to further state a few facts not heretofore presented under oath, which, owing to a multiplicity of points, have been overlooked. The French vice-consul Mennan, at Cape Haytien, who acted so injuriously against me at Port Leberti, presenting his pistol at my head among other insults, was, on the report of his proceedings to his government, censured and removed from his office on account of his conduct towards me, and his successor was one of my best friends from his first arrival at his post and was constant in his efforts to assist me and furnished me with money.

Mr. Dujarden, secretary of legation, in charge of the French legation, in the absence of the French minister, and who signed a letter with the foreign ministers and consuls (except Mr. Lewis, American consul) to the secretaries of the Haytian Republic refusing to assist me or in any manner to protect me, was censured by his government for his course in the matter, and the Marquis de Forbin Janson, minister plenipotentiary from France to Hayti, sent said secretary to me on his return from France to say that the government repudiated his course and had instructed the minister to protect me and that he would visit me the next day in prison and determine what course would be best to pursue; but to avoid the minister seeing me I was taken out of the prison at Port-au-Prince at 3 o'clock in the morning and marched over land, nearly naked, sick, and feeble, so I could scarcely walk, often falling down, and was taken to Cape Haytien, but afterwards said minister aided me in person to escape from the hospital, and helped secrete me at the French consulate until different arrangements were made, and also went with me in person when I was put on board of the Spanish steamer, giving me money to assist me in my escape. He also stated to me that if I had been a French subject I would soon have been released; he made this statement, being familiar with all the facts of my case. Also, Mr. St. John, minister fron England to Hayti, was not in the republic when the letter of the Foreign ministers and consuls to the secretaries of Hayti was signed, but on his return to Hayti was my friend, assisted me in many ways, giving me money, aiding me in my escape, and in fact as soon as my case was understood I was assisted and befriended, and assisted by all the foreign ministers and consuls except the one person, and that was G. Eustice Hubbard, commercial agent of the United States.

As to the question of kidnapping persons and selling them into slavery, if we leave out the question of the absurdity of such a charge, the distressed condition of my vessel, the fact of having no provisions or other necessary articles on board for such a purpose, the fact of having on board over $50,000 in gold dust and coin, of which I must run the risk of confiscation yet if I had intended any such act I had taken on board at Grand Inaqua for the purpose of breaking ballast from ten to fifteen persons of color, and I was driven to sea by the winds, beating about for ten days endeavoring to get back, being at one time close to the shore of the island of Cuba, but finally succeeding in overcoming the adverse winds, I got back, landed the persons and paid them for the entire time they were on board, notwithstanding I had been driven away by the winds against my will and the hands had been idle. Surely this does not look as I designed to capture persons, for I certainly had a good pretense for keeping those I landed, on board, if I had desired to have carried them away; beside, it was on my landing these persons that my pilot put my vessel too near a reef, and my cable parting, the vessel was thrown on the reef, where I lost my anchor, rudder, false keel, &c., leaving my vessel unmanageable, and this was the cause of my having to seek a port to repair my vessel and was driven into Port Liberte.

The charge of piracy was attempted to be sustained against me by the suppression of my ship's papers and a combination of bribery, perjury, and the strong arm of the government in imprisoning witnesses who persisted in telling the truth, lawyers who dared to defend me, and judges who ventured to assert the law, unparalleled in the history of any civilized nation.

The charge was made not for any act done to a citizen of the Haytien Republic nor within its jurisdiction, but for an act claimed to have been committed within the territory of Great Britan, a nation fully capable of protecting itself, nor did the Haytien officials in any manner notify the authorities of the United States of the commission of the crime as was due by international comity, if any such crime had been committed.

The reason of such omission is obvious from the facts shown. You will pardon the importunate manner in which I urge my rights, for it seems to me I am warranted in so doing. These outrages occurred seventeen years ago, and I have endeavored ever since my escape from the clutches of these people, through the interposition of the officials of foreign nations, to obtain redress, but so far unsuccessfully. In the mean time, bankrupt in fortune caused by the action of the authorities of Hayti, prostrated in the loss of my family and health by the same cause, old age has grown upon me, wherefore I most earnestly represent that it is not only due to me personally that such redress should be demanded, but for the honor of our government and for the protection of other American citizens.

ANTONIO PELLETIER,
1108 Sixth Street, N. W.

CITY OF WASHINGTON,
District of Columbia, ss:

Personally appeared before me, Wm. H. Chase, a justice of the peace within and for said city and District, Antonio Pelletier, well known to me to be the identical person whose signature is attached to the foregoing letter, and, being duly sworn, says that the matters and things stated in the foregoing letter to be of his own knowledge are true in substance and in fact, and those things stated on the knowledge of others he has reason to believe and does believe to be true.

In witness whereof I have hereunto set my hand and judicial seal this twenty-second day of January, A. D. 1878.

WM. H. CHASE,
Justice of the Peace.

[Extract from Congressional Record, January 12, 1878.]

ANTONIO PELLETIER.

Mr. WILSON, from the Committee on Foreign Affairs, reported adversely joint resolution (H. R. No. 26) to authorize the President of the United States to request the Republic of Hayti to indemnify Antonio Pelletier, which was laid upon the table, and the accompanying report ordered to be printed.

He also, from the same committe, reported the following:

Resolved, That the memorial of Antonio Pelletier, asking indemnity from the Republic of Hayti, together with the accompanying documents, be transmitted to the President of the United States, without recommendation.

Mr. CLYMER. Is that a unanimous report of the committee?

Mr. WILSON. It is.

The SPEAKER. The Chair would suggest that this perhaps had better be a joint resolution.

Mr. WILSON. If in the opinion of the Chair it should be a joint resolution, I would ask that it be so amended. I had supposed that a simple House resolution was sufficient.

Mr. GARFIELD. I desire to reserve all points of order until some explanation can be made.

Mr. WILSON. The joint resolution which was referred to the Committee on Foreign Affairs was predicated upon a memorial of Antonio Pelletier, who alleged that his property was spoliated and he was arrested and imprisoned while in Hayti, and he asked Congress to recommend to the President to demand indemnity of the Republic of Hayti. The committee have directed me to report back adversely the joint resolution upon the ground that the House has not jurisdiction of the question, and also to report a simple House resolution referring the papers to the President, without recommendation.

The SPEAKER. Although the Chair suggested that this should be a joint resolution, the Chair is of opinion that the House has the power to pass a simple House resolution upon this subject.

The resolution was then adopted.

Mr. WILSON. moved to reconsider the vote by which the resolution was adopted; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

No. 2.

Mr. Evarts to Mr. Langston.

No. 23.] DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, April 12, 1878.

SIR: I transmit herewith a copy of Executive Document* No. 206, House of Representatives, Fortieth Congress, second session, which, together with documents and papers already on file in your consulate-

*Inclosure. See document mentioned, general, will put you in possession of the necessary information in relation to the imprisonment of Antonio Pelletier, a citizen of the United States, by the authorities of Hayti, for a period of nearly three years, and the confiscation and appropriation, by the same authorities, of his vessel, the American bark "William," with a large amount of valuable property, consisting of gold-dust, gold and silver bullion, coin, diamonds, maps, charts, compasses, chronometers, and articles incident to the navigation of vessels. These occurrences transpired during the years 1861, 1862, and 1863, Captain Pelletier having been arrested and imprisoned in February, 1861, and kept in close confinement until November, 1863, when he succeeded in making his escape by scaling the walls of the prison hospital, and through the assistance of the British consul, the French consul, the Spanish consul, Mr. Whidden, the United States commercial agent at Port-au-Prince, Father Pascal, a worthy Haytien clergyman, Mr. Listant, and other kind and humane friends, made his way to Kingston, Jamaica, from where he was enabled finaly to reach the United States.

The circumstances attending Mr. Pelletier's arrest, imprisonment, trial, and condemnation to death were reported to the Department in 1861 by Mr. Hubbard, then United States commercial agent at Cape Haytien, and, attributable, as it is now believed, to partial and incorrec information on the subject, were represented by Mr. Hubbard in a light unfavorable to the interests of Pelletier. Subsequently, in 1862, and while Pelletier was undergoing the barbarous treatment of which he complains, Mr. Whidden, commercial agent at Port-au-Prince, upon a full examination of the facts and circumstances, many of which transpired under his own immediate observation, reported to the Department, justly reprobating the conduct of the authorities toward Pelletier, and commending the case earnestly to the interposition of this government.

The necessary inquiries and examination of the matter took time, and pending these the claimant in November, 1863, madeh is escape from Haytien jurisdiction, and it was not until his return to the United States that he was able to recognize the full consequences of his arrest, imprisonment, and the confiscation of his property at the hands of the Haytien authorities. Finding himself, as he states (and as the facts go far to establish), ruined in fortune and health, he accordingly prepared a careful and detailed statement of the facts and circumstances of his case, and in a memorial, dated the 16th of July 1864, presented his claim to the Department, with a demand for pecuniary indemnity against the Haytien Government, accompanying his memorial with such proofs in support of the claim as were then available to him. The pressure of public affairs during the years referred to, 1862–'63–'64, and for some time after, owing to the civil war then being waged in the United States, was such as to absorb the entire attention of the government, and in a great degree rendered it necessary to suspend for a time the prosecution of all claims of private citizens of the United States against foreign powers or their subjects or citizens; and this fact may be deemed sufficient to account for the non-action of the Department during this period in regard to the claim of Captain Pelletier, and when in 1871 the claim was again brought to the attention of the Department, it was found to be then pending before Congress. That body have by resolution called for the correspondence on the subject, which resolution was responded to by the transmission of the papers embraced in the document, a copy of which I now transmit. The subject has recently been referred back by Congress to the President (House resolution of January 11, 1878), and a careful re-examination of all the facts and circumstances has been made; and upon a report of the result of that examination, submitted by the law officer of the Department, it has reached the conclusion that the proceedings of the Haytien authorities toward Captain Antonio Pelletier on the occasion referred to were unwarranted by principles of public law; were, moreover, prosecuted with a degree of harshness and cruelty wholly inconsistent with the practices and usages of civilized nations, and strangely at variance with the treatment which this government had a right to expect for its citizens from the authorities of a neighboring republic between which and the United States the most friendly relations had always been maintained.

A careful examination of the evidence adduced on the trial of Pelletier and his associates, so far as it is now before the Department, wholly fails to establish against them the charge of piracy, upon which he was tried; and the principal witnesses brought forward by the government, Cortez and Miranda, show but too clearly by their whole conduct that they are unworthy of credit. These with other circumstances developed by the record of the proceedings, amongst them the denial of counsel to the accused, and the intimation, and, in one instance at least, the imprisonment of counsel who undertook to appear for them, go far to show that Captain Pelletier and his associates did not have a fair and impartial trial. The Department finds itself equally at a loss to understand upon what grounds, either of public or municipal law, the seizure, sale, and absolute appropriation by the Haytien authorities of the large amount of valuable property of Pelletier can be justified.

It is probable, however, that the Department may not be in possession of all the facts in relation to the matter, and it is therefore desired that from the documents now transmitted, from such as may be found amongst the archives of your consulate-general, from the judicial records of the Haytien tribunals, and such other sources of information as you may find available, that you will make a careful investigation of the case, and so soon as that shall be accomplished that you will forward to the Department a report showing the results of your inquiries, when you will be further instructed as to what, if any, measures the president may deem it proper to adopt with a view of securing indemnity to the claimant for the losses which he has suffered in consequence of the proceedings of which he complains.

I am, &c.,

WM. M. EVARTS.

No. 3.

Mr. Langston to Mr. Evarts.

No. 64.] LEGATION OF THE UNITED STATES,
Port-au-Prince, Hayti, June 24, 1878.

SIR: Your dispatch numbered 23, with its accompaniment, Executive Document No. 260, the former bearing date April 12, 1878, both having reference to the arrest, trial, sentence, and imprisonment of Antonïo Pelletier, and the confiscation of his property, by the Haytien Government, has been given due consideration, and such investigation as seems, under the circumstances, practicable.

The conclusions which I have reached in this case are predicated mainly upon the statements of Mr. Linstant Pradine; the records of the court of cassation as found in an authentic book of reports prepared and published by Mr. Pradine, under government patronage; the reports of the case as found in the official gazette of the government of the date of its occurrence; the correspondence of the Department had with M. B. F. Whidden; and the correspondence of the Haytien Government had with the same person, after his appointment of commissioner near this government. There is no record of the case, or of proceedings had with respect to it, to be found in this legation or consulate-general. "A few letters from the Haytien Government, and four from the late Hon. William H. Seward, your distinguished and worthy predecessor, with the letter of Mr. Hubbard," to which are appended certain affidavits, and letters of Mr. Pelletier, compose the sum of all papers having to do with this case on file in my office. I have been advised, and believe, that the records of the criminal court of this city, in which Captain Pelletier was tried, including the records of his own case, and covering all the records of that court from 1860 down to 1874, have been destroyed by fire. And I have been advised and believe that the records of the court of cassation for the period covering this case and all proceedings had therein down to 1860 have also been destroyed by fire. I have already stated, however, that I have found the record of the proceedings in this case, including the judgment of the courts, in an authoritative form in the reports and official journal.

It is to be regretted that we have no record of the case in this legation. I have concluded that it might be wise to transmit, herewith inclosed, two dispatches, one from the Department, marked "A," and the other marked "B," the copy in translation of a dispatch from the Haytien Government.

Linstant Pradine, whose name I have already given, is without doubt the first lawyer of this republic. A man of age, extended and varied experience in professional and official life, he is a lawyer of large and comprehensive reading and thought, and, withal, a candid and conscientious man. He was Captain Pelletier's attorney; he is his personal friend; and, perhaps, it was more due to his advice and efforts Pelletier escaped from the cruel imprisonment which had been adjudged his punishment in part, than any one else. But after many years have passed, and the ardor of the advocate has abated, the warm sympathy of the friend no longer dimming his vision nor animating his conviction, and the facts and the law, as well as the considerations of justice which pertain to the case, can be considered by him, in the light of a good understanding, without predilection and without bias superinduced by relationship of friend or client, he declares to me that he has no change or modification of opinion to offer with regard either to the law or facts in the case; that he holds now, as heretofore, that under the law as it existed in 1861 the courts of this country could not try Pelletier; that all the proceedings had in the case are illegal; his imprisonment unjustifiable; the confiscation of his property without legal justification; and that, in view of the law and facts, his claim against the Haytien Government is well founded. His testimony to this end, as touching the arrest, trial, conviction, and imprisonment of Pelletier, as well as the confiscation of his property, is clear and positive. And his statement with regard to the manner of his trial; the treatment of counsel; the refusal of the government to return to Pelletier the register and other papers belonging to his vessel, such papers, as claimed by Pelletier, if produced, tending to show his innocence; with regard to the purposes of the government, discoverable in everything connected with the trial, for political reasons, to convict Pelletier, at all events, is just as clear and positive, and given without the least reservation.

The several papers contained in Executive Document No. 260, purporting to have been written and signed by Mr. Pradine, and by him sent to Captain Pelletier, or to his attorneys, to be used for the purpose of enabling him to bring his case truthfully before the government, are recognized by him, in their translations, as his, and their identity and authenticity affirmed.

The reports of which I have made mention, known as "Bulletins des Arrêts du Tribunal de Cassation," contain in full the opinions, the judgments, and orders of the court of appeal, the supreme court of the country, into which court the case of Pelletier finally came for consideration. The reports bearing the title given are regularly numbered; and this case appears in them for the first time, in No. 32, 1861. The civil parties thereto had appealed from the judgment of the criminal tribunal of Port-au-Prince, because the court held that, by reason of their quality of foreigners (qualité d'étranger), they could not be made parties to the suit; and the case is mentioned as having been considered, on the 24th day of August, 1861, when the judgment of the court below was annulled, while in No. 33, of the same year, 1861, the case is reported twice; first, September 16, 1861, as considered upon plea of the civil parties thereto, having reference to the matter of assessing costs; and secondly, October 14, 1861, upon the demand of Antonio Pelletier and his confederates, that the judgment rendered August 30, 1861, by the criminal court of Port-au-Prince, be annulled. At this time, and in this court, the case seems to have been fully argued and considered.

It seems that the judges addressed themselves to the case in all earnestness, while the appellants appear to have been represented by the most competent members of the bar. In delivering their opinion, the court cultivates seemingly critical and comprehensive understanding of the law; and, by judging that the under court had transcended its authority in pronouncing death against Pelletier, annuls the sentence so far and sends him to the criminal court sitting in Cape Haytien, which, without the assistance of the jury, should enforce the sentence of the law, basing its judgment upon the verdict already found and upon the law of 1815. This opinion, as reported in the Bulletin mentioned, is substantially presented, in every material and essential feature, in the translation as given of it on pages 108, 109, 110, 111, 112, 113, and 114 of Executive Document No. 260.

The dispatches of the Department, written by the late Hon. William H. Seward, on file in this legation, indicate, in very decided manner, that Captain Pelletier did by his own acts render himself amenable to Haytien law and answerable in Haytien courts. His No. 18 is published in Executive Document No. 260. His No. 36 is herewith inclosed, marked as indicated.

The dispatches of Mr. Whidden, as published, discover commendable zeal and earnestness in investigating the case, in doing what he might to impress the government with its urgent importance, and to relieve the hard condition of Captain Pelletier. They do more. They discover the conscientiousness with which he makes his investigations, and show that although he came into the country as the representative of our government subsequently to the arrest of Captain Pelletier, he had good opportunity and means of investigating this case. And his conclusions as stated in his dispatch numbered 11, as published in Executive Docu- No. 260, pages 6 and 7, seem, on the whole, to be those of an intelligent, discreet, and honest man. But his dispatches are not of record in this legation.

With regard to the statements of Mr. Hubbard, upon which Mr. Seward appeared to rely, I cannot speak; for I have no means of making investigation as to their correctness or otherwise. Mr. Hubbard speaks positively and, especially as to Captain Pelletier's conduct in and about Fort Liberté, from personal observation and knowledge; and I believe his statements are admitted to be true. His statements should, however, perhaps, in view of all the facts of the case, be taken with some little qualification. But were they taken as true, in the light of the law as it then existed, and the facts connected with the arrest, trial, and imprisonment of Captain Pelletier, can the action of the Haytien Government, in the premises, be justified?

The law of April 8, 1815, of this country, having to do with piracy, when this case occurred, the law under which Captain Pelletier was put on trial, reads, as translated, as follows:

1. Every individual charged and convicted of piracy, and who has committed assassination upon the sea, upon no matter what vessel, shall be punished with death, his vessel and all his property confiscated to the profit of the republic.

2. Every individual charged and convicted of piracy, and who shall not have committed assassination, shall be condemned to five years in irons, and in case the offense is repeated, to ten years in like manner in irons.

3. The punishment of death shall be equally pronounced against strangers who shall come under articles 7 and 8 of the present law, and who shall commit assassination.

4. All foreign pirates who shall land upon the shores of the republic, or who shall be taken by the coast guards of the state, shall be equally punished with death, if they shall have committed assassination upon Haytien vessels or upon those in relation of commerce with the republic. In that case only does the senate derogate from article 5 of title 1 of the law of 24 August, 1808. And the article referred to reads as follows:

5. The crimes committed by foreign seamen, upon their own vessels, as acts of revolt, sedition, or other criminal cases, which do not injure the interests of the country, shall not be prosecuted in Hayti; nevertheless, the examination of the case may be made by the courts of first instance, upon the request of the captain, the mate, or supercargoes of said vessels; but in each case the punishment shall not be pronounced; the accused shall be sent to their country to be judged.

But this law was fully considered by the tribunal of cassation, after it had been explained and elaborated by the learned attorneys who appeared on behalf of Captain Pelletier. The judges held that the Haytien tribunals had properly taken jurisdiction of the case, and might inflict the punishment denounced by the law of the country in the case of piracy; and that under the law the court had the power to order, and did order, the sale of his general and personal property, including, of course, the vessel. This decision has not been disturbed; and in 1862 a law, in its scope and aim covering all such cases, was enacted, and is now in vigor.

Having dwelt at length upon the record of this case, as made in the court of cassation, the proceedings in this tribunal being predicated upon action had in the criminal court of Port-au-Prince, it becomes unnecessary to animadvert specially upon the proceedings of the latter tribunal further than to say that the proceedings there seem in the main to be regular, the only questions pressed before that court, on behalf of the defense, being those which pertain to jurisdiction and the kind and measure of punishment to be inflicted, both of which matters were subsequently considered and determined in the upper court, partly in favor of and partly against Captain Pelletier.

I find then, as material circumstances connected with this case, the following facts and considerations:

1. This case has been considered by the Department, and, in fact, disposed of against Pelletier, thus maintaining the action of the Haytien courts and government.

2. It was disposed of, too, by the Department, mainly in view of testimony furnished by our own agents.

3. Its disposition has long ago come to the knowledge of the Haytien Government; and that government certainly understands well the facts upon which its disposition was based.

4. Now, if the case is to be re-examined, is it not true that the burden rests upon our shoulders to explain and refute the evidence and the law upon which the Department based its decision? Can this be done? The main facts still stand, and it cannot be denied, that the circumstances do show a condition of things militating in no unimportant sense against Captain Pelletier. I mean only that they throw serious suspicion upon him.

5. But it is conceded that he did not commit assassination upon the sea. Is it proved that he did commit robbery? If not, has the law of the state whose tribunals took cognizance of the case been properly construed and enforced? If it has, had the state right to make such law, and attempt its enforcement in such cases, under the circumstances? I understand that the Hon. William H. Seward, in the dispatches already adverted to, responds affirmatively to both these inquiries.

6. But in view of the definition of piracy, as given by such excellent authorities as Kent and Wheaton, as defined by the law of nations, may not all the facts as alleged in this case be admitted, and it be claimed still that Captain Pelletier has not been shown to be guilty of piracy, according to such definition? and that his imprisonment and the confiscation of his property are entirely illegal and unjustifiable; and, therefore, that his claim for damages, for reimbursement for property illegally appropriated, is just and well founded? I apprehend that this proposition will not be controverted, that the law enacted by any nation or state, with reference to piracy and its punishment, to be sustained, must accord with and be embodied in the definition of piracy, as given in the law of nations; and to sustain the charge of piracy, proof must be made of those facts and circumstances which are essential to its existence; proof must be made, in the language of the law, of "robbery or forcible depredations on the high seas, without lawful authority, done animo furandi, in the spirit and intention of universal hostility."

Upon a full investigation as I have been able to give this case, I have concluded that it would prove, under the circumstances, difficult of management and of uncertain result, especially in view of the position already taken by the Department with regard to it.

All that I have indicated as to law and fact favorable to Captain Pelletier may be true; but how shall the statement of Mr. Hubbard be overcome? How shall the decision of the Department, as presented in the dispatches of Mr. Seward, be set aside?

My investigations confirm the statements, if they do not add new facts to those found in Executive Document No. 260, so far as such statements regard judicial action and the records of the courts, in that respect—the imprisonment of Captain Pelletier, and the confiscation of his property.

With sentiments of very high regard, I am your obedient servant,

JOHN MERCER LANGSTON.

A.

Mr. Seward to Mr. Whidden.

No. 136.] DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, November 30, 1863.

SIR: Your dispatch No. 46 has been received, and has been taken into consideration, with the papers already in the Department relative to the case of Captain Pelletier. The conclusion reached is, that the proof of the citizenship of that person is not sufficient to warrant an interposition in his behalf. But, allowing the reverse to be the fact, his conduct in Hayti and on its coasts is conceived to have afforded the reasonable ground of suspicion against him on the part of the authorities of that republic, which led to his arrest, trial, and convictron in the regular course of law, with which result it is not deemed expedient to interfere.

I am sir, your obedient servant,

WILLIAM H. SEWARD.

B.

Mr. Damier to Mr. Whidden.

[Translation.]

OFFICE OF THE SECRETARY OF STATE,
FOR THE DEPARTMENT OF FOREIGN AFFAIRS,
Port-au-Prince, October 31, 1863.

Mr. COMMISSIONER: I have received your letter of the 28th instant, together with the note therein inclosed. These documents treat of the matter of reclamation of the personal effects of Pelletier, condemned for piracy.

All that relates to the affair of Pelletier was the subject of our conversation yesterday; and the result of our interview of to-day is substantially the same as the answer that I have to make to your demand.

Pelletier has been legally tried; he is now suffering under sentence; and results from all the documents of the procedure, that you are not ignorant that the government of the Republic has no restitution to make to this condemned man.

I will repeat what I have already said to you, that copies of the documents have been sent to chargé d'affaires at Washington, and communicated to the Hon. Mr. Seward, Secretary of State of the United States. The government is convinced that the matter will be, as far as the American government is concerned, an object of justice and equity.

Please accept, Mr. Commissioner, the assurance of my high consideration.

The Secretary of State for instruction, charged, ad interim, with the portfolio of Foreign Affairs:

DAMIER.

Mr. B. F. WHIDDEN.
Commissioner of the United States, Port-au-Prince.

No. 4.

Mr. Evarts to Mr. Langston.

No. 50.] DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, December 23, 1878.

SIR: Your dispatch No. 64 of June last, relative to the complaint of Antonio Pelletier against the government of Hayti, was duly received. It is in reply to the instruction of this department of the 12th of April, in which the opinion was expressed that that complaint was well-founded, for the reasons assigned. You were, however, directed to furnish such further information upon the subject as might be within your reach or which might modify and confirm that opinion. Your researches for this purpose do not appear to have been successful. This may, in part at least, be imputed to the destruction by fire of the records of the court at Port au Prince, of which you speak. A further examination of the subject, however, in connection with the papers now here, has tended to strengthen the views expressed in the instruction above adverted to; and to lead to the conviction that the result of the proceedings against the claimant was such a flagrant denial of justice as to warrant and require that this government should demand amends in his behalf. The supposed difficulty which you seem to apprehend in managing the case may be appreciated from the lapse of time since it originated, and from the opinion expressed by Mr. Secretary Seward in his instruction to Mr. Whidden, your predecessor of the 30th November, 1863: that as Pelletier was convicted in the regular course of law, it was not deemed expedient to interfere in his behalf. That decision may have been, and probably was, a correct one at the time and under the circumstances in which it was pronounced. The facts, however, which have since come to the knowledge of the department are believed to justify the different course which you are expected to take.

Mr. Seward seems to have had doubts as to the real nationality of Pelletier. He was acknowledged to have been a native of France, and unless he had been regularly recognized here he had no right to our intervention in his behalf. His certificate of naturalization is represented in a protest of his of the 21st of June, 1861, to be dated the 2d of November, 1852.

It purports to be given at length on page 85 of Executive Document No. 260 of the second session of the Fortieth Congress, and there bears date the 6th of October, 1862. As Pelletier was in Hayti at the last date, the variations referred to in regard to the time of his naturalization seemed to require explanation. Consequently, on the 17th of July last, a letter was addressed to the clerk of the proper court at New York asking for an attested copy of Pelletier's certificate of naturalization. This request was promptly complied with. It appears that the real date was the 6th of October, 1852.

The undisputed facts in the case are believed to be as follows:

In August, 1860, Pelletier bought at auction at Key West the bark William, a condemned slaver. It is not unlikely that the previous employment of this vessel may have led to the suspicion that it was to be continued by her new owner. He took the bark to Mobile and transferred the title to her to E. Dulauny, of the firm of Dulauny, Rice & Co., of New Orleans, of which he was a partner. Pelletier loaded the vessel with lumber and sailed for Carthagena, Colombia, where he arrived in November, 1860. When he reached there he found a revolution in progress, which prevented him from selling more than a small part of the cargo. After staying about two weeks at Carthagena, he cleared for Rio Hacha, in the same country, taking as passengers one Binar, a colored man and a political refugee, and Mr. Juan Cortez, his wife, child, and servant. Cortez had on board a quantity of merchandise as freight which he represented to be his own property. In consequence of the prevalence of strong northeasterly winds, the vessel got so much out of its course for Rio Hacha that Cortez became so alarmed on account of the delicate state of his wife's health that he insisted upon the vessel's making for the first accessible port in order that he, his family, and effects, might be landed. The vessel consequently put into the Island of Grand Cayman, on the 17th of December, 1860. Pelletier went at once with Mr. Cortez to Mr. Eden, the United States consular agent, and noted his protest. The next morning Cortez and his family landed. Pelletier then asked Mr. Eden, as his consignee, to settle with Cortez and to require him to take his goods from the vessel. The account of Pelletier against Cortez was furnished to Eden, but the former having no money, the latter proposed to him to place the merchandise on board of a schooner of his own, pay Pelletier's bills and take him and his family in the schooner to Jamaica. Some of Cortez' property, however, having been found to be damaged by sea-water, the whole was sold at auction. The bids not being satisfactory to Cortez, Pelletier, at his instance, bought the property for $1,000. Cortez made an affidavit before Eden that he was the sole owner of the goods, and the consular agent gave Pelletier a certificate of the whole transaction under his official seal.

On the 24th of December, the William cleared from Grand Cayman for Port-au-Prince, Hayti, where she arrived after the middle of January, 1861. Pelletier, being unwell, took lodgings on shore at a hotel. His consignees sold to the government two kegs of powder, all he had on board, and that part of the cargo which consisted of tobacco. Pelletier also sold to Figaro, a hotel-keeper, eight out of twelve revolvers on board the vessel. The lumber was sold to the son-in-law of President Geffrard. One night, when enough of it had been delivered to give access from the hold to the bulkhead which separated the storeroom, unruly members of the crew broke into the latter, stole liquor with which they became intoxicated, and threatened the lives of the mate and the custom-house officers on board. The latter, with Binar, the passenger, fled from the ship for safety. The mate shut himself up in his stateroom. In the morning the mate escaped, went on shore, and gave Pelletier information of the disorderly proceedings on board. Mr. Pelletier sought Mr. Lewis, the United States commercial agent, who applied to the authorities, and five of the sailors known to have been active in the stealing and mutiny were lodged in prison. In the evening Binar applied to Pelletier for money to pay his passage to the Spanish Main. This Pelletier refused to do for reasons assigned. The next morning Binar addressed a letter to Pelletier, stating that as he had ordered him off his vessel he must provide for his maintenance, and demanded $100, which, if refused, he threatened should cost Pelletier a larger sum. Pelletier showed the letter to Mr. Lewis and to two eminent lawyers, who advised him to pay no attention to it. Pelletier afterwards learned that on the same day Binar denounced him to the authorites as a slaver, and as making false reports as to his cargo, arms, and ammunition, almost all of which latter had been sold to the government itself. In the evening of that day a large force of armed men went on board of the bark, and broke open boxes and closets. They were under the command of Carrie, the military governor of the place, and were accompanied by J. J. Lilavois, the captain of the port, and the commander of police, and a force of about thirty armed men. They found three hunting-guns, half a pound of powder, some cartridges of small shot for bird-hunting, and eight pairs of handcuffs, which had been provided to enforce discipline among the crew. They, however, left the vessel without taking the articles with them. Carrie, with his posse, however, having returned to the vessel the same night, the mate, with those of the crew on board, went ashore to inform Pelletier, who at once entered his protest before Mr. Lewis. In the morning the latter addressed a letter to the minister of foreign affairs on the subject, stating that Pelletier had been obliged to abandon the vessel with a large amount of property, money, and bullion on board, and that the Government of Hayti would be held accountable. The minister replied that it was a proceeding of the police about which he knew nothing. Soon afterwards Mr. Lewis was invited to call upon the President, which he did, taking Pelletier with him. The President said he also was ignorant of the proceedings. He sent for General La Motte, minister of police, who came, and was reprimanded by the President. The latter then said to Pelletier that he hoped he would take his vessel back, which he at first declined, but at last, upon the advice of Mr. Lewis, he consented to do. La Motte, however, kept possession of the vessel for four days longer, when he was peremptorily ordered by the President to give her up. A sworn estimate of the damages on the vessel, while in the occupation of the police, was then made, which amounted to $6,000, but President Geffrard offered only $2,000, which Pelletier refused to accept. La Motte then obtained, as Pelletier says, by bribery of the sailors in prison, affidavits from them against the vessel. Similar bribes were offered to others of the crew, as is shown by affidavits on file. The Haytians represented that Pelletier had a hundred water-casks on board, but he says that he had only eight. The minister of foreign affairs addressed a note to Mr. Lewis, accompanied by the depositions of the sailors in prison and by that of Binar, and repeated his charges that Pelletier was a slaver, that his papers were not regular, and that he had handcuffs and water-casks on board for a slaver. Mr. Lewis replied denying the charges for reasons assigned. Pelletier then brought suit against Binar for libel, but he escaped by flight.

The William cleared for New Orleans the latter part of February, 1861. On getting to sea Pelletier found that she did not steer well for want of ballast. He consequently put into Grand Inagua to procure this. The United States consular agent there advised him to go to Man-of-War Bay for it. While taking it in there a gale arose which obliged him to slip his chains and go to sea, leaving his two best anchors. Having returned to Grand Inagua to restore to their homes laborers whom he had been obliged to take to sea when driven off, the pilot anchored the vessel too near the reef. In trying to get room to run out, the vessel grounded on the reef, and remained there pounding for eighteen hours, when at last she was cleared at a high tide. The false keel was, however, lost, and the fastenings of the rudder were broken. Pelletier then tried to reach a port on the Spanish part of St. Domingo, where he might make necessary repairs. When he arrived off the northern coast of that island he supposed he was near Puerta Plata. He then raised a small French flag as a signal for a pilot, but none having appeared, he entered a port where he was alarmed to find the Haytian flag was flying. He consequently determined to feign that his vessel was a French vessel named the Guillaume. After anchoring, a boat came off with the captain of the port, who said that they were at Fort Liberty, Hayti. Pelletier reported his vessel as the French bark Guillaume bound from Havana to Havre, in distress, and added that he wished for a blacksmith to restore the fastenings of his rudder. He then had a note written to General Gourgue, commanding the place, stating that he was aware the place was not open to commerce, and asking leave to employ a blacksmith and to fill four casks with water, which was granted. The next day General Gourgue visited the vessel and said to Pelletier that if he wished to visit the French consul at Cape Haytien he might have a seat in his carriage with his son, who was going thither that evening. Pelletier declined the offer, owing to the disabled condition of his vessel. Gourgue then said that he might at least write to the consul. Pelletier then directed his clerk to write to the consul, stating that he would sail the next day, and call on him personally. The clerk did as ordered. In the night of the third day after the arrival of the William at Fort Liberty, Mirada, a sailor whom Pelletier had shipped at Port-au-Prince, and whom he had flogged at Grand Inagua for misconduct, stole one of the boats and escaped to the shore. There he made a deposition against Pelletier for falsifying his nationality. An attempt was then made to get to sea with the vessel. This, however, was defeated by her grounding on a reef after she had proceeded a short distance. In this position she was seized by the authorities and taken back. He then met Mr. Menau, the French consul at Cape Haytien, who was indignant at his assuming French nationality, and who having turned him over to the Haytian authorities, he was at once lodged in jail. He then applied for protection to Mr. G. E. Hubbard, the commercial agent of the United States at Cape Haytien, who refused it, assuming Pelletier to be criminal, and even charging him with piracy.

The authorities next examined Pelletier and his crew. On the conclusion of his examination he wrote a protest against the seizure of his vessel and against the treatment to which he and his crew had been subjected. In the course of several weeks they were taken to Cape Haytien and imprisoned there. After a week's detention they were taken to Port-au-Prince and imprisoned there. They were first tried by a court-martial, of which General Carrie was president. The examination, however, related solely to occurrences at Fort Liberty. Pelletier made a protest against these proceedings also. The examination was resumed about a week afterwards, but Pelletier says that they failed to get any testimony against him from any of his crew.

Next in order the case was referred to a commission of five, composed of judges, senators, and lawyers, of whom Dauphin, president of the court of cassation, was one. The commission is said to have decided that as Pelletier was charged with being a slaver under a foreign flag, he was not amenable to the laws of Hayti, as he had not committed or attempted to commit any offense there against those laws.

Pelletier was, however, still kept in prison, but in August, 1861, he was taken thence to be examined in regard to the Bates affair. It seems that a person named Caño, a resident of Carthegena, claimed to be the real owner of the property which was intrusted to Cortes, who was his clerk. All the papers relating to Pelletier's transactions with Cortes were seized at Fort Liberty, and were in a package sealed with the seals of General Gourgue and the French vice-consul, Menau. The attorney of Pelletier found the package in the custody of Dubois, the minister of justice, who refused to surrender it. Mr. Lewis, the United States commercial agent, wrote to the minister for foreign affairs that the package contained papers of vital importance to Pelletier, and demanded that the package should not pass from the hands of the minister of justice or be opened unless in Pelletier's presence or in that of some authorized agent of his. The minister answered that the request would be complied with. It was ascertained next day, however, that the package had been opened, as some of the papers had been seen in the hands of Caño, the accuser of Pelletier. Pelletier was informed that the papers had been sent to the government attorney, who wanted them to make out his case. The trial began the next day. The jury was drawn, but Pelletier, by the advice of his counsel, waived his right to choose six of them, as the jurisdiction of the court was denied. The judge held that the plea to the jurisdiction was a good one. Appeal was taken to the court above, which decided in favor of the jurisdiction. Pelletier was ordered to be tried again, and the judges who had decided to release him were sent to jail. Three witnesses, whom Pelletier had named as necessary for his defense—the pilot whom he had taken at Carthagena, Labos, one of the five sailors whom he had caused to be imprisoned, and a boy whom he had left at Port-au-Prince—were seized without any charge and imprisoned, so that Pelletier might not have their testimony on the trial. Pelletier then stated that he should not attempt a defense, and ordered his counsel to withdraw. The judge said that if he did not wish to be defended he must suffer the consequences. Mr. Laveaux, one of Pelletier's counsel, was sent to prison for referring to the extraordinary means which had been employed to obtain a conviction and to the abstraction of papers. Miranda was produced as a witness for the government, and Mr. Linstant, another of Pelletier's counsel, having sought to show his incompetency from his having been a convict and a galley slave at Toulon, in France, was forbidden by the judge to make any such inquiry, and was threatened with imprisonment if he did so. Thereupon Linstant withdrew. The jury then brought in a verdict convicting Pelletier of piracy, and he was sentenced to death. He was also ordered to pay a fine of $1,000 to Caño and $3,000 to Cortes, and the bark William and all the property on board of her were confiscated for the benefit of the government. The judgment was appealed from, and the court above decided that the sentence of death should be changed to five years' imprisonment. Some time afterwards Pelletier was transferred to a prison at Cape Haytien. There he remained for a period, until, becoming sick, he was carried to a hospital, where he staid until he effected his escape, on the 11th of November, 1863.

While it is natural that a community of African extraction, whose near ancestors were slaves, should have an antipathy to slavery, that feeling should not be so indulged as to lead to the persecution of a foreigner upon a baseless charge of being a slaver and a pirate. It is manifest that the authorities at Port-au-Prince, in listening and giving credence to the statements of the sailors whom Pelletier had caused to be imprisoned, and of Binar, whose application he had rejected, did not take into due considerations the relations between those witnesses and the master of the bark William. They had grudges against Pelletier, which undoubtedly they were eager to indulge, and they testified accordingly. It is evident, however, from the examination of the vessel, which was made by the authorities, that there were no such indicia of guilt as afforded even probable cause for proceeding against her or her master. This led to her ultimate release, contrary, however, to the wishes of the chief of police, and others, who appear to have been actuated by a spirit of savage vindictiveness, sharpened perhaps by the prospect of a gratification of their avarice by the condemnation of the property. The voyages of Pelletier from Mobile to Carthagena, thence towards Rio Hacha to Grand Cayman and Port-au-Prince, were unfortunate, but this result cannot properly be imputed to a want of prudence, and can only be ascribed to causes beyond human control. The voyage from Port-au-Prince to Grand Inagua was of the same character, as it resulted in the stranding of his vessel on the reef at the latter place, the loss of her false keel, and the disabling of her rudder. These accidents made her condition helpless without repairs. It cannot be believed that after his experience in Port-au-Prince he would, of his own accord, have gone into a Haytien port for such a purpose. He neared Fort Liberty, therefore, supposing that he was entering a port of the Dominican Republic. It was imprudent, and to be regretted, that he should have hoisted the French flag as a signal for a pilot, and his effort to induce belief that his vessel was French cannot be excused. Undoubtedly, however, it was a mere stratagem to relieve himself from the snare into which he had fallen. His vessel was in distress, a condition which ought to have commanded sympathy and secured relief, even from enemies. His distrust, however, led him to decide differently. The elation of the authorities at Fort Liberty, when the information in regard to Pelletier had been received from the deserter Miranda, and of those at Cape Haytien and Port-au-Prince, at again having him in their power, is not surprising, especially after his attempt to deceive them as to the nationality of his vessel. Their proceedings in regard to him were thenceforward characterized by a savage brutality, as if intent upon revenge for an imaginary offense, rather than by that spirit of justice and impartiality which is expected from the authorities of a foreign country towards a stranger accidentally in their limits. It is apparent that Pelletier is a man of spirit as well as intelligence, and that he was actuated by so intense a consciousness of innocence of the charges against him that he was led to commit the technical mistake of refusing to avail himself of the privilege of choosing six members of the jury, or, indeed, of defending himself at all, though this course seems to have been pursuant to the advice of his counsel. In an ordinary case this would be decisive against making the question an international one. This, however, is by no means a case of that character, and the executive or judicial authorities of any government, which should pursue the course in regard to a foreigner taken by those of Hayti in regard to Captain Pelletier, must expect to do this at the peril of a demand for reparation.

The charge of piracy against Pelletier may be said to have been so absurd on its face that it is unaccountable how it could have been made or entertained. In your dispatch No. 64, you correctly define that offense as being, under the public law, robbery on the high seas. Sometimes, however, by special municipal law or by treaties, other offenses, the slave-trade for instance, are declared to be piracy, and punishment is provided for those convicted. Pelletier was charged with robbing Caño of his goods on the high seas. Of Caño's ownership of the merchandise placed on board the William at Carthagena, Pelletier was ignorant until he was accused at Port-au-Prince by Caño with stealing it. All the papers relating to Pelletier's business with Cortes were seized by the authorities at Fort Liberty, and were in possession of those at Port-au-Prince at the time of Pelletier's trial. These papers would undoubtedly have fully exculpated Pelletier, but those who had them would not allow them to be used in his defense.

It appears from the minutes of the court at Port-au-Prince, as they are printed on page 92 of the Congressional document before referred to, that the jury convicted Pelletier as principal in piracy in fraudulently taking property in open sea and at the Grand Cayman to the injury of Messrs. Caño and Juan Cotis (or Cates) by force of arms, accompanied by violence and with threats of assassination, and with attempts at slave-trading and with piracy on the coasts of Hayti. Perhaps the annals of few courts could furnish an example of a more oppressive and baseless conviction.

Pelletier acknowledges that a part of the original plan of his voyage was to obtain a cargo of guano at Nevassa for New Orleans, and that to this end he had inquired, when he was first at Port-au-Prince, whether laborers for that purpose could there be obtained. The affidavits of the witnesses against Pelletier do not appear to have been communicated to this Department. It is represented, however, that they charge him with the intention to kidnap Haytiens, and as his inquiry as to the practicability of obtaining laborers there probably also in some way became known to the authorities, the latter may have assumed that the wish to hire laborers was used as a screen to kidnap them.

The whole of the proceedings against Pelletier seem to have been characterized by a malignant spirit of cruelty and oppression disgraceful to all concerned in them. It is hoped that the present Haytien authorities will at once dispassionately review those proceedings. If this should be done they certainly will not persist in claiming that they do any credit to the justice and fair dealing of their country. This government has no desire to disturb its friendly relations with that of Hayti. There is a considerable commerce between the two countries which is advantageous to both, and which it is hoped and believed may be much increased. Self-respect, however, will not longer allow us to acquiesce in the course which that government thought proper to take in regard to Captain Pelletier. It is hoped that it will show a disposition to indemnify him for his losses and sufferings. Perhaps the subject may more properly be informally and orally mentioned to the minister for foreign affairs in the first instance. Instructions in regard to your future proceedings will be given when the Department shall have been informed as to the manner in which the overture may have been received.

I am, &c.,

WM. M. EVARTS.

No. 5.

Mr. Langston to Mr. Evarts.

No. 130.] LEGATION OF THE UNITED STATES,
Port-au-Prince, Hayti, February 28, 1879. (Received March 20.)

SIR: Referring to your dispatch numbered 50, having reference to the reclamation of Antonio Pelletier, I have the honor to state that on the 25th instant, in a protracted interview upon this case, I brought the facts pertaining thereto to the attention of the honorable secretary of state for foreign affairs of the Haytian Government; and I stated that the proceedings against Pelletier were in such flagrant violation of justice as to warrant and require that his government demand amends in his behalf.

The honorable secretary expressed his opinion that it was very strange that such demand had not been made long ago, that some nineteen years had passed since the facts of the case transpired; and yet, upon a word or two of explanation from me with regard to this particular point, he expressed clearly and positively the willingness of his government to review the whole case, and reach, if possible, a good understanding with respect to it. I informed him of my purpose to report the results of our interview to my government, and stated that upon receipt of additional instructions which I hoped to receive from the Department at an early day, I would present the case in more formal manner for the consideration of his government.

I beg to add that the secretary heard me most attentively, with the deepest interest; and I am persuaded that a firm and earnest presentation and management of his case will result in that measure of justice from the Haytian Government which is due Captain Pelletier.

I am, sir, your obedient servant,

JOHN MERCER LANGSTON.

No. 6.

Mr. Evarts to Mr. Langston.

No. 61.] DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, March 24, 1879.

SIR: Your dispatch No. 130, of the 28th ultimo, has been received. You therein report the oral and informal presentation of the claim of Antonio Pelletier to the Haytian foreign secretary, in obedience to the instructions contained in my dispatch No. 50.

In view of the manner in which your informal preliminary presentation of Captain Pelletier's case has been received by the Haytian minister for foreign affairs, you will proceed to make the official communication contemplated in my previous instruction, and will press the claim with all the energy and address at your command. The assurances given by the minister of the willingness of the Government of Hayti to review the whole case, and reach, if possible, a good understanding, with respect to it, is encouraging, inasmuch as this Department is convinced that upon a dispassionate reopening of the matter the great wrong done to Pelletier will be at once recognized. Indeed, any other conclusion would be deeply to be deplored.

I am, &c., WM. M. EVARTS.

No. 7.

Mr. Langston to Mr. Evarts.

No. 155.] LEGATION OF THE UNITED STATES,
Port-au-Prince, Hayti, May 1, 1879. (Received May 15.)

SIR: I have the honor to advise you that I have presented, formally, to the Haytian Government, in a dispatch, a copy of which is herewith inclosed, dated April 21 last, the claim of Captain Pelletier; and I beg to assure you that no effort on my part shall be spared to bring this case to a speedy and just settlement. And yet I am compelled, in view of the hesitating, tardy, and unsatisfactory manner of doing business by the authorities of the Haytian Government, to state that there is no telling or divining when this case will be settled. The appeal to facts, to law, to considerations of justice, to duty, to national obligation, or international usage, makes the smallest impression, seemingly, as far as hasting the adjustment and payment of claims and reclamations against the government is concerned.

And in order to the early and proper settlement of this particular claim, we may have to resort to something more potent than such appeal; and yet, it is to be hoped that this may not be the case.

The honorable secretary of state of foreign affairs has not yet made answer to my dispatch on this subject; so soon as he does, I will advise you as to the position which he takes.

Your most humble servant,

JOHN MERCER LANGSTON.

[Inclosure in dispatch 155.]

No. 49.] LEGATION OF THE UNITED STATES.
Port-au-Prince, Hayti, April 21, 1879.

SIR: Referring to the oral and informal statement made by me to you on the 25th of February last, with regard to the case of Capt. Antonio Pelletier, I have the honor to bring the case now formally and fully to your attention, in obedience to the instructions of my government, and to ask its due consideration and adjustment.

The facts of the case are as follows: Antonio Pelletier, a citizen of the United States of America, in August, 1860, purchased the bark William; and after taking her to Mobile, and transferring her to Mr. E. Delanny, of the firm of Delanny, Rice & Co., of New Orleans, of which he was a partner, he loaded the vessel with lumber and sailed for Carthagena, Colombia, where he arrived in November, 1860. By reason of a revolution which was in progress there when he arrived, he was unable to sell more than a small part of his cargo at this place. And after staying at Carthagena about two weeks, he cleared for Rio Hacha, in the same country, taking as passengers one Binar, a colored man and a political refugee, and Juan Cortes, his wife, child, and servant. Cortes had on board the vessel a quantity of merchandise as freight, which he represented as being his own property. In consequence of the prevalence of strong northeasterly winds, the vessel was carried so far out of its course for Rio Hacha, that Cortes became so alarmed on account of the delicate condition of his wife's health that he insisted upon the vessel's making for the first accessible port in order that he, his family, and effects might be landed.

The vessel consequently put into the island of Grand Cayman, on the 17th of December, 1860. Captain Pelletier went at once with Cortes to Mr. Eden, the United States consular agent, and noted his protest. The following morning Cortes and his family landed. Captain Pelletier then requested Mr. Eden, his consignee, to settle with Cortes, and require him to take his goods from the vessel.

The account of Pelletier against Cortes was furnished to Mr. Eden, but the former having no money, the latter proposed to him to place the merchandise on board of a schooner of his own, pay Pelletier's bills, and take him and his family in the schooner to Jamaica. Some of Cortes' property, however, having been found to be damaged by seawater, the whole was sold at auction. The bids not being satisfactory to Cortes, Pelletier, at his instance, bought the property for $1,000. Cortes made an affidavit before Eden that he was the sole owner of the goods, and the consular agent gave Pelletier a certifiate of the whole transaction under his official seal.

On the 24th of December the William cleared from Grand Cayman for Port-au-Prince, Hayti, where she arrived after the middle of January, 1861. Pelletier, being unwell, took lodgings on shore at a hotel. His consignees sold to the government two kegs of powder, all he had on board, and that part of the cargo which consisted of tobacco. Pelletier also sold to Figaro, a hotel-keeper, eight out of twelve revolvers on board the vessel.

The lumber was sold to the son-in-law of President Gefpard. One night when enough of it had been delivered to give access from the hold to the bulkhead which separated the storeroom, unruly members of the crew broke into the latter, stole liquor with which they became intoxicated, and threatened the lives of the mate and the custom-house officer on board. The lattter with Bimar, the passenger, fled from the ship for safety. The mate shut himself up in his state-room. In the morning the mate escaped, went on shore and gave Pelletier information of the disorderly proceedings on board. Pelletier sought Mr. Lewis, the United States commercial agent, who applied to the authorities, and five of the sailors, known to have been active in the stealing and mutiny were lodged in prison. In the evening Bimar applied to Pelletier for money to pay his passage to the Spanish Main. This Pelletier refused for reasons assigned. The next morning Bimar addressed a letter to Pelletier, stating that as he had ordered him off his vessel, he must provide for his maintenance, and demanded one hundred dollars, which if he refused, he threatened should cost Pelletier a large sum. Pelletier showed the letter to Mr. Lewis, and to two eminent lawyers, who advised him to pay no attention to it.

Pelletier afterwards learned that, on the same day, Bimar denounced him to the authorities as a slaver, and as making false reports as to his cargo, arms, and amunition, almost all of which had been sold to the government itself. In the evening of that day a large force of armed men went on board the barque and broke open boxes and closets. They were under the command of Carrié, the military governor of the place, and were accompanied by J. J. Lilavois, the captain of the port, and the commander of the police, and a force of about thirty armed men. They found three hunting guns, half a pound of powder, some cartridges of small shot for bird hunting, and eight pairs of hand-cuffs, which had been provided to enforce discipline among the crew. They, however, left the vessel without taking the articles with them. Carrié, with his posse, however, having returned to the vessel the same night, the mate, with those of the crew on board, went ashore and informed Pelletier, who at once entered his protest before Mr. Lewis.

In the morning the latter addressed a letter to the minister of foreign affairs on the subject, stating that Pelletier had been obliged to abandon the vessel with a large amount of property, money, and bullion on board, and that the Government of Hayti would be held responsible for the same.

The minister replied that it was a proceeding of the police about which he knew nothing. Soon afterwards Mr. Lewis was invited to call on the President, which he did, taking Pelletier with him. The President said that he was ignorant of the proceedings. He sent for General La Motte, minister of police, who came and was reprimanded by the president. The latter then said to Pelletier that he hoped he would take his vessel back, which he at first declined, but at last, upon the advice of Mr. Lewis, consented to do so. La Motte, however, kept possession of the vessel for four days longer, when he was peremptorily ordered by the President to give her up. A sworn estimate of the damages on the vessel while in the occupation of the police was then made which amounted to $6,000, but President Gefpard offered only $2,000, which Pelletier refused to accept. La Motte then obtained, as Pelletier says, by bribery of the sailors in prison, affidavits from them against the vessel. Similar bribes were offered others of the crew. It was represented that Pelletier had on board a hundred water casks, while in fact he had only eight.

The minister for foreign affairs addressed a note to Mr. Lewis, accompanied by the depositions of the sailors in prison, and by that of Bimar, and repeated his charges that Pelletier was a slaver, that his papers were not regular, and that he had handcuffs and water-casks on board for a slaver. Mr. Lewis replied denying the charges for reasons assigned.

Pelletier then brought suit against Bimar for libel, but he escaped by flight.

The William cleared for New Orleans during the latter part of February, 1861. On getting to sea Pelletier found that he did not steer well for want of ballast. He consequently put into Grand Inagua to procure this. The United States consular agent there advised him to go to Man-of War Bay for it. While taking it in there a gale arose, which obliged him to slip his chains and go to sea, leaving his two best anchors.

Having returned to Grand Inagua to restore to their homes laborers whom he had been obliged to take to sea when driven off, the pilot anchored the vessel too near the reef. On trying to get room to run out the vessel grounded on the reef, and remained there pounding for eighteen hours, when at last she was carried off at high tide. The false keel was, however, lost, and the fastenings of the rudder were broken. Pelletier then tried to reach a port on the Spanish part of St. Domingo, where he might make necessary repairs. When he arrived off the northern coast of that island he supposed he was near Puerto Plata. He then raised a small French flag as a signal for a pilot, but none having appeared he entered a port where he was alarmed to find that the Haytien flag was flying. He consequently determined to feign that his vessel was a French vessel named the Guillaume. After anchoring a boat came off with the captain of the port, who said that they were at Fort Liberty, Hayti. Pelletier reported his vessel as the French barque Guillaume, bound from Havana to Havre, in distress, and added that he wished for a blacksmith to restore the fastenings of his rudder. He then had a note written to General Gourgue, commanding the place, stating that was aware that the port was not open to commerce, and asking leave to employ a blacksmith and to fill four casks with water, which was granted. The next day General Gourgue visited the vessel, and said to Pelletier that if he wished to visit the French consul at Cape Haytien he might have a seat in his carriage with his son, who was going thither that evening. Pelletier declined the offer, owing to the disabled condition of his vessel. Gourgue then said he might at least write to the Consul. Pelletier then directed his clerk to write to the consul, stating that he would sail the next day, and would call on him personally. The clerk did as ordered. In the night of the third day after the arrival of the William at Fort Liberty, Miranda, a sailor whom Pelletier had shipped at Port-au-Prince, and whom he had flogged at Grand Inagua for misconduct, stole one of the boats and escaped to the shore. There he made a deposition against Pelletier for falsifying his nationality. An attempt was then made to get to sea with the vessel. This, however, was defeated by her grounding on a reef after she had proceeded a short distance. In this position she was seized by the authorities and taken back. Captain Pelletier then met Mr. Menan, the French consul, at Cape Haytien, who was indignant at his assuming French nationality, and who, having turned him over to the Haytien authorities, he was at once lodged in prison. He then applied for protection to Mr. G. E. Hubbard, the commercial agent of the United States at Cape Haytien, who refused it, assuming that Pelletier was a criminal. The authorities next examined Pelletier and his crew. On the conclusion of his examination he wrote a protest against the seizure of his vessel and the treatment to which he and his crew had been subjected. In the course of several weeks they were taken to Cape Haytien and imprisoned there. After a few weeks' detention they were taken to Port-au-Prince and imprisoned there. They were first tried by a court-martial, of which General Carrié was president. The examination, however, related solely to occurrences at Fort Liberty. Pelletier made a protest against these proceedings also. The examination was resumed about a week afterwards, but no testimony was secured from any one of his crew against Pelletier.

Next in order the case was referred to a commission of five, composed of judges, senators, and lawyers, of whom Dauphin, president of the court of cassation, was one. The commission is said to have decided that, as Pelletier was charged with being a slaver under a foreign flag, he was not amenable to the laws of Hayti, as he had not committed or attempted to commit any offense there against those laws.

Pelletier was, however, still kept in prison, but in August, 1861, he was taken thence to be examined in regard to the Cortes affair. It seems that a person named Caño, resident of Carthagena, claimed to be the real owner of the property which was entrusted to Cortes, who was his clerk. All the papers relating to Pelletier's transactions with Cortes were seized at Fort Liberty, and were in a package sealed with the seals of General Gourgue and the French vice-consul, Menan. The attorney of Pelletier found the package in the custody of Dubois, the minister of justice, who refused to surrender it. Mr. Lewis, the United States commercial agent, wrote to the minister of foreign affairs that the package contained papers of vital importance to Pelletier, and demanded that the package should not pass from the hands of the minister of justice, or be opened, unless in Pelletier's presence, or in that of some authorized representative of his. The minister answered that the request would be complied with. It was ascertained next day, however, that the package had been opened, as some of the papers had been seen in ths hands of Caño, the accuser of Pelletier. Pellitier was informed that the papers had been sent to the government attorney, who wanted them to make out his case. The third trial began the next day. The jury was drawn, but Pelletier, by advice of his counsel, waived his right to choose six of them, as the jurisdiction of the court was denied. The judge held that the plea to the jurisdiction was a good one. Appeal was taken to the court above, which decided in favor of the jurisdiction. Pelletier was ordered to be tried again, and the judges who had decided to release him were sent to jail.

Three witnesses whom Pelletier had named as necessary for his defense—the pilot whom he had employed at Carthagena; Lobos, one of the five sailors whom he had caused to be imprisoned; and a boy whom he had left at Port-au-Prince—were seized without any charge and imprisoned, so that Pelletier might not have their testimony on the trial. Pelletier then stated that he should not attempt a defense, and urged his counsel to withdraw. The judge said that if he did not wish to be defended he must suffer the consequences. Mr. Laneau, one of Pelletier's counsel, was sent to prison for referring to the extraordinary means which had been employed to obtain a conviction, and to the abstraction of papers. Miranda was produced as a witness for the government, and Mr. Linstant, another of Pelletier's counsel, having sought to show his incompetency from his having been a convict and galley-slave at Toulon in France, was forbidden by the judge to make any such inquiry, and was threatened with imprisonment if he did so. Thereupon M. Linstant withdrew. The jury then brought in a verdict convicting Pelletier of piracy, and he was sentenced to death. He was also ordered to pay a fine of $1,000 to Caño, and $3,000 to Cortes and the bark William, and all the property on board of her was confiscated to the benefit of the government.

The judgment was appealed from, and the court above decided that the sentence of death should be changed to five years' imprisonment. Some time afterwards, Pelletier was transferred to a prison at Cape Haytien. There he remained for a period until becoming sick he was carried to a hospital at Port-au-Prince, I think, where he staid until he affected his escape on the 11th day of November, 1863. The facts presented here show such flagrant denial of justice to Captain Pelletier, as to warrant and require that his government should demand amends in his behalf.

In asking that this case be reviewed by your government with reference to making suitable reparation to Captain Pelletier for the great wrongs and damages, in person and property, which he was made to suffer and sustain, under the circumstances stated, my government would remind you that his voyage from Mobile to Carthagena, thence towards Rio Hacha, to Grand Cayman and Port-au-Prince, and from the last named place to Grand Inagua, were unfortunate, and the results connected therewith cannot properly be imputed to a want of prudence, but must be ascribed to causes beyond human control. The accidents which befell his vessel at Inagua, causing the loss of her false keel and disabling her rudder, put her in a helpless condition without repairs. And it cannot be believed that after his experience at Port-au-Prince, he would, of his own accord, have gone into a Haytien port for such purpose. He neared Fort Liberty, therefore, supposing that he was entering a port of the Dominican Republic. It was imprudent and to be regretted that he should have hoisted the French flag as a signal for a pilot, and his effort to induce the belief that his vessel was French, cannot be excused. Undoubtedly, however, it was a mere stratagem to relieve himself from the snare into which he had fallen. His vessel was in distress, a condition which ought to have commanded sympathy and secured relief, even from enemies. His distrust, however, led him to decide differently. The elation of the authorities at Fort Liberty when the information in regard to Pelletier had been received from the deserter Miranda, and in those at Cape Haytien and Port-au-Prince at again having him in their power, it is not surprising, especially after attempts to deceive them as to the nationality of his vessel. Their proceedings in regard to him were thenceforward characterized by a savage brutality, as if intent upon revenge for an imaginary wrong, rather than by that spirit of justice and impartiality which is expected from the authorities of a foreign country toward a stranger accidentally in their limits.

Captain Pelletier is a man of spirit and intelligence, and he was actuated by so intense a consciousness of innocence of the charges against him, that he was led to commit the technical mistake of refusing to avail himself of the privilege of choosing six members of the jury, or indeed of defending himself at all, though this course seems to have been pursuant to the advice of his counsel. In an ordinary case, this would be decisive against making the subject an international one. This is by no means a case of that character, and the executive or judicial authorities of any government which should pursue the course in regard to a foreigner taken by those of Hayti in regard to Captain Pelletier must expect to do this at the point of a demand for reparation.

The charge of piracy against Pelletier may be said to have been so absurd on its face that it is unaccountable how it could have been made, or entertained. He was charged with robbing Caño of his goods on the high seas. But of Caño's ownership of the merchandise placed on board the William, at Carthagena, Pelletier was ignorant until he was accused at Port-au-Prince by Caño with stealing it. All the papers relating to Pelletier's business with Cortes were seized by the authorities at Fort Liberty, and were in possession of those at Port-au-Prince at the time of Pelletier's trial. These papers would undoubtedly have fully exculpated Pelletier, but those who had them would not allow them to be used in his defense. It appears from the printed minutes of the court at Port-au-Prince that the jury convicted Pelletier as principal in piracy, in fraudulently taking property in open sea and at the Grand Cayman, to the injury of Messrs. Caño and Juan Cortes, by force of arms, accompanied with violence and with threats of assassination; and with attempts at slave-trading, and with piracy on the coasts of Hayti. Perhaps the annals of few courts could furnish an example of a more oppressive and baseless conviction. It is representtd that the affidavits of the witnesses against Pelletier charge him with the intention to kidnap Haytiens. With regard to this matter, he admits that a part of the original plan of his voyage was to obtain a cargo of guano at Navassa for New Orleans, and to this end he had inquired, when he was first at Port-au-Prince, whether laborers for that purpose could there be obtained; and as his inquiry as to the practicability of obtaining laborers there probably also in some way became known to the authorities, the latter may have assumed that the wish to hire laborers was used as a screen to kidnap them.

But the entire proceedings against Captain Pelletier seem to have been characterized by a malignant spirit of cruelty and oppression, reprehensible in the highest sense. It is hoped that the present authorities of the Haytian Government will at once dispassionately review these proceedings. If this should be done, they certainly will not persist in claiming that they do any credit to the justice and fair dealing of their country. And it is hoped that such authorities will show a ready disposition to indemnify Captain Pelletier in a reasonable and generous manner for his losses and sufferings.

In the judgment of my government, this case is a grave and serious one; and every consideration of justice and fair dealing, as well as the good understanding between the two states interested in its adjustment, make it necessary and proper that it be considered and settled at the earliest practicable period.

I embrace this occasion, Mr. Minister, to present to you my distinguished considerations.

Your most obedient servant,

JOHN MERCER LANGSTON.

No. 8.

Mr. Langston to Mr. Evarts.

No. 213.] LEGATION OF THE UNITED STATES,
Port-au-Prince, Hayti, December 26, 1879.

SIR: I have the honor to inclose herewith, copy of a dispatch, as per its date, addressed by this legation to the Haytian Government with regard to the reclamation of Mr. Antonio Pelletier, together with a copy of the reply of said government thereto, with translation.

I am, sir, your obedient servant,

JOHN MERCER LANGSTON.

[Inclosure No. 1.]

No. 65.] LEGATION OF THE UNITED STATES,
Port-au-Prince, Hayti, November 19, 1879.

Hon. L. T. LAFONTANT,
Acting Secretary of State of Foreign Affairs, Port-au-Prince, Hayti:

SIR: Heretofore, on the 21st day of April last, I had the honor to address a dispatch to the Haytian Government with regard to the reclamation of Antonio Pelletier, an American citizen. On the 5th day of May following, your predecessor, Hon. L. Ethéart, replied to my communication, stating that it had been received, and referred to the secretary of state of justice for certain information, and promising that as soon as such information had been received he would give me the conclusion of his government as regards such reclamation. I have not heard from the government on this subject since I received the despatch from Mr. Ethéart, and now, fearing that my dispatch of the 21st of April last, in which the claim of Mr. Pelletier is fully set forth, and its prompt settlement demanded, may have been destroyed by the fire occurring in this city on the 3d of July, I have the honor to transmit, herewith inclosed, a copy of that dispatch, and to ask most respectfully its early consideration, and the conclusion of your government with respect to such claim.

Be pleased, Mr. Minister, to accept the assurance of my very high consideration.

Your obedient servant,

JOHN MERCER LANGSTON.

[Inclosure.]

No. 1. Copy of Mr. Langston's dispatch to Haytian Government, dated April 21, 1879,* already on file in the Department.

[Inclosure No. 2.—Translation.]

OFFICE OF THE SECRETARY OF STATE OF FOREIGN AFFAIRS,
Port-au-Prince, November 29, 1879.

Mr. MINISTER: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your letter on the 19th instant, transmitting to me a copy of a dispatch bearing date the 21st of April last, addressed to Mr. Liantand Ethéart, then secretary of state of foreign affairs, with regard to a reclamation of Mr. Antonio Pelletier, an American citizen.

I have submitted, Mr. Minister, this reclamation to the secretary of state of justice, and I shall wait to respond to your letter until he gives me all the information which Mr. J. M. Langston, minister resident of the United States at Port-au-Prince, concerns this question.

Be pleased, Mr. Minister, to accept the assurance of my highest consideration.

The secretary of state of foreign affairs, ad interim.

L. T. LAFONTANT.

No. 9.

Mr. Evarts to Mr. Langston.

No. 102.] DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, March 24, 1880.

SIR: Captain Pelletier, and those of his friends who are interested in the success of his claim against Hayti, are naturally impatient at the delay of that government to answer your representations upon the subject. You do not appear to have mentioned it since your dispatch of the 26th of December last, when the minister of foreign affairs informed you that he awaited information from the minister of justice before he could decide the case. So much time has elapsed since then that the information referred to must, it is presumed, have been furnished. You will, consequently, renew your application to the foreign office.

I am, sir,

WM. M. EVARTS.

---

* See inclosure to Mr. Langston's No. 155, of May 1, 1879.

No. 10.

Mr. Langston to Mr. Evarts.

No. 251.] LEGATION OF THE UNITED STATES,
Port-au-Prince, Hayti, April 20, 1880.

SIR: Referring to your No. 102, dated March 24, 1880, having reference to the claim of Captain Pelletier, I have the honor to advise you that, as far as this legation is concerned, such claim has been constantly pressed upon the attention of the Haytian authorities since its presentation, April 21, 1879. In interviews, as well as in correspondence, this has been the case, as the inclosed copies of dispatches passing between me and the honorable secretary of state will show.

And, first, I have the honor to bring to your attention the dispatch from the honorable secretary, dated January 29, 1880, a copy of which, with translations, is herewith inclosed, in which, referring to interviews had with me with regard thereto, he asks delay for the due consideration of the reclamations of Messrs. A. H. Lazare and Pelletier, and the claims of Mrs. Oaksmith, Mr. Horton, and Messrs. Kunhardt & Co.

Secondly, you will be pleased to find herewith inclosed copy of a dispact from the same source, with translation, dated March 19, 1880, in which the honorable secretary, after referring to an interview had with me on the subject, states that he understood me to propose arbitration as a proper method of reaching a prompt solution of the questions connected with the claims mentioned, which he refused at once as to the claim of A. H. Lazare, esq., for the reason stated; and in his dispatch as to the other claims referred to, but promising to give successively the opinion of his government with regard thereto, as necessary information might be obtained, while, in the meantime, he asks the date of the naturalization, as an American citizen, of Captain Pelletier.

In answer to this dispatch, on the 20th day of March, I had the honor to address the honorable secretary, in two dispatches, copies of which are herewith inclosed, in the first of which I correct his misunderstanding as to my proposing to arbitrate all the claims, stating that I did propose, as directed by my government, such method of settlement in the case only of Mr. Lazare, while in my second dispatch I address myself directly to a consideration of the reclamation of Captain Pelletier, urging the fact that it had been referred to the minister of justice by Mr. Ethéart as early as May 5, 1879; that the same person, Mr. Archin, is at present filling the same office; and that the government must be so fully advised as to the facts and law in this case as one might reasonably suppose that it ought not to require any considerable further delay in reaching and making known its opinion as to its settlement. In concluding this dispatch I state, as requested, the date of the naturalization of Captain Pelletier, and urge again the prompt settlement of his claim.

It is in reply to this dispatch that the honorable secretary addressed me on the 6th instant, transmitting a dispatch, a copy of which, with translation, is herewith inclosed. In this dispatch the honorable secretary acknowledges the receipt of my dispatch, containing the information which he asked as to the naturalization of Captain Pelletier; states that I advised him that it is the judgment of my government that the reclamation of Captain Pelletier should be allowed; declares that whatever may be the firm intention of this government to make every effort to maintain the most cordial friendship in the relations of the two governments, the reclamation of Captain Pelletier cannot be allowed; and then proceeds to justify this position by referring to the facts connected with the accusation, the trial and condemnation of Captain Pelletier, alleging that he and the major part of his crew being American citizens, he did hoist the French flag; that thus he made himself, according to international law, a pirate, and that the Haytien Government showed itself indulgent towards him in not applying to him the rigorous laws of all the countries of the world which are denounced against pirates.

In view of the position taken with regard to this case by the Haytien Government, I await the further instructions of the Department.

I am, sir, your obedient servant,

JOHN MERCER LANGSTON.

[Inclosure No. 2.—Translation.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE OF FOREIGN AFFAIRS,
Port-au-Prince, January 29, 1880.

Mr. MINISTER: In consequence of the interviews which I have had the honor to have with you upon the subject of claims of American citizens, which you have submitted to the Haytien Government for the most part under the preceding administration, I have consulted the archives of my department, and I have found there the dispatches of your legation concerning the following matters, with regard to which you desire to obtain the decision of the present government of the republic.

The affair of Mr. A. H. Lazare; that of Mr. Pelletier; that of Mrs. Fanny Oaksmith; that of Mr. Edward Horton; that of Kunhardt & Co.

Having just obtained the control of this department, I have not as yet had time, Mr. Minister, to study variously these questions, and to ask with regard to the oldest all the information which they require and which is necessary. I hope you will be willing to accord me the delay necessary to be duly informed as to all these questions before communicating to you the opinion and decision of my government upon these claims.

Be pleased to accept, Mr. Minister, the assurance of my very high consideration.

The Secretary of State of Foreign Affairs.

CH. LAFORESTRIE.

[Inclosure No. 4.—Translation.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE OF FOREIGN AFFAIRS,
Port-au-Prince, March 19, 1880.

Mr. J. M. LANGSTON,
Minister Resident of the United States of America, Port-au-Prince:

Mr. MINISTER: In the interview which I had the honor to have with you on the 16th instant, with regard to claims which you have presented to the Haytian Government, you proposed to me to submit all these affairs to arbitration in order to reach a prompt solution. I replied, if my government accepted your proposition, which I would submit to its consideration, arbitration could not be had as to the questions which had been referred for direct examination to the Cabinet at Washington, for example, the claim of A. H. Lazare.

In fact our minister plenipotentiary at Washington had already taken steps with regard to these affairs with the Cabinet of the Union. My government ought then to await from Mr. S. Preston the reply which would be made us before undertaking with you, if there should be need, the discussion of these questions. It remains then to know if my government would accept arbitration of the following matters: That of Mr. Antonio Pelletier; that of Mrs. Fanny Oaksmith; that of Edward Horton.

I put aside for the moment the matter of Kunhardt & Co., which appears to be very simple, and with regard to which I will have the honor to write you very soon.

My government does not think, Mr. Minister, that these three first claims ought to be arbitrated. In fact, to decide to arbitrate these affairs would have it understood that we had already combatted these points, and that we had not been able to agree, but this is not the case.

I will make known to you then, successively, the opinion of the government upon these matters, which require, as I have already had the honor to advise you, information which I had not been able up to this time to obtain completely.

In the mean time I pray you, Mr. Minister, to be good enough to let me know the date of the naturalization, as an American citizen, of Mr. Antonio Pelletier, which my government believes to have been French.

Be pleased to accept, Mr. Minister, the assurance of my high consideration.

CH. LAFORESTRIE.

[Inclosure No. 5.]

No. 85.] LEGATION OF THE UNITED STATES,
Port-au-Prince, Hayti, March 20, 1880.

Hon. CHARLES LAFORESTRIE,
Secretary of State of Foreign Affairs, Port-au-Prince, Hayti:

SIR: In acknowledging receipt of your dispatch, dated the 19th instant, received by me late yesterday afternoon, I make haste to let you know how deep the regret is which I experienced in view of the misunderstanding under which you labor with regard to what transpired between us in our conversation of the 16th instant, when you state that you understood me to propose that the reclamation of Antonio Pelletier and the claims of Fanny Oaksmith, Edward Horton, and Messrs. Kunhardt & Co., be submitted for settlement to arbitration. I intended to propose no such thing; and I am at an utter loss how, from anything that I said, it could have been inferred at the present stage of investigation and consideration of such claims as between this legation and your department, that such proposition could have been understood or entertained by me. I did, however, and do now, as directed by my government, ask, with regard to the reclamation of Mr. A. H. Lazare, that this case be settled, in justice at once to the claimant and your government, in accordance with principles and usages equitable and fair, by arbitration.

With regard to the reclamation of Mr. Lazare, in reply to what you say, as touching any action with regard hereto by honorable Mr. S. Preston, the representative of your government at Washington, I beg to repeat, as heretofore stated to your predecessor, Mr. Lafontant, in a dispatch addressed to him December 1, 1879—

"That as early as March 12, 1879, after communicating with my government as to the course pursued by the Haytien Government with regard to this claim, I received instructions from my government by which I was advised that it was not disposed, as suggested, to have the controversy transferred from Port-au-Prince to our capital, and that it insists upon the claim being properly adjusted either by settlement or arbitration, unless the Haytien Government can produce some forcible reasons why it should not be allowed, which, thus far, it had failed to do. I was further directed to urge, in strong terms, the necessity of prompt agreement with regard to its settlement."

Up to this moment I have received no advices from my government with regard to any action taken by Mr. Preston, and no instructions other or different from those already suggested. Besides, Mr. Minister, this case of Mr. Lazare has been pending as between my legation and your department, under the administration of Messrs. Carrié, Ethéart, Lafontant, and yourself, to some extent, quite long enough, and it has been, as I have been informed by Mr. Ethéart, the subject of investigation and consideration by Hon. C. Archin, the minister of justice heretofore under the administration of President Canal, and who holds the same position under the present administration. It would seem, therefore, that your government ought to be able to present its conclusions with regard thereto, and it is difficult to conceive how any reasonable, serious objection can be offered to the equitable method of adjustment proposed in arbitration.

I have the honor to be, sir, your obedient servant,

JOHN MERCER LANGSTON.

[Inclosure No. 6.]

No. 86.] LEGATION OF THE UNITED STATES,
Port-au-Prince, Hayti, March 20, 1880.

Hon. CHARLES LAFORESTRIE,
Secretary of State of Foreign Affairs, Port-au-Prince, Hayti:

SIR: Referring to the reclamation of Antonio Pelletier, of which you make mention in your dispatch of yesterday, I have the honor to state that as to such reclamation I have already presented to your department a full, concise, and elaborate statement of facts which would seem to be entirely unanswerable. This statement was made and presented on the 21st day of April, 1879, addressed to your predecessor, Mr. Ethéart, and subsequently I transmitted, in connection with a dispatch addressed to your department, November 19, 1879, a full and exact copy of such statement, suggesting at the same time in my dispatch, with regard to this reclamation, that my government desired and expected the prompt settlement thereof. This reclamation has also been made, according to information had of Mr. Ethéart, the subject of consideration by the secretary of state of justice of your government, the same person acting under the former admimistration, and acting under the present in the same capacity, the Hon. C. Archin.

Mr. Etheart furnishes this information to this legation in a dispatch dated May 5, 1879, and states that as soon as the secretary of state of justice shall furnish him with certain information required, he will advise this legation as to the views of his government on the subject. But as yet the conclusions of your government as to this reclamation have not been received.

I have the honor, Mr. Minister, to state in reply to your inquiry as to the date of the naturalization of Antonio Pelletier, as an American citizen, that the certificate of his naturalization bears date October 6, 1852, at least eight years previous to the occurrence of the facts upon which his reclamation is predicated, and this date of the certificate of his naturalization is susceptible of exact and unquestioned proof, according to the records of the court issuing the same. With regard, then, to the citizenship of Pelletier there can be no question, and now, Mr. Minister, in the judgment of my government, as I have heretofore stated, this case is a grave and a serious one, and every consideration of justice and fair dealing, as well as the good understanding between the two governments interested in its settlement, make it necessary and proper that it be considered and settled at the earliest practicable period; and one would very naturally conclude that the authorities of your government are, by this time, so fully advised with regard to the facts and law of this case, that it cannot need any considerable time further to reach and make known its conclusion with respect to its settlement.

I am, sir, your obedient servant,

JOHN MERCER LANGSTON.

[Inclosure No. 8.—Translation.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE OF FOREIGN AFFAIRS,
Port-au-Prince, April 6, 1880.

Mr. J. M. LANGSTON,
Minister Resident of the United States of America at Port-au-Prince:

Mr. MINISTER: I had the honor to receive your letter of the 20th of March last, containing the information which I asked you to furnish me with regard to the date of the naturalization of Mr. Antonio Pelletier as an American citizen.

You advise me at the same time, Mr. Minister, that in the judgment of your government, the administration of Hayti ought to allow the reclamation of Mr. Pelletier, and that, in accordance with justice and equity.

Whatever may be, Mr. Minister, the firm intention of my government to make every effort to maintain the most cordial friendship in the relations of the two governments, the reclamation of Mr. Pelletier cannot be allowed.

Indeed, in the facts which caused the accusation, the trial, and the condemnation of Mr. Pelletier, there is the capital point which follows, and upon which my government places itself to repel, formally, this reclamation.

Although Mr. Pelletier was an American citizen, and the crew of his ship was mainly composed of citizens of the United States, he did nevertheless notoriously hoist the French flag.

According to international law, in covering himself with a foreign flag, he made himself a pirate.

Then, the Government of Hayti showed itself towards him full of indulgence, in not applying to him the rigorous laws which, in all countries of the world, strike down pirates.

My government loves to hope, Mr. Minister, that by reason of this grave consideration, the Government of the United States will abandon this reclamation ill-founded.

Be pleased to accept, Mr. Minister, the renewed assurances of my very high consideration.

CH. LAFORESTRIE.

No. 11.

Mr. Evarts to Mr. Langston.

No. 112.] DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, June 14, 1880.

SIR: Your dispatches numbered from 141 to 272, both inclusive, have been received.

Referring to your No. 251, of the 20th of April last, I have to inform you that it has excited both regret and surprise that the Haytian Government should have rejected the claim of Antonio Pelletier; for it had been hoped that that government would have embraced the opportunity, which the consideration of the claim presented, to show that, as a member of the family of nations, it was disposed and able to do justice in a case of signal, but groundless, oppression of a citizen of the United States.

The decision of that government was surprising, because it was the reverse of that which was expected both from the merits of the case and from the tenor of the previous information in the Department on the subject.

You ask for further instructions; I am unable to furnish any further argumentative presentation of the case, from the fact that, in his note to you of the 6th of April, the minister of foreign affairs gives no other reason for the decision of his government than that Pelletier committed an act of piracy, pursuant to public law, because, when his vessel, in distress, neared the coast of Hayti, she displayed the French flag,

The principles of public law give no support to this justification of the acts complained of.

You will therefore distinctly say to the Haytian Government that this government cannot accept this suggestion as an answer to the claim of this citizen of the United States, presented in good faith, and expected to be treated with decorous gravity by the Haytian Government.

You will say to that government, as well, that if it desires to make no further answer to the justice of this claim of Mr. Pelletier, you are instructed to propose to it a prompt and impartial arbitration on the matter, and in default of that arrangement to require its satisfaction.

I am, &c.,

WM. M. EVARTS.

No. 12.

Mr. Langston to Mr. Evarts.

No. 295.] LEGATION OF THE UNITED STATES,
Port-au-Prince, Hayti, July 24, 1880. (Received Aug. 14.)

SIR: In acknowledging the receipt of your dispatch No. 112, dated June 24th last, I have the honor to state that the instructions it contains have been carefully noted; and, on the 12th instant I addressed the honorable secretary of state of foreign affairs of the Haytian Government, a communication in accordance therewith, a copy of which is herewith inclosed and transmitted. In this communication I allude to the regret and surprise that the rejection of the claim of Captain Pelletier occasions to my government; and I claim that the merits of this case ustify no such decision; that the reason given for it, namely, that Captain Pelletier committed an act of piracy in displaying a French flag, as his vessel reached the coast of Hayti, is not well founded; that the Government of the United States cannot accept it; that this claim of one of its citizens, presented in good faith, is to be treated with decorous gravity; and, in conclusion, as instructed, I advise the honorable secretary that if the Haytian Government has nothing further to answer as to the justice of this claim, prompt and impartial arbitration thereof is proposed; and in default of such arrangement its satisfaction will be required.

As yet, I have not received reply to this communication.

I am, &c.,

JOHN MERCER LANGSTON.

[Inclosure in No. 295.]

Mr. Langston to Mr. Archin.

SIR: I have the honor, referring to dispatch received from your government, dated April 6 last, to advise you that my government learns with regret and surprise that the Haytian Government has rejected the claim of Capt. Antonio Pelletier. It was hoped that the opportunity which the consideration of this claim presented, would have been embraced by your government to demonstrate that it was disposed and determined to do justice in a case of signal but groundless oppression of a citizen of the United States.

The merits of this case, whether the facts pertaining thereto be considered or the law, justify no such decision as that reached by your government.

It is claimed as reason for such decision that Captain Pelletier committed an act of piracy according to public law, because when his vessel in distress reached the coast of Hayti he displayed the French flag.

The principles of public law, however, do not support such justification of the acts committed against Captain Pelletier, and of which he so justly complains.

My government therefore cannot accept such suggestion of your government as answer to the claim of its citizens presented in good faith, and which it is expected will be treated by the Haytian Government with decorous gravity.

I am instructed, then, should your government desire to make no further answer to the justice of the claim of Captain Pelletier, to propose to it a prompt and impartial arbitration of the matter, and in default of such arrangement I am instructed further to state that the Government of the United States will require its satisfaction.

I embrace this opportunity to renew, &c.,

JOHN MERCER LANGSTON.

No. 13.

Mr. Langston to Mr. Evarts.

No. 304.] LEGATION OF THE UNITED STATES,
Port-au-Prince, Hayti, August 9, 1880. (Received August 27.)

SIR: I have the honor to transmit, herewith inclosed, a dispatch, with translation, addressed to this legation on the 6th instant, in response to one of the 12th of July last, with regard to the reclamation of Capt. Antonio Pelletier.

It will be perceived that the honorable acting secretary, Mr. Archin, after offering his protest against what he pleases to characterize an indirect menace, with which, as he claims, I close my dispatch, promises to submit the case anew to his government, and, so soon as possible, advise me as to the result of its minute and serious consideration.

The honorable secretary finds menace, if anywhere, in the instructions of the Department on this subject, which I have had the honor to follow faithfully in my last dispatch to his government, and, so far as this legation is concerned, it is not believed that there is anything in the language employed which in anywise should be so qualified.

I am, &c.,

JOHN MERCER LANGSTON.

[Inclosure in No. 304.—Translation.]

Mr. Archin to Mr. Langston.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE OF FOREIGN AFFAIRS,
Port-au-Prince, August 16, 1880.

Mr. MINISTER: I have had the honor to receive your dispatch of July 12th last, relative to that which, April the 6th previous, you had addressed to the incumbent of this department, touching the reclamation which you have presented in the name of your government, with regard to Capt. Antonio Pelletier, adjudged and condemned by Haytian justice as convicted of the crime of piracy accomplished in our waters.

In view of the objections contained in your new dispatch relative to the answer which had been made to this reclamation by my predecessor, and without my consideration, Mr. Minister, of the sort of indirect menace with which you close, menace against which I protest in the name of law and justice, I will make it my duty to submit anew the case to my government, which will make thereof, minutely and attentively, a new and serious examination, the results of which shall be brought to your knowledge as soon as possible.

Meanwhile be pleased, &c.,

The Secretary of State of Foreign Affairs, par interim.

C. ARCHIN.

No. 14.

Mr. Hay to Mr. Langston.

No. 127.] DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, August 17, 1880.

SIR: In acknowledging the receipt of your dispatch of the 24th ultimo, No. 295, I have to inform you that the Department approves your action as therein reported, with regard to the claim of Mr. Antonio Pelletier against the Government of Hayti.

* * * * * * *

I am, &c.,

JOHN HAY,
Acting Secretary.

No. 15.

Mr. Evarts to Mr. Langston.

No. 135.] DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, November 3, 1880.

SIR: I transmit a copy of two letters addressed to this Department by Antonio Pelletier. The first bears date the 18th ultimo, and is accompanied by a bill of particulars of his claim against the Haytian Government. Some, at least, of these might be objected to as unreasonable in amount and as partaking of the character of vindictive or consequential damages. It is difficult to believe that that government would voluntarily pay such a bill. The statement is useful, however, in one respect at least. It shows that the claimant was a man of considerable property and was engaged in business enterprises which his imprisonment by the Haytian Government indirectly at least ruined. In his letter of the 29th ultimo, he consents to accept a sum much less than that claimed in the previous communication, and one which it may not be unreasonable to expect that government to pay. A prompt and satisfactory adjustment of this protracted controversy is due to the character for justice which it is supposed the Haytian Government is desirous of maintaining before the world, and will be sure to strengthen the friendly relations between the United States and that Republic.

On reviewing the origin and course of the proceedings against Captain Pelletier, it seems more and more obvious that those who were the most active in them were prompted by unfounded prejudice and impassioned malice. It is true that the vessel he bought had formerly been a slaver, and that at the time he was a member of a commercial firm in New Orleans. To charge him on this account with a purpose of engaging in the slave trade, and even with an intention to carry Haytians to Cuba for sale, were so improbable as to vitiate, at their root, all the proceedings against him, and to warrant this government in demanding reparation in his behalf. The fact that we were then engaged in a civil war, and probably the supposition that we might not be able or disposed effectually to interfere for the relief of a member of a New Orleans house, may not have been without their influence with those who seized Captain Pelletier's property, and imprisoned and otherwise grossly maltreated him.

I am, &c.,

WM. M. EVARTS.

[Inclosure 1 in No. 135.]

Mr. Pelletier to Mr. Evarts.

WASHINGTON, D. C., October 18, 1880.

SIR: I learn that there is a probability that my long-deferred claim against the Haytian Government is likely to be adjusted on the return of the American minister accredited to that government.

With a view of presenting a full and clear statement of my claim against that government, I herewith inclose a supplemental itemized statement of what it consists. I most respectfully invite your attention to it, and request that it be fully and carefully considered in the negotiation pending its adjustment.

With great respect, I am, very respectfully,

ANTONIO PELLETIER.

The Republic of Hayti to Antonio Pelletier, Dr.

1860.	To value of bark William, cargo, money, and property seized, as per schedule	$91,800
	Twenty years' interest, at 6 per cent. per annum	110,160
			$201,960
1864.	Losses by imprisonment, viz:
	Loss of capital invested as partner in the firm of Delauney, Rice & Co	50,000
	Loss of sundry parcels of real estate purchased by me, upon which partial payments had been made, amounting to ..	49,000
	(But forfeited for non-payment of the final payments.)
	Loss of real estate in West Virginia, consisting of 500,000 acres, in the purchase of which I had paid	175,000
	(The title to which was forfeited by reason of my imprisonment in Hayti, for non-payment of final payments.)
	Loss of claim against Overman and Gruner, for the value of certain ships sold by them, as agents of mine, consisting of ships in the Australian trade, and worth over	500,000
			774,000
	(The suit being dismissed, for want of prosecution, during the time of my imprisonment.)

Loss of investment in a boot and shoe manufactory in Troy, N. Y	$65,000
Loss of various other claims and demands, then good, but rendered worthless by lapse of time, amounting to	23,000
Interest for sixteen years, at 6 per cent. per annum	827,520
Expenses in supplying evidence contained in the ship's books and papers of the bark William, destroyed or withheld from me, consisting of the employment and expenses of special agents in visiting the ports of Grand Cayama, and other ports in the West Indies	25,000
Expenses of counsel, printing, &c., in the prosecution of my claim against Hayti	250,000
		$1,190,520
		2,166,480
Damages to my person in the matter of my arrest and captivity, consisting in sufferings, mental and physical, false and malicious charge of piracy, of being a slaver, the threats of execution as such, the attempted poisoning, the terrible and inhuman tortures and sufferings to which I was subjected, in chains, for nearly three years, in filthy and noisome dungeons, the stonings and beatings, mobbing and starvation, inflicted in contempt of all usage of civilization and in outrage of all humanity, all to such a degree as to permanently impair my health and undermine a constitution that, in ordinary persons, would have succumbed. And, finally, chief of all, the loss of a dear wife and two children; the wife, believing the reports published in the newspapers at the instance of the Government of Hayti, that A. Pelletier had been convicted of piracy and selling persons captured by him in slavery, and suffered the penalties of the law therefor, remarried, and left the United States, taking with her the two children, by which means I was bereft, by the acts of that government, of wife, children, home, means, and health	300,000
		2,466,480

[Inclosure 2 in No. 135.]

Mr. Pelletier to Mr. Evarts.

WASHINGTON, D. C., October 29, 1880. (Received October 30.)

SIR: I have your favor of the 26th instant, acknowledging the receipt of the "statement of the particulars of my claim" against the Haytian Government. Whilst the demand I make for compensation for loss of property and personal suffering against that government is apparently large, still I feel confident that, in the light of the evidence filed, it cannot deny the justice of it. Looking, however, to a prompt adjustment and payment of my claim, without reference to arbitration, and taking into consideration that I am quite advanced in life, and that the Haytian Government is poor, I have concluded to accept six hundred thousand dollars in full satisfaction of my claim against that government, if settled promptly and satisfactorily without the delay of an arbitration. Pay two hundred thousand dollars cash in hand, and four hundred thousand dollars in the bonds of the government upon recoverable payments.

I am, sir, your obedient servant,

ANTONIO PELLETIER.

No. 16.

Mr. Langston to Mr. Evarts.

No. 323.] LEGATION OF THE UNITED STATES,
Port-au-Prince, Hayti, Dec. 17, 1880. (Received Dec. 31.)

SIR: I have the honor to advise you that within a very few days I have had conversations with the Hon. Evariste Laroche, in the absence of the President, charged with the department of foreign affairs, with the President himself, who, having returned to the city, spent five days here last week, leaving again for the south on the 11th instant, and with the Hon. C. Archin, secretary of state of foreign affairs ad interim, during the absence of Mr. Laforestrie in Paris, on the 9th instant, in regard to settling the reclamation of Captain Pelletier.

In these several conversations I labored to impress upon the officials referred to the importance of giving this case prompt and thorough consideration, and immediate and ample settlement. In word certainly, and apparently really, the secretary of Mr. Archin, who is also the law officer of the government, assured me that upon the return of the President, about the 28th of this month, this case should be given immediate attention, and early in the month of January next I might hope to receive an answer from his government thereupon. I simply replied, "I shall rely upon your promise in that behalf."

In acknowledging the receipt of your instruction, No. 135, dated November 3, 1880, with regard to this case, I beg to assure you that I shall press it with vigor, in accordance with your instructions.

I am, &c.,

JOHN MERCER LANGSTON.

Mr. Langston to Mr. Evarts.

No. 339.] LEGATION OF THE UNITED STATES,

Port-au-Prince, Hayti, January 29, 1881. (Received Feb. 12.)

SIR: I have the honor to transmit herewith inclosed a copy of a note addressed by me to the Hon. C. Archin, on the 17th instant, with regard to the settlement of the claim of Mr. Antonio Pelletier, in which he is reminded that I expect him to keep his promise made with respect thereto on the 9th ultimo. Again, on the 25th instant, in a conversation had with him at this legation, I reaffirmed that our government regarded this case as a very grave one, and expected that the Haytian Government, regarding it in the same light, would make no delay in reaching some proper adjustment thereof. Whereupon he stated that he had the case under consideration, and that he did not fail to appreciate its importance.

I am, &c.,

JOHN MERCER LANGSTON.

[Inclosure in No. 339.]

Mr. Langston to Mr. Archin.

LEGATION OF THE UNITED STATES,
Port-au-Prince, Hayti, January 17, 1881.

SIR: In an interview had with you on the 9th ultimo. you will remember, that, referring to your dispatch of the 6th of August, in reply to mine of the 12th of July last, with regard to the reclamation of Mr. Antonio Pelletier, you assured me that in the early part of this month, after the return of the President from the South, your government would advise me as to its conclusions with respect to such claim.

I have now, Mr. Secretary, the honor to state that I await information in such behalf.

I am, &c.,

JOHN MERCER LANGSTON.

Hon. C. ARCHIN,
Secretary of State of Foreign Affairs,
Port-au-Prince, Hayti.

No. 18.

Mr. Evarts to Mr. Langston.

No. 145.] DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, February 16, 1881.

SIR: Your dispatch, No. 339, of the 29th of January last, relative to the Pelletier claim, so called, has been received. It is accompanied by a copy of a note which you had addressed to the Haytian minister for foreign affairs on the subject. Hopes had been entertained from the tenor of your previous interviews with that functionary, to which you refer, that his government would of its own accord have made an offer of honorable settlement in the case. It is hoped that a similar offer will not be delayed, so that intelligence may reach here in the early days of next month. Such an event would certainly illustrate your official career.

I am, &c.,

WM. M. EVARTS.

No. 19.

Mr. Langston to Mr. Evarts.

No. 350.] LEGATION OF THE UNITED STATES,
Port-au-Prince, Hayti, February 25, 1881. (Received March 11.)

SIR: I have the honor to bring to the attention of the Department a dispatch, a copy of which, with translation, is herewith inclosed, dated as of the 5th instant, from Hon. C. Archin, acting secretary of state of foreign affairs of this government, in which he advises me that the claim of Antonio Pelletier is being considered by the cabinet, and within a few days he hopes to be able to give me the decision of his government with regard thereto.

On the 15th instant, I addressed a note, a copy of which is herewith inclosed, to Mr. Archin, in which, after thanking him especially for the information given me touching the case of Mr. Pelletier in this dispatch, I invite his attention to the statement of Captain Pelletier's claim as presented by him to the Department, and transmitted to me in your instruction No. 135 of November 3, 1880, a copy of which statement I forwarded, as you will perceive from my note therein to the Haytian Government. The items of claim as made by Captain Pelletier in his statement referred to amount, as you will remember, to $2,466,480. As I state in my note, I believe this statement will aid the honorable council of secretaries of state in reaching a fair and just conclusion with respect to this grave and serious case.

On the 22d instant, I had the honor to receive a note from Mr. Archin, a copy of which, with translation, is herewith inclosed, in which he advises me of the receipt of my note of the 15th instant with its inclosure as already stated. He further promises to bring my note and the statement to the attention of the council of secretaries of state, who will give, the matter due consideration, and their conclusion, so soon as found, he will make haste to make known to me.

I am, sir, your obedient servant,

JOHN MERCER LANGSTON.

[Inclosure No. 2.—Translation.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE OF FOREIGN AFFAIRS (Section —, No. —),
Port-au-Prince, February 5, 1881.

Mr. J. M. LANGSTON,
Minister Resident of the United States of America at Port-au-Prince:

Mr. MINISTER: I have had the honor to receive your three dispatches of the 17th and 18th January last, and have hastened to place them under the eyes of the members of my government.

As regards Mr. Hugo, Kainer, to whom you wish in the name of your government give the post of consular agent at Port de Paix, instead and place of Mr. A. Charlemagne, who occupied that office, and who has resigned his functions, you will not deem it wrong that before answering you we take some information as to the personality of that gentleman, of whom we hear for the first time, unless you yourself can furnish us such information, for which we should be very grateful.

As regards the affair Kunhardt & Co., referring to the explanations, verbal, which you gave me in our last conversation, and which I have presented to the council, I have the pleasure of announcing to you that, notwithstanding the great actual embarrassment of the public treasury, my colleague of the finances will place at your disposal the first of the terms due of this claim, to wit, $4,467.50.

This is all which it is humanly possible for us to do at present, and I hope that you will be indulgent toward us, owing to this embarrassing situation.

The documents relating to the Pelletier claim are at this moment under consideration of the council of the secretaries of state, which has commenced the examination thereof this week. I therefore hope that within a few days I may be able to let you know the decision of my government in that regard.

In the mean time, be pleased to receive, Mr. Minister, the new assurance of my high consideration.

The secretary of state of foreign affairs, par interim.

C. ARCHIN.

[Inclosure No. 3.]

No. 136.] LEGATION OF THE UNITED STATES,
Port-au-Prince, Hayti, February 15, 1881.

SIR: Referring to your dispatch addressed to this legation on the 5th instant, and acknowledging its due receipt, I have the honor to tender you my thanks, especially for that portion of the dispatch in which you advise me that the reclamation of the American citizen, Antonio Pelletier, is being considered by the honorable council of secretaries of state, and that within a few days you hope to be able to communicate to me the decision of your government with regard thereto.

It appears to me to be opportune, Mr. Minister, to present for your consideration at this time in succinct, yet comprehensive tabular statement, the several general and detailed items of claim held by Mr. Pelletier against your government, and which, as it would seem, may be justified and supported by manifest considerations of law and equity.

I beg therefore to present to you herewith inclosed a statement forwarded to me by my government, as prepared by Mr. Pelletier himself, formulating the several matters of his claim against your government. I have no doubt, Mr. Minister, that this statement, carefully considered, will greatly facilitate the endeavors of the honorable council of secretaries of state to reach a fair and just conclusion with respect to this grave and serious case.

I embrace this opportunity, Mr. Minister, to renew to you the assurance of my very distinguished consideration.

JOHN MERCER LANGSTON.

[Inclosure 5.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE OF FOREIGN AFFAIRS (Section—, No.—),
Port-au-Prince, February 22, 1881.

Mr. J. M. LANGSTON,
Minister Resident of the United States of America, Port-au-Prince.

Mr. MINISTER: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your dispatch of the 15th February instant, complemental of the reclamation which you have presented against my government in favor of Capt. Antonio Pelletier, accompanied by a statement of the claims which he believes ought to amount, and which do amount, to the enormous figure of $2,466,480. These documents shall be placed with your previous notes to be brought to the attention of the council of secretaries of state, who will give thereto such solution as may be just, of which I will make haste to give you notice.

In the meantime I pray you, Minister, to be pleased to accept the renewed assurance of my high consideration.

The secretary of state of foreign affairs, par interim.

C. ARCHIN

No. 20.

Mr. Langston to Mr. Evarts.

No. 356.] LEGATION OF THE UNITED STATES,
Port-au-Prince, Hayti, March 3, 1881. (Received March 24.)

SIR: In acknowledging the receipt of dispatch No. 145, from the Department, dated February 16, 1881, referring to the claim of Captain Pelletier, I beg to state that, so far as this legation is concerned, such claim has been and is being pressed with all possible vigor. I had hoped, according to the several repeated promises, of which you have already been advised, of the honorable secretary of state, C. Archin, to have been able to report some weeks ago the decision of the Haytien Government with regard to this case.

The gravity of this case is well understood by the Haytien Government; it cannot fail to recognize its justice, but it evidently seeks delay in its settlement, hoping, per adventure, to find way of escape from its adjustment. There is no legitimate defense to be made against this demand, and if I do not receive some response from this government, having in view definite settlement thereof, so that I may advise the Department of such fact by the mail leaving this city on the 26th instant, I shall feel it to be my duty then to ask the government to give this legation such assistance in the premises as to compel its due and immediate payment.

I am, sir, your obedient servant,

JOHN MERCER LANGSTON.

No. 21.

Mr. Langston to Mr. Blaine.

No. 360.] LEGATION OF THE UNITED STATES,
Port-au-Prince, Hayti, March, 1881.

SIR: I have the honor to transmit herewith, inclosed with translation, a copy of a dispatch dated on the 15th instant, received by me on the 16th, in which Mr. C. Archin, acting secretary of state of foreign affairs of the Haytien Government, presents its decision upon the reclamation of Capt. Antonio Pelletier.

Mr. Archin, in his dispatch, much more lengthy and elaborate in its statement of what is claimed to be the facts of this case than that of Mr. Laforestrie upon the same subject of April 6, 1880, transmitted to the Department as an inclosure to dispatch of this legation No. 251 of April 20, 1880, submits the conclusion of his government, that it refuses to accord the demand made in behalf of Captain Pelletier, or to submit the case to arbitration.

After stating that Captain Pelletier was delivered by Mr. Memcan, the French consul residing at Cape Haytïen, to whom he had appealed for aid and protection, to the Haytien authorities, to be tried as a pirate and slaver according to the laws of Hayti, alleging, also, that his trial being in all respects legal and fair, he enjoying as to his defense the largest liberty, being defended by the ablest attorneys of the Haytien bar upon public and contradictory pleadings, was duly convicted and sentenced finally to confinement for five years in irons with confiscation of his vessel, its rigging, and furniture, and that it was during his confinement in prison at Port-au-Prince, according his sentence, that he became so sick that he was transferred through the generous pity of the Haytien authorities to the hospital of that city, from which he made his escape.

The honorable acting secretary further states that whatever may be the interpretation of the facts which he presents, sustained as they are by the official documents pertaining to this case, four things are true: 1st, that Capt. Antonio Pelletier, charged with the double crime of piracy and attempt of slave-trade in Hayti, was arrested, tried, and condemned according to the laws of the republic, as every Haytien and other person against whom like offenses might have been made would have been tried; 2d, that in his trial, in which several others of different foreign nations were involved, in favor of whom no claim has been presented since Captain Pelletier and his co-accused were tried upon public and contradictory pleadings, before a legally constituted jury, and with all the privileges attaching to a free and complete defense; 3d, that he, with his co-accused, against all the decisions made in this case, exercised all those means of recourse given by the laws of the republic, even against the sentence of the criminal court of Cape Haytien of June 23, 1862, which condemned him to the punishment of five years' confinement in irons, and which became definitive; 4th, that this last judgment has acquired the authority of a thing adjudged, and for more than eighteen years since it was rendered, no judgment, no other act provoked by Capt. Antonio Pelletier and emanating from the judicial authority has been taken to disturb the faith due and the judicial verity attached to the last and definitive sentence pronounced against him, and from which, after he had submitted to the punishment pronounced against him, he escaped by flight.

In view of such circumstances, the Government of Hayti refuses to consider the demand which has been made in behalf of Captain Pelletier, and charges Mr. Archin to express its decision accordingly to me.

As to the real facts of this case, the outrages perpetrated upon Captain Pelletier, the denial of every semblance of justice in the mock trial which was accorded him upon the false charges of piracy and slave-trading, his conviction and sentence, and the confiscation of his property, the Department is fully advised, as its instructions heretofore given me with regard to this reclamation fully show.

I beg to state that while I am greatly disappointed and surprised at the conduct and the position shown and taken by the Haytien Government with respect to this case, it is now manifest that the only alternative left to our government in the premises, would it sustain its instructions already given in this case, is to indicate its purpose and determination with regard thereto in such manner as to make its demand in behalf of its outraged citizen duly appreciated and felt.

Awaiting any further instructions which the Department may be pleased to make in this case,

I am, sir, your obedient servant,

JOHN MERCER LANGSTON.

[Inclosures.]

No. 1. Copy of Hon. C. Archin's dispatch to Mr. Langston, dated March 15, 1881.

No. 2. Translation of above.

[Inclosure No. 2.—Translation.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE OF FOREIGN AFFAIRS (Section, —, No. —),
Port-au-Prince, March 15, 1881.

Mr. J. M. LANGSTON,
Minister Resident of the United States of America at Port-au-Prince:

Mr. MINISTER: As I have had the honor to promise you in one of my late dispatches, my government has de novo attentively and minutely examined the reclamation which you have presented to it on behalf of Capt. Antonio Palletier, condemned by the Haytian tribunals in the year 1861, first to capital punishment, then, upon appeal from this sentence for false application of the penal law, to five years in irons, and that for the crimes of piracy committed on the high seas, and of attempt of slave trade upon the coasts of Hayti, and in favor of whom you demand the fabulous indemnity of $2,466,480, for the estimation of which you demand of us even to have recourse to arbitration. The gravity and importance of this claim, made after an interval of nearly eighteen years, and following civil troubles which, by agitating violently and almost constantly, during a sufficiently long time the country, have deranged and even destroyed a good portion of the public archives, have not permitted to be made sooner this examination, which required care and reflection.

Without doubt, Mr. Minister, your government has been led into error by the person interested to present to the government of the Republic such claim which a priori and in our inmost conviction your government would have, of itself and without any suggestion from another, repulsed, if it could have known exactly and primarily the truth of this affair, in which the dearest interests of humanity maintained by the laws of all civilized nations have unfortunately been brought in question.

My position of citizen and of secretary of state of the Republic of Hayti imposes upon me then, first of all, the imperious obligation to exert myself to re-establish to you the facts in all their nakedness and disrobed of all interested character or of resolution taken.

According to the official documents which are in the possession of my government, Capt. Antonio Pelletier sailed upon a vessel called the William, whose true flag it has never been possible to ascertain (since he took successively that of several nations), and which had on board a crew and a set of instruments and objects, the details and composition of which indicated clearly its purpose of slave trading, had been, upon the formal charge of one of the men of his own crew, bringing against him the grave accusation of being at once pirate and slaver, arrested at Fort Liberté, during the year eighteen hundred and sixty-one by Mr. Memican, French consular agent residing at Cape Haytien, of whom Captain Pelletier had asked support and protection, and who, recognizing him such as his accuser had represented him, remitted him to the hands of Haytian justice, to be judged conformably to the laws of Hayti. In consequence of such double prevention, Captain Pelletier was transferred to the prisons of the city of Port-au-Prince, where the trial took place; and this was only after a long, minute, and costly procedure, which lasted for entire months, and which had been brought before several tribunals, and after public and contradictory pleadings, in which the accused was defended with the largest liberty and with the support of the most eminent lawyers of the Haytian bar, that Captain Pelletier, condemned first to death and to the payment of damages to Messrs. Juan Cotes and Antonio Cano, who had been made civil parties against him and his co-defendants in the trial, by the criminal court of Port-au-Prince, upon the affirmative declaration of the jury of its judgment, as it appears from such sentence dated August 30, 1861, annulled upon recourse by him taken to the court of cassation (decree of the 14th of October, 1861) had been definitely condemned by the criminal tribunal of Cape Haytien, designated by the supreme court to take cognizance thereof, to the punishment of five years in irons; and that, conformably to the penal law, the William, seized and confiscated with all its rigging and apparel as having served as instrument for the prepetration of the illegal acts brought against its captain and crew, had been publicly sold at auction.

While he was undergoing his punishment at Port-au-Prince the condemned, Antonio Pelletier, upon the statement which he made to the administration of the prison with regard to a malady from which he said he was suffering greatly, and which rendered dangerous to his life his prolonged detention in the prison of the capital, obtained, through the generous pity of the Haytian authority, his transfer to the hospital of this city to be cared for; but he took advantage of this favor given him to escape from that place and fled thus from the territory of Hayti.

Whatever may then be the manner in which one might or would interpret these facts, which accord with the terms of all the pieces and documents relative to this affair and made public at the time through the official journal of the Republic, there will remain, Mr. Minister, as absolutely undeniable and authentic the following points: 1st, that Capt. Antonio Pelletier, charged of the double crime of piracy and attempt of slave trade upon the soil of Hayti, had been arrested, judged, and condemned according to the laws of the Republic, as every Haytian or other person would have been against whom there might have been imputed like crimes; 2d, that in his trial, in which several other foreigners of different nations were found involved, in favor of whom no reclamation of the fact of none of the other powers of which these last were subjects has been presented since then, Capt. Antonio Pelletier and his co-defendants had been tried upon public and contradictory pleadings, and before a jury legally composed, and had enjoyed all the privileges attaching to a free and complete defense; 3d, that he had exercised largely with his co-defendants against all the decisions rendered in this affair, all the means of recourse which the laws of the Republic gave him, even against the sentence of the criminal court of Cape Haytien of the date of the 23d of June, 1862, which condemned him to the punishment of five years in irons, and which had become definite; 4th, that this last judgment had acquired the authority of the thing adjudged; and that, since more than eighteen years that it has been rendered no judgment, no other act provoked by Capt. Antonio Pelletier and emanating from the judicial authority, which according to our constitution is an independent power and separated from the two others with which it forms the government of the Republic, has appeared to even shake the faith due and the judicial verity attached to the last and definitive sentence against him pronounced, and of which he had commenced to suffer the punishment which it pronounced, from which he escaped by flight.

In view of these circumstances the government of the Republic cannot, to its great regret, take into consideration that which you demand of it in behalf of Captain Pelletier, and charges me to advise you of it.

The government of the Republic, full of confidence in the justice, the equity, and the undoubted intelligence of the Government of the United States, as well as in the respect which it has not ceased to show for the authority of the laws, either within its own territory or within that of other countries, its friends or allies, dares to hope that your government, informed now upon the true situation of the one for whom it has charged you to make intercession and to make reclamation of our government, will be convinced of the error in which the interested party has sought to draw it, and will abandon the action which it has presented and which nothing can reasonably justify.

In this hope I have the honor, Mr. Minister, to renew to you the assurances of my very high consideration.

The Secretary of State of Foreign Affairs, ad interim

C. ARCHIN.

47TH CONGRESS, 1st Session. } SENATE. { EX. DOC. No. 87.

MESSAGE

FROM THE

PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES,

TRANSMITTING,

In further response to Senate resolution of March 18, 1881, a report of the Secretary of State, touching the capitulations of the Ottoman Empire.

FEBRUARY 2, 1882.—Read and referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations and ordered to be printed.

To the Senate of the United States:

I transmit herewith, in further response to the resolution of the Senate of the 18th of March, 1881, a report of the Secretary of State, with its accompaniment, touching the capitulations of the Ottoman Empire.

CHESTER A. ARTHUR.

EXECUTIVE MANSION,
Washington, February 2, 1882.

To the President:

In further response to the resolution of the Senate of the 18th of March, 1881, requesting the transmission to that body of a copy of the report made by Edward A. Van Dyck, consular clerk at Cairo, on the capitulations of the Ottoman Empire, the Secretary of State has the honor to lay before the President the second part of that report, touching Ottoman private international law.

Respectfully submitted.

FREDK. T. FRELINGHUYSEN.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, February 2, 1882.

TABLE OF CONTENTS.

	Page.
Section 17, of the law and protocol conceding to foreigners the right to hold real estate in the Ottoman Empire (continued from Chapter V, of his Report for 1880)	5
PART II. (Chapter VI.) Private international law in the Ottoman Empire	13
The position of consuls residing in the Levant	14
The status of foreigners residing in the Levant who are not clothed with a public character	16
A theory of private international law in Turkey	24
Mixed tribunals of reform in Egypt	25
1. The Carpi case	29
2. The Sursock case	36
3. The Adib case	44
4. The Aitken case	47
Conclusion	49

REPORT

ON

THE CAPITULATIONS OF THE OTTOMAN EMPIRE.

CONTINUED FROM VAN DYCK'S REPORT FOR 1880 ON THE CAPITULATIONS OF THE OTTOMAN PORTE.

THE LAW AND PROTOCOL CONCERNING REAL ESTATE—(Continued.)

17. OF THIS LAW IN ITS RELATIONS TO THE VARIOUS SOURCES OF OTTOMAN JURISPRUDENCE.

In order to take up the thread of continuity, I shall repeat a few sentences contained in No. 15 of Chapter V, of my report for 1880.

It has been said and repeated by many that, according to Ottoman legislation, foreigners coming to Turkey were until recent times interdicted from possessing real estate within the territory of the empire. Let us see how far this statement is true, when examined theoretically by the light of the various sources of Ottoman law or legislation.

And first of all let us examine the question whether the moslem or religious law, the Shariâh, is opposed to the holding by foreigners of real estate in moslem countries.

In Multaga el Abhur, page 109, of the Arabic edition printed at Constantinople in 1252, Anno Hejiræ, in the section concerning foreign residents (Musta'men) it is laid down that—

> The foreigner may not dwell in our territory a whole year; and it shall be said to him, If thou dwellest a year we will impose upon thee the personal tax (djizyah); and if he dwell a year he becomes ipso facto a tributary (Dhimmi), and he may no more return to his own country. Likewise, should it be said to him, If thou dwellest one month, or thereabouts, and he does dwell, or buys land and the kharaj-tax of the same is imposed upon him, and there is also imposed upon him the djizyah (tax on his person) for one year from the time of the placing of the kharaj-tax, * * * then, if he returns to his own country, his blood has become ipso facto lawful.

Again, the Sharai-kabir, a work on moslem jurisprudence quoted by Bélin in a note to page 115 of his essay on real estate in moslem countries, contains what may be rendered thus:

> If a Musta'men (foreigner) buys or cultivates a piece of land, tithe-taxed or kharaj-taxed, he must pay the kharaj-tax for the land, and the djizyah-tax for his person; he does not, however, become a Dhimmi by the fact of the purchase of the land, but solely by the fact of cultivating it. The kharaj-tax on the land implies, as to the owner, the tax upon the person.

Finally, the Hidâyah (or Guide), one of the chief works of the Hanafite school or rite, says in book 9, chap. 6, page 197, as follows:

> If a stranger under protection comes into a moslem country and there acquires a parcel of land subject to the tribute, so that the tribute is imposed upon him, he becomes a Dhimmi, that is to say a subject; because the tribute upon the land is the substitute of the tax upon the person. * * * Nevertheless he does not become a Dhimmi right after acquisition of the land, nor until he commences to pay the tribute; for a foreigner may acquire land for speculation, but by becoming subjected to the tribute he subjects himself also to the personal tax for the following year; for by submitting himself to the tribute he becomes a Dhimmi.

From these texts of moslem jurispudence, it appears clearly that the Mohammedan common law (the Shariâh) does not absolutely forbid strangers from acquiring real property in moslem countries, but subjects the foreign purchaser to the payment of the kharaj-tax on the land and then to the payment of the djizyah as to the person.

But these imposts, the kharaj on the land and the djizyah on the person of a non-moslem, were once for all abolished by virtue of the Hatti-Sharîf of Gul-Hâneh of 1839 and of the Hatti-Hamayûn of 1856. In the earlier of these two charters, the Sultan sought to secure for the provinces of the Ottoman Empire the benefits of good government by the introduction of new institutions that were to bear chiefly upon the three following heads: (1) The guaranties for insuring to his subjects perfect security as to their life, their honor, and their fortune; (2) A regular method for the assessment and collection of taxes; and (3) an equally regular method for the levying of soldiers and the duration of their service. How the second of these three objects was to be attained the Hatti-Sharîf determined by further ordaining that—

Thenceforth every member of Ottoman society should be taxed for a proportional part of the impost, to be reckoned on the basis of his fortune and his abilities, and that beyond this nothing could be exacted of him.

And the charter of 1856 further decreed that.

The taxes that are exigible from all our subjects shall be collected under the same designation without distinction of class or creed.

All religious sects within the Ottoman Empire having been put upon the same level in this respect, by the abolition of the above-mentioned discriminative taxes, there would thus have been no difference, so far as regards Ottoman law, between subjects and foreigners as to the acquisition of real estate. Both could have acquired and held this kind of property and would have been subject to the same taxation, as is the case throughout Christendom. Nor is anything to be found in the ordinances of the Sultans, whether in those that contain the reforms of the so-called Tanzimât or even in those that are anterior to them, that forbids foreigners from becoming holders of real property.

Thus, too, in the preamble to the imperial rescript of the 7th of Safar, 1284, regulating the matter in hand, the holding of real estate is spoken of as a right exercised even by foreigners, but concerning which there were abuses and uncertainties which it was intented to remedy:

With the object of developing the prosperity of the country, to put an end to the difficulties, to the abuses, and to the uncertainties which arise on the subject of the exercise by foreigners of the right to hold property within the Ottoman Empire.*

Whatever explicit prohibitions there are against foreigners holding real estate in Turkey, they should be sought for in the European decrees that forbid Europeans to establish themselves fixedly and permanently in moslem lands, perhaps for fear that they would definitely abandon their own country, or perhaps, too, out of fear that they would by compulsion or for some other motive change their religion, but more likely in order to avoid coming into embarrassing collision with the stricter teaching of moslem law, whereby a stranger who pays the kharadj on his land must also pay the djizyah on his person and thereby becomes a Dhimmi, who can no more, under pain of death, return to his home (see above the quotation from Multaga el Abhur).

* See the French text and not our English translation given in the President's proclamation of October 29, 1874.

Thus we read in the French ordinance of the year 1781, title II, article 26, as follows:

His Majesty forbids his subjects established in the sea-ports of the Levant and of the Barbary states from there acquiring any real estate or fixed property other than the houses, vaults, magazines, and other property necessary for their lodging and for their goods and effects, under pain of being sent back to France.

ART. 28. His Majesty forbids all his subjects from taking any land or other objects by farmage, whether from the Great Lord (Sultan), the Barbary princes, or their subjects, or from entering into any partnerships with the farmers, tenants, or others, under pain of being sent back to France.

According to this ordinance it was held that the French could acquire houses, stores, &c., and hence that the right of holding real property in general was not forbidden them, but only that of holding lands or immovable estate beyond what was necessary for carrying on their commerce. This very prohibition by a European ruler would seem to prove that the Ottoman law did not stand in the way of foreigners acquiring immovable property in Turkey. Indeed, such a prohibition on the part of a European legislator would have been needless if it had existed in the laws of the Ottoman Porte. That it was contained in the former implies that the acquisition of real estate by foreigners in Turkey was possible so far as the local law was concerned.

Moreover, the actual facts demonstrate the truth of what has just been said, for throughout the Ottoman Empire, but particularly in Egypt, a not inconsiderable quantity of real estate had belonged to Europeans long before the imperial rescript of 1284 A. H. Under the rule of the Mohammed Ali dynasty in Egypt, besides having given away not a few pieces of land to Europeans, the government itself conveyed others to them and executed the contracts in the premises, in which the rights of ownership of the Europeans were fully recognized.

How, then, did it get to be held that within the Ottoman Empire strangers (foreigners) were forbidden from acquiring real property, if the law was not against their so doing?

This opinion arose probably out of the circumstance that very many governmental authorities, and especially the subaltern officials, out of fanaticism and hatred to foreigners, threw obstacles in the way of foreigners acquiring landed property, and would not allow the same to appear on the state register in the name of the foreign purchaser. Thus during the rule of Abbas Pasha in Egypt orders were given to the cadis (judges) to grant no hodjet (title-deed) to those Europeans who had bought houses or lands from the natives; and although they remained in the possession and enjoyment thereof, no one daring to molest them, yet during the rule of that viceroy the public contracts of conveyance could not be executed between the buyer and seller before the cadis, or judges.

But these were mere obstacles of fact, arbitrary and unfounded in law, and which lasted only for a time. Indeed, right after the death of Abbas Pasha the government of his successor, Said Pasha, revoked these orders and the hodjets (title-deeds) were granted again and continued to be granted to Europeans without difficulty. Perhaps it was from similar purely arbitrary acts and from ignorance of moslem laws that the erroneous opinion arose throughout Europe that Ottoman law denied to foreigners the right of holding real estate in Turkey.

But even these obstacles of mere fact should have been no longer possible in the presence of the clear provision of the Hatti Hamayûn of 1856, which declared in its twenty-eighth article that—

> As the laws which govern the purchase, the sale, and the possession of real property are common to all Ottoman subjects, it is likewise permitted to foreigners to possess real estate by their conforming to the laws of the land and to the regulations of the local police and by their paying the same taxes as the natives, after, however, the arrangements in the premises shall have been made between my government and the foreign powers.

By this article of law the Ottoman Porte did not introduce a new right; it had done nothing more than confirm what the already existing and anterior laws had provided for, and at the same time it prevented the governmental authorities from thenceforth laying obstacles in the way of their application. Indeed this article did not as much as declare that thenceforth foreigners would be permitted to hold real property. It went no further then to enunciate, as an existing rule, the right of foreigners to possess landed estate in Turkey: "It is equally permitted to foreigners to possess real estate."

Furthermore, this right to possess, recognized to foreigners was subordinated by the said law to certain conditions. What are they, and how ought they to be interpreted?

These conditions are two: 1. That foreigners shall comply, in the exercise of this right, with the laws of the land, and with the regulations of local police (En se conformant aux lois du pays et aux règlements de police locale). 2. That foreigners shall pay the same taxes as the natives; after, however, an agreement in regard to such taxes should have been arrived at with the foreign powers (Et en aquittant les mêmes droits que les indigènes, après toutefois les arrangements qui auront lieu entre mon gouvernement et les puissances étrangères).

The first of these conditions is in accordance with the sound principles of right. It is a consequence flowing out of the universally admitted rule that real property must stand entirely under the laws of the country where it is situated.

Nevertheless, it should be remarked that when the laws of the land are spoken of the capitulations and treaties of the Porte with the foreign powers ought also to be counted among these laws; for such diplomatic instruments constitute a positive law existing within the Ottoman Empire, which cannot be set aside or departed from without the consent of these powers. Wherefore, whenever it is a question of applying to foreigners, possessors of real estate, a law promulgated in Turkey, this ought so to be done that such application shall not clash with the capitulations and commercial treaties, but be in harmony with them. The full importance of this observation will be hereafter seen when we come to speak more fully of the provisions contained in the law and protocol, and of their consequences.

The second condition also, that relating to taxes, appears quite reasonable, and seems to be such as to leave no room for serious difficulties.

In fact, what could be desired more equitable than that foreigners be subjected on this head to the very same treatment as the natives? To lay claim to a better and more advantageous treatment would be indeed exorbitant.

On the other hand, this condition, so equitable and reasonable in appearance, did seem to clash against the literal provisions of the capitulations, which declare that foreigners are to pay throughout the Ottoman Empire no other imposts and taxes than those indicated in them. Thus, in the French capitulations, Article 63 is worded as follows:

> The French merchants and others dependent upon France shall be able to travel with the passports given them; * * * without that this kind of travelers, keeping within the bounds of their duty, may be disturbed for the tribute called kharadj, not for any other impost; and when they shall, in accordance with the imperial capitulations, have goods subject to duty after having paid the duty thereon, according to usage, the pashas and cadis and other officials shall not hinder their passage.

And still more clearly in the English capitulations, Article 13:

All Englishmen or British subjects, married or not married, who shall dwell or reside in our states, whether they be artisans or merchants, shall be exempt from every kind of tribute.

The Austrian capitulations are in this respect more explicit than all. Article 35 reads thus:

By virtue of this sublime capitulation, the consuls, vice-consuls, interpreters, and merchants of his sacred royal Cæsarian majesty, and all the servants that are now actually in their service, shall be free and exempt from all tribute or other imposts.

By reason, therefore, of the capitulations, all foreigners residing within the Ottoman Empire, after that they have paid the duties of custom upon the goods that they import or export, are no more subject to any tax or impost, whether personal or other, although the natives do have to pay it.

This is clearly contrary to the practice which obtains throughout Christendom. But how many of the provisions of Ottoman international law differ from those of European public law? Nor is it to be wondered at, seeing that the two systems of law differ essentially and are based upon quite dissimilar principles, as has been already shown in another part of this report. (See report for 1880.)

It is not difficult to discover the reason for this dissimilarity in the matter of imposts and taxes between the states of Christendom and the Empire of Turkey. In the former countries taxation has been from very early times based upon certain and precise rules; is in no way arbitrary or vexatious, however onerous it may sometimes be; it is made use of as a means for supplying the needs of the state, and the caprice of rulers has but little control over it. This being so, the states of Christendom could find no difficulty in accepting the principle of reciprocity for those of their subjects who went to foreign countries, and were well able to embrace the maxim that their subjects should be treated like the natives.

But matters took a different course in the Orient, for the reason that it is under moslem rule; and where this domination exists taxation, whether of person or of property, has never been fixed after a regular and rational method. It has always been left to the arbitrary caprice, not exactly of the sultans, but of the provincial governors. Thus, from the earliest times, the system of farming out the taxes has been followed, and provided the required sum reached the treasury from a province, the tax-farmers were at liberty to exact whatever they chose, and there was no limit or shelter against their greed. If recourse was had to the provincial governor, he himself was receiving large sums from these very tax-farmers, and joined with them in vexing and worrying the poor subjects.

But this was not the worst side to the matter of taxation in the Ottoman Empire. The taxes were not the same for all subjects. Those of the moslem religion were exempt from many imposts that weighed grievously upon the subjects of all other creeds. The rayahs, that is to say, Christians and Israelites, were subjected to so many taxes of different kinds, both of person and of property, that could not be borne; even the manner of exaction was humiliating and degrading. (See last year's report.)

Moreover, foreigners, whether Christians or Israelites—and all who came from Europe were either of the one or of the other belief—had to be placed, according to moslem law, upon the same footing as the non-moslem subjects. They were called musta' men, that is to say, seekers of security and safety for their lives and persons, for without a promise of security or safe conduct from the ruler, the non-moslem stranger could not remain in Islamic territory, any one being free to kill him; and this amân or personal security was to be granted him by the ruler only on condition of his being treated like the native non-moslem subjects, and therefore of his submitting to all the avanies and taxes to which the latter were subject.

Such being the case, it was not possible that the European powers who had dealings with the Porte and negotiated capitulations with it, should have consented to the subjection of their subjects to the same taxes as the natives, and more especially to those laid upon the non-moslem natives. To have permitted this would have been to make it impossible for them to come and establish themselves upon moslem ground for the purposes of commerce or otherwise.

Herein lies the why and wherefore of the express terms of the capitulations that, with the exception of the duties of custom, the European should be subjected to no impost or tax in Turkey.

On the other hand, the customs duties were, and continue to be, fixed at a figure sufficiently high to so make it that foreigners residing in Turkey do contribute in their turn also towards the ordinary taxes of the country, not, however, under the name of tax or impost, but under that of customs duties.

From this standpoint it is not perfectly correct to say, as Ottoman governments are wont to often state, that foreigners are free from taxation, while their own subjects are not. The foreigner is taxed, but indirectly and under the head of duties.

It was necessary to have recourse to this system because of the bad systems that obtain throughout Turkey as to the taxes. Until, therefore, the system in vigor had been changed by common agreement between the powers and the Porte, it was not possible to subject foreigners possessing real estate property to the burdens of taxation which weighed upon that owned by the native subject. Indeed in the Hatti-Hamayûn of 1856 it was expressly declared that without this previous arrangement the imposts and taxes upon real estate were not be be exacted. It only remains, therefore, to see how this agreement was effected. And here we come again to the imperial rescript of the 18th of June, 1807, A. H. 1284.

This ordinance has the form and character of a project or draft drawn up by the Porte for applying to the exercise by foreigners of the right to hold real property in Turkey, the two conditions spoken of above that are contained in Article 28 of the Hatti-Hamayûn of 1856. Indeed, Article 5 of the rescript of 1284 says, in so many words:

Every foreign subject shall enjoy the benefit of the present law as soon as the power of which he is a subject shall have adhered to the arrangements proposed by the Sublime Porte for the exercise of the right to hold property.

The powers have fully accepted the draft as it was presented by the Porte, subject to the limitations, precautions, and definitions contained in the protocol,* and the consequence is that two of the principal privileges theretofore belonging to Europeans and to citizens of the United States within the Ottoman Empire have been lost, or at least greatly curtailed. These are, the privilege of exemption from every import other than the duties of custom, and that of being judged, in suits where they are defendants, or in suits where the question turns upon a matter of real estate between two foreigners, by the consular tribunal of the defendant.* Both these privileges had been accorded to foreigners by the capitulations and by long standing custom and usage.

*The protocol, however, says: "It is well understood that these restrictions do not concern cases which have for their object questions of real estate, which shall be tried and determined under the conditions established by the law."

In fact the second article of the law or imperial rescript ordains, without the slightest ambiguity, that foreigners who are owners of real property are bound—

1. To comply with the requirements of all laws and regulations, existing or that may hereafter be ordained, concerning the enjoyment, transmission, alienation, or hypothecation of real estate.

2. To pay all imposts and charges of every sort and under whatever form or name that are laid upon or that shall hereafter be laid upon city or country real property.

3. To submit themselves completely to the jurisdiction of the Ottoman civil tribunals in every question relating to real property, whether as plaintiffs or as defendants, even when both parties are foreigners and no native is interested.

In short, they are in all things (says the law) to hold real estate by the same title, on the same conditions, and under the same forms as Ottoman owners, and without being able to avail themselves of their personal nationality, except under the reserve of the immunities attaching to their persons and movable goods according to the treaties.

In other words, foreigners residing within the Turkish Empire and owning real property therein continue to be foreigners as to their persons and movable property, but are just like natives as to their real estate. It becomes necessary, therefore, to see what are the laws and principles that govern the rights of foreigners in each of these two different aspects.

But having in last year's report treated fully of the capitulations and treaties of the Porte with foreign powers, that is to say, of OTTOMAN PUBLIC INTERNATIONAL LAW, I must now first treat of the private international law of the empire; that is to say, of the sum total of the rules, principles, and norms in accordance with which are to be decided all cases where a conflict arises between Ottoman private law and the private law of Christendom in the private relations and dealings of Ottoman subjects and foreigners residing in the Turkish Empire one with the other.

After this I shall have to treat of the position of foreigners in the empire as holders of real property, and seeing that under this aspect their position does not differ from that of the native, it will not be amiss to give in this connection a general outline of the constitution or organization of the Ottoman Empire. To do which it will be necessary first to lay before the reader a concise sketch of the fundamental principles

---

* The law says, Article II, Par. 1, that the legal effect of the equality of foreigners with Ottoman subjects in all things that concern their landed property goes as far as the laws or police regulations or municipality regulations which govern or may hereafter govern even the transmission of landed property. And Article IV says: "Foreigners have the privilege to dispose, by donation or by will, of that real estate of which such disposition is permitted by law. As to that real estate of which they may not have disposed * * * by gift or testament, its succession shall be governed in accordance with Ottoman law." Even when there is no will, the real property of the deceased is to go to the heirs who are such, not according to the law of the person, but according to the law of the land.

of law that underlie the whole fabric of the Ottoman state, and then to examine the common law of the country, and the various other authoritative rules that govern and regulate the matter of real estate. In other words, I shall have to treat, first, of private international law in Turkey, and afterward, of Ottoman law, both public, internal, and private internal, and, finally, of the reforms and changes that have taken place in the laws of the empire during the past half century.

PART II.

OTTOMAN PRIVATE INTERNATIONAL LAW.

VI. Of Private International law in the Ottoman Empire.

The cases of conflict between the private international law of Christendom and that of the Ottoman Empire must be very many and much more frequent than in Christian countries; the question must often arise as to which is the law to be applied in the relations and dealings between Ottomans and Franks. The cases of conflict must be much more frequent than in Christendom from the circumstance that, owing to the privilege of jurisdiction accorded to Franks, very many consular tribunals are established upon Ottoman territory, belonging to different nations, and required to apply most dissimilar laws.

Although there is no positive private international law in Christendom, yet it exists as a science, and has reached to such a state of perfection that it is an easy matter for the courts of law to decide, by the light of its rules and data, any question that may arise out of the conflict of various laws. Besides, in every country of Christendom, the courts have established such and so many precedents of jurisprudence that they could be codified, as has been already attempted by some learned men.

But this science of the international law of Christendom cannot be invoked in Turkey. Owing to the differences between the Ottoman public international law and that of Christendom, the private international law of Turkey certainly cannot agree with that of the Christian nations. The difference is, in fact, very wide. It is, therefore, better to leave aside the science of the international law of Christendom and try to build up the theory of Ottoman private international law upon other bases.

To this end it is necessary to take, as a point of departure, some of the principles of international law relating to the encounter and conflict of civil laws, and especially those that determine the legal or judicial status of foreigners residing in Ottoman lands. For if this legal status or position be once determined, it will be possible to proceed with certainty to build up the theory of Ottoman private international law in the most of its consequences and deductions.

Now, in order to find out what is the legal status of foreigners residing in the Levant, and scientifically define the same, they must be divided into two classes; that is to say, into foreigners clothed with a diplomatic, or practically held to be clothed with a diplomatic character, and into foreigners who are simply private individuals. And inasmuch as ambassadors and public ministers accredited to the Sublime Porte do not differ essentially as to their attributes and privileges, from those residing near the powers of Christendom, there is no need of here considering them; the inquiry regarding persons clothed with a practically diplomatic character must of necessity be limited to the consuls of the Christian powers residing within the Ottoman Empire.

Among the agents, functionaries, or officials of their respective governments, the consuls of Christian powers residing in the various places of the Levant constitute a class by itself, which differs essentially from that of consuls residing in Christendom. It can even be said that it differs much as the modern institution of consulates (as it is now-a-days generally constituted) differs from that which existed in the middle ages. (See last year's report.)

It will not be amiss, therefore, to delineate, in brief outline, the position of consulates in the towns of the Levant; for upon the fixing of this point of public international law depend to a great extent the rules or forms that are to serve as a guide in determining the judicial status of foreigners, other than consuls or diplomatic agents, residing in those places.

The consuls of Christian powers appointed to reside at various points within the Ottoman Empire, whether in the provinces or in the tributary States, are or may be considered to be public ministers; they enjoy the prerogatives of ambassadors and receive to this end a Birâ'at from the Sublime Porte in which they are described by the title of Balios-bey* or Consulus-bey. By reason of these prerogatives their houses are an inviolable asylum against the laws and officials of the country; they are exempt from all customs duties, and cannot be arrested or tried by the Moslem authorities. They enjoy all these rights to a far greater degree and more unlimited extent even than ministers who reside near the courts of Christendom. Hence it may be held that these consuls possess all the fundamental rights that, in public law, grow out of the character of public ministers, namely, personal inviolability, exterritoriality, and those honorific rights that form a part of the diplomatic ceremonial. By virtue of these rights, consuls and their families, including all the members of their household, their suite, their dwellings, and their household furniture are considered as wholly outside of the territory of the State; they are not amenable, neither in civil nor in criminal actions, to the local authorities nor courts, whether such actions be brought against them by government or by private individuals.

From the same principles is derived the right of consuls to the freedom of worship, that is to say the right to have a chapel in their houses, and to admit all persons of their religion who may desire to attend divine service therein.

These prerogatives of consuls in the seaports and towns of the Levant are common to public ministers in general. But above and beyond all this consuls have both civil and criminal jurisdiction over their fellow-citizens who cannot, whatever may be the cause or motive, be taken before the local courts. If the treaties alone had to be consulted on this point, criminal jurisdiction would not belong to the consuls of every Christian power in the case of an offense committed by a foreigner against a Moslem; nor would the consuls have civil jurisdiction in suits between foreigners and natives. But constant practice and ancient usage removes all doubt in this respect and has had the effect of quietly establishing the maxim that the native plaintiff shall apply to the forum of the defendant, which, in the case of a foreigner, is his consul, for the hearing of his claim.*

---

* This title was at first given to the ambassador of Vienna at Constantinople, whose name was Bailo, which the Turks corrupted into Balio, adding to it the title of bey. It is now extended to all the European ambassadors accredited to the Sublime Porte.

* Or to the mixed tribunals of commerce. In all civil suits the native plaintiff would apply to the same civil court, and the foreigner would be cited to appear, through his consul; and the consul would be requested by the court to send the foreigner, accompanied by the consular interpreter.

In the exercise of criminal jurisdiction, the consuls of the United States, of Great Britain, and of France have, throughout the Levant, power to try and judge criminal cases. The powers of the consuls of the two first-named countries in all criminal affairs are very extended. Those of the consuls of France to try and judge are limited to minor offenses and misdemeanors; in all heinous offenses the consul makes the preliminary instruction and sends the accused, together with the written evidence, to the court at Aix.

In the exercise of civil jurisdiction they have all the powers and attributes of justices of the peace, of tribunals of first instance, and of tribunals of commerce. They are authorized to try and decide suits, involving no matter what sum or no matter what kind of controversy, save possibly the matter of divorce.*

The same may also be said of the Austrian and Italian consuls. And other nations give even greater latitude of jurisdiction to the consulates-general, for the sentences pronounced in the first instance by the consul are brought up in appeal before the consul-general, sitting with four or more assessors or associates, who form the appeal court.

Finally, the consuls of Christendom residing in the Levant have, beside the powers and duties of police magistrates, a very extended voluntary jurisdiction, whether in the matter of the tutelage of minors, family counsel and advice, authorization to married women, adoptions, or the charge of estates and goods of those dying intestate within their district. They keep the records of marriages, births and deaths; grant attestations of life; authenticate documents issued by the local authorities; perform all the functions of notaries public for the authentication of deeds and instruments of both a public and private nature; they prove last wills and testaments; have almost unlimited powers and duties in all questions regarding the masters and crews of the mercantile marine; and grant, issue, or at least visa, all passports.

From this short enumeration of the powers and duties of consuls in non-Christian countries, the importance and responsibility of their trust becomes clearly apparent. The office they hold comprises within itself as many different attributes and functions as are in Christendom exercised by as many distinct departments, constituted each on a large scale. In reality the prerogatives of Levant consuls, if thoroughly examined, will be found to embrace, beside the attributes of diplomatic ministers, those of notaries for private deeds and instruments, of chiefs of police, of mayors in civil matters, of commercial tribunals, of criminal courts, of justices of peace, and, in general, of all those powers and duties which appertain to the preservation of law and order, of peace, tranquillity, and security in the community or colony of which they are at once the judicial and administrative head. So that a consulate in the Levant is indeed the seat of government, on a small scale, for all those who are subject to the flag of the nation which established it, and the consul himself is at the head of this complex institution.

It is indeed difficult to understand how such an extraordinary combination of powers and duties can be all united in one and the same person. And in places where some of the European colonies have reached a considerable size it becomes exceedingly difficult, not to say impossible, for a single individual, though endowed with unusual energy and ability, to attend thoroughly to the many and weighty matters connected with such varied charges.

---

* Even in Egypt, where mixed tribunals of a very unusual type have been introduced, consuls still have criminal jurisdiction over their fellow-citizens, except in cases where the offense is committed against the magistrates or officers of the reform tribunals during the performance of their duties as such; and they still possess exclusive jurisdiction over all suits, alike civil, commercial, and criminal, where both parties are of their own nationality.]

England has established consular courts, under the presidence of consular judges, as a distinct branch of the service in the Levant. The French Government follows a system whereby its consular service in the East is composed of consuls-general (for diplomatic or so-called political work) of consuls, vice-consuls, chancellors, pupil-consuls, and a sufficient corps of interpreters and clerks for judicial matters and other consular business. Germany, Italy, Austria, and most of the other powers have nearly the same system.

Of all consular institutions in non-Christian countries, those kept up by the United States are probably the worst organized and most undermanned, for a consul or a consul-general (as the case may be) assisted by one paid interpreter, and one salaried clerk (and not always even a clerk or an allowance for one) constitute the whole personnel that has to perform the multifarious official, semi-official, and extra-official labors as well as quasi diplomatic, judicial, and consular functions that are required of him, not only by the law and statutes, but that devolve upon him by custom and are naturally and unavoidably expected of him by his fellow-citizens in countries where the foreigner must have recourse to his consular authority in every matter, however remotely connected it may be with the government or people of the country in which he resides.

Perhaps it is owing to the hitherto limited interest in foreign trade that the United States have not sufficiently appreciated the importance of consulates in non-Christian countries and the need of revising the statutory provisions in this respect.

Having thus determined the judicial status of the consuls of Christendom in the East, as viewed from the standpoint of public international law, we can pass over to the task of defining or determining the legal position or status of Europeans and Americans residing in the Levant who are not clothed with a public character.

If to this end we should wish to have recourse to the principles of the jus internationale of Christendom, we would have to arrive at the following results: That foreigners dwelling within an independent State enjoy the protection of its laws, but are at the same time subject to these laws in so far as they relate to penal matters and affairs of police; are furthermore subject, in many of the dealings of private life, to the civil laws also; and are under the jurisdiction of the tribunals of such State.* For which reasons it is held in public law that under certain aspects and in a certain sense foreigners are considered as subjects of the State in whose territory they are. (Subdite secundum quid.)

Nothing of the kind, however, obtains as to foreigners residing in the the Ottoman Empire; in no sense and under no aspect can they be considered as subditi secundum quid, for they are subject to none of the civil or criminal laws of the State, and are wholly beyond the jurisdiction of the local courts.

How then is their juridical position to be defined under the terms of of the science of international law? Can there be formulated, by the light of the law of nations, a general and scientific principle that will serve as a criterion and starting point for solving the various disputes that must needs come up over the conflict between the territorial laws of the Ottoman dominions where foreigners reside and the laws of their own countries?

---

* Wheaton: Part II, Chap. ii.

If such a scientific definition can be found, a sure basis will have been got from which to unfold the rules of private international law that are to be invoked in countries subject to the Ottoman Porte, whether as to controversies that may arise between foreigners and Ottoman subjects, or between foreigners of different nationalities amongst one another.

Such a definition may be had; and what has been already said paves, in a great measure, the way towards formulating it.

In public international law there is a fiction by virtue of which such and such a one is considered as having never quitted his own country, although he may have transferred his residence elsewhere and established his domicile in another State. This fiction of law is called *extraterritoriality; and public law applies it to diplomatic agents accredited at foreign courts.

The Romans admitted to a certain extent such a fiction of law and qualified it by the expression jus domum revocandi; they held that the legates or deputies of the provinces who betook themselves to Rome should have the right to decline the competence of the tribunals of that city, and get themselves tried by the tribunals of their own country, both in matters civil and criminal.†

Now it is this fiction of law which is to be applied to foreigners of Christendom residing in Turkey in their dealings with the government of the country, inasmuch as they enjoy all the privileges that are comprised in the term extraterritoriality. In order to be convinced of the truth of this statement one need only examine the position that is assigned to foreigners and fixed for them by the treaties stipulated with the Porte and by long-established usage, and compare the same with the prerogatives that go along with extraterritoriality, as it is understood and recognized by public international law.

The fiction of law called extraterritoriality consists, according to Grotius,‡ in this, that, in derogation of the general principle by which every one who dwells within the territory of another [state] is subject to the laws of the same, there are persons who are held to be as though outside of the territory and, as it were, not dwelling therein, although they remain in it, and hence that they are not under the laws of the people among which they live.

And this is true of foreigners from Christendom residing in Turkey. For, although dwelling there, they are nevertheless not subject or amenable to the laws of the land, and are governed by the laws of their home country, so that, viewed juridically, they can be deemed as being quite outside of Ottoman territory. They are entirely independent of the jurisdiction of the local courts, for they can only be brought before the consular authorities, or by and with the knowledge or co-operation of the consular authorities, whose powers, as has been seen above in the enumeration of their attributes, are in this respect immense throughout most non-Christian countries. These extensive prerogatives and attributes show how fully independent foreigners are of the local government and laws, for without such independence these powers could not be exercised over them by the consuls.

---

* Wheaton: Part III, Chap. i, § 14.

† Hefter: Public International Law, § 205.

‡ Grotius, de Jure Belli, et pacis, lib 2, cap. 18, § 4. "Quare omnino ita censeo, placuisse gentibus, ut communis mos, qui quemvis in alieno territorio existentem, ejus loci territorio subjicit, exceptionem pateretur in legatis, ut qui sicut fictione quadam habentur pro personis mittentium, ita etiam fictione simili constituerentur quasi extra-territorium, unde et civili jure populi ad quem vivunt non tenentur." And in note 25: "Haberentur et considerarentur, quasi non habitarent nobiscum, neque in finibus nostri territorii essent."

But it is best to go into a summary enumeration of the prerogatives that are comprehended under the word extraterritoriality, in order to show that they are all accorded, either by treaty or by usage, to Europeans residing in Turkey.

1. One of the consequences of extraterritoriality is this, that those who enjoy this prerogative are not obliged to follow the laws of the land where they are as to the form of deeds and instruments relating to their persons and goods.* Neither are Europeans in Turkey bound to follow these laws; they may, as regards the form of deeds and instruments, comply completely with the laws of their own country.†

2. No action can be brought against a European before the courts of the country; the local authorities can neither proceed to arrest his person nor to sequester his goods; nor may the officers of the law enter into his house; for it is considered outside of the territory, like that of an ambassador. These are so many privileges comprised within the term extraterritoriality and enjoyed by diplomatic agents.‡ In such cases the European can be prosecuted through the consular authorities alone, which possess the powers and attributes required in the premises, and are hence considered as being at once political and judicial authorities.§

3. A European resident in Turkey continues to belong to his own country and has his domicile there, for his domicile is considered to be that of the consul in authority over him; and it is the judge of this domicile who exercises full jurisdiction over him, and through whom his estate or his heritage is administered. All this is also true of public ministers residing abroad.‖

4. The same as with ambassadors,¶ it is only the real property of the European situate in Turkey that is subject to the laws of the land. Hence we see that in the matter of real-estate taxes, Europeans are to pay them the same as Ottoman subjects. But even here there is, by usage, an exception in favor of the European; for throughout Egypt,

---

*Fœlix: Droit International, liv. 2, lib. 2, § 240.

†In the capitulations of the Ottoman Porte with France of 1740, in article 23, the case is contemplated where a Frenchman goes before the local authorities for the execution of contracts. But nowadays this does not happen save in matters of the purchase or sale of real property for which a hodjah or title-deed is needed. This deed of conveyance of immovable property is made out at the Mahkamah (law court) of the country.

‡Fœlix: Droit International, §. 214.

§ Even where a civil complaint is brought by an Ottoman subject against a European before the Madjlis Da'âwi, called also Madjlis Tamyiz-el-Hukkoûk, the summons for the European to appear before it is sent through and by the administrative or civil governor of the place to the consul, who is there in invited to send the defendant to the tribunal, accompanied by the consular dragoman, who sits as a member ad hoc of the tribunal, and signs, or refuses to sign (as he thinks justice requires him to do), the mazbatah or judgment in the case. [See especially the Vizirial decree of 22 Rabi First, 1292, April 29, 1875, concerning assistance of dragoman, given on page 98 of part 5, or appendix to Ottoman legislation, printed at Constantinople, office of Journal Thraki, 1878.] And where the affair is serious or important, the consul can himself insist on being present and taking part at the trial. Moreover the execution of the sentence, if it be rendered against the foreigner, belongs to the consular authority.

According to the French capitulation of 1740, article 65, in case of an offense committed by a Frenchman against an Ottoman subject, the authorities of the country could take cognizance thereof and try him; but usage, and the provisions of the capitulation with the United States and others has completely done away with this method, and nowadays both the prosecution and the sentence must issue from the French authorities. In correctional matters the consul is competent; for more heinous offenses the consul, like a police magistrate, or "juge d'instruction," takes down all the evidence and sends both the accused and the papers of the case to the court at Aix for judgment.

‖Wheaton: Part III, chap. i, § 14; and Fœlix: Droit International, § 214.

¶Fœlix: op. cit., § 216.

at least, if not also in some other parts of the empire, they pay no tax at all upon their houses or city property, but only that upon agricultural lands.*

5. Even as the European is exempt from the civil jurisdiction and laws, local or territorial, of the Ottoman Empire, he is likewise exempt from all penal and criminal laws and jurisdiction. Although the greater part of the capitulations of the Sublime Porte with European powers uphold the subjection of the European to the local, penal, and criminal laws and jurisdiction in cases of offenses committed against an Ottoman subject, still it has been hitherto settled by usage, and also clearly determined by some of the capitulations, that no European can be arraigned, prosecuted, tried, or judged, and not even arrested (except in flagrante delicto, and then, too, the offender is to be, without delay, handed over to his respective consular authority) by the law officers of the land. When an offense is committed by a European, not only against another European, but also against an Ottoman subject, the offender is to be tried and punished by the laws of his own country.†

These exemptions are identical with those enjoyed by a public minister in virtue of the principle of extraterritoriality.‡

6. Lastly, the European, although not amenable to the jurisdiction of the local courts, is nevertheless bound to observe the police regulations in force throughout the country calculated for the maintenance of order and public security. But if he does render himself guilty of transgressing them, it is his consul who shall punish him accordingly. A public minister, too, is bound to respect such police regulations, even though he is exempt from any possible repression at the hands of the local authorities.§

As a consequence, and, at the same time, as a confirmation of what has been thus far set forth, it may be remarked that the following rules which apply to Europeans residing in Turkey apply as well to ambassadors, and are valid as towards both the former and the latter:‖

1. That, although they are not subject to the tribunals of the land, still they cannot decline the jurisdiction of the same, after having once had recourse thereto as plaintiffs, if the opposite party, being condemned in the first instance, appeals to the higher court, and intimates such appeal to the European.

2. The same is to be said when an action has been brought by a European before a local court and the defendant, as an offset thereto, raises a counter claim against the plaintiff before the same court.

3. The same, it would seem, ought to be said when a European, in a

---

*This has been the usage in Egypt for many years. The arguments put forward in its favor are that Europeans are bound to pay no arbitrary tax whatever; and so long as there is no decree or law regularly promulgated by the government (and acquiesced in by the foreign consular authorities) which clearly defines what the taxes to be collected shall be, the European holding city property regards all attempts to collect taxes as being arbitrary exactions by the officials, and hence not obligatory. It is a principle of Moslem law, not always observed nowadays by Moslem governments, that the Moslem citizen shall pay no tax upon the house he dwells in, but only on his land and leased houses.

†See Egyptian Règlement Général concernant la Police des étrangers of 20 Rabi First 1274=8 November, 1857, paragraph 4 of preamble, and arts. 47 to 55. Article 52 reads thus:

"The trial and punishment of crimes and offenses imputed to a foreigner * * * shall, at the request of the police director, be pursued before the consular court."

‡De Martens: "Guide diplomatique," chap. 5, § 23.

§ Ibid, chap. 5, § 30.

‖Fœlix: Droit International, § 217.

suit brought before the local court, is the loser and is condemned to pay the costs of the same. In such a case it would seem that, like ambassadors, he could not decline the jurisdiction of the tribunal that rendered the judgment and before which the action for costs should be brought. Still it is held by some that in Turkey the privilege is even more extended; and that, besides that, the demand for costs ought always to be notified through the consulate to which the foreigner belongs. The collection of the costs themselves cannot be executory without a new decree from the consulate, which alone can proceed to enforce the order for collection.

Before terminating this exposition of the rules concerning the relations of Europeans with the Ottoman authorities, which, it is believed, are clearly enunciated by saying that they are all comprised in the word extraterritoriality, it is not out of place to observe that if Europeans enjoy such privilege in Turkey, this comes to pass for reasons very different from those on account of which ambassadors enjoy it. The latter have this privilege, not so much out of regard for the sovereign they represent, and who is, through and by them, considered as resident in the country whereto they are accredited, but rather in order to be able to exercise their functions with freedom and independence.* On the contrary, Europeans residing in Turkey enjoy the privilege of extraterritoriality, not so much out of respect for the usages and privileges that the Venetians, Genoese, and other European people of yore enjoyed in the Levant,† but rathermore because the state of civilization of Moslem countries is an obstacle in the way of the security of Europeans, and does not furnish sufficient guaranties for guarding and protecting their rights, notwithstanding the best intentions of the rulers. The absence, moreover, of a well-ordered legislation, the great difficulty of acquiring a knowledge of that which exists, the lack of regularly constituted tribunals in which are to be found full guaranties for a good administration of justice, and, lastly, the lack of the sense of justice and respect for the rights of others which is such a prominent characteristic of all Eastern people, render it as yet impossible to apply, in the Levant, the principle of territorial laws towards strangers. It is owing to all these circumstances combined, and in the interests of commerce, that the governments of Christendom have, in their treaties with the Ottoman Porte, secured the independence of their subjects from the local authorities and laws. It is in view of the same considerations that the consuls residing in these regions have obtained that the privileges granted by the treaties should receive a still greater extension, which has now become sanctioned by long-standing and undenounced usage.‡

The difference in the reasons or causes that have originated the right of extraterritoriality of diplomatic representatives from those that have caused it to be established for Europeans residing in Turkey might give rise, in the minds of some, to doubts as to whether there might not also be a difference in the nature and importance of the privilege accorded to the former and to the latter. This is, however, not true; for, although the reasons are different, nevertheless the aim and object is the same in both cases, namely, to afford full security to him who enjoys it. On the other hand, if extraterritoriality signifies in the juridical sense that fiction of law whereby one is held to be outside of the territory in which he resides so far as relates to the civil and criminal laws of the same, such a fiction could not apply better than to Europeans residing in Turkey, who

---

* De Martens: Droit de Gens, § 215, and note thereto, in the edition of 1858.
† Borel: chap. 3, page 20.
‡ Féraud-Giraud: De la jurisdiction Française dans les Échelles, passim.

neither have, nor can have, any tie or relationship of dependence with the laws and government of the land; and this, too, in a more unlimited manner even than diplomatic agents.

In no other way can the position of a European residing in the Levant, in his relations towards the government of the country, be qualified than by recourse to the fiction of extraterritoriality in the widest sense that can be juridically attributed to the term. Having once firmly laid down this principle, we have a fixed point of departure for solving all other doubts and difficulties, which we shall now proceed to do.

The attempt might, perhaps, be made to explain the position thus occupied by Europeans by having recourse to the system of leges personales that existed in the Middle Ages throughout Europe, and especially in Italy, under which each one lived under the law of the nation of his origin, although he was subject to the rules of the land wherein he was domiciled side by side with other people who lived under other and different laws.* That system lasted until the statutes of the cities had become territorial, and shut out all possibility of personal laws. In support of this might be added the respect that the Turks have always shown, in countries conquered by them, for the laws of the vanquished; by reason whereof, we see that the non-Moslems, such as Greeks, Armenians, Copts, and Israelites, are left to a great extent under the civil or politico-religious jurisdiction of their spiritual chiefs.†

But all doubt on this subject disappears when one reflects that the system of personal laws presupposed subjection to the supreme ruler of the territory, and, moreover, did not exclude there being laws of a generally binding character, or in other words, territorial laws.‡ On the contrary, for Europeans residing in the Levant, there is no relationship or tie of subjection towards the sovereign of the territory, and no law emanating from the latter can in any way bind the former.

Even the laws relating to customs or duties that are published in Turkey have in reality no obligatory force for Europeans. If the latter pay custom-house duties on the same footing as Ottoman subjects, this is done by reason of the treaties which determine and fix the exact rate or amount of duty on goods imported and exported.§

Nor can any alteration be made in these treaties by the sovereign of the land. Thus in the customs laws also is found a confirmation of the principle of the extraterritoriality of Europeans, whereas, in countries where this principle is not admitted as to foreigners, the duties of custom depend exclusively upon the home laws and do not as a rule form the object of treaties; each government being free to place a duty on all goods coming into or going out of its territory in the manner it deems best; and even when treaties are stipulated on this subject they do not so bind the contracting governments as that they cannot at will, and after observing the requirements and formalities of diplomatic comity, withdraw from them.

---

* Savigny: Storia del diritto romano nel medio Evo. Cap. 3, § 34 et seq.

† Hatt Humayûn of 1856: "Special civil suits, such as those of inheritance, and others of this kind, between subjects belonging to the same Christian or non-Moslem rite, may, at their request, be sent before the councils of the patriarchs and communities."

It is to be regretted that the politico-ecclesiastical law of the non-Moslem communities of the Ottoman Empire is not contained in the valuable collection called "Legislation Ottomane." See, however, page 56 of part two (Droit Public Intérieur), Constantinople, 1874.

‡ Savigny, op. cit., § 17.

§ As for inland duties no fixed rate has been established by the treaties; but they stipulate that the foreigner is to be treated on the same footing as the most favored class of subjects. (Art. III of the treaty of 1862 with the United States.) Hence, even for internal duties, it is the treaties that impose the obligation to pay, and not the principle of the territoriality of the law.

This could not be done by the Ottoman Government, which has absolutely, in the most unconditional manner, bound itself towards all the governments of Christendom not to increase the customs duties.*

Nor does the law granting to foreigners the right of holding real estate interfere with the immunities they enjoy, which are specified by the treaties, and which continue to protect the person and the movable property even of those foreigners who become owners of real estate. It places them upon terms of equality with the territorial subject only in such things as concern their landed property. And here, too, the privilege of extraterritoriality enjoyed by a public minister goes no further. His personal effects or the movables belonging to him, within the territory of the state where he resides, are exempt from the local jurisdiction; so also is his dwelling house, but any other real property or immovables of which he is possessed, within foreign territory, is subject to its laws and jurisdiction.† So also in the matter of taxation, the hotel in which the minister resides, in common with the other real property of the country, is subject to taxation, whether it belongs to him or to his government.‡ If the payment of the tax on the residence or other real estate of a diplomatic agent does not interfere with his privilege of extraterritoriality, in like manner the obligation of the foreigner residing in Turkey, to pay the same on his real property, as laid down and defined by the law and protocol on the subject, in no manner curtails his independence of the territorial laws in all matters respecting his personal status and movable goods.

The position therefore that necessity, the treaties, and a constant practice have created for Europeans residing in Turkey is that of extraterritoriality. Unlike the international public law of Christendom, in which this privilege is an exception established in behalf of a determinate class of individuals, in Ottoman public international law, extraterritoriality constitutes the rule towards Europeans. Herein is seen the immense difference between these two public international laws and how they are founded upon principles essentially different. The one draws the conclusion, from the principle of the independence and autonomy of the state, that foreigners are to be in some respects subjects of the state to which they betake themselves; the other admits that, notwithstanding this principle of independence and autonomy, foreigners can remain independent of the laws of the state, although dwelling within its territory.

From this principle of the extraterritoriality of Europeans in Turkey must necessarily be deduced all the legal relations of Europeans, whether between themselves or with the natives. For it is under this double aspect that the conflict of private laws can manifest itself, that is to say, when the suit is between Europeans belonging to different nationalities, and they come before a consular tribunal, it must be decided first of all which is the law that ought to be applied, whether that of the one or that of the other of the two contending parties, and when the question is between a European and a native and is pending either before the consular or before the local court, it ought also to be known, first of all, whether the law of the land or whether that of the nation to which the European belongs merits application.

For it is not to be believed that the maxim, which it has been but too often the fashion to invoke in Levant consulates, can be established as a general axiom—to wit, that each judge is to apply in cases of collision the

---

* See particularly Art. V of treaty of 1862.
† Wheaton, part III, chap. I, § 17.
‡ Wheaton, as above. § 18.

laws of his own country—and from which it follows that all controversies that are brought before a consular tribunal must be solved within the terms of those laws that have force with it. This maxim is true when it is a matter of the ordinatoria litis, that is to say a question as to the laws of procedure which point out the mode in which one's own rights are to be upheld and made valid before the court;* and even in the application of this maxim not a few difficulties arise when the question becomes one of determining with precision what relations are comprehended under the name of laws of procedure. But when the matter turns upon a question of the decisoria litis, that is to say, when it has to deal with the substance of juridical relations, this maxim is most false, and could not be invoked as a criterion for deciding the various cases of collision or conflict of laws. Indeed whenever a tribunal has to try a controversy between one of its own nationality and a stranger, then that law ought to be applied under the influence of which came into being that relationship of law and right which forms the subject of the controversy in hand; its own laws cannot in such a case be so applied by it. Otherwise one would be brought to the greatest absurdities, and all idea would be destroyed of a private international law, which is based on the very presupposition that foreign laws ought often to be applied by the judge. Let us suppose the case of an estate of a deceased person in a state. The subject of another state, believing himself to be the heir, makes himself master thereof and enjoys it. The true heir, who belongs to a third state, wishes to reclaim it. He is of necessity constrained to apply to the forum of the defendant, and hence he must, if the latter dwells in the Levant, betake himself to the consular court having authority over him. In such hypotheses there are three laws in conflict—that of the place where the estate is, that of the plaintiff, and that of the defendant. According to the above mentioned maxim the law of the defendant should be followed for deciding who is the true heir to this estate. Now a greater absurdity cannot be imagined, for all publicists hold that it is the law of the place where the estate is situate which ought to be invoked; and hence the consular tribunal to which recourse is had by the real heir should apply it, though it be not its law. Many other similar cases could be cited in support of this view. But this can be dispensed with by referring to the learned refutation of this maxim contained in Schreffer's work on private international law, Chap. 1, § 24.

For deciding what law is the one to be invoked in suits brought before consuls in the Levant or before the local courts and lying between parties of different nationality, when once the principle of the extraterritoriality of Europeans residing in Turkey is taken as a starting point, it can be laid down as a fundamental canon and as one which permits of recurrence to the dictate of the science of international law, inasmuch as it brings the rules concerning the judicial condition of foreigners in Turkey within the sphere of this science by placing their condition on an equality with a position that is already admitted and recognized in European international law, it can be laid down as a fundemental canon, namely:

That all Europeans residing in Turkey ought to be considered in the relations of private international law as outside of Ottoman territory, and as still domiciled in the territory of their fatherland. Hence where there shall be a conflict of private laws between Europeans those rules should be followed that are by common international law established for cases in which individuals, between whom the suit lies, belong to different states, and each has his domicile in the territory of his own country. And when the conflict of private laws shall arise upon the relation of law and right between Europeans and natives, whatever be the tribunal before which they may be found, recurrence ought likewise to be had to the principles of the same common international law which are applicable to the case of two foreigners that have their domicile in their respective fatherlands.

---

Rocco: Diritto Civile Internationale.* Part 3, Cap. 12.

If this canon be admitted as an undoubted principle of the public international law existing between the nations of Christendom and the Porte, there can be deduced from it the following rules of private international law which elevate it to the rank of a theory of private Ottoman international law.

In enunciating these rules I shall follow the divisions of European public international law as adopted by this science, and which correspond with all the relations of law and right that foreigners can have in the state in which they reside.

Laws exercise their influence over mankind under three aspects—as to their persons, as to their goods, and as to their acts.

Which laws shall it be that shall govern Europeans residing in Turkey under these three relations or aspects?

The laws concerning persons are those that determine the status or judicial character; whereas Europeans are considered as outside the Ottoman Empire; so, too, will their judicial character depend exclusively upon the laws of their fatherland. And this general principle is admitted also by European international law, but with restrictions as to the judicial character of special acts. It can, however, receive no restrictions in Ottoman countries, and must be held to be absolute and unlimited.

The laws concerning things have regard either to movable or immovable goods. As to movable goods, which are considered as an accessory of the person, they ought of necessity to follow the laws of the latter, and can hence never come under the laws of the Ottoman Empire. As for immovable goods, however, one must proceed with discrimination, because, when the laws that concern them have no connection with the personal capacity or status of the owner, then the law to be applied ought to be that of the territory wherein they are situate, and therefore the Ottoman law. In every other respect or connection, that is to say, when the laws that concern them take into consideration the personality of the owner, then the laws to be applied should be those of his nation. Therefore, as regards things also, there exists most important differences between European international law and that applicable within Ottoman states.

As to the deeds or acts of a man, the laws contemplate those that are lawful and those that are unlawful. With respect to this class of laws, the differences between European law and that which is in force throughout the Ottoman Empire are still graver. As for the outward form of lawful deeds or acts—such would be contracts, wills, &c.—the general rule of European jurisprudence is that it depends entirely upon the law of the country in which they are brought into being, and upon that law also depends most often their very substance or internal solemnity. Likewise, unlawful deeds or acts are under the law of the place where they have been committed. On the contrary, it is the opposite rule that ought to prevail in Ottoman countries on account of the principle of extraterritoriality, by virtue whereof all lawful deeds or acts, whether as to their outward or their inward form, depend upon the personal laws of those that bring them into being; and likewise, unlawful deeds or acts never do depend upon the territorial laws of the place where they have been committed. So that the maxim, locus regit actum, may be said not to exist at all in Ottoman countries as regards foreigners residing therein.

Finally, as to procedure, the maxim that the plaintiff shall seek the forum of the defendant—actor sequitur forum rei—ought to be observed rigorously and without any possible exception.

These are the fundamental rules of Ottoman private international law, from which can be readily deduced all the principles that are to be invoked in cases of conflict of laws within the Turkish Empire. They at least suffice to show that a theory of Ottoman private international law also can be established, when account is taken of the data furnished by public external law and when the dictates of the science of law in general are followed.

In the foregoing pages, which treat of Ottoman private international law, the views of Dr. Gatteschi, as set forth in the learned introduction to his manual of public and private Ottoman law, have been closely followed by the writer of this report, who has done no more than strive to render them faithfully into the English language.

That learned doctor in those pages brings his great erudition and admirable clearness and grace of diction, together with his strong powers of close reasoning, to bear wholly in favor of the extraterritorial privileges of foreigners within the Ottoman Empire, thus giving one side only of the question, but so eloquently pleaded as to lead the ordinary thinker on these subjects to conclude, erroneously, that the doctrine of the extraterritoriality of foreigners, in its applicability to their dealings and relations both with the governments and with the people of Ottoman lands, knows no limits, but is capable of extension in its extremest consequences over every class of controversy or suit, and of hence influencing the legal validity or effect of all transactions, not only as to their form, but also as to their substance; and whereas the chief aim and merit of this report ought to be to furnish that which is of practical utility and undoubted correctness for the enlightenment of consuls of the United States in the Levant, in the exercise of their complex and responsible functions of judge-consuls, it behooves the present writer (although thereby exposing himself to the reproach of lengthiness) to go on and put the reader in possession of material whereby he will be enabled to judge for himself how far, and only how far, this principle or doctrine of extraterritoriality, as applied to foreigners residing in Turkey, will hold good or has been sustained, when examined and tested authoritatively by courts of law. Nor can this object be better accomplished than by taking specially important or test cases, in which the decision has turned more or less on the interpretation of the treaty or capitulation rights of foreigners in the Ottoman Empire.

In the choice of cases that I have made to this end, three have been taken from suits tried in the mixed tribunals of reform in Egypt, and one from those in the British consular court at Alexandria. For the sake of brevity, these four causes can be called, respectively, the Carpi case, the Sursock case, the Adib case, and the Aitken case.

As, however, it is to be supposed that outside of Egypt few persons are acquainted with the history and condition of the mixed tribunals of reform, it will be necessary to set before the reader, but very briefly, the main features of these comparatively new and tentative judicial institutions, in order that he may be able to follow the arguments in the cases that have been chosen. I do not propose to enter here into a full history of the causes or negotiations that led to their final formation.

These courts are called mixed tribunals or courts of mixed jurisdiction, because they have been instituted in order to try and decide in mixed suits—that is to say, broadly, in suits where the defendant is not of the same nationality as the plaintiff—in other words, where the suit lies between a foreigner and a local subject, or between two foreigners not of the same nationality. Suits between natives do not come within the competence of these, but within that of the native tribunals, and suits between foreigners of the same nationality are still within the competence of the consular courts.

They can take cognizance, speaking broadly, of mixed suits that are either civil or commercial in their nature. Criminal prosecutions against native offenders belong to the native local courts; and those against foreigners accused of offenses or crimes still remain within the competence of the respective consular authority.

They have jurisdiction over a certain kind of offense or crime, namely, those committed against any of their magistrates or officers when exercising the functions and duties of office, such as contempt of court or forcible opposition to the executions of their decisions.

Cases affecting the rights of persons, such as inheritance, marriage, divorce, alimony, tutelage of minors, and the like, known as questions belonging to the status personalis of the parties, are likewise beyond the competence of the mixed tribunals in Egypt.

They also take cognizance of all actions concerning real estate (toutes les actions réeles immobiliéres) between all persons, even when appertaining to the same nationality. By all actions concerning real estate one is to understand actions as to titles and liens on real property; and, further, the words "between all persons, even when appertaining to the same nationality," have been held, by the Alexandria court of appeals, to mean between all persons, even when appertaining to the same foreign nationality, and not to apply to actions concerning titles and liens on real estate when both parties are natives. This distinction and interpretation is important. These courts were instituted in 1874, but did not actually commence to functionate till between the latter part of the year 1875 and the beginning of 1876. They are composed of judges of various nationalities—Egyptian, English, French, Italian, Austrian, German, Greek, Dutch, and Belgian subjects, as well as citizens of the United States, sit on their benches. Every judgment must be rendered by at least five judges, of whom three are foreigners and two natives.

Long and weary negotiations between the various powers of Christendom on the one side, and the Ottoman Porte and the Egyptian Government on the other part, preceded their final adoption, for they superseded to a very great extent the consular courts, and somewhat modified the application of the principle of extraterritoriality of foreigners as established by usage and the capitulations. Most of the powers entered in this respect into special conventions with the Egyptian Government, which define clearly the nature and extent of the jurisdiction conferred on the mixed tribunals in Egypt. The United States did not enter into any such convention; an act of Congress was passed which authorized the President to accept, for citizens of the United States, the jurisdiction of certain tribunals in Turkey and Egypt whenever he should, in his judgment, consider that such tribunals did afford them the same impartial justice they enjoyed under the ministerial and consular courts established by virtue of the capitulations; and to suspend the operation of the act of Congress conferring judicial powers and functions on ministers and consuls of the United States within the Ottoman dominions. (President's proclamation of March 27, 1876.)

The law which these tribunals apply, in the exercise of their jurisdiction, is the codes* that were presented by Egypt to the powers, and in the case of the silence, insufficiency, and obscurity of the law, the judges are to follow the principles of natural right and the rules of equity.

The institution and composition, the competence, the internal organization, and the mode of execution of the sentences of these tribunals, as well as their jurisdiction in matters civil, commercial, and penal, are all laid down in the so-called "Réglement d'organisation judiciaire pour les Procès mixtes en Egypt" of 1874, and it is to this weighty act that reference will be often made in the following pages.

I will here give also an English translation of those articles of the Réglement d'organisation judiciaire which are referred to in the cases that I have chosen, or which are essential to the reader's full comprehension of the subject.

Article 2, paragraph 4:

In commercial affairs the tribunal [of five judges] will associate with itself two merchants, one a native, and one a foreigner, having the right to vote, and chosen by election.

Article 5:

The appointment and choice of the judges shall belong to the Egyptian Government; but in order that it be itself satisfied as to the guarantees to be furnished by the persons it shall choose, it will apply, semi-officially [offiieusement], to the ministers of justice in foreign lands, and will engage no other persons than those furnished with the consent and authorization of their government.

Article 9:

These tribunals alone shall take cognizance of suits, in matters civil and commercial between natives and foreigners, and between foreigners of different nationality, barring such suits as belong to the status personalis. They shall also take cognizance of all actions [in rem] as to real estate, whether as to titles or liens thereon, between all persons, even when appertaining to the same [foreign] nationality.—(See above, page 68.)

Article 10:

The [Egyptian] Government, the administrations [i. e. departments, bureaus, and boards], the Daïrahs [estates] of His Highness the Khedive, and of the members of his family shall be amenable before these tribunals in suits with foreigners.

Article 11:

The tribunals, without having the power to decide in questions concerning the real property of the public domain, or to interpret or hinder the execution of an administration measure, shall have the power to try, in the cases that are provided for by the civil code, causes where an acquired right of a foreigner has been infringed upon by an act of administration.

Article 12:

The suits of foreigners against a pious [benevolent, religious] establishment, for claiming [revendication] real estate possessed by such establishment, are not to be submitted to these tribunals; but the same shall be competent for deciding in claims brought forward upon the question of legal possession, whosoever be the plaintiff or the defendant.

Article 13:

The sole fact of the granting a mortgage in favor of a foreigner on real estate, whosoever be the possessor, owner, and holder thereof, shall render these tribunals competent to decide as to the validity of the mortgage and as to the consequences thereof, even to the forced sale [foreclosure] of such real estate, as well as to the distribution of the price of the same.

---

*These codes, which are taken for the most part from those of France, were elaborated expressly for the mixed tribunals in Egypt.

Article 16:

The judicial languages used before the tribunals for pleading and for the drawing up of deeds, instruments, and judgments shall be the language of the land [Arabic], Italian, and French. *

Article 18:

The execution of judgments shall be effected without any administrative action, whether consular or other than consular, and upon the order of the tribunal. It shall be carried out by the ushers [i. e. sheriff's constables] of the tribunal, with the help of the local authorities, if this help becomes necessary, but always without any administrative interference.

Still, the officer of justice intrusted by the tribunal with the execution of the judgment, is bound to notify the consulates of the day and hour of the execution, and this on pain of nullity and of damages as against himself. The consul thus notified has the right to proceed with the execution,† but in case of his absence the same shall be notwithstanding proceeded with.

Concerning the immovability of the magistrates, their promotion, discipline, &c., the Réglement d'Organisation Judiciaire says:

ART. 19. The magistrates who compose the court of appeals and tribunals (of first instance) shall be immovable. This immovableness shall not subsist save during the five year period. It shall not be finally admitted until after the trial period. ‡

Article 20:

The promotion of the magistrates and their transfer from one tribunal to another shall not take place save with their consent and upon the vote of the court of appeals, which shall take the opinion of the tribunals interested.

Article 21:

The functions of the magistrates, recording clerks, clerks of the recording clerks, interpreters, and sheriffs, shall be incompatible with every other salaried function or functions and with the profession of merchant.

Article 22:

The magistrates shall not be the recipients, from the Egyptian administration, of honorific or material distinctions.

Article 23:

All judges of the same category shall receive the same compensation. The acceptance of a remuneration other than this compensation, of an increase of compensation, of gifts of value or of other material advantages, carries with it for the judge the cessation of employment and of salary, without any right to an indemnity.

Article 24 concerns discipline.

---

* These languages necessitate the employment of a large force of interpreters and clerks.

†As a matter of fact this right is but seldom exercised by the consuls, which shows that the mixed tribunals command the respect and confidence of those whose duty it is to watch over the rights of foreigners.

‡ See, however, the fifth protocol, evening session, January 11, 1881, of the international judiciary commission which met at Cairo, pages 11 to 17 thereof, wherein that body proposed that article 19 be altered so as to read thus:

"ART. 19. The choice and appointment to office of the councillors (of the appeal court) and judges (of tribunals of the first instance) shall appertain to the Egyptian Government. The government, in order to be itself assured of the guarantees that the magistrates shall afford, shall semi-officially apply to the ministers of justice abroad, and shall engage only such persons as are furnished with the acquiescence of their government.

"ART. 20. The foreign magistrates called to form a part of the court and tribunals must be chosen from among the magistrates belonging to or having belonged to the magistracy, or from among lawyers practicing law in their own country; they must know, at least, one of the three judiciary languages. The councilors (of the appeal court) and judges (of tribunals of first instance) in function at the expiration of the first period, both foreigners and natives, who shall have resigned, shall be retained in office, and shall be immovable."

(See the remarks of the Austrian delegate, Baron de Schaeffer, and those of the American delegate, E. E. Farman, esq., on pp. 11 to 17, loc. cit. ut supra.)

Article 25:

Every complaint presented to the government by a member of the consular body against the judges for matters disciplinary must be referred to the court [of appeals], which shall be bound to try the affair.

Article 26 says:

A "Parquet" shall be instituted, at the head of which shall be a procur general [attorney for the state]. * * *

Article 34:

The new tribunals, in the exercise of their jurisdiction in matters civil and commercial, and within the bounds of that jurisdiction that has been allowed to them in matters penal, shall apply the codes presented by Egypt to the powers, and in case of the silence, the insufficiency, and the obscurity of the law, the judges shall follow the principles of natural right and the rules of equity.

Article 36 says:

The government shall likewise publish the laws that relate to the status personalis of natives. * * *

Article 40:

The new laws of the new judiciary organization shall have no retroactive effect.

In matters penal the competence of these tribunals is, broadly, as follows:

Prosecutions for simple police transgressions, and, moreover, accusations brought against the authors and accomplices of crimes and offenses committed directly against the magistrates, jurors, and officers of the tribunal or court during the exercise or on the occasion of the exercise of their functions, shall be submitted to the jurisdiction of the Egyptian (mixed) tribunals. * * * The consul of the accused shall be without delay notified of every prosecution for crime or offense begun against a subject of his nationality.

Finally, these tribunals having been instituted on an entirely novel system for rendering justice in mixed cases, they were adopted, as a trial or experiment, for five years, the so-called quinquennial period; and this period has been, by and with the consent of the powers interested, prolonged for still another year, namely, up to February, 1882. They will, in all likelihood, be again continued until February, 1883, and so on, from year to year, as long as they work satisfactorily.

To return, then, after these explanations, to the four decisions or cases already indicated above:

1. CARPI CASE.

The facts in this suit are sufficiently given in the decision itself of the Alexandria appeal court, so that they need not be recounted by me. It is, however, necessary to explain that the Daïrah Saniah, as constituted at the time of the rendering of this decision, was that bureau or board which controlled and administered for the Khedive of Egypt a large estate belonging to him, consisting of about 530,000 acres of land, with certain sugar factories thereon.

CARPI versus DAÏRAH SANIAH.

Decision of the court of appeals of the mixed tribunals in Egypt.

[Translated from the original Italian.]

SUMMARY.

According to the laws that are applicable by the courts of mixed jurisdiction in Egypt, the government cannot, neither by means of legislative measures, nor by means of administrative measures, prejudice rights of a private nature, and least of all the consequences that flow from the creation and acceptation of commercial effects (instruments).

The COURT—

Has found as a matter of fact, that Cesar Carpi, Italian subject, did cite before the tribunal of first instance in Alexandria, the same sitting as a tribunal of commerce, the Khedival D arah Saniah in the person of its director, his excellency Mazlûm Pasha, domiciled in this city, first, in order to be condemned to the payment of the sum of £549 and 15 shillings sterling, the amount of two letters of exchange drawn to the order of said Carpi, by the Daïrah, upon the Egyptian ministry of finance, and by the latter accepted, and protested on the 11th day of April for default of payment; second, in order to hear granted unto the plaintiff a preservatory sequester upon all the goods of the debtor, which sequester was refused by the judge on duty,* by an order dated the 12th of April last past:

Has found, that the tribunal aforesaid, upholding the order of the 12th of April just referred to, rejected all the other heads of the plaintiff's suit and condemned him in the costs, accepting the objection of incompetence that had been put forward by the Daïrah defendant upon the plea that it, the Daïrah, did not exercise commerce, and therefore could not be cited by the tribunal of commerce for the payment of a bill of exchange, which bill the law now in force does not stamp with the character of a commercial act, unless it be subscribed by a person exercising commerce:

Has found that, upon the appeal interposed by the plaintiff, Carpi, and intended to follow up his suit for the condemnation of the Daïrah Saniah to the payment of the above-mentioned sum and for the preservatory sequester refused to him by the judge on duty by an order confirmed by the tribunal, the Daïrah again puts forward the objection of incompetence accepted by the judges of first instance, and puts forward again, in support thereof, the further objection of the decree of April 6, 1876, issued upon the decision of the council of ministers by His Highness the Khedive, which decree having prorogued for 3 months the falling due of the bonds and assignations which fell due in the months of April and May, 1876, had suspended at the same time the obligation, both of the drawer as well as of the acceptor of the letters of exchange in question, to satisfy them before the time of the prorogued falling due.

Considering in point of law, as to the objection of incompetence, accepted by the judges of first instance, that there is no doubt, as a maxim, that the laws of procedure and of competence are applicable also to suits arising out of and founded upon obligations anterior to the date of publication of such laws; because, independently of the jurisprudence of the tribunals and of the concurrent opinion of the most trustworthy jurisconsults, whose authority it is, however, superfluous to invoke, this maxim is clearly and distinctly set forth by article 2* of the new Egyptian civil code, which proclaims it without reserve at the same time that it, on the other hand, proclaims the non-retroactivity of such laws as stand outside of the limits fixed by the rules of competence and procedure;

Considering, however, that the value of the objection depends ex-

---

* i. e., in chambers.

* Article 2 says: "These laws shall have no retroactive effect. The laws of procedure and of competence, however, shall be applicable to the settlement of contests growing out of obligations incurred prior to the date hereabove" (namely, one month after the installment of the new tribunal, as laid down in article 1).

clusively upon the solution of the question whether the definition of an act as an act of commerce belongs really to the sphere of the laws of competence or procedure; because, in case that it does, the competence of the civil tribunals would be warranted to take cognizance of suits relating to acts to which the new laws deny a commercial character, and in case it does not, the competence of the commercial tribunals would then be warranted to take such cognizance, inasmuch as the anterior laws, under the sway of which the letters of exchange were subscribed, considered the same to be commercial acts without regard to the persons that might have signed them;

Considering, further, that the new laws, in reproducing, in article 1 of the Egyptian code of commerce, the rule, already sanctioned by the Ottoman code of commerce, that tribunals of commerce shall take cognizance, 1st, of suits relating to contracts and transactions between merchants, dealers, and bankers; 2d, of suits relative to acts of commerce done by any person soever, have not made any innovation as to jurisdiction and have thus confirmed the logical and natural maxim accepted by the preceding legislation whereby the competence of the tribunals of commerce is to be founded either upon the status of the person, in the sense that he who is clothed with the commercial character, in distinction from other private persons, is presumed to be bound by the sole fact of his commerce, or else upon the nature of the act, which act furnishes the ground for the suit and establishes the other presumption that the contracting party had wished, independently of his personal character, to subject himself both to the rigor of the law merchant as well as to the competence of the commercial tribunals;

Considering that, if the Egyptian code of commerce, in article 2—after having fixed the rules of competence of the tribunals—provides that the law consider as being a commercial act those acts that are indicated in said article, yet said code certainly did not contemplate nor could contemplate any acts other than those that should be made under the sway of the new law; that it no more contemplated nor could contemplate the alteration of an already acquired character, the alteration, namely, of the juridicial worth already inherent in an act done and consummated in the past, in an act, namely, which the former law, out of consideration for the above-named presumption, had already stamped with the character of a commercial act, and which as such must, both by the new laws (article 1, Egyptian commercial code*), as well as by the old ones, be subjected to the jurisdiction of the tribunals of commerce;

Considering that the determination of the inward worth, of the virtuality namely, of an act which founds an obligation, and of the consequences that arise out of it, belongs to the science of material law, to the complex of the laws decisoriæ litium, and not to the patrimony of formal law, whether of procedure or competence, that is to say, not to the complex of the laws ordinatoriæ litium;

Considering that it all the more plainly belongs to non-retroactive material law and not to the (retroactive) norms of competence to point out wherein consists the inward worth, commercial or non-commercial, of an act; seeing that there inheres in an act of commerce, not only the privilege of a more expeditious proceeding and of a special class of jurisdiction, but, also, according to various legislations, a complex of other guaranties and attributes belonging incontestably to the domain of material law, such as the more kindly measure of adjustment of interest by convention or usage, the solidarity of obligation of the parties interested, special precautions to be observed for the preservation of rights growing out of the act, greater latitude in the choice of proofs, &c., all of them guaranties and attributes which, by a harmonious and indissoluble tie, characterize the act of commerce, and which would otherwise have to be denied in logical consistency to an act that, although defined as an act of commerce by the law under whose sway it had been born, is yet excluded from the enumeration of acts of commerce given in article 2 of the new code, if it so be that this article really belongs to the sphere of the laws of competence, and suffice, therefore, to strip the act of its inward commercial worth or character;

* ART. 1. The tribunals of commerce shall judge, 1st, all controversies relating to obligations and transactions between merchants, dealers, and bankers; 2d, controversies relating to act (instruments) of commerce between every sort of person;

Considering that although single judicial decisions, under the influence of the peculiarity of special cases from which were not removed the accidents and surrounding circumstances that are not intrinsic to the cause now before us, may have taken cognizance of such accidents and surroundings in terms conforming less strictly to the principles of law above indicated; and that is what the tribunal of first instance would wish to have inferred from the grounds and reasonings of the court of Brussels in the year 1808, which decision, moreover, adds a conditional clause, whose import and signification escape our understanding, and from judgments pronounced from another chair (penal chair) under circumstances anything but parallel to the case in question; and although other more recent judgments may not have been so true to said principles, particularly that of October 23, 1812, of the court de cassation of Paris,* which declared the provosts' courts incompetent to take cognizance of facts submitted to their jurisdiction right after the decree of October 28, 1810, "because otherwise this would be to give the law a retroactive effect"—all single decisions lacking the array of exhaustive data that are undoubtedly to be found in the case now in hand—yet they could not have the force of jurisprudence contrary to a weighing of facts and rights strengthened by the letter and by the spirit of the laws at this time put into force in Egypt;

Considering, for these reasons, that the commercial tribunal of Alexandria was competent to take cognizance of the subject-matter even though the two drafts of the Daïra to-day under controversy would not represent a true operation of exchange within the meaning of article 2 of the Egyptian code of commerce, and hence would not have to be considered as acts of commerce, not even according to the new law, which, however, they incontestably are by the previous law;

Considering, as to the objection based upon the decree of April 6 last past of His Highness the Khedive, that in order to know what is the worth of this objection it is needful to recur to the examination, 1st, of the nature of the instruments under controversy, upon which instruments said decree is claimed to exercise its effect; 2d, of the influence that laws or administrative ordinances can exercise upon the action of the Egyptian tribunals for mixed suits;

Considering, on this head, that the instruments upon which Cesar Carpi founds his action for payment are documents furnished with all the requisites of letters of exchange,† inasmuch as they are expressly entitled with this name, are drawn by the Daïra Saniah of Cairo at Alexandria, are dated, set forth the name of the person who is to pay them, namely, the Egyptian ministry of finance, and to the order of whom, the time and the place, when and where the pay ment was to be effected, the value furnished in money—are in short documents, each one of which repe-

---

*Dalloz, page 149, vol. xxx.
†Article 70 of Ottoman code.

sents a particular individual contract whose value and consequences at law are regulated by the code of commerce, by a law namely that has to deal essentially and exclusively with private law or right, with matters commercial;

Considering that by the terms of art. 34 of the Règlement d'Organisation judiciaire, which is the sole and unique law of the institution of the new Egyptian tribunals, these latter cannot, saving the derogations mentioned in said Règlement, apply in the exercise of their jurisdiction in matters civil and commercial (to which jurisdiction are subjected, by the terms of art. 10, the government, the departments of administration, the Daïras of H. H. the Khedive and of the members of his family in suits with foreigners) any other than the codes presented by Egypt to the powers, and only in case of the silence, insufficiency or obscurity of the law can they recur to the principles of natural right and to the rules of equity;

Considering that, by the terms of art. 12 of the Egyptian civil code no additions or modifications of the codes can be made under any form or guise whatsoever, unless by and with the advice of the corps of magistrates, or, if need be, upon their proposal, and this even subject to the limitation that during the five-year period no change can be made in the system adopted by the international contract in the premises;

Considering under such circumstances that the decree of April 6th last past cannot be applied by the Egyptian mixed tribunals as a law capable of modifying or attenuating the sway of the codes, and this solely because it was not issued under the conditions given in art. 12 of the civil code and with the concurrence of the competent factors;*

Considering that although it might be admitted, as a general thesis, that in the wording Bonds and Assignations, used in the decree of April 6, p. p., may also be comprised the drafts of the Daïra upon the Egyptian ministry of finance, as the accepting government claimed and as the drawing Daïra understands it to be;

That this decree thus applied to bills of exchange may contain within itself the conditions that characterize an administrative measure having obligatory effect for all inhabitants of the state, foreign and native, and entitled to the concurrence of the ordinary tribunals, that the measure, namely, not only emanate from the authority clothed with administrative power, but also refer as well to the subject-matter confided by the laws to the vigilance of that power;

That this decree thus applied may represent in fact the simple execution of the laws in force, and be in no respect in contradiction to the same;

That this decree thus applied may be the expression and the postulate of the general interest of the state, and tend to guarantee this general interest by imposing upon the interested parties the burdens of public exigencies with equal balance, and by making them participate with equal balance, in the benefits;

That this decree thus applied may have respected the double attribute which it is wished to have separated in every public administration, and which is briefly expressed in the words jus imperii, by virtue whereof a government in the generality and impersonality of this jus establishes norms or rules binding upon all, without touching upon exclusively special relationships initiated by contract with single persons, or classes of persons, and in the words jus dominii vel gestionis, whereby the same government, according to the saying of Grotius, upheld by the most celebrated publicists, is not integrum, namely, representing society entire, but is rather pars integri, and hence is like every other citizen who cannot withdraw himself from the provisions of the general laws by which are regulatedthe relations of every individual of the civil commonwealth;

* ART. 12. Additions and modifications of the present law shall be edicted upon the concurrent advice of the corps of the magistracy, and if need be upon its proposal; but during the five-year period no change is to take place in the system adopted.

That therefore the Egyptian Government, by accepting on the 22d day of April, 1875, the drafts of the Daïra Saniah, which drafts fixed the obligation to pay thereon to the holder the amount at the time of falling due agreed to, and by purely and simply decreeing on the 6th day of April last past that this falling due, agreed to contractually, was to be held to be prorogued for three months, had exercised that wholly objective function which characterizes the public administration, that organic element, namely, of the state and impersonal being which co-operates in the great social movement, in that complex of doings, orders, operations, burdens and sacrifices which are forced upon it by the general interest, and which should be borne in right proportion by every citizen of the state, and had not rather exercised its other wholly subjective function wherein the public administration wishes to be considered as a civil person, as a juridical moral person equal with every other private person before the law, whether as to its rights or its obligations, and hence subjected, both by the general rule of every well-ordered and civilized state, as well as by the terms of article 10, title 1, of the Règlement d'Organisation judiciaire, like every other private person, to the ordinary judicial power;

That, in a word, although the decree under discussion may be, as a general thesis, properly an administrative measure that escapes the examination of the judicial power, yet such measure could not, for all this, hinder the Egyptian mixed tribunals from taking cognizance as to whether, and as to how far, an act of administration based upon such decree does or does not constitute an infringement upon the acquired right of a foreigner, and, if it does, from determining the judicial consequence, thereof;

Considering, in fact, that, if article 11 of the Règlement d' Organisation judiciaire forbids the Egyptian mixed tribunals from taking cognizance of claims upon the property of the public domain and from interpreting or stopping the execution of an administrative measure, that article expressly consents to their judging, in the cases that are provided for by the civil code, of the effects that an act of the administration might have upon the acquired right of a foreigner;

Considering that by the letter and the spirit of this provision which constitutes the reciprocal guarantee that the powers on the one side and the Egyptian Government on the other side, have, in such matters, wished to expressly introduce against the danger of a possible overstepping in any way of the legitimate confines assigned to the judicial power, and to the administrative power, the Egyptian mixed tribunals have, indeed, no right to call in question the doings of the administration, nor to pass upon the utility or even the justice of an administrative measure, nor to order the revocation or reform of such a measure, but have, however, incontestably the right, and hence the duty, to examine, in the cases provided for by the civil code, whether an administrative act in such cases has prejudiced a right acquired by a foreigner;

Considering, in the suit before us, that the holder of a draft has, by the terms of articles 76, 79, 97, 106, and 121 of the Ottoman Code of Commerce, in force at the time when the letter of exchange was subscribed by the drawer and by the acceptor, the authority to ask its payment at its falling due, and to bring his action, after fulfilling the formalities prescribed by the law, also against the drawer when the acceptor has not honored his acceptance;

That this right, inherent in the letters of exchange in question, was manifestly acquired by the Italian subject, Cesar Carpi, to whose order they were drawn and accepted, and that, therefore, the refusal to meet them at their falling due, based upon the governmental decree of April 6 last past, constituted an infringement upon such right acquired by the plaintiff under the protection of the civil laws;

That the Egyptian mixed tribunals are hence bound to take cognizance of such infringement and to fix the consequences thereof, without that the drawer, cited by virtue of the law (art. 76, Ottoman commercial code) to answer solidarily for the obligation assumed and not fulfilled by the acceptor, can ensconce himself behind the administrative act;

That, lastly, the juridical consequences of this infringement cannot in the special case before us consist in anything else than in the condemnation of the defendant, the drawer, and consequently the solidary guarantee of the obligation, to pay to the plaintiff the amount of the two drafts, otherwise not contested, together with interest thereon;

Considering that if the Egyptian mixed tribunals, instituted for rendering justice according to the laws agreed to by the authors of their institution, were bound to afford the concurrence of their authority to governmental ordinances which, being in contradiction with these very laws, would infringe upon rights acquired by a foreigner—then the provision of article 11 of the Règlement d'Organization judiciaire would be nothing more than a dead letter, and the independence of the tribunals would be nothing but an illusion;

Considering for these reasons that the objection against the competence of the judicial power to take cognizance of the suit ought notwithstanding to have been rejected;

Considering that according to the terms of art. 415 of the code of civil and commercial procedure, when the court of appeals reverses a sentence upon a question of competence, if the suit has been already heard ("instructed," i. e., the evidence taken by the trial court), as has been done in this suit, it can take upon itself to go into the merits thereof and pass judgment;

Considering that the commercial tribunal of first instance fell into a manifest contradiction when it declared its own incompetence to take cognizance, in commercial session, of the subject-matter and at the same confirmed the order of April 12 last past, which order had rejected the request for a preservative sequester upon the movable goods of the debtor;

Considering, as to the merits of said request, that if art. 129 of the Ottoman code of commerce allows the creditor on a bill of exchange to sequester, by way of precaution, the movable goods of the drawer, of the acceptor, or of the indorser, it, however, imposes upon him the necessity of asking the permission of the tribunal of commerce to so do;

That it belongs to and is incumbent, therefore, upon the latter to judge as to the necessity for such a preservative measure, unless it is sought to make of the permission of the judge a mere formality;

That in this suit no cause was shown that was enough to justify the taking of such a measure, and much less before this bench, wherein the condemnation of the defendant renders the measure aforesaid superfluous:

For these reasons—

The court of appeals, having upheld its own competence, and rejected every contrary and greater instance, annuls the judgment of April 20,

1876, of the commercial tribunal of Alexandria, and taking upon itself to go into the merits of the case, condemns the Khedivial Daïra Saniah to pay to Cesar Carpi the sum of £549 and 15 shillings, being the amount of two bills of exchange drawn by it upon the Egyptian ministry of finance, by the latter accepted, and by the plaintiff protested for default of payment, as well as the interest on said sum at the rate of 12 per cent. per annum from the date of the day of protest until payment—

Sustains the order of April 12 last past of the judge on duty,* which order had rejected the request for a preservative sequester;

And condemns the Khedivial Daïra Saniah, the defendant, to refund the costs of first and second instanse, and of defense to the plaintiff, and also those due to the judiciary treasury.

May 3, 1876.

2.—THE SURSOCK CASE.

This was a case in which Messrs. Sursock Brothers, under German protection, bidders of bonds of the unified debt of Egypt, sued the Egyptian Government for the difference of interest payable on the semi-annual coupons of those bonds. The original issue having been made to bear 7 per cent. interest per annum, the Khedive subsequently, by decree, ordained the reduction of the interest payable thereon, first to 4½ per cent. per annum, and afterwards to 4 per cent.

Sentence of the Alexandria tribunal of first instance of the mixed tribunals in Egypt.

SURSOCK BROTHERS
vs.
THE EGYPTIAN GOVERNMENT.

(Translated from the original French.)

Whereas the definition of the relations between the state and the judicial power, viewed from the standpoint of civil responsibility, raises a question of a complex nature, according to how one considers the state in the divers manifestations of its proper activity, that is to say:

A. As the "supreme power," set at the head of the conduct of the general interests of society;

B. As either the "executive or administrative power," working for the execution or application of public laws and administrative regulations;

C. As a "civil or juridical person," acting within the sphere of private interests;

And as, without its being necessary to here examine the question from this threefold point of view, it is admitted by all theories and sanctioned by the jurisprudence of all countries that the doings of the state, proceeding in the line of general regulation, cannot open the way for an action for liability whenever, by reason of the object upon which they bear, such doings are to be considered as emanating from public authority "for the higher purpose of social preservation," and do not, furthermore, directly affect the individual right of ownership or property;

And as this fundamental principle of public law is founded upon the consideration that the acts "of social preservation" proceed essentially from sovereignty, and that they ought, therefore, like sovereignty itself, to be exempt from the consequences of a common law liability;

---

* i. e., the judge at chambers.

And as the notion of this power is not only justified in common law, but is also in conformity with the strict principles of private law;

And as, indeed, the social function of the state being a "thing of necessity" like the existence of society itself, it follows that the enactments established in execution of this function have the character of veritable cases of vis major, which excludes all idea of fault or responsibility;

And as, on the other hand, the requirements of society being ever variable according to times and circumstances, it cannot be admitted that the state, when it acts within the sphere of its social attributes, is to be considered as subjecting itself towards private persons to ties of legal obligation that would paralyze its future freedom of action and imply a partial renunciation of its rights to the detriment of supreme public necessity;

And as it follows herefrom that the action of the state, as a governmental power, does not in general affect "acquired rights" in the juridical acceptation of the term, but affects "private rights only" (which should yield before the requirements of public interest), to affect which cannot, according to the rules of civil law, be considered as constituting a principle whereon to base a judicial action for indemnity;

And it is of course possible that the state be mistaken in its conception of what is the general interest, but that in the exercise of its functions, if it may abuse its powers it would not therefore overstep its limits;

And as the guaranteeing of private persons against abuses of this kind is a matter that is wholly and solely dependent upon the mode of the organization of the sovereignty of a state, and upon the political institutions that are needed for securing the normal and regular exercise of such sovereignty;

And as, to authorize that recourse be had therefore before the judicial authority would be to transport the action of government into the tribunals, and place the sovereignty of the state in a body having defined powers and which is itself created by that very sovereignty for the special purpose of protecting private and individual rights;

And whereas it follows from these considerations that the ways and means adopted by the state, within the sphere of its social functions, can only imply engagements of a peculiar nature, destitute of that positive sanction which belongs to the obligations of private right, whereof the tribunals could not take cognizance without actually exceeding their powers;

And whereas, among those functions of the governmental power that come within the class of prerogatives hereinabove indicated, the first place is occupied by the organization of the public finances, and the choice of the financial measures that are indispensable to the regular working of the state and to the accomplishment of its natural ends;

And as when the government makes use of its credit for issuing a loan, it comes before the public not as a private person, but as a sovereign power clothed with the privilege of being not at all liable to judicial constraint;

And as the subscribers to the loan must furthermore be well aware that the first obligation of the state, which overrides all others and from which the state cannot withdraw itself, is that of providing, before all else, for those public expenses that are "necessary" to the maintenance of the social life; and whilst these expenses are themselves essentially subjected to change according to the exigencies of most divers events, the public revenues on the contrary are per force limited, inasmuch as they are made up of sums collected upon the revenues of private persons;

And as it follows herefrom that the special pledges that the state may set apart for the satisfaction of its debt—not to speak of the impossibility of realizing on them through the legal channels—can never represent in the eyes of creditors anything more than uncertain and aleatory guaranties;

And as it is quite evident that engagements offered under such conditions and freely accepted by the public cannot be made to establish, as between the state and the takers of the bonds, a relationship of contractual obligation, in the true sense, having the same legal force as juridical relationships arising out of contracts entered into with the state for purposes of private interest, as for example contracts for engaging the services of a person, for furnishing supplies, for undertaking public works and the like;*

And whereas the absolute right of the state in the organization and disposal of its public finances has been recognized by all authors and political economists that have treated of this matter, and whereas the contemporaneous history of most European countries furnishes examples of the exercise of this same right;

And as notably, during this very century, France, England, Austria, the Netherlands, Spain, Greece, &c., have been successively brought, by consideration of superior general interest, to modify to a greater or less extent the conditions of existence of their national debts, without in any of the said countries the holders of these debts having ever appealed to the tribunals neither to demand pecuniary reparation nor even to discuss therein the opportuneness of the use that the state had made of its prerogatives to the detriment of their individual interests;

And whereas it is under the sway of necessities of the same nature that the Khedivial decrees of May 7 and of November 18, 1876, were brought about in Egypt, and after them the successive reductions to 4½ and then to 4 per cent. of the interest of the unified public debt for the half years of May 1 and November 1, 1879;

And whereas the Egyptian Government is intrusted with the full and entire direction of the financial affairs of the country by the delegation of the rights of sovereignty of His Majesty the Sultan; and as there is therefore no doubt that the decrees here treated of, as well as the derogations that have been made thereto, bear the characteristics of acts of

---

*Mr. Leroy Beaulieu, in his Treaty on Finance, tome II, page 188, expresses himself on this subject as follows:

"Another characteristic further distinguishes the credit of states from the credit of private parties; it is this, that the private borrower can be always constrained to pay the stipulated interest and repay at the time agreed to; it is not lawful for him to go back on his engagement or shirk it, at least not when he has sufficient means.

"There are tribunals and laws that cause contracts between private parties to be respected. As a borrower, the state is in a totally different position; it is indeed morally bound, but there is no positive sanction for the engagements it takes upon itself.

"It is itself the judge of its solvability; one cannot drag it before the magistrate; it itself examines its own resources and expenses and decides whether it can meet its obligations by exacting still greater sacrifices of its tax-payers, or whether it would be right for it to place itself in a state of failure and impose upon its creditors a settlement [concordât] that they are not free to refuse. Several times during the history of the finances of contemporaneous nations these sorts of compromises, obligatory upon the creditors of the state, have come to pass. It is of no use to say that this is an injustice and the violation of a contract. These phenomena grow out of the force of things.

"As the revenues of a state have no precise limits, and are made up of sums levied upon the revenues of the private individual, and as the lawful measure of these levies is in no way fixed by nature or by tradition, one conceives how it is that a state claims to be the best judge of the point where an increase of the taxes and the diminution of the expenses are impossible without causing grave disorder and without compromising the national life."—(Note by the renderer of the judgment.)

high administration, and are, as such, beyond the reach of all criticism on the part of the "native" holders of bonds of the Egyptian debt;

And as also the plaintiffs, in order to contest the obligatory force of these same measures as towards them, have availed themselves of the specific right conferred by the capitulations, according to which right foreigners, when living in an Ottoman country, are to enjoy the privilege of absolute extraterritoriality and are hence freed from all subjection to the local laws and the local sovereignty;*

And whereas this thesis is manifestly exaggerated and must be discarded as contrary to the most certain principles of the law of nations;

And as each independent state, whether belonging to Christendom or to countries outside of Christendom, is "necessarily" the seat of a real sovereignty, the essence of which is to be "territorial," that is to say, the essence whereof is to extend its sway over all those who inhabit its territory, without distinction between citizens and foreigners, saving the immunities recognized to the latter by diplomatic instruments or else sanctioned by usage sufficiently ancient to warrant the presumption that the state had recognized their existence;

And as these immunities are veritable restrictions to the principle of sovereignty, and the law of nations has hence assimilated them to the servitude of public law, servitutes juris gentium, whose application must be kept within the limits of the treaties or usages that have established them;

And as, if the immunities recognized within the possessions of the Ottoman Empire have a greater compass than in all other countries, it does not thereby follow, as the plaintiffs claim, that the local sovereignty in these dominions is divested, in its relations and dealings with foreigners, of every primordial principle of authority and has no other powers towards them than those expressly granted by special treaties or conventions;

And as this proposition, which would substitute the exception for the rule, is all the less sustainable in that the capitulations of the Porte originally had no other character than that of voluntary grants ("octrois volontaires"); and as, if later on they were confirmed by bilateral treaties having the force of international obligations, the very existence of these treaties already implies the unequivocal recognition of Ottoman sovereignty, with all its ordinary attributes, saving the rights and privileges "expressly conceded;"

And as, furthermore, this right of sovereignty, together with the prerogatives of internal administration that are carried along with it, has been the object of a formal reserve inserted into all the treaties of commerce entered into from 1838 to 1864 between the Sublime Porte and the foreign powers, under the sole restriction that "the exercise of its right of internal administration does not evidently infringe upon the privileges accorded by the ancient treaties or by the recent treaties to the citizens of * * * or their property";†

---

* Argument for the Sursock Brothers, page 12: "The sovereign in the orient can exercise towards foreigners no right of sovereignty, for the conception of the latter is far too extended, and because he can exercise no authority that has not been consented to by treaty or by special convention. Outside of these, no law, no decree, can be of force for Europeans here residing, whilst in Christian states the foreigner is held to be a subditus secundum quid and does not there enjoy the right of extraterritoriality except by way of exception, that is to say, only as regards ministers and ambassadors. On the contrary, extraterritoriality is the rule in Moslem countries for foreigners, who are wholly free from all subjection to the sovereign of the land and to his laws, and can never be considered as subjects secundum quid."

† (NOTE OF TRANSLATOR.—Compare Article XXI of the treaty of 1862, between the United States and the Sublime Porte, with article 16 of the treaty of 1861, between France and the Sublime Porte.)

And as article 11 of the [Egyptian] "Règlement d'Organisation judiciaire" again recognizes these same principles in that it forbids the new tribunals to "interpret or stop the execution of an administrative measure," and expressly limits their competence in suits where administrative interests are involved "to the power of judging in the cases provided for by the civil code, infringements committed upon an acquired right of a foreigner through an act of administration";

And as, inversely to the thesis upheld by the plaintiffs, it is therefore impossible to utterly ignore the right of the Egyptian Government to edict, within the limits of the country's own constitution and within the bounds of the powers delegated by the Sultan, all laws of internal administration, obligatory as a matter of principle both for foreigners and natives, barring absolute respect for the rights and immunities recognized by ancient capitulations and by conventions of all kinds that have completed them;

And as these rights and immunities being founded upon "international laws," it follows therefrom that all acts whatsoever of the Egyptian Government, laws, règlements, or administrative doings, running counter to the same, without the formal consent of the foreign powers, must be considered as illicit administrative measures within the meaning of article 11 aforesaid, the application whereof to foreigners would open the door for an action at law for damages conformably with the common law of article 212 and ff., of the civil code;

And as, after this wise, therefore, the right of intervention of the tribunals in weighing the acts of the government, viewed from the special standpoint of the violation of the capitulation rights, is necessarily subordinated to the following double condition:

A.—That the act, whatever it be, infringe upon the rights of foreigners in one of their particular immunities;

B.—That this act shall not have been legitimatized by the adhesion of the foreign powers, or, when it is a matter of simple additions or modifications to the capitulary laws ot the codes, by and with the advice and consent of the corps of magistrates (article 12 of the civil code);

And as it is evident, furthermore, that all acts, even when contrary to the law of the capitulations, but legitimated by the concurrence of the various wills that founded that law, would constitute acts of "full sovereignty"; that is to say, acts excluding all acquired rights, and against which individual interests would not be allowed to obtain redress through judicial channels;

And whereas, the theory of extraterritoriality having been thus brought back within its true limits, it remains to be examined whether, in the matter of the reguluting of the public debt, the law of the capitulations contains any provision restrictive to the sovereignty of the state, and of which restriction the plaintiffs, in their character as foreigners, could avail themselves for claiming a privileged and exceptional position;

And as to this question, we do not hesitate to reply in the negative;

And as, first of all, it would appear quite odd that the bonds of one and the same public debt, issued under identical conditions for all subscribers, indiscriminately, can be altered in their nature, and produce juridical effects differing according to the personal status of those who successively become the holders thereof;

And as the privilege that would justify such an anomaly would moreover stand completely outside the pale of the general capitulation guaranties, and as, in fact, it is nowhere written or implied, neither in the new Egyptian codes nor in the capitulations that have preceded them;

And as, aside from the stipulations relating to diplomatic and consular immunities, the ancient capitulations had manifestly no other aim than to further the vigor and activity of commerce, "by establishing in favor of foreigners coming and going," for the security of their persons and business relations, a set of special guaranties that they would not have otherwise met with to a sufficient degree in the application of the country's own laws and institutions;

And as these guaranties, although considerably enlarged since then, have, notwithstanding, kept their original nature, as well as their peculiar characteristic of specialty; and as they can be all summed up or classed as follows: Immunities for the free exercise of Christian forms of worship; inviolability of domicile; immunities in the matter of customs-duties, commerce, and industry; immunities in matters fiscal, by the indication of certain taxes legitimately due, to the exclusion of other imposts, the collection whereof is forbidden; immunities at law, consisting, as a matter of principle, in the maintenance of the consular jurisdictions in matters penal, and in the establishment of a mixed jurisdiction, applying a body of special laws in matters civil and commercial;

And as this enunciation alone is of itself sufficient to demonstrate, without the need of entering into a detailed analysis, that none of these guaranties contain the principle of a privilege which the plaintiffs could successfully invoke in the premises, and which would be of a nature fitted to paralyze the state in the exercise of one of its essential attributes of sovereignty;

And as, notably, one cannot establish the least analogy between a special guaranty, that protects foreigners against forced levies in the matter of imposts, and a general guaranty that would shield them against the unhappy outcomings of operations in public stocks undertaken quite voluntarily, and which can only rest upon personal faith in the solvability and credit of the state;

And whereas the plaintiffs, failing in their attempt to found their action upon the violation of a privilege growing out of the capitulations, have sought to show that, according to article 10 of the "Règlement d'Organisation judiciaire," whose provision includes no limitation, the tribunals of reform are (say they) invested, as towards the State and the departments of public administration, with a general competence extending to all suits, of whatsoever nature they be, provided that they come up under the form of a pecuniary interest;

And whereas, if this interpretation were to prevail, there would certainly be no public acts, and even those whose legitimacy would be most incontestable, for which the State would not be amenable before the tribunals;

And as such a system would be the complete upsetting of all hierarchy, and of the separation of powers; and as it would render impossible all government, by placing the general interest at the mercy, and under the absolute dependence of private interests;

And, as the plaintiffs here confound two quite distinct things, to wit, "the investiture" of competence and "jurisdiction properly so-called," or the matter over which this competence can extend its exercise;

And, as the "jurisdiction" of the mixed tribunals could not have been more clearly determined than by the indication of the very laws themselves, with the application of which they are intrusted; and as, according to article 34* of the Règlement d'Organisation judiciaire, whose pro-

*ART. 34. The new tribunals, in the exercise of their jurisdiction in matters civil and commercial, and within the bounds of that jurisdiction that has been allowed to them in matters penal, shall apply the codes presented by Egypt to the powers, and in case of the silence, insufficiency, or obscurity of the law, the judge shall abide by the principles of natural right and the rules of equity.

vision is general and extends indiscriminately to all cases of competence, the laws to be applied are those contained "in the codes presented by Egypt to the foreign powers"; now, the Egyptian codes, like the French and Italian codes, admit no "obligations," other than such as are engendered either from a contract or quasi-contract, or else from an unlawful act or quasi-unlawful act, "implying the violation of a right," and not the lesion of a simple "interest";

And as, moreover, article 11 of the Règlement, which has especially in view those obligations that arise out of illicit administrative acts, is in this respect most formal, and excludes every possibility of controversy;

And whereas the plaintiffs themselves have so well comprehended the necessity of founding their action upon an "obligation," properly so called and provided for by the codes, that the main burden of their argument has consisted in representing the decree of the 18th November, 1876,* as constituting between the creditors of the debt, on the one part, and the Egyptian Government on the other part, a "veritable civil contract," having given rise to bilateral engagements at common law, and for the execution whereof the law would afford to the parties the support of the judicial authorities;

And as, to the end of establishing the existence of such a contract, the plaintiffs have discussed at length the circumstances that preceded, accompanied, and followed the publication of the decree in hand; but as they have completely stripped it of its undeniable characteristics as a governmental act, not susceptible of being governed by the rules of private law, and belonging solely to the domain of politics or high administration;

And as it is needless to revert here to the considerations that have been above set forth, according to which the domain of high administration is "not to be ceded," and is placed under the tutelage of the state in order that the latter shall always administer the same freely, for the ends of public utility, without ever being able to dispose thereof in any measure whatsoever by private engagements that would expose it to a responsibility of a civil sort;

And as it is therefore of little import that the publication of the decree of November 18 had been preceded by negotiations between the authorized representatives of the state and the various groups of creditors, and that the provisions which are to be found therein established are no more than the exact sanction of an understanding come to by reason of the said negotiations;

And as these circumstances of fact could have no influence upon the character of the decree in itself, which character results irrefutably, if not from the legislative form in which it has been edicted, at the very least from its own intrinsic substance;

And as, even if it had been the joint intention of the negotiators to bind themselves by the ties of a civil contract, the contract would be certainly tainted with nullity, in that it is brought to bear upon an object that cannot become a matter for a private convention;†

---

* If the present report is published by the Department, I request that there be here inserted, as a note, either the decree of November 18, 1876, or else Mr. Farman's dispatch, No. 79, of December 8, 1876; the decree is an inclosure accompanying that dispatch.—E. A. VAN DYCK.

† Neither has it been demonstrated that such was ever the intention of the representatives of the creditors in these negotiations. The chief one among them, Mr. Göschen, foreseeing the hypothesis of a violation of the financial decrees of 1876, seemed to admit no possible recourse but through the intervention of the foreign powers: "An absolute sovereign can, without doubt, break decrees; and extraordinary circumstances can sometimes hinder the execution of these decrees. I do not seek to exaggerate the

And whereas the rules of competence indicated in the present judgment are those that the tribunals have invariably applied in the exercise of the jurisdiction that has been conferred upon them by articles 10 and 11 of the Règlement d'Organization Judiciaire;

And as, in suits of every kind of which they have been seized against the state, and the departments of public administration, the tribunals have always required, as the first condition of their competence, that the action be based upon a "positive obligation" at common law, coming directly within the provisions of the Egyptian codes, that is to say, arising either out of a "convention properly so called," or out of "something done that carries with it the infringement of a right."

And as thus interpreted, articles 10 and 11 of the Règlement d'Organization Judiciaires contain nothing exorbitant, but on the contrary constitute a guaranty necessary and essential to the respect and sincere carrying out of the capitulations;

And as the obligation for the departments of public administration to answer civilly for their illicit acts, in so far as such acts infringe upon "private rights," is to be found in the legislation of all well-organized countries; and as these legislations differ amongst one another only as to the jurisdiction that is called upon to take cognizance of this kind of obligations;

And as it is for reasons easily to be understood that the authors of the Règlement d'Organisation Judiciaire have wished that suits of this nature be, in Egypt, made over to the ordinary mixed jurisdiction; and as it might be feared that, under existing circumstances, any innovation in this respect would not as yet be without its dangers;

And as the seeming anomalies brought out in the application of article 11 do not, therefore, pertain to the judiciary system in itself, but to the peculiar conditions under which Ottoman sovereignty is placed by the existence of the capitulations, in its dealings towards foreigners.

And as the latter possessing in Egypt special privileges stipulated by international laws, it follows therefrom that such law-giving decrees as would operate against their privileges, if lacking the formal concurrence of the foreign powers, have had to be necessarily considered by the tribunals as simple administrative measures, the application whereof to foreigners, in that it affects them in their rights, would give rise to a civil action for damages;

And as it is in this line of thought and in perfect conformity with these principles that the appeal court, by its final decision of May 3, 1876, in the suit of Caesar Carpi against the Daïra Sania of H. H. The Khedive refused to recognize the legality of the law-giving decree of April 6, proroguing the payment of the bonds and assignations of the said Daïrah upon the ministry of finance, which drafts were to have fallen due during the course of the months of April and May of the same year;

And as the court of appeals does, indeed, carefully state that the bonds and assignations, whereof Carpi claimed immediate payment, represented instruments fulfilling all its conditions necessary for stamping them with the character of a private contract of exchange according to articles 70 of the Ottoman code, and 110 of the Egyptian commercial code, and that they consequently constituted "veritable private, strength of the bonds that result from these guarantees; I know perfectly that all these regulations may be upset by an arbitrary act, but this act would have to be a sort of defiance thrown at public opinion and at the Powers which the Vice Roy called to his aid to carry out these reforms." Debt of Egypt, Mission of the Honorable G. J. Goschen, Paris, 1876.

---

individual conventions, whose juridical worth and consequences are regulated by the code of commerce; that is to say, by a law that has to do essentially and exclusively with private law;"

And as other passages of the same final decision confirm that the court was exclusively determined by the consideration that the financial decree of April 6 had directly infringed, in the cause brought by the plaintiff, upon a private right of a commercial nature, especially protected by the capitulations, whereof the Egyptian Government could not have validly disposed by its single authority without the concurrence of the foreign governments;

And as the Carpi decision, whereof the plaintiffs have made use in support of their action, is therefore relative to a subject-matter quite different from that of the present contestation; and as, far from justifying the claim of the Sursock Brothers, it is, on the contrary, of a nature fitted to cause the latter to be rejected by a declaration of absolute incompetence;—

For these reasons,

The Tribunal * * * declares itself incompetent * * *

The president:

DE BROWWER.

3. THE ADIB CASE.

This was a case in which Madam Adib, proprietress of rural land, sued for damages the executive or administrative branch of the Egyptian Government, in the person of the moudir (governor) of the Egyptian province called Garbieh, for seizing, administratively, i. e., without a legal judicial sentence, certain crops standing on her lands for arrears of taxes due thereon.

Tribunal of First Instance of Alexandria.

(Translated from the original French.)

SUMMARY.

The functions of the state, in the matter of imposts, coming essentially within the domain of its administrative action, the exercise of these functions in such matter cannot be disturbed by any immixtion of the judiciary authorities.

The only mode of action at law by which foreigners can guarantee themselves against the illegal collection of taxes consists in an action for pecuniary reparation or for damages, founded upon the violation of an acquired right (articles 212 and ff. of the civil code).

The rights of foreigners, in matters fiscal, as to real property, consist in their not being subjected to the obligation of paying other imposts than those established to be levied from native owners of such property, and in its being their duty to pay according to the same mode of distribution and partition and according to the same procedure of execution as the natives, and none others.

ALEXANDER ADIP AND MARY ADIP, WIFE OF Gûbrân Gibéli, against
H. E. THE MOUDIR [PROVINCIAL GOVERNOR] OF the Garbieh Province representing the Egyptian Government.

NICOLAS ARGIRI, AS THE REPRESENTATIVE OF Mr. Alexander Adip and of Madam Maria Adip, the latter authorized and assisted by her husband Gûbrân Gibéli, against
H. E. THE MOUDIR OF GARBIEH, TAKEN IN HIS character as representative of the Egyptian Government.

The tribunal:

Whereas, by writ of the sheriff Salvatore Serino, dated the 19th day of November, 1880, Nicolas Argiri, acting as tutor of Alexander Adip and Madam Maria Adip (she assisted by her husband, Gûbrân Gibéli), did cause to be cited before this tribunal H. E. the Moudir of the Garbieh, taken in his character of representative of the Egyptian Government, to the end of hearing declared to be void and of no effect a seizure of standing crops, made on the 2d day of October of the same year by a delegate of the said Moudirieh [provincial government] for the purpose of obtaining the payment of a sum of 22,552 piasters tariff under the head of land taxes in arrear;

And as the plaintiffs have based their action hereupon, to wit, that the imposts claimed had been already paid in part, and that, besides, the administrative authority had made an error in the valuation thereof, regard being had to the quality of the lands taxed;

And as they have moved in a subsidiary manner for the appointment of one or more experts with a view to determining, after verifying the nature of the lands, the quota of the impost for which they might be made taxable;

And as Mr. Padoa, for the Epyptian Government, has declined the competence of the tribunal to try the said suit;

As to the plea declinatory of the competence:

Whereas the Hatti Humayûn of 7 Safar, 1284 (18 June, 1867, Imperial Rescript), in according to foreigners the right to possess immovable goods in the Ottoman Empire, has taken care to subordinate the legal exercise of this right to a set of conditions the import whereof is that a parcel of real property cannot by the fact of its being held by a foreigner be withdrawn from the reach of the fiscal laws and laws of police to which real properties possessed by natives are subjected;

And as among the said conditions figure more especially the following, to wit:

1. That foreigners shall be subjected to the payment of the same imposts as those established or to be established for local subjects;

2. That in all that which touches the rights and obligations of an owner of real estate foreigners are to come directly under the territorial authorities, both as plaintiffs and defendants, under the same head and in the same forms as local subjects do without being able to claim any privilege by reason of their nationality, and under the sole reserve of the immunities theretofore acquired for the protection of their persons and their movable goods;

And as it is incontestable that under the sway of this legislation the local authorities are alone competent to pass upon suits between the government and foreigners of every kind relating to taxes upon real property, whether as to their assessment, their quota, or their collection;

And as it is therefore incumbent to find out whether this state of matters has been modified by the later laws of competence set forth in the Règlement d'Organisation Judiciaire of 1875, and, in case it has, to determine what is the import, and what are the legal consequences of such modifications;

Whereas if article 10 of the said Règlement provides in a general manner that the Egyptian Government shall be amenable to the mixed tribunals in its suits with foreigners, the competence is, however, not entire, except for the trial of contestations arising out of functions in the accomplishment whereof the state acts, not as the public power proceeding in the channels of internal administration, but as a civil individuality xercising its rights over its private domain;

And as, in relation to acts of the first category, article 11 of the said Règlement denies to the mixed tribunals all competence for taking cognizance thereof for the purpose of annulling or modifying them, or for paralyzing the execution of the same; and as, if these tribunals can be called upon to judge of their legality, this is only from the exclusive standpoint of an action for damages and interest which such an execution might give rise to in the cases provided for by the civil code; that is to say, when the administrative measure has caused an infringement upon an acquired right of a foreigner (articles 212 and ff. of the civil code);

Whereas the functions by which the state proceeds to establish, recoup, and collect the taxes belong essentially to the sphere of its administrative action, and as it behooves us, such being the case, to decide by applying the principles hereabove set down, that suits relating directly to the exercise of the said functions are, by their very nature, beyond the reach of the competence of the mixed tribunals, and that the one and only mode of action at law whereby foreigners can guarantee themselves against the illegal collection of taxes consists in an action for pecuniary reparation, founded upon the violation of an acquired right;

Whereas the acquired rights of foreigners in fiscal matters of real estate are none other than those recognized in their behalf by the law already mentioned of the 7th of Safar, 1284, which law constitutes the very title of their right to own real property, and of which the provisions have furthermore acquired the force of an international convention by and through the protocol of adhesion thereto of the powers, dated the 5th of November, 1868;*

And as the fundamental principle of this law, consisting in a perfect assimilation of foreigners to local subjects, there arises herefrom for them the right to pay no impost other than those imposed upon these latter, and not to pay the same otherwise than according to a mode of assessment and procedure of execution the same as that employed towards these latter;

Whereas, the suit whereof the tribunal is now seized does not come up to any one of the conditions of an action at law, as hereabove defined; and as the tenor of the suit is, on the contrary, in the direction of a revision of the role of assessment of the amount to be levied, and in the direction of the annulling of a seizure made by the state within the forms prescribed by the Khedivial order in council of the 25th

* The United States adhered to the protocol in 1874. They were the last of the powers, except Russia, to accept of this protocol. [Note by the translator.]

March, 1880, that would constitute a direct shackle upon the very collection of the tax; and as, consequently, the judicial authorities, by upholding their competence to take cognizance thereof, would be guilty of a usurpation upon the domain of the administrative authority—

For these reasons:

The tribunal,

Having heard the argument of the public ministry,* declares itself incompetent;

Refers the plaintiffs to seek relief of whomsoever has the right to afford it them;

Condemns them in the expenses, both judiciary and extrajudiciary.

Done and pronounced at the public audience of the Civil Tribunal of First Instance of Alexandria, on the 5th day of April, 1881, at which audience were present Messrs. De Browwer, president; Hills, Moriondo, Chimy Bey, Dimitri Bishara, judges; Reizian, substitute judge; and Morgantini, clerk of the tribunal.

4. THE AITKEN CASE.

[Taken from the supplement to Egyptian Gazette, No. 83.]

Her British Majesty's consular court.

IMPORTANT JUDGMENT.

The judgment delivered a few days ago by Mr. Charles A. Cookson, the judge of Her Majesty's chief consular court for Egypt, at Alexandria, in the matter of the bankruptcy of Mr. J. T. Aitken, is sufficiently important to justify us in publishing it in full, deciding as it does an interesting question as to the jurisdiction of the consular court in matters relating to real property in Egypt since the institution of the Tribunals of the Reform.

The matter came before His Honor in the form of a motion on the part of the Mansourah Trading Company, Limited, to compel Mr. Duke Baker, the trustee† under the bankrupcy, to complete a contract, alleged to have been entered into by the bankrupt for the sale of a house at Mansourah, but not registered, as required by the Egyptian code.

Mr. J. K. Grosjean appeared for the company, and Mr. C. Royle opposed the application on behalf of the trustee.

The judgment of the learned judge was as follows:

This motion asks for a mandatory injunction to the trustee ordering him to execute a formal transfer in the Egyptian Land Registry of certain landed property alleged to have been sold to the company by the bankrupt in February, 1880, more than ten months before his petition in liquidation was filed.

A preliminary objection to the jurisdiction of the court has been taken by the learned counsel for the trustee and I directed the point to be argued separately. The argument against the jurisdiction rests on the express terms of article 9 of the "Reglement d'Organization Judiciaire" of the mixed courts, which is as follows:

Ces tribunaux connaîtrons seuls de toutes les contestations en matière civile et com merciale entre indigènes et étrangers de nationalités différentes en dehors des status personnel. Ils connaîtrons aussi de toutes les actions réelles immobilières entre toutes personnes, même appartenant à la même nationalité.‡

---

* Represented by the "Procureur Général" or his substitute, i. e., attorney for the State.

† Both the Mansourah Trading Co., Limited, and Mr. Duke Baker are British in nationality. This is why the suit came before the British consular court at Alexandria, and not before the reform tribunals.

‡ For English translation of this article see above page — ante.

The last sentence giving jurisdiction to the mixed courts in real-property suits between foreigners of the same nationality it is argued that the jurisdiction of this court is included by the order in council of 5th February, 1876. That order was as follows:

> As regards all such matters and cases as arise after the time when the Egyptian courts aforesaid begin to sit and act judicially and as come within the jurisdiction of these courts, the opera ion of the order of Her Majesty the Queen, in council for the regulation of consular jurisdiction in the dominions of the Sublime Porte, made at Windsor, the 12th December, 1873, and of any orders amending the same, shall be and the same is hereby suspended until it shall seem fit to Her Majesty the Queen, by and with the advice of her privy council, to otherwise order.

It was asserted on the part of the company that there is at any rate up to a certain point a jurisdiction in this court in matters arising out of a bankruptcy which it has itself declared. Under section 72 of the bankruptcy act of 1869, the power of the English bankruptcy court to order the trustee of a bankrupt vendor specifically to perform the contract on his part is, I think, undoubted. It clearly comes within the principle laid down by the court in ex parte Fletcher, 9 A. D., p. 381.

But the reason of that rule has no application in this court which would have exclusive jurisdiction in cases between British subjects, even if the rule did not exist.

Again, it is contended that bankruptcy affecting the status personnel, the jurisdiction of the mixed courts is expressly excluded in all cases arising out of it.

But here there is a distinction to be made in limine. Even admitting that adjudication in bankruptcy in theory belongs to the forum of status personalis of the bankrupt, it by no means follows that all questions arising out of the bankruptcy between the bankrupt and his creditors are within the term status personnel of article 9 of the "Règlement d' Organization Judiciaire." The exclusive right of the consular courts to adjudicate the bankruptcy of foreigners as affecting their personal status has by practice in this country been surrendered by the powers who were parties to the judicial reform in Egypt. Numerous instances have occurred of foreigners being adjudicated bankrupts by the mixed courts. Indeed these have claimed exclusive jurisdiction in all cases of bankruptcy where all the creditors, as well as the foreign bankrupt, are not of the same nationality. In my opinion this claim is unfounded, and the most that can be allowed them is concurrent jurisdiction in cases where the consular tribunal having already adjudicated, creditors of different nationality turn up in the course of the administration. It is, therefore, now too late to contend for an absolutely exclusive jurisdiction in the consular courts in the case of foreign bankruptcies on the ground of its affecting the personal status of the bankrupt.

It is true that in this case the parties are British subjects, and therefore the usual reason for the claim of jurisdiction by the mixed court does not exist. But the infringement made on the general principle certainly should make me more cautious in extending it.

In this case the exclusive jurisdiction of this court over the personal status of the bankrupt as a British subject is said to come directly into conflict with the exclusive jurisdiction given by the order in council of February, 1876, to the mixed courts in all cases which come within their constitutional character. For among these cases article 9, of the "Règlement judiciaire," expressly mentions suits relating to real property between foreigners of the same nationality. The question therefore, it is argued, is which of these two principles of exclusion should override the other. But I cannot accept this way of putting the case as correct.

For what is the true meaning of each of the rules which are said to come into collision?

The principle on which the judicial reform gave jurisdiction to the mixed courts in cases of real property between foreigners of the same nationality is perfectly clear. It was one which did not in the least restrict any jurisdiction before existing in this court. The jurisdiction by the operation of the protocol attached to the law of 7 Safar, 1284, was vested solely in the local courts, and the "Règlement d'Organisation judiciaire" only transferred this jurisdiction to the mixed courts. On the other hand, what is the nature of the rule by which jurisdiction is given to the English bankruptcy court in cases of real property arising during the bankruptcy? Merely a rule of convenience, having no application out of England. It is not because the question relating to real property belongs to the sphere of personal status that jurisdiction is claimed for this court, but because the municipal law of England has given jurisdiction to the bankruptcy court in those cases which, but for that, might have come within the jurisdiction of other courts situated in that kingdom. Neither therefore as having exclusive jurisdiction over British subjects in bankruptcy, nor still less as having it exclusively in all cases arising out of the bankruptcy, can this court claim to take cognizance of this demand relative to real property.

When the argument on which this motion is founded is put in its naked form it comes to this; bankruptcy belongs to the forum of personal status. This question is one of bankruptcy, therefore it belongs to that forum. But the fallacy of the argument is obvious when we consider what the present question is. It is one of real as opposed to personal property. It is therefore a contradiction in terms to affirm that a question of real property can belong to the personal status. Personal status is the aggregate of rights and duties, with the capacities attached to them, which follow the person wherever he goes. Now, how can a right to real property be one of these capacities or rights? It is according to universal international jurisprudence, determined by the Lex rei sitæ, and cannot therefore belong to the law of personal status. To contend that a right to real property belongs to the law of personal status is to upset the very definition of personal status.

This question, therefore, does not belong to the law of personal status at all, and there need be no such conflict of jurisdiction as has been contended for. It is a question, simply, of real property, and not the less exclusively of that character because by English bankruptcy law it would be determined by the bankruptcy court instead of by the courts of law or equity.

The motion must be dismissed with costs.

CONCLUSION.

From a careful study of the foregoing highly authoritative judicial decisions, and of the history, spirit, and contents of the old capitulations and more recent treaties and protocols entered into between the powers of Christendom and the Ottoman Porte, it becomes apparent, conclusively apparent to my mind, that the privilege or prerogative of extraterritoriality enjoyed by foreigners of Christendom dwelling in the Ottoman dominions is an exceptional one, having as the ground and source of its existence the difference of religion--Christianity, Mohammedism—between Christendom and Islâm, and having for its legal basis no other positive sanction than that contained in these international treaties and other instruments that have at once given birth to it and define, with minute enumeration, the several heads to which it applies. In other words, that only those privileges are to be enjoyed by foreigners in the Levant that are expressly and exceptionally granted them in the old and new capitulations or that have been allowed them by the sovereign territorial authority, by long-standing usage that has gradually come to be acquiesced in by that authority, and can hence be considered as having acquired the force of sanctioned though unwritten law.

The rule being that the territorial authority and laws of a state are sovereign, and the exception being that foreigners on Ottoman soil are exempt from subjection to those laws and that authority only in so far as the Sublime Porte has expressly and positively agreed or tacitly consented to grant to them certain specific exemptions, it follows that the privilege of extraterritoriality of foreigners in Turkey is limited, is defined by, and is contained in, those instruments of agreement, and that hence whenever it is wished to be known what are those privileges, one has only to refer to the text of the whole body of the capitulations, and what is therein explicitly granted is all that foreigners have a perfect right to claim, and that, on the other hand, whatever is not positively ceded to them therein, belongs undoubtedly to the domain of the territorial laws and authorities.

Finally, I will close this already too lengthy report by calling attention to the nature of the consular courts of the United States in non-Christian countries. These courts could not exist were it not for the fact that, by treaty, the territorial authority has agreed to permit them to be established on its soil, and has, by treaty also, defined the limits and extent of their jurisdiction. Nor could they exist were it not that acts of Congress have created them and defined their functions, jurisdiction, competence, and powers. They are, therefore, in the fullest sense, courts of limited jurisdiction; that is to say, they have no powers or jurisdiction other than those allowed them by the international treaties, and positively conferred upon them by the acts of Congress in the premises.

And this being so, consuls in the east cannot be too careful how they exercise their functions of judge-consuls; they will save themselves and their superiors much needless embarrassment by always consulting the treaty, the protocol, the "règlement," and the act of Congress relevant to the case they may have under consideration, and by never proceeding to take a single step, preliminary, secondary, or ulterior, until they have found in some positive instrument or enactment an express authorization empowering them to take such a step.

EDWARD A. VAN DYCK.

CAIRO, December, 1881.

47TH CONGRESS, 1st Session. } SENATE. { EX DOC. No. 88.

MESSAGE

FROM THE

PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES,

TRANSMITTING

A communication from the Secretary of the Interior, of the 27th ultimo, with accompanying papers, on the subject of the confirmation of the homestead entries of certain lands in the Marquette district, Michigan, made by Hugh Foster and John Waishkey, jr.

FEBRUARY 3, 1882.—Read, referred to the Committee on Public Lands, and ordered to be printed.

To the Senate and House of Representatives:

I transmit herewith, for the consideration of Congress, a communication of the Secretary of the Interior of the 27th ultimo, with accompanying papers, on the subject of the confirmation of the homestead entries of lands in the Marquette district, Michigan, made by Hugh Foster and John Waishkey, jr.

CHESTER A. ARTHUR.

EXECUTIVE MANSION,
Washington, February 3, 1882.

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR,
Washington, January 27, 1882.

SIR: I have the honor to submit herewith, in duplicate, for the consideration of Congress, draft of a bill, with accompanying papers, for the confirmation of homestead entry No. 1790, made at the United States land-office at Marquette, Mich., on the 22d March, 1879, by Hugh Foster. This entry was made under instructions inadvertently issued by the Commissioner of the General Land Office, when the land was in a state of reservation under the act of March 3, 1875 (18 Stat., 516), and before it had been restored to market.

I also submit, in duplicate, draft of a bill for confirmation of homestead entry No. 1828, made May 8, 1879, at the same office, by John Waishkey, jr., under like circumstances.

Very respectfully,

S. J. KIRKWOOD,
Secretary.

The PRESIDENT.

A BILL to confirm the homestead entry of Hugh Foster.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That homestead entry numbered one thousand seven hundred and ninety, made at the United States land-office at Marquette, Michigan, March twenty-second, eighteen hundred and seventy-nine, by Hugh Foster, upon the south half of the northeast quarter and north half of the southeast quarter of section ten, in township forty-seven north, of range two east, under authority of the instructions of the Commissioner of the General Land Office to the local officers, dated July second, eighteen hundred and seventy-eight, and recommended for confirmation by special act of Congress by the Secretary of the Interior in a decision on the case rendered November eighteenth, eighteen hundred and eighty-one, be, and the same ishereby, confirmed, as of the day of the date of said entry: Provided, however, That due proof of compliance with the provision of the homestead law shall be made in the usual manner.

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR,
GENERAL LAND OFFICE,
Washington, D. C., December 13, 1881.

SIR: In compliance with the request contained in your letter of November 18, 1881, deciding on appeal that homestead entry No. 1790, made by Hugh Foster at the Marquette, Mich., land office, March 22, 1879, under instructions to the local officers from this office dated July 2, 1878, was invalid by reason that the land which was reserved under the 2d section, act of March 3, 1875, had not been restored to the public domain as therein provided for at the date of said entry, I have the honor to inclose herewith for transmission to Congress the draft of a bill confirming said homestead entry, together with accompanying papers, viz:

Copy of Commissioner's letter to local officers authorizing certain entries, July 2, 1878.

Copy of Commissioner's decision holding the homestead entry of Hugh Foster for cancellation, May 3, 1879.

Copy of Secretary's decision, November 18, 1881.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

N. C. McFARLAND,
Commissioner.

Hon. S. J. KIRKWOOD,
Secretary of the Interior.

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR,
GENERAL LAND OFFICE,
Washington, D. C., July 2, 1878.

GENTLEMEN: I am in receipt of a letter from Guy H. Carleton, esq., dated at Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., the 21st ultimo, requesting me to advise you as to whether or not the south half of northeast quarter and northeast quarter of southeast quarter of section 10, township 47 north, range 2 east, are subject to homestead entry.

In compliance with the request of Mr. Carleton, I have to state that I am in receipt of a letter under date of February 20, 1878, from the Acting Commissioner of Indian Affairs, stating that there is no Indian claim to the above-described land. If upon examination of your records you find no interfering claim to said lands, they will be subject to homestead or pre-emption entry by the first legal applicant.

Very respectfully,

J. A. WILLIAMSON,
Commissioner.

REGISTER and RECEIVER,
Marquette, Mich.

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR,
GENERAL LAND OFFICE,
Washington, D. C., May 3, 1879.

GENTLEMEN: Homestead entry No. 1790, March 22, 1879, in the name of Hugh Foster, for the north half of southeast quarter and south half of northeast quarter, section 10, township 47 north, range 2 east, is this day held for cancellation for the reason that the land embraced therein is not subject to entry.

On the section in question, although not embraced in the reservation, certain Indians had made selections of land, and sec. 2 of the act approved March 3, 1875, provides as follows:

"That all Indians who have settled upon and made improvements on section ten, in township forty-seven north, range two east, and section twenty-four, in township forty-seven north, range three west, Michigan, shall be permitted to enter not exceeding eighty acres each, at the minimum price of land, upon making proof of such settlement and improvement before the register of the land-office at Marquette, Michigon; and when said entries shall have been completed in accordance herewith, the remaining lands embraced within the limits of said sections shall be restored to market."

In the office circular of March 18, 1875, promulgating the act above referred to, the local officers were instructed to treat the land embraced in the two sections as reserved from any other disposal than that for which the act provides, and at the expiration of one year from its passage—which was considered ample time for the Indians to avail themselves of the provisions thereof—the register and receiver were directed to report any vacant tracts remaining in said sections ten and twenty-four for restoration to market.

No report appears to have been made by the local officers, and the lands have not been restored to market.

You will inform Mr. Foster of the above decision, and allow him sixty days within which to appeal, and in the event of the cancellation of his entry he will be allowed to make a new one, with credit for fee and commissions already paid.

You will make an investigation, first notifying the United States Indian agent for the tribe to which said Indians belong, in order to ascertain whether any Indian claims exist upon said lands, as contemplated by the act, and report result of such investigation to this office, in order that any vacant lands remaining may be restored to market.

Very respectfully,

J. M. ARMSTRONG,
Acting Commissioner.

REGISTER and RECEIVER,
Marquette, Mich.

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR,
Washington, November 18, 1881.

SIR: I have considered the appeal of Hugh Foster from your decision of May 3, 1879, holding for cancellation his homestead entry of March 22, 1879, upon the north half of the southeast quarter and the south half of the northeast quarter of section 10, township 47 north, range 2 east, Marquette, Mich., because at the date of said entry said lands were reserved from any other disposal than that provided by the second section of the act of March 3, 1875 (18 Stats., 516), which provides that all Indians who have settled upon and made improvements on said section 10, and other sections therein named shall be permitted to enter not exceeding 80 acres each, upon making due proof therefor, "and when said entries shall have been completed in accordance herewith, the remaining lands embraced within the limits of said sections shall be restored to market."

Your circular of March 18, 1875, under this act, required the local officers, at the expiration of one year from its passage, to report any tracts which might then be vacant, that they might be restored to market. If such report has been made, said lands have not yet been restored.

It appears, however, that on July 2, 1878, your office advised the local office that if no interfering claim to the lands named in said section 2 appeared on their records, they would be subject to filing and entry, under the pre-emption and homestead laws, by the first legal applicant therefor. These instructions, as you state in your letter of May 3, 1879, were not intended to change the rule in respect to the restoration of lands to market, but were inadvertently issued. They were, nevertheless, in force at the date of Foster's entry, who appears to have made the same by virtue thereof. It does not appear to what exent, if any, he has improved the tract; but whether much or little, he should not suffer in his rights or property from the inadvertency of your office.

I am neither disposed to waive the general rule respecting the restoration of lands to market, which has been in force for many years, nor to spare suitable action for relief of Mr. Foster. I therefore request you to prepare a bill for submission to Congress, which may secure his rights and validate his entry as of the day of the date thereof.

The papers transmitted with your letter of July 19, 1881, are herewith returned.

Very respectfully,

S. J. KIRKWOOD.
Secretary.

The COMMISSIONER OF THE GENERAL LAND OFFICE.

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR,
GENERAL LAND OFFICE,
Washington, D. C., December 16, 1881.

SIR: I have the honor to inclose herewith, for transmission to Congress, the draft of a bill confirming homestead entry No. 1828, for the south half of the southeast quarter and south half of the southwest quarter of section 10, township 47 north, range 2 east, Michigan, made May 8, 1879, by John Waishkey, jr., for reasons set forth in my letter C, of the 14th instant, to you on said subject.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

N. C. McFARLAND,
Commissioner.

Hon. S. J. KIRKWOOD,
Secretary of the Interior.

A BILL to confirm the homestead entry of John Waishkey, jr.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That homestead entry numbered one thousand eight hundred and twenty-eight, made at the United States land-office at Marquette, Michigan, May eight, eighteen hundred and seventy-nine, by John Waishkey, jr., upon the south half of the southeast quarter and south half of the southwest quarter of section ten, in township forty-seven north, of range two east, under authority of the instructions of the Commissioner of the General Land Office, dated July second, eighteen hundred and seventy-eight, be, and the same is hereby, confirmed as of the day of the date of said entry: Provided, however, That due proof of compliance with the provisions of the homestead law shall be made in the usual manner.

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR,
GENERAL LAND OFFICE,
Washington, D. C., December 14, 1881.

SIR: I have the honor to hereby recommend that homestead entry No. 1828, for the south half of the southeast quarter and south half of the southwest quarter of section 10, township 47 north, of range 2 east, made by John Waishkey, jr., at the Marquette, Mich., district land-office, May 8, 1879, and held for cancellation September 16, 1879, on the same ground that homestead entry No. 1790 was so held, be incorporated in the bill confirming homestead entry No. 1790, the draft of which bill was inclosed in my letter C to you of the 13th instant, for transmission to Congress. The land covered by said entry No. 1828 lies in the same section, township, and range as that covered by homestead entry No. 1790, and I think Mr. Waishkey is entitled to the same relief that is sought in behalf of Mr. Foster by the bill before mentioned.

I inclose herewith a copy of the letter of September 16, 1879, holding entry No. 1828 for cancellation.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

N. C. McFARLAND,
Commissioner.

Hon. S. J. KIRKWOOD,
Secretary of the Interior.

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR,
GENERAL LAND OFFICE,
Washington, D. C., September 16, 1879.

GENTLEMEN: Referring to my letter of May 3, 1879, holding for cancellation homestead entry No. 1790, in the name of Hugh Foster, covering the north half of the southeast quarter and south half of the northeast quarter of section 10, township 47 north, range 2 east, for reason therein stated, I am in receipt of your letter of the 13th ultimo, inclosing one from Foster's attorney relative thereto.

You cite as your authority for allowing said entry a letter from this office of July 2, 1878, stating that the tracts above mentioned were subject to homestead entry, &c. The letter referred to was inadvertently written of the tenor that it was, as the tracts were not subject to such entry under the law.

Section 2 of the act of March 3, 1875, quoted in my letter of May 3 last, is specific in its provisions, and the land embraced in section 10, township 47 north, range 2 east, and section 24, township 47 north, range 3 west, is not subject to entry or location, except by Indians, as therein provided for, until the same shall have been restored to market. The subsequent act of May 23, 1876, has reference only to lands formerly within the Indian reservation, and does not apply to the sections mentioned above.

Homestead entry No. 1828, covering the south half of the southeast quarter and south half of the southwest quarter of section 10, township 47, range 2 east, in the name of John Waishkey, jr., is similarly situated in this respect with that of Hugh Foster, and is also this day held for cancellation for reasons stated at length in my letter of May 3, 1879, with regard to the latter.

You will inform the parties to the entries above, allow the usual time for appeal, and report action in the premises to this office.

You will carry out the instructions contained in the last paragraph of my letter of May 3 last, relative to investigating whether any Indian claims exist in said sections, in order, that, if so, they may be adjusted, and thereafter the remaining lands restored to market, as contemplated in the act of March 3, 1875.

In case you find that your predecessors have made any report bearing on the matter, communicate the fact to this office, giving the date of such report.

Very respectfully,

J. M. ARMSTRONG,
Acting Commissioner.

REGISTER and RECEIVER,
Marquette, Mich.

BSB Bayerische StaatsBibliothek
MDZ Münchener DigitalisierungsZentrum Digitale Bibliothek

Senate documents

Bd.: [345.] 1881/82, Vol. 4 = Congress 47, Sess. 1

Washington, DC 1882
Am.b. 3040-345,4 urn:nbn:de:bvb:12-bsb11547858-2